ASSEMBLY DAILY JOURNAL

FIRST LEGISLATIVE DAY

FIRST CALENDAR DAY

IN ASSEMBLY

ASSEMBLY CHAMBER, SACRAMENTO
Monday, January 8, 1951

Pursuant to the requirements of the Constitution of the State of California and the law, at the hour of 12 o'clock meridian, the Assembly of the 1951 Regular Session of the Legislature of California was called to order by Arthur A Ohnimus, Chief Clerk of the 1950 Regular (Budget) Session.

In conformity with the law, the following officers of the 1950 Regular (Budget) Session were also present: Geraldine B. Hadsell, Minute Clerk, and Wilkie Ogg, Sergeant-at-Arms.

PRAYER

Upon invitation of the Chief Clerk, the following prayer was offered by Dr. Torrance Phelps, Chaplain of the Assembly for the 1950 Regular (Budget) Session:

Infinite God: We rejoice that we meet again in this historic place, and for the opportunity of living in this great State.

For the beauty of our world, for the mountains with their cascades, and for the valleys blossoming with wild flowers.

Inspire this Assembly with wisdom, guide the Speaker and the Governor, and the President of these United States.

May we have sympathy for any of our members who have been in trouble or sorrow, and work together in goodwill for all the people.

Above all may we defend our Nation as the one hope of all free peoples, and pray that other nations may have the sense to see that Democracy is the guarantee of prosperity and peace.—AMEN.

ADDRESS BY THE GOVERNOR

MESSAGE OF GOVERNOR EARL WARREN

Mr. Speaker, Lieutenant Governor Knight, President pro Tempore Powers, Speaker pro Tempore Maloney, Mr. Chief Justice, and Members of the Legislature:

Today we start a new administration and a new century of statehood.

The conditions which face us are not what we had hoped they would be. I am sure that as we celebrated our centennial, all of us were looking forward with the keenest anticipation to the opportunity of devoting our time and energy to the peaceful development of our State.

But that pleasant approach to our duties has been denied us. We must take conditions as we find them.

Those conditions make an ominous picture, and compel us to meet in a solemn mood under the shadow not just of a possible but a probable third world war.

Eight years ago, when I addressed you at the start of my first term, our Nation was in one of the darkest hours of World War II. Our thinking throughout the Session of 1943 was cast in a serious mold, and the legislation it developed was geared to enabling the State of California and its people to make an outstanding contribution to victory and peace.

Four years later, when I again took the oath of office, we met in an atmosphere of hope. The military victory had been achieved. Our fighting men were returning home. The organization of the United Nations, representing the aspirations of the peace-loving peoples of the world, had been established. We were able, in such an atmosphere, to give our full attention to measures necessary for the continued progress of California and the integration of millions of new citizens.

I recall how concerned I was eight years ago, and four years ago, about our duty in keeping our State abreast of the needs of the people. Today I must say to you that I have never been more concerned—I have never had a deeper sense of responsibility for my obligations—I have never approached my job with greater seriousness than I do at this moment. I have never felt more keenly the need for complete cooperation between the Executive and Legislative Branches of our State Government. I have never been more eager to set aside every personal and private consideration in order to attend to what must be done to safeguard our people, and to make possible a wholesome and rewarding life experience for them under all circumstances.

If World War III comes, it will be the war that was envisioned and threatened by the Communist conspiracy many years ago, and which has only awaited the ability of that conspiracy to strike effectively. The zero hour may be rapidly approaching. Already, a third of the people of the world are behind the Iron Curtain. Another third do not know from the beginning of any day until its end, when they will be subjected to aggression on the part of Russia or her satellites like that suffered by Korea.

We can take little comfort from the fact that we are not on the periphery of the Iron Curtain, or that great oceans physically set our continent apart. We can take little comfort from the fact that war has not been formally declared against us. Already more than 50,000 Americans have been killed or wounded, or are missing in action, in Korea.

In any appraisal of the present global situation, it must be borne in mind that World War II was started with a slow fuse. The fuse was lighted by the Fascists on September 1, 1939, and burned until June 15, 1940, when the so-called "phony" war ended in the frightful explosion of the blitzkrieg.

It may be that another such time fuse is burning at this moment. How much longer or shorter it will be cannot be predicted, but we can be sure of this—that if and when World War III explodes, it will exceed in violence and destruction anything that has occurred in the history of mankind. No human being on the face of this earth will be safe from its repercussions. Certainly no one in America will be safe, because, as the sole remaining force capable of preventing this world involvement, we are the main object of the wrath of Communism.

I do not predict World War III. I hope and pray it will never come. I believe that if we marshal our full military and spiritual force; if we dedicate our Nation to the well-being of the human race; if we demonstrate our willingness to make individual as well as collective sacrifices; if we work together as a united people—our Nation will be so strong and will be able to give such leadership to the remainder of the friendly world that even power-mad, hate-consumed Totalitarians will have the caution not to precipitate the awful event.

These aims must be the goal of every American at this critical hour. The necessities of the situation are great—far greater than they appear on the surface. Only Divine guidance can supply the strength and the vision for those of us who have been elected to act for the people. Human capabilities will not suffice.

These are the considerations uppermost in my mind today as we start this new administration. I speak of them, not as a matter of preachment to you, but as a matter of self-dedication for me.

Civil Defense

Throughout the session, I want to exchange views with you on the needs of our State. Today, in accordance with the mandate of our Constitution, I desire to express myself concerning some of the matters that appear to me to be of paramount importance.

First and foremost is our preparation for civil defense. If the lives of the people are not protected, and if the cities they have been building for a hundred years are not preserved from fire and brimstone, all our other efforts will be of very little consequence.

I am aware that there are those who still believe "it can't happen here." I know that others hold civil defense preparations to be unnecessary until an overt act against our Country is committed. However, you and I have already acted upon the warning of the National Government —including its military establishment—that any future war against America will start with a bolt out of the blue; that the attack will be directed against civilians and our war production centers; and that it will be of such intensity as to make the blitzkrieg seem a sham battle by comparison.

We have such production centers in California. They are among the most vital in America, and they will be greatly expanded in the months to come. They are prime targets, and we are the farthest western continental outpost of the Nation. In such circumstances, ordinary prudence demands that we make civil defense our major objective—today, tomorrow, and until the "all clear" signal comes; and with it the opportunity to concentrate once more upon the pursuits of peaceful men.

At the special session last September, you created the Office of Civil Defense. As its director, I appointed Major General Walter M. Robertson, U. S Army, Retired—a brilliant fighting man of World War II and a distinguished executive. He has recruited an administrative staff in accordance with the plan of organization developed by our Civil Defense Planning Board, and with the splendid cooperation of Lieutenant General Albert C. Wedemeyer, Commander of the Sixth Army.

California's program is developing. It is abreast of the Federal Civil Defense directives in all respects, and in advance of them in some. Local government is cooperating. We can and will continue to build upon this foundation at least as speedily as the National Government may direct.

We do not know what proportions the program may assume, but every level of government will have a responsibility. This includes financial responsibility. Congress last week passed, and the President signed, a bill establishing the national policy for civil defense. This legislation authorized a three billion dollar program, its cost to be borne by Federal, State, and local Government Congress has yet to appropriate the federal share, and to determine the rules under which it will be administered in the states It is estimated it will be necessary for the State of California and its subdivisions to contribute an aggregate of $140,000,000 to $150,000,000 to the program. The proportion in which this burden must be shared by the State and local Government will have to be determined by the Legislature. As far as the operating expenses of our civil defense program as presently conceived are concerned, we believe it will be possible to finance these within current revenues.

At all events, we should condition ourselves here and now to the necessity of doing on a cooperative basis promptly and without equivocation everything our Federal Government advises us is essential for the protection of our people. Halfway measures will not suffice. Unless our program is made fully effective, it will be worse than useless, because a mere gesture would only mislead our people into a false sense of security

Every department of State Government must help, and every employee of the State must consider himself a part of the civil defense establishment. They have already qualified by taking the oath of allegiance recommended by the President of the United States and required by you at the special session last September. They have given every indication of their willingness to be helpful, and I have no doubt that they will all respond loyally and enthusiastically to any call to duty.

We are also working with city and county governments on a cooperative basis and in a manner that indicates that an integrated defense program can be developed within the framework and in accordance with our traditional relationships between State and local Governments.

Highway Patrol Reserve

As an integral part of the civil defense program, it will be necessary to establish volunteer reserve components for our fire, police and other services. These will give all Californians the opportunity to participate personally in the defense of their State. It will give sinews to the program.

These preparations will necessarily include an expansion of the California State Highway Patrol, which will have the tremendous responsibility of keeping traffic moving on our highways in any emergency In part, this expansion can be accomplished by the establishment of a Highway Patrol Reserve. The Commissioner of the Patrol advises me that such a reserve would be invaluable in coping with the severe emergencies which must be anticipated in our calculations. It may also be of great assistance to him in meeting the problem of withdrawals from the ranks of the Highway Patrol for duty in the armed services. You considered such a measure at the special session in September. I recommend its enactment at this time.

Rainy Day Fund

At the special session, you authorized until the end of this fiscal year, the use of the $75,000,000 "Rainy Day" Fund for disaster relief—when the Legislature is not in session—upon order of the Governor with the approval of the State Disaster Council, the Controller and the Director of Finance Because of the increasing and continuing danger of disaster, I recommend that the provisions of this law be extended from June 30, 1951, to June 30, 1952 In case of disaster it would indeed be a Rainy Day Fund.

Veterans Benefits

I would like to have our men fighting in Korea or awaiting other assignment to know that we are serious about civil defense and that, as a State, we are willing if necessary to make the same sacrifices we are asking of them I would like them to know, also, that we are thinking already of the day they will return to us It is not too early to recognize their service, and to provide at this session of our Legislature that they and their dependents shall be made eligible for all the state benefits that have been provided for their comrades of World War II

In addition to the statutory amendments which this suggestion involves, I recommend that you authorize the submission to the people, when present funds have been committed, of a new bond issue for financing veterans' farm and home purchase loans. These bonds, as you know, are entirely self-liquidating. They do not represent a financial burden upon the State, yet they ease the burden on thousands of veterans in the purchase of their own homes.

Child Care Centers

Many of our men-in-arms left behind them wives and small children with the necessity of the wives seeking employment. Unless these wives have a place where their children can receive care and protection during working hours, the opportunity to supplement their government allotments is denied them. We are told by the government that at least six million more people must be brought into the work force of our Country during the coming months Many of them must be women. Thus there is both personal and national economic necessity for continuing our child care centers, which originated as a federal program during World War II and have been subsidized since 1946 by the State. These centers are also socially desirable in the present circumstances because neglected children of working mothers are likely to become community problems. I therefore recommend that legislation continuing child care centers be enacted, and that this be considered as an urgency matter because the present authorization expires on February 15.

Labor Relations

Inherent in any defense production program is the effective utilization of civilian manpower. To accomplish this, the cooperation and mutual good-will of business and industrial management, labor and agriculture is extremely important. I have evidence, based on conferences with these groups and on reports of the Departments of Employment and Industrial Relations, that a highly cooperative spirit now exists. If that spirit is fostered, it can contribute magnificently to the defense effort of California.

Throughout World War II, with my hearty approval, you followed the policy of not enacting legislation that would irritate labor-management relations. In consequence, California was comparatively free from economic dislocations from that cause, and its loss of man-days was far below the national average. If your legislative policy paid dividends then, it will pay dividends now. I commend it to you again.

Political and Economic Equality

The population of our State represents every ancestral heritage on earth. Each contributes to the economic and cultural life of California. None should be subjected to differences of treatment—either thoughtless or deliberate—that might diminish its ability to make the fullest contribution of which it is capable. I have previously called your attention to the desirability of continuous, objective reporting of any instances of racial discrimination that may occur within our borders. This is a proper job for State Government, and public harmony will be promoted if it is undertaken. It is a job that should be performed by a commission of fair-minded, representative citizens. I am firmly of the opinion that enlightenment on the subject will enrich that spirit of tolerance among groups which, throughout the life of our State, has been one of California's richest traditions and greatest assets. I recommend that a Commission on Political and Economic Equality be created at this session of the Legislature.

Workmen's Compensation—Unemployment Insurance

The sense of security that enables men and women who work for wages to do their best, will also be enhanced if they know that adequate provision has been made for them under the workmen's compensation and unemployment insurance programs. I urge you to examine these systems to determine whether they are fully serving the humanitarian purposes for which they were established.

Agricultural Labor

In the field of labor relations and the well-being of those who toil, there are some special situations that merit your attention. One of these has to do with the status of seasonal agricultural workers, without whose help it would be impossible to produce the tremendous quantities of foods and fibres which the Nation needs from California.

Because of the numbers involved and because so many of them wind up the harvest season there, the problem of these workers has been particularly acute in the San Joaquin Valley. Their situation has put our State in a bad light throughout the Nation. Both the conditions and the publicity can be changed for the better—not by drastic action but by working at the problem and making progress along sound lines.

With this in view, and at the suggestion of the Central Valley Empire Association and the San Joaquin Valley Supervisors Association, I appointed a committee last spring to study the problem. In the interests of time, the committee particularized its survey in the San Joaquin Valley, but its conclusions, of course, relate to the problem statewide.

The committee represented employer and employee groups, education, social welfare, and the general public. Its report, which was submitted on December 15th, was unanimous in its findings, and I commend it to your consideration. It points the way to sensible and needed changes in the laws governing the operations of labor contractors and the inspection of farm labor housing. It deals with the welfare, health, and educational aspects of the problem. I am sure you will be able to use it as the basis for correcting many of the undesirable conditions. A satisfactory remedying of these conditions might also result in increasing the availability of an efficient farm labor force.

I agree with many of the committee's recommendations, but I would go farther in the matter of unemployment insurance. I believe that we should include in our State Unemployment Insurance System now at least those workers who were covered by social security legislation passed by the Congress last year—without waiting for federal action on the whole problem.

The matter of finding enough workers for our harvests has already given indications of developing into a major manpower problem. It is apparent that farmers will be hard put to find replacements for their workers leaving for war industry and the armed forces, and to handle the increasing crops. It may well be that assistance such as that given during World War II by the Farm Production Council will be needed, and I suggest that you give the matter your earnest attention.

Water

Both farmers and the public generally have been troubled in recent weeks by another very serious problem For those in the South, it has been a deficiency of water. In the area north of Tehachapi, floods have struck and caused great damage.

The floods in Northern California emphasize the need of completing at the earliest possible date all the flood-control projects that Congress has previously authorized to the United States Army Corps of Engineers, and the multiple-purpose projects of that agency and the United States Bureau of Reclamation. I have worked on this problem. So has the State Water Resources Board. I urge that you also exercise your influence on behalf of the speedy completion of these projects. Meanwhile I suggest that $2,000,000 be made available for assisting local jurisdictions, and as it may be needed, in repairing flood damage. You have approved this as state policy in the past under similar circumstances.

In Southern California, the prolonged drought emphasizes the need for a solution of our controversy with our neighboring State of Arizona involving the waters of the Colorado River. If we could have a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States confirming the amount of water each state is entitled to, both could plan for the future and determine how their additional needs for water might be filled.

Rain-making

In desperate efforts to obtain additional water for the millions who reside in Southern California, many communities and private interests have endeavored to produce rain artificially by "seeding" the rain clouds. The possibilities of both good and evil are inherent in these efforts Our State Water Resources Board is of the opinion that unless the process is carefully understood, great injury can be done. It therefore recommends that all who engage in the business be placed under a licensing and reporting system. I recommend such action to you.

Smog

An associated problem has to do with the air pollution condition commonly known as "Smog," particularly in the Los Angeles metropolitan area. The control of these conditions is by state law vested in county and regional air pollution control districts The Los Angeles Air Pollution Control District administers the program in Los Angeles County. Without interfering with this arrangement, I believe there is a responsibility upon the State to determine what effect smog has upon the health of the millions who reside there and the others who come there from other parts of the State and Nation. Recently there have been dire forebodings of the effect smog has upon the health of those who are subjected to it, and many lurid statements have appeared in the news. The fact is that very little is known about it because there has been no comprehensive study. On the other hand there have been detached studies made by universities and public health departments. In the absence of a complete study by the Federal Government, I believe our State is in a better position to correlate, supplement, and evaluate these endeavors than any other agency; and, inasmuch as it bears directly upon the health of so many millions of our people, I believe the State has a responsibility to do something about it I therefore recommend that an adequate appropriation be made to the State Department of Public Health to determine the effect of smog upon the health of the people.

Social Welfare

Although our major attention at this session will have a direct relationship to the world crisis, we must not lose sight of the fact that a society can go forward, but it is impossible for it to come to a full stop; the only alternative to progress is retrogression We must continue to make progress in California. If, in this emergency, the states of the Union generally were to abandon their plans for the improvement of life in America, they would only aid and abet the purpose of the Communists to supplant their way for ours With such unwitting help, they could seriously weaken us without ever having fired a shot

I ask you, therefore, to do whatever is necessary to keep our laws in tune with progress.

Aid to Permanently Disabled

In the field of social welfare, I recommend specifically that you create the category of Aid to the Permanently and Totally Disabled which was included in H. R. 6000 by Congress last year; an action you deferred in September in order to take more time to consider it. This is a particularly deserving group and could well have been the first category of public aid to be established. They should no longer be slighted.

Uniform Support of Dependents Law

I recommend, as I did at the Budget Session last March, the enactment of a Uniform Support of Dependents Law, which is needed to enforce the support of dependents by defaulting husbands and fathers who cross state lines in an attempt to evade their responsibilities. I am sure that none of you has the slightest sympathy for such recreant persons, and I believe in the proposed legislation the questions asked by some of your members last year have been disposed of satisfactorily.

Care of the Senile

I recommend that we modernize and humanize our program for the care of the senile. These aged people, when they are not mentally ill, are the responsibility of the counties. When they are mentally ill, the State has the responsibility But because often it is difficult to determine the border line between senility and mental illness, and because the county hospitals have been crowded beyond capacity, many of them have been sent to state hospitals when they were not mentally ill and when they would have been much happier and better off near their homes. The conference held at Sacramento on this problem last September came to the conclusion that "additional and more appropriate public facilities" should be constructed and operated by the counties, with the cost to be shared by the State. I believe the State should accept that conclusion, and I recommend that you make construction funds available on a matching basis. Old age assistance, payments which can be made to persons confined to medical institutions but not to those declared to be mentally ill, will help the counties to meet operating costs. This can be both a humanitarian and an economic program.

Mentally Ill in County Hospitals

In 1949, you enacted a measure permitting the commitment of acute mentally ill persons to county psychopathic hospitals for 90-day periods. There are many cases of mental disorder that could be cleared up within this space of time. Some relief from the pressure on state hospital facilities would result. To encourage the counties to utilize this provision of the law, I recommend a subsidy plan similar to the tuberculosis subsidy

Alcoholic Clinics

California has the unenviable distinction of a high rate of chronic alcoholism. During the past two years, your interim committees have been studying a proposal to establish a research center with out-patient clinical facilities in Northern California, and another in Southern California, each involving a capital expenditure of $2,200,000. I recommend your favorable action on this proposal at the present session.

Health Insurance

As you know, I have been interested for years in a System of Prepaid Medical Care that would make all the benefits of modern medicine accessible to people of modest incomes. At each session of the Legislature, I have sponsored a bill to accomplish this result. I am still of the opinion that this is one of the major problems of American life, and that a way must be found to solve it.

Although the nature of this session is such that I believe it would not be purposeful for me to resubmit the legislation I sponsored in former years, I believe the Legislature should give its attention to the problem. If the medical profession, the insurance industry, and other interested groups will give it their cooperative efforts, I am convinced that a substantial contribution can be made to the cause at this time.

Education

Regardless of defense or war conditions, our public school system must be the object of our concern. It is one of the cornerstones of our society. The schools have had many problems since the period preceding World War II when the migration of millions of Americans to California started. The tide has never stopped, and there is no reason to expect it to subside now.

New communities are springing up overnight, and established communities are growing phenomenally. The result has been an unprecedented increase in public school enrollment. Some school boards can have no conception at the end of one year what their school population will be the next year. State support funds to the schools are now apportioned on the basis of the previous year's attendance. This is a handicap to school administrators in preparing their budgets, and works a particular financial hardship on schools in war production centers where enrollment goes up by leaps and bounds in a single year. The apportionment formula should include the factor of current growth, and I recommend legislation to this effect. The cost for the current year would be between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000.

I also recommend an increase in the state subsidy for bus transportation to assist rural and poorer districts and to encourage the consolidation of districts wherever this can result in a saving of money and a raising of educational standards.

Youth

In this period of stress, when families are being separated by war and war industry, and when thousands of parents will be working long hours and perhaps all parents will be preoccupied by war conditions, it becomes more than ever incumbent upon us to give careful attention to our programs for youth and recreation. We must enable our children to lead as nearly a normal life as possible in a world that has been thrown out of kilter by our generation.

Crime

We must not permit them, through neglect and indifference, to be subjected to an environment that will encourage delinquency and crime.

In the past few months our Country has been treated to a sordid story of organized crime that has been a stench in the nostrils of law-abiding citizens. Our own State has received its share of the notoriety. I believe there would have been much more to report if it had not been for our own Commission on Organized Crime, whose findings were in the main verified by the testimony before the United States Senate Committee. It is my belief that because of all this publicity, there will be a reshuffling of criminal elements and possibly migration to those parts of the Country where there is any apparent let-down in public vigilance. There should be no such let-down in California. I therefore recommend that a new Commission on Organized Crime to be set up under existing law be financed for one year.

I do not believe we should have a permanent commission of this character, nor do I seek any law enforcement powers, which are vested in the local law enforcement officers and the Attorney General as the chief law enforcement officer of the State. I do believe, however, that a citizens' appraisal of crime conditions in the State could be a wholesome thing and could be helpful to the enforcement officials in informing the public of some of the difficult conditions they face. It is in that spirit that I suggest another Crime Commission for this limited period.

One way to discourage organized crime is to take the profit out of it, and I suggest that our State Income Tax Laws be amended to accomplish this result. Both State and Federal Income Tax Laws were written primarily to apply to honest taxpayers. Little consideration was given to the taxation of professional criminals. Provision was made for the deduction of legitimate expenses of doing business, but there can be no legitimate expenses of criminal business. I therefore suggest that our Income Tax Law be amended to prohibit any deduction in a criminal business.

The efficacy of this suggestion would be greatly enhanced if the Federal Government were also to deny deductions to illegal enterprises. You will recall that after California outlawed slot machines the government prohibited their movement in interstate commerce. The thieving institution of the one-armed bandit is on the way out, and another prop of organized crime is lost to the underworld. It is very likely that the government will take cognizance of any action we take to amend our Income Tax Laws for the same purpose. It could be a body blow to organized crime.

Our Franchise Tax Board is hampered at the present time by the lack of financial provision for an intelligence agency such as the Intelligence Unit of the United States Bureau of Internal Revenue. The failure to collect just taxes from racketeers and professional criminals is a tremendous stimulus to their activities. As an approach to the problem, I recommend an appropriation for the investigation and prosecution of fraud cases by the Franchise Tax Board.

Governmental Reorganization

The requirements of the present emergency demand that now more than ever before we devote our national resources of manpower, material and wealth to the purposes of defense and security. Just as our citizens will be called upon to make sacrifices and to pay increasingly heavy federal taxes to support this great national effort, so it is incumbent upon us who have governmental responsibilities to analyze our governmental operations for the purpose of eliminating overlapping and achieving a maximum of efficiency with a minimum of manpower and expense to the taxpayers. Any reduction of manpower requirements or curtailment of our state expenditures will enable our taxpayers better to support the heavy demands of the Federal Government for the national defense. Such an undertaking surely represents one of our primary obligations at this time.

It is not an easy task, but in times of crisis and great danger, prudent men put their house in order. I am convinced that we should face the problem at this session of the Legislature and make effective provision for that substantial reorganization of our State Government and improvement of its administrative operations which the requirements of the national emergency make necessary for government at all levels—federal, state, and local.

I therefore recommend the establishment of a Commission on Reorganization of the State Government, such commission to include members of the Legislative and Executive Branches, and private citizens. The scope of the commission should be sufficiently broad, and the funds at its disposal should be sufficient to permit a thoroughgoing, comprehensive result.

Tax Commission

Akin to this problem is the tax problem. Through the years, many proposals have been made for a study of the tax structure of our State. There has never been a time when taxes loomed so large in the economic life of our State, or imposed a heavier financial burden on the taxpayers. New and higher federal taxes have been levied, and still higher rates are under consideration. Here again the requirements of national defense and security make it imperative that we re-examine our state and local tax structures in order to be sure they represent the best possible, the soundest, and the most equitable system for the needs of both State and local Government. It is high time that we consolidate and supplement the findings of the legislative committees that have worked on the subject.

This job should all be done at one time, because all taxes come out of the same pocket. The tax dollar is now divided between state and local governments, but nobody knows if the division is fair, or whether the different classes of taxpayers are shouldering a fair share of the financial burden. I therefore recommend the establishment of a State Tax Commission composed of legislators, state and local administrators, and taxpayers.

There are, among those who have studied the problem of governmental reorganization and taxation, those who believe that the two are so inseparably connected that they should both be studied by the same commission. If, after consideration of the matter, the Legislature is of the opinion that this should be the procedure, I would gladly join in this approach. Either way, we will be attacking two aspects of a problem that is of major importance in this time of national emergency.

Planning

During World War II, you created the Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission for the specific purpose of preparing California to adjust its economy to postwar conditions. In the process, the State Planning Commission was absorbed, and when the Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission was terminated in 1947, we became one of the few states of the Union without a planning agency.

California is too big a State, too important a State, to allow itself to drift in this fashion. We cannot afford to close our minds to the problems of the future. I therefore recommend and offer my cooperation in the establishment of a State Planning Agency. Other states are using this means to strengthen their economy. Our planning agency should be put to work as soon as possible.

This and the Commission on Political and Economic Equality are the only permanent new agencies of State Government that I am recommending to you. I believe they both can contribute greatly to the effectiveness of any defense program, and to the success of our efforts in the reconversion period that will follow.

You have been very patient. I appreciate the attention you have given my message. I want you to know that I will be equally interested in your views on any subject vital to the protection or welfare of our people.

Working together in this manner, we can make this first administration in California's second century of statehood constructive and worthy of the critical times we are living in.

EARL WARREN

OATH OF OFFICE ADMINISTERED TO LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Lieutenant Governor-elect Hon. Goodwin J. Knight then took and subscribed to the following oath administered by Hon. Phil S. Gibson, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California:

> I do solemnly swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of California, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of Lieutenant Governor of the State of California, according to the best of my ability, so help me God.

INTRODUCTION OF LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Hon. Sam L. Collins, Speaker of the Assembly, then presented Lieutenant Governor Goodwin J. Knight to the Joint Convention.

ADDRESS BY LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Lieutenant Governor Knight then proceeded to address the Joint Convention as follows:

ADDRESS BY LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR GOODWIN J. KNIGHT

Four years ago at inauguration ceremonies for Governor Earl Warren and myself, Governor Warren spoke about California during the war years. He advised concerning a future for our State deeply concerned with a vast and ever increasing population. We were reconciled that the problems created for us by this great influx of people, which was even then continuing at the rate of 25,000 a month and has not yet slowed down, would remain our chief concern for decades to come.

I recall that I said, "The Federal Union and all of the states, including our own, are striving today to return to orderly peacetime living."

On that January day in 1947, following our Country's triumph in the second World War, we foresaw a future of peace and reconstruction. Under the United Nations, born in our own San Francisco, we looked forward to the rule of justice and international decency among all nations and peoples.

Now, the whole scene has changed. Through no fault of this State Administration, nor our people, we gather here, under war tensions, with mixed emotions—apprehension that humanity may be scourged with another war, and determination to resist threats of communistic domination.

We regret that many social and political improvements in our own State's business will bear the burden of delay while our concentration will be leveled at civilian defense and the dislocations of military drafts and material and manpower shortages.

Our choked streets, our uncompleted highways, our housing problems, our over-crowded schools, prisons, and asylums, our public transportation system, all are manifest proof of the problem's magnitude that faced us then and faces us now.

For it was beyond the imagination of rational man in 1947 to dream we would again approach the brink of war, but four short years later.

And yet we have. Governor Warren has set the tenor of this session. He has said it is to be primarily concerned with Defense. And in that he is right. It should be

For no matter how crying is the need for progress within our State, unless we maintain the freedom of our Country, and so our State, all this that we need, plus all that which we have gained, will go down under the heel of the tyrant.

In that we must divert ourselves to Defense instead of Progress, our meeting here today is tragic. Yet there is not one of us who would reverse the order of business as laid out by the Governor: First, the defense of our California and our Country; and, second, the peaceful progress of our State.

At another inaugural, four years from now, the Governor and the Lieutenant Governor again will address you. I earnestly hope that they can, then, direct their remarks toward the things we of this session cannot afford.

We have entered the second half of the Twentieth Century and the second century of California's statehood. During the past half century we have enjoyed the many fruits of inventors and scientists who have given us a standard of living greater than that of any other nation.

We have seen the horse and buggy replaced by the automobile, coal oil lamps replaced by electric lights, the advent of radio and television, the transportation field drastically altered by the airplane—all of these changes plus great advances in the field of medicine and the exact sciences have unfolded for us a new world and a new way of life.

There are those who would like to convince us that the future is black and that the United States has reached its apex of power. Such people lack faith and courage and vision. With able leadership and the help of the Divine Providence which has guided our destinies, we can and will go forward to finer achievements.

With the advent of each new year it is customary to review the past and plan for the future. A few gloomy people are telling each other that we have no future, that we shall be lucky to escape complete annihilation. There is very little that the average citizen can do about world conditions, but we do know that every patriotic citizen in California and its sister states stands ready to fight to maintain the civilization we now enjoy. Daniel Webster told us 117 years ago that "God grants liberty only to those who love it, and are always willing to guard and defend it."

Now, it becomes my good fortune to commence another term as Lieutenant Governor. I look back upon four years in public office enriched by wonderful friendships, by generous help of many fine people. I am deeply grateful for the confidence and good will which has been extended to me. They are a challenge inspiring increased devotion to the welfare of our own California.

PRESENTATION OF UNITED STATES AND BEAR FLAGS TO GOVERNOR

The California National Guard Association presented the Colors to Governor Earl Warren. Major General Daniel H. Rohrer of Los Angeles, Chief of Staff, 40th Infantry Division, Past President of the Association, and Captain Alvin Daspit of San Francisco, Association Secretary. NEW YORK 19, NEW YORK, November 11, 1950

Honorable Arthur A. Ohnimus, Chief Clerk
California Assembly
State Capitol, Sacramento 14, California

MY DEAR MR OHNIMUS I am indeed grateful to the Members of the Assembly for the honor accorded me in House Resolution No 9, introduced and sponsored by Honorable Kathryn T. Niehouse on September 20th last, and for your letter of November 2d The resolution, you may be sure, will hold an important place among my cherished mementoes of my swim across the English Channel.

As I see it now, the swim itself was important only to the extent that it enables me today to capture the interest of my fellow citizens, particularly our young people, in the value of wholesome sports If I am able to put across this message to any considerable segment of our sports-minded younger generation I will feel that the Channel swim was a worthwhile undertaking

I will appreciate it if you will extend my warm thanks to the Members of the Third Extraordinary Session of the California Legislature for the honor extended me in their resolution

Sincerely yours,

FLORENCE CHADWICK

STATE OF CALIFORNIA
SAN FRANCISCO 2, CALIFORNIA, October 31, 1950

Assembly, California Legislature

ATTENTION: Assemblymen H. Allen Smith
Glenard P. Lipscomb

GENTLEMEN:

RE: Compliance with the provisions of House Resolution No. 35, 1949 Session, dealing with the matter of initiating proceedings looking toward effecting grade separations between Southern Pacific Company's tracks and Glendale and Los Feliz Boulevards, respectively, in the County of Los Angeles.

In your Resolution No 35 you request this commission to hold further hearings for the purpose of ordering the construction of grade separations at each of the locations referred to above and assessing the costs of such improvements between the parties.

In reporting on this matter it appears appropriate to give you a brief resume of the activities that have been conducted by this commission and its staff during the past 25 years in connection with effecting grade separations at these two locations.

On September 21, 1925, the commission instituted an investigation on its own motion (Case No 2171) for the purpose of determining whether in the interest of public convenience and safety the two grade crossings referred to above should be provided with additional protective devices, separated, relocated, or abolished. This case was heard on a common record with Case No 2124 which was a complaint filed with the commission by the Los Angeles County Grade Crossing Committee against the Southern Pacific Company which included more or less the same issues as are contained in Case 2171. After a number of public hearings, decisions were issued directing the construction of separations at the two grade crossings and prescribing an apportionment of the expense of constructing such separations between the parties. The file shows that after considerable time had elapsed the various parties advised the commission that they could not meet the financial requirement assigned to them in the order, and therefore, requested that the proceedings be dismissed. Accordingly, the commission, by its Decision 27098, dated May 28, 1934, dismissed the proceedings in Cases Nos 2124 and 2171 without prejudice.

In House Resolution No 24, dated December 19, 1949, certain agencies, including this commission, were requested to initiate proceedings looking toward effecting separations of grades at Los Feliz Boulevard, Glendale Boulevard, and Fletcher Drive in Los Angeles County, and report to the Assembly not later than March 15, 1950. Pursuant to this House resolution a study was conducted by an Engineering Committee composed of representatives of the Cities of Los Angeles and Glendale, the State Highway Department, the Southern Pacific Company, the commission staff, and other interested parties, particularly city and county planning commissions in that area. This study dealt with a plan and estimated cost of constructing grade separations at each of the three grade crossings referred to in the resolution. This report was transmitted to the Legislature March 6, 1950. Your files will show that the estimated cost of effecting the separations at the three locations was as follows:

Item	Los Feliz Boulevard	Glendale Boulevard	Fletcher Drive
Right of Way	$372,696	$491,559	$248,040
Construction	786,799	1,294,671	1,083,094
Engineering and Contingencies	173,925	267,935	199,670
	$1,333,420	$2,054,165	$1,530,804

The report contained a number of observations, one of which reads as follows:

"4 Due to the magnitude of the financial problem necessary to carry out any or all of the grade separations under consideration, it is recommended that a committee be appointed to develop a plan to finance the respective improvements. It would appear that the Legislature might be the moving party to initiate such a program."

At this time the commission staff is taking leadership in conducting a study, the objective of which is to classify grade crossings for separation or additional protection on a state-wide priority basis. Doubtless the two grade crossings involved in your Resolution No. 35 will rank well at the top of the priority list for improvement in the way of grade separations. This study when completed will be available for such use as the Legislature desires to make of it.

While it is apparent that it is in the public interest to effect grade separations at the two locations referred to in your House Resolution No. 35, in the near future it would appear that the matter of financing such improvement is one that must be given serious consideration. It has been suggested at informal conferences dealing with proposed grade separations prescribed in other House Resolutions, Nos. 70, 72, 78, and 87, that the Legislature might appropriate funds to aid in a state-wide grade crossing improvement program. The commission staff, with the aid of representatives of the other interested parties, are now in the process of conducting a study in response to each of these house resolutions, and it is anticipated that a report will be filed within the allotted time, January 15, 1951. It is apparent that all of the related grade crossing matters now under consideration should be considered together

It would appear that in the light of the state-wide grade crossing study now under way, together with the fact that no financial plan has been suggested for consideration, that it would be appropriate to withhold any further hearings until plans for financing these separations are more fully developed. It is the commission's plan to keep in touch with the situation and at the opportune time proceed along the lines prescribed in your House Resolution No. 35.

Most respectfully,

R. E. MITTELSTAEDT, President

GENTLEMEN: On behalf of our entire family, I wish to gratefully acknowledge the resolution passed by your honorable body expressing your sorrow and regret over the death of my husband, Mr. Arthur P. Will.

It is wonderful to realize that he had made so many friends among the members of your body during his long service in Sacramento as Legislative Counsel and later as Special Consultant.

I had the privilege of talking to persons who heard the fine statements made by several Members of the Assembly at the time of the adoption of this resolution and, as a result, appreciate more fully your kindness in taking time during a busy session to eulogize his character and his work. All of us, including not only the immediate family but other relatives living in Canada and other parts of the United States, have received copies of this resolution with a great feeling of gratitude.

WHEREAS, A distinguished American general is reputed to have expressed the recommendation that draftees into military service or selective training service for the defense of the Nation receive little or no payment for these services in the Armed Forces or in a military preparedness program; and

WHEREAS, While the Assembly of the State of California holds this eminent general in the highest esteem as one of our great military leaders of World War II and an important figure in the present world crisis, it is in complete disagreement with this proposal of his because it feels it is unsound and unjust; and

WHEREAS, This proposal not to pay draftees, or to give them a smaller pay than they now receive, would have a detrimental effect on the morale of new young members of the Armed Forces and might lessen the efficiency of national defense as well as be unfair to the person brought into the service of his Country; and

WHEREAS, The draftee or selectee should, in the opinion of this body, receive compensation for his service in the Armed Forces in accordance with the present policy of making such compensation as fair and generous as the Nation's financial conditions permit; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That this Assembly hereby expresses its disapproval of this proposal and respectfully memorializes the Congress of the United States to continue the policy of providing compensation for persons in the Armed Forces, whether draftees or volunteers, which is as fair and generous as financial conditions of the Nation permit and to maintain the same pay rates for all draftees and selectees regardless of age; and be it further

Third——To lay on the table;
Fourth—For the previous question;
Fifth—To set as a special order;
Sixth—To postpone indefinitely;
Seventh—To refer or re-refer;

Appeal From Decision of the Speaker

64. Any member may appeal from a decision of the Speaker without waiting for recognition by the Speaker, even though another member has the floor. No appeal is in order when another is pending, or when other business has been transacted by the Assembly prior to the appeal being taken.

Upon the appeal being seconded, the Speaker may give his reasons for the decision, and the member taking the appeal may give his reasons for making his appeal, and the Speaker shall forthwith put this question to the Assembly: "Shall the decision of the Speaker be sustained?"

An appeal cannot be amended and yields only to a motion to recess or adjourn, to lay on the table, or a question of personal privilege. If an appeal be laid on the table, such action shall have no effect on the pending question.

An appeal cannot be debated when relating to indecorum, transgression of Rules, or priority of business. A majority vote of the members present shall decide any appeal.

Speaker Explains Order of Business

65. The Speaker may, on his own motion or upon the motion of any Member of the Assembly, explain the order of business when the motion pending before the Assembly is not debatable. Such explanation is not to consume more than two minutes.

To Adjourn

66. A motion to adjourn is not debatable and cannot be amended, and is always in order, except (a) when another member has the floor; (b) when the Assembly is voting; (c) during a call of the Assembly. The name of any member moving an adjournment and also the hour at which the motion was made and adjournment taken shall be entered in the Journal. A motion to adjourn must be adopted by a majority vote of the members present.

When a motion to adjourn is made and seconded, it shall be in order for the Speaker, before putting the question, to permit any member to state to the Assembly any fact relating to the condition of the business of the Assembly which would seem to render it improper or inadvisable to adjourn. A statement shall not occupy more than two minutes and shall not be debatable.

To Recess to a Time Certain

67. A motion to recess to a time certain shall be treated the same as a motion to adjourn, except that such motion is debatable when no business is before the Assembly, and can be amended as to the time and duration of the recess. It yields only to a motion to adjourn.

To Lay on the Table

68. A motion to lay on the table is not debatable and cannot be amended.

A motion to table a bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent or joint resolution requires a majority vote of the entire elected membership.

Any motion to lay on the table, if carried by a majority vote of the entire elected membership, carries with it the main question and everything that adheres to it; provided, however, that a motion to lay an amendment on the table, if adopted, does not carry with it a bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent, joint, or House resolution.

A motion to lay an amendment on the table may be adopted by a majority vote of the members present.

The Previous Question

69. The previous question shall be put only when demanded by five members, and in this form: "Shall the question be now put?" 71. A motion to postpone to a time certain shall be deemed and treated as a motion to set as a special order.

Motion to Amend

73. A motion to amend may itself be amended, but no "amendment to an amendment" can be amended. A motion to amend is debatable, except where the main question to be amended is not debatable. Any motion to amend may be adopted by a majority vote of the members present.

A motion to amend having been decided in the negative, shall not again be in order on the same day, or at the same stage of proceeding. A motion to amend by striking out certain words having been decided in the negative, shall not preclude a motion to amend by adding words, or a motion to amend by striking out and inserting words; but in no case shall a further amendment be substantially the same as the one rejected.

Subject to the above provisions of this rule, a motion to amend is in order during the second or third reading of any bill

A motion to lay an amendment on the table may be adopted by a majority vote of the members present, as provided in Rule 68.

Motion to Be Germane

80. No motion or proposition on a subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted as an amendment.

Motion to Withdraw and Recall Bills

81. A motion to withdraw a bill or resolution from committee, or to re-refer a bill or resolution from one committee to another committee may be made during the regular order of business. A motion to re-refer shall only be debatable as to the propriety of such reference, and shall require a recorded vote of the majority of the elected members.

No bill or resolution shall be withdrawn from committee and placed upon the file except upon two days' notice thereof and except by a recorded vote of a majority of the elected members.

Bills Stricken From the File

82. A motion to strike from the file any bill or House resolution requires a majority vote of the entire elected membership. Such bill shall not be acted upon again during the session.

Motion to Rescind Action and Expunge Record

83. Previous to the approval of the Journal by the Assembly, any action may be rescinded and its record ordered expunged by an affirmative recorded vote sufficient to take such action originally; except that no action shall be rescinded and the record expunged by a vote less than a majority of the entire elected membership. No motion to rescind the action and expunge the record shall be made twice on the same proposition.

Whenever any action of the Assembly is rescinded and its record ordered expunged, the record of the action expunged shall not appear in any form whatsoever, but the record of the proceedings on the motion to rescind and expunge shall appear in the Assembly Journal as and when printed.

Reconsideration of Vote

84. Notice of a motion to reconsider on the next legislative day, the vote whereby any bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent or joint resolution was passed or refused passage, must be given on the same day such vote to be so reconsidered was taken.

A notice of motion to reconsider a vote must be given by a member voting on the bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent or joint resolution, and shall take precedence over all motions, except a motion to adjourn. Upon such notice of motion being given, the bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent or joint resolution shall forthwith be placed upon the unfinished business file, and no further action shall be taken prior to the next legislative day. When a notice of a motion to reconsider has once been made, the same shall be considered to be the property of the Assembly.

Any member voting on any motion, amendment, concurrence, Assembly resolution or proposition other than a bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent or joint resolution, may give notice of reconsideration of the vote whereby the same was passed or refused passage on the same day such vote to be reconsidered was taken, which notice shall suspend all further consideration until the next legislative day; provided, however, that a motion to reconsider on the same day the notice was given shall take precedence over and above such notice and upon demand of any member must be put to an immediate vote. A motion to reconsider any proposition other than a bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent or joint resolution shall require an affirmative recorded vote of a majority of the entire elected membership.

No notice of motion for reconsideration shall be in order on the day preceding the last day for consideration of Assembly or Senate bills in the Assembly. No motion to reconsider shall be adopted except upon an affirmative recorded vote of a majority of the entire elected membership, except that it shall require a two-thirds vote of the entire elected membership to reconsider the vote on any matter originally requiring a two-thirds vote for its passage or adoption.

When reconsideration is granted, the bill shall resume its exact position before the Assembly previous to its being voted upon.

Call of Assembly

85. After the roll has been called, and prior to the announcement of the vote, any member may move a call of the Assembly. A majority of the members present may order a call of the Assembly, and the Speaker shall immediately order the Sergeant-at-Arms to lock all doors and shall direct the Clerk to prepare a list of absentees as disclosed by the last roll call, which list of absentees shall be furnished to the Sergeant-at-Arms and printed in the Journal. Thereupon no members shall be permitted to leave the Assembly Chamber except by written permission of the Speaker, and no person shall be permitted to enter except such member as is taken into custody as herein provided, or Senators, officers, attaches, or employees of the Legislature in the official performance of their duties.

Those members who are found to be absent, and for whom no leaves of absence have been granted, shall be forthwith taken into custody wherever found by the Sergeant-at-Arms or his assistants or any person designated by the Sergeant-at-Arms, including members of the California Highway Patrol, the State Police, and Sheriffs or their deputies, and brought to the Assembly Chamber. No recess or adjournment shall be taken during a call of the Assembly During such call, the Assembly may consider and transact any matter of business by unanimous consent. No call of the Assembly shall be ordered on any matter while the Assembly is already under call. A call of the Assembly may be dispensed with at any time upon a majority vote of the members present, at which time the completion of the roll call pending when the call of the Assembly was ordered shall become the immediate order of business before the Assembly.

86. The adoption of any resolution authorizing the expenditure of money shall require an affirmative recorded vote of a majority of all members elected to the Assembly. All House resolutions shall be numbered and shall be referred to the appropriate committee by the Speaker.

Members Voting

94. Every member in the Assembly Chamber when a roll call is required shall record his vote openly and without debate, unless the Assembly shall, by a majority vote of the members present, excuse him.

The name of any member who refuses to vote as required by this rule, after being requested by the Speaker to do so, shall be entered in the Journal of the Assembly, together with a statement that he was present and did so refuse to vote. Any member who refuses so to vote may, if he so desires, and immediately after the announcement of the vote, submit a written explanation of his failure to vote and have such explanation printed in the Journal, provided no such explanation shall exceed 50 words in length.

In addition to the entry of his name in the Journal, any member who refuses so to vote when required, and who has not been excused from doing so, may, immediately after the announcement of the vote, in the discretion of the Speaker or upon demand of any member, be summoned to appear before the bar of the Assembly for public censure by the Speaker or by any member designated by the Speaker. Censure of a member as provided by this rule shall not constitute a bar to proceedings for his expulsion from the Assembly pursuant to Section 9 of Article IV of the Constitution.

A member may submit a written explanation of his vote on any bill or House resolution, and have such explanation printed in the Journal immediately following such vote, provided no such explanation shall exceed 50 words in length.

Ayes and Noes

95. The ayes and noes shall be recorded by the electrical voting system on the final passage of all bills, or by viva voce when demanded by three members or when ordered by the Speaker, and on any other question when called for by three members or ordered by the Speaker, the names of which members shall be entered in the Journal.

Voting Not to Be Interrupted

96. When once begun, voting shall not be interrupted, except that before the vote is announced, any member may have the total pending vote flashed on the visible vote recorder. Prior to the announcement of the vote the Speaker shall inquire if all members have voted. Any member may move a call of the Assembly after the completion of the roll and prior to the final recording, but no member shall be allowed to change his vote, or have his vote recorded after the vote is announced.

Members at Clerk's Desk

97. No member or other person shall be allowed at the Clerk's desk while the ayes and noes are being recorded or the votes counted.

Tie Vote

98. In case of an equal division, or tie vote, the question shall be lost.

"Two-thirds of the Entire Elected Membership" Defined

99. Wherever the words or figures, "two-thirds of the entire elected membership" appear in any rule, it shall mean 54 votes.

100. Pursuant to the powers vested in the Assembly Committee on Rules or the Assembly Legislative Process Committee, and during such times as the Assembly is not in session, the committee is authorized and directed to incur and pay such expenses of the Assembly not otherwise provided for as the committee determines are reasonably necessary, including repair, alteration, improvement and equipping of the Assembly Chamber and the offices provided for the Assembly in the State Capitol.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL WELFARE
December 13, 1950

The Honorable Sam L. Collins, Speaker of the Assembly, and The Honorable Members of the Assembly
California Legislature, Sacramento 14, Cal.

GENTLEMEN: Attached is the report of this committee covering the child care center program, prepared in accordance with House Resolution No. 71, 1950, Second Extraordinary Session.

In this report the committee makes a number of recommendations concerning the child care centers program, including the following basic ones:

1. That legislation be enacted to establish the program on a more permanent basis for the biennium 1951-53;
2. That appropriations be provided to enable continuation of the present program at approximately its current capacity.

Present laws provide for the termination of state support for the child care center program on February 15, 1951. Consistent with the other recommendations of this committee, we are recommending urgency legislation to continue the program between February 15th and July 1st, 1951.

Immediate action is required to extend the program beyond February 15th. The law requires that 30 days notice be given parents of the closing of centers. Early and positive legislative action will avoid a complete disruption of the program and give assurances to the parents using the centers of the continuation of these services.

Respectfully submitted,

KATHRYN T. NIEHOUSE, Chairman
Assembly Interim Committee on Social Welfare

CHILD CARE CENTERS

I. FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Need for Child Care Centers

Child care centers exist primarily because of the need for mothers to work, either as the sole support of their families or to augment other family income. They serve a dual purpose—to provide for the proper care and supervision of children while parents are working, and to enable families to remain self-supporting by freeing the parent of supervision of children during usual working hours.

In the one-parent families, the mother or other parent must work in order to support the family. The only alternative many of these families may have is to rely upon assistance available under the social welfare programs.

Families in which there are both parents are frequently self-supporting only if both parents can work. The combination of lack of occupational skills and resultant low earnings and high costs of living make it necessary that both parents take employment In other families, illness of one parent necessitates full-time work of the other

The needs of industry are frequently such that it is in the public interest that mothers be employed. This was evidenced particularly during the war-time manpower shortages and is normally present in seasonal agricultural labor requirements.

Child care facilities available through nonprofit organizations, or operated on a profit basis, cannot meet the needs of families of the State While there are a number of nurseries and other centers operated by private organizations with good standards of care and relatively low fees because of the subsidization of these centers by Community Chest funds, religious organizations, etc., they cannot begin to meet the total community need. These centers have waiting lists of their own even though the enrollment in the public centers exceeds that of these privately operated centers.

Other types of child care facilities that may meet proper standards for the protection of the children are not available to lower income families because of the cost of care or do not provide care over sufficient hours of the day to enable working parents to utilize them.

Recommendation

1 That publicly supported child care centers be continued, to meet the needs of children and their parents in all sections of the State.

2. That urgency legislation be enacted to extend the present program through making a supplemental appropriation to cover its costs from February 15 to June 30, 1951.

2. Is Continued State Financing Justified?

A determination as to whether continued state financing is justified needs evaluation of the relative possibilities of meeting known needs through the financial support of the local units of government or from other sources.

A number of school district and county representatives testified to the committee that they could not finance operation of the centers from local tax sources and would not be in a position to carry the centers on after February 15, 1951, if the State discontinued its financial support.

Representatives of certain community welfare councils testified that no plans were being made by community chest supported agencies for taking over the program should state financing be terminated.

Whether or not local governments are financially able to carry this program on is not within the province of this committee to determine. There may be demonstrated here an unwillingness as well as an inability to meet the needs on a local basis.

It is our opinion that the county governments or the school districts or both would not continue most of the centers on a locally financed basis despite the demonstration of need. Being concerned with the welfare of the families involved and the implications to the State as a whole of inadequate care of these young children, the committee necessarily favors continuation of state financial support to insure continued operation of the centers.

Should state support be discontinued, it may be that many of the families now using the centers will become applicants for public assistance. Should a large number of these families be forced to do so, the State and the counties (and primarily the State) would pay a large portion of the current costs of the day care center program through increased social welfare expenditures. Simultaneously the State would lose tax revenues involved in the present income of these families.

Recommendation

That state financial support for the child care center program be retained on a basis to enable continued operation of existing centers.

Local governmental units (counties and school districts) should be encouraged to supplement state funds available to them in order to meet the needs for expansion of centers on a local basis.

3. Eligibility for Use of Child Care Centers

The primary purpose of the child care centers has been to provide a means for low-income parents to continue to support their families by enabling them to use well-operated facilities for caring for children during working hours. The special consideration provided certain groups such as veterans, teachers, and nurses has been based upon other than the economic needs of families.

The primary eligibility test should be based on economic circumstances. Special treatment of certain groups or families not in the lower income groups should be considered only upon a clear showing of the justification for governmental subsidy to such families.

The present means test provides a rough measure of the financial ability of families to provide suitable day care for their children. It is deficient in certain respects, particularly in that it has not been adjusted for changes in purchasing power. It is not realistic in measuring the relative income needs of the very small families, or in the requirements of the smaller numbered one- and two-parent families with the same number of persons in the family unit.

Any fixed income limits are necessarily arbitrary and are designed to fit the majority of families only. Actual need is better measured by a complete analysis of family circumstances, including the unusual requirements that some families have, and the establishment of the means test on the basis of the needs of the individual families. However, this process requires considerable skilled personnel to evaluate family situations and to arrive at minimum budgets for individual families. While this might be more equitable, and a better means of measuring eligibility on the basis of individual family requirements, it must be weighed against the facility and relative simplicity administratively of a fixed schedule of earnings, with perhaps some provision for special consideration in hardship cases. For the great majority of families, the objectives of the program can be realized through using fixed income limitations if these have a sound basis and are flexible in terms of changing costs of living.

A more equitable method would be through determining eligibility on the basis of ability to pay through a fee schedule directly related to cost of living standards for various sized families. This would require considerable study to reconcile variations in present basic living cost studies such as those represented by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics City Worker's Family Budget, the Heller Committee budget studies in the San Francisco area, and the Haynes Foundation studies in the Los Angeles area, and to arrive at an acceptable basic standard for state-wide application. It would also introduce a number of administrative complications, particularly in gearing the fee schedule to the basic income standards so that the fees would represent that amount of income considered in exceess of actual family living requirements.

Under this method, eligibility would be determined by the fee the family was able to pay. When this equaled total cost of care, it would be presumed that the family could make arrangements for such care outside the state program. It would have the advantage of establishing fees on an ability to pay basis, with direct correlation between fees, income, and living requirements as determined by the standards established. It would remove the present arbitrary limits on income which are not necessarily a good measure as to family needs for child care services.

However, intensive study of family living requirements as well as the basis for establishing such a progressive fee schedule and its cost effects on total parent participation would be required before specific recommendations for such a method could be made. In the meantime it is feasible to use the present basic eligibility factors, adjusted to remove fundamental defects.

The Legislature has established the amount of $225 for a one-parent family and $275 for a two-parent family as the income levels representing presumptive economic need for child care services. This applies to the smaller families. For the larger ones, the yardstick of $60 per person has been established. Thus the present means test schedule is as follows:

	One-parent family	Two-parent family
2 persons	$225	----
3 persons	225	$275
4 persons	240	275
5 persons	300	300
6 persons	360	360

The schedule is not based upon actual income requirements of various sized families. No distinction is made in the needs of two and three person one-parent families and the three and four person two-parent families. Only $15 is allowed for the fourth person in the one-parent family, and $25 for the fifth person in the two-parent family although $60 per person is allowed above those numbers.

The schedule was established in 1947. Adjusted to 1950 living cost changes (July) the amount of $225 should be raised to $245 and the $275 amount to $300.

The "means test" figures represent the upper-income limits for the various sized families for purposes of determining eligibility. They have been established separate and apart from the fee schedules themselves. They do, however, reflect a determination of the income level considered necessary to provide for a basic standard of living.

Since the purchasing power of the dollar has changed since these limits were established, the amounts should be adjusted to conform to current living costs.

The limits should be made more realistic by establishing them for the smallest sized family concerned and adjusting for additional family members. The two-member, one-parent family is the smallest unit. The $225 already established, adjusted to living cost changes, would provide a practical base for determining eligibility.

Adjustments for additional family members are now based on a $60 amount, applicable however, only to larger families. Such studies as those of the Bureau of Labor Statistics show that this basis for adjustment for additional family members is not sound. The city worker's budget established for Los Angeles and San Francisco were based on families of four persons, with one wage-earner. The guide determined by the Bureau of Labor Statistics for adjusting for various sized families was to apply 65 percent for the two-person family; 84 percent for the three-member family; and 114 percent for the five-member family, based on the standard four-member family for which the budget was established.

After adjusting the city worker budgets for Los Angeles and San Francisco to 1950 prices, and applying the percentages indicated for various sized families, the difference in income requirements between the families is approximately as follows:

For third person in family	$55
For fourth person in family	45
For fifth person in family	40
Additional members in family	40

Using the $225 amount already established by the Legislature as a base, it is possible to work out a new simplified schedule for the purpose of eligibility, taking into account cost of living changes and numbers of persons in the family, as follows:

Number persons in family	Income limit
5	385

This would provide a more realistic maximum limit on income as a condition of eligibility for use of the centers. It could be applied to all families, both two-parent and one-parent.

Comparison of these schedules with the present means test limits is as follows:

	One-parent families		Two-parent families
No. persons	Present	Adjusted	Present	Adjusted
2	$225	$245	--	--
3	225	300	$275	$300
4	240	345	275	345
5	300	385	300	385

The incomes represented by the adjusted schedule would be maximums for purpose of eligibility. Section 19607 of the code establishes the policy of the Legislature that the child care centers shall be made available first to those who have the greatest financial need. Thus the administrative agencies would be required to apply priorities in acceptance of applications so that the lower income families would have first opportunity to use the centers.

"Take-home" vs. Gross Income

Several witnesses recommended that the income limitations be based on take-home pay rather than gross pay since the actual take-home pay is what the family has for living expenses. This would be feasible if the program were administered on the basis of careful budgeting of family requirements, involving a social work investigation. However, it would complicate determination of eligibility, increasing administrative costs of the program, because of the difficulties in determining take-home pay in many instances. While deductions for taxes and social security are readily identifiable from pay envelopes, other expenses incident to the obtaining of income may be difficult to determine.

Recommendation

1. That the present basis for determining eligibility of families for use of the centers be adjusted to recognize cost of living changes since 1947, and to provide a direct relationship between the maximum income limitations and the number of persons in the family in the manner outlined in this report, gross income being used to determine eligibility.

4. Exemptions From Income Means Test

Exemptions of certain groups of parents from the means test have been established either on the basis of occupational shortages in certain selected professions or to enable veterans with families to take full advantage of those benefits enabling them to secure special instruction or training.

These exemptions necessarily involve some discrimination. For example teachers and nurses are excepted from the income test, but parents in other professions are not. They also account for some criticism of the program on the basis that selected groups of parents are favored.

All parents should have equal access to the centers without respect to occupation or other special status. The primary purpose of the centers is to enable low income families to continue being self-supporting through employment of the sole parent, or both parents.

A. Student Veterans' Exemption From Means Test

The purpose of the present provisions for exempting student veterans from the means test is to enable them to take advantage of the educational opportunities offered them by the government in recognition of their military services.

Under present law or regulations no minimum limitations are placed upon the period of attendance at school or other types of training involved. The intent would appear to be that full-time attendance is the basis for justification of exemption from the means test. It is possible, however, for veterans to qualify under the exemption from the means test by attending school for very short periods of time and having full-time employment.

The exemption covers the student veteran only so long as attendance at school or participation in an approved training program is covered by the applicable national and state laws. The period for securing benefits under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act might expire before the veteran had actually completed the course of study for which such benefits were authorized. It would seem reasonable to permit continuation of such education under the exemption from the means test until the course of study engaged in under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act were completed, with perhaps a time limit of one year.

At present about 48 percent of student veteran families could qualify under the means test. Under the proposed adjustment of the maximum income limits, approximately 75 percent of these student veteran families could qualify without special exemption.

B. Registered Nurses

There was no testimony before the committee relative to the exemption from the income test applicable to registered nurses. The bulletin of the State Department of Education concerning eligibility for use of the centers does not establish any criteria or guidance for determination of conditions under which services of registered nurses are to be considered "necessary."

Incomes in 64 percent of the one-parent, and about 34 percent of the two-parent families exempted from the means test because the applicant parent is a registered nurse would be within the present means test limit. Those proportions would increase under adjustments of the means test recommended in this report.

The committee does not believe that there are conditions that make it desirable to single out registered nurses as an occupational group for which special concessions should be made in a permanent child care center program. It is recognized, however, that the unsettled international situation and increasing demands of the armed forces for nurses may result in emergencies such as those prevailing during World War II.

C. Teachers

While there was testimony before the committee to the effect that a shortage of qualified teachers continues, it was also indicated that shortages are primarily in the rural areas and that salary competition between the school districts of the State may have some bearing on shortages of teachers in certain areas It is noted that 13,409 emergency credentials were issued in the 1949-1950 Fiscal Year

About one-third of the teacher one-parent families could qualify for use of the centers under the present income means test. Only 22 percent of the two-parent families could meet the income limitations. Even under the recommended adjustment of the means test the effect of placing teachers on the same basis as other occupational groups, and subject to the means test, would be to render ineligible the majority of those in two-parent families and about one-fourth of the one-parent families.

D. Parents Employed in Agricultural Emergencies

In actual practice, the necessity of providing child care facilities for parents employed to meet an emergency arising from the necessity of harvesting or processing crops does not appear to have arisen. At any event none of the factual data obtained by the committee indicates the actual operation of this particular exemption from the income test.

There are, however, demonstrations of need for child care centers in rural areas on a seasonal basis, primarily for protection of the children of agricultural workers.

Unless centers were already established in the particular areas affected, it is difficult to conceive of action being taken to establish on short notice centers to meet emergency situations. The centers that are operating in cities in agricultural counties are, like the others, enrolled to capacity.

There appears to be a real need for establishment of centers in rural areas and particularly in relation to periods of seasonal peak employment. However, there is not available data as to the exact areas of need or the numbers of children who might be involved if centers were established.

Without closing down or curtailing existing centers, the needs of agricultural areas cannot be recognized. If rural areas are to have an opportunity to participate in the program, it must be expanded to meet the needs of those areas.

In certain respects some experimentation would be necessary, to determine the actual needs of rural areas as well as the types or location of centers that should be established. There is little precedent for this type of program although there has been some experience with it in New York State under which the growers provide the buildings and the state pays 85 percent and the growers 15 percent of the cost of operation. Parent fees are 25 cents a day for the first child and 20 cents for additional children using the centers.

Because of the limited information available, which can be obtained only through actual experience with the program, it is not feasible to attempt to make specific recommendations as to the establishment and conduct of rural centers.

E. Families of Service Personnel

A new need has arisen in recent months because of the international situation. Fathers are being drafted or returned to active duty with the armed forces and the mothers in these service families are forced to secure employment to supplement family allowances.

In administration of the means test, the base pay, plus allowances, plus subsistence of service personnel is considered income. However, all of this income is not available to the family for its support.

Testimony before the committee has shown that many of these families' applications for use of the centers are being rejected because the mothers' wages added to the total income of the parent in service causes gross income to exceed the means test.

The committee is particularly sympathetic to the needs of these families. However, it must be recognized that the capacity of the child care center program is limited and that the establishment of additional groups exempted from the means test will increase demands for service in a program that is not currently meeting the existing demand.

Part of the problem of these families can be alleviated through adoption of the suggested revised ceiling on income on the basis of size of family and through counting as family income only that portion of the pay and allowances of the serviceman as can be reasonably expected to be available for support of the family.

F. Persons Employed in Defense Activities

The committee has repeatedly been requested to consider the needs of parents engaged in defense work. Some of these parents have been using the centers but incomes have increased beyond the eligibility limits due to longer hours of work or other factors. The increasing demand for employment of women has intensified the requests for child care center services.

This is the type of problem that was met during the war by the child care center program supported by federal funds under the Lanham Act. With the presently established centers already at capacity and with waiting lists, the needs of defense industry cannot be met without considerable expansion of the child care center program.

Since such defense industry needs are normally concentrated in particular areas, it may be that the answer to this problem is one that can be found through local community action.

There is no question that such families require child care center services such as are offered through the public program. However it is impossible to determine for how long a period this special need may exist. To meet the problem through the present program would require a considerably increased appropriation and undoubtedly special appropriation for the construction of additional physical facilities for the centers.

Technical eligibility for use of the centers could be accomplished for this group by raising the income limits. However any such action would need to be applicable to all other families.

Exemption from the means test for families engaged in defense work would be difficult to administer and would create additional demand for use of centers that the centers cannot meet without a greatly expanded appropriation. The determination of essentiality of industrial activity would create especially difficult administrative problems.

Recommendations

1. That exemptions from the means test for teachers and nurses be terminated, the income limitations to be adjusted upward as suggested in this report to provide a more realistic basis for application to all families.

2. That exemptions be continued for student veterans; and,

(a) That veterans receiving instruction under the Federal Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, or under Article 2, Chapter 6, Division of Military and Veterans Code of California, continue to be exempt from the means test only so long as such instruction is received on not less than a one-half time basis.

3. That no exemptions from the means test be provided on the basis of employment in so-called defense or war work.

Should requirements of the national preparedness program create labor shortages necessitating the recruitment of women on a scale comparable to that of World War II, it is possible that the Federal Government will establish a special program to make child care centers available as an inducement to employment in war industry. There is no need for legislative action at this time anticipating such a development. Appropriate action can be taken at a later date if necessary.

5. Parent Fees

Since the basic purpose of the program is to provide low-cost care facilities for children of working parents in the lower income groups, fee schedules should be based upon an ability-to-pay principle. The State is making available to certain families low-cost day care facilities for their children It is also subsidizing most of these families by providing this care at less than cost.

In general, it seems that the present fee schedule is somewhat high for the very low income families and not high enough for other income groups. Fees for lower income groups should be established at a minimum figure and progressively increased as sharply as possible with increased family income.

Fees for extended day care are lower than for nursery care for the same sized families with equal income, although in most instances families are not paying full cost of extended day care. The difference in fees reflects the difference in services, the extended day care group being provided care for less than half a day. However, despite the difference in services, to reduce the state subsidy involved, such rates should be raised insofar as is practicable so that these families pay a larger portion of the cost of care.

It is not practical that a fee schedule be established by law. Provisions in the present law providing that fees be based upon the ability of families to pay is sufficient. It is preferable that the administrative agency work out the details of an equitable fee system and have authority to adjust fees with changing conditions, to improve the schedule, or to meet budgetary requirements.

Approximately 30 percent of the total cost of operation of the centers in the 1949-50 Fiscal Year was borne by parent fees.

Recommendation

1. That the State Department of Education revise the present fee schedule for the purpose of increasing fees so that they reflect more closely ability-to-pay;

2. That fees charged for extended-day-care services should equal nursery center fees up to a point where the family pays full cost.

3. That the Legislature establish a policy that at least one-third of the total cost of the program be borne by parent fees.

6. Capacity of Program

Most persons testifying before the committee not only emphasized current need for the centers but recommended that actions be taken to make more families eligible for their use. Under the present appropriations, the capacity of the centers does not meet need and there is a large waiting list. Requests for establishment of centers in many communities have been denied because of inability to expand the program due to the appropriation limits.

Elimination of the exemptions granted teachers and nurses, as recommended by the committee would provide some relief.

The committee recognizes that there is a need justifying expansion of the program, both in those communities where centers are now operating and in other areas of the State where no centers have been established.

However, the needs in terms of this program must be weighed by the Legislature with the constantly increasing demands upon the State Treasury for other important public services. While recognizing an unmet need in this program and the positive social and economic values that are involved in it, the committee also recognizes that these needs must be considered in relation to those of other public functions.

Since many of the centers are already operating at capacity, an expansion of enrollment would undoubtedly necessitate capital expenditures to provide the housing and equipment necessary for the centers. With the population pressures on the schools and a large construction program under way to meet normal education needs, child care centers functioning on school property could not be expected to expand into other school facilities which are already overcrowded.

With these considerations in mind, the committee believes that the soundest approach at this time is to attempt to maintain enrollment at the existing levels even though it does not meet total need.

However, there should be maximum encouragement to the counties and school districts to provide their own funds, to supplement those of the State, to expand the capacity of the centers to meet local needs under the standards of eligibility established for the state program.

Recommendations

1. That an appropriation be made for the year to June 30, 1952, of an amount roughly equivalent to that for the 1948-1949 Fiscal Year, this appropriation to be considered as an amount, when added to parent fees, to provide a basic state-wide child care center program.

2. That the counties or the school districts or both be encouraged to provide funds to supplement those allocated by the State in order to better meet local needs.

7. Administrative Responsibility

Judged by testimony before the committee, the present arrangement for administration and supervision through the State Department of Education apparently meets with the approval of those using the centers and of the persons involved in their operation.

It was recommended to the committee that supervision be by the Department of Social Welfare. Administration of the program through the welfare departments would appear to raise a number of complications. Also the welfare departments themselves are overloaded with their regular functions and do not appear to be in a position to take over an additional responsibility such as would be involved in supervising the child care centers program.

Recommendation

That there be no change in the method of administering or operating responsibilities for the child care centers program.

II. CHILD CARE CENTERS REPORT

(Report of Executive Secretary to Committee)

Foreword

Under existing legislation, the State will cease financial support of the child care centers on February 15, 1951. Unless there is new legislation it will be optional with the school districts or the counties to provide, either jointly or severally, for the continuance of the centers after February 15, 1951.

House Resolution No. 71, Second Extraordinary Session, 1950, provided that the Assembly Interim Committee on Social Welfare study problems of the social welfare and child care centers program and make recommendations to the Assembly at the Regular Session of 1951. Study of the child care centers program was thus only a portion of the total activity of the committee.

The committee has concerned itself primarily with the social and economic needs for the child care centers, how those needs may best be met, and with certain aspects of the eligibility requirements and the fee schedules established for the program. It has not attempted a detailed analysis of administration of the program, including cost factors, personnel, facilities, or quality of the program from either an educational or custodial point of view.

Three public hearings were held in larger population centers. Data presented by the operating agency have been analyzed. The committee is particularly indebted to Dr. Jessie Coles, Department of Home Economics, University of California, who made available the data she compiled in her study of a large sample of families using the centers in October, 1949, and who prepared a number of special tables at the request of the committee.

* I do not think there should be any exemptions whatsoever from the means test.

B. Description of Program

The present child care center program is partially an outgrowth of World War II. With federal aid such centers were established during the war with the dual purpose of attracting women into war work and to protect children against neglect when parents were working.

When the Federal Government withdrew support after the war, the State continued the program—beginning March 1, 1946. It has since continued on a year to year basis.

In July, 1947, an income "means test" and fee system based upon a sliding scale related to family income and size of family were introduced. The use of the centers was thus limited primarily to lower income families, exceptions being made in cases of working teachers, registered nurses, veterans attending school, and in agricultural emergencies.

Senate Bill No. 13, enacted April 27, 1950, limited use of state funds for the centers until February 15, 1951. The bill provided:

> "It is hereby declared by the Legislature * * * that such wartime emergency is rapidly disappearing so that the state support for child care centers will no longer be necessary after February 15, 1951."

It recognized probable continued need for such centers, stating:

> "* * * while in some communities there is still a need for child care centers, such need is a matter of local rather than state interest and therefore should be supported by the counties or the local school districts after February 15, 1951."

Children of working parents receive care and supervision during usual working hours. Children may be enrolled only if parents are employed, or are mentally or physically unable to assume responsibility for their care.

Eligible children (except those from certain classes of families) are confined to those from families where total income of the parents does not exceed $225 per month where one parent is working, or $275 per month where both the parents in the two-parent families ar employed, or where income is not greater than $60 per family member per month.

Seventy-nine (79%) percent of the 11,640 families using the centers in October, 1949, were those eligible on an income "means-test" basis. The other twenty-one (21%) percent represented specific groups exempted by law from the income test although not necessarily earning income in excess of that for families to which the means test applies.

Exception from income requirements is made for veterans attending school under the G.I. Bill, public school teachers and registered nurses where it is determined their services are necessary, and persons employed to meet an emergency arising from the necessity of harvesting or processing crops.

Centers are operated by the school districts under standards established by the Department of Education. Costs of operation are separate and apart from funds derived from district taxes or apportioned to districts for support of schools. Costs are met through apportionment of state appropriations and from fees collected from the parents.

Three types of centers are conducted—nursery for ages two to five; extended day care for before and after school care of school-age children; and combinations of the two. Opening and closing times are established to meet the needs of parents using the centers. Centers are on a five- or six-day week basis, dependent upon needs in individual areas. No night centers are now operated Centers are concentrated in the urban areas, ninety (90%) percent of the enrollment being in the Counties of Los Angeles, Alameda, San Francisco, San Diego, and Contra Costa.

As of June 30, 1950, 293 centers were operated in 54 school districts in 22 counties. Average enrollment was 12,593 children during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1950. Peak enrollment during the year was 13,645. There were 2,273 parent applications reported on the waiting list as of November, 1949.

Fees are established on a sliding scale basis geared to the earnings and sizes of families For the last fiscal year, parent fees cover 31.51 percent of the total cost with the state subsidy of the centers equal to 68½ percent of the cost.

Total cost of providing care for the nursery-aged child was almost double that of the children in the extended day care centers. The cost of care for the child age two to five years was about $61 per month and for the older children about $33 per month.

Families Using the Centers

(NOTE: Statistics used herein are based upon the survey covering a random sample of 1,360 families of the total of 11,640 as of October, 1949, conducted by Dr. Jessie V. Coles, Department of Home Economics, University of California.)

Approximately 56 percent of the families using the centers are one-parent families and 44 percent are families in which both parents are working or one is incapacitated.

Total families, October, 1949—11,548

	1949	1947
One parent in home	54.6%	43.8%
Relative other than parent	1.5	1.0
Two parents in home	43.9	55.2

Of these families with children in the centers in October, 1949:

56.4 percent had children in nursery centers only;
31.0 percent had children in extended day care centers only;
12.6 percent had children in both types of centers.

Approximately two-thirds of the families had a single child in the centers. This was a smaller proportion than in 1947.

Percent of total families	1949	1947
1 child in centers	67.1	78.4
2 children in centers	27.8	19.2
3 children in centers	4.3	2.2
4 children in centers	.7	.2
5 children in centers	.1	.0

The average sized family was found to be 3.42 persons. Seventy-five percent of these families had two to four members (2 persons, 12.8 percent; 3 persons, 33.0 percent; 4 persons, 29.2 percent; 5 persons, 12.9 percent).

The medium income of families for Northern and Southern California was reported as:

	Northern California	Southern California	All California
One-parent family	$190	$175	$180
Two-parent family	270	260	265
All families	200	200	200

Income distribution of all families using the centers in October, 1949, was as follows:

Total monthly income	All families	1-parent families	2-parent families
To $199	45.1%	66.6%	18.3%
$200– 224	16.0	20.5	10.4
$225– 274	18.8	9.8	29 9
$275– 324	10.8	2 7	21.0
$325– 374	4.0	.3	8 7
$375– 424	2.1	.1	4.6
$425– 474	1.5	.0	3 2
$475– Over	1.7	.0	3.9

About twenty-one percent (21%) of the total families are those in which the applicant parent is a nurse, teacher, or student-veteran exempt from the income means test established in the law. The proportion of these groups is the heaviest in the two-parent families, accounting for about a third of this group. The great bulk of student-veteran families are in this category.

In the one-parent families those with incomes above $324, and in the two-parent families above $375, are primarily families of nurses, teachers, or student-veterans.

Seventy-nine (79%) percent of all families using the centers are those whose eligibility is determined on the basis of family income, taking into account size of family in the larger family groups.

Student veteran families	10.6 percent
Teacher families	6.1 percent
Nurse families	4 3 percent
All others	79 percent

One-parent Families

Children of families in which there is only one parent are eligible for enrollment if the family income is not more than $225 per month, or in the cases of larger families equal to $60 per person in the family, or because the parent is in one of the excepted groups (nurses, teachers, student veterans).

In practically all of these families the mother is the sole support. Divorce or separation accounted for the breakup of the family unit in eighty (80%) percent of the cases, death in twelve (12%) percent. It was indicated by the study conducted at the University of California that less than thirty (30%) percent of the divorced fathers are contributing toward support of the family.

Including the families exempt from the income means test, many of these one-parent families are in an extremely low income class. Twenty-five (25%) percent had incomes of less than $150 per month, and sixty-seven (67%) percent incomes under $200. Eighty-seven (87%) percent of these families had incomes of less than $225, the basic limitation for eligibility for use of the centers.

Forty-six (46%) percent of the two-member one-parent families had incomes of less than $175 per month and seventy-one (71%) percent of less than $200. Fifty (50%) percent of the three member families had incomes of less than $175 a month, and seventy-one (71%) percent of less than $200.

Two-parent Families

Approximately 3,200 families, excluding those of teachers, nurses, and student veterans, using the centers have two parents in the home. In a small percentage one parent is incapacitated from employment. In the great majority both parents are employed to support the family.

The income limitation of $275 for determining eligibility for use of the centers applies to the three- and four-member families. Families with five or more members may have income equal to $60 per family member and be eligible for use of the centers.

Thirty-one (31%) percent of the three-member, and twenty-two (22%) percent of the four-member families had incomes of less than $200 a month while thirty-two (32%) percent of the five-member families fell in this low income group.

Median income for all two-parent families for October, 1949, was reported as follows:

	Northern California	Southern California	All California
Mother's earnings	$125	$120	$120
Father's earnings	140	140	140
Total family earnings	270	260	265

The above income figures include the earnings of teachers and nurses whose incomes run higher than other families in the total group.

Teachers' Families

Teachers whose employment is found to be necessary due to occupational shortages may utilize the centers for their children without regard to family income. They represent about six (6%) percent of all families using the centers, and include both one- and two-parent families.

Although exempt from the means test, a large proportion of the teachers in the one-parent group and many in the two-parent group would be eligible to use the centers on an income basis. Sixty-eight and seven-tenths percent of the teacher families had incomes in excess of the means test (40 percent of one-parent and 78 3 percent of two-parent families).

The total number of teacher families using the centers is approximately 700, based upon 6.1 percent of the total of the 11,640 families with children enrolled in October, 1949.

Registered Nurses' Families

These families are eligible to use the centers without income restrictions if it is found that the services of the nurse are necessary. They make up 4 3 percent of the total families, or about 500 families in October, 1949.

A large proportion of the registered nurses who were the sole parent in the family had incomes within the means test range, and many two-parent families in which there were registered nurses could have been eligible under the means test. Fifty-two and six-tenths percent of nurses' families had incomes in excess of the means test level. (Thirty-six percent one-parent and 65.6 percent two-parent families.)

Veterans' Families

The great majority of student veteran families are those with two parents, the veteran attending school and the mother being employed to help support the family. The study shows 4.2 percent of these families in the very low income group of less than $125 a month. These families included those in which the mother was incapacitated or a student, or in which a grandmother served in the role of female parent.

The means test is not applicable to this group. There are over 1,200 such families, 10.6 of the total as of October, 1949. Forty-seven and seven-tenths percent of these families could qualify under the means test.

Children in the Centers

Over half of the children are in the nursery age group, two to five years old. Only a small number, about 2½ percent of the total, are in the older age group, 10 to 16 years.

Age distribution of children in the centers as of October, 1949, was approximately as follows:

	Number	Percent
2 to 3 years	1,807	13.2
3 to 4 years	2,752	20.1
4 to 5 years	2,793	20.4
Total under 5 years	7,352	53.7
5 to 10 years	5,982	43.7
10 to 16 years	356	2.6
Total 5 to 16 years	6,338	46.3

Total children, 13,690.

In the two years, 1947 to 1949, the proportion of the nursery aged children dropped from 58.8 percent to 53.7 percent figure. There was an increase from 38.9 percent to 43.7 percent in the five to ten-year-old group and a slight increase in the older group of children.

About 82 percent of the younger children (two to five years) were in the centers eight or more hours per day. Over 20 percent of them attended for 10 or more hours a day.

C. Need for Child Care Centers

There appears to be general agreement that some public program for providing child care facilities at low cost to families in which parents are employed is needed. If the requests for such services constitute a proof of need, there is evidence to support the need through the record of enrollment, parent waiting lists, and unmet requests for the establishment of additional centers.

During the war years, need for the centers was based primarily upon the labor requirements of war industries although there was also recognition of the social desirability of providing proper care facilities for children of working parents.

Enrollment in the centers reached a peak in May, 1945, just prior to the cessation of hostilities with Japan. There was a rapid decline in enrollment from 25,566 children in May, 1945, to 14,685 by November of that year. For the past three years, average monthly enrollment has been relatively stable, varying from 12,000 to 12,750 children. In these latter years the centers have been filled to the capacity permitted by the support from state appropriations and parent fees.

This enrollment in the past few years has not been associated with labor emergencies such as characterized the war years. However, in the past six months, there has been an increased demand for child care services from parents entering war industry or because of dislocation of family life due to the fathers entering the armed services.

Continued need, apart from wartime or defense emergency considerations, is recognized in existing legislation although recent legislative action assumes that such needs are local in character not justifying statewide financial support.

Centers have been operating in 22 counties. However, enrollment has been concentrated in the larger population centers. In these areas there have been waiting lists of parents seeking to enroll their children and meeting the eligibility requirements but unable to secure services because of the capacity enrollments in the centers. However, need has not been confined to these large population areas and there is evidence of demand for centers in other areas of the State.

Since 1947 many districts have requested information from the Department of Education pertaining to the establishment of child care centers. Because new centers cannot be opened if they would result in the termination or contraction of centers already in operation, these requests could not be granted.

Need for the establishment of centers has been generally recognized in agricultural areas, particularly in connection with seasonal employment problems.

Privately operated centers have not been able to meet the need. In fact, recognized community centers operated by private agencies themselves have waiting lists. These centers are frequently subsidized by community chests or by religious or other groups and offer care at relatively low cost. Fees in those private centers operated by individuals or organizations on a self-sustaining basis have been reported to be too high for the group of families served by the public centers, or hours of operation are such that persons employed on a full day basis are unable to utilize these centers.

Types of Needs to Be Met

There are a variety of reasons, both economic and social, why children need low-cost day care facilities. The most obvious, or course, is the need of the mother who is the sole support of the family to have available child care facilities in which she can leave her children with confidence and assurance that they will receive adequate supervision and care.

Many of these working mothers are faced with the alternatives of providing for their families through employment or relying upon welfare assistance for a minimum level of family maintenance. If they are to remain economically independent they must secure suitable care and supervision of their children at low cost.

There are many two-parent families in the lower income levels. These families affected by the high cost of living, labor market fluctuations, low earnings due to the lack of occupational skills, and a variety of other reasons require the income of both parents to maintain the family. Earnings levels of such families, even with both parents employed, are insufficient to enable them to pay the full cost of day care for their children in private nurseries even if such services were available to them on a basis of hours of operation meeting their needs.

Other families may have short-term or temporary economic problems, or problems of family adjustment, which make it desirable to utilize low-cost child care centers. The costs of serious illnesses may make it necessary that both parents work to meet debts. A family crisis such as created by death or separation may require temporary facilities for the care of the children until required family adjustments can be made.

Some parents will continue employment even though proper facilities for supervision and care of children are not available. The problem presented is in relation to the needs of their children rather than that of the parents. The use of child care centers providing good supervision and a sound program has social values to the community because of its concern for the welfare of children whose parents may not demonstrate sufficient responsibility or concern.

The needs of industry, or shortages in certain professional occupations, have been recognized in the past as justification for child care centers. This was the basis of the wartime program. It is recognized in the existing program which exempts nurses and teachers from the means test if their services are considered necessary, and exempts persons needed in emergencies for the harvesting and processing of crops.

Seasonal concentration of farm families in rural areas creates particular problems since both parents normally work in the fields and frequently inadequate provision is made for care and supervision of young children during working hours.

The veterans of World War II attending school under the benefits of the G.I. Bill constitute a special problem. If those veterans with families are to be able to take advantage of their opportunities for education low-cost child care facilities are a necessity.

Since the start of the Korean war, fathers have been drafted into the armed services or recalled to active duty leaving families that need incomes greater than provided under the family allotments for service personnel. Mothers in many of these families must secure employment to maintain the family and to protect equities in homes contracted for before the father was called into service.

How great these needs are, and the extent to which they cannot be met other than through publicly supported child care centers cannot be determined or estimated in numbers of children at any given time. The relative stability of enrollment at the capacity permitted by funds available for operation of the centers and the existence of a large waiting list of families is demonstration of normal needs. It may be argued that some families currently using the centers may not have sufficient need to justify their subsidization by public funds. However this group would be relatively small and would be more than offset by those families demonstrating need but unable to utilize the centers because of enrollment limitations.

However the situation has changed rapidly in recent months due to the national preparedness program creating demands in addition to the many unmet needs in the State not directly associated with accelerated employment in war industry or expansion of the armed forces.

Unmet Needs

The present program does not meet existing needs. Centers already established have not been able to accommodate families seeking to use them because of the limited budgets for administration and operation of the centers and limitations of facilities. Only a small portion of families in the rural areas are being served although there is evidence of considerable need for such services. The present program makes no provision for acceptance of children on the basis of social or emotional needs, eligibility being limited to economic considerations, or for recognition of hardship situations of families whose income level may be above the means test.

Although a waiting list of families has been a standard condition in areas where centers are established, the need for expansion of enrollment has become particularly pressing since the start of the Korean war. Many applications are being rejected because centers have been filled to capacity. Some centers, already having waiting lists and experiencing an increase in applications could accommodate more children in existing physical facilities provided funds were available for meeting the additional costs of staff for supervision and general conduct of the program.

A new problem has arisen in recent months directly as a result of the national preparedness program, and illustrates a changing character in need for use of the centers. Many parents already utilizing the centers have had incomes increased because of longer work hours or other factors in industry. This has resulted in making them ineligible under the means test. Many other applicants entering war industry have been turned away on an income basis. The total income from earnings of mothers and their allotments from servicemen husbands has necessitated rejection of applications on an income basis.

The director of child care services in San Diego reported the following, covering the period from the start of the Korean war to September 15, 1950:

137 wives of military personnel applying for employment ineligible for child care services because of income;

134 other mothers applying for defense work ineligible because of income;

143 mothers in other than defense work ineligible because of income;
150 families with parents employed in defense work who may be required to drop children from centers because of increased earnings due to overtime and salary raises;
63 children could be added without increase in staffing or other costs except for food.

A survey of the Bay Area conducted by the Nursery School Association of Northern California in early September, 1950, revealed the following:

Alameda: Turning down four to five applications daily although space to accommodate 350 to 400 more children. Enrollment limited to 185 because of appropriations available.

Oakland: Could increase enrollment by 300 children with additional funds for operation. Fees too high for parents needed in seasonal cannery work. During July-August rejected average of 10 applications daily because of earnings above means test level.

Martinez: Forty applications rejected in August because of income, eight of them from families of service personnel. Could accommodate 35 more children in existing facilities with increased budget.

Redwood City: Turned down 72 applications in August because of earnings. Six children dropped from centers because of salary increase of parents. Waiting list of 31 families.

San Francisco: Waiting list of 339 families. Three hundred forty applications rejected during July-August and 27 enrollees dropped because of family incomes.

Richmond: Twenty-five children dropped during August because of increased family income. Thirty-five applications from families with fathers in armed services rejected account of earnings. One hundred six applications from parents employed in defense work rejected in August. Two hundred additional children could be cared for within existing facilities.

The need in areas of high seasonal employment is to facilitate employment as well as for protection of the children of parents employed in agriculture and food processing.

Rural areas in which there is need for child care services have not been given recognition under the program. Such recognition is not possible under the present law since no new centers can be opened with state funds if they would jeopardize the existing centers.

The primary problem in rural areas appears to be seasonal in nature which would necessitate a somewhat different type of program than now exists in urban centers. In planning programs it presents other problems since the total need for child care centers in such areas has not been determined.

Peak seasonal population in labor camps in the six counties of Fresno, Kern, Kings, Madera, Merced, and Tulare has been estimated at 49,500. This does not include those living in other centers of population during seasonal agricultural peaks. Past studies indicate that 26 percent of the members of migrant families were under 14 years of age. Among this group there would thus be a large number of very young children requiring care and supervision while parents are engaged in agricultural work.

In many rural counties there are no child care centers established under the state program.

The section dealing with the problems of children of migrant families at the Governor's Conference on Children and Youth, held in Sacramento, September 18 and 19, 1950, recommended as follows:

> "Child care centers for rural areas should be established close to the parents' place of work or residence. These day care centers are considered vital because of the protection given children of pre-school age from the numerous hazards to which the child may be exposed while the parents are working. Extended day care centers are needed as well as those for pre-school children. Supervised day care centers provide the child with an opportunity to develop more fully a healthy personality and social integration."

While this committee did not hold public hearings in rural areas, there was considerable testimony on the need for child care centers presented to the San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Labor Resources Committee during the course of its study.

In a report to the Agricultural Labor Resources Committee the Tulare Board of Supervisors stated:

> "Due to economic pressure, the mother in the agricultural family has been forced to join her husband in the role of breadwinner; therefore the children of agricultural workers are often given inadequate care. It is a common sight to see pre-school age children left in the automobile while their parents toil in the fields. School age children remain at home to mind the younger children. Practically the only alternate plan for the mother would be to avail herself of the offer of a kindly neighbor who watches the children along with numerous others. These homes are mostly substandard and overcrowded. They are seldom licensed as foster homes since the individuals are unaware that this is necessary. There is a great need in the county for child care centers."

Before the same committee, the Kern County Department of Public Health recommended that consideration be given to establishing day nurseries in that county during seasonal employment periods in order to reduce the accident and illness rate of babies and young children taken into the fields by parents.

Recognition of the desirability of a broader type of child care center services has been emphasized, particularly by agencies concerned with child welfare and family service programs. At the Governor's Conference on Children and Youth, September, 1950, the section concerned with Care of Children Away from Home recommended:

> "Day care in child care centers has educational, social, and health facets grouped together in one institution, designed to meet a specific need of employed mothers and to help maintain family unity. This program needs expansion on a permanent basis, since the employment of women is an expanding factor in our economy. The criteria of eligibility to use the centers should be the individual need of the child and his family rather than the family's income bracket. Casework services should be accessible to those children and families who may need these services. The primary responsibility for financial support of the child care centers rests with the State, and administration should remain with the Department of Education, with social and health services readily available."

D. The Means Test

Section 19601.6 of the Education Code established the "means test" which limits eligibility for use of the centers to families within certain fixed income ranges, with the exception of the groups specifically exempted from the means test (veterans, teachers, nurses, etc.)

The section provides that no child shall be admitted to a child care center if the total monthly income from all sources of the child's immediate family:

(a) Where both parents are working exceeds two hundred seventy-five ($275) dollars, or

(b) Where but one parent * * * is the sole wage earner * * * exceeds two hundred twenty-five ($225) dollars.

Provided, however, that if the monthly income of the family divided by the total number of persons to be supported therefrom does not exceed sixty ($60) dollars then the child may still be admitted to the center even though total family income exceeds the amounts established in (a) and (b) above.

The law also provides that the total monthly income figure may be exceeded in any month or months of the year if it is believed the average monthly income for the year would not exceed the maximum.

Veterans of World War II attending school or receiving instruction under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 during the years 1947 to 1951, or under Article 2, Chapter 6, Division 4 of the Military and Veterans Code, and the other parent in the family, if any, are exempt from the income limitations.

Also exempt are teachers and nurses whose services "are necessary as a teacher in a public school or as a registered nurse" and parents who are employed to meet an emergency arising from the necessity of harvesting or processing crops.

In the course of the hearings conducted by the committee, there was a great deal of criticism of the present income means test, along the following lines:

1. Income limitations should be based on a "take-home" pay basis rather than on gross income;
2. The schedule of incomes now established by law is outdated in view of cost of living changes since it was established in July, 1947;
3. Requirements of war industry, particularly the return to a longer work-week, have resulted in increased earnings for some families using the centers making them ineligible under the means test;
4. No provisions are made for exceptions to meet hardship situations;

5. Wives of service personnel are ineligible to use the centers because incomes when added to allotments and base pay exceed the means test yet such mothers must work to support their families;
6. Increasing numbers of women have been called back into war employment since the Korean War started, but are ineligible to use the centers because of the means test.

Establishment by law of a fixed amount of income as a condition of eligibility is necessarily arbitrary and particularly so where no provision is made for exceptions or for adjustment of the income ceiling by the administrative agency. The virtue of setting such specific limits by law is in administrative expediency since it greatly simplifies the process of determining basic eligibility. However such limits are not flexible and while they may be established to meet the majority of situations do not take into account varying requirements of families of the same size, and can be altered to meet changing price conditions only by amendatory legislation.

The present fee schedule is set up on a family basis and recognizes the greater income requirements of the different sized families for only the larger ones. The family with one parent and one child is subject to the same income limitations as that of a parent and two children although the needs of the latter family are greater. The same is true of the three- and four-member families where there are two working parents. The Department of Education has ruled that the family with both parents, one of whom is not employed due to physical disability, is subject to the same income limitations as the one-parent family although the requirements of two-parent families are obviously greater.

Since the present schedule was established, living costs have risen sharply. The present schedule adjusted to cost of living changes for June, 1950, for San Francisco, and July, 1950, for Los Angeles is as follows:

	Adjusted to June-July, 1950, living costs
Schedule	Los Angeles	San Francisco
One-parent—$225	$243	$245
Two-parent—$275	$297	$299

The method of determining eligibility on the basis of income is relatively simple and there are a minimum of complications for the administrative agencies.

The purpose of a means test is to reserve the use of the child care centers to those families most in need of such services and unable to otherwise afford proper day care of children. However, the present means test does not necessarily meet that objective in actual application, and there are a number of defects.

1. The schedule is rigid and cannot be adjusted for changes in actual living costs except through legislative action. The present schedule is already out-moded and should be adjusted upward to provide the same measure of total family requirements as established in July, 1947.

2. The schedule does not distinguish between the varying requirements of different sized families in the smaller family groups. The U. S Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates the total requirements of a two-person family is 65 percent of that for a four-person family, and for a three-person family as about 84 percent of that for a four-person family.

Under the present means test the two- and three-member one-parent families are subject to the same income limitations and the three- and four-member two-parent families are under the same means test. For the one-parent families, the current schedule raises the means test limit $15 for the fourth member of the family but $60 for each person above four in the family. In the two-parent families the limit is raised $25 for the fifth member, and $60 for each additional person above five.

3. Eligibility for use of the centers is measured by current income only and there is no attempt to measure other resources that a family may have, such as bank deposits, savings bonds, value of property holdings, contributions of other relatives in the household, etc. Thus, it is a means test only in the limited sense of measuring income and not total wealth of the family.

4. Family requirements vary for many reasons. Families with the same composition do not necessarily have the same income requirements for support. There are variations in cost of living between areas in the State as well as for families in the same locality. But more important, some families have needs that are not common to many others. In those families in which there is illness or there have been major misfortunes, income needs may be substantially greater than for the average family of the same size to maintain an equal standard of living. Under the fixed income schedule there is no method for considering the special needs of such families.

Representatives of parent organizations testifying before the committee were particularly critical of the present income means test schedule. They recommended its adjustment to "take home pay" and cost of living changes. On the other hand, they pointed out to the committee that they would be opposed to a social work investigation to determine actual budgeted requirements of the family as part of the eligibility determination.

Administration of the Means Test

The Department of Education has provided guidance to the school districts in administration of the means test through bulletins. It is pointed out that "income" encompasses "income of any type or nature, whether earned by labor or otherwise." Gross pay, before deductions, is the governing factor in computing the total income.

For self-employed persons, income is determined on the basis of net profit "after deducting all expenses from total sales or gross income." Earnings of this group may be averaged over a period of a year.

The department has ruled that where there are two parents in the home, one of whom is physically or mentally unable to help support the family or care for the child, the limitation of $225 applicable to the one-parent family must be used.

Child Care Center Bulletin 22, of February 20, 1950, states as follows:

> "All applicants must be treated uniformly in ascertaining eligibility. Proper application of the five steps listed herein should clearly and plainly disclose the eligibility or ineligibility of applicants. An ineligible applicant should not be admitted, regardless of extenuating circumstances. To permit this would not only circumvent the law but might be the cause for nonadmittance of an eligible applicant."

A uniform application form is recommended by the State Department of Education. In addition to the identifying information concerning children, marital status, veteran status, etc., this application solicits the following information for both the father and mother:

Name and address of employer.
Type of position.
Average gross monthly income.
If separated or divorced, how much support is received from the father?
Any other income?

The application is signed by the parent who in doing so agrees to report any change in status.

The director of the child care program for San Francisco testified to the committee that in processing applications, statements concerning earnings are checked with prevailing wage rate data. If through this process, or as a result of the interview, questions arise as to the accuracy of the application contact is made with the employers to verify earnings. Applications are rechecked every six months and at the time of any reported changes in employment. For self-employed persons they are checked every three months.

A University of California study conducted through questionnaires sent directly to the parents using the centers, covered a random sample of 1,353 of the 11,548 families using the centers in October, 1949. Income data obtained through that study is based upon what the parents reported in completing the qustionnaires. The study questionnaire solicited the following information concerning earnings and income:

34–36 If father or stepfather is working, what were his earnings for the last four weeks or the past month?
37–39 If mother or stepmother is working, what were her earnings for the past four weeks or the past month?
40–42 What was the total family income from all sources the last four weeks or past month?

The following tables show for the one-parent and two-parent families the percentage of families reporting income within the means test limits for the various sized families. These data exclude the teachers, nurses, and veterans who are exempt from the income means test limits.

Distribution of One-parent, Nonexempt Families, According to Number Persons in Family and Average Maximum Income (Applicable Means Test Level Underlined)

	Number of persons supported
Income class	2 percent	3 percent	4 percent	5 percent	6 percent	7 percent

Total	100 0	100.0	100 0	100.0	100.0
Percent over average maximum monthly income	14.8	9.0	6.9	1.9	--

For all one- and two-parent families, subject to the means test, approximately 5.5 percent reported incomes in October, 1949, above the average monthly maximum income established by the means test. Since in application of the means test, income is based on average gross income, the above does not reflect a 5 percent error in administration of the means test. Earnings reported are for October, 1949, whereas average monthly income may be different because of periods of unemployment or seasonal variations in income.

E. Parent Fees

Parent fees based upon ability to pay as measured by gross income are provided for by law. A uniform schedule of fees has been established for application throughout the State providing for a sliding scale of fees related both to family income and the number of persons in families.

The fee schedule is apparently designed both as a rough measure of ability to pay and to establish rates related to the difference in services and costs between the nursery and extended day centers.

Fees start from a minimum of 60 cents per week for the lowest income families with six or more members and are graduated up to $14.50 per week for the two member highest income families utilizing the nursery level centers.

Ability to pay is measured through a schedule of fees progressively larger as income increases and progressively smaller as the number of persons in the family increases.

Recognition of services provided is through establishment of a lower fee schedule for the extended day care centers, the per child cost of which is about half of the nursery level centers, and through somewhat lower fees for those centers operating on a five-day basis instead of the normal six days per week.

The following fee schedule has been in effect since July, 1950, for the centers operating six days per week:

* * * EXCEPTIONS TO "MEANS TEST" A veteran attending school or receiving instruction under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, or under Article 2, Chapter 6, Division 4 of Military and Veterans Code, a registered nurse; a teacher in a public school, or to meet an emergency arising from the necessity of harvesting or processing crops. Families of five or more who do not exceed an average monthly income of $60 per member.

Under this schedule only the two-member families (one parent) having incomes over $525 a month are paying full cost of care. The extremely low income families ($100 or less) pay a minimum fee which in the case of the two-member family would amount to $6.88 per month for both nursery and extended day care levels.

Fees have been increased over the 1947 level in order to provide for greater parent participation in costs in view of limited state appropriations available.

The distribution of all families in accordance with fee paid per week for each child in the centers for October, 1949, as determined by the University of California study was as follows:

Distribution of Families According to Fee Paid per Week for Each Child in Centers

Fee per week	Nursery centers	Extended day care	All centers
Under $1.50	5.3	7.2	6.1
$1.50-$3.00	27.8	52.1	37.5
$3.00-$4.50	30.2	22.2	27.0
$4.50-$6.00	27.1	15.3	22.4
Over $6.00	9.6	3.2	7.0
Median	$3.90	$2.70	$3.30
	4.20	3.00	3.60

Converted to the monthly cost to the parents the above weekly fee units would be equal to:

$1.50 weekly equal to $6.45 monthly
3.00 weekly equal to 12.90 monthly
4.50 weekly equal to 19.35 monthly
6.00 weekly equal to 25.80 monthly

Only a small percentage of families pay full cost of care in either the nursery or extended day care programs. About 15 percent of those using the nursery centers pay over one-half the cost of care, and approximately 35 percent pay more than half cost in the extended day care centers, in which total cost of care is about half of the nursery level.

While the fee schedule is intended to measure ability to pay, based on family income and numbers in the family, the $50 income intervals established do not provide a close relationship between presumed family income requirements and fees paid. The family with income of $275 per month will pay the same fee as the same-sized family with income of $226, although the one has greater ability to pay.

Although families using the extended day care centers pay a greater share of total cost than for the nursery centers, the actual expenditure for this service is lower than for the family with the same income using the nursery center. The two-person family at the $225 level pays a weekly fee of $5 for nursery care but only $3 for the extended day care service.

It appears that fees can be graduated upward more sharply as income increases. Under the present schedule, families in the higher income ranges, while paying more in fees, do not pay in proportion to the difference between actual income and the figure used for the income means test limit.

If the fee schedule is intended to reflect ability to pay, consideration should be given to a better equalization of fees for extended day care centers with those for the nursery centers, up to full cost of care, as well as sharper upward graduation of fees as income increases so that the state subsidy to these "higher income" families can be decreased.

It is recognized, however, that fees charged do have a direct relationship with parent willingness to use the centers and must be kept at a reasonable level for the purposes of providing suitable care for children of working parents and encouraging families to be self-sufficient. For example, the "Technical Staff Report to the Joint Committee on Preschool and Primary Training," January 17, 1947 (page 55), describes the following effects of an increase in fees:

> "The result of increased fee rate increases has been a withdrawal of those who cannot afford to pay the rate. Various alternatives have been taken. Some have stopped work, others have gone on relief or applied for aid to dependent children, others have left the children to run the streets. Other families have left the younger children in the centers but have withdrawn the older children. Vacancies thus made have been taken by families on the waiting list who are more able to pay the higher rates."

It is the contention of some persons that if the fee schedule for the extended day care program were equalized with that for nursery care, many families would withdraw school-age children from the centers and let them roam the streets or provide makeshift arrangements which might lead to problems of juvenile delinquency since these children would be without proper supervision before and after school hours while parents are working.

In the course of its hearings, the committee received little comment and no criticism of the present fees charged. Although it appears that the fees charged the very low income families are high in relation to ability to pay, it seems that these families are willing to make the sacrifices necessary to secure child care center services. The very low income families must budget a larger proportion of their income for child care services than the higher income families.

A special budget study covering ninety (90) one-parent families in San Francisco, conducted by the child care center staff for that city, showed that the average monthly income for these families was $190.03 and that eleven (11%) percent was budgeted for child care center fees, at an average of $21.10 per month.

F. General Information

Federal Aid for Child Care Centers

With acceleration of the defense program since June, 1950, the possibility of the Federal Government again providing financial aid to states and localities for conduct of child care centers programs has been considered. Needs directly related to the expanding armed forces and increased production of military equipment have been demonstrated in recent months and have increased the pressures on the centers which were already operating at capacity enrollment before the start of the Korean war.

The committee forwarded a resolution to the representatives of the State of California in the national Congress to solicit their aid in securing federal legislation to reactivate the Lanham Act or otherwise provide for federal financial assistance in establishing and operating child care centers.

Copies of the following resolution were forwarded to each of the Senators and Representatives from California in the U. S. Congress on August 30, 1950:

"Resolution of the Assembly Interim Committee on Social Welfare, Relative to Federal Support for Child Care Centers

WHEREAS, The State of California established child care centers early in 1943 in conformity with the federal Lanham Act to help meet the emergencies created by the employment of women in industry as a direct result of the war; and although the Federal Government withdrew support from the child care centers on February 28, 1946, the State of California has found that the conditions created by the war have necessitated continuation of these child care centers, particularly in those areas in which war activity was concentrated and in which there was great influx of war workers and settlement of veterans following the war; and

WHEREAS, The State of California now supports some 293 centers providing day care for over 12,500 children, over 90 percent of whom reside in those areas in which wartime activity was concentrated and which will feel the greatest impact from current military and defense activities in the Pacific area, namely San Diego, Los Angeles, Alameda, San Francisco, and Contra Costa Counties; and

WHEREAS, Existing child care centers are utilized by veterans of World War II now attending school, families of personnel in the armed services, families of disabled veterans whose requirements make it necessary to supplement allowances and pensions by the employment of mothers, other working mothers who are the sole support of their families, and two-parent families whose support requires the employment of both parents due in large measure to the high cost of living and inability of low-income families to afford the cost of private child care facilities; and

WHEREAS, Because of inability of the State to provide sufficient funds to accommodate all children in need of low-cost day care facilities, there has continued for some time a waiting list of families eligible on a means-test basis to use the centers which are now taxed to capacity, and recent international developments have increased the need for such day care facilities to provide services and care for children of service personnel, including those being inducted or recalled into service, and of mothers called back to work by aircraft factories and other defense or war plants; and

WHEREAS, Employment of women in war industries, because of relatively high wage rates and long working hours, will cause disqualification of such families under the means test governing eligibility for use of child care centers thus creating problems in the recruitment of workers for such industries and the provision of adequate care for children of working mothers; and

WHEREAS, Current and prospective needs for tax-supported day care center facilities are a direct result of past and present military and defense activities centering in certain areas of the State of California and have been influenced by the large population growth attributable to immigration of war workers and the settlement of veterans of World War II in these areas; and

WHEREAS, Rapidly increased expenditures for necessary state services as a result of wartime and postwar problems threatened to cause deficits in state financing which prevents the expansion of the child care center program to meet existing and potentially increasing needs and may endanger the continuation of the child care centers already operated unless federal financial assistance is secured; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly Interim Committee on Social Welfare, That each member of the House of Representatives and of the Senate of the United States elected from the State of California be requested to introduce legislation and take such other action as is necessary to secure federal financial participation in the child care program similar to that provided under the Lanham Act during the past war; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to each Representative and Senator from California in the Congress of the United States."

The possibility of the revival of the federal aid program should be kept in mind, and any legislation affecting this program should be so designed that federal aid can be utilized should it become available if the war situation becomes more acute and manpower shortages such as experienced in World War II become a problem.

Other Public Child Care Programs

Public child care programs have been continued in many communities throughout the Country since withdrawal of federal funds in February, 1946. California has carried on the most extensive program. However, the States of Washington and Massachusetts provide financial support of centers, and a public program is operative in the District of Columbia. The following is summarized from a report on "Status of Day Care Programs for Children" by the U. S. Children's Bureau, dated October 31, 1950:

Washington

A $250,000 biennial appropriation was made for support of nursery centers in 1949. The State contributes 75 cents a day per child. It is reported that the all day care nursery centers cost approximately $2 per day per child to operate. Parent fees are from $1.25 to $1.50 per child per day. State funds are allocated through the State Department of Public Instruction to the local school districts for operation of the centers.

Massachusetts

Under the Extended School Services Act, 1946, local school committees are authorized to operate child care centers for children from 3 to 14 years of age. The State Department of Education has over-all responsibility, but administration is by the local school departments.

Centers are limited to children of mothers who are employed and whose employment is determined by the school committees to be essential to the welfare of their families. Initial funds for the centers are appropriated by the local authorities with the State reimbursing up to 40 percent of the cost of salaries of personnel, with a maximum reimbursement per center of $2,500 a year, and an over-all limit of $15,000 for any one town or city.

Mothers pay a weekly fee of $3 to $4 per week, this being established by law as the minimum and maximum limits.

District of Columbia

Children from 2 to 11 years of age are served in six centers established under congressional appropriation to the district board of public welfare.

The parent must be employed. Gross income limits established are:

2 member family	$3,200 gross per annum
3 member family	$3,500 gross per annum
4 member family, or larger	$3,800 gross per annum, which is the absolute maximum

A priority list is established by the public welfare board, providing for serving lower income families first and giving single income families preference over double income families. Children between 3 and 10 years are given preference over two-year-old children or children over 10 years of age.

Average cost per child per week was reported as $10 for the Fiscal Year 1948-49. Parent fees ranged from a low of $2 to a high of $7 for one child in nursery school, and $2 to $6.50 for one child of school age. For the second and third children using the centers, from $1 to $1.50 per week was added to the fees. Fees are in accordance with ability to pay determined by income and the number of dependents.

New York State

In 1949 state funds were appropriated to the State Youth Commission for maintenance of day care centers in migrant labor camps. These camps were operated by the State Federation of Growers' and Processors Association under contract with the Youth Commission. This program served babies under two years of age; preschool children two to five years of age; and school age children from 6 to 14. The program operated from the end of June through October. Permits for operation of each project are issued by the Department of Social Welfare.

New York City

The City Department of Welfare allocates public funds to nonprofit agencies for operation of centers. In 1949 these centers cared for over 3,250 children from three to five years of age, and 1,300 children in the 6 to 12 year group. There were over 2,000 children on the waiting list for admission.

Purpose of the program is to provide day care for children who, because of the employment of their mothers, or because of some special situation in their families, cannot have adequate care during the day in their own homes. The individual child's need for day care as well as the parents' inability to pay for the total cost of this care determines eligibility to receive such care.

A financial investigation is conducted and desirability of use of the centers for the individual child evaluated. A minimum fee of $1 for children not having lunch in the centers and $1.50 for those served lunch is charged. Fees range from $1.50 to $15.50 per week for the preschool children.

In determining the fee, the difference between a family's income and its budgeted expense is determined. Any surplus of income over expenses is considered in determining the fee. The fee is 50 percent of the margin up to margins of $15 and 75 percent of the amount above the $15 margin. At the point where the family could afford to pay the maximum fee, the family becomes ineligible.

Sixty-nine percent of the families pay the minimum fee. Total public contribution is 84 percent of the cost and parent fees and private agency contributions account for the remaining 16 percent.

More than 50 percent of the children using the centers are of families in which the mother is the major or sole support of the family.

Detroit

The city council appropriated $120,000 for operation of six centers from July 1, 1949, to June 30, 1950. The program is operated through the Department of Public Welfare.

Priorities for admission of children are as follows: (1) one-parent homes where parent is sole or main support; (2) homes where chronic illness interferes with the child's normal activities; (3) families where both parents are working and can be considered "hardship" cases.

The weekly per capita costs reported for the quarter ending June 30, 1949, were: nursery school, $22; kindergarten age group, $19; school-age group, $16.

Parent fees range from $5 per week to full cost.

Philadelphia

This program, financed by the city, is under supervision of the Board of Public Education. During 1948, 12 centers were operated caring for 1,650 children. Eligibility is based on the employment of the mother, but hardship cases in which illness or other home conditions warrant enrollment of the child are recognized.

Fees are based on income and size of family, ranging from $2 to $9 per week for one child.

III. PUBLIC HEARINGS AND COMMITTEE STUDY

The committee received testimony concerning the child care center program during several public hearings and through correspondence with certain interested groups. It also reviewed recent studies of the program as well as considered recommendations made by individuals and groups independent of the hearings conducted by the committee.

Public hearings on child care centers were held in San Diego, August 9th; San Francisco, September 7th; and Los Angeles, October 17th. Advance publicity of these hearings was carried in the local press and public participation encouraged. The committee also notified organizations and groups felt to be interested in testifying and having knowledge of the program of the arrangements for the public hearings.

Without exception those testifying before the committee emphasized continued need for a child care center program, although there was some difference of opinion as to how that need should be met.

In general, most of those appearing before the committee:

1. Recommended that the centers be established on a permanent basis;

2. Recommended adjustment in the eligibility requirements, either in modifying the present means test or broadening coverage of the program to include certain types of families now ineligible because of the means test;

3. Favored administration of the program through the school districts, under supervision of the Department of Education, as at present; and

4. Suggested continued state financial participation in the operation of the centers.

The exception to the general attitude of the groups participating was the position of the representatives of the Catholic Church. While emphasizing that need for the program continues, they urged administration by local authorities with licensing of centers by the Department of Social Welfare, and financing on a local basis insofar as possible. They expressed agreement with the continued need for centers but recommended that the program be conducted on a local basis without supervision through the Department of Education and presumably a minimum of state financial participation.

Considerable testimony, most of it in the form of prepared statements, was taken by the committee and carefully analyzed and evaluated as a basis for portions of this report. Summaries of testimony given are attached.

In addition, the committee solicited the views of community organizations such as local welfare councils and certain state-wide groups that have in the past evidenced particular interest in child welfare programs.

Since the committee was unable to schedule hearings in rural areas, it has been particularly interested in testimony presented to the San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Labor Resources Committee and reflected in the minutes of the public hearings held by that committee. Among the organizations represented in those hearings, the following testified as to the need for child care centers in the San Joaquin Valley:

Fresno County Schools ..... (June 20, 1950)
California Farm Research and Legislative Committee ..... (June 21, 1950)
Fresno County Farm Bureau ..... (June 21, 1950)
Kern County Department of Public Health ..... (Report dated July 26, 1950)
Kern County Schools ..... (August 1, 1950)
Tulare County Board of Supervisors ..... (Report August 2, 1950)
Tulare County Welfare
Department ..... (Report August 2, 1950)
Tulare County Superintendent of Schools ..... (Report August 2, 1950)

Recommendations concerning child care centers were made in five of the sections of the Governor's Conference on Child and Youth, held in Sacramento, September 18 and 19, 1950. Approximately 2,500 persons interested in the problems of children and youth from all sections of the State, participated in this conference.

The section on "Care of Children Away From Home" recommended expansion of the child care center program on a permanent basis and that eligibility be determined on the basis of individual need of the child and the family rather than upon family income. It felt that primary responsibility for financial support of the program rests with the State, and that administration should remain with the Department of Education, with social and health services readily available.

The section on "Problems of Children of Migrant Families" recommended establishment of centers in rural areas, accessible to parents' place of work or residence.

SUMMARY REPORT OF PUBLIC HEARINGS

San Diego, August 9, 1950

Mrs. Florence E. Rhodes—American Red Cross

Need for centers continues. If children deprived of centers, many would immediately become eligible for aid to needy children. Should remain under administration of Department of Education. Department of Social Welfare would have to set up administrative staff and make provisions for buildings and equipment. Board of Education better equipped to evaluate abilities of professional staff and understand needs of small child.

Eligibility standards have not changed since 1947. Advisable to restudy standards in relation to changes in living costs and incomes.

Opposed to county and Board of Education participation in financing on basis of their ability to do so. Favors 60 percent state—40 percent family support.

Stressed need of service personnel. Many servicemen do not earn sufficient to support family. Reservists called to active duty may have legitimate obligations (such as on homes, appliances, cars) necessitating wives to work to protect equity.

Emphasized possibility of manpower mobilization as further reason for continuing centers beyond February 15, 1951.

Mr John M. Cranston, representing Family and Welfare Division, Community Welfare Council of San Diego

Mr. Cranston appeared as a representative of a special committee that had investigated the need for child care centers in San Diego and explained that its recommendations were approved by the welfare council.

In early 1950 the committee recommended that the centers be continued in their present form, including the method of appropriation from state funds rather than local levy.

The committee favored administration by the Department of Education. Centers should be limited in use to needy families, but eligibility should be based upon net take-home pay rather than gross earnings as at present. Some allowance should be made for increased cost of living since 1936.

In response to questioning, Mr. Cranston felt that it would be difficult to establish criteria for determining hardship cases. He stated that the recommendation for continuing administration in the Department of Education was based upon their experience and available facilities and their being better equipped to meet educational needs of children. He felt that half of the families would be eligible for aid to needy children assistance if the centers were discontinued and parents forced to quit work. He stated that as far as he knew no plans were being formulated for local community action in the event that the present program is not extended beyond February 15, 1951, by the Legislature.

Mrs. Edith Warren Quinn, Commissioner, Fifth Area Member, Child Welfare Commission, Department of California, American Legion

Stated that the American Legion has for some time favored continuation of child care centers. Read Resolution 120 of the 1949 Department Convention commending the Governor and the Legislature for action in continuing child care centers.

There are "thousands" of veterans widows with small children who receive pensions insufficient for family needs and families with disabled veterans in which mothers must work and are unable to afford private day nursery care.

Stressed economy of operating centers rather than provide assistance to families and aspect of prevention of juvenile delinquency by providing after-school supervision of children of working parents.

In response to a suggestion by a committee member that federal financial assistance be sought, such as through the Lanham Act, stated that she would place a resolution before the American Legion Convention meeting in Sacramento beginning August 13th.

Mrs. Nancy E. Wessell, an individual

Mrs. Wessell stated that her testimony was based upon a study in which she participated for the PTA but that she was representing only herself and not the PTA.

She estimated that half of the families using the centers would be on relief if the centers were not available, and emphasized the value of helping persons to help themselves. She felt that the centers represented a considerable savings to the State over relief expenditures that would be incurred if the centers were not available, but stated that even if there were no savings she would advocate continuation of the centers.

Recommended that the program be made permanent for ease in administration and greater economy. Felt that the need will always continue.

Suggested elimination of special veteran provision feeling that most could qualify under the needs test anyhow. Stated no further need for exemption of teachers from means test and suggested question of nurses exemption be investigated. Emphasized that it is a welfare program, not an educational one and cautioned against enlarging program on an educational basis, avoiding removing children from their homes except through economic necessity.

Questioned present method of determining eligibility and felt that welfare departments would be better equipped to screen applicants on referral from the schools.

Prefers present financial arrangement due to present burden on counties, and their reliance upon property taxes, but suggested a possible one-third state, one-third county welfare, and one-third parent fee arrangement. Advocated making provision for hardship cases, citing a situation in which a family burdened with medical and hospital debts was denied use of centers on the basis of their current income status.

Suggested a permanent and flexible means test, keyed to the cost of living index, with the welfare departments determining hardship cases.

Recommended more uniform costs of operations, referring to different teacher-pupil ratios in counties and variation in teachers salaries. Suggested a state uniform minimum for number of teachers to children and for salaries, with counties permitted to make up difference between minimum and what the county wished to establish.

Suggested that appropriation be based upon average daily attendance for the previous year, or upon the registration.

In response to a question from the committee as to advisability of seeking federal aid for the centers, Mrs Wessell stated she would be opposed to asking for federal assistance.

Mrs. Worrell, League of Women Voters

Mrs. Worrell outlined the policy of the League of Women Voters that it is a public responsibility to make child care centers available and that these should be integrated with the Public School System. The league favors administration by the school districts under the supervision of the State Department of Education. Financing suggested was on a basis of parent fees and sharing of costs by the State, county, and school districts.

Mrs. Worrell stated that the league favors the continuation of the centers and that they have always supported the program.

Mrs. Paula D Hamm, First Vice Chairman, California Parents Association for Child Care

Mrs. Hamm explained that she is the delegate for San Diego for the association.

She emphasized the desirability of an investment in helping families be independent rather than dependent upon welfare assistance and stated that there will always be a need for helping low income families. She stressed the social values of helping families as an economic unit and of the care provided children in the centers.

Maintained that the program meets a specific and serious need in an acceptable manner and that the need was not a war emergency need but one that has existed for some time.

Favored the program under the State Department of Education on the basis that it was primarily educational rather than custodial; that it is more economically administered than under a welfare department because of available plant facilities and staffing in the educational department.

Believes it would be impossible for local agencies to handle the program. Cannot be subsidized through the community chest because of present load of chest agencies and would be a burden on local taxpayers if county financed.

Recommended be continued on a permanent basis and supported by state appropriation and parent fees, and continued under the Department of Education.

Recommended that change in cost of living be considered and adjustment made in income brackets accordingly.

Referred to problems of mothers whose husbands are in armed services and allotment insufficient for family support; to women being recalled by aircraft plants whose earnings will exceed wage limitations established for eligibility for use of centers; and to women who must return to work because of high living costs and who have need of centers even though family earnings may exceed the established limits.

Recommended income scale be set up to $300 maximum for single parent families and $400 maximum for two-parent families. Suggested that if the upper limits are raised fees from parents will increase since parent percentage of support increases with income under the fee schedule.

During questioning Mrs. Hamm stated that fees of private centers run from $20 to $25 per week and that these centers are usually open only from 8 to 4 or 9 to 5.

She stated there are many hardship cases in which persons support relatives or are burdened by cost of illness but cannot utilize centers because of the rigid income schedule.

Opposed removing teachers exemption.

Mr. Frank M. Wright, Associate Superintendent of Public Instruction, and Mr. John R. Weber, Supervisor of Child Care Centers, Department of Education

Mr. Wright submitted a prepared statement including a detailed fact sheet. He testified that the department believes a definite need continues for child care services and that the interests of parents and children are better served when the parent assumes a fair share of the cost of care rather than to place the family on relief. He emphasized that the schools are best able to operate the centers through use of buildings, facilities, administrative personnel and other services available.

If the program should continue, it should receive sufficient financial support to enable the operating units to carry out the law. School districts have been compelled to reduce operating costs largely at the expense of personnel who have had to forego regular salary increments available to other school employees.

In discussion with the committee, Mr. Wright stated that there continues to be a shortage of teachers but had no comment on whether or not the existing exemption for teachers and nurses should be continued.

He favored a rigid means test without discretion or flexibility. He stated that the program should be expanded to cover the existing waiting list.

Mr. LeRoy E. Goodbody, an individual

Mr. Goodbody recommended that the program be on a local level rather than on a state-wide basis and that legislation be permissive rather than mandatory. He felt that the program had no place in the school department and that it was primarily a custodial program.

Reverend Father Byrnes representing Catholic hierarchy and welfare directors of California, Catholic Church

Opposed centers as permanent part of school system. Should be administered through Department of Social Welfare on a basis of licensing. Local needs should determine the program.

Stated centers were based on a wartime need not now existing and referred to unemployment problem.

Opposed to any program making it possible to place all children in state operated nurseries, regardless of need.

Felt that need is only in about six counties and is thus so localized that there is a real question whether it should be state supported.

Eligibility requirements should recognize principle that it is in the best interests of children that the mother have the opportunity to care for them at home whenever possible.

Stated there is evidence that some promoters of day care centers aim at development into compulsory public nursery schools.

Maintained that a public school system should attempt no more than it can efficiently staff, administer and finance. Stated that a state program requires as much money as a local one and derives revenue from the same source—taxes.

Concluded testimony as follows: "The public day care program should be operated in communities where a need is demonstrated. It should have the same state control by the Department of Social Welfare as private day care centers. The local administration should be independent of the Public School System."

San Francisco, September 7, 1950

Dr. Herbert Clish, Superintendent, Board of Education, San Francisco

The Board of Education has not taken formal action concerning the future status of the program, but its members feel there continues a need but that the cost of the centers is too great for the school district to finance. The district is not interested in financing the centers, but is willing to continue to operate them with state financing.

Dr. Clish suggested the following changes in the program:

1. Priority for children whose fathers have entered the armed forces without regard to income limitations;
2. Continue exemptions for veterans attending school until they complete their education even though time involved in the program under the G.I. Bill of Rights may expire before then.

In answer to a question from Mr. Levering, Dr. Clish stated that the school district has made no plans contemplating termination of state financing of the centers on February 15, 1951.

Doctor Clish submitted for the record a copy of a memorandum dated August 10, 1950, to Mrs. Therese Mahler, director, child care centers, concerning eligibility of children of fathers called into military service.

Mr. Donald Cleary, Legislative Representative, City and County of San Francisco

Mr. Cleary stated that the board of supervisors has always supported the centers and is preparing a resolution to that effect. He suggested that consideration be given in determining the maximum income for eligibility purposes to the 15 percent increase in cost of living.

In answer to a question from Mr. Levering, Mr. Cleary stated that the county considers financing of the centers to be a state concern. He said the board of supervisors has made no provision for financing them.

Mr. Lawrence Arnstein, Executive Director, San Francisco Social Hygiene Association

Mr. Arnstein read a prepared statement recommending continuation of the present program under the State Department of Education, with modifications to meet the present national emergency. The following points were brought out:

Thirteen thousand children from 11,640 families are served under the program;

A waiting list of from 2,500 to 3,500 proves the need for continuation of centers and even expansion to meet the need;

The program is essential in preventing delinquency in children and maintaining self-respect of families not wishing to go on relief rolls;

Provision for families of only one-half the total number under the relief program would cost $7,750,000 a year against present costs of about $5,000,000;

Mothers whose husbands are called into military service must take employment to supplement limited allowances for dependents;

Employment trends show an increasing demand for women in defense work;

Family purchasing power is shrinking under cost of living increases making it necessary for mothers in many two-parent families to work, and some modification in the income ceiling is necessary;

Studies show that earnings of families using the centers represent a $28,000,000 annual contribution to the economy;

The centers help to strengthen and preserve family life.

Mr. Alec Sheriff, Legal Aid Society

Mr. Sheriff maintained that day care of children is a state-wide problem and that it should be considered on that basis rather than burdening local communities with the cost of the program. He felt that unless the State continues the program the centers will not be carried on.

Rev. James M. Murray, Catholic Church

Father Murray read a statement prepared by Rt. Rev. Msgr. Flanagan, Catholic Social Service, and Rev. James Brown, Superintendent of Schools, Archdiocese of San Francisco on "The Social Value of Child Care Centers," proposing the following:

a. That in each instance there be a real and demonstrated need;
b. That a reasonable means test be required for admission;
c. That centers be administered by local authority;
d. That centers be financed by local authority insofar as possible;
e. That the program be under social welfare auspices as it is basically a social program to meet a social need.

Mrs. Rose Lee Clements, Chairman, Child Care Parents Association

Identifying herself as a working mother, due to illness of her husband, Mrs. Clements emphasized continued need for the centers. To support her contention of need, she brought out the following points:

1. There is a waiting list;
2. The well administered services of the center are a suitable solution to the problems of working mothers concerning care and supervision of children;
3. Cost-of-living wage raises have operated to exclude two-parent families who formerly used the centers and continue to need them:
4. More and more mothers in two-parent families are being forced to work because of high living costs. The definition of eligibility based on figures of almost five years ago is not realistic today. Wages that have risen with living costs exclude many families now;
5. Children of working parents need the type of care and supervision provided by the centers;
6. The Crime Study Commission on Juvenile Justice recommended in 1949, that the child care centers be continued because of economic necessity of mothers working;
7. The State should encourage people to be independent and the centers make it possible for families to avoid becoming dependent.

She stated that the "means test" is no longer realistic. Earnings of wives of men in the armed forces when added to allotments excludes them from the program and mothers working in defense industries on a longer work week may no longer be eligible. She estimated that in San Francisco 100 working mothers had been excluded or refused admittance to the program because allotments as servicemen's wives brought income above the defined level. She asked for a new definition of eligibility, especially to meet needs of servicemen's families and families involved in defense work.

Mrs. Fern Baptie, Chairman, Child Care Parents Association of San Francisco

Mrs. Baptie favored continuation of the program under administration of the Department of Education believing there would be better assurance of good standards of care than under local programs.

Mr. Charles Scully, California State Federation of Labor

Speaking on both child care centers and general social welfare matters, Mr. Scully presented a prepared statement pointing out that the federation has consistently supported state aid for child care centers. He suggested that action be taken at the special session of September, 1950, to extend the program to June 30, 1951, to allow the 1951 Regular Session more time to consider legislation for the centers.

Mrs. C. A. Chichester, Family Division, Community Welfare Council, Oakland

Stated that the community welfare council has supported and will continue to support the program on its present basis.

Mrs. Elizabeth Case, Legislative Committee, Nursery School Association of Northern California

Presented a statement covering a survey of changed conditions in child care centers made in September, 1950. Pointed out that most centers have as many children enrolled as budgets permit and that since the apppropriation was made the Korean situation has increased the need. Gave data on conditions in Pittsburg, Alameda, Oakland, Martinez, Redwood City, San Francisco, and Richmond showing a large number of applications being currently rejected because centers are operating at capacity.

Recommendations:

1. Extension of program to June 30, 1951, with further consideration in January for a two-year program at a minimum;
2. Change means test to meet existing conditions (increased costs of living and six-day work week);
3. Exempt from means test families of those in military service or war industries;
4. Substantially increase state allotment to enable increased enrollment involved in above recommendations.

She expressed the opinion that justification continues for exemption of nurses and of teachers in the outlying areas.

Mrs. Theresa S. Mahler, Director, Child Care Program, San Francisco

Presented factual data in a prepared statement covering capacity and enrollment, characteristics of families, and requests for services for the past two months in San Francisco. Pointed out that in the two months requests were rejected for 340 families with income over the ceilings and 46 in which the fathers were called into military service.

Also presented a statement of availability of alternative child care services in San Francisco. Five community chest day nurseries report capacity or over-capacity enrollment with the two largest having waiting lists of 200 and 300. Costs range from $55 to $70 per month.

Mrs. Mahler explained that statements of applicants are checked with prevailing wage rate data and where questions arise as to the accuracy of the application, contact is made with employers. Applications are rechecked every six months and at the time of reported changes in employment. They are checked every three months for self-employed persons.

She stated that adequate housing facilities for centers is one of the major problems in San Francisco.

Mrs Rhoda Kellog, Golden Gate Kindergarten Association

Filed a detailed statement covering distinctions between nursery schools and custodial care centers, including recommendations for programming, etc. Recommended a high educational level of operation of centers but that until more children can be accommodated on an educational basis that attendance be limited to certain catagories. Children whose mothers are sole support should be admitted without social investigation. Children of two-parent families should be admitted only upon certification of a social agency or of a review committee of the schools.

Recommended greater number of centers to better meet needs of parents. Stated that centers operated for less than 60 children are "wastefully costly" to run. Suggests broadening use to "educational children" determined on a basis of social need.

Stated that is a permanent problem in an industrial urban society. Recommended that greater stress be given to education in the centers and that local districts assume more responsibility. Suggested legislation permitting the districts and counties to spend money for child care in addition to use of state funds.

Mrs. Frances Shaskan, San Francisco Council of Women Shoppers

Discussed budgets for working mothers with dependent children. Felt that the present means test is inadequate for the single parent or the two-parent families.

Miss Woodward, Family and Childrens Division, San Francisco Council of Social Agencies

Made a brief statement to substantiate the statements of other witnesses concerning the need of working mothers for the child care center program.

California Conference of Social Welfare

Submitted by mail a copy of Resolution IX, adopted 1950, reaffirming support "of a permanent child care center program."

Los Angeles, October 17, 1950

Mrs. Betty L. Bachman, Legislative Chairman, California Parents' Association for Child Care

Four basic recommendations were presented:

1. Centers be established on a permanent basis;
2. Eligibility for use of centers be liberalized;
3. Administrative supervision by the State Department of Education be continued;
4. The State Government should carry primary financial responsibility.

In elaboration of these recommendations, the following points were made:

1. Women permanently in the class of single-parent family head are able to maintain family unity and their status as self-reliant persons. They contribute substantially to the economy of the State. There is expanding employment of women with more women working now than during the last war and with more and more women being drawn into the labor market. Since women must work, there must be available adequate care and supervision of children and the child care centers are the best means found so far.

Uncertainty of legislative authorization has delayed the establishment of adequate standards for training and performance of teachers.

Adequate planning of program cannot be made where continuance of the program is uncertain.

The need is permanent and demand for services is expanding. The program cannot meet the demand.

2. The cost of living has risen since establishment of the present "means test." The number of rejected parent applications is increasing, primarily on the basis of income under the "means test." Wives of men in active military service are being denied use of the centers although their need is urgent, because of the means test. The same situation applies to mothers working in national-defense industries.

A more flexible eligibility rule should be established to provide for "hardship" situations. Suggested formation of local official committees to review hardship cases and administrators given authority to waive certain eligibility requirements on recommendation of committees.

3. A change of administrative supervision to a department other than education would result in additional costs. To reproduce present housing would cost a minimum of nearly $10,000,000. Additional administrative and supervisory personnel would be required.

Young children should be supervised by skilled teachers.

There is a "public nonsympathetic appraisal" of a social welfare client that should not be applied to children in this program. Every effort should be made to encourage independence of the families. Supervision by a department other than Education would encourage dependency of the families involved. It is normal for the development of children to be supervised by the Department of Education.

4. Education and care of children of the State is a concern of the State Government and not merely a local concern. The program should be integrated at the state level with the existing educational system so that a realistic support formula can be derived. The base for local taxes is rigid and limitation of taxation in most school districts has already been reached. For school districts could raise the funds to continue the program.

In a supplemental statement the association presented the following factual material in relation to recent developments in the program:

During September in Los Angeles more than 400 servicemen's children were turned away because of the means test. This is equivalent to 10 percent of the average enrollment.

Seven hundred eighty-nine other applications were denied in September because family income was above the "means test" limits. Of these 123 families were in defense industries and 666 in other industrial work.

Although large numbers are being turned away, present enrollment in Los Angeles averaging 4,066 is 518 less than the preceding year average. This is because appropriations have been inadequate although these 518 children could be cared for in existing space if administrative appropriations permitted. (In response to questioning by the committee, Miss Bachman suggested that the upper income level for the "means test" be raised to $325 for a two-parent family.)

Mrs. Rosalie Blau, Public Relations-Legislation Chairman, Association for Nursery Education; Southern California

Submitted a prepared statement with recommendations that:

1. Child care centers be continued under state support;
2. Department of Education continue to supervise the program;
3. The means test be reviewed for possibility of raising the income level;
4. Evaluation of the success of the program and its needs and values to the community be made so that a permanent program can be established.

Emphasized contribution of centers to strengthening and supplementing the home. Stated that some 100,000 children and their families have used this program. Felt that the broader base of revenues resources at the state level makes continued state support more desirable than local, and that under state support the program could continue without interruption.

Stated that 933 children were rejected in Los Angeles City September because of the restrictive income limits.

Pointed out that many teachers in the field of early childhood education and parent education have gone into elementary school because of the insecurity of the child care center program.

In response to questioning, Mrs. Blau stated that the majority of private centers are filled and have long waiting lists. She stated costs in private centers vary according to the personnel practices and programs offered but would run from about $60 to $75 per month for a five-day week, and less hours per day than the public centers. She stated that the private centers generally discourage enrollment of two-year-olds.

Bellflower Public Schools, Board of Trustees

The board was not represented at the hearing, but submitted to the committee under date of October 3, 1950, the following statement concerning financing of the centers:

> "Mr. Krause moved that since in the Bellflower School District the taxable wealth per child is much lower than the state average, since the Bellflower School District is already exceeding the normal maximum tax rate for school operation by 35 cents for each $100 of taxable valuation, and since all expected income for the district is earmarked for essential expenditures in the regular educational program, therefore, the Board of Trustees of the Bellflower School District expresses its present intention to terminate child care center activities on February 15, 1951, in the event state financing is not available. The motion was seconded by Mr. Reeves, and it was passed unanimously."

Ruth P. Koshuk, Director, Child Care Centers, Bellflower Public Schools

Mrs. Koshuk presented a prepared statement concerning the effect of the center program on the development of the children, stating that economic need alone would not justify continuance of the program if it were established that the children's development was being hampered or family relationships weakened. She submitted a number of condensed case histories of children using the Bellflower centers to demonstrate the value of the program in child and family development and relationships.

Rosalind G. Bates, Legislative Chairman, California Business Womens Council

Mrs. Bates informed the committee that a study of the effects of the program on the children is being conducted in three Los Angeles schools, was not yet complete, and would be reported to the committee when completed. She emphasized the value of the centers in the prevention of juvenile delinquency and in preserving the home.

She stated that the extended day care center program was equally as important as the nursery centers.

In her statement she suggested broadening of the public school program to accommodate children from two years of age and up for all families that might wish to utilize such an educational program.

Mrs. Charles D. Wood, Chairman, Child Care Centers Committee, Welfare Council of Metropolitan Los Angeles

Mrs. Wood read a prepared statement concerning support of the council of the child care centers program and its value in maintaining family unity and contributing to normal development of young children. Continued need of the program was emphasized and it was pointed out that nine communities, six of them semirural, have requested establishment of centers in the past year. Preliminary inquiry indicated that local school districts in the areas of greatest need recognize the demand but are not able to meet it with a locally financed program.

The volume of requests for day care for children has increased from an average of 154 per month in 1947 to 212 per month in 1950. Waiting lists, lack of centers geographically convenient to some areas, and eligibility requirements which do not account for living costs increases make it impossible to meet the demand.

As an example of the limitations of the present eligibility requirements, a case of a veteran with two children was cited. The wife has tuberculosis requiring hospitalization. Heavy medical expense has allowed less money for care of the children than the average family eligible for child care services would have but the children are ineligible because gross income is over the allowed amount.

Earnings of parents using centers in the state were estimated at 28 million dollars annually.

Recommended that case work services be accessible to children and families using the centers; that primary responsibility for financial support rest with the State; and that administration remain with the Department of Education, with social and health services available.

In its statement, the council pointed out that: "Traditionally the State has accepted responsibility for children with special needs. With the direct effect of California's mobility of population upon every area it should be recognized that it is equally bad for a child to be uncared for in any county and that the problem cannot be viewed as one which is regional or strictly urban in scope."

A. J. Stoddard, Superintendent, Los Angeles City Schools

An official statement of the Los Angeles City Board of Education on the child care center program was presented. This statement, dated October 9, 1950, states that: "It is the unanimous opinion * * * that the operation of child care centers should continue to be financed by other means than a local tax on property." * * * and "We therefore believe that your honorable committee should recommend to the 1951 Regular Session of the California Legislature that the continuance of child care centers be contingent upon state support and without a local tax on property. This would involve repealing that portion of Section 19613.6 of the Education Code which permits a school district to levy a tax beyond the present legal maximnum rates to support child care centers."

In discussion with committee members, Mr. Stoddard made a personal suggestion concerning financing of the program emphasizing that he was not speaking for the Board of Education but as an individual, as follows:

1. Approximately a third of the cost could be borne by the parents using the centers;
2. Local school districts could pay the same amount of education of the child in the centers as for the elementary child, receiving ADA reimbursement from the State as it does for other children;
3. That the remainder of the costs be borne by the State.

In elaboration of this method he pointed out that there are three general areas of expense involved. The "feeding services" could be covered by parent fees and should not be a burden on local taxation. Custody services are primarily a State responsibility and should be covered by State funds The educational services are a legitimate responsibility of the local school districts and these costs would be covered under the ADA system proposed.

Mr. Stoddard felt that this formula, bringing in the three parties to the program, would have advantages in maintaining local interest in the program including local pressures to improve and strengthen the program.

In answer to a question as to what would be done if the Legislature fails to appropriate funds for the program, Mr. Stoddard said that no provision has been made in the present budgets and could not be done until the budgets for the period beginning next July 1st. He said the Board of Education would be opposed even if it could raise the tax levy. He also expressed the feeling that if the program were financed entirely on a local basis local pressures would be exerted to expand the program to a point beyond which might be desirable. He stated that he was not in favor of local financing.

Mrs. A. B. Tibby, Superintendent, Compton City Schools

Mrs. Tibby presented a prepared statement in which it was stated that if state support of the program is terminated "the child care centers in this district will have to close. Because of its financial status, the district is unable to maintain and operate them as its own expense."

She presented the following as evidence of need for the centers:

Total families using the service	302
Of the 202 families with two parents, one is:
Disabled	32
In military service	16
G. I. student	41
Teacher	22
Nurse	7

She stated that the present means test is proving a hardship for servicemen since the family income usually exceeds the maximum allowable. Mrs. Tibbey presented a supplementary statement concerning fee schedules and ability of parents to pay them. It was stated that most parents recognize the quality of the service and are willing to make sacrifices in order to pay the fee charged. They adjust the family budget to meet the fee even though in many instances this may be a real hardship. "When a family finds that they are unable to continue paying the fee, they withdraw from the service and no formal protest is made."

"Analysis of present fee schedules discloses that the percent of monthly wage required to pay each nursery school fee is between 8 percent and 10 percent of the gross income for families who are not exempt from the means test. Those who are exempt pay a relatively higher percent. This amount, especially if there is more than one child, is frequently deemed to be excessive."

It was stated that the use of gross income for basing the fee rate is unrealistic in relation to the amount available for family living expenses since "in many instances" take home pay is less than 80 percent of gross. "Basing the weekly fee on the current gross and not on the annual gross average does not recognize the hardship encountered because of seasonal occupation, slack working periods, unemployment, or illness. Living expenses continue and debts are incurred which must be met whether or not employed."

Dr. M. Evan Morgan, Santa Monica City Schools

Presented the prepared statement of the Santa Monica City Board of Education, dated September 26, 1950, stating that child care centers "are not and should not be a part of the educational system" but a "welfare function." For convenience of administration the centers "probably should be identified with and administered by the schools at the local level; but the cost of such administration should not be a charge upon school funds." The board stated that it has no funds to administer the centers and should state support be withdrawn would close them.

In answer to a question from the committee, Dr. Morgan indicated that he believed the school board could agree to the proposal by Dr. Stoddard of the Los Angeles city schools.

Mrs. Lowell Bigelow, League of Women Voters of California

Mrs. Bigelow presented the following prepared statement on behalf of the league:

"The League of Women Voters believes there should be adequate care of the children whose normal home guidance and supervision is curtailed by the mother's employment or because the responsibility for the child reposes in one person. It is a public responsibility to make these facilities available wherever necessary. The league believes the early years of a child's life belong primarily in the home, except where there is only one parent and she must work, or where it is necessary for both parents to be employed. Furthermore, we believe in enabling legislation to allow school districts to establish child care programs, with standards on a par with other educational services offered in plant facilities, personnel and program. Further legislation and administration of a child care program should allow for an adjustment of the ceiling of the means test to conform with the purchasing power of the dollar.

"The League of Women Voters of California was instrumental in passing the first child care legislation in 1942 for the protection of children working parents, and in 1947 the league supported a bill for a continuing child care program in the Department of Education, because a temporary program will not attract and hold well-qualified staff. The child needs superior teachers, adequate health and sanitation facilities We believe these facilities are most easily available, and at less expense to the taxpayer, within the school system than elsewhere."

In discussion with committee members, Mrs. Bigelow stated that she felt the program should be larger and that there is a particular need for expansion of the program to rural areas for the use of agricultural workers.

Miss Susan Adams, Los Angeles Central Labor Council, A. F. of L.

Presented a prepared statement of the position of the A. F. of L, which "wholeheartedly urges the continuation of the child care center program under state administration and supervision, and as a program of the Department of Education, but on an expanded and permanent basis."

Pointed out that without the centers many parents would be forced to leave employment to go on relief rolls "thus adding to the burden of taxpayers while depriving our State of useful productive work and the benefit of the income therefrom." Urged that the program be on a permanent basis to meet a "permanent and growing need, since the entrance of women into the labor market is a continuing and expanding factor in our economy."

Requested that the program be expanded "to meet the growing needs of our State" and referred to needs of the economy to produce for defense as well as for domestic consumption, necessitating recruitment of increasing numbers of women into industry and to the induction of fathers into the armed forces, requiring mothers to seek employment

Recommended that the income limits of the "means test" be liberalized with respect to the income maximum; that the program provide for inclusion of children of servicemen and mothers whose employment is in essential defense industry or service; that it continue to be state-supported and state supervised within the Department of Education.

Urged the establishment of rural mobile units to serve the children of agricultural workers, stating "particularly do the young children of California's seasonal agricultural workers need proper daytime supervision—a need which at present is not being properly met "

Albert T. Lunceford, Greater Los Angeles C. I. O. Council

Read a prepared statement. "C. I. O. feels that it is very important that the present child care centers program be not only maintained but expanded in view of the increasing national emergency."

Recommended that the program remain under supervision of the State Department of Education, and that the centers remain a state financed program and not become a local responsibility.

"We feel that the centers should be permanent and not temporary. While the need for centers is especially acute during a national emergency, there always exists a need on the part of a large number of women who are the sole or primary support of their families These independent and self-supporting women must not be forgotten."

With reference to the means test, stated it "must be liberalized if the centers are to continue to serve the purposes for which they were set up. We have many cases, for example, who cannot qualify under the present means test, yet cost of private nursery school care is so fantastically high as to make it utterly out of reach and, too, in many localities there are no private nurseries at any price."

Requested consideration be given to the needs of families where husbands are called into service or women go to work in defense plants and that such families "ought to be eligible for child care center services by virtue of their position."

California Congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc.

The chairman read into the record a portion of a letter of October 11, 1950, from Mrs. Edward T. Walker, President, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc., as follows:

> "At our September state board meeting, our legislative advocate was authorized that if child care center continuation was considered at the special session of the Legislature, our policy would be that child care centers be continued only on a temporary basis with state support, with the means test, and under the administration of the public schools. Of course, we would also agree to permit certain occupational exemptions."

Mrs. Kenneth R. Barrick, Child Progress, Inc , Altadena, California

Presented a prepared statement supporting the child care centers program, requesting that it be established on a permanent basis and "to allow a healthy expansion of the program to provide for the present and future needs of the children of the State of California."

Emphasized the value of the program for the benefit of the child rather than the working mother as such.

Spoke on the "tremendous need for the establishment of child care centers in rural areas where it is well known that many children suffer from lack of supervision, care and character development."

Stated "For services to be restricted to those who are termed 'needy' on a basis of eligibility by low income defeats the entire purpose of the program. The centers should be available, on an optional basis, to all children who require services, whether it be for reasons of financial stress, lack of any other care, psychological adjustment or character development."

Recommended temporary legislation in January, 1951, to continue the present program beyond the termination date until June 30, 1951, together with amendment of the present law to include the children of servicemen and defense workers and an adequate appropriation to cover the program until June 30, 1951.

Recommended that in March, 1951, legislation be enacted to this effect:

> "That a permanent child care centers program be established, as an educational program operated and administered by the California State Department of Education and the local boards of education; that the centers be made available, on an optional basis, to all children who require services; that the centers be allowed to expand on a state-wide basis as they are requested in the individual communities, especially that centers be established in the rural areas, including mobile units for children of California's seasonal agricultural workers; and that the child care centers appropriation be written into the budget of the State of California."

In elaboration of testimony during discussion with committee members, Mrs. Barrick made the suggestion that a certain amount of funds appropriated be limited to use in rural areas as the need for centers is proved. She also stated that she did not believe in the means test as a basis for eligibility but that the centers should be open to all children who have a need for them.

Mr. Walter Tatum, Child Care Supervisor, San Diego

Mr. Tatum spoke briefly on various phases of the program. He felt that the means test should be raised and that if it were, the fees charged might be higher. He indicated agreement with the suggestions by Dr. Stoddard of the Los Angeles schools for financing the program through parent fees—school districts—state appropriations. In connection with possible federal aid, he suggested that it might be feasible to secure federal aid for necessary buildings and equipment rather than for administrative costs.

John R. Weber, Supervisor of Child Care, State Department of Education

Mr. Weber spoke briefly, advising the committee that a survey is being made in all school districts as of December 1, 1950, and that then data can be provided the committee on waiting lists in individual centers.

In connection with the problem of families of service personnel, he stated that reports indicate that 99 percent of these families are ineligible for use of the centers under the means test.

He suggested that funds over and above the present appropriation might be frozen for use in rural areas.

Msgr. Raymond O'Flaherty, Catholic Welfare Director, Archdiocese of Los Angeles

Msgr. O'Flaherty was unable to remain to testify personally but submitted a written statement to the committee, stating the following beliefs:

1. Day care of children is basically a social problem and should be dealt with by social agencies. Supervision of the centers should be through the State Department of Social Welfare.

2. Day care should be provided only when there is a genuine necessity for the care of a child outside its own home. A reasonable means test should be maintained as part of the program.

3. Centers should be set up and financed locally when at all possible. State sponsorship and financing should be provided only when local communities are unable to operate needed programs, and then only so long as is genuinely necessary.

4. Because of the heavy load upon the school system, schools should not be called upon to expand programs by the addition of child care center responsibility, nor should limited local and state funds be diverted to finance a program which is custodial rather than educational.

Manhattan Beach Schools

Submitted a letter dated October 3, 1950, stating: "No definite plans have been made concerning the continuing of the child care center in Manhattan Beach beyond (sic) February 15, 1951." This letter, from the secretary to the board of trustees, stated that some members of the board had unofficially indicated "that due to limited funds, and the fact that the child care center does not serve too large a segment of the total population, that it might not be feasible to continue the center beyond February 15, 1951."

Glendale Unified School District

Submitted a letter dated October 10, 1950, stating: "After giving consideration to this, the members of our board instructed me to advise you that they are not ready at this time to commit themselves as to future action regarding the centers."

Mrs. John W. Barling, 16902 S. Hobart, Gardena, California

Submitted a letter to the hearing stating that she is a serviceman's wife and had been informed she was ineligible for use of the centers. Stated as follows:

> "* * * for I cannot feed and clothe my children on the government allotment, therefore, I must work. I am willing to pay a sufficient amount to keep him there, as he gets such wonderful care and loves it so." (The son had been in the center two months prior to determination of ineligibility.)

Raphael Konigsberg, Los Angeles

Submitted a telegram to the hearing: "Urge that child care centers be made a permanent state program."

First—To adjourn;
Second—To recess to a time certain;
Third—To lay on the table;
Fourth—For the previous question;
Fifth—To set as a special order;
Sixth—To postpone indefinitely;
Seventh—To refer or re-refer;
Eighth—To amend

Questions of Order Decided Without Debate

63. All incidental questions of order, arising after a motion is made for any of the questions named in Rule 62 and pending such motion, shall be decided by the Speaker without debate, whether on appeal or otherwise.

Appeal From Decision of the Speaker

64. Any member may appeal from a decision of the Speaker without waiting for recognition by the Speaker, even though another member has the floor. No appeal is in order when another is pending, or when other business has been transacted by the Assembly prior to the appeal being taken.

Upon the appeal being seconded, the Speaker may give his reasons for the decision, and the member taking the appeal may give his reasons for making his appeal, and the Speaker shall forthwith put this question to the Assembly: "Shall the decision of the Speaker be sustained?"

An appeal cannot be amended and yields only to a motion to recess or adjourn, to lay on the table, or a question of personal privilege. If an appeal be laid on the table, such action shall have no effect on the pending question.

An appeal cannot be debated when relating to indecorum, transgression of Rules, or priority of business. A majority vote of the members present shall decide any appeal.

Speaker Explains Order of Business

65. The Speaker may, on his own motion or upon the motion of any Member of the Assembly, explain the order of business when the motion pending before the Assembly is not debatable. Such explanation is not to consume more than two minutes.

To Adjourn

66. A motion to adjourn is not debatable and cannot be amended, and is always in order, except (a) when another member has the floor; (b) when the Assembly is voting; (c) during a call of the Assembly. The name of any member moving an adjournment and also the hour at which the motion was made and adjournment taken shall be entered in the Journal. A motion to adjourn must be adopted by a majority vote of the members present.

When a motion to adjourn is made and seconded, it shall be in order for the Speaker, before putting the question, to permit any member to state to the Assembly any fact relating to the condition of the business of the Assembly which would seem to render it improper or inadvisable to adjourn. A statement shall not occupy more than two minutes and shall not be debatable.

To Recess to a Time Certain

67. A motion to recess to a time certain shall be treated the same as a motion to adjourn, except that such motion is debatable when no business is before the Assembly, and can be amended as to the time and duration of the recess. It yields only to a motion to adjourn.

To Lay on the Table

68. A motion to lay on the table is not debatable and cannot be amended.

A motion to table a bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent or joint resolution requires a majority vote of the entire elected membership.

Any motion to lay on the table, if carried by a majority vote of the entire elected membership, carries with it the main question and everything that adheres to it; provided, however, that a motion to lay an amendment on the table, if adopted, does not carry with it a bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent, joint, or House resolution.

A motion to lay an amendment on the table may be adopted by a majority vote of the members present.

The Previous Question

69. The previous question shall be put only when demanded by five members, and in this form: "Shall the question be now put?" And its effect, when sustained by a majority of the members present, shall be to

Motion to Set Special Order

70. A motion to set any matter before the Assembly as a special order of business must be adopted by a two-thirds vote of the members elected. It is debatable only as to the propriety of setting the main question as a special order of business, and may be amended only as to the time.

Motion to Postpone to a Time Certain

71. A motion to postpone to a time certain shall be deemed and treated as a motion to set as a special order.

Motion to Postpone Indefinitely

72. When a motion is made to postpone indefinitely any bill, motion, or amendment, it opens the main question to debate. Should the motion to postpone indefinitely prevail by a majority vote of the entire elected membership, the main question shall not be acted upon again during the session.

Motion to Amend

73. A motion to amend may itself be amended, but no "amendment to an amendment" can be amended. A motion to amend is debatable, except where the main question to be amended is not debatable. Any motion to amend may be adopted by a majority vote of the members present.

A motion to amend having been decided in the negative, shall not again be in order on the same day, or at the same stage of proceeding. A motion to amend by striking out certain words having been decided in the negative, shall not preclude a motion to amend by adding words, or a motion to amend by striking out and inserting words; but in no case shall a further amendment be substantially the same as the one rejected.

Subject to the above provisions of this rule, a motion to amend is in order during the second or third reading of any bill.

A motion to lay an amendment on the table may be adopted by a majority vote of the members present, as provided in Rule 68.

Amendment to Be Germane

74. No amendment to any bill, whether reported by a committee or offered by a member, shall be in order when such amendment relates to a different subject, or is intended to accomplish a different purpose, or requires a title essentially different from the original title of any bill.

No amendment shall be in order which adds or deletes the name of a member as an author or co-author, or which changes the original number of any bill.

Motions in Writing

Constitution of Motions

77. No motion, whether oral or written, shall be adopted until the same shall be seconded and distinctly stated to the Assembly by the Speaker.

Division of Questions

78. Any member may call for a division of the question, and the Speaker shall order the question divided if it comprehend propositions in substance so distinct that, one being taken away, a substantive proposition shall remain for the decision of the Assembly.

Withdrawal of Motions

79. After a motion is stated by the Speaker, or a bill, resolution, or petition read by the Clerk, it shall be deemed to be in the possession of the Assembly.

Motion to Be Germane

80. No motion or proposition on a subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted as an amendment

Motion to Withdraw and Recall Bills

81 A motion to withdraw a bill or resolution from committee, or to re-refer a bill or resolution from one committee to another committee may be made during the regular order of business. A motion to re-refer shall only be debatable as to the propriety of such reference, and shall require a recorded vote of a majority of the elected members.

No bill or resolution shall be withdrawn from committee and placed upon the file except upon two days' notice thereof and except by a recorded vote of a majority of the elected members.

Bills Stricken From File

82. A motion to strike from the file any bill or House resolution requires a majority vote of the entire elected membership. Such bill shall not be acted upon again during the session.

Motion to Rescind Action and Expunge Record

83. Previous to the approval of the Journal by the Assembly, any action may be rescinded and its record ordered expunged by an affirmative recorded vote sufficient to take such action originally; except that no action shall be rescinded and the record expunged by a vote less than a majority of the entire elected membership. No motion to rescind the action and expunge the record shall be made twice on the same proposition.

Whenever any action of the Assembly is rescinded and its record ordered expunged, the record of the action expunged shall not appear in any form whatsoever, but the record of the proceedings on the motion to rescind and expunge shall appear in the Assembly Journal as and when printed.

Reconsideration of Vote

84. Notice of a motion to reconsider on the next legislative day, the vote whereby any bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent or joint resolution was passed or refused passage, must be given on the same day such vote to be so reconsidered was taken.

A notice of motion to reconsider a vote must be given by a member voting on the bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent or joint resolution, and shall take precedence over all motions, except a motion to adjourn. Upon such notice of motion being given, the bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent or joint resolution shall forthwith be placed upon the unfinished business file, and no further action shall be taken prior to the next legislative day. When a notice of a motion to reconsider has once been made, the same shall be considered to be the property of the Assembly.

Any member voting on any motion, amendment, concurrence, Assembly resolution or proposition other than a bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent or joint resolution, may give notice of reconsideration of the vote whereby the same was passed or refused passage on the same day such vote to be reconsidered was taken, which notice shall suspend all further consideration until the next legislative day; provided, however, that a motion to reconsider on the same day the notice was given shall take precedence over and above such notice and upon demand of any member must be put to an immediate vote A motion to reconsider any proposition other than a bill, constitutional amendment, concurrent or joint resolution shall require an affirmative recorded vote of a majority of the entire elected membership.

No notice of motion for reconsideration shall be in order on the day preceding the last day for consideration of Assembly or Senate bills in the Assembly. No motion to reconsider shall be adopted except upon an affirmative recorded vote of a majority of the entire elected membership, except that it shall require a two-thirds vote of the entire elected membership to reconsider the vote on any matter originally requiring a two-thirds vote for its passage or adoption.

When reconsideration is granted, the bill shall resume its exact position before the Assembly previous to its being voted upon.

Call of Assembly

85. After the roll has been called, and prior to the announcement of the vote, any member may move a call of the Assembly A majority of the members present may order a call of the Assembly, and the Speaker shall immediately order the Sergeant-at-Arms to lock all doors and shall direct the Clerk to prepare a list of absentees as disclosed by the last roll call, which list of absentees shall be furnished to the Sergeant-at-Arms and printed in the Journal. Thereupon no members shall be permitted to leave the Assembly Chamber except by written permission of the Speaker, and no person shall be permitted to enter except such member as is taken into custody as herein provided, or Senators, officers, attaches, or employees of the Legislature in the official performance of their duties.

Those members who are found to be absent, and for whom no leaves of absence have been granted, shall be forthwith taken into custody wherever found by the Sergeant-at-Arms or his assistants or any person designated by the Sergeant-at-Arms, including members of the California Highway Patrol, the State Police, and Sheriffs or their deputies, and brought to the Assembly Chamber. No recess or adjournment shall be taken during a call of the Assembly. During such call, the Assembly may consider and transact any matter of business by unanimous consent. No call of the Assembly shall be ordered on any matter while the Assembly is already under call. A call of the Assembly may be dispensed with at any time upon a majority vote of the members present, at which time the completion of the roll call pending when the call of the Assembly was ordered shall become the immediate order of business before the Assembly.

Resolutions

86. The adoption of any resolution authorizing the expenditure of money shall require an affirmative recorded vote of a majority of all members elected to the Assembly. All House resolutions shall be numbered and shall be referred to the appropriate committee by the Speaker.

Motions and Resolutions

87. Any motion or resolution not otherwise provided for under the Rules shall be placed before the Assembly only under this order of business Unless otherwise provided by law or Assembly rule, any motion or resolution may be adopted by a majority vote of the members present.

The name of any member who refuses to vote as required by this rule, after being requested by the Speaker to do so, shall be entered in the Journal of the Assembly, together with a statement that he was present and did so refuse to vote. Any member who refuses so to vote may, if he so desires, and immediately after the announcement of the vote, submit a written explanation of his failure to vote and have such explanation printed in the Journal, provided no such explanation shall exceed 50 words in length.

In addition to the entry of his name in the Journal, any member who refuses so to vote when required, and who has not been excused from doing so, may, immediately after the announcement of the vote, in the discretion of the Speaker or upon demand of any member, be summoned to appear before the bar of the Assembly for public censure by the Speaker or by any member designated by the Speaker. Prior to the announcement of the vote the Speaker shall inquire if all members have voted. Any member may move a call of the Assembly after the completion of the roll and prior to the final recording, but no member shall be allowed to change his vote, or have his vote recorded after the vote is announced.

Members at Clerk's Desk

97. No member or other person shall be allowed at the Clerk's desk while the ayes and noes are being recorded or the votes counted.

COMMUNICATIONS

By Speaker Sam L. Collins:

The following communication was received, read, and ordered printed in the Journal:

Letter of Transmittal

STATE OF CALIFORNIA
STATE FIRE MARSHAL
SACRAMENTO, January 8, 1951

Hon. Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly
State Capitol, Sacramento, California

DEAR SIR: Pursuant to Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 91, I am submitting herewith a report of my findings on a study of facts relating to the storage, use, and handling of liquefied petroleum gas in California.

It is my recommendation that state laws, regulations, and their administration be strengthened by adoption of one of the two plans proposed in the attached report in order that fire and explosion hazards, resulting from careless use of this product, may be reduced to the minimum.

In view of present-day conditions, it is my recommendation that Plan No. 1 (shown on page 9 of the report) be followed, but that in future years, when conditions warrant, Plan No 1 be expanded to include the major features of Plan No. 2.

Respectfully submitted,

JOE R. YOCKERS, State Fire Marshal

3. STATUS OF THE TIDE AND SUBMERGED LANDS

After more than 100 years of undisputed possession and ownership, both inland and coastal, of all lands beneath navigable waters within our boundaries, executive agencies of the Federal Government have made attempts to take such lands and the Supreme Court of the United States has rendered an opinion against California. The Supreme Court, however, refused to find ownership of such lands in the Federal Government and limited its decision strictly to the declaration of paramount federal powers over the submerged lands for national defense, commerce, and international affairs.

The Supreme Court specifically refused to include "proprietorship" or "ownership" in its decree in favor of the government, thereby leaving the entire question of ownership of such lands for future litigation or action by the Congress. The whole question of ownership and division of state and federal powers as to the disputed lands is a legislative matter, the Supreme Court held, using the following words:

> "We have said the constitutional power of Congress in this respect is without limitation * * *. Thus neither the courts nor the executive agencies could proceed contrary to an act of Congress in this congressional area of national powers."

The members of this committee call attention to the fact that a majority of both houses of Congress have indicated their support of state ownership legislation each time that the subject has been voted upon and the Committees on the Judiciary of the United States Senate and House of Representatives, in reporting favorably on S. 1988 in the Eightieth Congress, recognized the historic rights and traditional equities of the several states by incorporating the following language in their joint report:

> "* * * We consider it against the public interest for the Federal Government to commence a series of vexatious lawsuits against the sovereign states to recover submerged lands within the boundaries of the states, traditionally looked upon as the property of the states under a century of pronouncements by the Supreme Court reflecting its belief that the states owned these lands." (p. 10)

"* * * The committee is of the opinion that not only will the public interest be best served by confirming the rights of the states but that common justice and equity require such action." (p. 16)

Legislative action in favor of California's position has been supported continuously for several years by the National Association of Attorneys General, the Governors' Conference, the Council of State Governments, National Association of Port Authorities, National Water Conservation Association, American Title Association, United States Conference of Mayors, and many other national organizations.

The committee recommends that the California Legislature continue to urge the adoption by the Congress of an act recognizing that ownership of lands beneath navigable waters within the State shall continue to be vested in the State, subject only to the paramount rights of the Federal Government in a national emergency, in commerce, and in national defense, the exercise of which shall never of itself vest any proprietary interest in such lands in the Federal Government; but recognizing the rights of the Federal Government to take any such property necessary for national defense by priority purchase or due process of law.

We recommend that the Legislature vigorously oppose any agreements between private interests and federal agencies under which equity and relief would be given private interests without giving the same full and complete equity to the State and its political subdivisions, and oppose any proposed legislation which will permit the Department of Interior or any other federal agency to lease, to private interests, lands beneath navigable waters within the original boundaries of the State.

In order that the Legislature may have a picture of the problem confronting the State clearly in mind, it would be well to give a brief history of what has transpired to this time. The problem has two facets:

(a) The litigation facet. (b) the legislative facet.

California's ownership of the submerged lands within its boundaries, which extend three miles seaward from its coast line was recognized by the entire Federal Government for nearly a century. During this time the Federal Government purchased from the State or its grantees many parcels of these lands for its use. Others it condemned, paying just compensation therefor in accordance with the requirements of the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution In numerous instances the State or its grantees have, in a spirit of helpful cooperation, by gift deed conveyed parcels of these lands to the Federal Government, but the Government has always required a formal conveyance to it before any of its funds were expended upon any such lands.

Some time after the turn of the century, interest developed in the exploration for oil and other hydrocarbon substances in offshore, submerged lands along certain portions of our coast Eventually offshore wells were drilled under leases from the State and oil and gas were discovered and produced. Later it became known that these resources or products were drained from reservoirs of oil and gas lying beneath the offshore submerged lands belonging to the State by wells drilled and produced by the owners of onshore or upland areas under which lay the same pools or reservoirs as those underlying the state-owned submerged lands. Provisions of law were enacted by the California Legislature permitting the State to lease its submerged lands for the drilling of wells and the production of oil and gas therefrom in those cases where these lands were being drained or there was a threat of drainage from onshore vertical wells. Leases were made, under loyalty provisions satisfactory to the State, wells were drilled and oil and gas in substantial quantities were produced therefrom, resulting in a noteworthy development of our natural resources.

California and its lessees pioneered in the field of exploration, discovery, and production of oil in submerged coastal lands. The process of slant-drilling, or whipstocking, which was largely responsible for successful operations, was in fact invented in our State, and it was here that it passed through the difficult stages of experimentation to a perfected technique in the drilling of oil wells. It was this, in a large measure, which made possible the great contribution made to this Nation of the recovery of vast reservoirs of these important resources underlying submerged coastal lands.

However, possibly it was inevitable that when the time came that California's pioneering efforts in this field bore fruit, there were those who began to look with jealous eyes upon the success which had resulted, and to seek methods of "muscling in" or "taking over"—to employ language of the street. Inasmuch as lessees of the State were lawfully in possession under state law and satisfactorily performing the obligations of their leases, rather than attempt the old-fashioned role of claim jumper to oust the State's lessees they apparently decided to try and by-pass the State of California, and so they filed application for leases with the Department of the Interior of the Federal Government upon the same lands which had already been leased by the State and from which oil was being produced and the State was receiving substantial revenues. These applications, however, did not meet with the desired action at the hands of the Department of the Interior. The Federal Government recognized ownership in the State of California. In answer to a letter addressed to him by one of these covetous applicants for a lease on an area of submerged lands in California, the then Secretary of the Interior, Harold L. Ickes, made the following reply to the applicant.

> "Title to the soil under the ocean within the three-mile limit is in the State of California and the land may not be appropriated except by authority of the State."

A number of years later, however, Secretary Ickes made an about face, and at his instance the Federal Government commenced an action in the United States Supreme Court, as a court of original jurisdiction, in which it sought to establish federal ownership of all submerged lands within the boundaries of this State. On June 23, 1947, the United States Supreme Court announced that California was not the owner of these lands, it declined to hold that the United States was the owner, and set up a new doctrine of so-called "paramount rights." In this manner, the Federal Government virtually took over, by what some have termed a process of "legalized seizure," the coastal submerged lands of California which exceed 3,000 square miles in area, all of which lie within its constitutional boundaries.

Almost immediately following the announcement of the Supreme Court's decision, and several months prior to the order and decree, conferences were held in Washington, D. C., by representatives of both parties to discuss what course should be taken in respect to the operation of the existing leases in California submerged lands and other matters. It was agreed that operations under the existing leases should continue for the period of one year and that new leases could be made by the State Lands Commission with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, all revenues to the State to be impounded in a special fund pending final disposition by the Supreme Court or Congressional action. This stipulation was renewed for an additional year on July 28, 1948, and again on August 2, 1949, without change. On August 21st of this year a revised and extended stipulation was entered into and made effective to October 1, 1951. This gave the Secretary of the Interior added authority, particularly to require the State to call for bids for new leases and to require the drilling of new wells when requested by the Secretary. The State is also required under the revised stipulation to pay the rentals and royalties received from its leases after October 1, 1950, to the United States quarterly, the United States agreeing to segregate and hold the moneys so paid in a special fund The State shall continue to hold in a special fund all rentals and royalties received between June 23, 1947, and September 30, 1950, inclusive. The State Lands Commission may expend not to exceed $12,000 per month from the latter fund to defray its expenses in administering the law respecting operations under such leases and the Secretary of the Interior may use not to exceed $50,000 per annum of the funds paid by the State after September 30, 1950, to reimburse the Geological Survey and other agencies of the Department of the Interior for their expenses after that date.

In January of 1948, the Federal Government filed a motion in the Supreme Court to establish the lines of demarcation of three segments along the California Coast They carefully selected three areas where oil was being produced and urged that these lines (and only these) be drawn at once in the way they had drawn them upon a sketch which accompanied their motion. They drew the line for their first segment from Point Conception to Point Hueneme by hugging the ordinary low water mark for the entire distance. This segment was to take care of the Elwood and other fields in Santa Barbara County and those in Ventura County. They drew their lines for the second segment on the line described in the stipulation describing San Pedro Bay, limiting it to a line from Point Fermin to a point just outside the Rainbow Pier in Long Beach (this line being over a mile inside the breakwater). From the latter point they drew their line right up to the ordinary low water mark down as far as the entrance to Newport Bay. It is important to bear in mind also that they want these lines fixed and established at the low water mark as it existed on September 9, 1850, regardless of any accretions, whether natural or artificial, since that date.

In the City of Long Beach there are almost five miles of beautiful beach lying southeasterly from her Rainbow Pier which are placed entirely in jeopardy. This beach, of course, is now further seaward than it was in 1850. In the Santa Monica Bay area there are over seven miles of beach which, during the past few years, has been widened several hundred feet by the placement there of excess sand from the excavation at the side of the new Hyperion Sewage Treatment Plant of the City of Los Angeles Such examples could be multiplied.

There is now impounded in our State Treasury the sum of 27 million dollars, the release of which depends upon either favorable action, as to a portion of it, by the United States Supreme Court, or the restoration of ownership to all of it by the Congress. Out of this sum presently impounded some 19 million dollars would, under out state law, be immediately made available for the development of our state parks and beaches, and that, in addition, other substantial sums would go to other needful uses, including a substantial sum which would be released to the educational fund of veterans' dependents.

It is the belief of this committee that in positive and permanent action by the Congress lies the only real and satisfactory solution to this problem. The committee recommends that the Legislature urge the Congress of the United States to adopt legislation which will establish and confirm in every one of the states within the Nation the fee title to all lands lying beneath navigable waters within their respective boundaries including the resources thereof—whether the state be coastal, entirely inland or bordering upon the Great Lakes, and whether the waters be those of the sea, or of stream, river, or lake.

It is not too much to say that with united effort, both vigorous and untiring, such righteous legislation can be made law. As early as the Seventy-ninth Session of Congress in 1947, legislation was urged, and has since been constantly urged before the Congress, in the effort to restore these lands to California, as well as to definitely establish the title of every state in the Nation to all lands beneath navigable waters within its boundaries. In 1947, such a bill was passed by the House of Congress, only to be vetoed by President Truman too late in the session for it to be brought up before the Congress in an effort to pass it over his veto. In 1948, a similar bill was passed by the House of Representatives by a vote of almost 10 to 1, 257 to 29 to be exact. In 1949, the states again pursued their efforts in Congress to have this question settled once and for all by restoring to and confirming in the states the ownership of and title to these lands. These bills were referred to the Judiciary Committee of the House and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the Senate Inasmuch as the hearings were not concluded until just prior to adjournment no vote was taken in either house on their passage.

We must now look to the Eighty-third Congress. The last bill of the states introduced in the Senate bore the sponsoring names of 20 Senators from states spanning the entire Nation. More could have been obtained. In the House there was not one such bill introduced for the states, but over 20. This can be done again. There is little doubt of such a bill's passing the House by a very impressive vote. In the Senate favorable action can be anticipated.

The State of California has firmly committed itself to the policy of bringing about the restoration and confirmation of its rights in and title to all submerged lands beneath navigable waters within its boundaries, including the resources thereof. Our Governor has appeared before Congressional committees on numerous occasions in support of this policy and effort. His activities in this cause date back more than a decade, to the time when he was Attorney General of this State. The State Lands Commission, the membership of which consists of the Lieutenant Governor, the State Controller and the Director of Finance, has uninterruptedly exerted its effort in this fight. Every Attorney General California has had since the turn of the century has fought for the rights of this State to the ownership of its submerged lands to the limits of its boundaries The California Legislature has three times in as many years adopted joint resolutions declaring that, "it is in the public interest and in the futherance of justice that title and ownership of the lands beneath navigable waters within the boundaries of the states be restored to and confirmed in these states by the Congress of the United States" and called upon the Congress to recognize, confirm, and establish title to such lands in the states. The most recent resolution is set forth as Chapter 17 of the Statutes of 1950. Furthermore, the Legislature of this State in Chapter 65, Statutes of 1949, in giving greater precision to the boundary of the State of California as defined in Article XXI of the Constitution, declared in Sections 170, 171, and 172 of the Government Code that our boundary "runs and has in the past run three English nautical miles oceanward of lines drawn along the outer sides of the outermost of the islands, reefs and rocks along and adjacent to the mainland and across intervening waters."

California's positive and vigorous stand and untiring efforts is not without support from other sources. Compelling evidence that the states are not to be regarded as urging claims which are either unfair or unjustified is found in the impressive expressions of outstanding official bodies nation-wide in scope Such official bodies, which enjoy the highest standing throughout the Nation, include: (1) The Conference of Governors, composed of the Governors of the 48 states; (2) the National Association of State Land Officials; (3) the American Association of Port Authorities; (4) the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers; (5) the Council of State Governments; (6) the Conference of Mayors; (7) the National Association of Attorneys General; (8) the National Association of Secretaries of State; (9) the National Reclamation Association; (10) the National Water Conservation Conference; (11) the American Bar Association; and (12) the American Title Association.

Every one of these official bodies has gone on record, not once but on numerous occasions, firmly insisting that the Congress restore to and recognize and confirm in the states title to all lands beneath the navigable waters within their boundaries, as well as all natural resources contained therein.

The official stand taken by these national bodies must be recognized as reflecting the study and deliberation of some of the best thought in the Nation, and as being founded upon the basic principles of plain justice as well as upon fundamental rights vouchsafed to the states and the people thereof by the Federal Constitution itself.

4. PERCENTAGE DEPLETION

National Security and the General Welfare

It is necessary that California continue the search for new oil fields for the replenishment of current production and to build up an adequate reserve capacity for national emergencies. In order that capital will be risked in the search for oil, an adequate incentive must be provided. In the absence of such incentive, exploration will cease and new oil fields will not be found. This is doubly important here in California where 90 percent of all energy consumed is provided by petroleum products. On a national scale the oil industry accounts for 3 percent of the national income but produces approximately 7 percent of all federal, state and local taxes, which amounts to $1.67 tax on every barrel of crude oil produced, this indicates the oil industry is paying far more than its just share. Taxes cannot be added to an already over-burdened industry without impairment of its efficiency and an increase in the cost of products to the vast consuming public here in the west.

A subject of special concern to the oil industry is a provision in the Internal Revenue Code which grants to the producers of oil and natural gas a deduction in computing their federal income tax liability which is commonly referred to as percentage depletion.

Under the law as it has existed since 1926, producers of oil and natural gas have been allowed to reduce their taxable income derived from the production of these raw materials to the extent of 27½ percent before applying the normal corporate income tax rates to such income.

While certain groups contend that the oil industry has an unfair tax advantage through this tax provision and various attempts have been made to get Congress to reduce or eliminate percentage depletion, this allowance has a just place in our tax structure and is of tremendous importance to the Nation's economy and military defense.

What Is Percentage Depletion?

The Sixteenth Amendment gave Congress the power to tax incomes, but the return of capital is tax free. The profit realized on the sale of a capital asset may be taxed, but that part of the selling price which represents the investment in the asset is a return of capital and may not be taxed. This allowance is the case of a physical asset such as a refinery is called "depreciation," while in the case of a natural resource as an oil or gas well is known as "depletion."

It was during the first World War that Congress recognized the need for creating an incentive for discovering new oil and gas reserves by permitting the discoverer of such to base a depletion deduction on the actual fair market value of the property within 30 days of discovery. Discovery depletion was limited to 50 percent of the net income from the property in 1924. The methods then used proved to be so complicated that in 1926 Congress sought a workable substitute. Upon statistics developed by the Treasury Department, the Senate recommended that 30 percent of gross income be allowed, but a compromise between this figure and 25 percent proposed by the House of Representatives resulted in the present depletion rate of 27½ percent. This allows at least 72½ cents out of each dollar of crude oil sales representing gross income, after deducting all operating expenses, overhead costs and depreciation of equipment, to be subject to federal income tax. This simple method of determining depletion has provided a fair and just return of capital value to the oil producer.

Incentives Required in a Hazardous Industry

Of all the basic industries in our Nation the oil and gas producing industry is the most hazardous. Hundreds of millions of dollars are spent annually to locate possible oil and gas producing areas, and in spite of this tremendous effort and expense, four out of every five exploratory wells are dry holes. Of all wells drilled in both proven and unproven territory, only 40 percent are profitable. In order to attract risk capital, these profitable wells must pay for the cost of the dry holes. This huge expenditure for exploration may not be deducted as an expense, but it is a capital investment recoverable through depletion if oil is discovered, or as a loss if no production is obtained. The cost of a dry hole may be taken as a deduction in determining income tax liability, but this is no advantage unless there is income with which to offset the deduction. And even if there is income, what profit is there in spending a dollar on a dry hole to save 50 cents in taxes? As presently constituted, the 27½ cents out of every dollar received from the sale of oil produced, but limited to 50 cents out of each dollar of net profit after deducting all producing expenses and depreciation of equipment, must repay the producer not only for the cost of the particular well from which the oil is obtained but also for the cost of his exploration work and dry holes.

Taxation of Capital Gains

Our Income Tax Laws have always differentiated between capital gains and ordinary income and profits. The profits on oil or gas property is a capital gain For example, the cost of discovering an oil field may be $350,000, while the value of the property is $1,000,00. If this property is held over six months and sold, the capital gains tax of 25 percent applies, and even if it is sold before six months have passed, a special provision of the law provides the surtax on the gain would be limited to 30 percent. Thus it is seen that a tax advantage accrues if the property is sold. There is no logical reason why the owner should suffer a tax disadvantage by retaining and operating the property. Depletion allows him to deduct 27½ percent of the gross income and pay regular tax rates on the balance.

Exploration for oil has been intensified and production kept up to demands only because of the present depletion rate of 27½ percent allowed by Congress It is the recommendation of this committee that California's United States Senators and Congressmen urge its continuation.

BUDGET MESSAGE BY GOVERNOR EARL WARREN
1951-1952 BUDGET

To the Senate and Assembly of the State Legislature of California:

In conformity with Section 34 of Article IV of the Constitution, I submit herewith the Budget for the State of California for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1952.

This budget, in view of the national emergency, has been held to bare essentials. It calls for no additional taxes. It proposes a reduction in total expenditures despite substantial increases in fixed charges. The total expenditures for the 1951-52 Fiscal Year are estimated at $1,016,883,002, which is $75,828,248 less than the revised estimates * for the current, 1950-51, year.

No New Taxes

I am glad to present to you another budget which is within our present means and which requires neither new revenue measures nor increases in tax rates.

Revenues have been estimated on a middle ground, conservative basis. Yields from the principal sources, taxes measured by sales and income, obviously vary with the volume of business activity, corporation and personal income, and wage rates and prices. Our estimates are on the assumption that there will be a continued expansion of the Nation's economy as the defense program proceeds, but that runaway inflation will be prevented.

Expenditures Curtailed Wherever Possible

As you know, a large part of our state budget is not subject to executive or even legislative control. Outlays for the Public School System and welfare programs are determined by continuing legislation. As school attendance and welfare case loads increase, expenditures increase automatically. Expenditures for highways are determined by the amount of special revenues for that purpose.

Much of the remainder of the budget inevitably increases as the State's population continues to grow. Wage and price advances add to our costs, too, as in all enterprises.

Despite these difficulties we have cut budget requests wherever possible and have especially curtailed the outlays which would take manpower and materials needed for national defense. Particularly is this true of capital outlays, as will be seen from an examination of that section of the budget.

Three Sections: State Operations, Capital Outlay, and Local Assistance

The budget again is presented in three sections, each largely independent of the others: State Operations, Capital Outlay, and Local Assistance.

State Operations

Few expansions of services are proposed under State Operations. Provision is made for heavier work loads where they were clearly demonstrated. A lump sum is recommended for augmenting the individual budgets for price increases which have occurred since July, 1950, with a moderate allowance for highly probable further advances Similarly, a lump sum is included for salary increases.

As you have observed from the annual report of the Personnel Board the salaries of state employees have lagged behind those paid by other employers. The last general increase in state pay was in October, 1948. You have wisely adopted in the civil service law the policy of paying state employees at rates equivalent to those of comparable employment in private industry and other public jurisdictions The Personnel Board has found from its studies that on a conservative basis a general increase of one step (approximately 5 percent) is required now to bring the pay in the state service up to the present level of other employment. Accordingly provision is made in a special item in this budget for the recommended one-step increase to be effective January 1, 1951. The Personnel Board report further points out the strong likelihood, if present trends continue, of the need for an additional one-step advance in the coming fiscal year, and allowance is made in this budget for such an adjustment should conditions requiring it materialize.

Principal Items

You will find detailed explanations of the expenditures proposed for each department and institution. Let me direct your attention especially to some of the more important items

Civil Defense. The new Office of Civil Defense will require $1,738,953 in 1951-52 to continue for a full year the civil defense program authorized during the September special session. This is for the planning, coordinating and training work to be performed at the state level in line with the national plan for civil defense There is also the need for a moderate augmentation of the amount, which was on a purely estimated basis, appropriated for the current fiscal year. Recent national legislation will provide financing in part of equipment and other outlays for civil defense operations in possible target areas. The amount which the State may be required to make available for any such extraordinary outlays cannot be determined until Congress makes appropriations and federal policies are clarified If extraordinary expenditures, capital or otherwise, are required, I will communicate both the needs and my views on financing them to you.

At the September special session you made the $75,000,000 so-called "Rainy Day Fund" available for emergency disaster relief until June 30, 1951. I recommend that you continue this emergency measure in force for an additional year.

Corrections: A moderate increase is required for the Department of Corrections to put into operation the much needed new inmate quarters at Soledad, Chino, and Terminal Island—permitting considerable relief from the badly overcrowded conditions at San Quentin.

Education: Provision is made for heavier enrollments, possible because of added facilities, at the state colleges and at the School for the Deaf. A small increase is allowed also for added work load in the State Superintendent's office. Allowance is made too for expansion in vocational rehabilitation work

University of California: The University of California will require an increase of approximately $1,400,000 in spite of a drop in enrollment, for two main reasons: (1) most of the veterans have completed their university work, with a consequent drop in revenues from the United States Veterans Administration; (2) new graduate schools principally in Los Angeles, which were authorized in recent years, are coming into operation, requiring substantial additional outlays for faculty and other costs

Highway Patrol: I am recommending a further step towards an adequate manning of our Highway Patrol A study of our traffic patrol requirements indicates that the uniformed personnel of 1,364 should be increased by more than 900 men. This budget recommends 100 additional patrolmen with the required complements of supervisory and clerical personnel. I would have recommended a larger number under normal conditions, but I believe this smaller increment represents the number of qualified men who can be recruited and trained during this coming year.

Mental Hygiene: In spite of shortages in facilities and personnel, good progress is being made in improving the care and treatment of the mentally ill. A further step in an orderly program of improvements in standards is proposed in this budget. Our aim is to restore the greatest possible number of patients to normal lives in the shortest possible time. This is not only a matter of reducing human suffering; it is good sound economy.

Military Affairs: Our State Militia is in a period of uncertainty. About half the California National Guard has been called to active federal service and we are in the process of recruiting the State Defense and Security Corps to serve the home front in its absence. The recruiting expenses for the corps will continue during the coming fiscal year. The remaining half of the National Guard is still under state jurisdiction It is more costly to maintain a militia which is half National Guard and half State Defense and Security Corps than if it were wholly one or the other Perhaps Washington will clarify the situation before you have completed your consideration of the budget. Some reduction should be possible if the remainder of the National Guard is called out and we need provide only for the Defense and Security Corps.

Capital Outlay

The postwar building program is nearing completion By the end of next year more than $400,000,000 in construction work will have been finished or under contract since 1946.

Even with this accomplishment we still have a heavy backlog of building requirements. The $400,000,000 program barely met the lag in construction which occurred during the depression and World War II It made little headway in meeting the new needs resulting from the tremendous increase in the State's population.

A careful survey shows that we should, were it not for the defense emergency, undertake urgently needed outlays next year amounting to over $85,000,000 The greater part of this must give way to the mobilization for defense I am recommending major construction outlays for 1951-52 of $24,318,000 which represents the imperative projects which cannot possibly be deferred I feel certain federal authorities will approve these projects even in this period, when defense requirements have priority over all but the most urgent essentials.

I wish to call your attention especially to two important items First are more facilities for the mentally defective We cannot longer continue adding to waiting lists and aggravating the tragedy of inadequate provision for the mentally defective children. Second is the provision for increased capacity in our Youth Authority schools Here again a delay means continuing an intolerable situation, with delinquent youths who need proper care and rehabilitation being either held in jails or allowed to get into further trouble You will find the other items in the recommendations also to be of very great urgency

The survey indicates needs amounting to more than $300,000,000 which should be met in the next five years. We must add to the capacities of our hospitals and correctional institutions. The present greatly increased grade school attendance will in a very few years mean similar increases in university and college enrollments These represent the largest requirements Needs for other facilities expand also as the State grows.

While all but emergency projects must be deferred until more settled times, the State's fiscal affairs will not be on a firm basis until a definite means of financing capital outlay needs is provided The State of California cannot ignore the requirements for keeping up its physical plant any more than can an industrial enterprise We must have an orderly means of financing replacements of worn out structures and construction of additions demanded by increased population I recommend the creation of a committee to make a careful study of this problem with the objective of a sound, long-term plan.

Local Assistance

Again the expenditures for local assistance comprise more than half the total budget and are made up almost entirely of fixed charges over which neither the Legislature nor the Executive has control. State support of the public schools, the largest item of local assistance, will require more than $220,000,000 under existing law for the budget year.

Provision is made in the budget for continuing child care centers through the current year and the 1951-52 Fiscal Year. I am sure the need to carry on this activity is now clearly apparent in view of our manpower shortages and the much greater need for employing women in defense work.

Substantial increases will be required for aid to the aged, to the blind, and to needy children, as you will see from the analysis. The crippled children program has also increased because of more complete state-wide participation at the county level.

Flood Damage

The State Engineer is making a survey of the damage to local public works caused by the recent heavy floods in Northern and Central California. Some funds are already available for state assistance in repairing the flood damage Fortunately in 1946 we set aside a special reserve for flood control work A part of this money, which is not immediately required for the longer term flood control projects, can be made available to assist the local units in repairing the damage. I recommend that $2,000,000 of this reserve be earmarked as an Emergency Fund for flood damage repair.

A Balanced Budget

As will be seen from Schedule I, after providing for the estimated expenditures for purposes now authorized, there will remain as of June 30, 1952, an unbudgeted surplus in the General Fund estimated at $20,736,277.

I am again recommending your favorable action on a program of aid to the needy totally and permanently disabled in conformity with a recent amendment to the Federal Social Security Act which makes federal grants available for this purpose. The great majority of states have already taken steps to participate in this program. Certainly no group of needy persons requires our help more than those with such complete and permanent handicaps This broadening of the Federal Social Security Law affords both an opportunity for a more adequate program of aid to this group of needy persons and a means of assisting counties through federal and state sharing of the cost A carefully prepared bill with strict eligibility requirements will be presented for your consideration For the portion of the 1951-52 Fiscal Year during which it would be operative it is estimated the State's share of costs would be $6,122,000

There will be sufficient resources in the General Fund to finance the following recommendations which I have made in the message delivered to you Monday.

Place school apportionments on a current basis and increase support for transportation; assist counties to provide facilities for senile patients, for maintenance of clinics for alcoholics and for psychiatric hospitals: "smog" research; administrative expenses of Commissions on Economic and Political Equality, Organized Crime, Taxes, and Reorganization of Government, and a Planning Agency

Any substantial additional expenditures for new services or for increased subventions will require additional taxes. I know you are as conscious as I am of the present heavy tax burden and of the impending further increases in federal taxes. True, our basic general state tax rates have not been increased for many years. Actually state taxes take a smaller portion of our people's income today than they did 10 years ago * In 1940 the average Californian paid $5 29 in state taxes for each $100 of income. In 1950, state taxes took $5 11 from each $100 of income. Nevertheless we at the state level must consider the burden imposed at the federal and local levels The time has long since passed when any one unit of government could go its own way with no regard for what other units were doing in respect to the same body of taxpayers

A comprehensive re-examination of our state and local tax structures is imperative if we are to arrive at the soundest and most equitable means of meeting the needs of both the state and local governments Such a study, together with the work of a Commission on Reorganization of the State Government to provide the most effective reorganization and improvements of administrative operations, offers the best assurance of giving our people the greatest possible returns for their tax dollars

In this budget, revenues have been estimated on a realistic basis, anticipating moderate further inflation Drastic controls might shrink them below the estimates, and cause us to draw on the Revenue Deficiency Fund If controls fail, however, and much greater inflation occurs, revenues would exceed our estimates, but we should not authorize permanent new expanded expenditures on the hope of temporarily inflated revenues. To do so is to invite financial disaster when we revert to normal levels of income

It should be a matter of extreme urgency indeed, clearly vital to the state welfare, which would impel adding new state taxes at this time

Respectfully submitted,

EARL WARREN, Governor

Governor's Budget accompanying the above message ordered filed with the Secretary of State.

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, As follows.

1. Whenever a statement of contest, petition or other communication relating to the qualifications, election, or returns of any Member of the Assembly is received by the Assembly, the Speaker shall refer it to the Committee on Elections and Reapportionment. If that committee determines that the facts alleged therein are sufficient to merit investigation, it shall hold such hearings and conduct such investigation of the facts as it deems necessary. In so doing, the committee shall be governed by the rules and shall be vested with and exercise the powers contained in this resolution.

2. Notwithstanding the filing of the statement of contest, the contestee may take his oath as Member of the Assembly, upon presentation of a certificate of election valid and regular upon its face.

The swearing in of the contestee shall be without prejudice to the rights of the contestant.

3. The committee and its members shall have and exercise all of the rights, duties and powers conferred upon investigating committees and their members by the provisions of the Joint Rules of the Senate and Assembly and of the Standing Rules of the Assembly as they are adopted and amended from time to time at this session, which provisions are incorporated herein and made applicable to this committee and its members.

Until the adoption of Joint Rules at this session, the Joint Rules of the last preceding general session are incorporated herein and made applicable to this committee and its members.

4. In addition to the foregoing powers, the committee is authorized to appoint one or more persons as commissioners to conduct investigations on its behalf, including the examination, counting and canvassing of election ballots pursuant to Section 7236 of the Elections Code, and to certify under oath to the committee, or to a subcommittee, the facts so ascertained by the commissioner

5. The committee is authorized to act during this session of the Legislature, including any recess, but not after final adjournment.

9. At the trial of the contest, both parties may appear in propria persona, or by counsel, or both.

10. Each witness shall be examined in the following order:

(a) By the party calling him.
(b) By the opposite party on cross-examination.

12. Before any witness gives his testimony the chairman shall administer to him the same oath as that administered to witnesses at hearings by legislative investigating committees

13. No witness may refuse to testify as to which party to the contest he voted for if his testimony is material and it has been shown to the satisfaction of the committee that such witness voted having no legal right to do so.

14. The chairman of the committee is authorized to provide for a stenographic report of the proceedings.

15. All witnesses for either party subpenaed and actually in attendance at the trial of such contest, and all other witnesses, the attendance of which by certificate of the chairman of the committee, appeared necessary in the judgment of the parties requesting their attendance, shall be entitled to receive for each day so in attendance and while en route to attend, the sum of five dollars ($5) per day, together with actual railroad fare of the witness from his place of residence to the place where the hearing is held and return, and pullman fare when required. In the event any such witness travels other than by railroad, such witness shall be entitled to receive as mileage the equivalent of the railroad fare and pullman fare when required.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Mr. Henderson arose to a question of personal privilege.

STATEMENT BY MR. HENDERSON

The Governor in his message to the Legislature called for unity. All real Americans wish unity With the present world crisis we need unity more than ever before

I came to the Legislature with a certificate of election to the Assembly from the Thirty-fourth District. I have been seated as a member and am participating in the deliberations of this body. My efforts are being crippled by my recently defeated opponent and his supporters. They ask a recount.

I have faith in Les Brown, the Fresno County Clerk, and I have faith in the honesty and ability of the many persons who were on the election boards. I do not believe that preference for one candidate or one party would interfere in their duties as election board members.

Therefore, to exonerate the many good persons who counted the ballots in the general election in the Thirty-fourth Assembly District, I ask for the united cooperation of the many persons who supported me in my campaign and also of those who voted for my opponent. In order to implement the work of the Committee on Elections and Reapportionment I do hereby join with those opposing me in support of a recount

Let us proceed with a recount. Let's count all the votes in the district. Let it be honest and fair.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolution was offered:

By Mr. Elliott:

House Resolution No. 33

Relative to memorializing Congress regarding compensation for draftees or selectees for national defense

WHEREAS, A distinguished American general is reputed to have expressed the recommendation that draftees into military service or selective training service for the defense of the Nation receive little or no payment for these services in the Armed Forces or in a military preparedness program; and

WHEREAS, While the Assembly of the State of California holds this eminent general in the highest esteem as one of our great military leaders of World War II and an important figure in the present world crisis, it is in complete disagreement with this proposal of his because it feels it is unsound and unjust; and

WHEREAS, This proposal not to pay draftees, or to give them a smaller pay than they now receive, would have a detrimental affect on the morale of new young members of the Armed Forces and might lessen the efficiency of national defense as well as be unfair to the person brought into the service of his Country; and

WHEREAS, The draftee or selectee should, in the opinion of this body, receive compensation for his service in the Armed Forces in accordance with the present policy of making such compensation as fair and generous as the Nation's financial conditions permit; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That this Assembly hereby expresses its disapproval of this proposal and respectfully memorializes the Congress of the United States to continue the policy of providing compensation for persons in the Armed Forces, whether draftees or volunteers, which is as fair and generous as financial conditions of the Nation permit and to maintain the same pay rates for all draftees and selectees regardless of age; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted by the Chief Clerk of the Assembly to the honorable Members of the United States Senate from California and to the honorable Members of the House of Representatives from the State of California.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL WELFARE
January 11, 1951

The Honorable Speaker and Members of the Assembly
California Legislature
Sacramento 14, California

GENTLEMEN: Pursuant to the directive of House Resolution No. 71, Second Extraordinary Session, 1950, the committee has reviewed the major phases of the social welfare program.

In conduct of its work, the committee held public hearings and engaged in study and research through its staff. Since the committee was organized in May, 1950, there has been a limited period of time in which to study all phases of the program. The committee also conducted studies of the child care centers program which restricted the time it could give to the social welfare program. The committee was limited in its staff facilities by the appropriation, making it impossible to conduct detailed studies and particularly to examine and evaluate administrative methods.

Public hearings were held in San Diego, San Francisco, and Los Angeles. All organizations believed to be actively interested in the social welfare program were specifically invited to appear before the committee and general community notice of such public hearings was made through the press well in advance of each hearing.

In connection with these hearings, the committee wishes to note that the County Supervisors' Association of California, which organization has been especially active in legislative matters concerning the social welfare program, was specifically invited to present testimony at each of the public hearings but failed to do so. In response to the invitation to appear before the committee at the final hearing in Los Angeles to present its views concerning the aid to needy children program, the association notified the chairman that because of studies being conducted it was not prepared to appear. However, two days prior to this hearing, the association did make a full presentation concerning the aid to needy children program before a Senate interim committee.

The committee was particularly impressed by the lack of basic operating data from which detailed analysis of the actual operations of the programs could be made. To some extent, in relation to the aid to needy children program, some such data was secured through special studies by the Department of Social Welfare and used by the staff. However, there appears a lack of the kind of basic research into program operations and their administration necessary not only for legislative analysis but for continuing evaluation by the administrative agencies themselves.

This lack of sufficient basic operating data has been a distinct handicap in analyzing the operations of the various programs. It undoubtedly is as great a handicap to the administrative agencies in developing programs and policies and in interpreting trends and developments to the Legislature and the community at large.

Because of the limitations of time and facilities, the staff has made a general approach to the total social welfare program with more intensive analysis of certain features. As will be illustrated in this report, a complete and searching analysis into all phases of operations of the programs and their administration should be made.

In view of the widespread interest in the aid to needy children program, special attention is given it in this report.

Insofar as has been possible, the staff report is specific. However, because of the complex nature of the total social welfare program, the absence of sufficient data for careful analysis, and the inability of the staff to examine administrative methods and practices within the counties as well as the state department, certain portions of the report are necessarily general. Where the staff has been unable to make specific analysis, it attempts to identify problems and makes suggestions for administrative consideration or for follow-up through continuing study and evaluation by the Legislature through its appropriate committees.

Should the Legislature re-establish this interim committee, the attached could be considered in form of a preliminary report and an outline of the program of the committee for the biennium.

The committee wishes to note that despite its very limited examination and analysis of operating procedures, in the course of its work it was instrumental in securing financial savings far in excess of the costs of the committee study. In one instance, corrective action was taken by the administrative agency which should save in one month approximately five times the total expenses of the committee for the whole period of its existence.

Respectfully submitted,

KATHRYN T. NIEHOUSE, Chairman
Assembly Interim Committee on Social Welfare

RECOMMENDATIONS of the
ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL WELFARE
Concerning
THE CALIFORNIA SOCIAL WELFARE PROGRAM

I. Aid to Needy Children

Basic corrective actions that should be taken are in the administrative area. Legislative changes should be confined to correction of defects revealed in the law through the limited experience since passage of the 1949 amendments, and designed primarily to facilitate better administration.

A. LEGISLATION

1. Support of Dependents

There should be enacted a law consistent with the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act drafted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and approved by the American Bar Association. Such laws are now in effect in several states to provide for the reciprocal enforcement of support through both criminal and civil law in those cases where the parent resides outside the State. Such a law will improve enforcement of parental duties to support and alleviate to some extent the problems involved through desertion of families by fathers.

More vigorous enforcement of support laws should be taken through the offices of the district attorneys relative to those parents in the State who default on their obligations for support. This might be accomplished by amendment of the law to provide that district attorneys shall report to the appropriate welfare department disposition or status of cases referred within 60 days of such referral.

2. Restrictive Payments

The A. N. C. law should expressly provide that assistance may be granted in forms other than cash to families determined to be unable to properly handle cash, in accordance with rules and regulations promulgated by the State Department of Social Welfare.

3. County Residence

Eliminate those provisions in the law that require determination of county residence for purposes of ascertaining the source of funds for payment of assistance in individual cases.

Amend Section 1527 of the code to provide that the county in which the recipient resides or is physically present shall provide medical care, eliminating the expensive procedures for intercounty negotiation covering medical care costs furnished through county medical and hospital facilities.

4. Real Property

Amend Section 1520 to provide that real property retained shall be property in use by the applicant or recipient, and to enable the State Department of Social Welfare to establish reasonable limitations on the total value of property which may be encumbered.

5. Personal Property

Amend Section 1521 to provide for the evaluation of personal property in addition to "cash and securities" so that such forms of personal property as automobiles, jewelry, etc., may be evaluated. Provide that the State Department of Social Welfare shall define personal property and establish regulations for its evaluation for purposes of this section.

6. Time Limit for Processing Applications

Amend Section 1550 to reduce the maximum time for processing applications from 90 days to 60 days after date of application so as to minimize loss of federal funds and speed up the processing of applications.

B. ADMINISTRATIVE ACTIONS

1. Application Processing

Analysis should be made of the routine processing and checking of applications to determine its effectiveness throughout the State and to eliminate nonproductive functions that increase administrative costs and delay action. Greater uniformity should be secured in the use of basic procedures and forms and in the time factors involved in processing applications.

2. Employment

The state department should re-examine its policies concerning the employment of mothers and "emancipated children" to the end that a more positive policy to encourage employment and accounting for income of employed family members may be developed.

3. Support by Parents

The state department should re-examine its policies concerning actions to be taken where parents default on their responsibilities for support of families to provide more specific guidance and supervision to the county departments in dealing with these problems, including the evaluation of the administration of these policies so that better methods may be developed to secure support from parents short of actual legal prosecution.

State regulations concerning support by step-parents should be revised to provide more specific guidance to the county departments in securing such support regardless of the legal factors involved. Consideration should be given to the evaluation of the total resources of the family irrespective of the legal status of individual members as a basis for determining whether or not the family is in need and the extent of that need.

4. Standards of Assistance

The state department should establish uniform and specific standards for the determination of circumstances justifying allowances for special needs and should establish cost controls for such items. Through research the actual application of such policies should be tested and there be achieved greater uniformity of treatment of needy families throughout the State.

5. Staffing

As part of its responsibility for supervising administration of the A. N. C. program, the state department should regularly analyze and evaluate the adequacy of staffing and use of staff by the county departments to determine effectiveness of application of policies in determining need, reinvestigating cases, evaluating resources, and other factors that affect the costs of providing assistance and services to needy families.

II. Old Age Security

A. LEGISLATION

1. County Residence

Delete those provisions of Sections 2021, 2187-89 of the code which provide additional appropriations to the counties for purposes of aiding county nonresidents so that aid for all aged persons qualified for old age security is financed on a uniform basis and to eliminate the costly processes of determining county residence.

2. Persons Residing Out of the State

Aged recipients who have left the State to reside in another state should be removed from the old age security rolls when they have resided in the other state sufficient time to qualify for old age assistance under the laws of that state.

B. ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION

The present system permitting retention of income to meet excess needs creates inequalities between those with and without other income. To determine how to remedy this situation for consideration for long-term legislation, the State Department of Social Welfare should conduct detailed studies of the actual application of the present law. These should include a study to determine all unmet needs, the cost of providing excess need allowances, and the extent to which present flat-grant allowances may be in excess of actual need. Based on such studies the department should make recommendations to the Legislature so that it may determine whether persons without income should be granted additional aid to meet excess needs; or whether those with income should have such income deducted to secure equality of aid; or whether the present flat-grant method of assistance should be modified or revised so that assistance is based on individual need.

III. General

A. LEGISLATION

1. Duties of Boards of Supervisors

There should be enacted in the general provisions of the code legislation providing that the boards of supervisors may delegate powers and duties. This would enable the boards to delegate to county welfare directors approval of applications and thus reduce delay in acting on applications.

B. LEGISLATIVE STUDIES

1. Administration

There should be conducted a complete survey of all aspects of administration of the social welfare program. The interim committee assigned this responsibility should be provided with sufficient appropriation so that it may employ qualified and experienced technical and other staff necessary to conduct a detailed study and should have a two-year period for such study. Particular attention should be given the following:

a. Basic administrative responsibilities and authority. This involves the primary question of state administration or state supervision with county administration.

b. Methods of achieving greater uniformity in practice in administration of the program in all parts of the State.

c. Evaluation of efficiency and effectiveness at all levels of administration with specific recommendations for administrative action to simplify the work process and eliminate unproductive procedures and functions;

d. Quantitative and qualitative evaluation of staffing and use of staff, including supervision and administrative planning and direction of the work program;

e. Methods of carrying on operating and program research and reporting.

It would be understood, of course, that in the conduct of such studies the administrative agencies would work closely with the committee staff and that corrective action within the authority of the administrative agencies be taken as rapidly as possible in the course of the studies.

2. Program Analysis

Analysis of the individual programs should be continued on a basis more detailed and specific than possible for this report. In this connection the administrative agencies should be expected to conduct the bulk of the basic research for use of the committee.

3. Reorganization and Simplification of Code

Study should be given to methods for simplifying and reorganizing the present Welfare Code. Insofar as practicable, basic code provisions relating to administration, determining need, appeals, etc., should be consolidated in a single section applicable to all programs. This study should include recommendations for amendment of laws applicable to individual programs to achieve as much uniformity and consistency as possible between programs.

4. Financing Assistance Programs

All factors in the present state-county financial arrangement should be studied to simplify financial processes; evaluating the pros and cons of total state financing or continuation of state-county financing; and arriving at a satisfactory and more uniform base for financing all programs if the state-county method is retained; and the best methods of appropriating funds for social welfare purposes.

The foregoing studies can best be accomplished by an interim committee assisted by a citizens advisory committee as a coordinated study.

C. ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION

Special emphasis should be given by the State Department of Social Welfare to administrative and program research. This should include administrative analysis into all phases of operations; evaluation through program research of the effectiveness of policies and their application; establishment of administrative and cost controls to strengthen and make more uniform the operation of the program in all areas of the State; research into family characteristics and economic and social problems as a basis for developing plans for legislative consideration to improve the public assistance laws; research into causes of dependency and determination of possible solutions; and methods of reporting and interpretation.

REPORT TO ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL WELFARE

on

SOCIAL WELFARE PROGRAM

By

NEWTON R. HOLCOMB, Executive Secretary

Sacramento, California, December 1, 1950

I. MEMORANDUM OF TRANSMITTAL

To: Chairman and Members
Assembly Interim Committee on Social Welfare

From: Newton R. Holcomb, Executive Secretary

Subject: REPORT ON SOCIAL WELFARE PROGRAM

Attached is my report covering analysis of the social welfare program.

There are a number of limitations involved in preparing a report such as this:

1. The length of time afforded for study and the facilities available have been extremely limited. Considerable time has been devoted to the child care center study, thus limiting attention that could be given to social welfare.

2. Administrative agencies have not developed sufficiently their research and reporting so that there is incomplete data available for analysis and evaluation.

3. To meet time limits, it has been necessary to use available data through September, 1950, only. There are indications of certain significant trends due to the stepped up military preparedness program that will not be revealed until data for later months is available. Also the September, 1950, data does not reflect the substantial influence of the Social Security Act amendments, effective October 1st. The state department has been unable to furnish data to evaluate the effects of the revised relatives contribution scale in the O. A. S. program by the time required for this report.

4. It has been impossible to make a detailed evaluation of the area of administration which is of extreme importance in testing policies in application as well as effectiveness in carrying out the basic standards for eligibility and amount of assistance established in the program.

5. Neither has it been possible to consider tax revenue and other obligations of government at the county and state levels in relation to the portion of public assistance costs that each might properly bear. The actual source of funds is of secondary importance in evaluating the effectiveness and adequacy of a public assistance program, but in working out solutions to administrative problems presented and relating the programs to the budgets of the state and county governments, such is important.

What stands out most prominently in the California public assistance program is that there are widely different standards established for identifying and meeting the requirements of various classes of needy persons and that the manner in which this is done is made difficult by a division of administrative responsibility that complicates an already complex administrative task, and adds to costs of the program as well as makes it exceedingly difficult to assess accountability.

These general conclusions are inherent in this limited report:

1. A better balanced assistance program can be achieved, with little or no additional cost:

(a) Costs in certain programs for specific groups of persons can be reduced while continuing to provide a decent and adequate standard of care, and

(b) Assistance can be provided all individuals within these specific programs on a more equitable basis.

This can be done through

(a) Adjustment of certain features of programs that permit of allowances not justified by objective standards of need;

(b) Administrative action to provide for more definite and accurate determination of need, and control of costs in relation to certain types of needs;

(c) Establishment of state-wide standards for application to needy persons now provided aid under 58 variable programs.

2. Certain aspects of existing programs giving rise to abuses attributable to a small portion of recipients can be improved through

(a) Minor amendments in law,

(b) Improvement in administration.

In doing so there should be avoided arbitrary restrictions having no relationship to actual existence of economic need and incompatible with the basic purposes of the public assistance programs.

3. Continuing and intensive study needs to be given to administrative problems and the improvement of the administrative process in all particulars, and especially with relation to:

(a) The influence of administration on actual costs of assistance such as related to accuracy of determination of need, prompt removal of ineligible persons from the rolls, and services to assist persons to utilize their own resources and become self-sufficient;

(b) Reduction in administrative costs and improving services to individuals through establishment of more uniform methods and procedures, simplification of procedure, work planning and supervision of staff, and elimination of unproductive functions;

(c) Greater administrative control to continuously evaluate the effectiveness of policies in their application; as a means toward policy formulation and modification; to evaluate basic legal and administrative factors, etc.;

(d) Administrative and program research to provide a more complete and correlated body of information for analysis so that there may be continuous progress in the administration of assistance and in the identification and treatment of causes of dependency.

Involved in this study of administrative problems is the fundamental question of delegation of authority and responsibility by the Legislature to the state department and the respective counties.

4. Study of the basic problems of dependency and determination of the most effective means of dealing with these problems, including:

(a) Development and modification of the assistance programs to best meet economic need;

(b) Evaluation of preventive and protective social services programs;

(c) Other means of combatting problems of dependency or preventing or minimizing its occurrence.

These studies should be undertaken to provide a sound basis for determining long-range public programming and planning to meet the steadily increasing problems that have been reflected in the growth of public assistance programs over the past two decades.

II. INTRODUCTION

Since the end of World War II there has been a substantial increase in costs of public assistance programs in California as well as throughout the Nation. There has developed growing concern over the costs of these programs as well as recognition of the need for improving them to meet economic need and provide necessary services to people.

Essentially these trends in the public assistance programs are a reflection of basic socio-economic problems. To a lesser extent, they reflect public policy in providing for needy persons and the determination made as to how adequate that care should be.

Increased costs are due to the greater number of persons relying upon public aid and the higher cost per case. Numbers of persons assisted is influenced by employment conditions, population changes, and a great many other factors in our total economy as well as by public acceptance of responsibility for providing for people as demonstrated in the laws. Costs per case reflect the need for providing more dollars to meet increased living costs as well as the determination made as to what standard of living should be provided for needy individuals.

The steadily increasing numbers of persons securing public aid, and resulting increased costs, do not in themselves reflect deficiencies in the public assistance programs. While the reaction of certain groups is to condemn the program and seek to restrict costs by arbitrary eligibility requirements and lowering the standards of aid, this approach ignores the basic problems that contribute to these increased costs.

There must be real concern over these increasing costs This concern must also be weighed against the consequences of failing to provide adequately for those in need. No solution has been reached as to what we can afford or what we cannot afford for public welfare. Part of our problem is that the public assistance programs are carrying a burden that was not contemplated when the modern public welfare programs were established. The major concern should be to determine the reasons for this and to attack basic causes of dependency as well as to examine administration of the programs themselves.

The American public has accepted a responsibility for meeting the minimum needs of those who are incapable of fully supporting themselves. However, we do not have unlimited capacity for doing so without endangering other essential services of government such as education, public health, rehabilitation and employment services, and other public welfare functions which in themselves influence dependency. We cannot afford, without injury to these other essential functions of government and to the basic responsibilities of individuals, to meet requirements on a basis that exceeds a minimum for maintaining persons on a decent and adequate basis. We can afford to meet the minimum needs of all persons who are incapable of fully supporting themselves, and we can better afford this if we seriously attack the basic problems of need, as well as administer the public assistance programs as economically and efficiently as possible consistent with their basic purposes.

The principal factor affecting public welfare case loads is economic opportunity as measured by employment and unemployment. This is illustrated by the great numbers of persons who received various forms of public aid in the depression of the 1930's. When more employment became available and particularly with the beginnings of the defense program in 1940 and 1941, relief loads declined rapidly. Peak employment conditions of the World War II period were accompanied by low points in welfare loads, particularly in family cases.

Population change has a direct influence on public assistance loads. The gross change in population experienced in California in recent years would in itself account for an increased welfare load if the proportion of needy to total population remained the same. Changing character of population in terms of the proportion of aged or of children to the total influences individual programs.

There are many other causes of economic dependency, such as ill health, disability, accidents, emotional instability; limited employable skills; exclusion from the labor market because of race, color, or age; death of the family breadwinner; and increased costs of living which may cause marginal income families to become in need or reduce contributions of relatives.

The overwhelming majority of people in need are in that condition because of factors over which they have little or no control. Few persons need public assistance because of their own wilfull conduct, and few prefer such assistance to being self-supporting and maintaining. This fact was demonstrated during the war when large numbers left the welfare rolls as employment became available and is again reflected in recent trends, particularly in the general relief program, following improvement of employment conditions in the latter half of 1950.

Welfare loads are also influenced by standards of eligibility and the methods of administration of the program. Technical eligibility requirements such as restricted the aid to needy children program prior to October 1, 1949, may keep down total numbers assisted under particular programs irrespective of the volume of economic need. Liberal legal definitions, such as those relating to property and income that persons may retain and be considered in need, will result in greater numbers receiving aid. The actual standards of assistance themselves, being measurements of what are considered basic minimum requirements, may influence the total number of eligible persons. The effectiveness with which legal and administrative standards are applied in individual cases, including the determination of resources, influence welfare case loads and total costs Legislative and administrative practices can create attitudes of dependency which increase welfare loads and costs.

Evaluation of welfare trends requires that they be related to basic socio-economic changes that have direct relationship to the total number of persons in need. These are the primary factors and their solution lies outside the public assistance program itself. But there are certain actions that can be taken within the program to minimize costs.

The basic approach to the total problem is through limiting the need for public assistance by reducing dependency. A United States Senate Committee [1] studying problems of economic security, recently pointed out that one-third ($\frac{1}{3}$) of all families and individuals in the Country had money incomes of less than $2,000 in 1948. For urban areas, the major classifications of these low income persons were· (1) women head of families; (2) aged persons; (3) persons with little skill or education; and (4) disabled persons. These are the same groups that make up the greater portion of the welfare loads.

That committee outlined the following essentials for meeting the problem:

1. Good employment opportunities, including those for persons with limited productivity;
2. Equal opportunity to all to improve and use their own capacities;
3. Breaking the vicious circle process under which poverty and dependency tend to perpetuate themselves, with particular emphasis on educational deficiencies and lack of occupational skills;

These solutions require broad community action and are not within the power or authority of public welfare agencies themselves to correct. The basic responsibility of the welfare departments is to provide financial aid and services when they are needed. It is this responsibility that is the primary concern in preparing this report, which attempts to analyze the present programs in terms of their effectiveness in meeting primary objectives and the extent to which they can be strengthened and improved in doing so.

Fundamentally, the public assistance program is based on the acceptance by the community of its responsibility for providing financial aid and services to those who for one reason or another are unable to maintain themselves. It is not an end in itself, but a means for alleviating suffering and hardship and for helping people to help themselves regain independence and self-sufficiency The basic elements of a sound public assistance program include the following:

1. Persons in economic need should be assisted on the basis of that need and without regard to other factors which have no relationship to the economic need itself;

2 Financial assistance should be based upon standards designed to measure actual need and to provide help on a basis that bears a sound relationship to the costs of minimum but adequate living;

[1] "Low Income Families and Economic Security" Report of the subcommittee on low-income families Joint Committee on the Economic Report Document 146, Eighty-first Congress, Second Session

3. Aid should be granted on a basis that is equitable to all persons in need, and in such form as to preserve self-reliance and self-respect;

4. There should be maximum use of the resources of individuals to help themselves, including use of all types of community resources and agencies available;

5. Emphasis should be placed on providing the services that will help people solve problems causing their need or to rehabilitate them for productive effort and self-sufficiency;

6. Protective services should be provided for children, the aged, and other persons who require such services;

7. There should be continuing research into problems resulting in dependency and into actual application of policies and procedures for administering the program so that preventive programs may be developed and policies and procedures tested in application and adjusted to meet changing conditions.

The California public assistance program does not measure up fully to the foregoing standards. Its development over the years has been on a piecemeal basis and in reality is a series of different programs designed for specific groups of people. Adjustments that have been made in the past have frequently been confined to these separate groups of people rather than on a basis of a total integrated social welfare program for all of the people of the State.

As a result the total program is full of contradictions. Some groups of needy people are treated on a basis that is very liberal in contrast with other states. Others are treated on a basis that would be considered extremely restrictive in many states. Certain persons over age 65 are provided only very limited help because of citizenship or residence factors while others are granted adequate assistance. For technical reasons, children in certain families (aid to needy children) are provided with help on a basis of uniform basic standards while those in other families are helped on a basis varying with the policies of the individual counties of their legal residence.

Administration in California is extremely complicated by the division of responsibility between the state department and the counties. There are not uniform standards of administration and attainment of effective and efficient administration on a state-wide basis is made exceedingly difficult. Neither has there been developed the type of research and analysis through which program operations can be carefully evaluated and interpreted or which can be useful in development of prevention programs.

The basic factor in administering a public assistance program is to determine when need exists and at what level or standard of living the need is to be met.

Varying standards are established by law for the different groups of persons assisted under the categories of assistance established in California. In certain instances the basis for determining when need exists may be considered very liberal. In others it is very restrictive.

The common concept of a needy person is one who does not have sufficient resources or income to support himself even over a relatively short period of time.

Eligibility for assistance is based upon the measurement of the individual applicant against whatever standard of need has been established. In California program it is also based upon other factors relative to the age, citizenship, residence, etc., of the persons applying for assistance.

Many of the problems that have arisen recently are but a natural development following adjustment of the economy following the last war. The wartime reduction in welfare cases was due primarily to extraordinary economic factors inherent in a wartime economy. There are current indications that a similar trend may accompany the present complicated international situation. Such will take pressures off the program through the reduction in cost. The lessening of these pressures should not result in ignoring the basic problems that will again assert themselves but should be used as a means for objective evaluation and strengthening of the program to meet possible future needs.

For the present it would seem advisable to concentrate on securing a better balanced program and for lessening the differences that exist in the separate programs for various groups of needy persons. Strengths existing in individual programs should be retained. Technical or administrative faults that may cause these programs to be liberal in the sense that they do not properly measure need and thus cause unwarranted expenditure of public assistance funds can be corrected. Discrimination toward certain groups of needy persons should be removed to provide a balanced integrated program for meeting the needs of all persons on a more equitable basis. Varying standards applicable to different groups of needy persons need to be modified or eliminated so that the total program can better meet its basic objectives.

Simultaneously greater emphasis should be given to research, both in terms of identifying and evaluating basic causes of dependency and in administrative analysis to improve the processes of determining need, to evaluate standards of assistance and their application, and to streamline operational methods to provide better services and reduce administrative costs.

In this process, there needs to be careful integration of the California public assistance programs with the basic national social security program. Particular emphasis needs to be placed upon relationships of public assistance in California to the national old age and survivors insurance program. A fundamental question is presented as to whether it is advisable for this State to establish its programs on a relatively self-sufficient basis, or whether public assistance is to be considered as a residual form of help to those not protected or receiving insufficient protection against economic need under the national insurance program.

III. PUBLIC ASSISTANCE COSTS

Despite the relatively rapid increase in welfare cases the past few years, the number of cases as of June 30, 1950, was substantially lower than the total relief load of 1940 even though there had been a spectacular growth in the population of the State. The following table shows the more significant trends in welfare cases during that period. In 1940 there was an accelleration of employment due to the defense program. The wartime employment peak was reached in 1945.

In 1940 the bulk of the relief load was being carried under the emergency relief program administered by the State Relief Administration. These cases were those in which there were employable members of the family. This program was discontinued as development of the defense program made it no longer necessary.

Despite manpower shortages during the war and greater availability of employment to aged persons, the old age security cases were relatively constant during the war period. Caseloads in all other programs showed marked declines.

Since the end of the war the total number of blind persons receiving aid has increased to a point substantially above the 1940 level. However, family cases and those of single persons receiving general relief in June, 1950, were substantially below the 1940 relief levels.

In September, 1950, over $27,700,000 was expended for assistance, this representing an increase of approximately $3,300,000 over September, 1949. Sixty-nine percent of these 1950 costs were for the Old Age Security program as compared with 23 percent for aid to needy children, 5 percent for general relief, and 3 percent for aid to the needy blind.

The one-year trend in persons aided by programs reveals a spectacular increase in the aid to needy children program and a substantial reduction in the general relief program. This reduction in general relief was confined to family cases, single person cases having risen during the year. This reflects the transfer of general relief families to the aid to needy children program beginning in October, 1949, as well as improved employment conditions experienced over several months prior to September, 1950. The fact that the general relief single person load did not respond materially to employment conditions indicates that it is made up primarily of unemployable single persons.

The general trend in public welfare expenditures throughout the Country is illustrated by a tabulation of expenditures per inhabitant for the various programs for the fiscal years ended June 30, 1948 and 1949:

Comparison of California with other states in which the expenditure per inhabitant for public assistance was $15 or more for the Fiscal Year 1949 shows that during that year California was relatively high in old age security and low in aid to needy children costs per inhabitant:

Increased costs in recent years have been met primarily from state and federal funds with county financial participation being relatively constant and representing a progressively smaller share in the total expenditures.

Total assistance expenditures in 1949-1950 were 222 million greater than in 1941-1942. The old age security program accounted for about 70 percent of these increased costs.

Costs per Case

Responding to legislative changes and to cost of living increase, average payments per case have increased substantially over those prevailing in 1945 except for the general relief family category. Comparison of costs between various periods has certain limitations since average payments reflect actual grants made and do not measure total requirements as determined by administrative or legislative policy.

The great difference between average costs for general relief and aid to needy children families may be due to several factors. The general relief families may have more outside resources to apply against total need, necessitating smaller payments to meet total requirements. There are no uniform assistance standards for general relief cases, and in many instances it is indicated that only emergency help may be given. A much higher proportion of these cases may be receiving assistance for only part of the month although they are included in determining the total average.

Because of general economic conditions, more resources outside of the assistance payment may be available to families, such as through part-time earnings or help from relatives, in one year than in another.

Average Payments per Case—Month of June

	1945	1948	1949	1950
Old age security	$47.31	$57.09	$70 55	$70.68
Aid to needy blind	47.71	72.41	82.41	82.47

General Relief
Families	60.06	65.01	66.25	63.75
Single persons	27.87	32.78	33.72	35.89

The trend in average payments for aid to needy children more nearly reflects adjustment of assistance payments because of cost of living changes than do those in other programs. In both the aged and blind programs the Legislature has established a minimum-maximum payment amount which is not directly related to assistance standards such as developed for the aid to needy children program.

Average payments for the general relief program cannot be evaluated, either in the trend shown in the program or with other programs because of the great variation in policy in the 58 counties. These averages do not necessarily reflect true monthly averages because of the relatively high incidence of very short-term assistance cases and it is probable that the true monthly average would be higher than is shown by the data available.

IV. AID TO NEEDY CHILDREN

A. INTRODUCTION

The spectacular growth during the past year and a half in case loads and total costs has focused public attention on the aid to needy children program.

Critics of this program have pointed to the rapid increase in the cases since passage of Assembly Bill No. 40 by the 1949 Legislature (effective October 1, 1949) which amended Section 1500 of the Welfare and Institutions Code, redefining "needy child" for purposes of eligibility for aid under the program. These critics have referred to "liberalization" of the law and have alleged too liberal interpretation of it by the Social Welfare Board.

From September, 1949, to September, 1950, the number of children receiving help through this program more than doubled. The trend is shown by the following table:

	September, 1949	September, 1950	Percent change
Total children	63,624	133,384	+109
Total families	26,337	54,348	+114
Children in families	58,277	124,397	+114
Children in boarding homes and institutions	5,347	8,481	+59
Total expenditures	$3,292,083	$6,324,393	+93
Expenditure for families	3,002,212	5,867,173	+96
Expenditure for children in boarding homes and institutions	289,871	457,438	+58
Average grant, family	113.99	107.96	—5.5
Average grant, children in boarding homes and institutions	54.21	53.91	—.8

The principal reason for this increase is that the law was amended in 1949 to make its coverage substantially similar to the federal aid to dependent children program, California being one of the last states to adopt the basic eligibility requirements of the federal act.

These legislative changes had the effect of classifying an additional group of needy families under this particular program. Many families receiving aid under county general relief programs thus became eligible for aid under the A. N. C. program instead of the general relief programs. Much of the increase in case load was thus a transfer of cases from one category of public assistance to another.

This effect should not be surprising, as can be illustrated from the following extracts from reports of the Department of Social Welfare for biennial periods ending June 30, 1940, and June 30, 1946:

"Roughly estimated, from 240,000 to 290,000 children under 18 years of age were in families receiving some form of public assistance or federal security wage at the close of the last fiscal year. It may be stated with some confidence that one out of seven, or one out of eight children under 18 years of age were at the relief level. These numbers give some indication of the extent to which adequate financial care for children is a problem in California." (Department of Social Welfare Biennial Report, July 1, 1938, to June 30, 1940, page 34.)

"Thus, there remains a large group of needy children who are ineligible under the state law and whose care rests entirely on the counties. If the state definitions were broadened to include all children covered under the Social Security Act, the state and federal funds available for these children would assist the counties and result in a more uniform and adequate standard of care for children " (Department of Social Welfare Biennial Report, July 1, 1944, to June 30, 1946, page 33.)

In interpreting recent trends in the A. N. C. program, it is thus necessary to recognize two facts. The number of families receiving this form of assistance was increasing steadily prior to the effective date of the 1949 amendments and had there been no amendment in the law there would have continued an increase in the number of families and children assisted under the program. Secondly, a large portion of the increase that has been experienced since October 1, 1949, has been due to a transfer of cases, because of technical eligibility, from the county general relief loads to the aid to needy children program.

Because of the change in technical eligibility requirements, comparison between the number of A. N. C. cases, or the proportion of the children in the population receiving assistance under this program, before and after the 1949 amendments is only of general significance.

For similar reasons, comparison of case loads in California, or proportion of children aided, with those of other states has extremely limited value. Such comparisons are of little meaning unless they are evaluated in relation to the differences in legal definitions as well as economic variations and different administrative practices between states.

The trends in the A. N. C. program since passage of Assembly Bill No. 40 have been distorted because of the transfer of cases from general relief making it difficult to arrive at specific conclusions as to what the normal trend in the program would have been. It is noted, however, that the rate of increase in cases fell off considerably in the third quarter of 1950, and it can be expected that the increase in cases would level off during the fourth quarter and with continued good employment conditions possibly even decrease. However, actual statistics for the full fourth quarter are not available for this report.

There also has been a radical change in the number of families receiving general relief under the county indigent aid programs. The number of these families declined from 18,864 in September, 1949, to 9,640 in September, 1950.

In both the aid to needy children and general relief programs, the numbers of families being aided was increasing steadily before the passage of Assembly Bill No. 40. This was due to the changes in our total economy following the war. It was a national as well as state trend. Unemployment and population changes were principal factors.

There are close relationships between the general relief family cases and the A. N. C. program. A large proportion of the present A. N. C. load is made up of cases that were on general relief or were potentially general relief cases prior to Assembly Bill No. 40. Most of the cases currently classified into the A. N. C. program are first provided assistance under general relief because of delays in determining technical eligibility for A. N. C.

Comparisons are limited by incomplete information as to composition of the general relief family case load and the basic reasons why families must seek public assistance. It is not known just what proportion of general relief families are those in which there are adults only. Because of the transfer of cases between the programs, there may be some duplication of count in statistics for given months. Eligibility requirements and administrative standards for the general relief program vary considerably between counties, there being no uniform base for determining eligibility or for the standards of assistance. However for general comparative purposes, the trends in both programs have significance.

Variations between counties, due to economic factors as well as differences in availability of county general relief aid, and the effects of the revised A. N. C. program, are demonstrated by the following comparisons for the 12 largest counties:

Aid to needy children families have increased steadily for a period of years and showed a more rapid increase for the six months just preceding the effective date of the 1949 legislative changes. Begininng with October, 1949, they increased at an extremely rapid rate due to transfer of cases from general relief.

The total increase of 40.7 percent in families aided under both programs for the year ending September, 1950, was actually less than the 53.4 percent change in the preceding year. A comparison of total cases in these programs for the months of September for 1948, 1949, and 1950 is as follows:

	General relief families	A. N. C. families	Total general relief and A. N. C. families
September, 1948	11,835	17,622	29,457
September, 1949	18,864	26,337	45,201
September, 1950	9,224	54,348	63,572
Net change September, 1948, to September, 1949	+7,029	+8,715	+15,744
Net change September, 1949, to September, 1950	—9,640	+28,011	+18,371

The general relief program is more sensitive to employment changes than the A. N. C. program because of the technical eligibility factors. General relief family cases have shown definite seasonal changes, reaching a peak in the spring and a low point in early fall. However the total family cases has increased at a steady rate for a considerable period to a peak coinciding with the high unemployment of the spring of 1950. This peak would have been much higher except for the broadening of the eligibility base for A. N. C. The case load has fallen off rapidly in recent months due to improved employment conditions, but would currently be at a much higher figure if the A. N. C. program had not been broadened in 1949.

This broader eligibility base in the A. N. C. program makes it more sensitive to economic change than prior to the 1949 amendments. Now that the bulk transfer of general relief cases has been completed, monthly and quarterly trends in new applications, cases approved, and cases discontinued should have closer relationship to changes in employment conditions, and population changes than heretofore.

The rate of increase in cases under the A. N. C. program for the two-year period ending September 30, 1950, is illustrated by the following figures showing monthly averages for quarterly periods. These figures show the increased rate of applications through September 30, 1949, the very sharp increase for the next six months (this being the period during which there were large transfers of cases already on the general relief rolls), and a gradual decline in the monthly applications since April 1, 1950:

Average Monthly Applications Received, Applications Granted, Applications Pending, and Cases Discontinued, by Calendar Quarters, October, 1948, to September, 1950

	Applications received	Applications granted	Applications pending	Cases discontinued
1948
4th Quarter	1,259	936	2,856	387
1949
1st Quarter	1,732	1,003	3,672	308
2d Quarter	1,555	1,279	3,709	401
3d Quarter	2,851	1,236	5,013	498
4th Quarter	4,672	3,142	9,921	575
1950
1st Quarter	4,582	3,352	10,811	619
2d Quarter	3,543	3,579	7,999	1,055
3d Quarter	2,997	3,036	5,262	1,674

The number of cases discontinued represented over 3 percent of the total case load in the third quarter of 1950 as compared with 1½ percent of the total cases in the fourth quarter of 1948. This illustrates the changing character of the program and its sensitivity to economic changes.

The second and third quarters of 1950 were periods in which there was substantial improvement in general employment conditions. During these periods the average cases discontinued per month showed particularly sharp increases.

It should also be noted that for a period of a year there was a particularly heavy load of pending applications, illustrating one of the administrative problems involved in the program since the changes made by the 1949 Legislature.

Recent increase in the A. N. C. case load in California is not a situation unique to this State. Nationally the aid to dependent children case load decreased substantially during the war as a result of wartime employment opportunities. As reconversion to a peacetime economy took place, the numbers of these dependent families steadily increased. This has been the experience in California although the last years' increase has been more spectacular here than in most states because of the amendment of the law providing for technical changes in eligibility, resulting in the statistical transfer of a great many general relief families to the A. N. C. rolls.

Aid to needy children case loads and costs are directly affected by legislative changes, economic, social, and population changes. Family dependency is directly affected by employment and unemployment; by cost of living changes; by the rate of divorce, desertion, separation, illegitimacy and other social problems affecting family life; and by population change, particularly in relation to numbers of children in the total population.

The basic purpose of the program is to provide minimum security for children in their own homes. It is designed to maintain family life and to provide to needy children deprived of parental care or support the opportunity to live and develop into maturity in a setting that will help them become responsible, contributing members to society

Total families and children assisted, and the costs of aid to them, must be matters of concern. However the basic causes of dependency are products of our total economy and cannot be directly influenced by the aid to needy children program. Recognition and attention to these problems is extremely important, but must be taken separately and apart from the A. N. C. program itself.

Analysis of the aid to needy children program should be based primarily upon whether it provides for realistic measurement of economic need, how effectively that need is met, the extent to which community and family resources are used to assist persons to remain or become self-sufficient, and how economically the program is administered to insure maximum economy while providing for adequate help to fulfill its objectives.

The 1949 amendments have resulted in bringing under this program, with relative uniformity of standards of help, a large group of children who otherwise would be provided assistance through county general relief programs of varying adequacy. It thus provides more equitable treatment and help to these children regardless of the county of their residence in the State. To this extent it has provided greater assurance to these children and their families that the basic public purpose for which the program was established will be carried out.

There still remain many needy families with children who do not have the protection of this program because of its technical requirement that economic need be recognized only where the child is deprived of care or support because of the death, other absence or incapacity of the parent.

There should be considerable research and study into the reasons why families are in want as a basis for preventive or corrective action to minimize economic need. This is the soundest method for reducing public assistance costs—because people are not in need of such help. At this time, however, there is extremely little information available for analysis of the basic problems evidenced by the increasing number of needy families. Likewise there is little information available of the actual administration of this particular program through which a sound evaluation can be made of its soundness in operation to meet the objectives of the program.

The staff has concerned itself primarily with how the program can be better designed and administered to meet the needs that exist in as economical a manner as possible. It recognizes the lack of sufficient data for detailed evaluation, and in many respects its conclusions must be necessarily general because of absence of adequate program research by the operating agencies.

With the basic objective of the program in mind, the staff has sought to evaluate the effectiveness with which these purposes are carried out through administration and the extent to which changes in the law or in its administration can be made to better achieve the objectives with maximum economy to the taxpayer.

The establishment of laws or regulations that deprive needy families of aid on the basis of arbitrary factors that have no direct relationships to economic need will not solve the problems presented. However improvements can be made in administration of the program that will enable it to better fulfill its basic purposes.

B. ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATION

1. General

Finding that a family is eligible for assistance involves several factors, legal and administrative. The laws establish a number of specific conditions that must be met, such as age, residence, death, absence or incapacity of the parent, and limitations upon personal and real property holdings.

To test eligibility of a family on the basis of need, as well as applying technical legal requirements, it is necessary to administratively define need and to investigate and evaluate the circumstances of the applicant family to determine whether it is entitled to aid under these standards.

The State Department of Social Welfare is responsible for establishing the standards, or measurement of need, within limits established by the Legislature, and for setting down the minimum requirements to be met by the counties in securing and evaluating evidence of eligibility for aid.

County welfare departments are responsible for investigating need and determining initial and continuing eligibility, and for providing auxiliary services to families involved.

There are three major areas for consideration in evaluating eligibility requirements:

1. The law as set forth in the Welfare and Institutions Code, and regulations and procedures for implementing the law;

2. Standards established by the State Department of Social Welfare for determining need; and

3. Effectiveness of the county welfare departments in applying the state standards in making the actual determination of need in the individual cases and in providing services that may make it possible for the family to overcome the problems causing economic need.

These three factors cannot be isolated one from the other. The extent to which legal requirements are effective is dependent upon the manner in which they are placed into effect. State rules and regulations should be evaluated with respect to their actual implementation at the county level.

Determination of eligibility may be considered in two principal phases. There are the findings of fact concerning technical eligibility such as determination of age, residence, absence of the parent and incapacity, to meet requirements set out in law. The second phase is the evaluation of resources and requirements of the family to determine whether economic need exists and if so, the amount of assistance to meet that need. These determinations must be made continuously to ascertain whether a family receiving assistance continues eligible or whether circumstances have changed warranting adjustment of the assistance plan. This is the function of administration and may be of greater importance than actual legal framework.

Evaluation of administration of the program is particularly difficult because of the division of administrative responsibility between the state department and the 58 counties The committee has not had the resources to make extensive studies of administration of the eligibility requirements in the various counties. Since there has been insufficient program research at both the state and county level upon which a detailed analysis of administration can be based, the findings of the committee must be somewhat general in nature.

Some critics of the program have contended that state regulations are unrealistic and too liberal, thus causing costs to be excessive. In supporting their case, they frequently cite abuses of the program which are fundamentally problems of administration at the county level. While criticizing the state department for these administrative breakdowns, they also contend that the state department should not exercise as much control over the program as they do under the present law.

The inconsistencies in these arguments point up the difficulty in evaluating the program in operation and determining responsibility and accountability. This is particularly so because of the variation in administrative practice among the counties which in itself may indicate that the state department has not exercised sufficient supervision over the operations of the program and the effectuation and implementation of the policies that it is responsible for formulating.

In its general statement on the problem of determination of eligibility, the state department states in its manual (Sec. C-200):

> "Effective administration of the A. N. C. program depends upon a thorough and accurate determination of eligibility followed by periodic redetermination of continuing eligibility. Determination of eligibility is the process of gathering evidence of the circumstances of the child for whom application is made as related to the conditions of eligibility established for the program, the evaluation of the adequacy and competency of the evidence, and the arrival at a decision as to eligibility, continuing eligibility, or ineligibility. It includes the accumulation and recording of evidence to substantiate the applicant's statement on the application that he believes the child to be eligible. On the basis of the evidence assembled by the applicant and the county, the county shall make the determination or decision as to eligibility or ineligibility."

Effective administration of the A. N. C. program is also dependent upon a skillful exploration of potential as well as available resources of the family, analysis of the basic causes of dependency, and assistance and encouragement to the family in working on these basic causes to remove dependency and so restore the family to self-sufficiency.

Under a mothers-pension type program, such as existed prior to October, 1949, emphasis upon technical factors of eligibility was much more meaningful than now under a program that is sensitive to social and economic factors in the community. The fact that there is a relatively high turnover of cases is indication that the causes of dependency are frequently temporary and that there are many short-term cases included in the program. In recognition of this changing character of the A. N. C. program, greater emphasis should be placed on assisting families to overcome dependency problems and thus hasten the process of their becoming independent and self-directing.

The primary importance of administration is emphasized by the Welfare Director of San Diego County who in a letter to the committee stated as follows:

"As one of those who has administered aid to needy children in this State for many years I believe that Assembly Bill No. 40 and the present aid to needy children law, as such, is very good and is a tremendous improvement over the old aid to needy children law. Our trouble with it to date in every county in California is the fact that it is not yet realized that this new law has made the aid to needy children problem a fast-moving relief program instead of the former 'mother's pension'."

* * * * * * *

"* * * the troubles which counties are having with the present aid to needy children law are directly related to the number of persons employed on administrative staffs. Those counties which carry low caseloads and are able to continue frequent home visits show far less than average increases in caseload and expense. Other counties which expect to carry large caseloads per social worker, as in the old days, are the ones in which caseload and therefore expenditures seems out of control."

2. Investigation of Applications

a. Soures of Evidence

One of the frequent criticisms of the State Social Welfare Board by the county administrative agencies involves the policy that the applicant shall be considered the primary source of evidence in determining eligibility for aid to needy children aid.

This criticism implies that because of state policy, the counties are hampered in making complete and accurate determination of eligibility. It appears intended to place upon the state department responsibility for failures that may exist in making sound determination of need and other eligibility factors.

The State Department Manual (Sec. C-202) states as follows:

> "The applicant shall be the primary source of evidence. Usually he will be able to state his circumstances and those of the child, as related to eligibility, in such a way that will leave no doubt as to eligibility. In those instances in which the applicant is unable to give definite, clear, and complete information which leaves no doubt, or in which evidence other than the applicant's statement is required, the applicant usually has or can secure additional evidence to substantiate his statements. Such evidence in the applicant's possession of which he is able to secure shall be used whenever available."

This policy places the burden of proof on the applicant. It also implies that in most instances the applicant is able to provide full evidence of eligibility and that the applicant's statement can usually be accepted as accurate. However, it recognizes that this is not always the case and provides that while the applicant should be considered the primary source of evidence, doubt will exist in some situations requiring independent gathering or checking of evidence.

In Section C-200 of the manual, it is provided that, "All reasonable sources of evidence shall be diligently examined, and all doubtful or conflicting evidence carefully evaluated, before assistance is denied."

"Since it is the county's responsibility to make an accurate determination of eligibility to assure that a child's needs are met and public funds are properly spent, the basis for the determination, that is, all evidence on which the determination is based, shall be fully recorded * * *."

Throughout the state policy the basic responsibility of the county welfare departments for the determination of fact as to eligibility is stressed. There does not appear to be any conflict between the principle that the applicant be considered the primary source of evidence and the responsibility of the counties for accurate determination of all points of eligibility. There is no rule or regulation that restricts the counties from checking other sources for determination of eligibility, except that the confidential nature of the application shall be protected. In fact some counties appear to go to extreme lengths in routine clearances to determine property holdings, bank accounts, etc., as part of the regular investigating process.

The policy of the state board concerning use of the applicant as the primary source of evidence is not unique to California. It is a common practice throughout the Nation. It is a means of keeping administrative costs in control and minimizing the time required to process applications. It is based upon the fact that the great majority of people are honest and are able to present their situations accurately. At the same time it recognizes that in the interview process doubt will frequently arise, and in such situations other means of investigation and determination of the facts should be utilized.

Any other policy would appear to be unsound and to involve an unwarranted expenditure of administrative funds in making routine checks and clearances not justified by the results attained. Skilled interviewers can detect situations that indicate the need for further investigation in practically all cases. Those few situations in which they may not, usually will be detected at the time of the home visit by the social worker assigned to the case.

It would appear that intelligent and effective administration would require that the applicant be considered the primary source of evidence and that as much of the burden of proof as possible be placed on the applicant. Not only does this simplify and reduce administrative cost, but it places a responsibility on the applicant that has positive values to him and to the program as a whole.

Certainly it is not proper to allege that the state department makes it difficult or impossible for the counties to accurately determine eligibility when the state department has clearly assigned them this basic responsibility and has not restricted them in making whatever investigations they see fit in individual cases. In fact analysis should be made of the cost factors in some of the routine processing and checking of applications at the county level to determine whether these are justified in terms of the results attained.

b. Processing Applications

Unecessary routines not only increase administrative costs but frequently result in the loss of federal funds. A very large proportion of A. N. C. cases are first taken on the county general relief rolls and retained there during the investigation process. They are transferred over to the A. N. C. program when the formalities of determining eligibility are completed.

Under the law (Sec. 1550) a 90-day limit is provided for processing A. N. C. cases. Assistance under the program begins with the first of the month in which the application is approved.

Persons making application for aid are in most cases in destitute circumstances at that time. It is necessary, however, to determine that the technical requirements for classification under the A. N. C. program are met before paying assistance through that program. However in most instances sufficient information is available at the time of the interview to make a presumption of technical eligibility.

Practice in many counties appears to be that a complete and detailed investigation of all eligibility factors must be performed before classifying the case under the A. N. C. program. Thus the cases are first placed on general relief while the investigation is being carried out. Assistance is granted, but on a general relief basis and entirely from county funds.

The process is further delayed by the necessity of securing formal approval of the boards of supervisors on all cases, even though this is a routine procedure in the larger counties with little or no actual scrutiny of the lists by the boards.

The result is that there is a substantial loss of federal funds because of delays in classifying the cases under the A. N. C. program.

A study of a portion of the absent father cases revealed that three-fourths of these cases had been carried under the general relief program prior to their classification as A. N. C. cases. In four cases selected at random in one county, it was found that general relief had been paid for an average of two months before the families were placed on the A. N. C. rolls. There was no question of need in these cases at the time of application. However, extensive routine investigations were made before they were submitted to the board of supervisors for approval.

There should be no reason why the time limit for approval or rejection of applications could not be set at 60 days rather than 90. This would speed up the processing of applications, be of help to the needy recipients, and insure more federal financial participation in these cases.

Procedures can be established to minimize the loss of federal funds by prompt classification of cases under A N. C. where evidence in the initial interview gives a clear presumption of technical eligibility. If continued investigation shows that a small proportion of such cases are not technically eligible, adjustments can be made in claiming federal and state funds for this small group. Such a procedure would insure that the State and counties were receiving maximum federal funds available for cases that are obviously in need and for which the counties, and frequently the State, are providing assistance in any event.

During August, 1950, the average cost per family case was distributed to federal $31.13, State $49.37, county $24. During that month 3,108 families were granted A. N. C. assistance. Studies indicate that approximately 75 percent of A. N. C. cases are given general relief before transferred to A. N. C.

If it were conservatively estimated that only one-half of these 75 percent of cases were on general relief pending completion of processing of A. N. C. applications for technical eligibility and could have been classified under A. N. C. one month earlier, there would have been a loss of $37,110 in federal funds for the one month alone.

The requirements that formal approval of all cases be made by the board of supervisors should be modified. In the larger counties, the boards do not review the cases or take any action except the formal approval of the lists as submitted. Yet this process may delay approval under the A. N. C. program for from two to three weeks.

C. RESOURCES

1. General

Resources of welfare applicants or recipients are of wide variety, including such things as available cash; negotiable securities; pensions and allotments; earnings from employment; equities in property; valuable personal effects which can be turned into cash; free rent; goods in-kind, such as home-grown produce; help from relatives either in the form of cash or goods, such as clothing or payment of certain expenses. There are also many potential resources, particularly employability of a family member.

These resources are of great importance both in terms of actual cost of aid and in their potential utilization for self-maintenance or partial support of the family.

The actual cost of providing assistance can be reduced if the volume of resources of applicants accounted for is increased. These resources when evaluated are deducted from the total family requirements in determining the actual payment to be made. By using potential resources constructively a family may be helped to self-sufficiency thus enabling the termination of assistance to the family.

The importance of accurate and complete determination of resources and fully accounting for them cannot be overemphasized. It is part of the administration of assistance that needs constant evaluation and emphasis so that there is maximum utilization of the resources that families have, with a consequent reduction of the cost of aiding those families.

Little information is available as to what types of resources are being accounted for, their value, and the proportion of the case load affected. Neither is there available data concerning resources that can be analyzed to determine effectiveness of administration of this phase of the program, including comparative data between counties.

A study of 494 absent father cases indicated that these families had average resources of $8.40 that were deducted in determining the actual amount of aid paid. This at least illustrates the importance of resources from a cost point of view since $8 40 average deduction for 54,000 cases would represent $453,600 a month that need not be paid from tax funds to provide for the needs of these families. Any increase in the value of resources or in accounting for resources that are present but not evaluated will result in lowering the costs of the program.

State regulations provide that "All income and resources available for the support of the child shall be determined and related to total needs to establish that a child is 'needy'. Potential income and resources shall be explored and developed so that they can be made available and related to needs."

The state manual contains a lengthy description of various types of resources and methods of evaluating certain resources for purposes of determining value. The extent to which these state regulations are effective in actual administrative practice has yet to be determined.

To determine how effectively state policies are being carried out, there should be considerable research and evaluation of the actual application of these policies by the county administrative agencies. As part of its supervisory role, and as a means of insuring that costs of the program are kept to a minimum, the State has a responsibility for continuous evaluation of all phases of the determination and accounting for resources in administration of the program.

Since little emphasis has been given to this from the point of view of actual administration, it is likely that study and evaluation of the program in operation will reveal possibilities of decreasing assistance costs through increasing the value of resources that may be deducted from total requirements in determining assistance costs. In fact it is quite possible that material savings in funds can be realized through continuous emphasis of the need for careful and thorough exploration of resources and accurate accounting for them in determining assistance payments.

From data now available, it is impossible to determine how effectively resources are being determined and accounted for. It is an important function of the supervisory authority to make such determinations to assure itself that policies are being properly carried out and to enable it to evaluate existing policies and make them more effective.

2. Real Property Resources

Under Section 1520 of the code, a child or family may be eligible for assistance if they meet all other tests, even though they possess real property with a combined assessed value, less all encumbrances of record, of not more than $3,000.

In its regulations, the State provides that property owned in other states, or in foreign countries, shall be included in determining the total assessed value of all property.

Neither in the law or the state department regulations is there consideration of the use made of the property except that if income is derived it is considered in determining the net assistance payment to the recipient.

Property exemptions in public assistance programs are generally to enable families to retain that property needed and utilized for living purposes. They protect the family against being forced to dispose of property of nominal value which is needed for normal requirements of the family.

There would seem to be few justifiable reasons for permitting families to retain property not in use for normal living requirements or producing income to provide partial self-maintenance. Certainly no hardship arises if property not actually in use is disposed of, the family utilizing the proceeds for living requirements in lieu of public assistance.

Little information is available concerning property holdings of A. N. C. recipients. What data are available from a limited survey of "absent fathers" cases indicates that only a very small percentage of families have real property of substantial value. The following data were reported in the study of absent father cases conducted by the Social Welfare Department in August, 1950:

Assessed value of real property
None	447 Cases
$1-499.99	16
$500-999.99	11
$1,000-1,999.99	10
$2,000-2,999.99	5
Not reported	5
Totals	494

Amount of encumbrances on real property
None	458 Cases
$1-$999.99	6
$1,000-1,999.99	3
$2,000-2,999.99	7
$3,000-3,999.99	6
$4,000-4,999.99	0
$5,000-5,999.99	1
$6,000-6,999.99	3
$7,000-7,999.99	3
$8,000-8,999.99	1
$9,000-over	2
Not reported	4
Totals	494

Even though few families might hold property not actually in use, the law and/or regulations should limit property exemptions to that property which is in use and needed by the family.

Where the family may have property holdings not actually used for living requirements, a flexible rule to provide for evaluating the advantages and disadvantages of retaining such property should be in effect. Even though income may be derived from such property, it might be advisable from the public point of view to require that the family dispose of the property and use the proceeds for maintenance.

Provision in the law deducting encumbrances in determining total value based on the assesment raises questions. The purpose of a limitation on assessed value is to provide some measure of what is considered a reasonable maximum value of property holdings that should be permitted a family receiving public aid. It would be possible to hold considerable property, with encumbrances, in some instances. In actual operation, certain families are allowed funds in lieu of rent to pay off such encumbrances Thus they accumulate equities in property while receiving assistance In other situations where equities have been established, failure to consider encumbrances might result in loss of the equity and create hardship.

In this situation it would appear desirable to enable the administrative agency to establish policies for determination of the limits on assesed value so that the total property holdings can be kept within amounts considered reasonable for lower income families.

3. Personal Property

Under Section 1521 of the code, cash and securities can be retained to a value not exceeding $600. Actual cash holdings by A. N. C. families appears to be rare and indications are that the great majority of these families have little or no resources at the time of application. This is evidenced by the large percentage of such cases assisted under the county indigent relief programs before final determination of eligibility for A. N C. It is also demonstrated by the following record of cash and securities owned by families in the limited number of "absent father" cases surveyed by the Social Welfare Department in August, 1950:

Cash and Securities Owned

Total cases in survey	494
None	434
$1 to $25	21	$100 to $200	10
$25 to $50	4	$200 to $300	8
$50 to $100	15	$300 and over	2

Personal property is defined as "cash and securities." It is permissible under the regulations to retain certain types of income as personal property, limited of course to the total ceiling of $600.

Property such as automobiles is not evaluated and no mention is made of the determination of need for a car or of limitations on value of cars if possessed. The law (Section 1521) refers only to "cash or securities" in providing the personal property exemption. It does not restrict the administrative agency from establishing policy covering treatment of other forms of personal property of value including both its utilization to meet needs of the family and ceiling values on such personal property.

There is public criticism because assistance recipients retain cars of more than nominal value. Regardless of the justification of such criticism or whether such situations actually exist in any appreciable number, it does seem that assistance policies should provide for the evaluation and limitation on such property.

Personal property might be more broadly defined than "cash and securities" both in the law and in regulations. The administrative agency, in the absence of a strict and detailed definition by law, could provide for restricting holdings of such types of personal property of value as automobiles, jewelry, or other items in excess of commonly considered needs of individuals.

In many situations it is justifiable that cars be retained due to transportation difficulties, health problems, etc. However, limits on the value of such cars should be established, and the determination of whether or not they be retained defined in terms of the need for these by the individual families. Automobiles of excessive value or not a necessity to recipients, jewelry of exceptional value, etc, might well be converted to cash for use for family maintenance before assistance from public funds is granted.

4. Income Resources

Identification and accounting for all types of income resources is one of the most important aspects in administration of public assistance The value of these resources, taken into account in determining the actual assistance payment, is an important factor in over-all costs. The development and use of resources is a positive means of having families help themselves, and of encouraging them to become self-maintaining Good administration requires a thorough exploration of available resources, evaluation of potential resources, and encouragement to the family to utilize all of its resources for its maintenance The thoroughness and skill with which this is done reflects not only in the cost per case and the total number of cases on the rolls, but is an instrument for avoiding creation of attitudes of dependency in recipients and for helping them to help themselves.

a. Employment of Mothers

It is the intent of the A. N. C. program that the mother be able to remain at home and provide the care needed by her children. Departmental policy states "The mother shall not be required to work to provide partial or full support for her children."

Mothers with older children in school may be perfectly able and willing to work to provide partial or full support for their families without endangering the welfare of the children, if encouraged to do so Such self-support should be encouraged so long as such employment is not detrimental to the welfare of the children. Departmental policy might well recognize that there are situations where it is perfectly proper and desirable for the mother to work and thus provide positive leadership and guidance to the county departments in identifying such situations.

In some instances other relatives are in the home who could provide care and supervision for the children while the mother was at work Where such exists, efforts should be made to encourage the mother to work if she is able This is not prevented by state regulations or state policy. However, the state policy is stated in negative form and as such may discourage county social workers from dealing positively with such cases.

b. Employment of Children

(1) Earnings of "Emancipated" Minors. State regulations provide that "earnings of a minor child shall be considered income to the family budget unit unless the child is emancipated." This emancipation is achieved by a relinquishment by the parent to the child of the right of controlling him and receiving his earnings. A child not living under the parental roof is considered to be emancipated if he is using his earnings for his own support.

Since the child, whether emancipated or not, is part of the family unit, his earnings can be considered a possible resource for the family. Soliciting contributions to the family from earnings of minor children should be handled with discretion. However, it is proper to encourage family responsibility by children and such is in keeping with the principles of the program of strengthening family relationships.

This emphasis on the legal "emancipation" of the child, and thus on his lack of liability for helping the family may be a negative approach. There are indications that the fact that a child is "emancipated" is accepted by many county social workers as a final determination without effort to ascertain whether the child can and is willing to contribute to support of the family.

If the child is living at home, he is expected to pay the cost of his food and a pro-rated share of common expenses, such as rent, utilities, and household operation expenses. Such amounts are deducted from the total family budget. However, positive efforts should be made to secure voluntary contributions to the total family maintenance where the child is able to do so.

(2) Other Children. Little attention is given to the possibility of minor children contributing to the support of families through part or full-time employment. Where such children are able to work in suitable employment and without interference with schooling, they should be encouraged to do so.

Since the earnings of minor children (unless emancipated) are taken into account in determining assistance payments to the family, a problem of incentives for such children to work arises. If total earnings are accounted for and deducted from the assistance payment that otherwise would be made to the family, incentive to work will frequently be killed.

This poses a particularly difficult problem. Federal requirements relative to equal treatment of needs of all recipients may make it impossible to permit automatic retention of a specific portion of earnings by such children. However, incentives are possible through permitting retention of certain earnings as expenses incidental to employment, and these are provided for satisfactorily in state regulations, to cover such items as extra food and clothing requirements and educational funds.

D. SPECIAL PROBLEMS

1. The Absent Father Problem

Of all issues involved in the A. N. C. program, the one concerning the absent father has evoked the most discussion and criticism. Much of the public attack on the present A. N. C. program has revolved around this particular problem.

Since 1949 legislative changes in technical eligibility for classification of needy families under the A. N. C. program removed the requirement of three years absence of the father, many critics interpret the spectacular increase in the A. N. C. case load to this particular factor.

Without doubt the absence of the father because of desertion, separation or divorce has become one of the major problems in the dependency of families. Approximately half of the aid to dependent children families throughout the Nation are on the relief rolls because of the absence of the father for reasons other than death. It is the primary factor in dependency of California A. N. C. families.

In considering this problem objectively it is necessary to bear in mind that the purpose of the program is to help children who are deprived of parental support and care and in so doing to maintain and strengthen the family. The granting of financial assistance in itself does not fulfill the objective. There must also be efforts to reunite the family where this is possible.

Broken homes are the product of many influences in our social economy. Desertions and separations and divorces occurred before there was an aid to needy children program. These have increased because of the dislocation of family life and the general impact on our whole social life of war and and changes in social values accompanying developments of the past decades.

The public assistance program in itself does not cause these disruptions in family life. In itself it cannot solve the basic problems that create these social calamities. However, it can provide some basis of security for the children who are the innocent victims of broken homes and can be an instrument through which some of the damage can be repaired and families reunited or placed upon a sounder footing so that they can regain independence and self-direction.

While in some instances the public assistance program has been indicted as causing or contributing to family dislocation, it cannot be properly charged with this responsibility. Rather the total community, including our schools, churches, social agencies, press, and all of the other social forces, must assume responsibility.

Deprivation of parental support or care is only one of the factors that makes families eligible for public aid. It is a technical eligibility factor separate from the fundamental one of need. Actual financial need must exist and deprivation of parental support in itself does not make any family or child eligible for A. N. C. assistance. In fact the great majority of these "absent father" families would be eligible for relief under the county general relief programs. Their inclusion in the A. N. C. program is a technical classification which is advantageous to the State in view of federal financial aid available as well as the better standard of care than is generally provided under the county general relief programs.

There has been considerable criticism of the 1949 legislation (Assembly Bill No. 40) because it removed the time limit of three years absence in determining eligibility for A. N. C. The elapsed period of absence of the father has little bearing in determining whether a family is in economic need. If the family is needy, it makes little difference whether the father has been absent one month, one year, or three years. Restrictions denying eligibility for A. N. C. assistance on the basis of the length of time the father is absent will not solve the problem of providing for needy families.

The major problems presented are how to avoid collusion between parents for the purpose of securing public aid fraudulently and steps to be taken to make fathers (or mothers) assume and carry the responsibility for caring for their children. It is recognized that enforcement of parental obligations is a difficult thing, and particularly so when the parent who abandons completely breaks off all ties with the family. It is generally agreed that there should be penalties for the abandoning parent—although making these effective is another problem. However, in establishing penalties, they should not be visited upon the children by denying aid to the family because of the act of the parent, particularly in establishing fixed time limits for absences before economic need can be recognized.

A better understanding of the problems involved can be secured through review of a survey of absent father cases recently completed by the Social Welfare Department. A 30 percent random sample study was made of all absent father cases where absence was less than one year prior to application and in which A. N. C. applications were approved in the three-month period December, 1949, to February, 1950. The total cases in the sample was 494. Total approved A. N. C. applications involving fathers absent for less than one year during the three-months period was 1,645, representing 16 7 percent of all A. N C. applications approved during that period.

This survey covered only those families in which the fathers had been absent less than one year prior to application for aid. This is a particularly important group since proposals are being made for establishment of period of six months or one year as arbitrary requirements before eligibility for A. N. C. can be considered

The survey was conducted by the staff of the Social Welfare Department who read the actual case records involved in each of the counties

Of this group of A. N C. families, it was found that 374 or 76 percent had received county general relief prior to being determined eligible for aid to needy children aid. One hundred seventy-three (173) of these families received general relief during the period their A. N. C. applications were being investigated. The other 201 were receiving general relief prior to making application for A. N. C., and for the following periods:

One month, or less	34
Two months	41
Three to six months	70
Six months to one year	56

Major sources of support of these families for the twelve months preceding absence of the father was shown as follows:

Earnings of father	251
Other income of father	8
Earnings of both parents	49
Earnings of mother	64
By relatives or friends	55
General relief	33
Unknown and other	34

These absent fathers were classified in terms of the circumstances in the absence, as follows:

	Number	Percent
Unmarried parents	123	25
Desertion by father	132	27
Separation	107	21
Divorce	70	14
Penal institution	62	13

Of the cases in which the length of absence was recorded in the case record, 63 percent had been absent less than three months prior to application. The breakdown of the 451 cases where length of absence was recorded was:

Under three months	284
Three to six months	79
Six months to one year	88

Most of these families were border-line economically and when the father deserted there was little available to tide the family over.

Regulations of the state department provide that continued absence of the parent from the home implies a clear disassociation of one or both parents from the normal family relationships. These absences are classified as follows:

1. Divorced and living apart;
2. Separated—legally or by bona fide agreement;
3. One or both parents deserted;
4. Marriage annulled;
5. Parents not married and not maintaining home together;
6. Parent confined to a penal or correctional institution.

The responsibility is placed upon the county welfare department to determine that there is actually continued absence of the parent.

Persons conducting the case review determined that 373 of the cases (exclusive of fathers in penal institutions) involved clear-cut disassociation of the parent, that 26 were not clear-cut and that 34 were questionable. Thus, they raised questions as to effectiveness of the county welfare departments in determining continued absence of approximately 14 percent of the cases involved in the study.

Since it is expected that action will be taken to determine the whereabouts of the absent parent and to secure support of the family, it is important to examine data from the study on these points. Almost 50 percent of the absent parents involved were in the State. Less than 20 percent were making any contributions to the families.

Whereabouts of absent parent		Contributions of parent
Unknown	192	None	390
Community	122	Own initiative	39
County	66	Court order	38
State	57	County request	12
Out of state	57	Other	4
		Unknown	11

Seventy of the families included in the study were receiving A. N. C because of absence of the father due to divorce. In divorce cases support of the family is considered by the court. Yet only 38 fathers were contributing on the basis of court orders. Presumably inadequate provision for support was made by the courts or the courts were unable to enforce their own orders of support.

In about twenty-four percent (24%) of the cases, the mother had taken legal action against the absent father. While only 93 of the fathers were known to be contributing, legal action had been taken in 204 of the cases:

No legal action taken	264
By mother, before application	113
By mother, after application	6
By county, before application	53
By county, after application	28
Other legal action	4
Unknown	26

One thousand forty-four children were involved in these 494 cases of absent fathers and the total persons considered in determining the assistance grants, including mothers, was 1,649. The average need per family was determined as $116 22 as of May, 1950, although the average grant paid was $108.82; the difference representing other income available to these families.

The records show that in 434 of the 494 cases the families had no cash or securities at time of application. Forty families had less than $100; 10 between $100 and $200; nine from $200 to $300; and one family had $526 in cash resources.

Typical of the unstable basis upon which many of these families were founded are the following comments relative to absence of the father as recorded in a small random sample of the schedules from two of the largest counties:

1. Forced marriage—never established home together—whereabouts of father unknown.
2. Father jailed, divorce secured. Partial support of family by mother.
3. Father returned to legal wife after separation and unable to contribute to illegitimate child as unemployed.
4. Father accustomed to desert family, not interested in children.
5. Long history of marital discord. Father unstable, alcoholic.
6. Irregular support by husband (15 jobs in 3 years). Spends money on self only. Separation forced by wife.
7. Father went to Nevada to seek work, unheard of since—alcoholic.
8. Father's identity unknown.
9. Never lived together—fathers whereabouts unknown.
10. Father in state prison.
11. Father disappeared in June, 1949, when learning of pregnancy of mother.
12. Whereabouts of father unknown. Children removed by police department from "unfit home."
13. Father disappeared—embezzlement from employer.
14. Unmarried parents, whereabouts of father unknown.
15. Alcoholic history—nonsupport—unhappy home. Father sought reconciliation, then left home. Father immature.
16. Common-law marriage. Father arrested for wife beating. Father unemployed, seeking reconciliation.

It is noted that in approximately 15 percent of the cases, the family relationship is classified as "casual." One hundred twenty-three absences of unmarried parents were reported with 72 classified as "casual." This latter figure represents those cases in which the father and mother did not maintain a home and a child was born out of wedlock. The remainder of the unmarried cases would be considered as common law relationships in which the parents did live together.

There has been some criticism of aid to these unmarried mothers and their children on the basis that the State is encouraging immorality and illegitimacy. Of course, children have been born out of wedlock for a long time, and long before modern public welfare programs were established. This represents a social problem that cannot be charged to the public welfare program. However, the A. N. C. program does provide positive protection to the mother, the child, and the State, through providing assistance to this group.

The committee received testimony from representatives of organizations primarily concerned with the problems of these unmarried mothers, including those of the Catholic Church and the Salvation Army. These representatives emphasized the social and economic values of aid to this group of mothers and made the particular point that such aid does not contribute to immorality.

Actually the basic problem presented by these situations is through securing recognition of responsibility by the father. Punishment of the mother and the child through denial of assistance or removal of the child from the mother can serve no useful social purpose, and most certainly will offer no solution to the basic problems involved.

Breakup of the family does not appear to have any close relationships to the length of the marital union and occurs in long-time marriages as well as in those of short duration, as indicated by the following table showing the length of the marital union prior to the current absence of the husband:

Unknown	12	3 to 4 years	46
Casual	72	4 to 5 years	31
Under 1 year	25	5 to 10 years	100
1 to 2 years	35	10 years and over	130
2 to 3 years	43

Neither does state residence appear to be a particular factor in this situation as indicated by the following record of state residence of the absent fathers in the 494 cases surveyed:

None	2	5 to 10 years	104
Under 1 year	1	10 to 20 years	65
1 to 2 years	9	20 years and over	79
2 to 3 years	18	Unknown	181
3 to 5 years	35

These cases studied, while limited to applications for A. N. C. approved during the three-month period from families in which the father had been absent one year or less, may be considered typical of all absent father cases on the A. N. C. rolls. Many of those covered in the survey are probably no longer on the assistance rolls as the persons evaluating these cases considered 114 or 23 percent of them to be short-time assistance cases. Others have been added since the survey was made, since divorces, separations, and desertions are constantly occurring and resulting in economic hardship for families.

In testimony before the committee in September, 1950, the State Director of Social Welfare estimated that the duration of absence of these fathers was as follows:

Less than six months	20%
Six months to one year	12%
One year to three years	30%
Over three years	38%

A survey made by the Los Angeles County Department of Charities covering 9,565 A. N. C. cases active in August, 1950, and in which applications were accepted on and after September 1, 1949, shows the following primary causes of dependency:

Deserting fathers	975—10%
Absent parent (death, incarceration, deportation, divorce, separation)	2,409—25%
Incapacitation of parent	1,197—12%
Unmarried mother	723— 8%
Cessation of employment	1,282—13%
Caretaker need in the home	610— 7%
Insufficient income	2,369—25%

In its report of this survey, the county makes the following statements concerning the deserting fathers:

"Many statements have been made to the effect that the 'deserting father' is the primary cause of dependency in the increased case load in A. N. C. A careful study of all cases added since the new law, proves this is not the case and that other reasons are the cause of most applications for assistance.

"A careful analysis of the above mentioned percentages, brings to light the fact that only 7 percent of the total number of cases opened since September 1, 1949, could be clearly called desertion cases, which desertion had taken place in less than a three-year period. Of this group, two types of desertions undoubtedly occur: (1) representing the far greater number, were bona fide completed desertions at the time they occurred with no expectation of a return and subject to proof of this condition; (2) a very small group, infinitesimal in fact, comprised desertions that could be properly classed as collusion cases.

"To change a good law on a showing as meager as this would, in the opinion of the officials of the County of Los Angeles, represent very discriminatory legislation.

"Further evaluating the time the deserting fathers have been absent, establishes that most of them have been absent for more than three years. Proposals will be made to you to reduce the waiting period to six months. Should this be done, it will be meaningless. Such arguments can only be considered as 'The tail wagging the dog'."

The purpose of the A. N. C. program is to meet situations in which there is family breakdown in order that the children may be adequately provided for and have an opportunity for education and social participation so that they may grow into responsible adulthood. Its purpose is also to preserve and strengthen family life by enabling the mother to care for her children and providing a basic minimum security for the family. It can be and is used in reuniting families, both through its economic aid and the social services that must necessarily accompany financial assistance for effective administration of the program.

However, the problems presented by desertion of the father, and to some extent by divorce and separation, can be minimized, thus reducing the costs of the A. N. C. program and providing a sounder basis of protection for the families and serving the social purpose of maintaining family responsibility.

A three-way attack on this problem is necessary. More preventive work is possible so that family breakdowns may be avoided. Legal machinery needs to be strengthened so that parental responsibilities may be better enforced for the protection of society as a whole. Improved administration of the public assistance program can, in particular, minimize the problems that are involved.

(a) Community Responsibilities for Prevention

Basically, the total community must bear responsibility for the greater proportion of family breakdowns. Much of the family discord, problems of immaturity and irresponsibility of individuals, etc., are products of our total society. The "mistakes" that result in unstable marriages, illegitimacy, immorality, and irresponsibility are largely the product of their environments. These problems need to be approached through education, religion, law enforcement, and social agencies and other community organizations, and by individual members of the community in their role as parents

Where families are on an unstable foundation, skilled social services rendered in the early stages and before the breakdown of the family may save the situation and strengthen the family. Early detection of such situations and providing necessary services, particularly through private social agencies, makes for prevention of dependency through family breakdown.

(b) Legal Action

While there is clear legal responsibility of the father, there are a number of problems involved in enforcement and application of the law.

It has been repeatedly brought to the attention of the committee that the district attorneys are reluctant to act on absent father cases referred to them by the social welfare agencies This lack of enforcement makes the present law meaningless and results in the State assuming a burden of care that certain financially able parents should carry.

Where fathers cross state lines, there is no compulsion that can be brought to bear to make them assume responsibility for their children This can be corrected to some extent by enactment of a uniform support law similar to those passed by many other states and providing for reciprocal action with other states in controlling this problem.

In situations of divorce, courts needs to give careful attention not only to making adequate provisions for support of families but for enforcing such support orders The enforcement of these orders is a primary responsibility of the courts Assistance is being granted to many families because the parent under court order is defaulting on his payments. The solution is not to reduce or terminate assistance, thus inflicting hardship on the family, but to secure enforcement of the court order or its modification if its terms cannot be carried out.

Provisions of the present aid to needy children law should be continued without establishment of arbitrary restrictions as to length of absence of the parent. Assistance to these families should be based upon current economic need without distinction as to how long the parent may have been absent.

(c) Administrative Action

The primary function of the administrative agencies should be in accurate determination of economic need; eliminating situations in which there may be attempted fraud or collusion between parents; in locating absent parents and securing initiation of voluntary or legal actions to have them assume responsibility where able; and through providing social services to the families receiving assistance as a basis of helping them to overcome the problems of dependency and become self-sufficient.

There is criticism of the administration of this program, some of it valid. The State Social Welfare Board has the basic responsibility for establishing the policies and the counties for implementing those policies. Improvement at both levels in what is a difficult administrative relationship is indicated.

State regulations concerning the absent father are rather general and leave to the counties the primary responsibility for administration of this aspect of the program, with little specific guidance from the State as to how this administrative responsibility shall be carried out.

State regulations provide that in determining deprivation of parental support or care, "legal action against an absent parent or action to locate an absent parent or to establish paternity of a child of unmarried parents is not required," on the basis that such actions "might result in permanent severance of family relationships" rather than to strengthen family ties.

Emphasis is of course on protection of the child. This in many situations is thoroughly justified. However, the determination of when not to take action to locate an absent parent, to establish paternity, or to take legal action requires a high degree of judgment and careful analysis of the prospective injury to family relationships or to the child and should be used with extreme caution, particularly in a situation where state funds are being used for support of the child because of a default of parental obligations.

The policy—or its affect in application—may be somewhat modified by other regulations providing that the county make referral to the proper legal agency for obtaining financial support from the absent parent "unless the county determines that such action would be unproductive or would jeopardize the welfare of the child." This leaves the determination in the hands of the county with little guidance from the state agency as to application of its policy by definition of what is considered action that would jeopardize the welfare of the child.

It is optional with the counties as to how aggressive they will be in enforcing support of putative fathers. Such action is not necessary where the county determines that such efforts would be contrary to the best interest of the families or children involved, including those of the putative father other than involved in the assistance case.

In some quarters there has been considerable criticism of the state board implying that it is at fault for existence of loose administration of the A. N. C. program. At the same time it is criticized by these same parties for interfering in the administrative prerogatives of the counties. Actually the State is at fault for not sufficiently supervising the administration of the program at the county level, and for not establishing more specific regulations for the purpose of handling the absent father situations.

Basic administrative responsibility has been left in the hands of the counties. Most of the administrative weaknesses must then be the responsibility of the individual counties. If there is fraud and collusion, the correction of this condition is a primary responsibility of the individual county welfare departments.

It was noted in the survey schedules covering the sample of absent father cases that in many instances the information recorded in the record by the county workers was inadequate for determination as to the alleged desertion or its causes and in some instances showed little or no effort to contact the absent fathers. In several instances there was information in the record placing doubt as to whether the father was actually out of the home or whether there was desertion in fact but with little evidence of follow-up investigation.

A primary problem in administration is lack of sufficient staff to maintain contact with A. N. C. families in many of the counties. Even with sufficient staff it will not be possible to detect all situations of collusion; however, they can be kept at an absolute minimum. But in situations where case workers are responsible for over 100 A. N. C. families, and in some instances as many as 145 cases, it is physically impossible for the workers to maintain frequent enough contact with the families or to provide corollary services that might correct the basic causes of dependency.

If the A. N. C. program, and particularly the difficult absent father cases, is to be effectively and economically administered it is necessary that sufficient staff with adequate training be available in each of the counties and that sound administrative planning be carried out. In some instances, particularly where there are questions as to the actual absence of the father from the home, or his ability to contribute to the family, frequent contact by the case worker is essential This can be accomplished through good work planning and supervision, provided a reasonable total case load is assigned to the worker.

There is no easy or complete answer to this absent father problem, particularly for those cases involving desertion. However, the problem can be minimized considerably by more effective administration. Under the present delegation of responsibilities for administration, the primary problem is to effectuate better management and administrative method at the county level.

2. The Unborn Child

State regulations define "child" as including "the unborn child if pregnancy has been verified by a physician's oral or written statement." This apparently has caused criticism in certain quarters, although it has been standard practice throughout the country and is recognized in regulations covering federal participation in the aid to needy children program.

In terms of numbers, this is an extremely minor factor in the A. N. C. program. A survey as of August 1, 1950, conducted by the state department through the county welfare departments revealed only 468 such cases. In 253 of these the mother had other children so would have qualified for A. N. C. on the basis of these children rather than the unborn child.

Costwise, this is also a very minor factor. Actually, the basic assistance grant provided is for the mother. Some additional allowance may be made for food because of a pregnancy diet recommended by a physician. The county welfare departments are authorized to provide funds for a layette for the unborn child and such necessary furniture as a crib.

The average grant in August, 1950, for the pregnant mother without other children was $61.90 and for the mother with other children $108.12 which cost figures are consistent with grants to other families.

There is, of course, a real financial advantage to the counties in having these cases classified under the A. N. C. program since the needy mother would generally be eligible for general relief assistance if this were not the case By classifying them under the A. N. C. program, federal funds are available on behalf of the unborn child, and the state participates in the cost of providing assistance to these needy mothers.

There are positive social values in providing for these mothers under the A. N. C. program Where the father dies, is incapacitated, or deserts the mother faced with the problem of pregnancy as well as loss of income from the father is assisted and relieved of anxieties attendant to the loss of income when she herself could not support herself and family. For the unmarried mother, the provision of this assistance relieves the considerable pressures as to arrangements for the disposal or adoption of the baby, helps her in adjusting to the problem of unmarried motherhood and her future responsibilities, and assures that she will have an adequate diet and care.

This is a minor aspect of the A. N. C. program and one that does have very positive values. This provision for assistance under the A. N. C program has been strongly supported by church groups and social agencies concerned with the problem of unmarried mothers and illegitimate children These agencies believe that protection is best provided through the A. N. C. program because of the residence requirements and other restrictions under the general relief program that would discriminate against many of these mothers at the time of their most urgent need.

3. Stepfathers

One of the factors for determining whether a needy child may receive assistance under the aid to needy children category is the deprivation of parental support or care. The word "parent" has been determined to mean "either the mother or the father, natural or adoptive, whether married or unmarried."

The presence of a stepfather in the home does not disqualify the child as being "deprived of parental support or care." Until October 1, 1950, where a stepmother was in the home the child was considered deprived of parental support or care. However, by state regulation this was terminated and where the natural father and a stepmother are in the home the children are no longer considered deprived of parental support or care.

Stepparents have no legal responsibility for the support of the stepchildren even though able to do so. State regulations state: "However, inclusion of the stepfather in the county's planning with the family may increase his interest in giving needed care and guidance to his stepchild. He may also, voluntarily, provide partial support if he is able." The stepfather is responsible for support of the mother even though he may be unwilling or unable to contribute to the financial support of the stepchildren.

The unwillingness of some financially able stepfathers to support their stepchildren has given rise to considerable criticism of the A. N. C. program. In such instances public aid may be granted on behalf of the stepchildren even though the stepfather has sufficient income for support of the entire family.

Approximately 8 percent of the total A. N. C. families involve a stepfather. A study conducted by the State Department of Social Welfare as of August, 1950, covering a 10 percent sample of all stepfather cases indicated that about eighty-one percent (81%) of these stepfathers are employed. Ten percent (10%) were classified as unemployed and nine percent (9%) as unemployable.

If the stepfather was considered to have the same status as the natural father, over ninety percent (90%) of these families would have been technically ineligible under the A. N. C. program. However, the study shows that the great majority of these families were determined to be in financial need. The extent to which such need would have been alleviated under the county general relief programs cannot be determined because of the great variation in eligibility requirements in those programs.

Review of the schedules completed by the county social workers in conduct of the survey reveals that in most instances the payments to children in these families was considerably below the average payment to other A. N. C. families and that in the great majority of situations the case worker did not believe that the stepfather could increase his help to the stepchildren.

In practically all cases the stepfather was providing at least partial support in the form of housing and utilities to the dependent children eligible under the A. N. C. program. In many instances these stepfathers were making additional contributions to these children.

Data reported in the survey showed that the employed stepfathers were generally in a low income class, had irregular earnings, or were faced with the problem of supporting very large families on small incomes.

A review of the schedules submitted by Los Angeles County showed that in the opinion of the social workers eleven percent (11%) of these employed stepfathers could increase their support of the stepchildren. In a few instances it was reported that the stepfathers had refused such support even though they were financially able.

It is obvious from a review of the data available that only a small percentage of these stepfathers have deliberately refused to provide for their stepchildren. It appears that in some other situations income was such that the stepfather might have provided for the total family if A. N. C. assistance had not been available. However, the extent to which such would be possible could not be determined conclusively from the survey schedules and in most of these instances the case workers indicated that additional support by the stepfather was not possible. But the level of earnings and size of family in many of these cases were such as to raise doubt as to the evaluation of the worker if A. N. C. aid had not been available.

While in the great majority of the stepfather cases the evidence indicates inability to fully support the stepchildren, there is a sufficient volume of cases in which an increase in support by the stepfather should be possible to warrant special attention to this situation. A few cases might be cited in which the stepfather has fallen back on his legal lack of responsibility and has flatly refused to support.

It appears that administratively a greater volume of support by stepfathers should be possible. The language of the state department regulations concerning this is somewhat negative. This seems reflected in a number of the survey schedules on which the case workers noted that no determination of the ability of the stepfather to support had been made.

A positive policy providing that in all stepfather cases specific efforts be made by the county welfare departments to secure support by the stepfather should, if fully implemented, decrease the number of these A. N. C. cases. Even though such parents may not be legally responsible, many stepparents do assume full responsibility for their families. A positive approach by the county case workers, through contact and discussion with the stepfather and encouragement to him to assume his full moral responsibilities where he is financially able to do so might alleviate this problem to some extent.

However, there would still exist cases in which stepparents would use their lack of responsibility under the Civil Code and the technical eligibility requirements of the A. N. C. law to avoid their moral responsibilities. This is a loop-hole which should be plugged even though it may involve only a relatively small number of families. In determining whether aid is to be given, and the amount of such aid, the resources of the entire family and not legal status of the individual members should be considered and utilized insofar as is possible.

E. STANDARDS OF ASSISTANCE AND CASE COSTS

Assistance standards represent the determination of what should be the minimum level of living for a family in terms of its ability to obtain the basic essentials. It directly influences the number of cases eligible for assistance as well as the costs per case aided.

In determination of need, the assistance standard is the basic measure. When applied to a given family, it represents what is considered to be the minimum income requirements for family maintenance. If the actual income and resources of the family do not equal the total requirements as set forth in the standards, the family is determined to be in need.

The actual amount of assistance granted the family is based upon the standards so that cost per case is a direct reflection of the application of the cost standards less deductions made because of family resources. The actual payment is thus determined primarily on the basis of the standard that has been accepted by the Social Welfare Department as representing a minimum adequate level of living.

The State Social Welfare Department is responsible in law for determining "minimum standards of adequate care" and these standards are binding upon the counties. (Section 1511, Welfare and Institutions Code.) The department has carried out this responsibility insofar as basic consumption items commonly needed are concerned. It has generally defined items of special need which may be required by certain families due to unusual requirements, but has left it to the counties to make specific determination of when these items should be furnished and the establishment of cost controls over such special items.

The responsibility of the state department is limited, however, by other provisions of law which establish maximums for appropriations and the State share in costs. Thus the law establishes a ceiling on state participation equivalent to $48 for the first child and $24 for each additional child. Section 1511 of the code provides that "there shall be paid the sum of seventy-two dollars ($72) per month, or so much thereof as is necessary for the adequate care of the child, or if there is more than one such needy child in the same home, the sum of seventy-two dollars ($72) for one such needy child and thirty-six dollars ($36) for each of the other needy children." However the law expressly provides that the counties may in their discretion exceed the maximum from county funds

In effect there is a ceiling on payments equivalent to the amounts listed in Section 1511 of the code, plus the federal financial participation in these cases under the federal aid to dependent children program, which may however be exceeded at the option of the individual counties.

1. The Standards in Effect

Standards established by the state department represent the evaluation of a great many persons based upon long study of the actual minimum living requirements of individuals and families. They have been based upon determination of what consumption items are needed by all persons, the content of each of these items in terms of individual elements that need be provided, with pricing of items conducted periodically.

Schedules have been established which represent the prices of these items in 11 regional areas of the States. These schedules are mandatory upon the counties which are required to establish the budgets for individual recipient families on the basis of costs represented by the schedules.

A uniform schedule of allowances is established for the so-called basic items, related to varying needs of individual members of the family based on age, sex, and other characteristics.

a. Schedule of Basic Items

This schedule establishes the cost of providing for food, clothing, personal needs, recreation, housing, utilities, household operation, and education and incidentals for each member of the family.

(1) Food Cost schedules are based upon actual pricing of food items selected because of their nutritional qualities and availability to provide a balanced diet. The items and quantities of each upon which the schedule is based were selected upon advice of home economists of the University of California and other specialists as conforming to California consumption patterns rather than the national food plan issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Separate schedules are provided to meet the varying needs of different age and sex groups, and cost schedules are applied to the families in terms of their composition. Thus two families of equal size might be given different allowances for food based upon the needs of the individual members.

The schedule is uniform for individuals of the same sex and age in all family groups except that a ten percent (10%) additional allowance is made for the families with one or two persons.

(2) Clothing. Cost schedules are based upon lists of clothing requirements to cover replacements for various classes of persons in the family. They are adjusted in terms of the items considered necessary for climatic differences in various areas of the State. They are based upon determination of what clothing items are required and their durability in years. The annual replacement cost is calculated on the basis of durability and this is reflected in the monthly allowance to permit purchase of necessary clothing. Items selected are of relatively low cost such as for an employed man, an overcoat with a unit price of $25.13 and shoes of $4.84, or a coat for an older girl at $15 20 intended to last two years.

(3) Personal Needs. These allowances, provided in varying amounts depending upon the age and sex of the family members, are to cover soap, toothbrushes, shaving supplies, medicine chest supplies, etc.

(4) Recreation. A nominal amount ranging from $2 for adults and older children to 50 cents for younger children is provided for, the cost schedule being applied for each member in the family.

(5) Housing. Allowances for housing are based on the actual amount paid subject to a ceiling which varies between counties in relation to the actual rents paid. The ceiling represents the rental covering 90 percent of the cases in the county. This is a variable item, ranging from zero due to free rent up to the ceiling and in many instances above the ceiling on the basis of county determination of special need for an allowance above the limit established in state policy.

Where recipients own or are purchasing their own home, monthly amounts are allowed to cover the average cost of taxes, fire insurance, upkeep and minor repairs, plus the amount to cover interest and principal payments where the house is being purchased. These payments are limited to the rent ceiling established for the county but may be exceeded upon finding of special neeed by the county department

(6) Utilities. Allowances have been established for various types of utilities based on costs in individual counties. The cost schedule is set up on the basis of the number of persons in the family, allowances varying as the number of individuals requires.

(7) Household Operation. Cost schedules are based upon a determination of monthly replacement costs for such items as linens, cleaning supplies, emergency medical incidentals, and general household articles. The actual family allowance is dependent upon the number of persons in the family.

(8) Education and Incidentals. A specific cost schedule for monthly allowances based upon the number of persons in the family is established to cover incidental items. These also vary between counties with a basic amount established for one person and the amount for the family increased by 25 cents per person.

In addition to the basic items for which fixed costs schedules are established, allowances may be made where the following "special need" items on determination by the county of necessity

Food: For special diets as recommended by physician.

Clothing: Cost of initially outfitting family, if needed and clothing for a child's first year.

Housing: Rents paid in excess of ceilings if it is determined other suitable housing is not available, or special health or social problems necessitate better housing. Cost of major repairs ($10 or more) if necessary to minimize deterioration and maintain safe, healthful housing; or payments on home in excess of the rent ceiling if factors above-noted are considered to exist.

Utilities: Amounts in excess of ceilings, on an as paid basis, where a utility is used for several purposes; illness requires; inefficient equipment requires; or utility rates are higher than other portions of county.

Household Operation: In excess of fixed amount where initial supplies are necessary.

Telephone: If the county finds the service necessary to the family welfare.

Transportation: Amount deemed necessary by county.

Insurance: Where insurance policies are carried on children or parents, actual amount of premiums up to a total of $4 a month for the family.

Medical and Dental Care: Upon determination by a physician or dentist unless care needed is available without cost.

Debts: Payments on obligations incurred prior to application for A. N. C. if required to maintain an item of current necessity.

Major Replacements and Repairs: If needed for the continued well-being of the family.

Special Needs: Based on county decision. Such as laundry service, homemaker service, tuition to trade schools, etc.

Illustrative of the actual cost standards in effect (March, 1950) and showing differences in prices for various areas of the State is the following summary of application of the cost schedule to a family of four (Mother, boy 14 yrs., girl 11 yrs., boy 7 yrs.):

Food, clothing, personal needs, recreation	San Diego	Los Angeles	San Francisco	Sacramento
Mother	$27.04	$27.46	$28.55	$28.85
Boy 14	29.49	29.74	31.53	31.65
Girl 11	23.95	24.12	25.19	25.56
Boy 7	21.04	20.77	21.90	21.95
Subtotal, individual items	$101.67	$101.94	$107.17	$108.01
Household operation and utilities	15.04	14.89	16.53	19.57
Rent (at ceiling)	40.00	45.00	45.00	50.00
Total of basic items	$156.71	$161.83	$168.70	$177.58

The same quantity and quality of each of the items is provided for all budgets. However differences in prices account for variation in total allowances between areas.

These figures do not represent actual payment to families, or even to families with the above composition. For example, the majority of families in Sacramento are paying rents between $19 and $39 a month, although the ceiling figure is $50. Many families have free rent and thus are not given an allowance for rent. Or other items may be furnished from other sources and thus not provided for in the actual payment.

These figures do represent the total requirements, for a family of the composition given, which the Social Welfare Department believes will provide minimum adequate living. Actual payments would be based on the standards but reduced by the amount of rent below the ceiling, provision of items from other sources, or by income or other cash resources available for use by the family.

b. Appropriateness of Standard

There has been some criticism that the standards under the A. N. C. program are too high and provide more than is necessary to many of these families. Whether or not assistance standards are considered high, proper, or low may be dependent upon the point of view of the person evaluating them.

These standards are the product of many years study and evaluation by experts in nutrition and home economics. They are widely accepted and used, not only in the social welfare program but by other agencies of government and by many private social agencies.

The committee does not feel that it is in a position to make a detailed evaluation of the standards, and such would require considerable study and assistance of persons expert in this field. Such a study would necessarily include analysis of the effects of lower standards, and particularly so for diet, on the health and well being of the children and their parents.

An item by item review of the actual standards does not provide a basis for questioning the appropriateness of the standards. There are, however, a number of observations that may be made in relation to them.

Food standards are the greatest single cost item in the total. It has been suggested to the committee that adoption of the "Moderate Cost Food Plan" issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture would reduce these costs by eleven percent (11%) over the present cost schedule for food.

An emergency maintenance standard meeting nationally recommended dietary allowances can be established at lower cost than the food schedule used in the A. N. C. program. However, this diet would allow considerably less choice and might not have the acceptability and palatability desired. It is contended by home economists that families cannot continue on this type of diet schedule for long periods without impairment of their health.

Adjustment of the food schedule, and lowering the costs through variation of the items upon which the schedule is based, would need careful study, particularly in relation to possible long-term affects on health of the families. Such a schedule might be appropriate for short-term assistance families, including a large portion of the families commonly known under the general relief program.

Large-sized families are frequently considered able to purchase food items more economically than smaller ones and on that basis there is often suggested that the allowances for food for these families be scaled down on a percentage basis. The Heller Committee budget report of September, 1949, contends that it is not valid to make such reductions and claims that the result achieved is in inadequate diets. It concluded that a family of from 6 to 10 persons would achieve a total savings of only three-tenths of 1 percent due to purchase of food in larger quantities.

Suggestions have also been made for establishment of different cost standards for various racial groups on the basis that diet patterns of some of these groups enable them to get along with less money for food. This has not been substantiated and the opinion of home economists who have studied this matter is that there is actually little difference in cost of food because of varying racial diet patterns.

Clothing allowance for a San Francisco family of four (mother, boy 14, girl 11, boy 11) would be $21.71 a month. It is intended to provide for the minimum needs in low-priced clothing for the family. While this allowance appears to be a reasonable minimum, it may be possible to achieve reduction in cost.

Under the present A. N. C. program there is a substantial portion of relatively short-term cases. These families may already be supplied with the more expensive clothing items, such as outer garments, and might be able to get along adequately on a lower clothing allowance.

General support for the present standards of assistance is indicated by the fact that the county welfare departments found it desirable to supplement the payments provided in the limitations of the state formula in 7,825 A. N. C. cases in August, 1950. Average supplementation in all A. N. C. cases was $5.03 per case, and $34.49 in the cases which were supplemented.

Comparison of the standards applied to a family in which there are the husband and wife and two children (boy 13 and girl 8), using the Sacramento cost schedule for March, 1950, against the moderate cost budget developed by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics for a San Francisco family of the same composition, indicates that the A. N. C. standard is not a liberal one.

If the Department of Labor moderate cost budget for a San Francisco family of four is adjusted to exclude taxes, life insurance, union dues, etc., which a welfare recipient would not be obligated for, the March, 1950, figure would be approximately $266. Using a rental figure of $35 a month, the A. N. C. basic budget (without special need items) would be approximately $176, or $90 a month less than the moderate cost budget.

3. Special Need Items

Little control over the determination of circumstances justifying the granting of special need items has been exercised by the State. Neither the state department nor the great majority of the counties have set up specific standards as to when such needs should be recognized or over the cost of the items that might be provided.

There is no information available as to the extent to which special needs are found to exist and particularly of the cost of these items.

Evidently practices vary widely between the counties as to when such needs will be recognized and as to control of costs

This is an area of administration that needs particular attention. If there is to be equitable treatment of people, uniform standards should be established to govern the determination of circumstances justifying allowances for special needs not covered in the basic budget. If cost control is to be exercised in the program, there need to be set definite limits on the amounts that may be included in budgets to cover special needs.

The more common special needs are recognized in state policy and the assistance standards provide a general statement concerning them. The state department has also issued a guide to the counties covering items of household equipment, but this is a guide only and need not be observed in practice. The State has actually left it to the counties to establish ther own standards, and very few of the counties have done so. This is evidence of poor administrative practice and lack of attention to cost control at both the state and county levels.

Absence of standards and of administrative control, and exercise of poor judgment in individual situations, has resulted in considerable community criticism. It is probable that most of the criticism of liberality of A. N C. payments can be traced directly to poor management by the county departments in controlling the authorization of funds for purchase of special need items. On the other hand, certain counties have apparently refused to recognize any special needs and are subject to criticism for failure to take into account the actual need of individual families.

Because the administrative agencies have paid little attention to this problem and have no reliable data on a state-wide basis as to actual practice and costs, it is impossible to accurately evaluate the extent to which special needs are being met or the part that these needs represent in the total costs of the program.

Indications from examination of 288 survey schedules out of a total of 494 covering absent father cases prepared in August, 1950, are that approximately $3.37 of the average payment per family cases is attributable to special needs. The average monthly cost of those cases having special needs was indicated as $15.17 from this limited sample.

The limited data available revealed great variations between counties in considering special needs, ranging from zero to forty-three (43%) percent of the cases reviewed. This indicates that some counties are too restrictive and fail to recognize the urgent special needs that exist and that others are too liberal in granting additional assistance for meeting such needs.

In 64 or 22 percent of the 288 cases, special needs were allowed. In order of frequency, the following types of items were considered on a special needs basis:

Rent in excess of ceiling in standards	22
Household appliances	11
Telephone	9
Furniture	8
Medical and dental care	8
Ice	6
Insurance (specific standard provided in state regulations)	4

Other types of items represented were layettes for babies; utilities in excess of state standards; child care; housekeeper services; laundry; and transportation.

In only a few of the schedules reviewed was there sufficient data to determine actual total cost of some items for which monthly payments were allowed in the assistance payments. However, these indicate the need for establishment of definite standards and cost controls.

Granting allowances for special need items are justified and recognition of such needs is necessary. However, there should be greater control over these allowances than now provided. As part of its responsibility to supervise the program and establish standards of assistance, the state department should develop specific policy instructions outlining the circumstances under which such items may be allowed and providing methods for controlling the cost of items in individual cases Discretion of the individual case worker as to when to make such allowances, and of the amount to be provided, should be limited insofar as is feasible.

Definite instructions as to circumstances justifying such grants, and establishing cost limits on them, have been established in other states and are a practicable and necessary control. They are needed to insure uniformity of treatment of persons as well as to control costs in individual situations. They should be accompanied by supervisory review and special approval in situations where relatively large sums of money may be involved.

This is part of good administration. It is also part of good administration to conduct necessary research to determine how such policies are being applied and the actual costs of meeting special needs not covered under the assistance standards for basic consumption items.

2. Cost per Case; or Average Payment

Average costs or payment per family represents the total cost of assistance divided by the number of families, or is more commonly stated as average cost per eligible child by dividing the total expenditure by the number of children in family cases. In using such average cost figures it must be recognized that these are averages and that the actual payments in individual cases show great variation.

The average payment reflects a number of factors:

1. The basic standard of assistance, or the determination made as to the adequacy of living to be permitted welfare recipients;

2. The extent to which resources are available to these families and accounted for in the determination of the actual payments;

3. Accuracy of the administrative agencies in applying the quantity-cost requirements schedules and deductions for income resources, resources in kind, etc., in arriving at the net need of the family;

4. Policies of the administrative agencies (counties) in granting special needs, including both the determination of the circumstances justifying allowances for special needs and the limitations placed on the value of such items to be provided;

5. Average size of families, which may vary from time to time, and vary between areas;

6. Policies of the administrative agencies (counties) in supplementing the maximum grants provided for in Section 1511 of the code.

There is considerable variation in practice among the counties in administration of the standards and determination of need. These are reflected to some extent in the variation in average payments between counties. However, even with absolute uniformity in administrative practice, variations between sections of the State would exist.

These variations under uniform administrative practice would result from differences in costs between various areas of the State as well as the variations in economic conditions affecting the resources that may be available to the families. Where employment conditions are particularly good, family members may have greater earnings to apply to total needs or relatives are better able to contribute partially to support.

a. Recent Trends in Costs

Average costs per family have shown a steady decrease since July, 1949. The average costs for September, 1950, do not reflect the increased costs of living since June of that year, and cost schedules being used were still based on March, 1950, living costs. Part of the change in average costs undoubtedly reflects stricter policies by the various county agencies in the supplementation of grants from county funds or in the providing of special needs items. As total costs increased because of the increase in the number of persons aided, some counties restricted participation from other county funds.

The trend in average costs is illustrated by the following table showing average payments per child; average per family; average per child in family cases; and the average per child in boarding homes and institutions:

All eligible children	44.74	47.68	49.26	50.98	50.39	47.59
Families	105.57	109.94	111.53	112.97	115.37	107.95
Children in families only	44.77	47.88	49.20	50.78	50.20	47.16
Children in boarding homes and institutions	44.52	45.91	49.79	52.96	52.75	53.94

The average sized family in September, 1950, was approximately 3.4 persons. At an average payment of $107.95 per family, the average assistance per person in family cases was approximately $31.80 per month.

Grants to families vary with the number of individuals in the family unit since the assistance payments are based upon the total needs of the family which vary with the number of persons to be clothed, fed, and housed.

Comparison of the actual average payment made by various sized families as represented by the number of children eligible for A. N. C. assistance against the actual maximum grant that could be made under Section 1511 of the law shows that actual payments are considerably below the ceilings imposed in law. The figure for "maximum grant" represents the total amount that could be provided an individual family under the formula of $72 for the first child and $48 for succeeding children in the same family provided in Section 1511 of the code plus the federal funds available under the Social Security Act prior to October 1, 1950.

Statutory Maximum Grants and Average Grants by Numbers of Eligible Children in Families—August, 1950

Number of eligible children in family	Total cases	Percent total	Maximum grant	Average grant August, 1950	County supplemented aid included in average grant
Total	53,693	100	----	$109.53	$5.03
One	20,067	37.4	$88.50	76.39	9.27
Two	15,155	28.2	136.50	101.42	4.06
Three	9,169	17 1	184 50	128.32	2.06
Four	4,856	9.0	232.50	153.73	.56
Five	2,389	4.5	280.50	180 28	.23
Six	1,151	2.1	328.50	210 98	----
Seven	501	.9	376 50	236.70	.54
Eight	215	.4	424 50	221.56	----
Nine	128	.2	472.50	258.37	----
Ten	36	1	520.50	248.72	----
Eleven	26	1	586.50	280.11	----

The maximum grant possible was raised $16.50 as of October 1st because of modification of the federal matching formula permitting federal financial participation in the payments to the care-taker in addition to the eligible children.

It will be noted that the counties supplemented from other county funds the payments to many families because the ceiling imposed under Section 1511 of the code did not make it possible to meet determined need. This was particularly true in the families with one to three children. The increase in the federal funds available for matching payments to the caretaker would eliminate to a great extent this county supplementation since the maximum for participation was raised $16.50 through the additional federal money available October 1st.

In August the counties expended $269,907 of other county funds in 7,825 of these cases because they determined that needs of the families exceeded the maximums imposed under the code. Of this amount, approximately sixty-nine percent (69%) was for families in which there was only one eligible child and twenty-three percent (23%) where there were two such children. For the cases that were supplemented, $34.49 in county funds in addition to the normal county share as provided in Section 1511 of the code were expended per case.

b. Variation in Costs Between Counties

There is wide variation in costs per case between the counties. As is true of most other aspects of the A. N. C. program, there is little factual data available as a basis for analysis of these differences.

These variations may be the result of a number of factors. Differences in economic conditions, particularly differences in resources available to families; rental and utility cost variations; differences in the size of families; and policies concerning county supplementation will affect average payments.

So too will variations in administration between the counties have considerable bearing on costs such as the accuracy in application of the assistance standards; thoroughness of determining and accounting for resources of all types; and policies regarding granting of special needs;

These differences in average cost are illustrated by the following table in which the 12 major counties are ranked in order of the average number of eligible children in families, data being for August, 1950:

County	Average children per family	Average payment per family	Average payment per eligible child
Alameda	2.07	96.89	46.77
San Francisco	2.15	102 77	47.85
Los Angeles	2.16	112.97	52.26
San Diego	2.18	96.72	44.35
Contra Costa	2.24	102.51	45.76
State average	2.29	109.53	47 87
Santa Clara	2.38	118.94	49.89
Sacramento	2 39	108 18	45 21
Tulare	2.43	111.32	45 71
San Joaquin	2.47	106.13	44.13
San Bernardino	2.56	111.04	43.40
Kern	2.57	114 36	44.57
Fresno	2.60	119.75	45 16

The three counties of San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego had approximately the same number of eligible children per family. There was a $16 difference in average payments between San Diego and Los Angeles. San Francisco with a considerably higher standard cost schedule than Los Angeles was paying on the average approximately $10 less per family.

Los Angeles paid out considerably more per child in supplemental county funds than either of the other counties, and San Francisco was particularly conservative in such expenditures. Thus some of this difference is reflected in the policy of the individual counties in meeting total need of families despite limitations of state participation in the grants. Some of the difference is undoubtedly determined by other administrative practices.

3. High Payment Cases

Cases in which families receive relatively high grants attract community attention and result in criticism of the program as well as proposals for the establishment of arbitrary restrictions on the size of payments.

In evaluating such cases it is necessary to take account of the fact that in some families there are many persons to feed, clothe, and house and that necessarily, if the needs of each of these family members are to be met. the payment will be relatively high.

It also must be recognized that the granting of special need items, particularly major items of considerable cost, will cause the payment for a family in a given month to be much higher than the normal assistance grant made to the family.

Large families (those with four or more children) represented 17.3 percent of the total families receiving A. N. C. assistance in August, 1950.

Distribution of Families by Number of Eligible Children
August, 1950

One child	37.4%
One and two children	65.6
One to three children	82 7
One to four children	91.7
Five children or more	8 3

In 3.4 percent of the total families there were from 7 to 11 children.

In August, 1950, 6.4 percent of the family payments were $200 or over. This compares with 7.4 percent of $200 or more in September, 1949.

Distribution of Payments per Family

	September, 1949	August, 1950
Under $100	46.0%	49.5%
$100 to $199	46.6	44 1
200 to 299	7.1	6 1
300 and over	.3	.3

Of the 109 families receiving payments of $300 or more in September, 1949 (0 3 percent total families) ninety percent (90%) were families in which there were six or more children. Provision of special need items by the county departments was illustrated for smaller-sized families.

A special study conducted by the State Department of Social Welfare in August, 1950, covered a thirty percent (30%) sample of cases in which the total family needs were determined at $250 or more. These cases were selected on the basis of need, including special needs, and do not represent those in which the actual payment was $250 or more since in some of the families surveyed income deducted would bring the actual payment below the need figure.

There were 832 cases of the total case load of 53,693 families in which total need was reported at $250 or more. The thirty percent (30%) sample revealed the following facts concerning this group of families.

Average individuals in the family budget unit was 8 2 persons.
Average number of children per family was 6.6.
Average need in all cases was $285.52 per case.
This represented an average of $34.88 per person.
Actual payments averaged $263.44 per case or $32.18 per person.
Average special needs in these cases was $15.76.

Twenty-three percent of these families had other income which was deducted in determining the payment. This averaged $22.12 per family.

a. Ceilings on Payments

In recent months there has been discussion of the advisability of attempting to control costs of the A. N. C. program through establishing by law maximums to limit payments to individual families. Two types of ceilings on payments have been suggested:

1. An arbitrary limit on the amount of monthly assistance that could be paid in any case; or

2. A maximum on payments in individual cases related to community wage levels, such as through a determination of what the parent would be able to earn if employed.

Ceilings are now operative because of the limitations imposed in Section 1511 of the code on payments by the State and counties on behalf of individual children. However, the counties are authorized to exceed these ceilings by use of other county funds, and they have done so in a large proportion of the smaller member family cases.

(1) Fixed Limit on Payments. The major objection to establishment of arbitrary limits on payments is that they ignore the basic principle of meeting need. Either they do not recognize the greater needs because of variation in size of family, or do not permit meeting special needs in individual cases, which needs may be equally as important as the basic needs and especially so where health factors are involved.

They also discriminate between families in measuring total need. The family that is fortunate enough to have some income would be less affected by the ceiling and through the combination of income and assistance grants would be able to meet its total requirements whereas a family in similar circumstances but having no income might not be able to meet its total needs through a ceiling restriction on the assistance payment.

A danger involved in the establishment of maximums is that sometimes the maximum tends to become the minimum. This might be particularly true in California because of the philosophy of the old age security program. There might well be a tendency to permit recipients to retain income to meet special needs or to find special needs if the total need were below the maximum. If such occurred, the end result might be to raise costs of the program.

(2) Ceilings Based on Community Wage Rates or Earnings Capacity. Such ceilings would impose administrative problems of exceptional difficulty, and would not be necessarily valid in a needs program.

One of the major problems would be determination of the prevailing wage rates in each community, at least for unskilled labor classifications. Even though such were determined, establishment of a ceiling on the assistance payment equivalent to the community wage pattern would not have a direct relationship to need. This type of ceiling would penalize the larger sized families since wage rates are based upon the supply and demand of labor and not upon the economic requirements of the family.

It would seem almost impossible, and certainly subject to great inaccuracy, to attempt to make findings on the basis of what a person might earn if the person were employed. Many A. N. C. mothers have had no recent employment history or normal occupation other than housewife. Children who have never been in the labor market would present a particular problem. The disabled father might have had good earning capacity before his incapacity, but who is to determine that in relation to his handicapped status?

Such a device would lead to widespread subjective determinations of what types of employment individuals might be able to engage in by persons with little or no experience or skill to qualify them to make such evaluations.

Ceilings are essentially a device for controlling over-all costs. If such is necessary, it is better to have all families share proportionately in whatever reduction is necessary because funds for adequate assistance are not available. This also is much simpler administratively and is the most equitable manner in which reductions in over-all costs can be made.

It is probable that much of the criticism leading to suggestions for ceilings is based upon a relatively few cases. The large family does present particular problems because of the total cost of providing basic maintenance for its members. Where families misuse the assistance payment, this is due to faulty management which can be corrected administratively. The use of poor judgment and evidence of faulty administration in relation to granting of special need items can also be controlled administratively.

The only sound basis for administration of assistance is to recognize the differences in need between families, either because of their size or because of existing special problems such as are provided for under the special need classifications.

The soundest way to control over-all costs is through good standards and good administration, including emphasis on accounting for the resources that families might have. If such methods cannot solve the problems posed by insufficient total funds to meet the minimum requirements of all persons, then a uniform reduction affecting all recipients is the most equitable and simplest method of reducing total cost to meet appropriation limitations.

4. Costs of Children in Boarding Homes and Institutions

In September, 1950, 8,481 A. N. C. children were in boarding homes and institutions at an average cost of $54.21 per child. Children in institutions and foster homes are not included in the federal aid to dependent children program and the total cost of their care is borne exclusively from state and local sources.

The maximum payment provided for in the A. N C. law for children in institutions is $36, divided by state, $24, and county, $12. Counties thus are required to provide substantial supplementation to meet the actual costs of institutional care.

Considerable variation in cost per child is illustrated by a comparison of costs for the larger counties of the State, costs per child in August, 1950, showing a range from $40.38 in the Los Angeles juvenile court to $65 78 in San Diego County

Average Cost per Child—August, 1950

County	Average cost
State average—$53
Alameda	$55.55
Contra Costa	56.39
Fresno	45 04
Kern	43.63
Los Angeles	51.52
Los Angeles Juvenile Court	40.38
Sacramento	52 52
San Bernardino	44 21
San Diego	65.78
San Francisco Juvenile Court	62.31
San Joaquin	43 76
Santa Clara	53.13

Adjustment of the maximum payment is necessary to recognize actual cost of care of these children. This would relieve the counties of the burden of substantial supplementation in addition to their regular $12 share per child. It might be achieved through an appropriation of a fixed amount per child rather than on the present formula of $72 for the first child and $36 for succeeding children in a family which method does not fit the institutional care program.

State-wide data on the average payment per child for those in foster family groups and those in boarding homes is not available.

F. SPECIFIC ADMINISTRATIVE PROBLEMS

Similar to other phases of the A. N. C. program, there is too little information available as a basis for making a careful evaluation of administration at both the state and county levels. However, in the course of its inquiry into the program, the committee was able to identify a number of administrative problems needing solution and correction. Many of these are indicated in the discussion of determinations of eligibility and standards of assistance

It is obvious that the administrative processes would be particularly cumbersome in a program established on the basis of the A. N. C. one Division of responsibility between the counties and the State makes it exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to establish accountability Financial arrangements between the federal-state-county governments involve extensive reporting processes to establish liabilities of each. Administrative independence of the counties from the state department has made it difficult to collect a body of data for research purposes, and even some elementary data such as on staffing and work loads at the county levels are not available at any central point. The present division of administrative responsibility is a costly arrangement However, it appears susceptible of simplification and improvement

1. State Supervision

As illustrated in previous discussion, state regulations are confined primarily to interpretation of law and the mechanical procedures for operation of the program. There has been insufficient supervision by the State of the actual administration of the program in the counties. Certain important areas have not yet been defined by the State, such as with respect to allowances for special needs or treatment of certain types of resources.

The state department has not conducted sufficient research into operations of the program at the county level and as a result does not have available basic materials for evaluating administration and determining the effectiveness of application of the policies that it formulates. It has little information on specific cost factors involved in the program. It knows generally that there is wide variation in administrative effectiveness among county departments but has not brought specific data together in form that can be acted upon to improve administration

The state department has demonstrated a reluctance to actively supervise the program. It has been constantly pressured by the counties and their resistance has resulted in a policy of establishing only a minimum of supervision and policy formulation at the state level. However, the state agency is responsible for expenditure of the greater share of funds and as such should assume a more active role in supervision of all phases of administration of the program.

2. Abuses: Mismanagement Cases

Because an assistance program deals with people, there will always be abuses. Some of these come to community attention and are exaggerated all out of proportion. They are a primary problem of administration and public relations. They represent a problem of community relations all out of proportion to the funds that might be involved

The great majority of persons are well able to manage their own affairs. Some are not Those on assistance are little different than others in the community except that their funds come from the State on a basis of their need.

Certain individuals are irresponsible and for various reasons cannot properly manage their affairs Where that person is the head of a family, this poor management may cause suffering to the children. The occasional welfare recipient who upon receipt of his check spends a portion of it at the local bar is depriving himself and his family of essentials of life. This is the type of situation that causes the greatest community criticism of the administration of public assistance.

Under federal regulations, to qualify for federal funds, the State must grant assistance in cash. It is not possible to control the expenditures of the recipients, as to just what he should buy and how much, and be eligible to secure federal money for that case.

Intelligent administration and community relations recognize the fact that it is sometimes better to forego the receipt of federal funds where it is demonstrated that an individual misuses public funds granted him. It also recognizes that the family must be protected against the irresponsibility of the payee.

In response to a request from the state department, the counties reported on so-called mismanagement cases receiving A. N. C. as of August, 1950. The 287 cases reported represented about one-half of 1 percent of the total case load. This is verification that the problem is a small one in terms of numbers of families involved. The schedules completed indicated considerable difference of opinion as to what constitutes mismanagement and many of them involved social problems in the family normally not considered in determining whether or not restrictions need to be placed on the form of assistance granted. However, it is probable that not all mismanagement cases were reported, particularly since in most instances the reporting was based upon memory of case workers of specific cases in their loads and in not all situations would the mismanagement have come directly to the attention of the welfare agency.

Most of the cases reported involved situations such as these: assistance money was used for personal nonessentials; there was failure to pay grocery or rent bills, funds being used for other purposes; a portion of the assistance money was used for purchase of liquor; children were neglected and funds were not properly used for their maintenance; emotional problems of the parent made her irresponsible or unable to plan wisely in the use of funds; the mother was mentally retarded and unable to properly use assistance funds for the care of the family.

Since the commonly cited solution to this problem is to remove the family from the cash assistance rolls and to place them on an "in kind" payment basis with control over at least the major expenditures such as for food, shelter, and clothing, it is interesting to note the solutions suggested by the individual case workers dealing with the families involved to the problems presented.

In only a minority of situations did the case worker offer the "in kind" payment as the solution to the problem. The most common solution suggested was that more case work services be given these families to assist them with the basic problems involved, including more frequent contact with the families and providing to them services to help them in planning and managing.

Other solutions suggested indicated that the basic problem stemmed from emotional problems in the home or from instability or immaturity of the parents, such as: removal of the children from the home; psychiatric services to the mother; or institutionalizing the mother because of a mentally retarded condition.

Among other solutions offered instead of the "in kind" payment were better housing for the family, training for employment of various members; medical services for purposes of rehabilitation for employment; encouragement of the mother or older children to secure work; and services of home economists in assisting with budgetary planning.

It was indicated in some of the schedules that the major problem was insufficient staff or too rapid turnover of staff to provide the kind of services that these problem families needed. It was pointed out that workers carrying over 100 families cases did not have the time to work with the families that needed special services.

State policy, based upon an Attorney General's opinion, specifies that payments to recipients may not be restricted without exception. For the county offices to restrict payment, they must forego the receipt of state funds for that particular A. N. C. case.

This policy does not seem realistic or intelligent. There are very few cases involved, but it is important to the welfare of other members of the families involved and to confidence of the community in administration of the program, to control these situations.

It is recognized because of the complications of administration involved in the state-county relationship, and certain elements of mutual distrust in that relationship, that the State may be reluctant to give the counties a free hand in making unrestricted payments. However the State has authority to set up minimum standards and should be able to define situations in which restricted payments are justified to avoid any abuse in administration.

These mismanagement cases offer a special type of problem, but differ considerably in the solutions that might be given. Many of these families will respond to good case work administration and through the services offered become able to satisfactorily manage their own affairs.

Others, because of acute emotional problems, alcoholism, basic irresponsibility, or for other reasons, can be given only limited help to manage their own affairs. In these situations consideration needs to be given to protection of the children from the irresponsibility of the parent as well as protection to the taxpayers in assuring that assistance funds are utilized for the purposes intended.

3. County Residence

A child born in the State or who otherwise has one year's physical presence or whose parents have resided in the State one year prior to application may be eligible for A. N. C. aid if meeting other eligibility requirements.

In addition, the law establishes certain county residence requirements which do not affect entitlement of the child for aid but relate to the distribution of the costs of such aid.

If a child does not have residence in any county at the time of application, but does have state residence, the State reimburses the county granting aid for the normal share of the county participation until the child does secure county residence.

If application is filed in a county other than the one in which the child does have residence, the State reimburses the county receiving the application and paying aid up to a maximum of 180 days. In the meantime arrangements are made for the county of residence to reimburse the other county for the amount of aid granted.

These requirements of county residence are administratively expensive. State residence is the primary factor in determining eligibility. However, because of the county residence features, the additional step of proving county residence is made.

Some delay in processing cases may be attributed to this necessity for determining county residence.

Where the recipient moves to another county and gains residence there, case transfer is necessary and usually involves complete duplication of the record. It has been reported that in some instances the counties make up extra copies of forms used in processing cases against the possibility that the case may later have to be transferred to another county.

A number of bookkeeping and financial transactions are involved, particularly where the State is required to reimburse the county for the full amount of aid granted because the child does not have residence in that particular county.

No data are available as to the volume of cases involved. However it is quite possible that transfers between counties would in the long run tend to balance out.

The elaborate and costly administrative processes for determining county residence have no bearing on whether or not the child shall be granted aid. They serve only the purpose of charging costs against the State or other counties.

If an administrative analysis of costs of these procedures could be made, it probably would be found that the total costs of proving residence, of negotiating between counties, and of handling the financial transactions at the state level are a burden that could not be justified to the individual counties that might be most concerned. At any event, since the State pays two-thirds of the cost and the counties only one-third, elimination of this county residence requirement would not bear heavily on any individual county. However, it would simplify and speed up administration, and would enable savings in administrative costs.

Machinery for transfer of cases between counties would continue to be required. This can be established by administrative regulation, providing the criteria for determination of when the case should be transferred, and costs assumed by another county, based upon intent of the recipient to reside in that county.

4. Staffing

Availability of the proper numbers of staff with training and skill is extremely important in limiting the number of cases and in determination of the payment per case. Adequate expenditures for administration can net real savings in total costs. Most appropriating bodies are reluctant to increase funds for administration, failing to recognize the close relationship between good administration and lower costs in the over-all program.

Case workers in many counties are given a number of cases considerably in excess of what they can handle effectively. This overload results in poor initial investigation; in inability to maintain close enough contact with families; in inability to assist persons in developing resources to help themselves; and in failure to detect promptly changes in circumstances so that cases can be closed at the right time.

Inadequacies of staff reflect themselves in many ways, but it can be certain that assistance costs are higher than they need be because of this primary defect in administration. If a worker is assigned 100 to 145 A. N. C. cases, as is done in some areas, it is certain that the following will result:

The county case load will be higher than it need be because the workers do not have the time to thoroughly explore eligibility; cannot maintain contact with families to ascertain changing circumstances; do not determine resources available that might be utilized to reduce the assistance payments; do not close cases quickly enough; and cannot work with families to help them to help themselves to become self-sufficient.

Supervisors and workers in one county office, in informal discussion, indicated the following results of inadequate staffing:

1. They felt that there were some ineligible cases receiving assistance because of insufficient time of workers to follow through;

2. They were concerned that they were encouraging dependency because of inability to work with families;

3. They felt needs investigations were inadequate and did not cover the family circumstances thoroughly;

4. They knew that some cases were being carried beyond the time necessary because of inability to get around to make reinvestigations.

5. Reinvestigation and Follow-up on Cases

Wide variation between counties in the effectiveness of maintaining contact with assistance families is evidenced. This may be due to understaffing in some counties or to poor work planning.

The Federal Government and the state department have established a mandatory requirement that each case be reinvestigated at least once a year. This is a minimum requirement. The reinvestigation is for the purpose of reviewing eligibility and determination of the amount of assistance.

Data for August, 1950, showed that approximately four and one-half percent (4½%) of such annual eligibility reviews were overdue. This was not a substantial number for the State as a whole, however, in certain of the larger counties the proportion of overdue eligibility investigations was as high as twenty percent (20%).

Most families should be visited more than than once a year, and many should be visited quite frequently. However, this cannot be done unless adequate staffing is provided and there is good administrative direction so that selectivity in planning out of office time is carried out.

6. Delegation of Authority by Boards of Supervisors

State regulations (Manual Section 145) require that after a determination on an application has been made a "recommendation shall be made to the board of supervisors that assistance shall be granted or denied," including the amount and beginning date of assistance if the recommendation is for granting aid. These regulations (Manual Section 155) require that the boards of supervisors grant or deny applications at the first meeting for consideration subsequent to receipt of the recommendations.

The A. N. C. law does not refer specifically to the boards of supervisors, but to the counties. It would seem possible then for boards of supervisors to delegate authority to their county welfare departments to process applications, including the approval or denial of assistance, without necessity of referring all such cases to the board. However, since the law (Section 1550) requires that counties investigate all applications in the manner and on forms prescribed by the state department, the simplification of this process of disposing of applications requires a change in regulations of the state department.

Since boards of supervisors have direct administrative control and supervision over the county departments, and since the boards may establish county welfare boards to assist them in the administration of the assistance program, the formalities required by state regulations appear to be unnecessary and administratively inadvisable.

The requirement that lists of applications, with recommendations for action, go to the boards of supervisors may delay the actual determination of a case by as much as three weeks. Indications are that in most counties the boards can give only the most generalized scrutiny to such lists and that in most instances rarely question cases listed. In the meantime considerable administrative time and expense is involved and recipients who are in urgent need suffer through such delays or must be cared for through the issuance of emergency general relief orders.

7. Research

There is inadequate knowledge at both the state and county levels of what is happening within the A. N. C. program. Through research, policy and procedure must be constantly tested. The administrative agency must be thoroughly aware of changing conditions within its assistance program, and of community factors contributing to these changes if assistance is to be administered adequately.

In some counties there appears to be a total unawareness and lack of appreciation of the values of research as part of the administrative process.

8. Procedures

One reviewing the mechanics of the A. N. C. program is impressed with the exceedingly complicated procedures in determining eligibility and the distribution of costs between the State and counties. Much of this is inherent in the state-county financial relationship. Substantial simplification of procedures, with resultant savings in administrative costs, would seem to be readily possible. The extent to which it could be effective depends upon the problems of state-county administrative arrangement.

V. OLD AGE SECURITY

The old age security program presents a number of particular problems, not only because of the character and size of the group involved, but because of the basic pension or flat-grant concept of aid practiced in California.

The Legislature has established a maximum payment per recipient of $75 a month. This also operates as a minimum except that income or other resources of the payee not used for "excess needs" are deducted from $75 in determining amount of the grant. The actual average payment in September, 1950, was $70.74.

Total payments to recipients under the program was $19,140,729 in September, 1950, or approximately 69 percent of the total assistance payments made to all types of welfare recipients that month.

While many persons conceive of this as a pension program, it is not actually that. Neither is it strictly a needs program in the sense that payments are based on cost of basic consumption items determined by quantity-quality standards such as under the aid to needy children program and most public assistance programs for aged and other groups throughout the Country, and as visualized under the Federal Social Security Act.

The law establishes the amount of payment for an aged person as $75 less the amount of any regular income he may have However, it also provides that if his "needs" exceed $75 and he has income, he may retain part or all of that income to meet these excess needs. But the actual old age security payment may not exceed $75 a month.

To meet the requirements of the Federal Social Security Act, and thus qualify for the substantial federal financial aid available, the State has established certain standards.intended to represent the basic consumption requirements of all aged persons and their cost; the type of special needs some may have because of individual circumstances and the conditions under which these may be recognized; and methods for evaluating and determining income resources. These standards are not strictly objective measurements of need, but are influenced by the requirement in the law that $75 is the basic amount that shall be provided.

Public assistance payments are generally considered to represent the difference between what a person has (income and resources) and what he requires. This difference represents the actual need of the person or the amount of the assistance payment. The total requirements against which this need is measured represents the judgment or determination of the law or administrative agency as to what level of living should be provided as a basic minimum for all persons in the community.

Under the old age security law, the responsibility of the State Department of Social Welfare is to determine how income and resources will be evaluated and accounted for and to define the excess needs against which such income might be applied. Because of federal requirements it is also necessary that the department define the basic standards of need in terms of what consumption items can be provided and their value, to insure uniformity of treatment for all recipients in the State.

A. BASIC ASSISTANCE STANDARD

The department has determined that all aged persons require food, shelter, clothing, transportation, utilities, household maintenance expenses, and personal and incidental items and has established values for each of these basic requirements. The actual values established for the items are such as to exactly total $75, the basic amount the law specifies should be provided each aged person qualifying under the program.

A schedule of basic standards has been issued as follows:

Food	$28.50
Household maintenance and replacement	4.50
Clothing	6.20
Transportation	4.50
Incidentals	10.00
Shelter	15.00
Utilities	6.30
Total	$75.00

These cost standards are somewhat higher than applied under the aid to needy children program. For items exclusive of shelter, utilities, and transportation, the basic requirement for a moderately active man under the A. N. C. program (based on the San Francisco schedule for March, 1950) would be $38.06 as compared with $49.20 for the aged recipient. Transportation allowances are provided in the A. N. C. program only on a basis of special demonstrated need for them.

The major differences in the cost standards for the basic items other than shelter, utilities, and transportation, are in those for food ($28.50 O. A. S., $24.47 A. N. C.) and in the allowances for personal needs and incidentals ($10 O. A. S., $3.48 A. N. C.).

The O. A. S. food budget is determined in the same manner as in the A. N. C. program, but adjusted by adding 30 percent. For a single individual under the A. N. C. schedule, the adjustment would be 10 percent. This 30 percent adjustment is intended to cover increased food costs of single persons and permit meeting low-cost special diets or different food habits of aged persons.

Incidentals covered by the $10 allowance would cover medicine chest supplies as well as such personal needs as haircuts, shaving supplies, tooth paste, newspapers, tobacco, etc.

The rental allowance of $15 does not recognize regional variations in shelter costs and is an arbitrary figure that may be too low or too high in individual cases. Excess rent could be covered by income, if present. Where recipients live rent free, deductions are made from payments on the basis of values assigned to different grades of living accommodations, but not in excess of $15 although in many cases less than that amount.

A flat allowance for utilities does not recognize regional cost differences or the availability of certain types of utilities. In those areas where kerosene or butane must be used as fuel for cooking and heating, the requirements will be greater than the allowance. In other areas actual cost of utilities would be less than the amounts allowed

B. EXCESS NEED STANDARD

In addition to the basic requirements, certain types of special needs are defined. These definitions recognize that certain persons because of individual circumstances do have special needs that are not common to all persons and which cannot be met through the allowances provided for the basic consumption items.

Because of the maximum payment established by the law, it is not possible to provide all recipients with money to meet their special neeeds as defined by the department, but where these individuals do have income resources such special needs may be taken into consideration in determining the actual amount of the assistance payment.

The state department has defined these excess need items and in many instances has established specific values or limitations on costs for them, as follows:

Food—Special diets in such amounts "as needed," restaurant meals, $21.40 above basic food allowance.

Shelter—Amount as needed above the $15 basic allowance.

Utilities—As needed but not to exceed $11.50 above the basic allowance.

Replacement of worn-out household equipment—Actual cost of replacement based on minimum prices.

Board and room—Amount required in excess of $55, roughly equivalent to basic allowances for food, household maintenance, shelter, and utilities.

Clothing replacements—Cost of replacement of necessary clothing destroyed by flood, fire, etc.

Transportation—Not to exceed $10.50 above the basic $4.50 allowance.

Rest home expenses—Up to a maximum of $145 above the $55 board and room allowance.

Medical treatment—As needed.

Medication—Amount as needed.
Nursing service—When required up to a maximum of $145.
Other medical care needs—As required.
Housekeeper services—Amount as required.
Laundry—Maximum of $5 a month when recipient does not have facilities or health requires use of commercial laundry.
Telephone—Maximum of $4 a month, where required by health or isolation.

The circumstances under which these various excess need items may be considered for allowance are defined by the state department although they leave to the social worker considerable discretion in determining justification for making the allowance.

In practical application, the amount of outside income of the recipient operates as a limit on the excess need allowances. If the person has no income, there are no special needs considered under the state program. If he does have income, the allowances for excess needs cannot exceed the amount of that income. It seems clear that where there is income present, emphasis is upon locating special needs to permit the recipient to retain as much of this other income as possible, thus minimizing deductions from the $75 base in determining the actual payment.

C. INCOME RESOURCES

Identification and evaluation of income resources are important in determining the actual amount of payment, and of course in applying the excess need standard. State regulations establish detailed standards for accounting for income of various forms. It is the opinion of the state department that the county offices are careful in evaluating these resources and accounting for them in determining the amount of actual payment.

Approximately 49 percent of the aged recipients are considered to have income resources. Of those who do have income, the average value was approximately $17.90 a month, prior to October 1, 1950. This amount was increased beginning in October because of the liberalized old age and survivors insurance program. (The average after October is estimated as about $20.55 per case.)

About half of the income accounted for was applied to meet excess needs and the remainder deducted in determining actual payments, thus representing savings in costs of the program.

Application of these income resources to excess needs and to deductions from the basic grant may be illustrated as follows:

Basic grant established by Legislature	$75.00
Average estimated income per case (December, 1949)	8.70
Difference	66.30
Income applied to meet special needs	4.44
Actual average payment per case (September, 1950)	70.74
Income actually deducted in making grants	4.26

Since the amount of income was increased by the old age and survivors insurance program, effective October, 1950, theoretically an additional estimated $2.65 might be deducted from the grants representing a total saving of $717,000 based on the 270,562 cases receiving assistance in September, 1950. However, an indeterminate part of this increased income will be applied to meet excess needs.

Included in the income group are those recipients who own their own homes and are charged nominal sums for "use and occupancy" value. These persons may have no actual cash income, but the use of their own homes is considered a resource for which certain deductions may be made in determining the actual payment. In effect this use and occupancy value is deducted from the $15 allowed for shelter, the balance of the amount being considered to meet such expenses as taxes, insurance, minor upkeep, etc., on the home.

Amount of income for the 48.6 percent with income, including the use and occupancy value resources, was distributed approximately as follows in December, 1949:

Under $10	50 percent
$11 to $20	22 percent
$21 to $30	16 percent
$31 to $40	5 percent
$41 to $50	3 percent
Over $50	4 percent

Seventy-seven percent of those with income under $10 represented recipients owning their own homes and credited with use and occupancy value.

In dollar value, income from old age and survivors insurance payments represented almost 45 percent of total income recorded, exclusive of use and occupancy value, in December, 1949. This becomes a much larger proportion beginning October, 1950, since these payments were increased roughly 77 percent by the 1950 amendments to the Social Security Act.

Principal sources of income, with estimated total monthly amounts involved as of December, 1949, were as follows:

Old age and survivors insurance benefits	$963,000
Contributions from relatives	449,000
Pensions and annuities	304,000
Income from real property	151,000
Earnings	121,000
All forms of income other than use and occupancy value—Total	2,156,700

Approximately 27 percent of the total recipients have some form of income other than use and occupancy value of their own homes. Seventeen percent of the total case load receive old age and survivors insurance payments.

D. APPLICATION OF THE STANDARDS

In terms of meeting the actual needs of the individual, there are a number of inequities and discrepancies in application of the flat-grant of $75, with income deductions and excess need allowances. There is unequal treatment of the actual needs of those aged who must rely upon the old age security program for their maintenance.

The case load may be divided almost equally between those with some form of income resources and those without. Presumably the actual needs of these two groups of aged persons would be similar. However, in the one instance the absolute maximum funds available for maintenance is the $75 maximum amount. In the other, through the combination of the flat-grant and use of income to meet excess needs, the total funds available to the individuals is greater. But even in this latter group there is not equality, since the amount of income limits the excess need allowances and some thus have more total funds for use than others.

Judged from the point of view of total cost or in relationship with aid granted other groups of needy persons, such as families with dependent children, it is a liberal and thus relatively expensive program. Emphasis is on maintaining the basic standard of $75 payment and minimizing deductions because of income. This results in a higher average cost per case than might result from a program based on accurately measuring need.

1. Standard for Basic Needs

This standard is obviously geared to equal the $75 amount established by the Legislature. There are two items, shelter and utilities, involving costs that vary considerably between recipients. If the values for these items were established on a standard cost schedule basis, such as in the A. N. C. program, they would vary between localities and the shelter item would be on an as paid basis except for limitation by amounts. However, it is not possible to establish the standards on an objective cost basis because of the flat-grant principle laid down by the Legislature.

Additional deviations from the normal concept of establishing standards to measure need, are involved in the method of treating situations in which basic consumption items may be provided to recipients from other sources.

Almost 25 percent of the aged recipients are living with relatives and friends other than with spouse only. It would normally be expected that these individuals are furnished free rent and utilities, and perhaps other items involved in the standards such as household maintenance items, and that accordingly the value of these items as established in the schedule would be deducted in determining the payment since these items are not needed but are resources furnished the recipient outside the program.

State regulations provide for evaluation of such free rent and utilities, but are so written as to more or less encourage finding that the recipient is actually paying for such services. Under normal circumstances it can be expected that few persons would be charging aged relatives for such household expenses in the absence of state funds made available under a pension-type program.

Even where it is determined that free rent is available to the recipient, there is not an automatic deduction of the $15 allowed for this item of expense. State regulations provide that the type of housing accommodations shall be evaluated in relation to comparable rents in the community and adequacy of housing, with varying values established ranging from $5 to $15. Thus if it is not considered that the shelter provided is substandard, $5 is deducted from the rent allowance to represent the value of this free rent resources. If it is considered "intermediate" the value placed would be $10. If considered standard the deduction equals the $15 allowed for payment of shelter by the standard.

On the other hand many recipients will have to pay more than $15 a month for shelter. If they have no outside income to apply against this increased cost as an excess need, the difference between the $15 theoretically allowed for rent and the actual cost of accommodations must be made up out of other portions of the $75 allowance. Since the utility item appears high for many of these recipients, this excess might be applied to rent or amounts taken from such other items as personal incidentals, clothing, transportation or perhaps food to make up the difference between actual cost and amount allowed for shelter.

2. Excess Need Standards

The enumerated excess need items are available only to those who have income except insofar as there is room in the basic standard for meeting a portion of such needs identified as permitting allowances for excess needs.

There is very little information available as to just what excess needs are being met or what the true special needs of the aged group are. These special needs are not evaluated unless the person has income, and then generally only to the extent that the income available can cover the cost. The Department of Social Welfare has not made recent studies as to the extent to which specific items are being recognized and the cost of providing for these special needs.

It is generally considered that the various types of health and medical care needs account for the great majority of special needs. It should be noted that while persons without income may not receive any recognition for such needs under the program, they are furnished free medical care services through the county governments. The costs of providing such services are not reflected in the costs of the O. A. S. program.

Of those recipients who have income, including the use and occupancy value income, 70 percent are considered to have excess needs. Of those who do not have income, only one-fourth of 1 percent receive any special need allowances, these being through supplemental county funds and exclusive of free medical care provided. For the total case load, about 35 percent are allowed excess need items.

There appears to be a direct relationship between amount of income and a finding that excess needs exist. In the group with income of less than $10, which is made up in large part of those with use and occupancy value of their own homes only, 39 percent are considered as having special needs. In the $11 to $20 income group, 57 percent are allowed excess needs and in the $21 to $30 group, 72 percent. In the higher income groups, the proportion allowed excess needs was over 90 percent.

Where there is income it appears that emphasis is placed on determining that excess needs do exist so that part or all of the income may be retained by the recipient.

The importance, from a cost point of view, of these excess need allowances is illustrated by the fact that for the month of September, 1950, the allowances for special needs were equivalent to approximately $1,200,000.

E. GENERAL COMMENT

A flat-grant or pension type program such as established has the virtue of guaranteeing to aged persons a certain basic standard of living—$75, or $75 plus income. It is not, however, an equitable or economical method of meeting the actual requirements of needy aged persons.

Persons needs differ because their circumstances differ. A minimum-maximum type of payment cannot satisfactorily meet actual need. If actual requirements of needy persons are to be met, the amount of the payment to specific individuals will vary considerably because their resources vary and their special needs are different. Under the present program some aged recipients undoubtedly continue in need although receiving the maximum payment. Others may receive more than they actually require because of the concept of a minimum payment and retention of income.

The Legislature has established a general standard that aged persons should have available the equivalent of the purchasing power of $75 to meet their requirements. It is possible to maintain that standard and yet administer a program that has closer relationship to actual needs of individuals. This would require abandonment of the flat-grant or minimum-maximum payment concept and substitution of full accounting for all resources and recognition of special needs in all cases, with probable reduction in total cost of the program.

Without reducing the general standard that has been determined should be provided aged recipients, a true needs program recognizing the varying needs of individuals can be established along the following lines:

1. Minimum standards for determining need and assistance payments would be based upon a standard of living equivalent to the purchasing power of $75, the actual amount to be adjusted with changing living costs. Basic consumption items would be defined and values placed upon them through objective determination of actual quantity-quality requirements, currently priced. The total value of such items would equal $75, but might include more items than now covered in the basic standards thus limiting to that extent the special needs items.

2. There would be established specific and detailed standards governing the circumstances under which special need items not covered in the basic standard might be allowed, with values or limits of cost, on individual items. These would be applied on the basis of the actual need of the individual, and not his income status.

3. All income or resources, including the value of consumption items provided from other sources, would be evaluated and deducted from the value of total requirements in determining the actual payment.

It has not been possible to conduct the studies that are required to determine the cost factors inherent in the present method of administering old age security. Detailed study of all of the factors brought out in this general analysis are necessary to determine how there can be established a sounder program for aged assistance. The high cost of the present program coupled with the obvious inequities in meeting the needs of all aged recipients are ample justification for extensive study of all features of the program.

A complete and detailed evaluation of the present standards of assistance for both basic and excess needs, and evaluation of methods for determining and accounting for resources should be made. This should be done in relation to the basic purposes of meeting the actual requirements of all aged individuals as economically as possible, yet providing a sound and adequate standard of care.

F. SPECIFIC ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS

1. Citizenship

Noncitizens, regardless of the length of residence in the Country or the State, are ineligible for old age security. Citizenship is not a qualification in any of the other assistance programs.

Needy aged noncitizens are provided for in the county general relief programs. The actual numbers involved is not known as there are no statewide figures. However, the San Diego County Welfare Director estimated that there were 100 such individuals being provided assistance by that county under the general relief program because of their technical ineligibility for old age security.

There would be little, if any, additional cost by transfer of such general relief cases to the old age security program, and particularly not if the program were administered on a needs rather than flat-grant basis. Since federal funds would be available for such persons under the old age security program, these would make up for the difference in payment between a general relief standard and the more adequate payments provided under the old age security program.

2. Residence Requirements

The law specifies California residence for five of the past nine years, and one year continuous residence prior to filing application, as one of the eligibility requirements. Because of the relative liberality of the California program as compared with most other states, this residence requirement is defended on the basis that it prevents or discourages individuals from migrating to California for the purpose of securing assistance.

Those aged persons who do not have the residence requirements for old age security, but who do have sufficient residence to qualify for county general relief, will be provided for under the general relief programs if in need.

There is no state-wide data on the number of general relief recipients denied old age security solely on the basis of residence requirements. Similarly to the noncitizens, their transfer to the old age security program would probably involve no more state and county funds than are now being expended by the counties for their care under the general relief program.

Many people do not believe that aged individuals will migrate for the purpose of securing more favorable public assistance grants. Most of them have close personal and family ties that they are unwilling to break, particularly in their declining years, by moving to another state.

Others feel strongly that to reduce or eliminate residence requirements would cause an influx of elderly people to California for the sole purpose of securing old age security, thus increasing the already heavy tax burden of caring for the aged, and some persons attribute the present large number of O. A. S. cases partially to in-migration because of the relatively favorable program in California.

3. Institutional Inmates

There is a large group of aged persons who because of senility or other chronic infirmities are more or less permanent resident of public medical institutions or homes or who are cared for in such institutions for extended periods of time.

Under the old age security law, these persons are not eligible for assistance except for a period of two months for those recipients entering such institutions. Cost of their care is borne by the counties or other public agencies, and for some of the group partially by subventions paid under authority of the old age security law to the counties

For purposes of securing federal funds under the old age assistance program of the Social Security Act, these persons can now be classified under the old age security program. The amendments of 1950 to the Social Security Act makes this possible, but requires amendment to the California code to take advantage of these federal funds.

There are two groups of aged persons involved. Those who were on the O. A. S. rolls at time of admission to the public institutions and those who while never on the rolls could qualify on a needs basis, having entered the institutions before making application under the O. A. S. program.

In the case of O. A. S. recipients entering such institutions, the O. A. S. payments may be continued for a period of two months. After that time, O. A. S. is terminated but the State pays to county institutions a subvention of $35.20 per person. For those who had never been classified under the program, there is no provision for financial participation under the old age security program.

Amendment to the law to provide for payment of assistance to or on behalf of eligible persons in public medical institutions (except those in mental and tubercular hospitals) would bring into the State $30 per month of federal funds for each of these persons. This classification of such persons under the O. A. S. program would not increase the cost of their care, but would shift a portion of that cost from local taxpayers to the Federal Government.

The primary beneficiaries of such amendment would be the county governments since they are paying for care of most of these persons and would be enabled to charge them for a portion of the cost of care through the O. A. S. payment. State costs would be approximately the same for the group now covered by subventions. State costs would be increased for the group not covered by the present subvention.

Principal effect of such an amendment would be a redistribution of costs. Such an amendment was proposed at the special session in September, 1950, but failed of passage. At that time it was estimated for the nine months period October 1, 1950, to June 30, 1951, the amendment would have decreased county costs by $1,704,000, and increased state costs by $1,015,000. There would have been an estimated net decrease to California taxpayers of almost $700,000, based on an average of 4,500 such institutional inmates being covered under the old age security law.

4. Real Property

A recipient may hold real property with county assessed value, less encumbrances, of not more than $3,500. Such property not used as a home must be utilized to meet the needs of the recipient, such as through producing income.

Approximately one-third of the O. A S. recipients have real property and of that group 92 percent have homes. Some 15 percent of the recipients own real property other than homes, and in about half of these cases this other real property is the only property owned.

The approximate distribution of recipients owning real property, by assessed value of that property is as follows:

Assessed value under $500	27 percent
Assessed from $500 to $990	33 percent
Assessed from $1,000 to $1,990	34 percent
Assessed from $2,000 to $2,990	5 percent
Assessed $3,000 or over	1 percent

Twenty percent of those owning real property have encumbrances on the property, these in many cases being in amounts in excess of the assessed value.

Encumbrances under $1,000	39 percent
Encumbrances of $1,000 to $1,999	26 percent
Encumbrances of $2,000 to $2,999	16 percent
Encumbrances of $3,000 and over	19 percent

In approximately 6 percent of the cases, individuals holding real property had encumbrances on it of over $5,000 and in some instances running as high as $10,000.

G. RESPONSIBILITY OF RELATIVES

Section 2181 of the code requires that the boards of supervisors determine the ability of responsible relatives to contribute to the support of applicants for old age security. The maximum degree of liability of such relatives is established by a "Relatives' Contribution Scale." In "unusual" cases, the board of supervisors may establish the contribution amount at less than the scale.

Section 2224 requires that the board of supervisors send a form to each "spouse or adult child pecuniarily able to contribute" within the State to determine whether the relative is contributing and will continue to contribute. This form is to be completed by the relative as a sworn statement.

The granting of assistance is not contingent upon the filing of the forms or the determination of liability of the relative. Action taken is against the relative and the applicant for assistance is thus not penalized.

In state legislation throughout the Country, there have been four general approaches to the question of responsibility of relatives to support their aged parents:

1. No requirement either by statute or administrative method;
2. Specific laws requiring contributions;

3. Reliance upon provisions of the general laws requiring children to support their parents;
4. No legal provision, but inducement through administration for relatives to give voluntary support.

Because of the wide diversity of laws, general economic and social conditions, and administration between the states it is not possible to apply the experience of other states to the California old age security program. Neither is there any clear trend in state legislation concerning this problem.

The question of statutory responsibility requiring children to support their elders has been prominent in legislative discussion in California for years. There has been gradual liberalization of the laws pertaining to relative support and for a short period such provisions were not in existence and the administrative agency restricted in soliciting such contributions.

In the special session of 1950 amendments were made liberalizing the contribution scale to eliminate required contributions from a relatively large group of persons in the lower income groups.

1. Recent California Experience

A study conducted by the Department of Social Welfare in 1944 showed that over 55 percent of relatives contributing to the support of aged parents were not actually liable under the contributions scale then in effect.

Contributions made in 1944 by those relatives who were liable under the scale were actually 32 percent greater than required by law.

Of 21,400 contributing relatives, 11,900 or 55.6 percent were not liable under the contributions scale. At least 2,100 were contributing in excess of their established liability; 1,800 with established liability were making no contributions.

Only 1.38 percent of relatives requested to file statements were referred to district attorneys. Of a total of 3,250 cases referred, only 38 were taken to court.

The 1944 study indicates that relatives financially able are willing to contribute to the support of aged parents on a voluntary basis. It also indicates that in administration there was a tendency to exempt responsible relatives from contributing or a reluctance to take legal action against them.

Article XXV removed the relative responsibility provisions and restricted the welfare departments in soliciting relatives for contributions.

The Social Welfare Department reports that 13.1 percent of the O. A. S. recipients in December, 1948, were receiving contributions from relatives. The proportion of cases receiving contributions dropped to 8 percent by June, 1949, and 7 percent by January, 1950.

This experience indicates a reduction in the proportion of recipients receiving contributions, but is not conclusive when considering other factors involved. Had the relative responsibility change been the only change in the program, the experience would be a valid test. However, the amount of the grant was increased and other liberalizations made. Since approximately one-third of the recipients receiving contributions in December, 1948, were receiving them in amounts of $10 for less per month, it is possible that the increase in the grant had as much or more to do with the reduction than the change in the relative responsibility law itself.

The average contribution increased from $17.22 in 1948 to $18.96 in 1949. This may be due to the elimination of small contributors. The annual amount of contributions for 1948 was $5,124,000 and dropped to $4,528,000 in 1949. This indicates that the removal of the relative responsibility provisions resulted in decreased contributions since the case load increased 30 percent during that time.

Senate Bill No. 3 of the 1950 Special Session liberalized the scale for determining liability and the minimum income level was raised to a point that would have eliminated the group contributing $10 or less in December, 1948.

It is difficult, if not impossible, to accurately determine the effects that the law, or the absence of one, actually has on welfare costs. Such factors as attitudes of individuals, the adequacy of assistance payments, changes in living costs and the economic situation of relatives, administrative efforts to develop resources, all influence relative contributions. In California, the pension concept in the old-age program must certainly have much to do with the attitude of relatives and the aged recipients themselves.

2. The Contribution Scale

The scale is essentially a guide. Data available indicates that it is not enforced in all situations. If it is conceived of as a guide, and exemptions are made on the basis of family circumstances, some of the effect of and objections to specific legal requirements are removed.

It is possible that the scale itself contributes to less contributions. Any scale is drawn on a fairly arbitrary basis in attempting to measure money income required for family maintenance. It is probable that many persons exempted by the scale are financially able to contribute at least small amounts. They are relieved by law of making contributions, and some may assume that this relieves them of moral obligations as well. Nevertheless the 1944 study shows that many relatives do contribute even though not legally liable which strengthens the argument that the effectiveness of statutory requirement is overestimated.

It is possible also that the establishment of the scale in the law would have the effect of limiting contributions of some relatives to the amount established by law. The 1944 experience indicates that many relatives exceeded the legal liability amount in their contributions, however.

3. Inducements to Contribute

The method of administering the flat-grant assistance program may provide specific inducements to relatives to contribute to meet special needs. Since in the O. A. S. program the $75 grant is considered a base, emphasis appears to be on finding special needs over and above the base so that the recipients may retain part or all income outside the assistance payment. This provides an inducement to relatives to contribute to provide "extras" for the parent. It also has the effect of reducing the savings to the State from relative contributions.

4. Influence to Case Load

The relative responsibility factor cannot be isolated as to its potential effect on the case load. It is the judgment of many that elimination of legal requirements would cause additional persons to apply for assistance and that the present law is actually a deterrent in many cases.

The present contributions scale has been liberalized to the point where it is doubtful that potential recipients are holding back from applying for assistance because of the legal responsibility provision. Unless there were intense problems of family relationship, the major deterrent would normally be unwillingness of an aged person to impose hardship on his relatives. The contributions scale, both in its construction and the ability of the boards of supervisors to make exceptions from it, would minimize such hardship situations.

5. Influence on Average Payment

To the extent that the contributions are deducted from the basic grant of $75, the average payments are reduced and savings in costs to the State accomplished. The emphasis on finding "special needs" and applying income to them, cuts down on these potential savings.

Since a large portion of those contributing are not required to do so by law, the contributions would continue without the statutory requirement. To the extent that they are contributing only to meet "special needs" or provide "extras" the contributions have little influence on costs to the State.

To the extent that the existence of the scale causes public welfare workers to ignore the possibilities of contributions or provides to relatives the impression that they are relieved of all responsibility, the legal provisions might actually provide for less savings in total costs.

6. Relative Contributions as a Resource

It is the practice in some areas, where there are no specific legal requirements such as in California, to explore with applicants and their relatives the possibility of voluntary contributions. This is effective to the extent to which the agency emphasizes the development of resources for its recipients. If done on a sound basis, some of the undesirable consequences of statutory requirements (where family relationships are strained; where hardship would be created) are eliminated. Whether or not equal contributions could be secured through the voluntary method, and with encouragement and follow-up by the agency, is in the area of guesswork. In such situations the case worker is guided by a scale not unlike the one in the California law in determining the advisability of contacting relatives to secure their voluntary support.

7. Procedural Problems

The Department of Social Welfare has estimated the cost of administration of the relative responsibility provisions as 10 percent of costs of local administration. This is admittedly a rough estimate. It would amount to about $1,026,000 for the Fiscal Year 1950-1951.

The 1944 study indicated that about 70 percent of O A. S. recipients had one or more relatives in the State. There were 278,500 such relatives or 1.7 per case. On this basis, it could be assumed that about 450,000 relatives would be involved now.

Under the present law each of these 450,000 relatives must be contacted annually.

The requirements of a sworn statement raises problems because of the inconvenience to the relative involved in securing notary services. The department is attempting to minimize this through a preliminary inquiry form, which need not be sworn to. However where liability is indicated an additional form must be executed by the relative, this one being the sworn statement.

This procedure, set up by the law, is of questionable value. However it may be argued that enforcement of the law requires such an elaborate mechanism since income and circumstances of families do change.

8. Another Approach

Consideration might be given to deleting from the law the present provisions regarding relative responsibility and substituting therefore a general provision to the effect that in determining eligibility and the amount of assistance to be granted to an individual the department shall evaluate all readily available and potential resources for support of the individual, including the ability of relatives to assist in his support but shall consider such resources in determining eligibility or amount of assistance only to the extent that they are actually available.

This would place relative responsibility on an administrative basis. For administration, the department would be required to establish regulations governing the use of relatives as a resource, including guides in the form of contribution scales for use of the case worker.

It would place the relative responsibility factor on a voluntary rather than compulsory basis.

H. PROPERTY LIENS

Much if not all of the controversy over relative responsibility for support of aged persons would be eliminated or rendered meaningless if there were provided liens on property of recipients of old age security. Such liens are now prohibited by the State Constitution. However they are worthy of discussion in this report.

A great deal of the objection to liens on property of aged recipients is due either to misunderstanding of their effect, or because of experience with unduly harsh lien provisions which tended to restrict recipients in the management and control of their property while living. Some of the objection is purely emotional.

Liens in old age assistance programs are common features in many states and there has been generally good experience in administration of reasonable lien provisions. The justification for such liens is on the following basis:

1. The recipient is entitled to public assistance as a matter of right, if he is in need, and is able to rely upon such aid during his declining years;

2. Such real property as he possesses and which is used for his current needs, remains his during the period of his lifetime and that of a surviving spouse or dependent child;

3. When such property is no longer required by the recipient or his dependents, it should revert to the State which has supported the recipient rather than be inherited by relatives who have not assumed responsibility for support;

4. Through establishment of the lien, the recipient has the knowledge that he is not actually dependent upon charity but is exchanging his interest in property at the time of his death for assistance during his lifetime.

5. A choice is given to relatives in line of inheritance as to whether they wish to support the recipient or have their interests in the property taken over by the State in consideration for the use of public funds for supporting the aged person in need.

6. The State recovers part or all of its expenditure in aiding the recipient and thus decreases the total costs to the taxpayers in providing for needy aged persons.

A simple and adequate type of lien provision can be established by requiring as a condition to granting assistance to persons who own or have an interest in real property, that such persons enter into an agreement that all grants of old age assistance will constitute a lien against the interests in such real property and shall remain a lien until satisfied.

Such liens would take priority over any other liens subsequently acquired except tax liens. In estates, claims for funeral expenses in limited amounts, expenses of last illness, costs of administration, and allowance for the widow and children for a limited period following death would also have priority over the lien.

The lien would not be enforced while a home was being occupied by the recipient or by his surviving spouse or minor child or any physically or mentally handicapped child of the recipient. However it would be enforceable as a claim against the estate if admitted to probate by an interested party other than the State.

The lien could be discharged by the recipient, his heirs, or personal representatives at any time by paying to the State the amount represented by assistance payments.

Such liens would not be prejudicial to the interests of the recipient and he would have full control and management of his property during his lifetime. It is recognized that for many aged, their homes provide their most tangible link with the past and offer a basis for maintaining a sense of independence as well as social and emotional security and community status. These values need not be interfered with through a lien program under which he would be exchanging his interest in the property for the security provided him through regular monthly assistance payments.

Twenty percent of the recipients holding real property have encumbrances on that property. In effect, through the assistance payment, they are building up an equity by discharging the encumbrances that will be left to heirs upon death in the absence of a lien provision in the law.

I. INITIATIVE MEASURES TO BE PRESENTED TO THE LEGISLATURE

In October, 1950, it was announced that sufficient signatures had been secured for presentation of an initiative sponsored by the California Institute of Social Welfare to the Legislature at the 1951 Regular Session. If not approved by the Legislature, the measure will automatically go on the ballot at the next regular election.

This initiative proposes a number of substantial changes in the old age security program, these being the following:

1. State administration and state financing of the program.

2. Removal of the relative responsibility provisions of the law and restricting the administrative agency from making "any demand upon any person to contribute to the support * * *."

3. Continues present provisions for amount of security at $75 when added to income and with provision for meeting special needs from income, but in an amount not to exceed $75.

4. Provides for adjustment in the amount of the basic standard of $75 by a formula requiring adjustment of 50 cents for each full point increase in the cost of living, using March 15, 1950 as a base. Any decrease that would bring the basic amount below $75 is to be ignored as is any increase in the cost of living greater than 50 points. A 50-point increase would require an adjustment of $25, thus making the total security $100, which would be the limit under the formula.

5. Aid in addition to that provided for in the basic standard would be given for health and medical needs, but not to exceed $25 per month. This would be for medical and dental care by practitioners chosen by the recipients, nursing care, and medicines, drugs, hearing aids, optical supplies, appliances, etc., as prescribed by a practitioner.

This additional aid would not apply where income of the recipient has not been taken into account in determining the assistance grant (use of income for special needs).

6. Actual funeral expenses up to a maximum of $150 would be paid if there are no other specific provisions for such expenses such as through burial or other insurance.

7. The personal property exemption would be raised to $1,500, less encumbrances. Motor vehicles of moderate value used for essential transportation would be excluded in determining the amount of personal property.

8. No restriction would be placed on the value of real property, but the exemption of such property would apply only to that occupied as a home or otherwise being used for current or future identifiable needs of the recipient.

9. Establish entitlement to necessary medical and hospital care from the county in which the recipient is living, without regard to county residence. Counties would be authorized to demand payment for such care from the county of residence.

The initiative states that it is its purpose "to make old age security available to the needy aged of the State in such manner that all needs of such eligible applicant and recipient shall be met, without discrimination between those who have income or resources insufficient to meet their full needs and those who are without any other income or resources whatever, in conformity with the requirements of the Constitution of the State of California and of the Federal Social Security."

In another section (Section 12) it provides that the state department shall provide for the care of needy aged "to the end that they shall receive suitable care and that there shall be throughout the State a uniform standard of records and methods of treatment of aged persons based upon their individual needs and circumstances."

In connection with additional aid for health services (Section 7) it is provided that such additional aid will not apply where these services are met from income taken into account in determining the amount of the grant "nor to any health services or other items included in the monthly budget of a recipient whose needs exceed the maximum amount of security to which he is entitled under Section 2020 and whose grant of security is determined on the basis of his excess need."

These three sections would indicate that aid is to be given on the basis of individual need in all cases. However the provisions of Section 6 amending Sections 2020 of the code, would not permit of recognition of excess needs unless the recipient has income. There are no other provisions in the initiative that would make it possible to meet the individual needs referred to, over and above what can be met by the $75 basic grant, except through application of income to such needs or in the case of the additional aid for health services.

Insofar as the recipients without outside income are concerned, the language cited is inconsistent with the actual provisions of the initiative. There would be no method provided for meeting their excess needs, except for health services, just as there is no such method in the present law.

The initiative would make no change in the residence or citizenship requirements of the present law.

If the initiative should be passed, either by the Legislature or at a general election, it would make it impossible to take advantage of recent changes in the Federal Social Security Act permitting classification of inmates of public institutions under the old age security program. There are distinct financial advantages, particularly to the counties, in amending the old age security law to permit classification of the substantial number of aged inmates of county hospitals and homes under the program as is discussed elsewhere in this report.

The sponsors of the initiative have pointed out that the provisions to provide for additional aid for health services has been taken from the Washington State law. In the State of Washington a broad program of health services was established, applicable to other categories as well as the aged recipients of that state.

For the year ending March, 1950, this health service cost an average of $7 42 per month per person on the assistance rolls (including children, and general relief persons as well as the aged). Since aged persons would normally require more health services, particularly of the character outlined in the initiative, than other groups in the population, the cost per person for an aged group should be considerably higher than for the total assistance group.

At present there is no basis for estimating what the costs of this additional aid for health services would be for old age security recipients in California. Costs could be determined only after actual experience with purchasing such services and would be influenced by the extent to which recipients took advantage of such services, fees charged by practitioners, and the type of appliances purchased by the recipients.

It would appear that the special needs for health and medical services would be removed by the initiative from administrative control except insofar as the $25 monthly limitation applied. Entitlement would be automatic for the recipient and there would be no basis for establishing regulations and standards for determining circumstances under which such needs could be allowed or for controlling the cost of such services and goods.

On the whole, the effect of the initiative measure would be to liberalize to a minor extent the personal and real property exemptions; to adjust aid payments with changes in living costs; and to increase the assistance costs through providing specific additional allowances for health and medical services. It would make for a substantial change in administration of the program by re-establishing state administration and would reduce county costs by providing for total financing of the program from state and federal funds.

The initiative would not change the present flat-grant method of providing assistance and would not in effect guarantee equal treatment to all aged recipients on the basis of their needs since allowance for special needs, other than health services, would still be dependent upon the recipient having income to apply to such needs. However it can be presumed that the predominate special needs that cannot be met within the present flat-grant are for health and medical services and to this extent the establishment of additional allowances for this purpose would serve to meet most of the special needs of all of the aged recipients.

J. CONCLUSION

The old age security program is not a thing separate and apart. It needs to be considered in its relationships to other social and economic programs, including the general problems of an aging population.

This general evaluation is limited to certain specific features involved in the administration of the law that establishes a combination pension-needs program. It indicates that the needs of elderly people can be met on a more equitable basis than is now true, and that probably the total costs can be reduced without lowering the basic standard of living to be afforded those aged persons who are deprived of other means of support.

California, in common with the rest of the Country, has and will continue to experience an increase in its aged population, not only in their numbers but in their ratio to the total population. Unless there is found some better solution than now exists to increase the opportunities of elderly people for self-support and to provide other means for giving them basic economic security in old age, the burden on the remainder of the population for providing for the aged will increase.

A report of the U. S. Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, August 29, 1950 (Report No. 2456, Calendar No. 2462, Eighty-first Congress, Second Session), illustrates the problem in quoting from a statement from testimony of Dr. Howard A. Rusk, Associate Editor of the New York Times, as follows:

"It has been said by students in the field that if we do not do something about utilizing our individuals over 65 in our economy, if we do not do something about providing more opportunities for the disabled to be trained and to take their part in our economy, and the same for the chronically ill, that by 1980 for every able-bodied worker in the labor force there will be one in this category on each laborer's back."

There are several problems posed. One is how best to provide economic security for those unable to be self-sufficient in old age. Another is determining means for making the best possible use of the human resources of the older group in the population. There is a third problem of meeting the social and personal needs of elderly persons aside from their economic requirements.

The present old age security program does provide a measure of economic security to most aged persons who have attained the calendar age of 65. In doing so, it provides more generously for some than for others in relation to their actual total living requirements. It does not attempt to meet the needs of the aged individual under 65 and these persons, together with noncitizens and those with short residence, must rely upon the variable and in comparison substandard general relief programs for subsistence.

Because so much emphasis is placed on "Old Age Pensions" in public concept and administration, when in reality the program is not a strict pension program, there is more emphasis on legal or technical entitlement than on need and a tendency to consider the program as an end in itself.

It would appear more constructive to consider this program as a needs program, supplementing other forms of social and economic action to provide for aged persons and with the hope that through continued development of these other forms of action the need for this supplemental or residual aid would gradually lessen. It is in that direction that lies sound security for persons in their declining years.

As a first step, the law should be amended and so administered that the determination of eligibility and amount of assistance is based upon the needs of the individual applicant, such as outlined previously in this report. If in this process, the general relief program can be standardized and the level of aid increased to a point of uniform adequacy, there would be developed an integrated public assistance program attuned to the needs of all classes of people in the State.

Primary reliance for the support of elderly people who have left gainful employment should be upon the old age and survivors insurance system and other private and public retirement and annuity programs. Such programs have developed considerably in recent years and emphasis should be placed on broadening and strengthening them to make them more adequate rather than upon a state pension program for those aged persons who are in need because of inadequate protection from other forms of economic security. The assistance program would supplement inadequate pensions or meet the needs of those who for one reason or another cannot have the protection of such programs.

Much needs to be done to assure to elderly individuals opportunities to remain in or secure gainful employment. The individual himself will be better off and would prefer to continue work. The employed worker will be at least partially self-supporting rather than wholly dependent on income produced by others, and his contribution to the total national output will help raise the general level of living for all.

This is a problem of industry and labor as well as of government. Discriminatory employment policies, failure to make work adjustments for older workers, and forced retirement all contribute to economic insecurity of older people, which is not justified by the demonstrated skills and productive capacity of older workers.

Attention needs to be focused upon health problems, living arrangements, education, community participation, vocational rehabilitation, and other measures for improving the well-being of the aged and to enable them to continue as active, productive, and contributing members of society.

It is only through attention to the total needs of the aged population and recognition of the changing social and economic conditions that have created problems that will continue to increase unless attacked, that a sound public policy for meeting the needs of elderly persons can be evolved. Unless these things are done there will be increasing pressures on the public assistance program.

VI. GENERAL RELIEF OR INDIGENT AID

Since there are actually 58 different general relief programs varying in basic eligibility requirements, standards of aid, and administration, they can be evaluated only on a very general basis.

Aided are those needy persons and families who for one reason or another cannot meet the technical eligibility requirements of the other assistance programs which are financed on a federal-state-county basis. Included in the indigent aid relief rolls are persons 65 years and over and dependent children not eligible for help under the old age security or aid to needy children programs for technical reasons. Included also are the chronically ill and disabled as well as those temporarily in need because of unemployment or as a result of temporary illness or for other similar reasons.

While these programs might be considered as a "catch-all" for those needy who cannot qualify under the state-wide categorical programs, they do not necessarily provide relief to all of these needy persons. In particular, the county residence requirements (usually three years) may render many needy persons ineligible for even indigent aid except perhaps on an emergency basis.

Persons who do receive general relief are normally aided on a basis considered much less adequate than under the other assistance programs, due either to unwillingness or inability of individual counties to finance the program on a level that would permit a higher standard of aid, or to other localized policies. The fact that no federal or state funds are available to meet a portion of the costs requires that the total financial load fall upon the individual county governments.

In relation to the special assistance programs established for specific categories of needy, the indigent aid programs are generally inadequate and restrictive. The manner in which aid is given is frequently in considerable contrast with provisions made for those needy who can qualify for old age security, aid to the needy blind, or aid to needy children.

Frequently there are fine technical lines distinguishing between the persons receiving indigent aid and those helped under other programs. While it is commonly felt that general relief programs are designed primarily for employable persons, policies in many counties restrict eligibility to the unemployable or provide only emergency or seasonal relief to employables. The high proportion of unemployables, or limited employables, is reflected in the relatively stable single-person case load which has not shown the seasonal variations or responsiveness to changed employment conditions that has been true of family cases.

There are many aged persons, either not having yet attained the calendar age of 65 or barred from O. A. S. help because of citizenship or residence requirements, on the general relief rolls. The chronically ill and disabled must likewise fall back on general relief for subsistence because of the absence of a specific state-wide program for them. So, too, in family situations, children may be dependent and families in need even though the parent is not incapacitated or absent from the home as required for classification under the aid to needy children program.

Unemployment does have a direct impact on the general relief load and accounts for the rather sharp upward and downward trends in cases aided. There is a direct relationship between general relief case loads and seasonal employment conditions, this being particularly true of those counties with a rural economy. It also accounts for a general rise in the average monthly general relief cases over a period of years which trend was recently reversed with acceleration of employment due to the defense preparedness program.

Illustrative of the composition of general relief cases is the following data included in an analysis of the Contra Costa County case load during March, 1950, which month is generally a peak load month at which time the proportion of employables would be greater than during other periods of the year due to seasonal unemployment.[1]

Total general relief cases	1,609
Total family cases	1,131
Total single-person cases	478

	Family cases	Single-person cases
Fully employable	736	6
Partially employable	62	25
Physically unemployable	158	322
Socially unemployable	177	125

Forty-six and one-tenth percent of the total cases were considered as unemployable and described in the report as the "hard core" of the relief load. This percentage was during a month in which the proportion of employables could be considered to be at a seasonal peak.

The general relief program has shown definite seasonal trends, but until recent months the total cases were gradually increasing since the end of the war. March is normally the peak month of the year, and in September case loads are generally lowest because of seasonal employment factors. The following table shows the trend in the program over recent years:

General Relief Cases, Average Grants, and Total Expenditures for Months Indicated

Month	Total cases	Total persons	Families	Average grants Family cases	One-person cases	Total expenditures
December, 1947	24,970	54,977	10,700	$64.36	$33.10	$1,160,938
December, 1948	32,229	74,878	14,673	68.00	34.42	1,602,074
March, 1949	43,151	112,879	22,463	66.40	33.25	2,179,508
July, 1949	35,951	89,029	18,457	65.91	34 03	1,811,694
September, 1949	36,950	91,525	18,864	71.89	34 13	1,991,496
December, 1949	40,082	96,920	19,680	65 10	34.77	1,990,577
March, 1950	57,060	145,755	29,857	57 37	34.36	2,409,982
July, 1950	37,741	75,501	13,440	64 13	35 19	1,717,019
September, 1950	32,192	55,969	9,224	60 20	36 27	1,388,458

The sharp reduction in family cases between March, 1950, and September, 1950, is attributable to both the improved employment conditions and to the fact that many family cases that would be under the general relief category prior to October, 1949, are now classified under the aid to needy children program. The general relief family case loads from December, 1949, on would have been substantially greater if the eligibility base for the aid to needy children program had not been broadened.

It will be noted that the one-person cases increased steadily to a peak of 27,203 in March, 1950, and that they have not declined from that point in anywhere near the proportion of the family cases. This may illustrate that improved employment conditions were responsible for only part of the drop in family cases (transfers to aid to needy children accounting for the remainder) and that there are a smaller proportion of employable persons on the general relief single-person case load.

The table also reveals rather sharp fluctuation in the average grant per family whereas there has been relative stability and a progressive increase in average payment per single-member case.

The responsiveness of the general relief program to economic conditions appears to have a direct relationship to policies of providing such help in the individual counties. Such policies appear to be less restrictive in terms of eligibility and more liberal in relation to assistance grants in periods of relatively good economic conditions when general relief loads are lowest. As the financial pressures of increasing case loads arise, there is a tendency in many counties to make the programs more restrictive and to reduce assistance grants in order to keep total costs down. Thus, there is a process of constant adjustment in eligibility requirements and standards of assistance, providing less help when economic conditions in the locality increase the need for help. Local financial ability tends to be lowest where needs are greatest. Poorer counties are unable to provide for the same measure of adequacy in assistance to the needy as the more prosperous ones. Those counties faced with heavy off-season unemployment may experience greater proportionate welfare problems than others.

The result of this great variety of programs in which different eligibility tests and standards of assistance apply is that people with similar needs are treated unequally throughout the State. Especially is there evident inequality of treatment between those protected under the federal-state-county categorical programs and those relying upon general relief for financial help.

Over the past, through the establishment of special categorical programs certain groups of persons have been transferred from the county indigent aid to state-wide assistance programs designed for specific groups. In turn these categorical programs have themselves been gradually liberalized, while most general relief programs have not, making for considerable contrast in aid provided.

When in 1949 the aid to needy children eligibility provisions were broadened, a large number of families that formerly would have been subject to county general relief became eligible for the more adequate assistance under the state-wide program. If a special category for the permanently and totally disabled is established to take advantage of federal funds available for this group, another segment of the general relief load will be transferred over to a program operating under uniform standards throughout the State. Elimination of the residence and citizenship requirements under old age security would transfer over another large block of general relief recipients.

The piecemeal transfer of all groups of needy individuals from general relief to state-wide programs geared to the limitations placed in the Social Security Act for federal financial participation would still leave in the indigent aid program a large block of unemployable persons such as the chronically ill and temporily disabled and would not solve the basic problem although relieving the counties of financial pressures that tend to cause restrictive eligibility determination and relatively low assistance grants.

A basic need is to secure some uniformity in the general relief program so that needy persons throughout the State may receive equal protection and to provide it on a basis of adequacy that has closer relationship to the assistance standards in the state-wide programs. The essential criteria for determination of eligibility should be economic need and the relief afforded should be adequate to relieve such need on a basis consistent with requirements for standards of decency and health.

This can be accomplished through activation of legislation already in being, with the State sharing in the costs of the program and establishing basic policies and supervision to provide for uniform treatment of persons in need.

General relief does present some separate problems because of the characteristics of the individuals or families involved. While a large portion of those receiving such aid are in circumstances very similar to those individuals and families aided under the categorical programs, a general relief program normally involves many persons who may be fully employable or more nearly so than would be true of those qualified for aid under other programs.

No data are available as to the characteristics of the general relief recipients. However, in view of the restrictive eligibility policies and in light of experience in other states, it can be safely assumed that the great proportion of those receiving general relief in periods of normal employment and business activity are persons who are either temporarily or permanently disabled or otherwise unable to work. During periods of high unemployment, including seasonal unemployment, the percentage of employables on the general relief rolls will increase.

The fact that some employables are in need does not alter the basic considerations for the manner in which economic need should be met, but does call for certain techniques in administration through application of a work test as part of the eligibility determination. This employability is a resource to the individual that should be used for self-maintenance, if the employment to do so is available. If no employment is actually available, and economic need exists, the individual or family is entitled to the same consideration as other needy persons.

Data available showing actual average cost per case, or per person, is misleading and cannot be compared with average costs in other programs as evidence of the difference in standards applied to general relief and other programs. This is because many general relief cases may receive assistance for only very short periods of time, less than a month, and because in most instances where employable persons are involved average resources will be greater than found in other programs.

Because of the greater portion of employables and temporarily unemployable persons normally found on general relief rolls, there also are usually differences in total need as compared with persons or families totally unemployable. In most cases, these general relief persons will be in need of assistance for shorter periods of time and will have more accumulated resources available to partially support themselves. In states where the same standards of assistance are applied to general relief cases as to those under the aid to dependent children category, it is found that the average payments for general relief are lower because of these greater resources available.

Other than the emphasis that must be given to determination of employability and availability of work, the differing resources available to these family cases, and a normally higher turnover of cases because of relative short-time eligibility, general relief presents no different problems than other programs for the administrative agencies, except in periods of acute economic distress. In those periods in which there is large-scale unemployment, special programs may be required because of the large volume of employable persons unable to find gainful work.

The Relief Act of 1945

This act has been in effect since September 15, 1945, providing for state financial participation in the general relief program. While reserving actual administration to the counties, it provides for state supervision, with standards for determining eligibility and the amount of assistance to be established by the State.

The act is not operative, its provisions being suspended until there is a finding of the occurrence of an economic emergency by the Senate and Assembly and the Governor.

It provides for state participation in direct and administrative costs on the basis of a formula which becomes operative when county expenditures for general relief exceed eight one-hundredths of 1 percent of the total assessed valuation of property subject to county taxation. State participation is graduated upward from 80 percent to 95 percent, dependent upon the rate of county expenditure in relation to assessed property valuation.

Assembly Bill No. 62, 1950 First Extraordinary Session, sought to activate the Relief Act by repealing Section 28 which suspends its operations until finding of the economic emergency, and to amend it in certain particulars including changing the financing formula to a straight 80 percent state, 20 percent county sharing formula not dependent upon the relationship of county expenditures to assessed property values.

The Relief Act of 1945 provides that the department shall by rule and regulation establish standards of eligibility for uniform application throughout the State. It would also fix maximum and minimum relief budgets for each county, the boards of supervisors being enabled to establish their own policies within the ranges of the minimum and maximum budgets.

The law provides that all budgets and standards "shall be based upon need and minimum budgets shall be sufficient to maintain the recipient and his dependents in accordance with minimum living requirements" as set forth in a very general way as "compatible with decency and health."

The purpose of minimum and maximum budgets is not clear. There should be a presumption that any budget established would be on the basis of a minimum "compatible with decency and health" and there does not seem to be any need for attempting to establish two types of budgets since it is generally not intended that relief budgets exceed the amounts necessary for "decency and health."

This very general standard places upon the department the actual responsibility for determining the standards of assistance. However, this responsibility will be affected by whatever appropriation might be made. In effect, the Legislature itself assumes responsibility for determining the standard of care through the making of the appropriation, since the amount of funds made available limit the discretion of the administrative agency in the establishment of standards.

Both the Relief Act and Assembly Bill No. 62 provided that if recipients were not residents of the specific county, but of the State, that the total cost of care be paid by the State. Such provisions only complicate administration, making it necessary to determine county residence in all cases and involve special financial and reporting transactions. Since under the bill the State would be taking over the greater portion of county general relief costs, the imposition of a county residence requirement would not seem justified in terms of whatever protection it might be considered to offer a particular county. It would, however, increase the costs of administration although not affecting the total cost to the taxpayers as a whole of paying the aid to the recipient.

Should the Relief Act of 1945 be activated through the finding of an emergency, or through passage of legislation such as provided by Assembly Bill No. 62, there is raised the question of the method of financing the program and the basis upon which appropriations will be made

To our knowledge there is not available data upon which a sound determination of probable cost per case under a state-wide program can be made. Although the Relief Act has been on the statute books for many years, no studies have been made by the Department of Social Welfare of standards of assistance in the counties and potential cost factors in a state-wide program. Whatever figure might be proposed at this time would be a guess, and the extent to which it could be considered an "intelligent" or "educated" guess is questionable because of the absence of detailed information and evaluation of the programs in operation. Three methods of appropriation are possible:

1. Closed Appropriation. Such a lump-sum appropriation would be based on total estimated persons to be assisted times the estimated cost of assistance per case. In making such an appropriation the Legislature would satisfy itself of the reasonableness of the estimate of the number of persons to require aid and in effect set a standard for aid by appropriating a specific sum to meet the needs of those persons.

Estimates of potential case loads are hazardous, particularly in a general relief program sensitive to changing economic conditions. Should they prove too low, the administrative agency must either reduce the standard of care for all or incur a deficit, or both. Should they prove to be too high, the administrative agency has the opportunity of increasing the standard of care or of carrying a surplus in the appropriation.

The major advantage in the closed appropriation is that the Legislature knows definitely what it has budgeted for this purpose. It is possible to set up a contingency appropriation for use in the event that the case load estimates prove too conservative, or subsequent appropriations may be made in special or annual session to cover such deficits.

This type of appropriation places a specific responsibility on the administrative agency to carefully define and administer eligibility requirements to minimize the number of persons entitled to aid, which influence is not directly felt in an open-end appropriation.

It also enables the Legislature to leave with the administrative agency greater discretion in establishing standards, making that agency accountable for administering the program within the funds appropriated.

2. Open-end Appropriations. Such appropriations are on the basis of a certain amount of money for each case found eligible for aid. It provides maximum protection to the administrative agency since it is assured of funds for each case approved and the Legislature accepts full responsibility for setting the maximum standard of aid.

In the A. N. C. program the Legislature has by appropriation set a ceiling on individual family payments based upon the number of children. This has its limitations since the appropriation base discriminates against the smaller sized families, and has necessitated supplementation with county funds to meet the needs of these families.

In proposing legislation for the disabled category at the Third Extraordinary Session, 1950, the Department of Social Welfare proposed that the appropriation be on the basis of an average cost per case, thus placing upon itself the responsibility of administering the program so that the total costs for all cases would not exceed the average amount or limitation established by the Legislature. This method provides flexibility in meeting the needs of individuals with varying circumstances.

Certain problems are presented in the general relief category. Both family and single person cases must be considered. Normally the requirements of a person living alone will be greater than for the member of a family because in the latter case certain costs of maintaining the household are pro rated over all members. The appropriation (regardless of which method is used) must thus recognize the varying costs of family and single person cases and their proportion to the total load.

No specific suggestions are made at this time for the method of appropriation or the cost per case basis to be used. These are matters in which the administrative agencies should participate directly and upon which they should furnish data and justification to the appropriate legislative committees.

Cost Implications

Some indication of the effect of the proposed state-county sharing in costs proposed under Assembly Bill No. 62 can be shown by use of actual costs of the program for the Fiscal Years 1948-49 and 1949-1950.

	Actual expenditures	80% state share	20% county share
1948-49	$22,254,643	$17,803,716	$4,450,827
1949-50	27,586,973	22,069,578	5,516,395

The county taxpayers paid the total cost during the years. If the formula proposed by Assembly Bill No. 62 had been in operation, the State would have assumed four-fifths of the costs of assistance.

It seems safe to assume that total costs per case will increase under a state-wide program with uniform standards of eligibility and assistance grants. The more restrictive eligibility requirements of some counties would not be applied under state regulations and cost standards based upon requirements for "health and decency" would certainly raise the average cost per case. These are matters that need to be considered in determining the basis for appropriation for a uniform general relief program and upon which the State Department of Social Welfare will need to provide specific data and estimates.

It needs to be recognized that if the State is to assume the major role of financing the program, it should also assume direct supervision of the program, in relation to establishing the standards of eligibility and standards of assistance as well as evaluation of the manner in which these standards are administered by the counties.

VII. ADOPTION PROGRAM

The staff has not made a specific study of the adoption program. In the spring of 1950 a state-wide Citizens Committee on Adoption of Children in California, supported by two private foundations, was organized to conduct a two-year study of all phases of the adoption program in California. This committee has associated with it 11 county adoption committees which are participating in the studies.

The work of the state-wide citizens committee is outlined in the following letter from the chairman of that committee, dated November 10, 1950, in response to an inquiry as to the scope of the work of the citizens committee:

"At the present time the Citizens Adoption Committee is in the process of studying through its state body, as well as through the 11 county committees associated with it, the various problems related to placement of children for adoption and the different points of view and criticisms relating to the present adoption practices in this State—all in an effort to determine what the state-wide community of California considers to be, and will support as, a sound adoption program.

"The Citizens Adoption Committee is certain that there are no simple answers to the complicated problems that are involved in the placement of children for adoption. There are many factors to be weighed and balanced. The interests of three different groups, the child, its natural parents, and its adoptive parents, must be served, and the necessary services to meet the needs of children and their parents must be created.

"The work of our committee has been divided into four parts:

"(1) We are in the process of gathering facts in a number of areas throughout the State relating to the charge that is often heard that there are many children now in foster care away from home who could be adopted readily. When this portion of our study is completed we shall be in a position to make recommendations upon which a sound program can be developed to meet the needs of these children away from home. We shall know how many of these children may be in a position to be considered for adoption, and what additional services it may be necessary to provide to serve these children.

"(2) We are making a survey of the program and facilities for the care of unmarried mothers in the different areas throughout the State, since so many of the children who are adopted are given up by unmarried mothers, to determine the adequacy or inadequacy of such programs, facilities and services. Your committee has already heard testimony from our Los Angeles County committee supporting the care for the unmarried mother and her child under the provisions of the aid to needy children program.

"(3) The committee is considering adoption agency practices in an effort to evaluate the protections and services offered through adoption agencies, and to explore popular criticisms of agency methods and proceedings. We are cognizant of the fact that the 1947 Legislature enacted into law provisions which made it possible for counties to establish public supported adoption agencies. Since that time 11 public adoption agencies have been created as part of the welfare departments, and, in addition, privately supported adoption agencies have increased from two to six in number. Most of these agencies have only now begun to work. While there is not enough material to fully evaluate the services of these new agencies, it is already quite evident that the creation of these new agencies alone has opened the way to offer greater protection and are to a greater number of children, as well as parents who are seeking to give up or take on parental responsibility.

"(4) The committee is also considering independent adoptions to gather facts necessary to evaluate the protections or lack of protections which are presently provided when individuals arrange for the placement of children without the aid of adoption agency services. Our committee is aware that in the recent war and postwar years independent adoptions rapidly increased because adoption agency facilities were not available in sufficient quantity. Many of these independent adoptions have been and are being arranged by individuals operating outside the present law, which prohibits the placement of children for adoption by other than agencies licensed by the State Department of Social Welfare. There is substantial evidence of the human tragedies that result from hasty, ill-planned adoptions where these individual arrangements lack the proper safeguards which agencies are able to provide. In this connection it is interesting to note that 23 percent of these independent adoption petitions are either dismissed prior to hearing in court or are recommended for denial by the State Department of Social Welfare, which would seem to indicate that something is basically and fundamentally lacking in the present practices concerning independent adoptions.

"It is entirely possible that our committee, upon the conclusion of its work some months hence, may have positive legislative recommendations in some or all of the areas above set forth. However, it is felt that our present over-all adoption statutes are fundamentally and basically sound, and that the greatest need at this time is the developement of an understanding and evaluation on the part of the citizens of the State of our existing laws in the light of the protections provided, facilities established, and services created thereunder. In the absence of such understanding and evaluation, amendments to the present adoption law which create an illusion of affording greater protection to one or more of the parties involved in an adoption might in fact jeopardize the whole framework of laws and the pattern of services and facilities created as a result of years of experience.

"We feel, therefore, that legislative consideration of any major or fundamental changes in our existing adoption laws should be deferred until the completion of a comprehensive study and review of all aspects of our present adoption program, practices and procedures, such as is planned by our committee. Upon the completion of such study it is hoped that a state-wide community understanding will have been created which will not only support but demand such legislative changes as may be necessary to the development of a sound and adequate adoption program in this State.

"Our committee will be prepared to present its findings and recommendations at the conclusion of its study, and will be happy to meet with members of your committee at any time to jointly consider the problems in this field and their possible solution."

A complete and comprehensive analysis of all facets of the complicated problems that are involved in adoptions is in process and the results of the work of these citizens groups should be available before consideration is given to legislation that would materially affect the present adoption laws and their administration.

This is a matter that should be a subject for later study by the appropriate interim committee, utilizing to the fullest extent the work being carried out by the state-wide and county citizen committees.

VIII. ADMINISTRATION

It has not been possible to conduct a specific study of administration of the social welfare program at the state and county levels. An intensive and detailed study of the many administrative problems is needed. A number of observations can be made to illustrate problems involved, some of which are brought out in other sections of this report.

Sound administration is as important as sound legislation. The best welfare legislation is fully effective only to the extent that its administration is effective. The manner in which day to day operations are executed at every level, from the policy and supervisory functions to the contact with applicants and recipients, has considerable influence on the over-all effectiveness of public assistance laws and the total costs of providing aid to needy persons.

Any activity that deals primarily with people presents complex administrative problems, and particularly so a public welfare program. Administration of these programs is further complicated by the participation of the three levels of government, federal, state, and county, and by the manner in which the laws in California have been developed.

Analysis of administration of the California social welfare program must cover not only the basic framework through which the programs are conducted, including the areas of responsibility delegated by the Legislature to the State and the counties. It must also include a comprehensive analysis of the effectiveness with which these duties and responsibilities are being carried out; qualitative and quantitative evaluation of performance at all organizational levels; and study of the administrative machinery and the procedures for accomplishing the work as a basis for determining how it can be more effectively and efficiently conducted.

A. GENERAL AREAS OF RESPONSIBILITY

The Federal Social Security Act requires as a condition for receiving federal funds that those assistance programs in which the Federal Government directly participates be in effect in all political subdivisions of a state. There must be a single state agency to either administer the plan or to supervise its administration.

California has adopted the system of state supervision with actual administration by the counties. Thus there is given the State Department of Social Welfare the duty to establish policies, rules and regulations as necessary to carry out the statutes and to require compliance with them. The county governments are responsible for actual administration, being bound by the policies laid down at the state level but otherwise not responsible to the state department.

Effectiveness of this method of administration has been questioned and debated at length. It presents some exceptionally difficult operating problems, and particularly so when the planning or policy making agency has only limited control over the actual execution of policy. It presents other problems in attempting to fix responsibility or accountability for operation of the programs.

There appears to be considerable variation in the quality of administration between the 58 counties. These variations make it impossible to achieve uniform application of state-wide policies throughout the State.

Much of the energy and time of the state department appears to be taken up in negotiation or outright argument with the county governments, collectively or individually, with respect to initiation of policy or its application.

This split responsibility makes it exceptionally difficult to achieve sound and progressive administration. While policy formation is a function of the state department, it has in a practical sense only limited control over and supervision of the execution of that policy.

B. LEGISLATIVE PROBLEMS

Other than the basic problem of administrative responsibility and authority as set forth in the laws, the provisions of the code are of such detail that in many respects they themselves complicate the administrative process. Other sections pertaining to certain eligibility factors contribute to high administrative costs that may not be warranted by results attained.

It has been the practice of the Legislature to write organizational structure as well as procedural detail into the laws. For example, the code (Section 111) designates the administrative divisions to be established in the state department. Some of these detailed provisions are undoubtedly designed to correct situation that have arisen in the past, but a question may be raised as to whether the proper manner for making such correction is through the statutes themselves or through the administrative arm of the government, if necessary under legislative initiative.

There are a number of specific requirements in the code that have the effect of increasing administrative costs, for example:

1. The procedures established for determining liability of responsible relatives appear to be costly. If such procedures were not fixed in law, it is probable that the same or better results could be attained with much less administrative costs.

2. Determination of county residence is required even though this is not an eligibility factor. Such residence is used to determine whether the counties shall pay a share of cost of assistance, or whether the full cost is to be borne by the State. Determination of residence is a time-consuming and costly process, and the financial procedures necessitated by the different method of meeting total cost are also expensive. In view of the general formulae for sharing costs between the State and counties, and the cost of determining residence, this whole procedure appears of doubtful value.

3. Requirements, such as established in the old age security program, make it necessary to determine citizenship in all cases. This again is a costly administrative process.

4. Code provisions and state department regulations requiring board of supervisors approval of all applications is another questionable procedure. In addition to the administrative costs involved, this procedure actually delays the processing of applications and payment of assistance. In many instances it involves a loss of federal funds. In most cases board approval is an automatic process, based on the recommendation of the county welfare director. Since the county welfare director is responsible to the board, it would be as effective to authorize the boards to delegate approval of cases to their county directors and thus simplify the administrative process and speed up approval of applications.

C. STATE SUPERVISION

In many respects, state supervision appears to have been weak although there have been evidences of strengthening state administrative organization in recent months.

The many deviations in application of state policies at the county administrative level have caused the Federal Government to criticize the state department for failure to fully assume its supervisory functions.

There has not been detailed evaluation of the application of policy, and the state department does not have sufficient knowledge of the actual workings of the program at the county level.

Research, particularly in testing and evaluating operating problems and revealing variations in practice at the county administrative level, has been deficient.

D. COUNTY ADMINISTRATION

Since there are 58 separate county administrative organizations they present a great variety of problems. Administrative costs are borne by the counties, and state supervisory authority is limited to those factors that directly affect the application of state policy.

One of the basic requirements of the Federal and State Governments, is that each active assistance case (other than general relief) be reinvestigated annually. These reinvestigations are extremely important from a cost point of view since they test continuing eligibility as well as changes in circumstances that might affect the amount of payment.

Variation in compliance with regulations and effectiveness in administration are shown by the following analysis for a recent month of these overdue eligibility reviews:

Old Age Security—Twenty-one counties had over ten percent (10%) of reviews overdue. The range was from 1 percent to 54 percent. Many of these reinvestigations were overdue for as long as six months.

Aid to Needy Children—Fifteen counties had over 10 percent of cases overdue for reinvestigation. Fourteen had over 20 percent and one had over 50 percent overdue.

Aid to Needy Blind—Twenty-five counties had over 10 percent overdue. Eight counties were overdue on eligibility reinvestigation for 10 percent of the case load in all three of the programs.

This is strictly an administrative problem and was characterized by the federal security agency recently as the most serious problem in connection with administration of the eligibility provisions of the programs.

Staffing is a key factor in public assistance administration, both in terms of quality and quantity of staff. There is a direct relationship between adequacy of staff, if well directed and supervised, and total costs since staffing affects the quality of investigation of need, both initially and continuing, and the determination of resources and providing help to persons to become self-sufficient.

However, there is no adequate data readily available as to the average work loads carried by case workers in the various counties, although it is known that these loads vary considerably.

It has also been noted that there are many questionable procedures practiced which affect administrative costs and the use of staff for more productive effort.

In one county with a relatively low ratio of cases per worker, home visits in connection with new A. N. C. applications are frequently delayed three or four weeks. In this county each worker is out in the field only one day per week. This obviously reflects extremely poor use of personnel.

In many counties delay in action on new applications is due to routines which not only delay action but greatly increase administrative costs. In some offices it is the practice to routinely conduct property searches or bank clearances on all cases. The paper work and staff time, not only of the welfare office but of the county clerk and the banks, is considerable. Administrative analysis and determination of the results of such routine procedures would undoubtedly indicate that it is an extremely expensive process.

E. NEED FOR PROCEDURAL ANALYSIS AND CONTROL

Because of the great diversity of administration and the independent development of procedures and forms in all jurisdictions as well as the apparently complicated processes included in financial transactions, there is need for intensive administrative analysis. The purpose of this analysis should be to establish more uniform practices with maximum simplification of procedures so as to reduce operating costs and free staff for more productive functions.

Similar analysis of administrative policy and its implementation is needed. There appears to be need for detailed attention to reducing costs through work simplification and examination of procedures and regulations from a cost accounting viewpoint.

As an example, in the course of examination of certain case records it was noted that the actual assistance payments to the recipients were in even dollars. It was found that general practice under the A. N. C. program, except for five counties, was to round off the payment to the next highest dollar. This practice was questioned and brought to the attention of the state department which subsequently issued instructions that aid payments should be in exact amounts rather than being made at the next higher whole dollar amount.

In all A. N. C. cases in 53 counties, and in the 35 percent of all aged and blind cases where the flat-grant is not in effect, this minor change in policy should reduce costs $50,000 a month and probably more.

It is pointed out to illustrate the importance of careful analysis and scrutiny of all administrative policy and procedure with a view toward reducing costs.

In this report it is also pointed out that California is losing federal funds by delays in processing applications by county offices. This again illustrates the need for review of procedure so that costs to state and county taxpayers can be reduced.

While this report is critical of administration of the program at both the state and county levels, in fairness it should be pointed out that in recent months there have been many evidences of progress, especially at the state level. The basic administrative problems are of long standing, and corrective action cannot be accomplished quickly. There has been in process an administrative reorganization of the state department and re-examination of many policies and practices that should substantially improve the administrative and supervisory processes when they become fully effective.

The state director has been receptive to suggestions for improving administration of the programs. He has demonstrated a willingness to secure objective criticism and findings of administrative deficiencies and a desire to secure correction and strengthen operations.

F. RESTATEMENT OF LAWS

Code sections pertaining to each of the individual programs have been developed to provide detailed requirements and processes for the individual programs. There are many factors common to all programs that could be made uniform and placed in one portion of the code rather than having them repeated with perhaps minor variations in wording, in the separate sections.

A simplification and reorganization of the code would facilitate the work of the administrative agencies as well as clarify the laws. Greater uniformity in basic legal provisions such as those pertaining to administration, determination of residence, fraud, resources, appeals, etc., can be achieved and these basic requirements for all programs organized into one section of the code.

Simplification and recodification of the public assistance laws should be undertaken as early as possible. Insofar as practicable, provisions for all programs should be uniform with specific legislation for the individual programs being confined to those matters in which the character of the group involved or other circumstances makes it necessary to establish different legal requirements or standards.

SUMMARY OF PUBLIC HEARINGS ON SOCIAL WELFARE PROGRAM

SAN DIEGO—AUGUST 9, 1950

Mr. Charles Schottland, Director, State Department of Social Welfare

Mr. Schottland explained that he did not have a prepared statement and appeared for the purpose of outlining the general social welfare picture and some plans of the department.

He referred to certain items of noncontroversial legislation which the department plans to propose:

1. To provide authority to destroy obsolete records since no such authority now exists because of Article 27.

2. Simplification of procedure concerning responsible relatives to eliminate notarized statements where relatives are not liable for support.

3. Delegation of responsibility by boards of supervisors for approval of assistance cases to avoid excessive delays in processing approved cases for payment.

Mr. Schottland stated that California is now largest of all states in public welfare expenditures. Expenditures are now close to thirty million dollars a month; nineteen million for old age security, six million for aid to needy children, two million for general relief, eight hundred thousand for aid to blind, plus administrative and service costs.

He reviewed plans for administrative reorganization, including establishment of five decentralized regional offices, three of which have been approved by the Division of Finance. Working relationships with the counties have been analyzed and the department is decentralizing as much as possible to reduce expensive procedures that have been in effect. Auditing and accounting operations are being combined in a Division of Financial Administration. He referred to a handicap in establishing administrative organization because of the detailed requirements of the law.

Old Age Security—There has been a decrease in applications over the past year. Applications for the month of June of each year were 1948, 4,181; 1949, 8,442; 1950, 3,629. He explained this decrease as due to the fact that the number of persons receiving assistance per 1,000 over 65 years is now greater although California is not above the national average; and the influx of persons into the State has receded.

Blind—This has not changed substantially in the past two years.

Aid to needy children—There has been a sharp rise in numbers of persons receiving aid and in costs. Applications rose from 3,639 in June, 1949, to 8,201 in June, 1950. Expenditures have doubled for the same period. This increase was attributed to the liberalized law passed in 1949, to population trends, and to the unemployment trend He stated that 30 to 31 children per 1,000 children under 16 are receiving assistance in California against a national average of 33 per 1,000

Mr. Schottland expressed a belief that the facts on this program have not been clearly presented and stated that his department is doing research to obtain the facts. He referred to the pressures on the counties because of increasing costs and the fact that there is nothing much that can be done about costs for the aged and because general relief costs are relatively small, persons wanting to protest the increasing welfare costs have found the A. N. C. program the easiest to attack. He asked that judgment be reserved until the facts are ascertained.

Commenting on claims that liberalization of regulations by the state board are responsible for increased costs, he pointed out that the law was liberalized and that the board could not be expected to take a position of passing restrictive regulations in the face of legislative action liberalizing the program. He also pointed out that the counties transferred a large volume of general relief cases over to the A. N. C. program and that general relief costs have not gone up.

Other factors outlined were the sharp slump in employment starting in October, 1949, A. N. C. being closely related to unemployment; and the expiration of benefits for a large number of veterans under the veterans re-employment benefits program, also coinciding with the liberalization of the law.

Mr. Schottland stated that the amount of payment per family has dropped to an average of $110.63 in June, 1950.

HR-6000—He outlined major provisions of federal legislation expected to pass Congress soon liberalizing the Social Security Act. A state could provide exemption up to $50 in income of blind persons, this already being provided in California law. Payments under the old age and survivors insurance program would be increased materially, resulting in larger deductions from the grants of old age security recipients. He estimated savings to the State of $4,500,000 because of the liberalization of the old age and survivors insurance program.

Provision permitting federal matching of funds for inmates of public medical care institutions will require legislation in California to take advantage of the additional federal money.

The Federal Government would reimburse the State an additional $16.50 for the caretaker in the A. N. C. families.

A new category of permanently disabled persons is provided for which will require state legislation if California is to take advantage of federal funds to be available. He estimated that this might affect one-third ($\frac{1}{3}$) of the general relief cases now financed by the counties. The bill would provide federal aid up to $30 per case.

Mr. Julius Rainwater, Director, San Diego County Department of Public Welfare

Mr. Rainwater submitted a written statement. He spoke primarily to the following points:

1. Old Age Security—Out-of-state Payments. A limit should be placed on the length of time a recipient should be permitted to reside in another state and secure assistance from California. He suggested the limit be the length of time required to obtain residence in the other state. At present he said intent must be coupled with physical presence to establish such residence for purposes of the California program.

2. Citizenship, Old Age Security. He pointed out that citizenship is not a requirement for other forms of aid and that the counties must carry long-term residents on the general relief rolls because of this restriction in the aged program. He said this requirement increases administrative costs because of the need to check citizenship of applicants. He estimated 100 such cases are on the San Diego County general relief load.

3. Legislation or regulation to permit restrictions on payments to incompetent persons, alcoholics, etc.

4. Responsible Relatives. Recommended complete removal from law. Stated amount of money received because of the law is nil and that the law is useless. Referred to a survey in the Oceanside office showing of 1,020 relatives contacted only about 2 percent made a contribution under the law. Stated the amount realized by this law does not cover administrative costs of securing it but creates considerable ill will.

5. Aid to Needy Children. Spoke favorably of present law. Stated the problem is administrative and that more staff is required because it is a "fast-moving program," and that there must be vast improvement in county administration.

In response to questions concerning fraud, Mr. Rainwater indicated that the laws might be tightened up and that there is not uniform treatment of such cases by the district attorneys.

Mr. William P. Mayer, Assistant Director, San Diego County Department of Public Welfare

Mr. Mayer stated that more support is needed from district attorneys in taking action against fathers who desert their families. He also recommended strengthening of the laws relating to the licensing of boarding homes for the aged and children. He stated that some homes are mistreating aged persons but that no positive action can be taken against them. He explained that where there are questions of jurisdiction, as to whether a home is a school or an institution for care of children, the home will claim to be a school at one time and an institution at another as a subterfuge to avoid the licensing authority. He also stated that there is lack of cooperation from the licensing agency in the revoking of licenses.

Mrs. Carol Doolittle, Supervisor, Child Welfare Division, San Diego County Department of Public Welfare

Mrs. Doolittle spoke of the problem of providing care for mentally deficient children because of lack of institutional facilities. She was particularly critical of the foster home program under the Department of Mental Hygiene, stating that the department is not staffed to do an adequate job of finding and supervising homes. She felt that one of the answers to the inadequate institutional facilities was a strong foster home program.

Mrs. Doolittle stated there is a list of 130 applications for admission to Pacific Colony Home pending in the county. Fifty-nine such children are known to the Public Welfare Department, 45 of them receiving financial aid and another 14 receiving services only. Sixteen of these children have had applications filed with Pacific Colony Home.

In a supplementary written statement, Mrs. Doolittle stated that 33 of the children known to her department are in their own homes and that 13 of these are creating definite problems in relation to the health of the mother or other children or are not receiving adequate care. In 14 other cases, there is a question of the potential effect on the normal children in those homes. Four others are creating problems in the community and probably should have institutional care.

Mrs. Doolittle suggested the committee work with the State-Wide Committee on Adoptions. She questioned the adequacy of county staffs to carry out the adoption program, stating they were receiving a higher percentage of children to place.

Mrs. Jane Carnegie, Supervising Social Worker, Rural Unit, San Diego County Welfare Department

Mrs. Carnegie outlined certain problems of providing medical care for persons living in rural areas. She said some of these people were as far as 150 miles from clinics and that no mobile dental clinic was provided in the county.

Mr. Lawrence Pohle, Welfare Counsellor, California Institute of Social Welfare

Mr. Pohle emphasized the need for protection of children and meeting their needs regardless of the acts of parents.

In reference to the old age security program, he advocated repeal of the citizenship requirements which he stated inflicts hardships. He recommended modification of residence requirements so that long-term residents of the State could return and within a year gain their state residence for assistance purposes. He also advocated repeal of the responsible relatives law. In this connection he pointed out that the children of the recipients are actually paying for their parents pensions anyhow.

Mr. Pohle suggested amendment of Section 2165 of the code relating to real property of the husband and wife, to provide for a separation of such property if it can be proven that it had been the spouses for many years and the spouse had a legal claim to it.

Mr. Douglas D. McElfresh, California Optometric Association

Mr. McElfresh outlined a cooperative program with the Junior Red Cross, Lions Club, and community welfare office, under which optometrists are volunteering services and materials for visual correction and glasses for needy children.

Mrs. Mary E. Wessell, an Individual

Mrs. Wessell read a prepared statement to the committee, covering the aid to needy children program.

She recommended action be taken to make stepfathers responsible for support of stepchildren, at least to half of their income. She felt that some stepfathers might be claiming stepchildren as dependents for income tax purposes, although not supporting them, and that welfare records should be available to tax collection agencies for checking.

In connection with real property under which property with assessed value of $3,000 or less is exempt, she pointed out that encumbrances on such property are deducted from the assessed valuation in applying the $3,000 limit. She felt this encouraged families to go into debt or to borrow on property to purchase luxuries.

She referred to women living in common-law relationships or mothers of illegitimate children, suggesting that such women should not have custody of their children.

She referred to other possible abuses, such as persons working nights or connivance between husband and wife whereby the husband would be represented as being absent from the home, and asked that these abuses be investigated. (In questioning Mrs. Wessell was asked to submit names to the committee so that actual cases could be investigated and stated she knew of two cases and would furnish these names to the chairman.)

Mrs. Wessell recommended that desertion be made a federal offense and adequate punishment be provided for fraud.

She also recommended that one-half cent of the sales tax be returned to the counties.

San Diego Taxpayers' Association—Letter to Committee

The association was not represented at the hearing but submitted on August 8th a letter to the chairman with attachments of letters to the Board of Public Welfare of San Diego, dated March 22, 1950, and letters to the board of supervisors dated May 9 and August 3, 1950.

In its letter the association expressed the belief that welfare programs had gone beyond the concept of "amounts which will carry the recipients over difficult periods" for those in "genuine need." Suggestions set forth in the materials submitted were as follows:

Old Age Security—Questioning legality of payments to recipients living outside the State.

General Relief, County—Stricter standards for eligibility and amount of payment; ceilings on amounts granted to families; reduction of all payments by 5 or 10 percent; review of all regulations to reduce discretion in individual cases; more frequent pricing of commodities and immediate adjustments accordingly; development of employment techniques and practices to reduce load; inventory of all cases to determine extent to which are covering expensive commitments of recipients; re-evaluation of philosophy to determine if it is promoting dependency rather than rehabilitation.

Aid to Needy Children—Review county practices in determination of eligibility for aid in effort to reduce number of cases.

Finances—Referred to "failure of the State Legislature to remove at least a part of the burden of the aged and blind programs from the shoulders of the counties." Recommended county budget be cut, including welfare costs (particularly general relief) to avoid increase in "already * * * excessively high property taxes." Stated county's assessed valuation per capita of $816 compares with state-wide average of $1,233, placing San Diego County fifty-fourth among the 58 counties in ability to pay.

California Congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc.

The chairman read a letter dated July 28, 1950, from Mrs. Edward T. Walker, president, stating in part:

"We are, however, interested in the aid given to needy children on public assistance and in the child care program. We would stress the importance of caring adequately for needy children. The board of managers has a special committee working now on the study of aid to needy children."

SAN FRANCISCO—SEPTEMBER 7, 1950

Charles Schottland, Director, State Department of Social Welfare

Aid to Needy Children Program. State Social Welfare Board feels that criticism of this program is not justified and that the impression that the rules and regulations for its administration are responsible for the increase in costs of the program is incorrect. Emphasized the following points:

Average payments today are less than before the 1949 amendments; and the average per person in July 1950 was $31.71.

The dependency rate in California, for children under 18 per thousand such children, is below the national average now estimated at 34 or 35 for California and 35 or 36 for the Country as a whole.

From 1940 to 1948 the caseload in California increased only 1 percent against a national increase of 45 percent. There are now 127,000 children cared for and the increase in case load was rapid just prior to the 1949 amendments to the law. If the trend at that time were projected the case load today would be over 85,000 children

Reasons for the increase were attributed to the 51 percent increase in population for 1940 to 1950; increased marriages and births per 1,000 population; and increase of children under 18 from 1940 to 1948 of 70 percent; and increased unemployment after October, 1949.

Concerning the absent father problem, Mr. Schottland pointed out that 60 to 90 days are required for determination of eligibility of individual cases so that short absences of fathers are not a factor. He said one-third such fathers have been absent for three years or over, 30 percent absent from one to three years, 12 percent from six months to a year, and 20 percent less than six months.

Sixty-two percent of the new cases in the first calendar quarter after the 1949 amendments became effective were those transferred from the county general relief rolls. He said California does not show the increase in general relief cases common to the rest of the Country.

In answer to a question from Mr. Crowley, Schottland stated that the referral of all desertion cases to district attorneys is automatic but that the district attorneys are loath to prosecute.

HR-6000. Mr. Schottland outlined plans in relation to new legislation to take advantage of the revised Social Security Act.

The increase in old age and survivors insurance payments of 77 percent for about 70 percent of old age security recipients will enable the State to decrease grants representing a savings for the nine months beginning in October of $4,150,000 for the State and $690,000 for the counties.

The increased O. A. S. I. payments will also enable a $900,000 savings in the aid to needy children program ($570,000 State; $330,000 county).

No actual change in administration of the A. N. C. program is needed to realize savings to the State and counties through increased federal funds for the parent with whom the child is living. This is estimated at $4,200,000 for the State and $2,400,000 for the counties in savings for the nine months. However new legislation is needed to include the caretaker in the authorization for payment.

Legislation is needed to permit payments to persons residing in public institutions which will mean considerable savings to the counties. He estimated that for the nine months this would cost $4,000,000 of which $1,990,000 would be State and $331,000 county funds. However, the counties could charge these recipients for hospital care now rendered free.

Mr. Crowley raised a question as to the need for legislation to protect the recipients against the counties charging the full amount of their aid payments.

He stated that legislation similar to that in effect for the aged and blind will be introduced to cover the new permanently disabled group. He estimated that 28,000 disabled would be on the rolls by June 30, 1951. For Los Angeles County it is estimated that 7,000 persons now under the county indigent aid program or in county hospitals would be eligible.

The proposal for the disabled program would be based upon an average payment rather than a flat-grant system. He referred to the Connecticut welfare program in which 8 percent of payments are over $100 but the average is only $52 for all cases under a needs budget system.

In answer to questions from Mr. Lipscomb as to whether it might be advisable to defer legislation until further study, Mr. Schottland stated that the only way to determine what is involved is to operate such a program and that the law could be amended in the regular session next January. He estimates that the program would cost $14,000,000 for the nine months of which $8,000,000 would be state and county funds.

Mr. Schottland referred to medical problems involved in the disabled program and stated plans are to establish an advisory committee of seven persons, primarily physicians, to assist in working out these problems. Plans also provide for a review board to approve county eligibility determinations.

Robert Carlson, Sonoma County Taxpayers' Association

Mr. Carlson read a prepared statement containing the following criticism of the welfare programs:

1. A. N. C., absent fathers: Present program eases conscience of fathers who abandon families. One full year should elapse before child aid is given, in meantime if there is obvious destitution other types of aid could be granted.

2. A. N. C., stepfathers: Present legislation tends to weaken the ties of matrimony and encourage moral laxity.

3. Grants should be limited by a ceiling, particularly as they cover household appliances. Need for some household items being purchased should be questioned.

4. Aid should be granted "in kind" as much as possible rather than in cash. Referred to complaints of landlords that recipients sometimes fail to pay rents.

5. To have disabled and permanently incapacitated persons placed on welfare rolls "is an extension of social theories beyond their legitimate scope." Believes present legislation can cover needs of this group and indicated belief that plan is to provide more assistance than to meet basic needs of such persons on the basis of "comforting" disabled persons.

In discussion with committee members, Mr. Carlson indicated that old age security recipients are "riding around in cars" and that there is considerable abuse of the welfare programs. Mrs. Niehouse and Mr. Cooke requested that he submit names of individuals involved, including those who have defaulted on rental payments.

Alden C. Fensel, Director, Tax Department, California State Chamber of Commerce

Mr. Fensel read a prepared statement concerning the proposed program for totally and permanently disabled persons. He pointed out that no state has had such a program and that experience is totally lacking. He felt that proponents of the program have underestimated the numbers and costs and felt that when federal money restrictions are relieved at the end of this fiscal year and an "open pocket" appropriation is in effect for 1951-1952, the number of cases will jump to 100,000. He estimated total costs at that time as eighty-five million dollars of which the state burden would be forty-two and the county share seven million.

The board of directors of the state chamber recommends referral of the problem to an interim committee for report to the 1951 General Session.

In answer to questions, Mr. Fensel stated he was not opposed to the program but wished it studied first.

Charles Scully, California State Federation of Labor

Mr. Scully read a prepared statement in which the following recommendations are made:

1. Public assistance programs for the aged, blind, dependent children, and permanently and totally disabled persons should be state financed and adminstered.
2. The relative responsibility clause in the aged and blind programs should be eliminated.
3. The aid to needy children program should be continued intact.
4. A state program for aid to permanently and totally disabled needy should be enacted.
5. The Relief Act of 1945, providing for state aid in the county indigent aid program, should be invoked whenever unemployment warrants.

Mr. Levering questioned Mr. Scully regarding costs of the program proposed and methods of financing it. Mr. Scully stated that he would submit to the committee estimated costs of the programs proposed. He also outlined a general tax program which he stated has been proposed to another legislative committee.

Mrs. Martha Scarlett, Travelers Aid Society, Oakland

Mrs. Scarlett referred to the problem of nonresidents ineligible for county indigent aid and who present problems for the private agencies. She referred particularly to state residents who do not have county residence and the differential in the amount of assistance under the indigent aid programs and under other welfare programs. She recommended that this problem be given study.

Mr. Roy L. Driggers, Child Welfare Committee, American Legion

Referred briefly to the so-called California Academies Bill and requested support of Senate Bill No. 1176, particularly in setting up financial provisions.

California Conference of Social Work

The conference submitted a letter dated August 31st to which was attached resolutions adopted by the conference in 1949 and 1950 as follows:

Resolution VIII—Supporting H.R. 6000 to liberalize the Federal Social Security Act.

Resolution VI—Recommending a state commission be created to make a thorough review of the public welfare program; such commission including legislators, members of executive branch of government, and lay and professional citizens.

Resolution III—Opposing the initiative constitutional amendment to legalize and license gambling.

Resolution IX—Recommending establishment of psychopathic facilities and programs within county hospitals on a mandatory basis with supplementation of state funds where needed.

Director, Public Welfare Department, City and County of San Francisco

Mr. Ronald T. Born wrote the committee on August 29th that he would be unable to attend the hearing due to travel east and that he would submit a written statement at a later date.

LOS ANGELES—OCTOBER 18, 1950

Mr. William A. Barr, Department of Charities, Bureau of Public Assistance, County of Los Angeles

Mr. Barr presented a statement prepared by the superintendent of charities concerning the aid to needy children program, which included a number of conclusions based upon a survey of all aid to needy children cases in the county.

It was stated that there are two principal errors in the A. N. C. program:

1. The government in aiding children is accepting the complete responsibility for the children, whereas the basic philosophy should be aid to the family as such, recognizing parental responsibility;
2. The program encourages families to become dependent and to rely upon public funds for subsistence.

It was pointed out that less than 2 percent of children under the program are full orphans, thus 98 percent being children in homes of relatives. It was stated that interpretation by the state department indicates a belief that the child is the responsibility of the State and rules and regulations governing such aid are directed toward the child.

It was claimed that the state plan grants regularly an amount of money in excess of the actual needs of families for necessities and that the total grant is based on items of expenditure "beyond the needs demonstrated and/or, in many instances, beyond the ability of the responsible individual, namely, the parents, to earn when they are not on relief."

The statement placed existence of present conflict regarding the program upon administrative rules and not upon the law itself. "The present law is a sound and workable one that conforms with the federal statute and the programs of most other states."

It was pointed out that "the A. N. C. case load would have continued at a very sharp upward trend if the curve of intake had been plotted in the same ratio that existed prior to October, 1949, to the extent that at least half of the increase would have been realized. It further has been determined that 84 percent of the 'new applications' would have been in need and would have qualified for county general relief; another 10 percent would have qualified excepting for the lack of three years self-supporting residence."

In commenting on Assembly Bill No. 40, amending the A. N. C. law and effective October, 1949, the statement says: "This is indicative that there was a need for the changes made and that the Legislature was not at fault when it passed Assembly Bill No. 40 since it was based on a sound social philosophy."

The following conclusions were presented:

1. Administrative rules and regulations should be tightened.

It was claimed that state regulations make it no longer a requirement that verification of the applicant's statement be obtained. In discussion with the committee, Mr. Barr agreed that such regulations do not prohibit investigation and verification of statements, however.

It was pointed out that "Loose and incomplete determination of eligibility tends to encourage fraud and collusion for the purpose of receiving aid," and that determination of real need must take into account any unused available resources and that "determination of technical eligibility is not sufficient."

2. Individual Family Budgets Must Be Reduced. "Aid should be given only on the basis of actual needs, related to local standards. This is not the case in the A. N. C. budget." It was suggested that it is incorrect to provide specific amounts of food, clothing, recreation, etc., "regardless of the cultural background of his family, his health condition, or the living pattern in his neighborhood."

It was claimed that the A. N. C. budgets in many cases provide a standard of living far in excess of that of the family when self-supporting; that they are frequently in excess of standards of self-supporting families; and are in many cases not related to the actual needs of the families.

It was concluded that "a complete and healthful diet can be provided in the A. N. C. budgets with 11 percent reduction in cost." This was based upon the standards provided for general relief families by the county.

"The excessive budgetary allowances, therefore, can be considered the most out standing defect in the entire A. N. C. program."

3. Incentives for Children to Work. Requirements that all net earnings of a working child be applied to the family budget "does not provide an incentive to secure work." It was pointed out that under its general relief program the county permits children to keep a certain amount of money for their own needs, "But at the same time requires an understanding of their family responsibility by token payment back into the family budget."

4. Parents should be urged to work wherever possible.

5. Eligibility in "stepfather" cases should be based on need rather than legal lack of financial responsibility.

It was pointed out that Los Angeles County has 1,998 "stepfather" cases on its A. N. C. rolls and that Section 209 of the Civil Code relieves the stepfather of responsibility for support of the wife's children by a former husband.

6. Certain Payments Should Be Controlled. Where recipients have misapplied assistance funds, "aid-in-kind" as a control over management of funds is not possible without loss of federal and state and federal reimbursement were criticized. It was brought out in discussion that state regulations are based upon an opinion of the Attorney General holding that the law forbids restriction on payments to A. N. C. families.

7. Eligibility requirements should be definite and statements subject to verification.

8. The fiscal budget should be based on estimates of the case load rather than the present "open end" budget system.

It was suggested that funds be allocated to counties on the basis of proportionate use of moneys in the past or on the basis of population and a rigid control be maintained at these case loads.

9. The intent of the law should be conservatively administered instead of liberally construed.

Mr. Barr stated that the present law (as amended by Assembly Bill No. 40) needs no revision. In the prepared statement it is pointed out that children who have become eligible through the changes of 1949 "in almost all instances previously were needy, though the prior 'classification system' prevented their qualifying for A. N. C."

"Previously A. N. C. relieved only chronic long term deprivation. Children without resources are needy at the time they are deprived of parental support whether through death, incapacity or separation. A separation of parents may be as final and complete in one day as in one year. Today, A. N. C. can meet emergencies when they occur without arbitrary time restrictions."

It was pointed out that the deserting father has not been the primary cause of dependency in the increased case load in A. N. C., and the following analysis of causes of dependency of cases in Los Angeles County was furnished:

Deserting fathers	10%
Absent parent (death, incarceration, divorce, separation)	25%
Incapacity of parent	12%
Unmarried mother	8%
Termination of employment	13%
Caretaker needed in the home	7%
Insufficient income	25%

Only 7 percent of the total cases opened since September 1, 1949 could be clearly called desertion cases, "a very small group, infinitesimal in fact, comprised desertions that could be properly classed as collusion cases."

"Further evaluating the time the deserting fathers have been absent, establishes that most of them have been absent for more than three years. Proposals will be made to you to reduce the waiting period to six months. Should this be done, it will be meaningless. Such arguments can only be considered as 'the tail wagging the dog.' "

The statement was concluded as follows: "The Legislature was not at fault when it passed Assembly Bill No. 40. Quite to the contrary. Arguments can be put forward to show that great social gains have been made by the simple expedient of passing this piece of progressive legislation for the benefit of children and mothers who are actually in need and many benefits can be provided to have been gained by the counties."

Mr. James Garfield, Los Angeles County Club of Adult Blind

Presented a request that the White Cane Law of 1935 be amended by deleting the words "wholly or partially blind" and replacing them with the term "legally blind" to prevent the use of white canes by persons who are not in fact blind.

The committee unanimously adopted a motion to refer the recommendation to the Joint Committee on Adult Blind for consideration.

Citizens' Adoption Committee of Los Angeles County

The committee was represented by four persons who presented prepared statements concerning unmarried mothers and unborn children in relation to assistance available under the aid to needy children program.

Mr. J. Howard Zieman, Attorney

Emphasized that availability of help for unmarried mothers is crucial "for the mother and her child because upon the granting of assistance when it is needed depends the future of the unmarried mother and her unborn child." He pointed out that private social agencies are unable to meet the demands for financial assistance and that general relief restricts assistance to persons with three years residence in the State and one year in the county. He pointed out that many unmarried mothers move from their home counties to avoid social stigma. He supported present provisions of the aid to needy children program assisting unmarried mothers and recognizing the unborn child.

Sister Mary Winifred, Superintendent, St. Anne's Maternity Home

Reviewed problems encountered in helping unmarried mothers and social stigmas attached to "illegitimate" children. "Don't ever, ever think that an unmarried mother is immoral or unfit for society until you know all the facts," she stated.

Expressed the belief that A. N. C. assistance has strengthened the mother and child relationship after birth and is a definite weapon against the black-market and abortion mills. Also stated that "under A. N. C. rather than general relief, the natural mother is helped to meet social and emotional pressures by going to another community in the State, if she wishes."

Emphasized that "this aid definitely does not contribute to immorality."

Major Helen Smeeton, Superintendent, Booth Memorial Hospital

Discussed Salvation Army work with young unmarried mothers. Stated that if financial assistance is not available to unmarried mothers "in desperation they, many times, take the wrong step." Pointed out that under the county general relief programs three years state and one year county residence was required, whereas under A. N. C. assistance can be given with one year of state residence, thus "making it possible for her to leave the county of her residence, and save her social status in the home town."

Mrs. Faustina Johnson, Chairman, Unmarried Mothers Auxiliary of the Twelve Big Sisters, Los Angeles

Pointed out the help that A. N. C. provides unmarried mothers. "As a taxpayer, it seems sensible to me to provide an adequate diet for a mother and her unborn baby rather than pay out higher taxes later for victims of malnutrition and tuberculosis." The high cost of the law enforcement agencies and our criminal institutions is a heavier burden than the preventive work of A. N. C. is to the taxpayers. The small cost of A. N. C. brings high returns to the young, unmarried mothers who are rehabilitated and to society in the long run."

California Institute of Social Welfare, Los Angeles

Mr. John Henderson, Executive Secretary: Presented statements concerning costs of old age assistance, old age and survivors' insurance payments, and other fiscal data as a basis for testimony concerning a proposed modification of the old age security program.

Mr. Henderson reviewed the state budget provisions for the old age security program, pointing out that claims of reduced expenditures by proponents of Proposition 2 have failed to materialize and stating that "practically all savings made by the State has been made possible by the tax burden pushed back upon the counties." He stated that the State continues to collect a 3 percent sales tax "which was raised from 2.5 percent with the excuse that this increase was necessary to meet state fiscal requirements under Proposition 4."

Committee members challenged the statement concerning the 3 percent tax pointing out that the increased tax rate was automatic in that legislation reducing the rate expired without other legislation.

Data concerning the old age and survivors' insurance payments in California presented showed that 216,744 beneficiaries received such payments in January, 1950, at a monthly rate of $4,742,930. Since such benefits were recently increased, the effect will be to reduce the costs of the old age security program.

Also presented was data concerning taxes, showing an "all time high per capita figure of $395 compared with a total per capita tax bill of $109 in 1940, and $389 in 1945."

A statement on government debt showed that California citizens owe $26.20 state debt and $112.50 local government debt.

Copies of the "National Welfare Advocate" for September, 1950, were presented with reference to an article on purchasing power showing value of the dollar in June, 1950, as 59 cents compared to 1935-39 dollar and the purchasing power of the current "pension" as equivalent to $44.25 based on 1935-39 purchasing power.

Another statement on institutional inmates, points out that past increases in pensions have not kept pace with the cost of living that the costs of providing for inmates of state institutions has increased greater than the percentage increase in pensions.

Mr. George McLain, Chairman: Presented copies of the initiative measure to be presented to the Legislature and explanatory material. Stated that the initiative measure conforms to the Federal Social Security Act. The formulae for adjustment of pensions on the basis of cost of living increases was adapted from the Illinois public assistance laws. Health and funeral expenses are provided for. Medical care features are taken from the Washington State law.

Mr. McLain presented a statement concerning administration of assistance program throughout the Country, pointing out that 15 states and two territories have full state administration; with five additional states having almost completed the transition from county to state administration.

Dr. Donald Howard, President, California Conference of Social Work

Spoke concerning the aid to needy children, disabled, and general assistance programs. Emphasized that the conference has supported the A. N. C. program; has urged that the State take advantage of recent federal legislation, including establishment of a disability category; and has recommended a state-county general relief program.

Concerning A. N. C., Dr. Howard referred to the newness of the present program and the need for a trial period before evaluation. He especially urged that the gains under the program be considered while eliminating the abuses that may be involved and that there be determination of the actual extent of abuses with care in setting up regulations to control a small group that may be responsible for abuses without working hardship on greater numbers.

He referred to the problem of low income families not receiving assistance and suggested that such families might be supplemented on a family allowance plan.

In connection with desertions, he pointed out that the early period is often when help is needed most while family readjustments are being made. He stated that A. N. C. is no more responsible for desertions than other factors.

Concerning the disabled persons, Dr. Howard urged that California take advantage of the federal aid now available to this category of persons.

He stated that the delay in state financial participation and establishment of standards in the general relief program is the weakest link in the California Social Welfare program and urged that a state-county general assistance program be effectuated.

Mrs. Ruth Speigel, American Association of Social Workers

Explaining that membership of the association was over 600 in the Los Angeles area, she made the following comments:

General Relief: More adequate financing and equity between counties is needed. Weak spot in the total social welfare program. State participation is needed in this program to strengthen it and remove variations between counties.

Disabled Persons: Recommended enactment of legislation to take advantage of federal legislation for this group of persons who present problems of long-term dependency and special needs.

Aid to Needy Children: No limitations should be made in present program without careful study. Budgets established, particularly in view of rising costs of living, do not provide a luxury standard. Since the purpose of the program is to keep mothers at home with children and it is not a short-term program like general relief, standards of assistance need to be more adequate than might be provided under general relief. Desertions reflect unstable marriages. Abuses involved can be corrected through good staff in sufficient numbers.

She presented to the committee a statement on public assistance in California formulated and endorsed by the American Associations of Social Workers, Group Workers, Medical Social Workers, and Psychiatric Social Workers, which recommends the following:

1. State administration of old age security, aid to the blind, and aid to needy children;
2. State supervision of locally administered general assistance;
3. The ultimate integration into a single system of all forms of public assistance;
4. Establishment of local boards and committees to serve as interpreters and counselors to the administration and public;
5. That compulsory features of laws and rulings concerning family responsibility (excluding parental responsibility for a minor child) be eliminated with respect to eligibility for public assistance; in effect removal of the present provisions for responsibility of relatives with emphasis on voluntary contributions through administrative policies and actions.

Mr. C. W. Pfeiffer, Executive Secretary, Welfare Council of Metropolitan Los Angeles

Made a brief statement advocating establishment of an assistance program to provide for disabled persons.

Charles Schottland, Director, State Department of Social Welfare

Discussed with the committee several aspects of the aid to needy children program pointing out that detailed testimony was recently given to a Senate committee and that material used in that testimony is now being written up and will be submitted to this committee.

Referring to the unborn child question, Mr. Schottland said there are only 468 such children, and in 258 of these cases the family was already on A. N. C. by virtue of other children.

In connection with the so-called mismanagement cases, he said the counties were recently requested to report all such cases and listed only 287, of which 74 were in Los Angeles County.

In discussion regarding use of welfare funds for purchase of luxury items, Mr. Schottland stated that where such purchases are detected a reanalysis of eligibility of the family might be made at the county level.

He pointed out, in connection with criticism of the program, that much of this is a question of administration and that some counties are not making required eligibility reviews, and have refused to add staff necessary to maintain contact with families.

Mr. Schottland made the following recommendations for improvement of the A. N. C. program:

1. Amend the law to permit control of payments where families are determined to be unable to manage their own affairs;
2. Make stepparents responsible for support of stepchildren;
3. Mandate the district attorneys to take specific action on cases of deserting fathers;
4. Establish the uniform support of dependents law;
5. Pass a uniform transfer of dependents act;
6. Confine real property exemptions to cover only property utilized for the needs of the recipient, similarly to that working in the present aged and blind laws;

7. Work out the problem of appropriate ratios of financing between the counties and the State;
8. Provide by regulation that in all cases involving voluntary desertion eligibility of the family be reinvestigated every three months;
9. Consider the possibility of a three-month waiting period for cases involving voluntary separation of the supporting parent.

PRELIMINARY REPORT
ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE COOPERATION

January 12, 1951

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to the authorities and duties imposed upon your Interim Committee on Interstate Cooperation, as set forth in House Resolution 216 of the 1949 Regular Session, your committee herewith submits its preliminary report. We have functioned as an integral part of the California Commission on Interstate Cooperation whose membership, as you know, is composed of five constitutional state officers, five Senators, and five Assemblymen, under the guidance of Lieutenant Governor Goodwin Knight as Commission Chairman. This commission was established in 1939 (Cal. Stats. 1939, Chapt. 376) wherein California became a participating member of the Council of State Governments, now found in Title 2, Division 1 of the Government Code (Secs. 8000-8011).

FIELD OF ACTIVITY OF THE COMMITTEE

The primary function of the California Assembly Interim Committee on Interstate Cooperation in conjunction with the Senate Interim Committee on Interstate Cooperation and the California Commission on Interstate Cooperation is to furnish a means whereby California can join with the 47 other states now having like committees and commissions in dealing with interstate problems not coming within the purview of federal jurisdiction, and which are so broad in scope as not to lend themselves to as effectual solutions if dealt with by the states individually. These involve: Interstate compacts contemplated by Article I, Section 10 of the Constitution of the United States, the adoption of uniform and model legislation by the various states, promotion of regional programs beneficial to the states within the area, and reciprocal administrative acts or agreements. Participation in, and acting upon, such matters are among the goals which this committee seeks to accomplish in order to develop interstate unity among the states. In addition, this committee has aided in promoting a clearer understanding of many federal-state problems.

CHRONOLOGICAL RECORD OF INTERSTATE CONFERENCES

The committee, in addition to regular meetings within California, participated in 24 interstate conferences during the past biennium. Some idea of the importance and variety of interstate problems considered is indicated by the group of conferences:

August 23, 24, 1949—Al Tahoe, California

September 29, 30, 1949—Chicago, Illinois

ACTIVITIES OF THE CALIFORNIA ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE COOPERATION

Western Highways

The Western Interstate Committee on Highway Policy Problems was established at the direction of the Western Regional Conference of the Council of State Governments in Portland, in 1949 It is composed of two members from each state, usually one legislator and one highway official. California is represented by Senator Randolph Collier and Hon. Charles Purcell, Director of Public Works

The committee has been extremely active from its initial meeting in Salt Lake City in February, 1950. Representative Ralph T. Moore of Oregon was elected chairman. Discussion at that meeting led to agreement for proposed legislative action on a number of significant highway problems.

In discussing the problems of highway finance, members of the committee agreed that the major problem in making allocations of highway tax burdens was the lack of reliable information upon which such allocations may be based. A great deal of research has been done in this field, but much yet remains to be accomplished. It was proposed that the states of the western region cooperatively undertake a long-term program of research which would help provide answers to the more pressing questions of highway costs The Council of State Governments was directed to make preliminary studies along these lines to determine the feasibility and scope of such a program.

The committee's second meeting was held in San Francisco in July, 1950. At that time the committee carefully reviewed the proposed legislative action agreed upon at its first meeting. After considerable discussion of the proposed regional research program the committee voted to call upon the Institute of Transportation and Traffic Engineering of the University of California "to determine the areas in which research is necessary to set up a proper allocation of highway costs and to prepare a prospectus of the necessary research methods and costs for presentation to this committee." A subcommittee consisting of Senator Collier, Senator Paul Patterson of Oregon, and Representative Julia Hansen of Washington was appointed to work with the institute on this matter. Mr. J. W. Vickrey of the California Highway Department, Mr. R. H. Baldock of the Oregon Highway Department, and Mr. W. A. Bugge of the Washington Highway Department were named as consultants to the subcommittee.

Thereafter, the subcommittee, in cooperation with the Institute of Transportation and Traffic Engineering prepared a research outline, as directed. At the same time, the Stanford Research Institute of Stanford University was called upon to prepare a similar outline with respect to the over-all economic aspects of the problem. This research program was then presented to the entire committee at its third meeting in Santa Fe, New Mexico, in October, 1950. The report of the subcommittee was adopted in its entirety by the committee, and in turn presented to the Regional Conference of the Council of State Governments as a part of the committee's suggested program of legislative action for 1951, along with the other proposals previously agreed upon. In addition to the proposed research plan, the following legislative proposals make up the committee program:

(A) Adoption of statutes providing that courts be given discretionary power to suspend licenses of first offender drunken drivers for periods up to one year, and to provide mandatory suspension of licenses of second offenders.

(B) Adoption of legislation providing that traffic violators under 18 be tried in regular courts, rather than in juvenile courts It was suggested that in most states this recommendation could be put into effect by an amendment to the jurisdictional section of the Juvenile Court Act, such as "providing, however, in the case of traffic code violations, the court of original jurisdiction shall retain it."

(C) Adoption of legislation requiring that records of convictions of major traffic violators be forwarded to their state of origin

(D) Adoption of highway markings by every state which will conform to one of the alternatives fixed in the Manual of Uniform Traffic Control Devices adopted by the American Association of State Highway Officials

(E) Adoption of legislation providing that state highway officials have exclusive jurisdiction over all traffic control signs and devices on state highways.

(F) Adoption of legislation insuring the protection of state highways from subsequent encroachment, by the exercise of appropriate state powers, including the right of limitation of access to such highways

(G) Adoption of standard sizes and weights as recommended by the Western Association of State Highway Officials and refusal to increase sizes and weights until studies now under way are completed.

(H) Establishment of state safety councils by the 11 western states, with the cooperation and help of the National Safety Council.

(I) Exchange of important highway legislation introduced in the 1951 sessions among the 11 western states—utilizing the Western Office of the Council of State Governments as a clearing house for this purpose.

Regardless of the limitations in the various state statutes, there are extensive violations in gross overloading of trucks. It is claimed that these violations relate to a small percentage of truck owners but, whether this be true of not, the fact remains that over-loading causes material damage to our existing highways and these illegal truck operations are destroying the large investment California has in the highway system. The result is that a disproportionate part of our available highway revenue is being used for maintenance, leaving insufficient funds for badly needed new construction.

Agriculture

The Western Interstate Committee on Agriculture was established at the direction of the Regional Conference of the Council of State Governments in San Francisco in 1947. Each state is represented on the committee by the Director of Agriculture and a member of the Commission on Interstate Cooperation. Accordingly, Mr. A. A Brock, Director of the Department of Agriculture, and Assemblyman John F. Thompson were appointed to represent California.

The committee met in San Francisco on November 9, 1949, and in Santa Fe, New Mexico, on October 21, 1950. A wide variety of matters vital to the welfare of the agricultural industry of the western states received consideration by the committee in the past biennium. Among these were: Market enforcement legislation to prevent improper operation of commission merchants, prosecution of a vigorous cooperative program for eradication of foot and mouth disease by the Federal Government in Mexico, land classification programs, cooperative efforts by state, federal, and territorial agencies to combat Oriental fruit fly, transportation rates, and excise taxes on transportation charges which placed long hauls from the western area at a distinct disadvantage, uniform legislation regulating pest control operators and materials, regulation of experiments in artificial rainfall, methods of implementing state participation in the market service features of the Hope-Flanagan Act, federal-state cooperation in control of poisonous and noxious weeds with particular reference to federally owned and controlled land, and study of the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization's proposed plant convention.

The following recommendations were made by the Western Interstate Committee on Agriculture to the Western Regional Conference of the Council of State Governments:

(I) (a) Research and development work in artificial rainmaking be encouraged.

(b) Legislation be adopted, if necessary, to provide for the registration with a proper state agency of (1) persons or organizations engaged in the business of operating artificial nucleation equipment, with provision for information on areas of operation, and, (2) of persons or organizations selling equipment and supplies for artificial nucleation or possessing equipment and supplies used in connection therewith

(II) The committee recommends that the states give consideration to the enactment of the uniform state law suggested by the Council of State Governments governing the custom application of pesticides (insecticides, herbicides, fungicides and rodenticides) with such modifications as may be pertinent to the particular conditions existing in each state.

(III) Because of the need for improved marketing services in behalf of the agricultural products of the West, the committee recommends that the legislatures of the several states take cognizance of the availability of cooperative marketing services programs under the Hope-Flanagan Agricultural Marketing Research Law (P L. 733—79th Congress), whereby matching funds provided by the states can be utilized, under state departments of agriculture or markets, to develop improved techniques and services to aid in the marketing of farm products.

(IV) Since the newly introduced weed Halogeton glomeratus and other poisonous plants have killed thousands of head of sheep and cattle, and since the several western states are developing programs for the suppression of such weeds, and since a major portion of the infestation is on federally controlled land, and since Halogeton glomeratus is also host of the beet leaf hopper which transmits the destructive curly-top disease of many important commercial crops, the committee recommends that Congress be requested to enact H.R. 9578 (Baring), or similar legislation in order that cooperation from the Federal Government may be forthcoming for the control of poisonous and other weeds growing on lands subject to federal jurisdiction.

The committee recommends immediate action by the respective states to control Halogeton glomeratus through: (1) Vesting authority in and giving direction to appropriate state agencies to effectuate research, education and control; and (2) The coordination of activities directed to the suppression of Halogeton by the utilization of the services of official, community and private agencies through committees or otherwise; and (3) The immediate initiation and vigorous development of range management, livestock management and weed control programs utilizing information now available; and (4) Adequate appropriations to proper state and county agencies for research, education and control.

(V) Be it recommended by the Western Interstate Committee on Agriculture, meeting at Santa Fe, New Mexico, October 21st, 1950, that the following recommendation of the National Plant Board be approved:

"WHEREAS, The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization has drafted an international plant protection convention and has proposed a world reporting service concerning the incidence of plant pests and diseases, with reports about such pests being released on a world-wide basis through the F. A. O.; and

"WHEREAS, It is proposed that the United States participate in this convention which offers a medium for international cooperation and investigation of plant pests; and

"WHEREAS, Such cooperation would be very helpful to the United States in providing information about plant pests in foreign countries and in promoting international goodwill and understanding; now, therefore, be it

"Recommended, by the National Plant Board in session at New York City, New York, September 25-27, 1950, That the United States actively participate in this international convention as presently conceived, provided it does not restrict the authority now vested in the Secretary of Agriculture under the provisions of the Plant Quarantine Act of 1912 as amended, to take immediate and independent action to protect the agriculture of the United States; and be it further

"Recommended, That the National Plant Board requests the Secretary of Agriculture to inform the National Plant Board of any proposed changes in the present draft or any future amendments that may be proposed; and be it further

"Recommended, That copies of this resolution be sent to the Secretary of Agriculture, the Chief of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, U. S. D. A., and to all regional plant boards."

Institutional Care

The Western Interstate Committee on Institutional Care was created at the direction of the Regional Conference of the Council of State Governments in Salt Lake City in 1946. It is made up of one official appointed by the chairman of each state Commission on Interstate Cooperation of the 11 Western States. Assemblyman Vincent Thomas was appointed to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Assemblyman Ralph C. Dills. Meetings were held in Long Beach, California, in January, 1950, and in Santa Fe, New Mexico, in October, 1950.

The committee has sought ways and means of avoiding and eliminating duplication of institutional facilities in the region. A four-state compact involving Idaho, Nevada, Utah, and Wyoming is presently under consideration with a view to providing better educational facilities for the deaf and blind students of these states. The plan contemplates that the present school for the deaf and blind located at Ogden, Utah, will become a school solely for the blind students of the four states, and that the present school for the deaf and blind located at Gooding, Idaho, will serve as a school solely for the deaf students of the four states.

Steps have been taken at the instance of this committee to provide sharing of penal facilities for women prisoners. California, in 1949, enacted legislation which will permit the taking of women prisoners from other states on a tuition basis when such facilities become available. Oregon, Idaho, and Nevada have passed legislation permitting women prisoners to be housed in California when possible.

A number of other projects are in progress or have been completed. The committee has done a great deal to promote the use of sight saving books in public schools to permit pupils with partial sight to continue in the public schools. Consultation with the California School for the Blind at Berkeley has resulted in an agreement by that school to take the doubly handicapped children of the region. The school has also consented to make available to other states on a cost basis, the services of various faculty members for the purpose of holding preschool clinics for parents of blind children. Home training courses for spastics which are used extensively in Montana have been made available to all the states of the region The committee is also studying the problem of handling the advanced training of deaf students who require vocational training beyond the level to be found in the home state. In addition, the committee has been studying the best means of helping the states on general problems common to all institutions, such as: the exchange of institutional building plans, the establishment of regional wage scales for comparable positions, the adoption of reciprocal action in the field of retirement for special educators and institution heads, and the dissemination of important safety information among institutions.

The following recommendations were presented by the committee to the Regional Conference of the Council of State Governments in Santa Fe, New Mexico, on October 24, 1950:

(1) The committee, having studied the proposed compact for a four-state School for the Blind, including the States of Idaho, Nevada, Wyoming, and Utah, and a four-state school for the deaf for the same states, decided to refer the two compacts to the Western Regional Conference of the Council of State Governments without recommendation and urged that the four states concerned give the compacts their individual consideration.

(2) The committee, having received an offer from the California School for the Blind to train teachers of parents of pre-school blind children, urges the use of such facilities by the 11 western states and the establishment of pre-school clinics where possible.

Lake Tahoe Problems

The California-Nevada Committee on Lake Tahoe Problems was created in 1949 at the suggestion of officials of both states. Two members from each state were appointed by the chairman of the respective Commissions on Interstate Cooperation. California is represented by Senator Jesse Mayo and Assemblyman Richard McCollister.

Meetings were held in August, 1949, at Al Tahoe, California; in March, 1950, at Sacramento; and in September, 1950, at Brockway, California. The large increase in population of the Lake Tahoe Area in recent years has created many new problems of administering public services. It is apparent that these problems are complicated by the fact that the area is divided by the California-Nevada State Boundary. The committee has attempted to facilitate cooperation by administrative agencies across state lines and to suggest legislation as necessary to solve these problems.

For example, the efforts of the committee have brought about an increased measure of cooperation between the highway departments in snow removal. The fish and game departments are working together on the problem of restocking the lake with fish. Legislation has been prepared to institute a system of reciprocal fishing licenses permitting fishermen to fish anywhere on the lake. (See Appendix I.) Measures have been instituted to aid local authorities in rodent control work. Efforts will be made by Nevada members to secure adoption in 1951 of the Uniform Fresh Pursuit Act, thus improving police protection in the region. The committee is continuing its study of fire protection problems.

The tremendous increase in population, together with the seasonal nature of much of that population poses expensive problems in sanitation control. Some sanitation districts have already been established, but at present no specific statutory authority exists authorizing such districts to contract across state lines. Amending legislation has been prepared for that purpose.

The full report of the California-Nevada Committee on Lake Tahoe Problems, together with its suggested legislation and amendments is attached hereto as Appendix I of this report.

Uniform Laws

The 1949 Session of the California Legislature amended the statute creating the California Commission on Interstate Cooperation to provide that the State Chairman of the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws should be an ex officio member of the Commission on Interstate Cooperation (Calif. Govt. Code, Sec. 8004.5.) Accordingly, Mr. Martin J. Dinkelspiel of San Francisco became a member of the commission upon approval of the amending act by the Governor.

The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws is the oldest interstate body in existence, having drafted its first uniform act, the Negotiable Instruments Law, in 1896. Since that time, the conference has drafted a total of 112 acts, many of which have been adopted by the 11 western states. The Assembly Interim Committee on Interstate Cooperation have been instrumental in securing the passage of a number of these acts.

The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws is presently engaged in drafting the Uniform Commercial Code, a project which has been in preparation since 1940. This proposed act is designed to replace and revise a considerable portion of the commercial law of the states, including a number of older uniform laws, previously prepared by the conference, and to bring the commercial law in line with modern business practices. It is hoped that the Uniform Commercial Code will be in final form in time to be introduced in the legislatures in 1953. In the meantime, however, it will be introduced into a number of states in 1951 merely for the purpose of submitting it for study by interim committees. To this end, the California Commissioners on Uniform State Laws have held one hearing, in May, 1950, which was attended by representatives of various commercial and banking interests, as well as members of the Assembly Interim Committee on Interstate Cooperation.

In addition to the Uniform Commercial Code, the following listed Uniform Acts will be introduced into the 1951 Session of the California Legislature by the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, and the California Commission on Interstate Cooperation: Prenatal Blood Test Act; Probate of Foreign Wills Act; Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act; Trustees Accounting Act; Photographic Copies as Evidence Act; Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act; Ancilliary Administration of Estates Act; and Transfer of Dependents Act

Regional Higher Education

The Western Governors' Conference, at its meeting in Salt Lake City, in November, 1949, strongly endorsed the principle of closer interstate cooperation in certain fields of higher education, including medicine, dentistry, public health education, and veterinary medicine.

Governor Earl Warren, Chairman of the Conference, appointed a committee to study the problems involved and to formulate recommendations for the next meeting of the Western Governors' Conference. Membership of the Special Committee on Regional Education in the West consisted of Governors Lee Knouse of Colorado, A. G. Crane of Wyoming, Thomas J Mabry of New Mexico, C. A. Robins of Idaho, and Arthur B Langlie of Washington

At the recommendation of the Committee of Governors, A Technical Advisory Committee of two representatives from each of the 12 western states and the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii was appointed, and first met in Salt Lake City on April 28, 1950. Special subcommittees on medicine, dentistry, public health education and veterinary medicine were established at that time to advise concerning the collection of appropriate data on which the Technical Advisory Committee could base its recommendations to the governors. Representing California on this Technical Advisory Committee were Dr Edward S Rogers, Dean of the School of Public Health, University of California, and Dr. George Hart, College of Veterinary Medicine, Davis, California; and Dr. C. B. Hutchison, Dean of the College of Agriculture, University of California, Berkeley.

The Special Committee of Governors also recommended the appointment of a Legal Committee to consider the methods of implementing the program to be developed by the Technical Advisory Committee. Mr. Thomas Westphal, Jr., Deputy Attorney General represented California on this committee.

The Technical Advisory Committee held meetings in Salt Lake City on April 28, 1950 and in San Francisco on July 28, 1950. Following the latter meeting, on July 29th, the Legal Committee assembled and began work on drafting an interstate compact to carry out the recommendations of the Technical Advisory Committee. This work was completed at a meeting of the Legal Committee in Denver on September 22, 1950. The resulting compact was presented to the Western Governors' Conference at its meeting in Denver on November 10th and 11th. The Governors expressed their approval and agreed to recommend it to their respective legislatures in 1951.

The plan contemplates the establishment of an Interstate Commission to act as a clearing house. Qualified students from participating states and territories will be placed, by the commission, in institutions offering adequate professional and graduate educational opportunities. The commission would be authorized to enter into contracts with various schools in the region offering professional and graduate education. Such contracts would provide that the schools would accept a certain number of qualified students, in return for which the schools would be paid on a specified cost per student per year basis. The commission would also contract with such states and territories in the region who desire to purchase such educational services The net effect is to permit the smaller states which do not have such educational facilities to purchase the services for qualified students, without the necessity of building and maintaining their own schools. The proposed compact will be found in Appendix II

Legislative Service Conference

The Legislative Service Conference was organized in 1948 to provide interstate cooperation for legislative service agencies. This, in turn, leads to more effective service to the legislatures and aids in improving legislative processes and procedures. Its membership consists of legislators who are officers of legislative service agencies, legislative librarians and reference officials, legislative research officials, statutory and code revisors, and legislative drafting officials of the states and territories. California has been represented by the Legislative Counsel. The 1949 meeting was held October 27-28 in Chicago, and the 1950 meeting on September 28-30 in Washington, D. C.

The conference has covered a wide range of topics at these meetings. The 1950 meeting was held in the Library of Congress, and members were able to gain a closer insight into the workings of the legislative research functions of that organization. Round-table discussions permit exchange of views and experiences. Among the subjects which have received attention from the conference are: Legislative aids, budgets, codification and drafting, library services, distribution of bills and reports, functions of legislative councils, and assistance with the appropriation function.

Conference on State Governmental Reorganization

Representatives of state and territorial reorganization agencies met in Chicago on September 29-30, 1949. Revival of interest in governmental practices and procedures has been stirred by expanding costs of government, increased demands for public services, overlapping and duplication of functions and many other factors. During 1949, 20 states and two territories authorized studies of their governmental organization and operation.

Three principal questions were considered by the conference:

1) How should the state government survey be organized and conducted?

2) What generally accepted principles of state government organization might be embodied in the survey agency's recommendations?

3) What fact-finding, research, and information distribution services can be undertaken centrally by the council of State Governments to assist all of the state survey groups?

This conference achieved a great deal in developing the thinking of interested officials on all phases of governmental reorganization. Included in the agenda were discussions of the objectives of reorganization, selection of any agency and methods of carrying out the necessary research, scope of the study, and means of selling reorganization plans to the public and legislature for enactment.

Pacific Coast Fisheries

The Assembly Interim Committee on Interstate Cooperation calls attention to the continuing cooperative work with regard to the important Pacific marine fisheries among the States of California, Oregon, and Washington, working through the Pacific Marine Fisheries Commission. This agency was sponsored by the Commissions on Interstate Cooperation of the three states, leading to the formation of a compact for the purpose of joint operation.

Among the studies and recommendations which have been made by the commission in the past year are those concerning: Salmon fisheries, otter trawl fisheries, soupfin shark, tuna, sardines, and sablefish. In addition, work has been done looking toward revision of the International Halibut Treaty. Considerable work has been done on drafting a Convention for the Extension of Port Privileges to Fishing Vessels in Alaska and British Columbia. Representatives of the commission have taken part in preparation of treaties relating to tuna fisheries with Mexico and Costa Rica.

Changes in California regulations which have been made in cooperation with the Pacific States Marine Fisheries Commission or at the suggestion of the commission are:

1) The Pacific Marine Fisheries Compact has been continued indefinitely.

2) State boundaries have been changed to include islands, and intervening waters, and trawl areas have been clarified to conform with this change.

3) A uniform crab season has been established, November 15th to July 31st.

4) Alternate troll salmon regulations recommended by the commission have been adopted.

5) Repeal of prohibition against landing shark livers without carcasses.

6) Establishment of a 4½ minimum mesh limit for otter trawl gear.

7) Repeal of sales tax on fishing boats.

APPENDIX 1

REPORT OF CALIFORNIA-NEVADA COMMITTEE ON LAKE TAHOE PROBLEMS

After considerable study, the California-Nevada Committee on Lake Tahoe Problems has come to the conclusion that for the present, at least, the administrative problems of the Lake Tahoe area can best be handled by closer cooperation between the States of California and Nevada and among the various local governmental agencies concerned, aided where necessary by federal representatives performing pertinent functions in the area.

In this connection, the committee suggests that legislation be enacted to facilitate such cooperation across the state boundary in the area. It is felt that particular attention should be directed to the problems of fire protection and sanitation.

Fire Protection

Both states have legislation authorizing the creation of fire protection districts, and the issuance by such districts of bonds to pay for equipment and supplies. Such bonds are payable from taxes. Consequently, the problem is not to provide the machinery of fire protection so much as the means of pooling resources and equipment to meet major emergencies around Lake Tahoe. In this instance, however, the situation is complicated by the problem of working out some method of permitting equipment and personnel of one district to cross over the state line and operate in another state when necessary.

California presently has statutory authority for cooperation among various local governmental units, and it is probable that with the exception of a minor amendment, no further legislative enactments will be required in California. The "Joint Exercise of Powers Act" found in the California Government Code, Sections 6500 et seq., provides that any public agencies may agree to exercise their common powers jointly.

The California Attorney General has held that this act, for example, permits fire protection districts in Santa Barbara County to enter into mutual aid fire protection agreements with the County of Ventura. (14 A G. 75, Op. Nr. 49-35). The act makes no reference to contracting across state lines. Therefore, in order to clarify this point, Section 6502 might be amended to read as follows:

> "6502. Public agencies may agree to exercise powers jointly. If authorized by their legislative or other governing bodies, two or more public agencies by agreement may jointly exercise any power common to the contracting parties, even though one or more of the contracting agencies may be located outside this State."

It would, of course, be highly desirable, perhaps necessary, that where one of the contracting parties is located in another state, the adjoining state should have legislation of a substantially similar character. Therefore, the California-Nevada Committee on Lake Tahoe Problems recommends the passage by the Nevada Legislature in 1951 of the same statute or one substantially similar thereto See Appendix I.

Sanitation

Passage of an act such as that suggested above, by the State of Nevada, and the amendment of the California statute would also seem to facilitate closer cooperation in the field of sanitation It will be observed that the Joint Exercise of Powers Act provides in Section 6502 for the joint exercise of "any power common to the two contracting parties." Consequently, it seems clear that the act should also cover this situation.

The Nevada "Water and Sewer Revenue Bond Law of 1949" (Statutes of Nevada, 1949, Chapter 129) provides in Section 4(2) that any municipality is given power:

> "To operate and maintain any undertaking for its own use and for the use of public and private consumers, and users within and without the territorial boundaries of the municipality."

Section 3 of the same act defines "municipality" as:

> "* * * any city, unincorporated city or town, county, county sewer and/or water improvement district, or any sewage and/or water and/or garbage disposal district."

The comparable California law is entitled "Sanitation, Sewer, and Water Bond Law of 1941" found in the 1949 Supplement to the Government Code, Section 54300 et seq Section 54342 of the California act corresponds to Section 4(2) of the Nevada act quoted above. The term "local agency" in the California act corresponds generally with "municipality" in the Nevada act. It includes the following: City, county, city and county, municipal utility district, public utility district, sanitary district, county sanitary district, sanitation district, or any municipal or public corporation or district which is authorized to acquire, construct, own or operate a sanitation system or sewer system or both.

It does not seem likely that a sanitation district in one of the states would extend its own lines into another state in order to sell its services to individual consumers. However, by means of the legislation under consideration here, it would be possible for a district in one state having certain sanitation or sewage facilities, to contract to sell a certain proportion of its capacity to a district in another state. Thus the second district would construct and maintain its own lines, while connecting with the lines of the first district. Consequently, the committee believes that the above recommendations will go far toward extending the excellent cooperation which already exists among local government agencies in the Lake Tahoe area.

Criminal Jurisdiction

It is an accepted doctrine of constitutional law that the Federal Government possesses only those powers which are granted to it by the United States Constitution. All other powers are reserved to the states. Nothing in the Federal Constitution denies to the states the power to exercise police powers over waters within their boundaries, and therefore they may impose such regulatory measures as may be necessary. The regulation of hunting and fishing provides an example of the use of police powers of the states over such waters The only restriction on such power is that it must not conflict with federal legislation, for the Federal Government may also exercise certain jurisdiction over navigable waters within the State by virtue of its power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce, and to regulate navigable waters of the United States. The criminal jurisdiction of the Federal Government as it relates to the waters of Lake Tahoe is defined by the Motor Boat Act of 1940, 46 U. S. C. A. 526(1), 526(m).

As pointed out, the States of California and Nevada have a concurrent power in this regard. California has enacted legislation in Sections 267 and 268 of the Harbors and Navigation Code in the use of such power. See Appendix II. These sections clearly give local authorities the power to make and enforce such regulations as may be necessary to govern the operation of power boats on the waters of Lake Tahoe. Such regulations have not as yet been drawn up. However, regulations would not be particularly meaningful in the absence of similar action by Nevada authorities.

At present, Nevada has no legislation which would permit local authorities to enact such regulations. The committee therefore recommends that the Nevada Legislature enact provisions comparable to Sections 267 and 268 of the California Harbors and Navigation Code in order to provide local officials with sufficient power to regulate the operation of boats on Lake Tahoe.

Uniform Fresh Pursuit Act

In order to improve police protection in the Lake Tahoe area, as well as along the entire California-Nevada Boundary, the committee recommends the passage by the Nevada Legislature of the Uniform Fresh Pursuit Act.

This act, drafted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, permits a police officer of one state when in fresh pursuit of a criminal to continue across the state line if necessary, to apprehend the offender. This act is already in force in California.

Fishing Licenses

A considerable degree of cooperation presently exists between the Fish and Game Commissions of the respective states, particularly in regard to steps being taken to re-stock the lake with fish. In addition however, it is felt that the licensing and policing of fishing on the lake would be greatly simplified if some arrangement could be made for reciprocal licensing. Thus, a fisherman purchasing a license in California would be entitled to fish in all parts of the lake without the necessity of also purchasing a Nevada license and vice versa.

Therefore, the committee recommends that the Legislatures of Nevada and California enact measures permitting the Fish and Game Commissioners of the two states to set up such a system. The details of the arrangement would be left to the commissions to work out by negotiation. A suggested bill for this purpose will be found in Appendix III.

General Comment

The committee heard from local residents and representatives of each of the levels of government on pertinent problems. It found that: (1) On current and potential water supply, much had been worked out by the State Engineers of both states. (2) In connection with suppression of field rodents harboring diseases transmissible to humans, state, federal and local agricultural, health and wildlife agencies well understood the problem, which resulted in effective efforts. (3) There was a real consciousness on the advisability of adequate use of zoning authority in anticipation of population increase, both seasonal and permanent.

WESTERN REGIONAL HIGHER EDUCATION COMPACT

Article I

WHEREAS, The future of this Nation and of the Western States is dependent upon the quality of the education of its youth; and

WHEREAS, Many of the Western States individually do not have sufficient numbers of potential students to warrant the establishment and maintenance within their borders of adequate facilities in all of the essential fields of technical, professional, and graduate training, nor do all of the states have the financial ability to furnish within their borders institutions capable of providing acceptable standards of training in all of the fields mentioned above; and

WHEREAS, It is believed that the Western States, or groups of such states within the region, cooperatively can provide acceptable and efficient educational facilities to meet the needs of the region and of the students thereof; now, therefore,

The States of Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming, and the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, Do hereby covenant and agree as follows:

Article II

Each of the compacting states and territories pledges to each of the other compacting states and territories faithful cooperation in carrying out all the purposes of this compact.

Said commission shall be a body corporate of each compacting state and territory and an agency thereof. The commission shall have all the powers and duties set forth herein, including the power to sue and be sued, and such additional powers as may be conferred upon it by subsequent action of the respective legislatures of the compacting states and territories.

Article IV

The commission shall consist of three resident members from each compacting state or territory. At all times one commissioner from each compacting state or territory shall be an educator engaged in the field of higher education in the state or territory from which he is appointed.

The commissioners from each state and territory shall be appointed by the governor thereof as provided by law in such state or territory. Any commissioner may be removed or suspended from office as provided by the law of the state or territory from which he shall have been appointed.

The terms of each commissioner shall be four years; provided however that the first three commissioners shall be appointed as follows: one for two years, one for three years, and one for four years. Each commissioner shall hold office until his successor shall be appointed and qualified. If any office becomes vacant for any reason, the governor shall appoint a commissioner to fill the office for the remainder of the unexpired term.

The commission shall establish and maintain an office within one of the compacting states for the transaction of its business and may meet at any time, but in any event must meet at least once a year. The chairman may call such additional meetings and upon the request of a majority of the commissioners of three or more compacting states or territories shall call additional meetings.

The commission shall submit a budget to the governor of each compacting state and territory at such time and for such period as may be required

The commission shall, after negotiations with interested institutions, determine the cost of providing the facilities for graduate and professional education for use in its contractual agreements throughout the region.

On or before the fifteenth day of January of each year, the commission shall submit to the governors and legislatures of the compacting states and territories a report of its activities for the preceding calendar year.

The commission shall keep accurate books of account, showing in full its receipts and disbursements, and said books of account shall be open at any reasonable time for inspection by the governor of any compacting state or territory or his designated representative. The commission shall not be subject to the audit and accounting procedure of any of the compacting states or territories. The commission shall provide for an independent annual audit.

Article VIII

It shall be the duty of the commission to enter into such contractual agreements with any institutions in the region offering graduate or professional education and with any of the compacting states or territories as may be required in the judgment of the commission to provide adequate services and facilities of graduate and professional education, for the citizens of the respective compacting states or territories. The commission shall first endeavor to provide adequate services and facilities in the fields of dentistry, medicine, public health, and veterinary medicine, and may undertake similar activities in other professional and graduate fields.

For this purpose the commission may enter into contractual agreements—

(a) With the governing authority of any educational institution in the region, or with any compacting state or territory, to provide such graduate or professional educational services upon terms and conditions to be agreed upon between contracting parties, and

(b) With the governing authority of any educational institution in the region or with any compacting state or territory to assist in the placement of graduate or professional students in educational institutions in the region providing the desired services and facilities, upon such terms and conditions as the commission may prescribe.

It shall be the duty of the commission to undertake studies of needs for professional and graduate educational facilities in the region, the resources for meeting such needs, and the long-range effects of the compact on higher education; and from time to time prepare comprehensive reports on such research for presentation to the Western Governors' Conference and to the legislatures of the compacting states and territories. In conducting such studies, the commission may confer with any national or regional planning body which may be established. The commission shall draft and recommend to the governors of the various compacting states and territories, uniform legislation dealing with problems of higher education in the region.

For the purposes of this compact the word "region" shall be construed to mean the geographical limits of the several compacting states and territories.

Article IX

The operating costs of the commission shall be apportioned equally among the compacting states and territories.

Article X

This compact shall become operative and binding immediately as to those states and territories adopting it whenever five or more of the States or Territories of Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington, Wyoming, Alaska, and Hawaii have duly adopted it prior to July 1, 1953. This compact shall become effective as to any additional states or territories adopting thereafter at the time of such adoption.

Article XI

This compact may be terminated at any time by consent of a majority of the compacting states or territories. Consent shall be manifested by passage and signature in the usual manner of legislation expressing such consent by the legislature and governor of such terminating state. Any state or territory may at any time withdraw from this compact by means of appropriate legislation to that end. Such withdrawal shall not become effective until two years after written notice thereof by the governor of the withdrawing state or territory accompanied by a certified copy of the requisite legislative action is received by the commission. Such withdrawal shall not relieve the withdrawing state or territory from its obligations hereunder accruing prior to the effective date of withdrawal.

The withdrawing state or territory may rescind its action of withdrawal at any time within the two year period. Thereafter, the withdrawing state or territory may be reinstated by application to and the approval by a majority vote of the commission.

Article XII

If any compacting state or territory shall at any time default in the performance of any of its obligations assumed or imposed in accordance with the provisions of this compact, all rights, privileges and benefits conferred by this compact or agreements hereunder, shall be suspended from the effective date of such default as fixed by the commission.

Unless such default shall be remedied within a period of two years following the effective date of such default, this compact may be terminated with respect to such defaulting state or territory by affirmative vote of three-fourths of the other member states or territories.

Any such defaulting state may be reinstated by: (a) performing all acts and obligations upon which it has heretofore defaulted, and (b) application to and the approval by a majority vote of the commission.

CONCLUSION

Your interim committee concurs in the recommendations of the regional committees as set forth herein. These recommendations follow the main conclusions and recommendations of the full California Commission on Interstate Cooperation.

Bills to accomplish the necessary legislative changes are being introduced simultaneously in the Assembly.

PRELIMINARY REPORT

ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS

January 12, 1951

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to the authorities and duties imposed upon your Interim Committee on Military and Veterans Affairs, as set forth in House Resolution No. 217 of the 1949 Regular Session, your committee herewith submits its preliminary report. Those interested will notice that our main efforts were expended on an analysis of the need and necessity of the construction of new armories for the housing of those units of the National Guard assigned to our State. In this report we are also giving a brief resumé of the traffic usual to our subject matter and an outline of the activities in which our committee members have engaged as liaison officers between the State Government and the various veteran organizations. We also report to you on a hearing we held following announcement of the Korean hostilities with reference to the civilian defense organization in California.

IN GENERAL

Your committee has served the public and members thereof who are California veterans in handling the volume of correspondence equal to a request per day for farm and home purchase loans, civil service credits, and the various benefits to which our veterans are entitled. We have done this in the regular course of business, feeling that this traffic is the type of service expected of our committee. Comparatively speaking, these services are of a minor nature and no attempt is made herewith to submit the personal circumstances and details surrounding each veteran asking our assistance It is sufficient to report that each case was serviced, and the corresponding veteran was aided through our contact with the officials of the State Government, and in those cases where a hearing became necessary the veterans were scheduled before our public meetings. We can report to you that our service in this connection was 100 percent satisfactory and that the Legislature as a whole should take credit for the work done. Those wishing data on individual cases may make specific inquiry from our chairman.

CIVILIAN DEFENSE

It is well recognized that the participation of this Nation in the war in Korea brought us to a military consciousness, and, in keeping with the time, your Committee on Military Affairs hastily assembled a meeting of the civilian defense authorities and a full hearing was undertaken in Sacramento during the first week of August, 1950. Our leading witness was Mr. Burton Washburn, Secretary of the California State Disaster Council, and our hearing was overwhelmingly patronized by representatives of local governments, including the Association of District Attorneys, League of California Cities, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, Association of County Supervisors, the Peace Officials Association, the Association of California Fire Chiefs and other units interested in civilian defense. Our meeting was also officially attended by officers of the Army coming from the Sixth Army Headquarters at the San Francisco Presidio, and the official message of these officers was the stark statement that the Army considered civilian defense to be a domestic matter.

A full transcript of this meeting is available for those interested, but in this report your committee does not feel it necessary to relate the discussions in detail since the developments along this line have now taken on a federal pattern, and, as set forth at a subsequent meeting of the 11 western states which was attended by members of your committee at Santa Fe, New Mexico, in October, 1950, cooperation between the Federal Government and the various states is being accomplished.

We wish you to know that your committee felt completely satisfied with the manuals of training and planning prepared by the State Disaster Council. It was obvious in August, 1950, that California was well ahead of the other states in the Union in the matter of civilian defense activities. Furthermore, during our special session in September, 1950, we enacted the model Civilian Defense Laws recommended by the National Security Resources Board.

There are two remaining problems of great magnitude.

1. Enlistment of the interest of the man-of-the-street type of civilian defense workers in keeping with the plans already formulated.

2. Matters of financial agreements between the various levels of government for the payment of expenses and capital outlay necessary to give this state an adequate civilian defense program.

The mutual aid agreements between municipalities and counties have been well executed in the planning stage. Likewise, the exchange of interstate mutual aid agreements has been well accomplished. We are in the position of having an excellent plan, but no working population in the movement; nor do we have yet a working arrangement for finances.

Your committee does not herewith attempt to prescribe or recommend the necessary financial arrangement since, as this report is being written, the Federal Congress is in the process of making a large appropriation for civilian defense and various meetings are in progress between cities, counties, and the State, for the determination of the proper proportion of expenditures. Also, your committee anticipates that Governor Warren will propose amendments and appropriations in support of the civilian defense program.

Our own bills in support of uniformity of identification for workers, and a matching basis for financial expenditures between the various levels of government, are being introduced concurrently with this report.

NATIONAL GUARD ARMORIES

As stated in the opening portion of this report, the main undertaking of your Interim Committee has been to examine the need and necessity for the expenditure of state funds in the furtherance of the National Guard Armory program. For this purpose we employed Mr. Lynn S. Coe, a most experienced investigator who has done work for this committee for several years past. Mr. Coe was detailed to scrutinize the circumstances in every community where the Adjutant General has suggested a need of an armory, and we feel that his insight of circumstances at each location, as reported herewith, will be of immeasurable benefit to the entire Legislature in their determination and allocation of state funds.

You all know that the National Guard is raised, trained, officered, and housed by the State. However, it is equipped, paid, and supervised by the Departments of Army and Air Force. The California responsibility consists of:

40th Infantry Division
49th Infantry Division
61st Fighter Wing
62nd Fighter Wing
112th A.A.A. (Anti Aircraft) Brigade
114th A.A.A. Brigade
First Provisional Brigade
State Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment

There are 362 units now activated and located in the various cities and towns throughout our State, with the exception of those belonging to the 40th Infantry Division (Southern California) which was, in September of 1950, called into active federal service The remaining units are still our responsibility and they suffer the handicap of inadequate housing (armories) to the extent that the Federal Government will not authorize the assignment of ordnance, mobile equipment, practice armament, and in some cases even uniforms, because our locations have no facilities for storage. This actually leaves our National Guard in a pathetic condition, and demonstrates that it is most essential for us to proceed with the construction of armory facilities.

It will be recalled that in a move of would-be economy approximately one-half of our armory program was eliminated during the 1949 Session of the Legislature, leaving our State with some 40 or 50 required armories without funds for their construction. Therefore, your committee instructed Mr. Coe to examine 45 communities in keeping with the armory proposals of the Adjutant General. A paragraph on the condition of each community examined now follows in this report·

ALHAMBRA (Hq. & Hq. Company, 3d Bn., 223d Infantry Regiment)

The present facilities are housing five units of the National Guard, with a total strength of approximately 600 men and officers. The building is totally inadequate and perhaps the most crowded condition found in the entire inspection Strong rooms for the storage of ordnance and weapons are entirely inadequate and with very poor security. Several break-ins have occurred with the loss of small arms and a machine gun. The men have no inside area for assembly. Class rooms are totally inadequate because of size, and an outside area poorly lighted is the only drill area available. This building is the administration building of an old abandoned airport and was the only available location in the City of Alhambra. From a rental standpoint alone, it would seem good business that this armory be constructed. The State is paying a rental of $500 per month on this location. Community interest in the National Guard is excellent. A site has been offered of approximately five acres and is now in the process of acquisition. Required motor vehicles have not been issued, due to the lack of a motor pool. (UNDER CONSTRUCTION. APPROPRIATION APPROVED AT BUDGET SESSION, MARCH, 1950)

ANAHEIM AND FULLERTON (Co. K and Co. M, 224th Infantry Regiment)

It has been proposed, due to the close proximity of these two cities, that an armory be constructed for joint occupancy of the Anaheim and Fullerton units. Both units have been recruited to nearly authorized strength, and present facilities are entirely inadequate. These are heavy weapons companies and much of the equipment necessary for their training program has not been issued due to the lack of storage facilities. These two units have a strength of 278 enlisted men and five officers. At the present time the rentals covering the two locations total $325 per month. Here again it would seem, considering the rental paid and the lack of facilities, only good policy for the State to construct its own building. Armory would be located on a site already granted. Required motor vehicles have not been issued due to lack of motor pool.

BAKERSFIELD (Hq. & Hq. Co., 3d Bn., 185th Infantry Regiment)

Two units and battalion headquarters of the 185th Regiment are now quartered in an old county fair building, and while assembly and drill space is adequate, supply and strong rooms do not meet Federal requirements, and there have already been three break-ins with a loss of equipment and arms. The training program is hampered because of the lack of proper weapons and equipment for training purposes. The building is of a very temporary nature, with no heat, and stands on the old county fair grounds which is being abandoned. It is proposed that all buildings on this site be removed immediately after the 1950 Kern County Fair, which means that these two units will be left without any quarters in which to carry on their program. The community interest is excellent and a site has been granted on the new fair grounds which will be constructed south of the city, and arrangements have been made whereby the fair would participate in the construction of the armory building, making it possible to construct a much larger building than proposed by the Adjutant General, and allowing its use as an exhibit building during the time of the fair only. Inasmuch as this is at a time of the year when it is possible to conduct training programs outside, it would in no way interfere with the program of the National Guard units. Required motor vehicles have not been issued due to the lack of a motor pool. Its present strength is 157 enlisted men and 16 officers. (UNDER CONSTRUCTION. APPROPRIATION APPROVED AT BUDGET SESSION, MARCH, 1950.)

BARSTOW (Hq. & Hq. Co. & Service & Medical Detachment Co., and 140th Headquarters Tank Battalion)

This unit is now meeting in the high school building. Quarters are inadequate and pressure is being brought to bear by the school board for their removal, due to the fact that the increase in school registration requires the use of these facilities. At the present time the strength is 16 officers and 91 men, which will be increased by the transfer of units to this armory as soon as the armory is constructed. At the present time a rental of $250 a month is being paid to the school board for these facilities which are inadequate and holding up reorganization of the forces in this area

BRAWLEY (111th Armored Cavalry Regiment—Light)

This unit is now meeting in the American Legion Memorial Building with an orderly room, strong room, and supply room adequate for the present strength of 45 enlisted men and one officer. This unit is one of the last to be activated and is growing. A class room is available within the Legion Building, but drill must be carried on in an outside area which is floodlighted poorly. No motor pool is available so the unit has not been able to draw the motor equipment to which it is entitled and should have. With its present strength, facilities are perhaps adequate for the time being, but, as they approach their authorized strength, they will be totally inadequate. An outright grant of sufficient property for armory construction has been offered to the State and will be forwarded to the Department of Finance for approval.

BANNING AND BEAUMONT (Co. H, 224th Infantry Regiment)

It has been proposed that an armory be constructed in Banning to serve the community surrounding and including Beaumont. At the present time they are housed on the second floor of a store building, and while they have an assembly room, it is very small and inadequate. Class rooms are not available. Supply and strong rooms are inadequate. No lockers and shower rooms. No heating facilities for main area and at the time the inspection was made, weather conditions were such that temperature in the main assembly room was too cold for use. Community interest in this unit is high and the City of Banning has purchased an ample site approximately two miles from Banning in the direction of Beaumont, which would place the armory near the center of its area. As an instance of interest shown in the National Guard, some of their men travel as far as 60 miles to attend drills. There is no vehicle pool and such equipment as they have has been issued only through a relaxation of rules by the Federal Government. Their present strength is 99 men and three officers.

CALEXICO (Co. C, 111th Armored Cavalry Regiment—Light)

This unit is at present housed in the American Legion Building which is an old residence. It is totally inadequate with no facilities for lockers, showers, etc., and very inadequate supply and strong rooms. This unit, in order to carry on a proper training program, should have sufficient motor equipment and light tanks, half tracks, etc., which it is impossible to issue, due to the lack of a motor pool which would meet federal requirements. About all the present location provides is a classroom, orderly room, and, as mentioned, supply and strong rooms which would seem not to meet even minimum requirements. Enlistment in this area has been seriously hampered by the lack of training facilities and adequate armory space. During World War II it was necessary to maintain this company of the State Guard on active duty for the protection of the irrigation project, etc. Situated as it is on the border across from Mexicali, a city of approximately 85,000 people, it seems to be one of the most important of all we have to consider from the standpoint of the location of an armory. The City of Calexico has offered an outright grant of property, with the appraised valuation of $13,000 to the State for armory purposes. This site is well situated and would provide ample space for armory construction, motor pool (sufficient to house vehicles ordinarily assigned to this type of unit) and sufficient outside area for training purposes. It is situated adjacent to a very fine rifle range, permission for the use of which has been granted to the unit. It is the belief of your investigator that construction of an armory at this point is a must, both from a psychological standpoint, as well as tactical. Community interest, as well as the morale of the personnel of this unit, is excellent. The present strength is five officers and 59 men. (UNDER CONSTRUCTION. APPROPRIATION APPROVED AT BUDGET SESSION, MARCH, 1950.)

CONCORD-MARTINEZ (49th Quartermaster Company)

This unit is at present being housed in a club building on the outskirts of Concord where there are no locker rooms, and inadequate supply and strong rooms do not permit issuance of full quota of equipment. This unit is at nearly authorized strength and when the building was acquired for armory purposes some time ago, it was, perhaps, ample for the strength at that time. It now has a strength of 121 men and 10 officers, which makes the building totally inadequate to care for this number. Being a unit of this nature, most of its equipment is motorized, comprising two and a half ton trucks and smaller vehicles which at the present are parked in an unpoliced yard, contrary to federal regulations, where entry can be had by practically everyone; and when your investigator visited the place it was a veritable mud hole and impossible for proper maintenance of these vehicles. The entire community, with a population of some 25,000 people to draw from, is solidly behind this unit and were instrumental in having it removed from the City of Martinez, where very little interest was apparent. They have gone so far as to offer to the State a site of a little over three acres, which is an ideal location near the center of the city, and have changed their program to extend this facility to the site that has been offered as an outright grant to the State for this armory construction. At present a rental of $97 per month is being paid for the inadequate premises now being occupied. Present strength of the outfit is nine officers and 118 men. (UNDER CONSTRUCTION. APPROPRIATION APPROVED AT BUDGET SESSION, MARCH, 1950.)

EL MONTE AND ROSEMEAD (Heavy Tank Co., 223d Infantry Regiment)

At present this company is housed in one end of a small municipal building in El Monte with only an orderly room and very inadequate supply and strong room, neither of which meet minimum federal requirements. Being a heavy tank company, any training program depends upon the issuance to the outfit of this type of equipment which so far has been denied them due to the lack of proper motor pool. Community interest in this organization is excellent. Its present strength is 93 men and three officers. With proper facilities there is no question but that it would meet its authorized strength in a very short time. Conditions in this case certainly warrant the construction of a state-owned building.

ESCONDIDO AND SAN MARCOS (Battery D, 140th A. A. A. A. W. Bn.)

At the present time this unit is being quartered in the American Legion Building where supply room and strong room are inadequate. No locker room or such facilities are available. The drill area is very small and the use of the street is the only possibility of an outside area. It has been necessary to borrow equipment from Vista, California, a distance of some twelve miles, in order to have anything available on drill nights. This necessitates picking up same and returning same on drill evenings, due to the fact there is no available motor pool. The community interest in this unit is the very highest found on this entire inspection. The unit itself has had a very fine influence on the youth of Escondido, and has proven to have the great effect of curbing juvenile delinquency. The present building was constructed by volunteer labor, is approximately three stories high, with no steel reinforcements in the brick walls—pilasters are set on hollow tile and the building has been considered so unsafe as to have been condemned for further use. The unit here has been allowed to use it by the city pending condemnation, but we do not believe that the State should permit the use of this building by the National Guard organization because of its unsafe nature. An outright grant of ample acreage for construction of an armory and all other facilities has been offered and is now in the process of acceptance by the Department of Finance. Approximate value of this property is $5,750. Present strength consists of 66 men and three officers.

FAIRFAX-SAN RAFAEL-SAN ANSELMO (Co. D, 579th Engr. Comb. Bn.)

This unit has sufficient drill space at present in the Fairfax Pavilion. Storage and office space is very limited, with no provision or possible solution to the problem of storing heavy type equipment which is necessary in the training program of an engineer unit As a result, the progress of a growing unit, which has received considerable support from all communities in Marin County, has been greatly retarded. Land has been set aside for armory purposes on an outright grant basis and is now pending in the office of the Adjutant General. The vulnerability of Marin County in case of disaster, both domestic and national, is a vital factor in the consideration of an armory at this point. The present strength of this unit is four officers and 60 men.

FONTANA AND RIALTO (Co. A, 224th Infantry Regiment)

The present facilities provide for only an office, approximately 8 by 10, which serves as an orderly room. A strong room is provided approximately 150 yards from the office which is adequate for the storage of ordnance and small weapons, but lacks sufficient space for storage of supplies, clothing, and such. Classroom available in Legion Hall when not being used for other purposes. Outdoor area available but not lighted, making it very difficult to carry on any comprehensive training program. A land grant has been offered to the State and is now in the process of completion.

GLENDALE (Co. B and Co. C, 223d Infantry)

At the present time two companies of the 223d Infantry are meeting in Glendale and it is planned that this eventually be made a battalion headquarters, housing some four or five units. The facilities now consist of a small building which is partitioned down the middle and provides for a combination supply and ordnance store room, and a small orderly room, or office. All training programs must be carried on out of doors as there is no shelter for the men in bad weather. Permission has been granted for use of classrooms in a nearby school. This is perhaps one of the worst cases for lack of facilities found during this inspection. The morale of the troops is excellent and surprising, in view of the lack of facilities. Most of the improvements which have been made in the building have been paid for by the officers of the unit. The outer area, which is used for drill, is not paved or gravelled, and in case of wet weather the men are forced to get out there in the mud because, unless drill is held federal pay for that drill period is denied. The only motor equipment which has been issued these units is a jeep used jointly by the two companies. The City of Glendale has offered a site on Colorado Street ample for all purposes, and I believe that a fair estimate of its value will be approximately $50,000. We believe in this case that an armory is absolutely necessary if we are to continue this organization. UNDER CONSTRUCTION. APPROPRIATION APPROVED AT BUDGET SESSION, MARCH, 1950.)

GARDENA (Bat. C, 720th A. A. A. Gun Bn.)

This unit is now being housed in an old garage building with temporary type construction. While they have done everything possible to make this building more usable, the type of construction makes it impossible for it to conform to even minimum federal requirements as far as the storage of ordnance, etc., is concerned. An outdoor area is available and they are at present using a motor pool across the street which does not meet federal requirements due to the fact that entry is had by the public generally. This type of an organization uses some of the most valuable equipment issued to any of our Armed Forces, consisting of radar, radio, and all types of communication, as well as heavy weapons. It would seem of utmost importance that such units as these have at all times, for protection in an emergency, the weapons and equipment they are to use at such time—which is impossible under the present conditions. At the present time they are paying a rental of $150 per month for these inadequate quarters which provides no heat, and during the recent cold spell it was almost impossible to hold classes or drill. The building is of such small size that when the equipment which they have is stored inside, it leaves very little room for maintenance work and instruction in their use. The community interest is very high and the City of Gardena has offered a lease which is under consideration by the Department of Finance, with a valuation of $13,000. The present strength of the unit is two officers and 65 men.

INDIO (Co. A, 111th Armored Cavalry Regiment—Light)

At present this unit is being housed in a portion of an exhibit building on the Riverside County Fairgrounds. The building floor is used for drill purposes but storage for quartermaster supplies and ordnance does not meet federal specifications, so that the issuance of equipment is very limited. This is another case of a light tank company which is unable to draw tanks and such equipment to carry on its training program. An outright grant of property adequate for armory construction has been offered to the State and will be forwarded to the Department of Finance for approval.

LODI (Bat. C, 164th F. A. Bn.)

This unit is housed in an armory constructed by the City of Lodi for National Guard purposes and the facilities are ample with the exception of storage of motor vehicles. A large drill area is available, part of which has cement floor, so that heavy weapons can be brought into this area for instruction purposes. We believe it to be the intent of the Adjutant General to purchase this site which, undoubtedly, can be purchased to advantage, and with some additions and improvements would make it one of the finest single unit armories in the State. There is no heating for the drill area, and on the night that your investigator visited this unit the cold was so severe that the men were wearing overcoats in their drill. Believe it to be the intent of the Adjutant General, after this site is purchased, that a location for an ample motor pool will be included, and it is their intention to provide the facilities that are lacking. It is impossible to make these changes at the present time because of the fact that the State does not own the property. Strength of the unit is 74 men and four officers. (PURCHASED. APPROPRIATION APPROVED AT BUDGET SESSION IN MARCH, 1950.)

LOS ANGELES (6th Combat Engineers—Colored)

At the present time this group is being housed in the main armory on Exposition Boulevard, which is so crowded as to make any comprehensive training program for this unit absolutely impossible. The present strength of these units is 38 officers and 365 men. This situation is one of the most serious that your investigator found, to a great extent because by the lack of locker rooms, supply, and strong rooms, there has been considerable loss of clothing and small equipment. Men have been issued uniforms and are unable to change clothing in the armory and there have been occasions of misuse of uniforms, together with the loss of them, due to the fact that they wear them home and it is impossible to keep a complete check on them. A great deal of difficulty has been experienced in obtaining a site for this proposed armory and it is the understanding of your investigator that at the present time the City of Los Angeles is considering a grant of sufficient acreage to construct this armory. We believe that the officers have done a magnificent job in public relations. The duties of this type of organization consist of building and repair of roads, preparations of sites, such as airports, airfields, etc. They should have intensive instruction on equipment such as tractors, graders, bull dozers, and such, which is an impossibility under present conditions. They require an adequate armory, together with sufficient space outside for training on this type of equipment. At the present time the only training possible is during the summer encampment. These men should all be supplied with locker rooms and adequate strong rooms for storage of small arms, etc., and supply rooms where all field clothing and such can be under the custody of a regular caretaker provided by the Federal Government at no expense to the State of California. Please bear in mind, though, that the responsibility for the security of all this equipment rests entirely with the State of California. We believe that all effort should be made to get the grant from the City of Los Angeles for sufficient acreage to construct this armory at the very earliest possible time. (UNDER CONSTRUCTION. APPROPRIATION APPROVED AT BUDGET SESSION, MARCH, 1950.)

MONTEREY, SEASIDE & PACIFIC GROVE (Co. A, 149th Heavy Tank Bn.)

This unit is being housed on the Presidio of Monterey, federal property, and has ample office space, supply space with a strong room that does meet the minimum requirements for storage of small arms and such, but does not provide for storage of replacement parts and such which are required in a unit of this type. A heavy tank company requires various types of equipment, such as radio and other types of communication equipment which are lacking in this case. The assembly room, or drill room, is very inadequate as it is impossible to hold a formation in the space they have. Being a tank organization, they should have sufficient outdoor training facilities to enable them to practice on this type of equipment—which is impossible under the present conditions. The area where their tanks are stored is very limited and does not permit them to hold classes of instruction in their use. The location is not conducive to enlistment—being on a Federal military reservation—because the use of the quarters is limited to drill nights only except to officers. This unit was visited on a drill night and the morale of all of the personnel seemed to be excellent There is no doubt that with an armory away from the Presidio of Monterey, the enlistment program—as well as the training—would be greatly improved. The strength of the unit is five officers and 68 men.

MARYSVILLE (Co. F, 184th Inf. Regiment)

This unit is meeting at present in the Marysville Memorial Auditorium where adequate drill space is available, but facilities for storage and strong rooms and offices are entirely inadequate. There is no motor pool possible at this location which seriously hampers the training program. The unit has no assurance that its program will not be interfered with by other interests. The strength of this unit is three officers and 74 men. Rental of $150 a month is being paid for this space. A site has been offered by deed to the Adjutant General and is being processed at the present time. No appraisal value available.

MENLO PARK-PALO ALTO (Bat. D, 149th A. A. A. A. W. Bn.)

This unit is one of the more recent activated and is showing good progress in its enlistment program. At the present time it is being housed in the recreation building of an old army hospital center. This unit, like all of its kind, requires training on widely diversified types of equipment, such as radio, radar and all communications equipment, as well as heavy weapons. The present drill area is adequate for drill but not for instruction work on the type of equipment this kind of an organization uses. They have been issued none of this equipment, but have had to morrow from the Redwood City Armory anything they require, and return it the same night. Some improvements are being made in this building, such as providing strong rooms which are proving adequate, and supply rooms, as well as offices. The lack of a motor pool is the main difficulty they are experiencing, and this is hampering their training program most of all. At the present time a rental of $150 a month is being paid for this building and the City of Menlo Park has been making the improvements mentioned. The city has offered the State an outright deed to property sufficient for armory purposes, and this is now in the hands of the Adjutant General and will be forwarded shortly to the Department of Finance for approval. The present strength of the outfit is 35 enlisted men and four officers.

MOUNTAIN VIEW (Bat. B, 637th F. A. Bn.)

At the present time this unit is being housed in the American Legion Club House. Facilities such as supply room, office, strong room, etc., are wholly insufficient. No possibility of motor pool—consequently, here you have the story of a field artillery battalion being without weapons for training purposes. Community interest is high in this organization and they have offered the State an outright grant of sufficient property for armory construction at an estimated value of $5,000, which is now in the hands of the Department of Finance for approval. Present strength is three officers and 72 men.

NORWALK (Bat. D, 682d A. A. A. A. W. Bn.)

This unit is now being housed on the outskirts of the City of Norwalk on what happens to be an old dairy building and which is not of sufficient size to permit anything but outside drill and the area for that purpose would of necessity have to be in an open field. There are adequate storage facilities and office room, but everything else is lacking. This is another case of a unit with a great deal of equipment from radar to artillery not being issued, and consequently their training program is seriously hampered. At the present time a rental of $125 a month is being paid for this building which is wholly inadequate. A site has been offered the State for lease and is now pending in the office of the Adjutant General for further study. The present strength of this company is three officers and 36 men.

OAKDALE (Co. F, 111th Armored Cavalry Regiment—Light)

This unit now has exclusive use of a small commercial building which is not of sufficient size for drill purposes. They have a very small area with very limited space for the storage of property which does not meet federal requirements. What motor vehicles have been issued them must be stored within the building and removed for each drill period. This unit is one of the last to be activated and it has a fine record of equipment. The community interest is of the very highest as has been shown by the intrest of the various veteran organizations, Chamber of Commerce, and other civic groups. They have offered the State sufficient property for armory construction on a lease basis which is now being held by the Adjutant General for further study as to suitability and other details. The present strength is five officers and 66 men.

PASO ROBLES (Co. C, 149th Heavy Tank Bn.)

This unit is now meeting in the American Legion Hall, with office, supply room, etc., in the basement of the building, and sufficient space for classrooms are available in the building but there is no drill area Being a heavy tank company, a proper training program requires that they be issued the tanks and weapons which they will use in active service. This being impossible because of the lack of a motor pool, their program of instruction is seriously hampered. They have been issued one light tank which is being housed in a yard of the manufacturing plant adjacent to their quarters, but the only time they can use it for instruction is on time other than the regular drill nights and dependent upon the interest of the men. This is such that they are spending Sundays at work on maintenance and instruction, but this does not make for an efficient training program. Community interest seems to be excellent and the morale of the personnel very good. A site has been submitted to the Adjutant General for approval on a long lease basis and is being held pending further study The present strength is four officers and 64 men.

RED BLUFF (Hq. & Hq. Co., 2d Bn., 111th Armored Cavalry—Light)

These units are occupying a building of a very temporary type, formerly a small exhibit building on the Tehama County Fairgrounds. The building's supply and ordnance rooms are inadequate but the units have made the best possible use of what was available. The offices are adequate but the drill area is filled with motor equipment and this must be removed to provide any training area whatsoever. At the time the inspection was made the weather was such that the quality of the building was demonstrated by a leaking roof and water all over the floors, and it was so cold that it was impossible to hold classes or any kind of drill. Again, here is an example of a unit, or units, which should be equipped with light tanks, half tracks, and other equipment, being without an adequate motor pool for storage, and hampered in their training program by the absolute lack of this type of equipment. The motor vehicles which they have been issued are trucks and jeeps. This inspection was made in the company of the commanding officer, Col. Moor, and Senator Sutton from Maxwell and Assemblyman Lowrey from Rumsey, whom I am quite sure agreed with your investigator as to the need for a permanent armory building at that point. A site will be available on the present fairgrounds, but the location has not yet been determined. The present strength is 11 officers and 47 men.

RIVERSIDE (Hq. & Hq. Co., 2d Bn., 224th Inf. Regiment)

These units are now housed in the basement of the Civic Auditorium Building and while offices are adequate, supply and strong room facilities are not The assembly hall is in the basement and will not permit of any drill, due to the supporting columns that break up the floor area to such an extent as to make maneuvering impossible. Due to the fact that the auditorium upstairs is in use for folk dances and other activities, the noise occasioned by these activities make the holding of classes out of the question with any degree of efficiency. There is a move on foot to move these units into the present city school department offices in the old high school. If this is done, it may eliminate the immediate necessity for armory construction, but at best it would only be a postponement because of the type of building they contemplate using. It will be only a question of time until this building will be dismantled and any move to occupy it will be of a temporary nature. It will, however, provide adequate office and classrooms and supply and strong rooms can be built at small cost. Provided the city does not make a public parking area out of the ground surrounding this building an adequate motor pool could be had. The City of Riverside is intensely interested in this National Guard program and in acquiring a new armory. They have provided a site and offered a lease which is pending in the office of the Adjutant General. The present strength of the units housed in Riverside is 11 officers and 182 men.

SACRAMENTO

This proposed armory is to be constructed on state-owned property now used by the National Guard at 28th and C Streets, Sacramento. The units at present at this location are the State Headquarters Detachment and the Ambulance Co. of the 26th Medical Battalion. Battery A of the 636th Field Artillery is now being temporarily housed at North Sacramento The site has been developed considerably through the use of federal funds as a motor repair shop and warehouse where maintenance supplies and such are being housed for use throughout the entire State. The present buildings are entirely inadequate, providing only office space, with no drill area, locker or shower facilities, and a very inadequate class room. The site is an excellent one and the construction of this armory will complete this installation. The present strength of the troops quartered in these very limited facilities consist of 113 enlisted men and 51 officers. When completed, and with the removal from North Sacramento of Battery A, the man power at this location will be increased by at least another 100 men and officers. The present armory at Sacramento is housing five units of the 184th Infantry Regiment and is filled to capacity. It was originally constructed to accommodate less strength than is now being accommodated there

SAN BRUNO AND MILLBRAE (Bat. B, 149th A. A. A. A. W. Bn.)

At the present time this unit is meeting in the old recreation center of the San Bruno Navy Base, which is entirely adequate from the standpoint of drill area, offices, supply room and strong room. The difficulty with this situation is that it stands on the grounds of the old Mills Estate and may be returned to private ownership at any time Negotiations are now in progress to affect this return, which would mean that the unit would be without quarters when this happens. It is not an advantageous site, because entry to the grounds and armory can only be had by telephoning up to the building, which is some quarter of a mile from the entrance, and persons wishing to enter the armory must be escorted by personnel from this company. This condition is certainly not conducive to enlistment, or one which would promote community interest. The public is barred from all drill sessions and such, and it is impossible to hold an open house to acquaint the public with the activities of the National Guard. During certain months of the year it is so cold as to be very difficult to hold drill sessions. There is a central heating plant located outside the armory which is not being kept in operation by the Navy. Consequently, no heat is available. A site has been offered by grant deed and is now in the hands of the Adjutant General Four officers and 98 men comprise the present strength.

SANTA ANA (Hq. and Hq. Co., 3d Bn., 224th Infantry Regiment)

These units are now using the facilities located in the community center. Reasonable locker and supply room space is available and being used, but no recreation room nor assembly space is available. All drills are performed outside the building. One unit is using an old air force mess hall, which has been altered to provide a minimum of storage space, locker and class room space. Here, too, drill is performed out of doors. In both cases the facilities are inadequate for the storage of property required for use of the unit at its present strength. There is at present no motor pool and it has been proposed to lease a small adjoining area for the temporary storage of vehicles, provided funds may be obtained to properly finance this area. Community interest in the National Guard is excellent in Santa Ana, and the morale of the forces is evidenced by the splendid recruiting record made by these units. They are now paying a rental of approximately $200 a month and have a strength of 10 officers and 220 men. Their training program will be greatly assisted by the construction of an armory. (IN THIS LOCATION, AND IN CERTAIN OTHERS, TERMS OF THE LEASE OF THE ARMORY REQUIRE THAT THE STATE MUST BEGIN CONSTRUCTION OF THE ARMORY WITHIN ONE YEAR.)

SANTA CRUZ (Co. F, 159th Infantry)

This unit has very nearly reached its authorized strength and present facilities are entirely inadequate. They are being housed at the present time in a temporary type building formerly used as a corporation garage of galvanized sheet construction There is not sufficient area for drill and they are required to use the streets in front of the building for that purpose. They have set up several flood lights—also they do have some lighting. The supply room is madequate and can only be used for storing clothing and such equipment. All small arms and ordnance equipment is at present stored in the strong room of the Police Department, which is approximately one-half mile from the armory. Equipment must be picked up before each drill night and returned to the Police Department the same evening. Consequently, their training program is considerably hampered and unsatisfactory The morale of the forces is excellent. The community interest in National Guard affairs is excellent. Considerable acreage of over one hundred acres was granted to the State years ago for armory purposes. This is now in the hands of the State and available for construction at any time. A two-unit type B armory has been proposed as this community will well support a second unit, which will be activated as soon as armory is constructed. The strength is 123 men and five officers. Rental of $75 per month is being paid for the present facilities and the City of Santa Cruz is giving them the use of their strong room gratis.

SANTA CLARA (Bat. C, 637th F. A. Bn.)

This unit is now being housed in the private club building at the corner of Lafayette and Lewis Streets in Santa Clara. Office and supply rooms are located in the basement of this club building and are inadequate. Class room use is made of a small room on the upper floor and all drill work must be done outside. There is no motor pool and consequently this unit has none of the weapons it is supposed to be equipped and trained with. There is a small outside area available for drill but no lighting which makes it of little use. Located as it is near Santa Clara University, it will always have a source of manpower and we believe that with a new armory its efficiency and strength would be greatly enhanced. At the present time there is no definite offer of any site, but the matter is being worked on and undoubtedly one will be acquired in the near future. The present strength of this unit is four officers and 51 men. For the totally inadequate quarters they are now occupying, they pay a total of $125 a month.

SAN DIEGO (Co. C and Co. D, 1402 Engineer Bn., of 6th Combat Engineers—Colored)

It was proposed that an armory be constructed for these two units, but since that time they have been moved to the downtown armory which houses the Headquarters and Headquarters Battery of the 114th A. A A Brigade, where they are most adequately quartered for the present, and your investigator believes that this part of the program can be eliminated for the present.

SAN DIEGO (Headquarters and Headquarters Battalion of the 251st A. A. A. Group, 746th A. A. A. Battalion Headquarters, 140th A. A. A. Headquarters, and Batteries A and B of the 140th A. A. A.)

These units are all being housed at present on Federal property at Ft. Rosecrans. It is proposed that a type J armory be constructed to house these units as present site may be turned over to the Navy by the Army at any time. The present site is approximately a mile from any transportation. The buildings are of a very temporary type and the cost of maintenance and repairs has been excessive. Inasmuch as the area is all militarily regulated, entry is difficult. There is no covered shelter for any of the equipment, radar and otherwise that these units are—or should be—equipped with. All facilities are of such a temporary nature that their training program has been seriously hampered by the lack of adequate armories. Several sites have been considered for the construction of an armory and the City of San Diego has assured the Adjutant General that a satisfactory site will be provided. It only remains for a selection to be made. The community interest in and about San Diego in the National Guard is extremely high, there being in this San Diego area and tributaries approximately 1,800 troops in the various units. Your investigator urges that construction of this armory be no longer postponed.

SANTA MONICA (Headquarters and Headquarters Battery—144th Field Artillery Bn.)

The present facilities are most inadequate for the proper training program of these units. No other building in the City of Santa Monica is available that would be adequate. This is an artillery organization which requires issuance of heavy weapons, small arms, and such, with considerable motor equipment, none of which is available at the present site. Efforts are being made to secure a suitable site. A little over a year ago a site was offered by the City of Santa Monica and withdrawn when no appropriation was made during the last session to provide them with an armory. Efforts are being made to obtain approval on a site now being under consideration on a long term lease basis. Due to the high rental of $350 per month now being paid for the present inadequate facilities, it is highly important that this armory be constructed. The present strength is 23 officers and 352 men.

SIERRA MADRE (Heavy Mortar Company—223d Infantry)

Now being housed in the basement of the very small city hall. Present facilities provide only for a small classroom, a very inadequate supply room, and a strong room which does not permit the issuance of the type of weapons that this unit uses. The classroom is used by a number of other organizations, so that no property of any kind may be left there, and no extra class work or gatherings can be held. Consequently, their training program is devoted entirely to theory and very little of the practical. Even small weapons, rifles, carbines, and side arms have not been issued them, due to the lack of adequate security. This organization is also to be trained in communications and radio, but have not received any of this type of equipment for the same reason. No motor vehicles have been issued due to lack of any space for storage. The city has issued an outright grant to the State of California for a site of approximately four acres, with an appraised value of $20,000 for armory construction. The present strength of the unit is four officers and 82 enlisted men. This unit has the support of all community organizations and has cemented its relations with the community by performing service to the community on various occasions. The morale and interest of the men and officers is excellent The community interest is likewise.

SUSANVILLE AND WESTWOOD (Co. D, 111th Armored Cavalry Regiment—Light)

Here, again, is an instance of a light tank company with no storage facilities for the equipment they are supposed to be trained for and use in their operations. They are housed in the Lassen County Fair Grounds Exhibit Building which is adequate as far as drill floor is concerned, but naturally does not permit any tanks or motorized equipment of any of the type to be used in their classes. Locker rooms and strong rooms and supply rooms are totally inadequate. During the time of preparation for the fair, during the time of the fair, and during removal of exhibits after the fair, this is not available for use by this unit. The present strength is 46 men and four officers.

TORRANCE AND LOMITA (Co. A, 578th Engineer Battalion)

The present quarters are in an old shed near the city ball park. The building is so old it is rapidly disintegrating. No heat is provided and the city is very anxious to move the Guard out of this location so that they may tear down these buldings. The motor pool is located in the city bus yard, approximately two miles from the armory. Your investigator could find no part of this facility that was in any way adequate from the standpoint of supply rooms, locker rooms, strong rooms, or assembly rooms. As a matter of fact, all work is required to be out in the open. Even the ball park, during the summer months, is not available because it is used for recreational purposes. An extreme fire hazard exists. The City of Torrance has deeded a site on an outright grant to the State at an appraised valuation of over $5,000. The need for armory facilities in this locality are most urgent The strength of the unit is two officers and 80 men.

TULARE (Co. E, 185th Infantry Regiment)

This unit is now housed in an old exhibit building on the Tulare County Fair Grounds. This is on property owned by the Chamber of Commerce and leased to the agricultural district for fairgrounds The drill hall is inadequate but does permit of some formations. Office is fairly adequate, but the supply room which is located at some distance from the assembly hall is an old refrigerator car which does provide security but not much of anything else It is wholly inadequate for the protection of such weapons as should be issued to an infantry company. The Chamber of Commerce asked the agricultural district to release certain of this property back to them so that they may in turn lease same to the State for armory construction. Several other sites are being considered and no doubt will be consummated in the near future The strength of this unit is four officers and 103 men

UKIAH (Co. B, 579th Engineer Combat Battalion)

This unit is now occupying a small portion of the City Hall which is entirely inadequate from the standpoint of both storage space and drill floor. The Adjutant General has endeavored to negotiate a satisfactory lease with the city on this property so that they might alter the arrangement and improve the limited facilities, but has been unable to do so. Consequently, conditions remain as when first acquired. This unit was one of the later units to be activated and has shown a nice growth, and considerable community interest has been evident. A unit of this type needs considerable area in which to function properly and a site has been offered. At the present time a lease is pending in the Office of the Adjutant General, and is being held for further study. Present strength of this unit is three officers and 50 men.

VALLEJO (Batteries C and D, 951st A. A. A. A. W. Bn.)

These units are now quartered in an old temporary naval barracks on the property of the Naval Reserve Training Headquarters. The building is of a very temporary nature and it was constructed on filled ground. It is evident that the pilings never reached solid foundation, as the buildings are settling at various places, to the point where it appears ready to collapse at any time. No adequate drill area, supply rooms, or strong rooms. Here again the units which should be equipped with radar, radio, and all communications equipment are unable to receive them due to the lack of storage facilities. No heavy weapons for the same reason—and again their training is confined almost entirely to theory with little of the practical practice possible. In this case also, the fire hazard is extreme. What motor vehicles have been issued—in most cases, 2½ ton trucks and jeeps—are required to be stored outside, with no protection. They are constantly being drained of their gasoline, and other bits of equipment are removed, due to the lack of any security on the site. They have numerous break-ins with the loss of clothing, tires, equipment and such. We consider this condition one of the most acute in the State. The present strength of the two units is 10 officers and 129 enlisted men. The monthly rental is $150 for the building. (UNDER CONSTRUCTION. APPROPRIATION APPROVED AT BUDGET SESSION, MARCH, 1950)

VENTURA (Bat. B, 981st Field Artillery Battalion)

This unit is at present being housed at Seaside Park in Ventura in a small building which permits of no drill inside the building, but does provide limited facilities for storage and office space. The area adjacent is ample for outside drill, but the motor pool does not permit the issuance of heavy weapons. The success of their training program is dependent upon these weapons being issued for their training purpose. Community interest in the unit is excellent. There is no doubt that enlistment and morale would be greatly improved by the construction of the proposed armory in Ventura The present strength of this unit is four officers and 93 men. A proposed site to be leased to the State is pending in the office of the Adjutant General at this time.

VICTORVILLE (Co. A, 140th Heavy Tank Battalion)

This unit uses the American Legion Hall on drill night only. It is inadequate for drill purposes, but is suitable for use as a classroom. Storage facilities are practically nonexistent. Heavy equipment is being stored at the Victorville Air Force Base, at a considerable distance from the assembly hall, which works an undue hardship on their training program. This is one of the latest units to be activated and has shown a nice rate of increase in enlistment, but its training program is seriously hampered by the extreme lack of facilities. The present strength of this unit is five officers and 61 men. Efforts are being made to find a suitable site for an armory and no doubt same will be found in the very near future. $100 per month rental is being paid in Victorville for the very inadequate facilities.

WALNUT CREEK (Co. C, 159th Infantry Regiment)

At present this unit is using the basement of the American Legion Hall in Walnut Creek, which is entirely inadequate, there being only accommodations for a small office, supply, and strong rooms. They are unable to use the upstairs for an assembly room, consequently have only the use of a small dining room downstairs, which is adequate for classroom purposes only. Even the outside area is limited. They have only been issued one truck, due to the lack of facilities for housing motor vehicles. Again, this training program is considerably hampered by the lack of any adequate facilities. This unit draws from a fast growing area and community interest and the morale of the personnel of the unit are excellent. The City of Walnut Creek has offered an outright grant of sufficient area for armory construction at an appraised valuation of $61,000. The present strength of the unit is six officers and 92 men.

WATSONVILLE (Co. B, 149th Heavy Tank Battalion)

This unit is now being quartered at the Watsonville Municipal Airport, approximately three miles from the center of the City of Watsonville. Facilities consist of a small office, with a loan occasionally of a room suitable for a classroom, and a vehicle storage of sufficient size to store three tanks; but it does not permit due to the cramped quarters, of any class work being done in this area where instruction could be given on this equipment; nor does it permit any maintenance work at the present time. There is no heat provided except a small electric heater in the office. A supply room and strong room is located in another building quite a distance from the office. The supply room is fairly adequate, but the strong room does not come up to federal specifications. There is considerable need also for the storage of parts for tanks and motors, which is entirely inadequate. Small arms are being stored in the strong room. The unit, in order to acquire all its training program, has devoted many Sundays to tactical problems. In spite of the lack of facilities, morale is excellent and the community interest in the unit is extremely high. The Chamber of Commerce has been very active in acquiring a site, and expect in a very short time to work out an agreement with the fair officials for an adequate space on the County Fair Grounds which will be excellent from the standpoint of being centrally located within the area from which it draws its strength, and will also provide for sufficient area for maneuvering of this type of equipment There is an extreme need for an armory in this location. The present strength of the unit is four officers and 58 men, which will be greatly increased when satisfactory facilities are furnished.

YREKA (Co. L, 184th Infantry Regiment)

The company is at present housed on the second floor of the grandstand of the County Fair Building, and there is nothing in the way of drill area, offices, or storage for supplies or ordnance or small arms. No heat, and during the cold months of the year it is practically impossible to carry out any training program. Community interest has been awakened in this locality and the continuance of this support is assured. For these very inadequate facilities, the State is now paying $150 a month rental, and it is felt that in providing an armory for this location, enlistments will be encouraged and the training program will be carried on successfully. The present strength of this unit is three officers and 66 enlisted men At present a site has been selected and a lease is pending in the Office of the Adjutant General.

(a) Replace unsatisfactory leased facility in line with Sec. 3.4, Chapt. 2/50.

(b) Replace unsatisfactory leased facility.

(c) Replace unsatisfactory licensed facility and relieve congestion in existing armory.

(d) Replace unsatisfactory state-owned facility—State Hqtrs, Hqtrs Det and 59th Band, and licensed facility, Btry A, 636th FA.

You will note that Adjutant General Curtis D. O'Sullivan has not requested a capital outlay for the construction of an armory in the Southern California area heretofore occupied by the 40th Division. This is because of the induction of this force in the federal service, and because the auxiliary forces, known as the new Defense and Security Corps (Home Guard or State Guard) will be adequately housed in all the temporary facilities previously acquired for the use of the National Guard. The budgetary request for new armories, and the resulting priority in the matter of such construction, is based on General O'Sullivan's plan to house the 49th Division (Northern California) and subsequently give a higher priority to new armory construction in Southern California when the 40th Division is returned to our charge.

Your committee agrees with this decision as made by the Adjutant General, since it would be financially impossible to undertake an overall expenditure sufficient to supply an armory for every desirable location.

Your committee believes that your Adjutant General and his staff is giving the State a most efficient administration, and has spent such moneys as have been allocated in a most judicious manner. The construction of these armories has been standardized, and savings have been effected to the point that armories are being constructed in the State of California for the sum of less than $7 per foot, as compared to a national average of some $16 per foot—and a building well planned for all needs is being provided. Should this program be curtailed, it is very possible that our national defense may suffer beyond reparation.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. In view of the present military and international situation it is obvious that the State of California occupies a prime position in support of our defenses and, further, our new Defense and Security Corps, now replacing the National Guard, is in its infancy and will undoubtedly need legislative assistance. Also, it will be acknowledged that the traffic in veterans affairs will continuously be on the increase. Furthermore, our State can suffer a disaster or otherwise be called upon to contribute to the defense of our Nation beyond the limits of our expectations. Therefore, without hesitancy, we recommend that the support of an Interim Committee on Military Affairs be undertaken and continued in the future by the present Legislature.

2. Obviously also, one of the most far reaching domestic programs to be supported by our State through its Legislature in the coming years will be a system of civilian defense. While this subject ties into the above recommendation as to its future success, we nevertheless recommend that all Members of the Legislature support the bills being concurrently introduced by this committee and by the Governor on this subject, including the appropriations therefor, even though same be beyond the reaches of the State's current income.

3. Your committee most emphatically urges the unanimous approval of the armory construction program, as set forth in this report and in the new budget now being considered by this Legislature.

Respectfully submitted.

REQUEST FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT THAT OPINION OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL BE PRINTED IN JOURNAL

Mr. Waters asked for, and was granted, unanimous consent that the following opinion of the Legislative Counsel, relative to passage of bills prior to the constitutional recess, be ordered printed in the Journal in 10-point type:

Opinion of Legislative Counsel

STATE OF CALIFORNIA
OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL
SACRAMENTO 2, CALIFORNIA, January 12, 1951

Hon. Laughlin E. Waters
Assembly Chamber

PASSAGE OF BILLS PRIOR TO CONSTITUTIONAL RECESS No. 4124

DEAR MR. WATERS: You have asked us whether the houses of the Legislature may pass any type of bill prior to the constitutional recess required by Section 2 of Article 4 of the State Constitution or whether the power to pass bills is restricted to urgency measures.

It is our opinion that the Legislature has full power to pass any type of bill prior to the constitutional recess.

There is nothing in the Constitution of this State that restricts the power of the Legislature to pass bills of any type prior to the constitutional recess. The Constitution does restrict the number of bills that may be introduced after the constitutional recess and as a result most bills are introduced during the January portion of the session, but there is no legal reason why the houses cannot pass any type of bill prior to the recess if they desire to do so.

The only restriction on the enactment of bills which should be borne in mind is the requirement in Section 34 of Article 4 that until the Budget Bill has been finally enacted, neither house shall place upon the final passage any other appropriation bill, except the emergency bills recommended by the Governor, or appropriations for the salaries, mileage and expenses of the Senate and Assembly. This restriction applies, of course, both before and after the constitutional recess.

We note that an opinion of this office on the same subject and expressing the same conclusions was printed in the Assembly Journal for January 15, 1943, on page 243.

Very truly yours,

RALPH N. KLEPS, Legislative Counsel
By LAWRENCE G. ALLYN, Deputy

In accordance with Article IV, Section 34, of the Constitution, the Governor presented the following communication recommending the passage of Assembly Bill No. 21:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE
SACRAMENTO, January 15, 1951

To the Honorable Members of the Assembly
Sacramento, California

GENTLEMEN:

Assembly Bill No. 21, "An act to add Section 19620 to the Education Code, relating to the support of child care centers and making an appropriation therefor and declaring the urgency thereof, to take effect immediately," in my opinion constitutes an emergency bill within the meaning of that term as used in Section 34 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of California, the consideration of which should not await the final enactment of the Budget Bill.

Approval of this measure at this time is necessary to the continuance of child care centers after February 15, 1951.

I therefore recommend consideration of Assembly Bill No. 21 as an emergency measure.

Respectfully submitted,

EARL WARREN, Governor

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

STATE OF CALIFORNIA
OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL
SACRAMENTO 14, CALIFORNIA, January 15, 1951

Hon. Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly
Assembly Chamber

DEAR SPEAKER COLLINS: I am pleased to transmit herewith a copy of the 1951 Report of the Legislative Counsel on Needed Revision of the Statutes.

Very truly yours,

RALPH N. KLEPS
Legislative Counsel

REPORT OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL ON NEEDED REVISION OF THE STATUTES

To the Senate and Assembly of the State of California:

The Legislative Counsel is required by Government Code, Section 10242, to "advise the Legislature from time to time as to needed revision of the statutes," and to present a "statement calling attention to laws which have been repealed by implication or which have been declared unconstitutional by the courts but which have not been expressly repealed." Following practice inaugurated by Hon. Fred B. Wood, I am submitting herewith the current report which includes those suggestions for corrective and clarifying amendments which will better express the legislative intent. These matters have been accumulated in our files during the biennium, from suggestions which have come from members of the staff, public officials and members of the public.

No bills are being submitted to you at this time. Many of the suggestions for clarification included in this report can be provided for during the course of the present session by those interested in the particular statutes involved If Members of the Legislature desire to have bills prepared for them in order to make any of the suggested corrections, this office will gladly do so.

1. GENERAL SUGGESTIONS

The effect on our statute law of the 1950 Federal Census should be carefully considered by those concerned with local government. The classification of counties, contained in Government Code, Section 28020, will be inconsistent with the actual facts revealed in the census. If this section is amended, however, to reflect the actual facts, great care must be taken in order that other provisions relating to county officers will no be inadvertently affected. (See Gov. Code, Secs. 28101 et seq., relating to salaries of county officers; Education Code, Secs. 400 et seq., relating to county superintendents of schools; Welfare and Institutions Code, Secs. 574 et seq., relating to referees in juvenile court matters.) In some instances, provisions are made in the statutes for compensation of officers based upon actual population, rather than that set forth in the Government Code classification. (See Code of Civ. Proc., Sec. 204a, relating to jury commissioners.) Such provisions will require modification in order that the change in actual population reflected in the census will not produce inadvertent changes in the law relating to such officers.

Much of the Political Code has already been repealed, and its provisions transferred into other codes. The remainder is scheduled by the Code Commission for repeal at this session of the Legislature. Many sections of the Political Code are still referred to in the statutes of the State, however, and these references should be corrected to refer to the proper statutory provisions. Examples are found in Code of Civil Procedure, Section 261 (b); Education Code, Sections 175 and 176; and in Welfare and Institutions Code, Section 109. There are undoubtedly many other such references to be corrected.

2. PARTICULAR SUGGESTIONS

Agricultural Code

Secs.

736.3 (Item 51-1)—Subdivision (a)(4) of this section refers to former Penal Code, Sec. 654a, which is now contained in Bus. & Prof. Code, Secs. 17500 et. seq., relating to false advertising.

799 (Item 51-2)—There is an error in the spelling of the word "Kahalili" in this section. The correct spelling is used in Sec. 802 of the code, that is, "Khalili."

Business and Professions Code

9041 (Item 51-3)—This section and several following it are temporary provisions inserted into the law at the time of the creation of the Board of Social Work Examiners Most, if not all, of these provisions are obsolete and should be repealed.

19480 (Item 51-4)—This section, and a number of others following it, were affected by Stats. 1950 (1st Extra Sess.), Chap. 21, which was intended to provide for the possibility that the Supreme Court might declare the Horse Racing Act unconstitutional. Since the court sustained the constitutionality of the Status in Southern California Jockey Club, Inc. vs. Calif. Horse Racing Board, (1950) 36 Adv. Cal. Rep. 107, it would be desirable to repeal Chapter 21.

Civil Code

Secs.

60, 69 (Item 51-5)—These sections of the code, relating to intermarriage between white persons and persons of certain other racial groups, were held unconstitutional in Perez vs. Sharp, (1948) 32 C.2d 711, 198 P 2d 17, by the Supreme Court of California.

557-566 (Item 51-6)—These sections of the code, relating to homestead corporations, were listed as obsolete in the 1909 Report of the Code Commissioners, p. 86. Repeal was recommended at that time.

Code of Civil Procedure

261b (Item 51-7)—This code section contains numerous references to Section 4300a of the Political Code which was repealed in 1947. The references should be corrected to refer to Gov. Code, Secs. 26820 et seq. In addition, there are two sections bearing this code section number, one of which should be renumbered. Finally, the section should be clarified in order to show its relationship to special statutes such as Labor Code, Sec. 101, exempting particular state agencies from the payment of fees. (See Div. of Labor Law Enforcement vs. Moroney, (1946) 28 C. 2d 344, 170 P. 2d 3.)

1268 (Item 51-8)—In the last line of paragraph 5 of this section the court is given power to render an "appropriated" judgment. This should be corrected to read "appropriate."

Education Code

175-176 (Item 51-9)—This section refers to sections of the Political Code which were repealed in 1945, and which became Secs. 11180, et seq., of the Government Code.

4663 (Item 51-10)—This section provides for the filing of a petition by a majority of the "heads of families" residing in the district. This section was overlooked in 1943 when such phrases were changed to a "majority of the qualified electors." (See Stats. 1943, Chap. 696.)

6904 (Item 51-11)—There are two sections in the code bearing this number, the second having been added by Chap 74, Stats. 1950 (1st Extra Sess.).

7011-7020 (Item 51-12)—This article, added by Stats. 1950 (1st Extra Sess.), Chap. 74, contains erroneous cross-references. Where "7034" is used, the reference should be "7016"; and where "7037" is used, the reference should be "7019."

7109-7109.10 (Item 51-13)—This article, added by Stats. 1950 (1st Extra Sess.), Chap. 74, contains erroneous cross-references which resulted from the fact that the section numbers were taken from the original form of Assembly Bill No. 65 of that session.

19432 (Item 51-14)—This section was declared unconstitutional by the California Supreme Court in Danskin vs. San Diego Unified School District. (1946) 28 C. 2d 536, 171 P. 2d 885.

Government Code

Secs.

9020 (Item 51-15)—This section is inconsistent with Article IV, Sec. 2(a) of the Constitution (adopted November 8, 1949), which provides that the budget sessions shall commence at 12 noon "on the first Monday in March." The provision in this section ("on the first Monday after the first day of March") should be amended to conform to the constitutional provision.

9906 1 (Item 51-17)—There are two sections bearing this number, added separately by Chaps. 66 and 67 of the Stats. of 1950 (1st Extra. Sess.).

26529 (Item 51-18)—In the codification of this section in 1947 an error was made in limiting its provisions to county counsels appointed pursuant to state law ("pursuant to Chapter 12 of this part"), thus eliminating those county counsels appointed pursuant to charter provisions from the coverage of the section.

28153 (Item 51-19)—In subdivision (a) of this section the word "for" should be corrected to read "four."

37618, 37658, 37659 (Item 51-20)—These sections contain an erroneous reference to "Article 1, Chapter 5, Division 4" of the Government Code. The correct reference is "Article 1, Chapter 4, Division 4."

Insurance Code

1020 (Item 51-21)—The first "or" in subdivision (d) of this section should be changed to "of."

9060 (Item 51-22)—The reference in this section to Sec. 384 should be deleted since Sec. 384 was repealed in 1941.

10115 (Item 51-23)—The word "and" should be "or" in the following clause relating to the death of the insured: "dies on or after the date of the application, on or after the date of the medical examination, if any, and on or after any date specially requested in the application for the policy to take effect, whichever is later * * *."

10651 (Item 51-24)—This section should be repealed; it has ceased to have any meaning since the repeal of Sec. 10650 in 1941.

10880 (Item 51-25)—There are two sections bearing this number. The one added by Stats. 1935, Chap. 283, should have been numbered "10780" and is usually printed at that point in the code.

Health and Safety Code

4765 (Item 51-26)—This section, relating to county sanitary districts, was intended to carry the number "4765." That number is used in the title of Stats. 1949, Chap. 1018, and in the second section of the bill. The inadvertent use of "4675" before the text of the section should be corrected.

Secs.

18455.5 (Item 51-27)—In subdivision (c) of this section the word "line" should be "live."

Labor Code

1131-1136 (Item 51-28)—These sections were declared unconstitutional by the California Supreme Court in In re Blandy, (1947) 30 C. 2d 643, 184 P. 2d 892.

1596 (Item 51-29)—This section refers to Section 3664aa of the Political Code, which was repealed in 1935, and to Section 50¼ of the Public Utilities Act, which will be repealed if the Legislature adopts the recommended Public Utilities Code at this session. These erroneous cross-references should be corrected.

2102 (Item 51-30)—This section contains an erroneous cross-reference to "Article 3 of Chapter 1 of Part 9." It should refer to "Article 4," relating to labor camps.

2411 (Item 51-31)—This section contains the clause "subject to the provisions of this act." The reference should be "subject to the provisions of this article," which is Article 4 (mentioned above) relating to labor camps

5300 (Item 51-32)—The reference in this section to the jurisdiction of the Industrial Accident Commission includes "Division 5," which relates to industrial safety This reference has been inaccurate since 1945 when the commission was relieved of responsibility in this field. (See Stats. 1945, Chap. 1431.)

Penal Code

1127 (Item 51-33)—This statute uses the word "may" with reference to a judge's duty to instruct the jury on the law. In People vs Bender (1945), 27 C. 2d 164, 176, 163 P. 2d 2, the court held that the duty was mandatory and that the statute should be read as though it said "must." It would be desirable to make the statute clearly state that the duty is mandatory.

2040 (Item 51-34)—There are two sections bearing this number. The one added by Stats. 1944 (Third Extra. Sess.) Chap. 2, should be renumbered to eliminate the duplication.

4700 (Item 51-35)—In this section dealing with costs incurred by a county where a prisoner in a state prison is tried for escape or attempted escape, the following language was inadvertently omitted when the section was enacted in 1941: "while away from the prison, the transportation of the prisoner to and from the prison, the costs of appeal,". The language should have been included in the list of items for which the counties are entitled to reimbursement.

Public Resources Code

5156 (Item 51-36)—Subdivisions (b) and (c) of this section were impliedly repealed by the enactment of the Collier-Burns Act of 1947, which precludes the use of highway subventions for public parks by the counties. (See Stats. 1947 (First Extra. Sess.), Chap. 11.)

Revenue and Taxation Code

Secs.

10755 (Item 51-37)—In the phrase "the fee imposed by this part of the year," the word "by" should read "for "

Streets and Highways Code

740.4 (Item 51-38)—This section contains a double-barrelled reference to the Planning Act (Stats. 1929, Chap. 838) and the Conservation and Planning Act (Stats. 1947, Chap. 807). In view of the fact that the former was repealed in 1947, and that the latter is scheduled for codification into the Government Code at this session of the Legislature, this reference should be corrected. (See Code Commission preprint, proposed Gov. Code, Sec. 65250.)

Welfare and Institutions Code

109 (Item 51-39)—This section contains a reference to Political Code provisions which were repealed in 1945 and which became Gov. Code, Secs 11180 et seq.

960 (Item 51-40)—The reference to "Article 5 of Chapter 1" in this section should read "Chapter 2." There is no Chapter 1.

2615 (Item 51-41)—This section was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States in Edwards vs. California, (1942) 314 U. S. 160, 62 S. Ct. 164.

PRELIMINARY REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON FINANCE AND INSURANCE

HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 239

ASSEMBLY CHAMBER, SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, January 15, 1951

To: Hon. Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: On behalf of the Assembly Interim Committee on Finance and Insurance I hand you the within report.

On March 27, 1950, at the First Extraordinary Session, there was introduced House Resolution No. 23, relative to specific directives to the Assembly Interim Committee on Finance and Insurance. Without repeating the entire text of the resolution here it should be noted that the subject matter of particular bills was referred to this committee for study. These bills had been introduced in the First Extraordinary Session of 1950, and related to unemployment insurance, unemployment disability insurance and workmen's compensation and were enumerated as follows: Assembly Bills Nos. 56, 57, 58, 59, 66, 75, 76, 78, 79, 85, 86, 87, 88, 90, 91, and 94; and it was stated that: "* * * The Assembly would be in a position to better evaluate the above mentioned proposed legislation if it had before it the data accumulated and reported upon by the Assembly Interim Committee on Finance and Insurance together with transcripts of testimony bearing on the matters under consideration and the recommendations of the committee * * *." On March 1, 1950, the above referred to resolution was adopted with an amendment specifying that the Assembly Interim Committee on Finance and Insurance would report on the above matters not later than January 15, 1951.

In order to conform with the directive as to the date this token report is made:

Your committee noticed for hearing and heard arguments for and against the bills referred to exactly the same as if they had been bills before the standing committee with the exception that we had asked for and received written testimony from proponents and opponents and, also, from the Department of Employment, an estimate of cost factors involved and other relevant data. These matters and oral testimony appears in the transcript of the hearings of this committee held in Sacramento November 16 and 17, 1950, and properly belong in the section of this committee's final report devoted to these subjects.

However we would have prepared the particular section of the final report to be presented on this, the required date, had it not been for the fact that after our preliminary manuscript for the report had been gone over, corrected, annotated, and the tabulations and statistical matter carefully checked and the manuscript otherwise prepared for publication, we received notice from the Department of Employment that it desired to file with this committee a revision of the statistical material previously furnished, together with new material. This additional material was received by the chairman here in Sacramento on the opening date of the current session.

Manifestly, in the week's time intervening, it has not been possible for us to correlate and take into consideration and evaluate all of the changes involved. It may be that much of the testimony previously adduced must be either stricken from the committee's report or the witnesses given a chance to revise their statements.

Also it should be noted that during the course of the hearings of November 16 and 17, 1950, certain bills were made the subject of conferences by several parties in order to endeavor to arrive at some basis on which both sides could agree. These parties have notified this committee of having met but have not yet reported to it the details of any recommendations mutually satisfactory to the parties.

For these reasons we beg leave to submit this token report and include these matters in this committee's final report soon to be made.

Respectfully submitted,

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

ASSEMBLY, CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE
INTERIM COMMITTEE, HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES
December 29, 1950

Hon. Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly
Assembly Chamber, Sacramento, California

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Your Committee on Highways, Streets, and Bridges created by H. R. 281, takes pleasure in handing you the accompanying report.

We appreciate the opportunity given us to further legislation concerning the problems of highways, streets, and bridges. It will be noted, however, that there were other committees duplicating a great many, if not all, of the functions originally assigned to this committee, and which were much better financed. Therefore, we left to them the determination of what recommendations should be made relative to traffic studies and solutions for traffic congestion, rapid transit, underpasses and overpasses, and such matters which are closely related to highway problems. We are confident that their forthcoming reports will not leave the Legislature uninformed on these subjects.

Respectfully submitted,

FINAL REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY FACT-FINDING COMMITTEE ON HIGHWAYS, STREETS AND BRIDGES—NO. 246

(A. J. July 1, 1949, pp. 5331-5333)

The scope of the committee's field of investigation, under House Resolution No 281, as outlined in a letter from the office of the Legislative Counsel, dated October 14, 1949, includes:

"A complete analysis of all the problems involved in the planning and construction of highways, streets and bridges in California, including:

The opening of under-developed areas to economic opportunity, and

The provision of proper transportation to meet changing conditions.

A study to determine whether funds expended on construction and maintenance of the highway system have been equitably levied on property or business in relation to benefits or upon users in direct proportion to their use.

Information is needed on:

The annual cost of roads and streets, and the fair apportionment of these costs among the users thereof, and for that purpose data is needed on:

Total mileage of roads and streets;

Capital investment therein;

Total sum which should be collected annually to maintain, replace and modernize such roads and streets, and

The proper amount which should be paid annually by users of public thoroughfares to meet the annual cost of such roads and streets.

Information is also needed on:

The present status of the highway system;

Deficiencies therein as to present demands;

Schedule of improvements necessary for future demands;

Schedule of maintenance necessary to keep the capital investment up to standards,

Schedule of improvements necessary to develop areas that should be opened up;

Special problems relating to highways;

The financing and administration of the highway system, including

Alternate plans to those heretofore proposed for financing a highway construction program in order to reduce the burden of taxation on motorists for the next decade;

The interrelationship between the state and local governments and the state and federal governments in relation to this subject;

The control of highway traffic in interest of safety, taking into consideration present needs and future needs for a period of at least ten years.

In addition, the committee is specifically authorized and directed to study all facts relating to:

The cost of constructing, maintaining, and improving public highways, streets and bridges in the State;

The need and cost of bringing these facilities up to acceptable standards;

The cost of so maintaining them;

The need and cost of expanding the highway system to meet:

Travel demands;

Changing economic and industrial conditions;

Opening up of undeveloped areas;

The present and future use of the highway system;

The proper allocation of cost and burden of construction and maintenance in proportion to benefits to users and property as determined by engineering studies.

The committee is also authorized and directed to ascertain, study, and analyze all facts relative to the operation, effect, administration, enforcement, and needed revision of any and all laws relating to the subject of the resolution and report such to the Legislature, including the committee's recommendations for legislation.

An investigation to inquire into the proposed location of freeways would be clearly within the scope of this resolution."

Committee members are: Glenn M. Anderson, Chairman; Ernest R. Geddes, Vice Chairman; Sam L. Collins; Francis Dunn, Jr.; G. Delbert Morris. Secretary, Belle Mishkin.

The first meeting of the committee was held in the Assembly Office in Los Angeles on October 17, 1949, at which rules of procedure were adopted providing, among other things, that three members of the committee shall constitute a quorum; in the presence of a quorum, a majority may take action in any matter; the chairman shall have the authority to appoint subcommittees consisting of one or two members.

One of the general problems proposed for investigation was the accounting for rent income from real property purchased for rights of way for new highways and leased to tenants pending the commencement of construction of the new highway. This question was presented to Controller Thomas H. Kuchel, and in a letter dated January 10, 1950, he replied, in part:

> "The Legislature in 1939 took recognition of this problem and, in Section 104.6 of the Streets and Highways Code, authorized the Department of Public Works to lease such property, and provided for the deposit of the rent income in the State Highway Fund. Two or three years ago, some question arose as to the proper manner of handling these receipts in the budget of the Department of Public Works At our request, a conference was called at which were representatives of the Attorney General's office, the Department of Finance, the Division of Highways, and my office. Following a complete discussion of the entire problem, it was decided that a bill should be submitted to the 1949 Legislature authorizing such revenues to be used in counties, as a cost offset against the right-of-way acquisition, in the areas from which the rent was received. This legislation was adopted and became Chapter 123 of the 1949 Statutes, and reads as follows:
> > 'Section 104.65 is added to the Streets and Highways Code to read:
> > 104.65 Income heretofore or hereafter received from rentals under Section 104.6 shall be credited to the budgetary item from which the property was acquired '
> The obvious purpose of such legislation is to prevent the use of rental income secured in one county from being expended in another county.
> Under the present law, the State makes no attempt to compensate agencies of local government for their loss of tax revenue while the real property is being used in this proprietary fashion. * * *
> During the last three completed fiscal years, rentals from highway property which have been deposited in the State Highway Fund, are as follows:

1948-49	$752,072.04
1947-48	952,339.66
1946-47	387,591.59"

On November 17, 1949, Assemblymen Glenn M. Anderson and Ernest R. Geddes, acting as a subcommittee, held a hearing in the County Board of Supervisors' Chambers in Ventura County Court House. This was done at the instigation of Assemblyman John B. Cooke, who requested that specific attention be given to the problems of State Highway 118, where it goes through Santa Susana Pass.

The meeting opened with a report from Mrs. Richard E. Eby, Chairman of the Citizens Committee of Pomona, and Vice President of the then newly formed Community Protective League of California. Mrs. Eby presented a brief giving the background of the Community Protective League of California, which is composed of representatives from the communities of Encinitas, Carlsbad, Pomona, Ontario, Santa Rosa, Santa Cruz, West Fresno, West Sacramento, Auburn, Livingston, Petaluma, Catate, Oceanside and Redding, and other groups throughout the State who, in her words, "object to the lack of consideration given by the Department of Public Works to the rights and wishes of citizens, and its manner of operating without due regard to protest or proper hearings." Mrs. Eby, on behalf of the league, offered to assume the task of briefing complaints from all groups within its organization, for presentation to this committee in a state-wide hearing, or in a series of hearings.

The meeting was then turned over to the chairmanship of Assemblyman Cooke.

Among those who spoke were Mr. Marion S. Walker, President of the Ventura Chamber of Commerce, who read a statement concerning traffic conditions on Highway 399, Star Route 138, citing the increase in traffic congestion over the past year and the need for relief, particularly in straightening curves and widening the route. Mr. Art Sherwood, also representing the Ventura Chamber of Commerce, supported Mr. Walker's statement.

Mr. Lawrence E. Olson, City Manager of Ventura, discussed putting in an alternate route on U. S. 399, Ventura to Ojai, along the levee.

Mr. Les Price, Chairman of the Board of Supervisors, stated that Ventura County had never received any funds from the $\frac{3}{8}$ cent allocation under the Collier-Burns Highway Act. Upon request by the chairman of this committee for an explanation from the State Controller, a letter dated January 10, 1950, was received from Mr. Kuchel, reading in part as follows:

> "The second subject about which you inquired was the report that Ventura County had not received any funds from the $\frac{3}{8}$ cent allocation under the Collier-Burns Highway Act. I am attaching a schedule showing the payments to that county from the $\frac{3}{8}$ cent portion of these taxes, from the inception of the Collier-Burns Highway Act to date. This does not include the payment to be made late this month. Ventura County has received $69,035.77 as its share of the $\frac{3}{8}$ cent money, in addition to $739,475.64 under other sections of the Collier-Burns Highway Act.
> Under the apportionment formula in the Collier-Burns Act there are 16 counties, of which Ventura is one, that do not share in the apportionment of funds under Section 2114 of the Streets and Highways Code, which is the major portion of the $\frac{3}{8}$ cent money. This is for the reason that in these 16 counties, the mileage in the county highway system is such that under the other apportionment sections in the Collier-Burns Highway Act, they receive at least $300 annually for each mile of highway in their county system."

Mr. Mark Cessna, District Engineer, reported that the Highway Division would make a study of the entire traffic situation around Ventura, and that within six months a complete report would be available.

Turning to the matter of Highway 118 over Santa Susana Pass, Mr. Jeske, Chairman of the Santa Susana Citizens' Committee, presented a preliminary statement concerning the many hazards to traffic on this road due to narrowness, sharp curves, blind corners, etc. The highway is heavily traveled by trucks going to oil fields and a great deal of produce from Simi Valley is hauled over it. There is real danger for a school bus which uses the road. Thirty-five thousand dollars had been allotted by the Highway Commission for taking out some of the curves

The committee inspected the proposed route along the levee on U. S. 399, and also drove over Santa Susana Pass, making an on-the-spot inspection of the curves and bridges under consideration. In the afternoon a hearing was held at Susana Knolls Park, attended by about 150 citizens, at which there was further discussion of the proposed program for widening bridges. Those designated to be widened were Brown Barranca, Mejico Creek, Happy Canyon, Top Canyon, Arroyo Simi and B Creek. About $70,000 was allocated for this purpose. Mrs. Riefstahl, Mrs. R. M. Wright, Jr., Mrs Harry Glover and other residents of Santa Susana indicated their desire to have the road improved, one of the reasons being the possibility of encouraging a public transportation system to operate a bus service over the Pass. It was pointed out, however, that lack of potential business and not the condition of the road was the factor involved.

On November 21, 1949, a hearing was held in El Monte City Hall, Assemblymen Anderson and Geddes constituting a subcommittee. At the request of Mr. Anderson, Mr. Geddes assumed chairmanship of the meeting, inasmuch as the subject of this meeting was a continuation of the problem presented to the 1947 Interim Committee, of which Assemblyman Geddes was chairman, wherein a very detailed presentation was made by the City of El Monte through the city engineer, city manager, chamber of commerce and other groups, all of which were unanimous in support of a plan to depress the length of the Ramona Freeway as it went through the major portion of the City of El Monte, putting the Pacific Electric tracks in the middle, allowing cross streets in downtown El Monte to cross at grade, in opposition to a plan for right of way and construction as proposed by the State. A point of controversy was the additional cost of construction, and how to get rid of water seeping into the open ditch.

The City of El Monte has made no change in its position, and until and unless a better solution can be found, it is standing on its original position. Meanwhile, city planning and business development is at a standstill.

Mr. Reese, Assistant District Engineer, stated the El Monte plan involved changing Pacific Electric tracks, for which the Division of Highways had no authority to allocate funds

It was agreed that this committee would recommend to the Division of Highways that further consideration be given to the problem, to the end that a compromise be reached whereby the project could go ahead.

In Pomona, the State proposed a right of way through the city which was originally accepted by the city council but since rescinded by that body. Action was undertaken by the Citizens Committee, which resulted in an initiative ordinance being passed, which gave permission to the city council to accept a proposal from the State for routing within a certain specified area. Since that time the entire matter is stalemated, and the question arose as to whether an ordinance which is passed by initiative or by the Pomona City Council is a valid ordinance, as far as the construction of highways throughout the State is concerned. This matter was referred to the Legislative Counsel, who stated his opinion to be that such an ordinance can only be tested by court action.

Appearing at the meeting were Mrs. Eby, Mr. Howard, and Morris O'Connor, representing the Citizens Committee; also Mr. Harris and Mr. Marshall, citizens of Pomona.

The subcommittee recommended that the Highway Commission give a full hearing to the matter, with this committee sitting in on the discussion.*

On November 22, 1949, a meeting was held in the County Board of Supervisors' Chambers at Riverside. Present were Assemblymen Glenn M Anderson and Ernest R Geddes, constituting a subcommittee. Present also were members of the Riverside County Board of Supervisors—Mr. Gilmore, Chairman, and Supervisors Hill, Slape, Jones and Mayflower; also Assemblyman Babbage, Senator Dilworth, former Assemblyman Boyd, Howard Hayes, Chairman of Highway Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Bordwell, President of the County Chamber of Commerce, and Mr Baxter, co-chairman of the City Chamber of Commerce; Mr. Gillis of the Controller's Office, and Mr. Keith of the Highway Division. General satisfaction was expressed with the working of the Collier-Burns Act

The freeway situation in the Pomona area is affecting through traffic from Riverside to metropolitan Los Angeles, and the people of that district are equally eager that the Pomona stalemate be overcome.

Following the meeting, the committee held a hearing on the case of Mr Bert Ballinger and Miss Marie Ballinger, who have a grievance because of what they consider discriminatory and unjust action on the part of the Division of Highways in connection with acquiring some property belonging to the Ballingers located in Rosemead It was Mr. Geddes' opinion that the committee could do nothing in this case unless the Ballingers were prepared to take legal action against the various members of the Division of Highways.

On January 18, 1950, a meeting was held in Sacramento, the purpose of which was to try to secure answers from the various state department offices to some of the questions brought to the attention of this committee. Members of the committee attending this meeting were Assemblymen Anderson, Geddes, and Dunn. Eighteen persons in all were present.

Mr. Floyd Clouse, Chief of the Division of Accounting in the State Controller's Office, explained at length the methods used in apportioning

* Since the above minutes were written and the manuscript for this report prepared for submission, the Pomona situation has been settled by agreement between the State Highway Commission and the City Council of the City of Pomona Pursuant to request made by the Pomona City Council, members of the Highway Commission and representative engineers appeared at a public meeting held in the high school of that city, and explained the proposed new routing, in which some consideration had been given to representations made previously, that there were not enough underpasses and overpasses of the proposed freeway The new plans showed several additional such structures to have been added The route proposed was approximately the same as that which had caused the efforts of the Citizens Committee to force the route in another direction as outlined in presentations of that organization before previous committees and before the State Highway Commission, and made the subject matter of a bill which failed to pass in the Senate at the 1949 Session gas funds to the counties under the 1-cent formula which has been in existence for many years, and under the new Collier-Burns formula. He compared the Counties of Ventura and Riverside, explaining why Ventura County did not share in the first distribution of the $\frac{3}{8}$-cent money, for the reason that, having only 604 miles of maintained county highway, at the rate of $300 per mile it already had received out of the 1-cent tax more than the arbitrary minimum. Fifteen other counties in the State are in this category. These are, generally speaking, metropolitan areas having comparatively low mileage and high motor vehicle registration.

It is reported that although not all parties are happy with the final solution of the Pomona stalemate, that the matter is at an end and now the community is generally united in asking for rapid construction of the section of the Ramona Freeway involved.

Riverside County, on the other hand, has 2,622 miles of maintained county roads. Under the 1-cent money, plus the arbitrary minimum of $7,500, they received roughly $129,600. This is about $67,000 less than the amount they are entitled to on the basis of 2,622 miles at $300 per mile; consequently they share in the first distribution of the $\frac{3}{8}$-cent money.

Others who spoke were Mr. A. Alan Post, Legislative Auditor; W. E. Pringle, Deputy Legislative Counsel; Mr. E. R. Higgins, Controller, Department of Public Works; H. C. McCarty, Office Engineer, Department of Public Works.

At the request of Assemblyman Richard J Dolwig, a meeting was held in the City Hall in San Mateo on January 19, 1950. Members of the committee present were Assemblymen Anderson, Geddes, and Dunn, and at Mr. Anderson's request, Assemblyman Dolwig acted as chairman of the meeting.

Mr. Dolwig turned over to the committee resolutions adopted by the City Councils of Redwood City, Belmont, South San Francisco, Burlingame, San Mateo, and Millbrae, urging action to secure emergency funds for the extension of the Bayshore Freeway in San Mateo County

Those who appeared and spoke before the committee were: Daniel J. Creeden, Mayor of San Mateo; Francis Raymond, Chairman of the San Mateo Traffic Safety Commission; John Kemp, Councilman of San Carlos; Howard Brode, City Manager of San Carlos; Martin Dinkelspiel, commuter and resident of San Mateo County; Paul A. McCarthy, City Attorney of the City of Belmont; Alvin S Hatch, Acting Chairman of the Board of Supervisors; Thomas L. Hickey, South San Francisco; Supervisor Edward R. McDonald, Fifth District, Santa Clara County; Mrs. Bessie B. Hayes, Executive Secretary, San Mateo County Traffic Safety Commission; Paul Jones, Redwood City, delegated by American Legion Post 105 to attend meeting. (Mr. Jones also represents the Redwood City Planning Commission.) Glenn Jain, City Engineer, Redwood City; Arnold C. Johnson, Veterans of Foreign Wars, San Mateo; Mrs. H M Casey, President, Women's Club, San Mateo; Mrs. Elsa S. McGinn, San Mateo Planning Commission; Robert O'Brien, Chief of Police, San Mateo; Major Joseph G Bye, U S Army, Retired; Ernest Stelter, private citizen, member of E. Palo Alto Lions; V. W. Booker, District Engineer, District 4, Division of Highways.

The purpose of the meeting, as stated by Mr. Dolwig, was to assemble facts relative to Bayshore Freeway. At present time the freeway ends at the northern limits of South San Francisco and in San Mateo. Within that area it is a six-lane freeway. At terminus at both ends it narrows down into a four-lane highway, creating a bottleneck, increasing traffic accidents and causing difficulty in the flow of traffic. According to the Highway Department, the work at either end will not be completed until 1954-55 or some time later, and it is urgent that something be done to hasten completion of work—either by revising the Collier-Burns Act, or in some other manner obtaining emergency funds to complete the work.

The testimony emphasized freeway locations at Third Avenue in San Mateo, where traffic comes to a full stop, and the Brisbane intersection at the north end of San Mateo County as being points of extremely dangerous traffic congestion. An overpass or clover leaf at Third Avenue would help considerably.

RECOMMENDATION OF THE COMMITTEE

MR. SPEAKER: It is the recommendation of the majority of the members of this committee that the Division of Highways give further consideration to the proposals made by the City of El Monte, whereby the Ramona Freeway, in traversing that city, would do so in a depressed channel. We feel that this recommendation is important, since settlement of the routing controversy in Pomona leaves the El Monte situation one of the few remaining obstacles to the completion of plans for the routing of the Ramona Freeway.

Pursuant to the provisions of the resolution, the Speaker appointed as Chairman the Honorable Clayton A. Dills, and as members, the Honorable Carl Fletcher, Honorable William Byron Rumford, Honorable H. Allen Smith, and Honorable A. W. Way. On November 8, 1949, Assemblyman Way was elected to the Senate, and this vacancy was filled by the appointment of Honorable Carley V. Porter.

During the course of its inquiries, the committee confined its activities to a general investigation of the following:

1. Rules and Regulations and Memorials;
2. General Condition of Cemeteries;
3. "Endowment Care" instead of "Perpetual Care";
4. Increase of Minimum Deposit to Perpetual Care Fund;
5. Inviolable and Irreducible Nature of Funds;
6. Types of Investments;
7. Misuse of "Perpetual Care" Funds;
8. Documents Furnished Purchaser;
9. New State Cemetery Board.

The committee also sent out a comprehensive questionnaire consisting of 39 questions covering the subject of perpetual care to some 800 cemeteries, mausoleums, and crematories. There were 347 responses Approximately 250 questionnaires were returned marked, "No such address" or "Address unknown," and the balance of approximately 203 did not answer at all. The committee concluded that these were small cemeteries or family burial grounds used by the early settlers of which there are no records of burials or location maps, nor are any trust funds set up for maintaining care of them. There are between 125 and 150 privately-owned cemeteries that come under the regulatory provisions of the Health and Safety Code and under the jurisdiction of the State Cemetery Board set up by the 1949 Legislature. There are some 200 publicly-owned cemeteries owned either by the various cities, counties or public cemetery districts.

As a result of our hearings, and our questionnaire, the following conclusions were arrived at:

(1) Rules and Regulations and Memorials

The various chapters of the Health and Safety Code, each providing a system of regulation for a particular profession or business, are well drafted.

Division VIII of the Health and Safety Code covers generally the rules and regulations of cemeteries, mausoleums and columbariums.

Sections 8300 and 8302 of the Health and Safety Code authorize a cemetery corporation to make, adopt, amend, add to, revise, or modify and enforce its own rules and regulations for the use, care, control, management, restriction, and protection of all or any part of its cemetery; also, it may regulate the uniformity, class, kind of all markers, monuments and other structures within the cemetery and its subdivisions. By case law these rules must be reasonable and uniformly applied.

The power to make rules and regulations is in line with each particular profession or business regulated under the Health and Safety Code and the Business and Professions Code. Each one has many detailed regulations encompassing the entire field of professional or business activity of the particular group.

We find that there is a conflict between cemetery organizations and monument men. The problem primarily arises from the fact that the modern trend is to have cemetery areas with tablets or memorials flat with the lawn rather than the old type of large monuments. This is a problem that cannot be solved by legislation because it is purely economic. It is up to each interment property to adopt and enforce equitably its own rules and regulations as provided under the present statutes.

Changes have occurred in styles of memorialization. The flat marker plan is fast replacing the old style monuments. The real conflict between cemeteries and monument men is based upon the change in styles of memorialization. Certain complaints were made by the monument men with reference to a few of the cemeteries, but we believe that the answer to these complaints does not lie in further legislation, and accordingly, this committee has no legislation to recommend on this problem.

(2) General Condition of Cemeteries

The provisions of Section 8736 of the Health and Safety Code state that the perpetual care fund and all payments or contributions to it are thereby expressly permitted as and for charitable and eleemosynary purposes Perpetual care is a provision for the discharge of a duty due from the persons contributing to the persons interred and to be interred in the cemetery, and a provision for the benefit and protection of the public by preserving and keeping cemeteries from becoming unkept and places of reproach and desolation in the communities in which they are situated.

With reference to complaints received during the interim, and by the Public Health Committee during the 1949 Session of the Legislature, in regard to the unkept and unsightly conditions in various cemeteries, the committee visited those cemeteries mentioned in the complaints—also many others not mentioned—and made note of their condition.

Because of the lack of time and funds, the committee was compelled to make a spot check. There was cause for complaint about many of the cemeteries, especially those of 10 acres or less. Many were very unsightly and unkept. Some were in a deplorable condition, having fallen markers and monuments, broken fences, walks and graves covered with weeds, and half-burned wooden markers. Other bad conditions, such as the lack of a burial list for identification and no maps showing the location of graves, were evident. Such conditions in these old nonprofit small graveyards have come about by the failure to set up an adequate trust fund and the lack of income because they seldom make an interment. They have made no pretense to the public that they are giving care. These small graveyards are now infrequently used. Only an occasional burial is made. They are largely historical when compared under modern operation. In the country areas they have been or are being taken over by public cemetery districts and are tax supported.

The larger cemeteries, which handle the overwhelming bulk of interments in populated areas, were in very good condition Those that had adopted the memorial park idea of park-like lawns, walks, and driveways, were a place of beauty and culture and a credit to the cemetery business.

(3) "Endowment Care" Instead of "Perpetual Care"

There was considerable discussion about the use of the term "perpetual care " We believe that the term "perpetual care" is not sufficiently descriptive and that it should be mandatory to use the term "endowment care" as provided in the act setting up the State Cemetery Board, adopted in 1949.

An "endowment care" fund is a trust fund composed of the deposits made by the purchasers of memorial property into said fund and is not a part of the purchase price. The fund, as a trust fund, by the very nature of things, cannot be perpetual. Through inflation and increasing costs of maintenance, with a possibility of loss of principal through poor investments the term "endowment care" is more descriptive. The word "perpetual" conveys the idea that the cemetery will be maintained and cared for forever Every thinking person knows there is no such thing as perpetuity The public would be more truthfully informed if the word "endowment" were used. We find that this is the thinking in other states

It is our recommendation that the law be changed so that throughout both the Business and Professions Code and the Health and Safety Code the word "endowment" would be substituted for the word "perpetual " Properties that do not live up to the "endowment care" standards should be labeled "non-care cemeteries."

(4) Increase of Minimum Deposit to Care Fund

Under the present law the minimum amounts required to be set up in the care fund are as follows

> "A perpetual care cemetery is one which shall hereafter deposit in its perpetual care fund out of the initial sale not less than the following amounts for plots sold or disposed of:
> (a) Twenty-five cents a square foot for each grave;
> (b) Five dollars for each niche;
> (c) Fifteen dollars for each crypt; provided, however, that in the event there shall be located upon any one property or contiguous properties, a mausoleum or mausoleums containing in the aggregate six thousand crypts under the actual ownership of one cemetery authority; and provided also, that there shall have been deposited in said perpetual care fund mentioned in this code, a sum equal to ten dollars from the initial sale or disposal of each crypt theretofore sold or disposed of, including perpetual care funds accumulated prior to the passage of this code, then and thereafter such perpetual care cemetery shall be required to deposit in the perpetual care fund mentioned in this code, not less than the sum of ten dollars for each crypt thereafter sold or disposed of" (Sec. 8738, H. & S. C.)

This section was adopted in 1939.

After studying the answers received from the cemeteries on this same question, it was found that approximately 26 percent were charging the minimum of 25 cents per square foot while 74 percent were charging from 35 cents to $2.25 per square foot.

The cemeteries using a percentage basis charged from a minimum of 10 percent of the cost of the graves or plots to a maximum of 70 percent (which is required by law where alleyways in old cemeteries are abandoned and replatted into graves).

Those cemeteries answering the question as to the amount charged and set aside for crypts and niches had prices ranging from a specific amount of $5 to $15 per niche or, on a percentage basis, ranging from a minimum of 5 percent to a maximum of 33⅓ percent. Their charges on crypts ranged from $15 to $75.

In answer to the question, "Should the minimum amounts required by law be increased?", approximately 48 percent favored an increase, 30 percent against an increase and 22 percent of no opinion

In reviewing the reasons for increased amounts, the committee observed that the income derived from the "perpetual care" fund was inadequate to provide proper care for many of the cemeteries. Because of increased operational costs, as well as lower interest rates, the minimum amount today should be doubled except for niches which is now proportionately high, and we so recommend .

We further believe that the State Cemetery Board should make a careful study of cemetery costs and should recommend to successive legislatures any further changes to keep these minimum requirements in line with inflational developments.

One of the great dangers to the public is to start a new interment property without adequate provision for "endowment care." If the project should fail in the early years, the use to which the land is put cannot be changed. The result is an uncared for weed patch because there cannot, under the present minimum requirements, be enough principal to provide for care For example, a small mausoleum with 250 crypts would mean a fund of only $3,750 with an annual income of less than $200. This is not enough to employ hardly any help. The solution for the future is to require new cemetery projects to make an initial deposit of $25,000 in the care fund. In this way plot purchasers will be protected and the community in turn will not suffer the ill-fated results of an unkept bankrupt cemetery.

(5) Inviolable and Irreducible Nature of Funds

Information received by the committee disclosed that in the past Section 8726 of the Health and Safety Code had been violated and there were reasons to believe that at the present time this section of the code was still being violated. Section 8726 states that the principal of all funds for "perpetual care" shall forever remain irreducible and inviolable and shall be maintained separate and distinct from all other funds.

In examination of the answers to Question No. 38 of the questionnaire, "Between September 19, 1939, and September 1, 1949, has the principal of the perpetual care fund ever at any time been reduced? If so, what was the cause for the reduction? Has it been replaced? If so, how?", it was noted that a few funds had been reduced within the past 10 years. The cause for the reduction may well have been due to an unfortunate but not necessarily improper investment. There is no provision under the code for replacement of perpetual care fund losses, therefor no replacement was made.

In order to create a reserve from which principal losses may be replaced, it is our recommendation that the law be amended making a specific provision to permit those serving as custodians of the "endowment care" funds to set aside a reasonable percentage of the income from invested funds. Even United States Government bonds might be bought and later sold under circumstances where the proceeds would be less than the amortized book value. In the absence of any provision permitting the trustees to create and maintain such a reserve the eventual shrinking of the principal funds cannot be avoided. It is axiomatic that capital gains cannot be expected without accepting the risk of capital losses. As indicated above, capital losses may be suffered on investments made solely for the purpose of producing income.

(6) Types of Investments

In considering the types of investments allowed under the code, the committee made a thorough study of Section 8751 of the Health and Safety Code which authorizes the following investments:

(a) Bonds of the United States or this State, or of any county, city and county, or city in this State;

(b) Bonds legal for investment for savings banks in this State;

(c) First mortgages or first trust deeds on improved real estate;

(d) Income producing improved real estate in any city or city and county in this State;

(e) Investment certificates in any building and loan association organized, existing and doing business under the laws of this State;

(f) Investments of the type enumerated for domestic incorporated insurers in Article 3, Chapter 2, Part 2, of Division 1 of the Insurance Code of this State;

(g) By deposit in a bank which is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation;

(h) Shares of a duly chartered and insured Federal Savings and Loan Association.

In comparing the answers received as to the types of investments made by the organizations within the provisions of Section 8751, it was observed that better than 98 percent of the cemetery organizations were within the law and the types of investments made were well secured.

It was also observed that in virtually all cases the disposition of the income earned from these investments and the reinvestment of the principal of the funds was satisfactory and well within the provisions of Section 8727 which provides that the principal of all funds for perpetual care shall be invested from time to time, reinvested, and kept invested and the income earned shall be used solely for the general care, maintenance and embellishment of the cemetery, and shall be applied in such manner as the cemetery authority may from time to time determine to be for the best interest of the cemetery.

We have also concluded that the limitations in Section 8751 of the Health and Safety Code, specifying the type of investments for "endowment care" funds, work a hardship on cemeteries and those that invest their trust funds. Cemetery trust funds are different from almost any other type of trust. They need not be liquid for the principal is never needed, such as in a bank or insurance company. What is required is a safe, long-term investment with a good investment return. Income and the increase in value is what is necessary, for this is used for the maintenance of the sold areas of the cemetery. In order to better ride through any inflationary period the opportunity should be presented to these trustees to make different investments.

The Legislature in 1943 recognized the problem and as to trusts and trust funds generally adopted the "prudent man rule." This rule for the manner of investment of trust funds is set forth in Section 2261 of the California Civil Code.

We believe that cemetery trustees, even more than other trustees, should be permitted a latitude of investment, under state law, so as to protect that principal of the fund from depletion through inflation. Economists predict another period of continued inflation and we believe that now is the time to change the law and make the "prudent man rule" apply not only to bank and other trusts but to cemetery trust funds as well. We recommend this change, now that the State Cemetery Board is set up to properly supervise investments.

(7) Misuse of "Perpetual Care" Funds

The committee took particular cognizance of the charges involving the misuse of "perpetual care" funds, which is in violation of Section 8360 of the Health and Safety Code. Section 8360 provides that no director or officer of any cemetery authority shall directly or indirectly, for himself or as the partner or agent of others, borrow any funds of the corporation or association, nor may he become an indorser or surety for loans to others, nor in any manner be an obligor for money borrowed of or loaned by the corporation or association, nor shall a corporation of which a director or an officer is a stockholder, or in which either of them is in any manner interested, borrow any of the funds of the corporation or association.

After careful examination of the statements of the "perpetual care" funds furnished by the cemeteries, it was noted that such activities are confined to but one or two.

At public hearings, the committee found that every single association present openly and forcefully expressed its opposition and condemnation of such practices However, in the past, the lack of enforcement powers—other than the right to expel from association membership—has encouraged this practice. In the future, the State Cemetery Board will supervise and guard against any law violations.

(8) Documents Furnished Purchaser—Posting of Maps, Signs, Filing of Written Report

In the questionnaire, the committee asked for a copy of the types of documents delivered to a purchaser of interment property. In response to this question many types of documents were received, such as the agreement of sale, sales contract, contract for purchase and sale of property, interment order, sales receipt, certificate of ownership and perpetual care and the deed of property.

These documents were well drawn and binding on both the purchaser and the seller, subject to change as provided by the rules and regulations adopted by the cemetery authority.

In regard to the posting of maps, Section 8550, Article 3 of the Health and Safety Code provides that every cemetery authority, from time to time as its property may be required for interment purposes, shall:

(a) In case of land, survey and subdivide it into sections, blocks, plots, avenues, walks or other subdivisions; make a good and substantial map or plat showing the sections, plots, avenues, walks or other subdivisions, with descriptive names or numbers;

(b) In case of a mausoleum, or crematory and columbarium, it shall make a good and substantial map or plat on which shall be delineated the sections, halls, rooms, corridors, elevations, and other divisions, with descriptive names or numbers.

In addition to the small cemeteries which were found to be lax in the posting of maps showing the location of interments, a few of the larger cemeteries, which are subject to the provisions of Section 8550, were in violation of said section.

Violation of Section 8741 was evident in a very small minority of the cemeteries contacted by members of the committee. This section provides that each "perpetual care" cemetery shall post in a conspicuous place in the office or offices where sales are conducted and in a conspicuous place at or near the entrance of the cemetery or its administration building and readily accessible to the public, a legible sign which shall contain the following information in the order and manner set forth below:

(a) A heading containing the words "perpetual care"—which shall appear in a minimum of 48-point black type;

(b) This is a "perpetual care" interment property;

(c) Names of officers and directors of the cemetery authority and persons entrusted with the investment of the "perpetual care" fund.

In some cases, signs were not posted or accessible to the public containing the words "perpetual care." In others, the names of officers and directors of the cemetery authority or persons entrusted with the investment of the "perpetual care" fund were not accessible to the public at the office of the cemetery. It might be explained that the few violations of this section were in small properties and no longer very active.

Further investigation showed that the lists of names were in possession of either a director of the cemetery authority or a trustee of the "perpetual care" fund at an address other than the cemetery office.

The failure to file a written report in the office of the cemetery, in compliance with Section 8742, was noted in a few of the cemeteries. Section 8742 provides that each "perpetual care" cemetery shall file in its office a written report which shall contain:

(a) Amount of principal of the "perpetual care" fund;

(b) Total amount invested in bonds, securities or other investments authorized by law and the total amount of cash on hand not invested which shall actually show the financial condition of the trust;

(c) Number of square feet of grave space and number of crypts and niches under perpetual care, prior to and subsequent to the enactment of this section, each separately set forth.

These written reports were also found in the possession of a member or director of the cemetery corporation or a trustee of the "perpetual care" fund at an address other than the office of the cemetery. Here again, the exceptions were small, relatively inactive cemeteries.

For the future, the State Cemetery Board has the obligation to enforce the provisions above quoted.

(9) New State Cemetery Board

Since House Resolution No. 258 was adopted, the legislation setting up the State Cemetery Board has become effective. The board has been set up and has been functioning for some time. Opinions voiced during hearings held by the committee made it apparent that the creation of the Cemetery Board was a satisfactory solution for the enforcement of the law as provided under Division 8 of the Health and Safety Code.

The board has employed an executive secretary who is also a certified public accountant. As fast as time will permit, a complete analysis is being made of the investments of all the cemeteries that come under the provisions of the act. This board is starting out to do an exceptionally fine job. The appointees are conscientious. Thus, we believe that there is no need at this time for further legislation regulating cemeteries.

In order to assist the State Cemetery Board in its work, we have turned over our files to it. When the recommendations herein made are implemented by legislation, we feel that the obligations and duties of the committee have been met and fulfilled.

AIR MAIL SPECIAL DELIVERY

Hon. Sam L. Collins
Speaker, State Assembly
State Capitol, Sacramento, California

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: The writer represents ELDON JAMES MARKWORT, who was a candidate on both the Democratic and Republican ballots at the June, 1950 Primary Election, for the office of Member of the State Assembly, 64th District Patrick D. McGee received the highest number of votes on both tickets. Mr. Markwort thereafter filed a CANDIDATE'S CONTEST, under the provisions of Sections 8600, et seq., of the Elections Code, the basis of the contest was that said Patrick D. McGee was and would be ineligible for the office of Member of the Assembly in the State of California, in that he was not a citizen and inhabitant of the State of California three years next before November 7, 1950, as required by Article IV, Section 4, of the Constitution of the State of California This matter was filed in the Superior Court of the State of California, appealed to the District Court of Appeal, and recently transferred to and heard in the Supreme Court of the State of California.

On January 10, 1951, the Supreme Court of the State of California, in a written opinion filed on that date, held that the Legislature was the exclusive judge "of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its members" under Article IV, Section 7, of the California Constitution. The Supreme Court also held that the Courts of this State were without jurisdiction even to determine a Candidate's Contest at a primary election, so far as a candidate for membership in the State Assembly is concerned.

Accordingly, on behalf of Eldon James Markwort, there is filed herewith a copy of the Affidavit of Contest, as it was originally filed in the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of Los Angeles, on June 27, 1950. You are asked to consider this AFFIDAVIT OF CONTEST as a basis of a contest before the Legislature of the eligibility of PATRICK D. McGEE as a member of the Legislature from the 54th Assembly District.

Your attention is particularly called to Paragraph VI of the Affidavit of Contest, wherein the grounds of contest are stated, as have been stated hereinabove, and which are hereby repeated, as follows:

> "That ELDON JAMES MARKWORT, Contestant, contests the nomination of said PATRICK D McGEE, Contestee, on both the Democratic and Republican tickets at said Primary Election and, for ground of contest, avers that said McGEE was and is still ineligible to the office of Member of Assembly in the State of California, in that he has not and will not have been a citizen and inhabitant of the State of California three years next before November 7, 1950, as required by Art IV., Sec. 4, of the Constitution of the State of California

I respectfully urge, on behalf of Mr. Markwort, that you refer this matter to the appropriate committee of the legislature, and that appropriate proceedings be initiated to determine the eligibility of PATRICK D. McGEE to be a member of the legislature.

We will provide the evidence which we believe shows that Mr. McGee did not become a bona fide resident of the State of California prior to March 10, 1948.

Respectfully yours

ROLLIN L. McNITT

CONSIDERATION OF HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 24

By Mr. Hahn:

House Resolution No. 24

Relative to televising university athletic contests

WHEREAS, The University of California is supported by public funds; and

WHEREAS, The people of the State, who provide such funds, are justifiably proud of the university and of the part they play in supporting it; and

WHEREAS, The people are therefore keenly interested in the athletic program of the university, and justifiably regard its athletic teams as representatives of not only the university, but also the people of this State; and

WHEREAS, This feeling has caused large numbers of citizens of this State to make substantial investments in television sets in order that they might follow more closely the athletic contests in which the university participates; and

WHEREAS, It appears that the Pacific Coast Conference, of which the university is a member, is considering the adoption of a rule which will prohibit the televising of athletic contests participated in by its members; and

WHEREAS, Such rule, if adopted, would deprive the citizens of this State who have invested in television sets and who are unable to secure tickets or to attend such contests, of the right to follow the activities of the teams of the university which they support; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the Regents of the University of California be, and they are hereby requested, to take such action as is necessary to insure that the athletic teams of the university will not participate in any contest which may not, under the terms of any rule, contract or agreement, be televised; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly be directed to transmit copies of this resolution to each member of the Board of Regents of the University of California, to the President of the University and to the Associated Students of the University of California.

Consideration of Committee Amendments

The following amendment was proposed by the Committee on Rules:

Amendment No. 1

Strike out all of the text of House Resolution No. 24, as printed on page 96 of the Assembly Journal of January 9, 1951, and insert

"WHEREAS, It appears that the Pacific Coast Conference has adopted a rule which will prohibit the televising of intercollegiate athletic contests participated in by its members; and

WHEREAS, Such a rule, as adopted, deprives the citizens of the State of California who have invested in television sets and who are unable to secure tickets or to attend such contests, opportunity of following the activities of the various teams on the Pacific Coast; and

WHEREAS, It is the feeling of a large number of citizens of the State of California who have developed a great interest in the following of intercollegiate athletic contests through television this last year that the banning of television will deprive them of much needed recreation and enjoyment; and

WHEREAS, It is only through television that many disabled veterans and servicemen and patients confined in hospitals are able to fully enjoy these events; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the members of the Pacific Coast Conference reconsider and modify its action of banning television of intercollegiate athletic contests by recognizing the great public interest and demand for an opportunity to see intercollegiate athletic contests by television since many of its citizens are deprived of the opportunity of witnessing these contests because tickets are not available or geographical distances prevent attendance; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly is hereby directed to transmit copies of this resolution to each officer of the Pacific Coast Conference and to the athletic directors of each university represented in the Pacific Coast Conference."

Amendment read, and adopted.

REPORT OF STATE FIRE MARSHAL RELATIVE TO LIQUEFIED PETROLEUM GAS

STATE OF CALIFORNIA
STATE FIRE MARSHAL

LIQUEFIED PETROLEUM GAS REPORT TO LEGISLATURE

Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 91, relating to liquefied petroleum gas, was passed by the 1949 General Session of the Legislature. This resolution provided "that the State Fire Marshal with the advice of the State Fire Advisory Board be hereby empowered and directed to ascertain, study, and analyze all of the facts relating to the storage, use, and handling of liquefied petroleum gas; he shall, after consultation with representatives of the liquefied petroleum gas industry and the fire service of California, prepare an outline of the safety standards deemed necessary to afford a reasonable degree of public safety together with his recommendations for the enforcement and administration thereof. He shall also submit estimates on the cost of administering the regulations and an equitable plan of financing, and shall report his findings and recommendations to the Legislature not later than the fifteenth day of the 1951 Regular Session of the Legislature."

INTRODUCTION

Liquefied petroleum gas is a product of petroleum which normally is in a gaseous state but which may be liquefied by applied pressure in varying degrees depending upon the type of gas. There are three principal gases that are commonly referred to by the term "liquefied petroleum gas" or "LP-Gas" as it will be later referred to in this report. They are listed in Table 1 below together with their heat values in British thermal units and the vapor pressure in pounds per square inch necessary to maintain the gas in a liquid state.

Table No. 1—Liquefied Petroleum Gases

Product	Heat Value (In B.T.U. Per Pound of Gas)	Vapor Pressure (Absolute at 100° F.)
Normal Butane	21,300	52.0
Isobutane	21,300	73.5
Propane	21,600	189.5

There are several other gases that fall under the title of LP-Gas but they are not in common use in the domestic or commercial field in California.

In order to obtain operating pressures satisfactory for seasonal use, the industry follows a practice of blending the various LP-Gas products so that the most desirable vapor pressure may be provided.

The value of LP-Gas to our California economy may be measured by the increasing demand for the product. In 1944 it was estimated that 106,880,000 gallons of LP-Gas were consumed in California; in 1949 it was estimated that 244,480,000 gallons were consumed. This would indicate an increase in consumption of approximately 129 percent in five years.

LP-Gas provides a practical source of fuel for domestic, commercial, industrial, and agricultural heat and power; its use as a motor vehicle fuel is increasing rapidly. It is roughly estimated that there are more than 485,000 commercial and domestic users of LP-Gas in California and between 350,000 and 400,000 (or about 80 percent) are domestic users. Approximately 10 percent of the people in California depend upon this product for domestic fuel and, for the most part, these users are located in the rural areas beyond the reach of utility piped gas. This fact has made the safety problem more complex in that these rural areas generally do not have local safety ordinances or enforcement personnel to properly govern the storage, handling, transportation, distribution, and use of LP-Gas As a result, a great many inferior systems have been installed.

In 1934 the State Industrial Accident Commission, with the cooperation of the LP-Gas industry, prepared and adopted industrial safety orders governing the storage, handling, and transportation of LP-Gas; but since these orders are prepared and adopted under employee's safety laws, they are not applicable to owner-operated transportation or distribution concerns nor to consumer installations where there are no employees. The industrial safety orders have been very effective in reducing the fire and explosion hazard where they apply, but their limited scope and the lack of local ordinances and regulations have left the greater portion of LP-Gas installations free from safety regulations.

The Division of Industrial Safety has developed and has in operation an effective program for controlling the manufacture of LP-Gas pressure vessels, tanks, and containers. Because of their close contact with pressure vessel manufacturers, it would be unwise to make any change in the method of regulating the manufacture of LP-Gas vessels, tanks, or containers.

INSURANCE

At the time this study was ordered, the LP-Gas industry was facing a desperate liability insurance problem. Nearly all of the American insurance underwriters were refusing to write the risk on distributors of LP-Gas and premium rates of foreign insurance underwriters were so high that they had a strangling effect upon the industry. Early in 1949 liability insurance premium rates on LP-Gas dealers were reported to be, with but few exceptions, 4½ percent of the gross business of the distributor; but, for no apparent reason, American insurance underwriters have again entered the field of competition and some LP-Gas distributors now report they can obtain liability insurance for as low as 1½ percent and 2 percent of gross receipts.

SCOPE OF STUDY

During the past two years, the State Fire Marshal, with the aid of the State Fire Advisory Board and a small representative industry committee, has conducted an extensive study of the LP-Gas safety problem in an effort to find a practical solution. This study was made along the following lines:

(a) Copies of all state laws in the United States, dealing with the LP-Gas safety problem were obtained and the approach was carefully studied. Thirty-nine states were found to have statutes dealing with LP-Gas problems; but there is a decided lack of uniformity and, like California, many states do not regulate domestic consumer installations; others that have domestic consumer regulations report they do not have adequate personnel to properly discharge their responsibility.

The following outline presents a condensed compilation of special features in laws and regulations of other states dealing with the LP-Gas safety problems:

Number of states that
Regulate storage, transportation, distribution, or use of LP-Gas	39
Have specific laws dealing with LP-Gas	20
Regulate LP-Gas by means of broad administrative authority	19
Require bonding of dealers	9
Require liability insurance	5
Require products insurance	4
Require operators to pass examinations	5
Prohibit filling unapproved cylinders	4
Prohibit serving unapproved systems	4
Require licensing of appliance dealers	6
Require equipment installer to be licensed	6
Require licensing of bottle exchange dealer	6
Require licensing of bulk distributor	6
Have equipment and appliance standards established by law	1
Have equipment and appliance standards established by rules	29
Have equipment and appliance standards established by both law and rules	3
Have regulations covering consumer appliances	8
Make inspection charge	6
Administer LP-Gas regulations under the state fire marshal	21
Administer LP-Gas regulations under a state agency other than the state fire marshal	18

(b) A questionnaire was distributed to California city and county fire officials concerning their fire and explosion experience with LP-Gas during the period of July 1, 1946, to July 1, 1949. One hundred twenty fire officials reported their experience for the three-year period. A study of these reports seemed to indicate that from a statistical standpoint, the final conclusions would not materially differ if every city and county fire official had reported. Some facts disclosed by the 120 questionnaires returned are as follows:

1. Of the 120 fire departments reporting, 77 indicated no fires or explosions had occurred in their districts as a result of LP-Gas during the three-year period; the remaining 43 departments reported 218 fires and explosions which resulted in an estimated $1,060,872.00 fire loss. This would indicate an average of $4,866.39 per incident.

2. There were 218 fires or explosions attributed to LP-Gas.

3. Seventeen deaths and 70 injuries resulted from the 218 LP-Gas fires or explosions reported. This would indicate that for each 12.8 fires or explosions one death occurred and for each 3.1 fires or explosions one person was injured.

4. Ninety-five of the 120 departments reporting indicated that they believed special state legislation was necessary to deal with the LP-Gas safety problem; 17 reported they did not believe such legislation was necessary, and eight did not answer the question.

5. Forty-four departments reported that they deemed local enforcement adequate; whereas 53 felt local ordinances were inadequate. This difference of opinion is in all probability due to the fact that some cities have ordinances while others do not.

NOTE: The reporting departments mentioned above do not include the cities of San Francisco and Los Angeles. LP-Gas is not in general domestic use in the larger cities and their inclusion in the statistics would produce an unbalanced statistical report.

(c) Efforts were made to determine the quantity of LP-Gas used in the State of California. While authentic data are unavailable on this subject, we were able to gather from various sources information on which to base a close estimate. The following estimates are based on the Bureau of Mines' reports for five western states: California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, and Arizona

Year	Total Gallons 5 Western States	California Gallonage Consumption
1944	167,000,000	106,880,000
1945	187,000,000	119,680,000
1946	237,000,000	151,680,000
1947	294,000,000	188,160,000
1948	382,000,000	244,480,000

It is estimated that California's consumption is 64 percent of the total LP-Gas consumed in the five western states.

In 1948 the United States Bureau of Mines indicated the following percentage consumption of LP-Gas in the United States:

Domestic and Commercial	53.8%
Gas Manufacturing	8.7%
Industrial Plants	7.8%
Synthetic Rubber	8.3%
Chemical Plants	17.9%
Internal Combustion Engines	3.4%
All Others	0.1%

HAZARDS OF THE PRODUCT

The hazards of this product may be viewed from three different angles. First, the fire and explosion hazard; second, the health hazard; and third, the industrial employee hazard.

From a fire and explosion hazard standpoint, the problem is similar to that of ordinary illuminating gas except that it is heavier than air and tends to travel near the surface of the ground and collect in any depressions; whereas, the illuminating gas, being lighter than air, tends to rise and disperse itself. Its hazards are similar to those of gasoline vapors from a standpoint of ignition and explosive mixture range. The fact that it requires pressure to hold it in a liquid state likewise has an effect upon the fire and explosion hazard.

The health hazard of the product is primarily that the gas cannot be readily detected unless an odorant is added and, therefore, presents an asphyxiation hazard. The carbon monoxide hazard of LP-Gas-fired appliances is not materially different from that of the ordinary illuminating gas.

The industrial employee hazards are a combination of the above-mentioned fire and health hazards.

Generally LP-Gas, like any other highly flammable liquid or gaseous substance, is considered to be a hazardous product. The hazards can, however, be reduced to a reasonably safe point by the use of proper equipment, appliances and safety devices; and by adhering to common safety practices.

The two most common causes of LP-Gas fires and explosions are:

1. Inferior or faulty equipment, fixtures and appliances, or the improper assembly thereof by inexperienced persons.

2. Carelessness or lack of experience and knowledge in servicing and refilling LP-Gas systems.

Equipment and appliances for storage, handling, and consumption of LP-Gas have developed rapidly during the past fifteen years; and where modern equipment and appliances are used and are properly assembled, the hazard of this product is very little different from that of ordinary illuminating gas.

DEVELOPING LP-GAS HEALTH AND SAFETY STANDARDS

Both the industry and the fire service have expressed a feeling that safety standards having to do with LP-Gas equipment, fixtures and appliances should be established by administrative authority and not by fixed statutes. Both have expressed a feeling that LP-Gas health and safety standards should be established by a board, commission, or at least a legally established advisory committee consisting of representatives from industries and both state and local health and safety officials.

Any intelligent approach to the LP-Gas safety problem must be viewed from several different angles, as follows:

First, they should adequately cover every hazardous phase of the LP-Gas problem, so that no dangerous or hazardous condition or practice would be exempt.

Second, all LP-Gas equipment, fixture, appliance and safety device design standards should follow nationally recognized standards.

Third, the standards should be sufficiently flexible administratively to permit their practical application.

Fourth, they should cover hazards created to adjacent property.

It is not deemed advisable to write into this report the extensive technical details of LP-Gas safety standards, but it is recommended that the following nationally recognized standards be used as a basis in establishing any state-wide health and safety regulations:

(a) "National Board of Fire Underwriters Pamphlet No. 58," governing the design, installation and construction of containers and pertinent equipment for the storage and handling of liquefied petroleum gas. (October 1950 Edition.)

(b) "National Board of Fire Underwriters Pamphlet No. 59." Standards for liquefied petroleum gases at utility gas plants. (March 1949 Edition.)

(c) "Liquified Petroleum Gas Association." Recommended good practice rules for liquified petroleum gas piping and appliance installations in buildings. (LPGA No. 1 dated December 1950.)

Obviously, if special legislation is to be introduced for the purpose of minimizing the fire, explosion and health hazards of this product, such legislation must include provisions to deal with dangerous existing facilities, otherwise it would not be effective. The statutes should provide that the regulations shall apply to both new and existing systems but exceptions will be necessary to intelligently deal with existing installations.

ADMINISTRATION AND ENFORCEMENT

Because of the vast number of LP-Gas installations in the State of California, administration and enforcement of any effective safety program will be a sizable job. Laws and regulations are only as good as they are administered and enforced, and the effectiveness of any state law dealing with the LP-Gas safety problem will depend to a great extent upon the administration and enforcement provisions contained within the act.

Because of the highly technical nature of the LP-Gas safety problem, inspection and enforcement of the safety standards will require skilled and qualified personnel. The State cannot look to local officials for any great amount of assistance in the enforcement of State LP-Gas Safety Laws, for the reason that approximately 80 percent of the LP-Gas systems in California are domestic systems and, for the most part, are located outside of corporate cities.

The State may expect assistance from the industry in administering the laws, but this assistance would necessarily be limited. Some of the industry representatives feel that if state laws were enacted and standards were established they could aid materially in policing their own industry, but experience has indicated that self-policing programs are not too effective unless they are augmented by adequate enforcement officials.

The following administration and enforcement plans are offered as possible solutions to the LP-Gas safety problem:

Plan No. 1

That the present authority of the Division of Industrial Safety be expanded by a special statute to provide them with authority to establish safety standards and to regulate the storage, handling, transportation and use of LP-Gas, including commercial, industrial and domestic uses; that their 1951-52 Budget be augmented by a special item for the development of the necessary safety standards, and that following the completion thereof, their enforcement personnel be augmented to a point where, with the assistance of the industry itself, they could properly administer the State's LP-Gas health and safety regulations.

The provisions of the State Labor Code provide for the payment of special inspection fees on all pressure vessels, including LP-Gas tanks and containers, and if these fees were augmented by a special license or registration fee on all commercial and industrial distributors of LP-Gas and LP-Gas appliances, sufficient funds could be made available to administer the regulations.

It is estimated that to conduct the necessary research, develop the standards and hold public hearings would require approximately one year, and it is estimated that the cost of such research and study would amount to about $10,000. In view of this time element, provisions of the special act having to do with licensing, registration and enforcement of the act should not become effective until the beginning of the fiscal year following enactment of the law.

Plan No. 2

That there be created by special legislation a division or bureau with a board or commission having full authority and responsibility to administer the LP-Gas health and safety laws and regulations on the state level. The legislation should provide for:

(a) Registration and licensing of LP-Gas distributors, equipment and appliance dealers, transport vehicles, and equipment and appliance installation concerns.

(b) The development and adoption of minimum LP-Gas health and safety standards governing all phases of industrial, commercial and domestic storage, handling, transportation, distribution and use of LP-Gas.

(c) Reports by equipment and appliance dealers on all new LP-Gas system installations and reports by all LP-Gas retail dealers on the location and condition of systems serviced by them. Such reports to be on standard forms prepared by the administrative agency.

(d) The condemnation of dangerous equipment, appliances and systems after an investigation by the administrative agency and a prohibition against servicing such systems until dangerous conditions are corrected.

(e) An adequate staff to make inspections of inferior existing systems reported to the agency and to make spot checks on new installations.

This plan would contemplate maximum use of the industry in a self-policing program and should vest local officials with authority to enforce the safety standards in their respective areas.

Either of the two plans outlined above would materially reduce the fire and explosion hazard in connection with the use of LP-Gas. Since the Division of Industrial Safety in the Department of Industrial Relations has jurisdiction over the manufacture, distribution and use of pressure vessels and has authority to enforce safety orders in places of employment, Plan No. 1 would seem to be the most logical and economical Likewise, the industry representatives who were consulted on this problem have expressed a feeling that Plan No. 1 would be the most acceptable to them since Plan No. 2 would be more costly and would in all probability require a special gallonage tax on LP-Gas in order to finance the special division or agency.

The industry believes that Plan No 1 should be given a trial, and if at a later date a special division or bureau was deemed necessary, additional legislation could be submitted to further develop the safety program.

Respectfully submitted,

JOE R. YOCKERS, State Fire Marshal

Recommendation of the Governor

In accordance with Article IV, Section 34, of the Constitution, the Governor presented the following communication recommending the passage of Assembly Bill No. 38:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE
SACRAMENTO, January 17, 1951

To the Honorable Members of the Assembly
Sacramento, California

GENTLEMEN:

Assembly Bill No. 38, "An act making an appropriation for the purpose of increasing salaries of state employees, to take effect immediately,"

in my opinion constitutes an emergency bill within the meaning of that term as used in Section 34 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of California, the consideration of which should not await the final enactment of the Budget Bill

This measure makes an appropriation from the General Fund of $3,679,652 and an estimated appropriation of $939,154 from special funds to provide a one-step salary increase for state employees effective January 1, 1951. This increase has been recommended by the State Personnel Board as being equitable and justified because of increased costs of living.

I therefore recommend consideration of Assembly Bill No. 38 as an emergency measure.

Respectfully submitted,

EARL WARREN, Governor

Motion to Amend

Messrs. Fleury and Moss moved the adoption of the following amendment:

Amendment No. 1

On page 1, line 2, of the printed bill, strike out "three million six"; strike out all of line 3; and in line 4, strike out "($3,079,652)", and insert "seven million eighty-seven thousand sixty-five dollars ($7,087,065)".

ELECTION CONTESTS—No. 3986

DEAR MR. WATERS: You have asked us to examine the papers filed in the contest of the election for the seat for the Eleventh Assembly District and to advise you whether or not they state sufficient grounds for the contest.

There is no specification in the Constitution or in the statutes as to what constitutes a ground for a contest before the Legislature.

The Constitution provides that "Each house shall choose its officers and judge the qualifications, elections, and returns of its members." (Sec. 7, Art. IV, Calif. Const.) The Constitution further provides that "Each house shall determine the rule of its proceeding * * *" (Sec. 9, Art. IV, Calif. Const.)

There are no other provisions in the Constitution which operate to limit the generality of the provisions above referred to.

Each house, therefore, is the sole judge of the sufficiency of the grounds of any contest brought before it. Its discretion is not subject to control by action of the Judicial or Executive Branches of the government.

There is, therefore, no legal yardstick against which the grounds stated may be measured in order to determine their sufficiency.

We do not think that it would be appropriate to apply the same tests as are prescribed by statute for contests conducted in the courts. In the first place no statute previously enacted could bind the present House in the exercise of its constitutional prerogatives. In the second place, contests conducted pursuant to statute must follow strictly the statutory requirements (Freshour vs. Howard, 142 Cal. 501) whereas in a contest before the House there are no prescribed grounds or procedure.

If, however, the House should, in its discretion, desire to proceed by analogy from the statutory procedure there appears to be no statutory ground which covers the situation exactly but there is one which, by extension, could be adapted to it.

We will assume for the purposes of the following discussions that all of the facts represented by the petitioner are found by the House to be true.

The essence of the petitioners representations is that certain pamphlets were altered so as to indicate that a certain organization sponsored the candidacy of the person declared elected, whereas in fact the organization sponsored the candidacy of the petitioner. There is no representation that the person declared elected circulated the altered pamphlets or caused them to be circulated. It is represented, however, that such person was informed of the facts and made no public statement concerning the alteration nor any repudiation of the actions of the persons responsible therefor but continued to accept the benefits of the fraudulent representations.

This does not quite make out a case under the code provisions hereinafter discussed but the House could, in its discretion, draw something of an analogy from it.

Under Section 8511 of the Elections Code one of the grounds for contesting a general election is that the defendant (the contestee) has committed an offense against the elective franchise as defined in Chapter 3 of Division 7 of the code.

That chapter includes Section 5005 which reads:

> "5005. Every person is guilty of a misdemeanor who intentionally writes, prints, posts, or distributes, or causes to be written, printed, posted, or distributed, any circular, pamphlet, letter, or poster which is designed or intended to injure or defeat any candidate for nomination or election to any public office by reflecting upon his personal character or political action, unless there appears upon the circular, pamphlet, letter, or poster, in a conspicuous place, either:
> "(a) The name of the chairman and secretary or the names of two officers at least of the political or other organization issuing it.
> "(b) The name and residence, with the street and number thereof, if any, of some voter of this State, who is responsible therefor."

The circulation of the altered pamphlet could be considered as coming within the purview of this section because the pamphlet as altered did not comply with subdivisions (a) or (b). The names shown in the pamphlet were of those who were responsible for it in its original form. As altered it became a different document and there is nothing to show who was responsible for the document.

The code section applies to any person who does the things mentioned or causes them to be done. All that is represented is that the person declared elected stood by while the things were being done and took whatever benefits resulted. This is not quite the same thing but the House, in its discretion, could determine that such passive acquiescence in the wrongdoing was equivalent to actual participation.

The code section provides that the writing must be designed or intended to injure or defeat the candidate by reflecting on his personal character or "political action." Any reflection on the petitioner's personal character appears somewhat remote. What constitutes a reflection upon "his political action" is somewhat obscure. If the House pursues the analogy it could interpret the provision as it saw fit.

The House could take the view that the implication from the altered pamphlet was that petitioner originally had the support of the organization in question, as evidenced by the printing of his name on the original pamphlets, and that after such printing he had lost such support, as evidenced by the alterations. It could infer that such putative loss of support resulted from some political action which affronted the organization.

As pointed out above the analogy is far from perfect. However, the House need not proceed by analogy and if it chooses to do so it can draw any analogy it chooses, regardless of how exact or remote it may be.

There seems to be no question whatever that the power of the House to judge the qualifications and election of its members is one which is to be exercised by it solely at its discretion. Only yesterday, January 10, 1951, the Supreme Court of California reiterated this principle in the case entitled "In the Matter of the Contest of the Nomination of Patrick D. McGee."

CONTESTED ELECTION OF ASSEMBLY MEMBER—No. 3701

DEAR MR. WATERS: Pursuant to your request we enclose a memorandum regarding contested elections of Members of the Assembly.

Very truly yours,

RALPH N. KLEPS, Legislative Counsel
By LAWRENCE G. ALLYN, Deputy

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, January 6, 1951

PROCEDURE BY THE ASSEMBLY TO DETERMINE ELECTION CONTEST

Section 7 of Article IV of the Constitution provides in part that each house shall be judge of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its members, and Section 9 of Article IV provides that each house shall determine the rules of its proceeding.

In view of these constitutional provisions the question whether a person holding a certificate of election as a Member of the Assembly is entitled to a seat in that body and the manner in which that question is to be determined by the body is left entirely to the will of the House as expressed by the actions of a majority thereof.

The provisions of the Government Code relating to the manner of organization of the Assembly are, we believe, merely directory and do not control the actions of the Assembly once the members have qualified by taking their oaths of office. Also the legislative precedents established heretofore serve only as guideposts and are not binding as to future actions.

The right to a seat in the Assembly of a person holding a certificate of election as a member may be challenged in any manner in which a question may be brought to vote by that body under the rules of parliamentary procedure. When such situations have arisen in the past it has been the practice to adopt special rules for consideration of the question.

The latest election contest in either house was in the Senate in 1937. The proposed rules governing the trial of the contest appear commencing on page 16 of the Senate Journal for January 4, 1937. Briefly, the rules provided for the appointment of a committee to take testimony and prescribed the procedure to be followed by the committee, and for a report of the findings and conclusions of the committee to the house. This report was then to be adopted or rejected by the house by majority vote and provision was made that the vote of a member whose right to a seat was challenged should not be counted in connection therewith. Provision was made permitting the contestee to take his oath which was declared to be without prejudice to the rights of the contestant.

At that time there were certain provisions in the Political Code regarding contests of election of Members of the Legislature. Those provisions, however, were repealed at the 1937 Session The only relevant statutory provision in the present law appears to be Section 9021 of the Government Code which provides that a certificate of election is prima facie evidence of the right to membership.

See also the memorandum from the Legislative Counsel regarding election contests printed in the 1937 Senate Journal commencing on page 18.

It appears to be the general parliamentary practice as well as the practice in the houses in California to permit the contestee to take the oath of office regardless of whether he may later be determined not entitled to a seat. However, this also is a matter to be determined by the House. Further, even though the House refused to permit the contestee to take the oath in its presence this would not prevent him from taking it elsewhere before any authorized officer.

While the precedents support the practice of permitting the contestee to take the oath and thereafter to sit and act as a member and to vote on all matters except those pertaining to the contest, we think it is entirely within the discretion of the House to what extent it may elect to restrict the powers of the contestee prior to determination of the contest. We believe the House could go so far as to exclude the contestee from the floor entirely until the contest is determined if it should adopt a motion to that effect.

POWER OF ASSEMBLY WITH RESPECT TO ELECTIONS AND QUALIFICATIONS OF MEMBERS—No. 3704

DEAR MR. WATERS: You have asked us to inform you as to the circumstances under which the Assembly may refuse to seat a member.

Section 7 of Article IV of the Constitution provides that each house shall "judge of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its members." This provision vests each house with the exclusive power to determine these matters. (Allen vs. Lelande, 164 Cal. 56).

It is impossible in the time allotted to us to give a comprehensive answer as to all the cases which have, or properly may, present facts sufficient to justify the exercise by a legislative body of its exclusive power to refuse to seat, or to expel, a member.

What constitutes ground for removal or suspension or refusal to seat a Member of the Assembly in any given case is for that body to decide. It is not a matter for inquiry on the part of the Judicial Department and judicial decisions do not furnish a guide. In deciding such a question it is the practice of a legislative body to consider what cases and under what circumstances the same or other legislative bodies have acted.

The case of French vs. Senate, 146 Cal. 604, reveals that the Senate had exercised its power to expel a member where it found that the member had accepted bribes to influence his vote.

While not revealing legislative action, the case of Allen vs. Lelande, 164 Cal. 56, indicates the belief of the Judiciary that the Assembly should determine election contests based on the claim that a member did not meet the requirements of Section 7 of Article IV of the Constitution which provides the member must have resided in the district one year next before his election.

Any case where it is alleged that the member's conduct has disqualified him from holding public office by virtue of a provision of the Constitution (see, for example, Art. IV, Sec. 35; Art. IV, Sec. 19) or by virtue of any statute (see, for example, Government Code Sections 1021, 1023) would be a case in which the Assembly could properly consider exercising its exclusive power to judge its members.

Numerous instances have arisen in the House of Representatives of the United States Congress wherein the right of a member to a seat, because of matters relating to elections, has been considered.

Random examples are contests on the ground: That the member elected had shown disloyalty by wearing the Confederate Army uniform (Hinds, Precedents of the House of Representatives, Vol. 1, Sec. 335); that the election was invalid because of violence in connection with the elections, same, Vol. 1, Sec. 329, 331); that the member was below the age prescribed by the Constitution (same, Vol. 1, Sec. 418); that the member elect did not meet the residence requirements of the Constitution (same, Vol. 1, Sec. 432, 438); that the member held an inconsistent office (same, Vol. 1, Sec. 506); that election irregularities, including votes cast by disqualified persons were present in the election of the member (same, Vol. 2, Sec. 859); that there was fraud in the election return (same, Vol. 2, Sec. 860).

For briefs of numerous other contested election cases considered by the House, see Hinds, Precedents of the House of Representatives, Vol. 1, Sec. 309-755; Vol. 2, Sec. 845-1135.

Contest of Election of Member of Assembly—No. 3842

DEAR MR. WATERS: You have asked whether there is any time limitation upon presentation of a petition relating to the propriety of the seating of a Member of the Assembly and as to the power of the Assembly to act on such a petition.

It is our opinion that there is no limitation upon the power of the Assembly to receive such a petition and to act upon it if it elects to do so.

The power of the Assembly to determine the election and qualification of its own members is vested in that body by the Constitution without limitation or restriction. We find nothing in the Constitution that purports to limit the time within which that body may act to determine this question.

While we have not been able, in the time available to do any extended research, we have found a statement in 49 American Jurisprudence at pages 251 and 252 that the power of a house to judge of the election and qualifications of its members is not exhausted when once it has been exercised and a member admitted to his seat; it is, on the contrary, a continuous power, and runs through the entire term. At any time, and at all times during the term of office, each house is empowered to pass on the present qualifications of its own members (citing State vs. Gilmore, 20 Kansas 551 27 Am. Rep. 189). We believe this to be a correct statement of the law.

Printing of Amendments

11. All bills amended by either house shall be immediately reprinted; in the case new matter is added by the amendment such new matter shall be printed in italics in the printed bill, and in the case of matter being omitted, the matter to be omitted shall be printed in strikeout type. The innumerable caravan that moves
To that mysterious realm where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
We go, not like the quarry slave at night
Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust."

So create within us clean hearts and renew within us right spirits, that our lives and service may be fitted for eternity.

In our Redeemer's name

—AMEN.
