Recommendation of the Governor

In accordance with Article IV, Section 34, of the Constitution, the Governor presented the following communication recommending the passage of Assembly Bill No. 1878:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA

GOVERNOR'S OFFICE, SACRAMENTO, January 19, 1951

To the Honorable Members of the Assembly
Sacramento, California

GENTLEMEN:

Assembly Bill No. 1878, "An act relating to revenues from tide and submerged lands, including provisions to establish a special deposit fund in the State Treasury for the deposit of revenues from tide and submerged lands, providing for the transfer thereof, and making an appropriation, declaring the urgency thereof, to take effect immediately," in my opinion constitutes an emergency bill within the meaning of that term as used in Section 34 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of California, the consideration of which should not await the final enactment of the Budget Bill

Approval of this measure at this time is necessary to continue uninterrupted development and production of oil and gas from the tide and submerged lands along the Coast of California until final adjudication of the issues now pending in the United States Supreme Court in the case of United States vs California.

I therefore recommend consideration of Assembly Bill 1878 as an emergency measure.

Respectfully submitted,

EARL WARREN, Governor

PRELIMINARY REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

December 15, 1950

Speaker of the Assembly
California Legislature
Sacramento, California

Pursuant to House Resolution No. 121, passed at the 1949 Regular Session of the California Legislature, the Assembly Committee on Public Lands herewith submits a brief initial report covering its findings and recommendations.

In view of the similar work carried on by the Senate Committee on Public Lands headed by Senator Edwin J. Regan, the committee worked in close cooperation with the committee to avoid, if possible, a duplication of effort.

The committee attended two hearings held jointly with the Senate Committee on Public Lands, one in Sacramento and one in Los Angeles, and other hearings in Alturas and Roseville.

Grateful acknowledgement is made of the many federal, state, and local officials and private organizations who so generously provided factual information.

Respectfully submitted,

LLOYD W. LOWREY, Chairman
MARVIN SHERWIN
FRANCIS C. LINDSAY

STATE PROPRIETARY LANDS

As a beginning, an attempt was made to inventory the state proprietary lands The method used was to procure from agencies of the State a list of the lands under their jurisdiction and compare and reconcile it with the records of the Land Sales and Records Section, Division of State Lands. Five agencies were checked in this manner. It was found, that in those agencies maintaining what were considered by the committee's consultant as good records, a reconciliation was not possible.

We do believe the records of the Land Sales and Records Section of the Division of State Lands to be accurate as to lands owned by the State in fee at this date However, as the information recorded is, for the most part, taken from the original deed alone as it passes through this office and the fact that these deeds or decrees of condemnation alone do not always contain information regarding the acreage, cost to the State and valuation, a statistical inventory as to total acreage and value of property owned by the State at this time is an impossibility. Whether these records will remain correct in the future depends entirely on the routing of information on land transactions through this section. Failure to reconcile departmental land records with those of the Division of State Lands was usually due to lack of information on land exchanges between state agencies and disposals of land without the knowledge of that office In two instances agencies claimed land for which the Division of State Lands could find no record.

The difficulty of gathering records of state proprietary lands from the agencies was for the most part due to the different manner or form of real property accountability exercised in each department. This one fact, we believe, should be ample proof of the need of a state-wide property accountability system of forms and reports It is also strongly felt that a loose-leaf manual of procedures with respect to all public land (except tax-deeded and highway land) transactions, such as acquisition, disposal, exchange between departments, leasing or renting in or out, routing of correspondence and recordation, should be set up, and that control of all these functions be placed in a division of the State Government. This question requires further study to arrive at a sound solution and it is the committee's intent to do so if continued by the Legislature.

It was noted with some concern that the original deeds upon transmittal to the Secretary of State for filing are sometimes held in the archive section for periods up to nine months before they are filed. A discussion of this problem with the Archivist revealed that it was due to a shortage of help of which he stated the Secretary of State was aware. It is recommended a study of the work load, procedures, and personnel of this section of the Secretary of State's Office be made by the Business Management Section of the Division of Budgets and Accounts of the Department of Finance to determine the corrective measures and procedures to follow to remedy this situation

With respect to the management and use of state proprietary land and school lands, it was found that of the five agencies studied, three did not have a surplus or excess property disposal plan or recurring survey of a nature to reveal surplus or excess real property that might be returned to private ownership. The lack of such plans indicates need for further study of all other agencies in this respect by the committee. We believe each department exercising jurisdiction over proprietary lands should make such a survey biannually, and then follow up with the necessary action to return those properties or portions of properties found in excess of foreseeable use to private ownership and the tax rolls at the earliest opportunity. It was noted that in most cases of trespassing on school lands of the State, the matter is brought to the attention of the Division of State Lands by cooperative outside sources. It is recognized that the division does not have the personnel to police the variously located parcels of school lands in the State Each report of trespass is investigated and claims for rental or damages are pressed if conditions warrant. It is further understood that considerable recovery of moneys due the State may be expected in the form of leases, etc., from users of the inland water tide and submerged lands, and navigable rivers and sloughs such as San Francisco Bay, Humboldt Bay and the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta. This matter, too, will be the subject of further study.

The authorization under the Public Resources Code that permits the State Land Commission to operate and make sales to individuals of state school lands in accordance with the rules and regulations of the commission and at a price fixed by the commission results in a situation that leaves personnel of that division open to criticism in the consummation of sales where no bids are requested but negotiations are held with the buyer alone.

This is particularly so when the individual who makes the appraisal also handles most of the negotiating and in addition makes recommendations to the commission with respect to the sale.

It would appear on the surface, that to relieve and protect the personnel of the division from any criticism, it might be well to have all land appraisals made by another state agency. This question will receive additional study by the committee if it is continued.

In order to reduce the removal of additional lands from the tax rolls for recreational purposes, we have been assured that, if the United States Forest Service is approached by state officials, long term leases may be obtained on recreational areas within the national forests for development and administration by the State.

TAX-DEEDED LANDS

The management and use of tax-deeded lands were spot checked and it appeared that the Division of Tax-Deeded Lands of the Controller's Office is doing a satisfactory job within their personnel limitations as determined from inspection of the Sacramento office and the field offices at Los Angeles and Ventura. The redemption and return of delinquent properties to the tax rolls prior to deed to the State is one of the functions of this office, and this they are able to do in the majority of cases by proper notification of the property owner. Failing this, an effort is made to interest the adjoining property owner to make application for sale at public auction or lease the property. From this point onward, the return of the property to the tax rolls is the responsibility of the local tax collector. Because of the large number of parcels involved, control with respect to trespassers on unimproved tax-deeded property considering the small number of personnel administering this property, is in the same position as the Division of State Lands with respect to school lands. Personnel of the Tax-Deeded Land Division maintain contact and cooperation with the local county tax officials. Tax-deeded lands have been on the decline for at least seven years as demonstrated by the reduction of rentals of improved tax-deeded property in Los Angeles County. This year there are but eight rentals while at one time there were over four hundred such rentals.

From a state-wide questionnaire to the tax collectors of the 58 counties, sufficient replies were received to indicate that certain counties are making determined efforts to return tax-deeded properties to the rolls through tax collector initiated public auctions, using news stories and mailing lists to promote and stimulate interest while others await applications to prompt sales. It is realized that in some instances the actions or restrictions placed by the county boards of supervisors on tax collectors in the form of minimum bids and refusal to approve sales hinder the return of some of these properties to the rolls and that is their prerogative. The ultimate responsibility for the return of tax-deeded property to the rolls rests with the local county officials, and they are the recipients of the benefits derived therefrom. We recommend that such officials diligently pursue the matter of initiating sales and promoting interest in such sales to the ultimate end that more property is returned to the tax rolls. It is further recommended, that if an improvement in the situation regarding tax collector initiated sales is not found in one or two years' time, that consideration be given to legislation requiring each county to hold at least one public auction of the tax-deeded properties each year.

This division has a manual of procedure with respect to handling of repetitive transactions by the field agents, but a need was seen for a manual of office procedure for use by the clerical staff of the field branches as these clerical personnel must be unsupervised during the agent's absence in the field and consequently need a guide to refer to.

HIGHWAY LANDS

The public lands under jurisdiction of the Division of Highways were examined from the management, use an inventory viewpoint.

The inventory was dropped almost immediately as the time and services of individuals involved would be too costly to serve any purpose. An estimate received of the number of acres occupied by the highways of the State based on the linear miles (about 14,000), with an average right-of-way width of 100 feet, was 170,000 acres.

The administration as to records, titles, and disposals of excess property appeared satisfactory from a spot check made at the Los Angeles and San Luis Obispo Rights of Way Offices. The detailed manual prepared by the Rights of Way Section of the Division of Highways in 1950 is a well-planned manual of procedures with respect to all types of land transactions of the Rights of Way Section. Our only suggestion at this time would be that the manual should have been printed in loose leaf form to permit ease of correction without necessity of reprinting the entire manual.

FEDERAL LANDS

Federal ownership in the State of California has increased from 41,759,984 acres in 1938 to 47,005,789 in 1947 from the most reliable and recent figures we would find. This increase was due to acquisitions by the Defense Department, Federal Housing Authority, U. S. Forest Service, Bureau of Reclamation, National Park Service, Soil Conservation Service, and others. Many county officials have expressed concern over the reduction of the tax base by removal from private ownership by purchase, condemnation, or exchange of large areas. The County of Del Norte with 35 percent of its total area under private ownership is especially hard pressed in relation to sufficient tax returns from that land to support and operate its schools (Appendix A). Inyo County with only 4.32 percent of her lands remaining in private ownership, and in a similar position with respect to her schools, demonstrates the ultimate impact that may be expected without some curb on acquisitions by public agencies. The map or plat prepared by Inyo County (Appendix B) in color and reproduced here in black and white is startingly effective in its presentation and if the committee is continued, we plan to obtain a similar plat or map showing public ownership from each of the remaining 57 counties. This reduction of the tax base and the hardships caused thereby are particularly true when the services provided by county governments must be increased, without reimbursement, to carry out their responsibilities that follow with the increase in population, both permanent and transient. These added costs must be borne by the remaining land holders (see Appendices C and E). The Federal Government now owns 46 percent of the total area of the State. The State's own holdings are estimated to be about 3.5 percent. This situation is similar to that in each of the eleven western states in which the Federal Government has large holdings (see Appendix F).

The Federal Government, through its agencies, is continuing to acquire more property through condemnation, purchases, and exchanges Criticism of the federal agencies on the subject of both acquisition, management and use policies have been heard by this committee.

With respect to management, the protests heard from the sheep raisers and cattlemen regarding the limitations placed on the number of head of stock that may be grazed on ranges administered by the U. S. Forest Service by grazing permit have been numerous. It was pointed out by them that these limitations are considered to be a major factor in the over-all reduction of the numbers of sheep and cattle raised in this State.

With respect to acquisitions, the property owner's right to question the reasoning behind the determination that his entire property should be condemned when he can see no obvious need by the government for the whole parcel even though he is willing to waive severance damages to retain a small portion of his original holding has been disregarded This has occurred in land acquisitions above the "take line" established around storage pools of dams, such as Folsom Dam Another question that arises is the proper use of land after acquisition This applies in those cases of acquiring acreages for wildlife reserves that have been used for the production of foodstuffs and the acquisition of other agriculture lands for military bases and then not using all such lands for that purpose (see Appendix D). The latter two policies result in threefold damages to the state economics—first, the removal of land from the tax rolls, and second, the removal of agricultural lands from that use, and third, the unestimated loss of the foodstuffs those lands would produce for the State and Nation. Such policies are questionable at all times but especially so during this period of national emergency. In each of the above circumstances the rights of the individual land holder has been disregarded once the decision to acquire has been made by federal officials. He has no recourse to law to question the decision with respect to the reasoning behind it as to the amount of land to be taken, or the use to which it may be finally put, but must be satisfied with the condemnation suit which follows and determines the public use intended and the value which he shall receive for his property. We hold that these citizens in such circumstances should be guaranteed recourse to law.

Forest exchanges account for a proportion of the increase in federally owned lands. These exchanges affect the tax bases of the county governments by the Forest Service exchanging value of stumpage in national forests for a corresponding value in acreage of suitable land, adjacent to or within the boundaries of national forests, belonging to or acquired for that purpose by private individuals (see Appendix E). These exchanges, we were informed, have been consummated only with the approval of the officials of the county concerned since April 1, 1943.

We hold that the State Government should be required by law to take an active protective interest in her citizen's rights by requiring a public hearing by the State on the occasion of each acquisition by the State to give each citizen affected an opportunity to voice his approval or disapproval and his basis therefor and then intercede in behalf of those who may have just cause for complaint. More important, a federal law guaranteeing similar hearings be held, with proper notification of state officials and interested parties, prior to all acquisitions by any agency of the Federal Government is considered necessary.

Because the 11 western states with large percentages of federally owned properties, ranging from 35 percent to 84 percent of their total areas, (see Appendix G) must have common problems with respect to federal ownership which have been stated herein, we recommend that committees of the legislative bodies of those states should meet jointly so as to give the necessary added weight by agreement on those questions related to "in lieu tax payments" or other just reimbursement and such other corrective measures that they may feel necessary to correct some of the abuses and harmful effects of federal ownership. After such agreement and further approval by the legislative bodies of their respective states, they could then approach the National Congress in a body with a united purpose. We feel this concerted action would carry enough weight to gain the relief that is so necessary.

We are, at present, making the plan and laying the groundwork, as necessary, to bring about this proposed joint meeting.

APPENDIX A

Excerpts From the Remarks of Mr. Charles A. Thunen, Del Norte County Representative at Joint Hearing on October 27, 1950, at Sacramento

"I'd like to present a few figures to show the financial distress of Del Norte County due to loss of tax base by lands being sold to the state and federal government. I have a map here which shows in the shaded area state and federal lands; the white area is private property, which is assessed—that is very close to 35 percent. About 65 percent of the land is in the hands of the state and federal government."

"Now, the total value of the county, including land, improvements and personal property, in 1931-32 was $11,187,831 In that year the total general county tax was two hundred seventy-nine thirty-eight dollars and eighty-eight cents; and the amount for schools was thirty-two thousand, ninety-five dollars and seventy-five cents, slightly above 10 percent. I'm trying to develop a picture and show the problems of the schools in Del Norte County because its a very pressing problem and of course I'm vitally interested in schools.

The next year the general tax in Del Norte County was $190,490.35, the school tax was $17,193. When I say school tax I mean the tax for all the schools in the county, the high school and all the elementary schools. For 10 or 12 years the amount for the general county business and schools ran roughly the same, the amounts for schools running around 10-15 percent.

Now, to go back to the loss in value, I repeat again that in 1931-32 the land alone was assessed at $9,881,005. By 1942-43 this valuation had dropped to $3,545,920, representing a difference of $6,336,085. That loss was due to the sale of timber to the State and Federal Government. Since then, as pointed out, the $3,545,000 has increased to $5,714,335. Now this is just the land alone, and that increase is due to increase in values, not to new land—we haven't received any new land, we've lost more. Assuming that the $6,000,000 worth increase in value at the same rate, and it is the choice land of the county and no doubt would appreciate, in that ratio it would now be worth more than the total assessed valuation of the county, which today is $9,010,194. Now, that's not the land alone, that's the total including improvements and personal property.

I'd like to read the amount of taxes for the schools for the past five years. Beginning in 1947-48 the total was $93,699 07; '48-49, $121,127; 1949-50, $141,959.01; 1950-51, $164,590. For the past five years the amount for schools is substantially above half the total for the county. And for the year 1950-51 the $164,590 is not sufficient for the schools—its that figure because all the schools have reached their legal maximum tax rate, some of them have gone over by election. If the schools had what it, what they needed to run, that figure would be still larger. I think these figures show conclusively that the real property in Del Norte County cannot continue to support the schools and local government, its impossible Now, we're going to have to find another source of money in order to keep on running the schools, even without building new buildings or making improvements which are necessary. Now, I think that the State should pay money in lieu of taxes to localities where state parks are located, and I think they should do that, of course, in Del Norte County. I also think the Federal Government should pay money in lieu of taxes where federal land is located. And it seems to me that if the State would realize that and do so it would be a strong argument for the Federal Government following suit. And I believe if the State could pass such a law and do that, that laws could be passed so that if further land is taken off the state tax rolls, it would have to be done so with the understanding that the agency, federal or state, would pay money to the locality in lieu of taxes. Now that is the proposition from Del Norte County."

APPENDIX B

Excerpts From the Remarks of Mr. Stewart R. Cox, Assessor and Tax Collector of Inyo County at the Joint Hearing in Los Angeles on December 4, 1950

"During recent years the report on the amount of tax exempt lands in Inyo County has been variously reported as from 69 percent to 85 percent. And as we do not entirely agree with these figures I have prepared this plat of Inyo County as visual evidence of the way we are affected by public ownerships of lands.

The tan section (2) in the center there is the Death Valley National Monument, and was withdrawn some years ago, and the extent of that is 1,750,000 acres.

The violet color (1) there is unapportioned public domain and represents 2,000,000 acres.

The dark brown (3) is lands administered under the Taylor Grazing Act and amounts to about 700,000 acres. Actually it is around 1,200,000 but there is some of that which is included in other things of which I am going to talk about.

The green (4) is the Forest Service and that is 768,000 acres.

The blue (5) is the most recent acquisition by the government and represents the land withdrawn for the U. S. Naval Ordnance Test Station at Inyo-Kern. That is 500,000 acres.

The yellow is the Owens Lake, the acreage I'm not certain about; but it is administered by the State.

The red (6) which borders the white are lands which were withdrawn under the Swing Bill, I believe it was 1931, and subsequent Executive Orders. That is in the neighborhood of 395,000 acres.

Now, the red (6)—that borders the white, is lands withdrawn for the benefit of the City of Los Angeles and the protection of their water flow to Los Angeles.

The white (7) represents the lands that we assess and you see them spotted here and there. This map is not exactly correct because I didn't have the time to plot all the state sections, etc., in there. But the state sections amount to 115,000 acres. We assess 255,600, tax-deeded lands 26,900. Now in that white area, which is all we assess, the City of Los Angeles owns some 37,500 acres which are exempt under the provisions of Section I, Article 13, of the State Constitution.

Those little black dots are lands that were recently acquired to the Indian Service and represents some of the very finest land that we have in the county.

Now it is easy to see by that how Inyo County is restricted from any possible broadening of its tax base with the possible exception of the discovery of oil in the county which, according to oil men, is quite remote The City of Los Angeles has—we have them assessed with 191,651 acres, and of that, of course, none of it can possibly be returned to what we call private ownership, because, of course, they can't afford to turn it loose without water."

"Two hundred fifty-four thousand, three hundred sixty-one acres is our total assessed value So actually we have 62,700 acres upon which we can expect expansion. As you know, any improvements that are built by the City of Los Angeles after the acquisition of the land is not taxable.

And that is our picture. You can see that our school rates are all up to the maximum and have been for quite some time.

The withdrawn land there, the red, is for the most part, pretty fair land and it has been withdrawn from all types of entry and we have had some trouble with miners who wish to mine nonmetallics in the region and they are for the most part stopped from doing it in that area.

In the blue, the upper 12 miles, I think, or 18 miles has been moved back three miles recently to allow people to go in there and mine pumice, etc., I've not been notified of that, but it's an actual fact.

We have another problem that's beginning to show its face and that is on the left hand corner in the Forest Service, if you get close to that map, you'll see that we have dozens and dozens of creeks coming down from the mountains and recently the State has been interested in the sanitation of this area. The State, that is, the Forest Service rather, cannot take care of the sanitation problems that arise, the government, so far, has not done anything about it, so if it's up to the county to patrol hundreds of miles of creeks and place the sanitary facilities in there to take care of approximately 1,000,000 tourists a year, it's going to pose quite a problem to our county."

95.68 percent of this county is publicly owned.

APPENDIX C

Statement of J. H. Hanks, Assessor of Kern County, to the California Legislature Senate Interim Committee and Assembly Committee on Public Lands at a Joint Hearing Held in Los Angeles, California, on December 5, 1950

The Kern County area consists of approximately 5,121,920 acres, of which 1,416,300 acres or 27.65 percent are owned or controlled by the Federal or State Governments and therefore are exempt from taxation by the county. This is an increase of approximately 108,000 acres or 2.65 percent since a survey was made in July of 1947. While this increase may appear to be insignificant, may it be emphasized that this increase has occurred even though the Federal Government has turned back to the county several areas used for airfields during World War II: Gardner Field, Taft; Minter Field, Lerdo; and auxiliary fields. Also no attempt was made to include land deeded to the State after taxes became delinquent. There are additional specific problems concerning government-owned or controlled land in Kern County which I would like to cite as follows:

A. Delano Area

1. The transfer of land and existing improvements from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the United States of America, such as the short wave radio station located in Section 16, Township 25, Range 25, near Delano, operated for the United States State Department, by the Columbia Broadcasting Company, which resulted in the removal of this property from the assessment rolls and the loss of $115,830 in assessed valuation.

2. The Alpaugh Irrigation District owns 1,708 acres of land in the Pondham School District in Townships 25 S. and 26 S., Range 23 E., M. D. B. M., from which they annually pump 18,000 acre-feet more than the water used on the land for irrigation This 18,000 acre-feet of excess water is delivered by canal to other lands of the district in and around Alpaugh in Tulare County. In 1947 the State Legislature passed an act permitting an irrigation district to annex land not contiguous to the district by a mere vote of the board of directors. As a result, the noncontinguous land in Kern County was voted into the district by the directors of the Alpaugh Irrigation District and the Pondham School District lost a minimum of $70,000 in assessed valuation. It is hard to understand how and why such a district is allowed to annex land without either consulting or notifying the officials of the county concerned. The Pondham School District can ill afford to lose this valuation and is in danger of losing even more value as a result of the lowering of the water table on lands surrounding the area in Kern County from which the Alpaugh Irrigation District is pumping water. The original wells flowed and now pump from 120 to 150 feet Over a period of years the continued removal of an excessive amount of water for use on land of poorer quality in another county cannot have any other effect than the lowering of the value of the land in Kern County due to lack of water or increased pumping costs.

B. Naval Petroleum Reserves

1. While there are two Naval Petroleum Reserves in Kern County, only Naval Petroleum Reserve No. 1, Elk Hills, is of immediate consequence due to the fact that it is entirely government controlled. Naval Petroleum Reserve No. 2, Buena Vista Hills, is leased by private operators and Kern County derives revenue from mineral rights thereon.

The Elk Hills Reserve consists of 43,815 acres as shown on the map in Township 30, Range 23; Township 30, Range 24; Township 31, Range 23; and Township 31, Range 24. In 1948 the Department of Interior proposed to enlarge the reserve by some 6,800 acres, of which 4,320 acres are privately owned as shown in pink on the map.

The county furnishes many services to the Elk Hills area in that it maintains radio cars, deputies, and constables in the communities surrounding the reserve who in time of emergency assist in patrolling this property. The county fire department is of such a caliber that the Navy found that it would not be necessary to maintain a full scale fire protection system since they considered the coverage afforded by the county adequate, even during war years. There is a minimum of 29 miles of county maintained road giving access to the reserve from Taft, Buttonwillow, McKittrick and Bakersfield. The average maintenance cost is $600 per mile per year depending upon the terrain. In addition, county equipment is available and has been used by the Navy on roads within the reserve. Little flood control work is done in the reserve which results in considerable damage to county roads when there are heavy rains. These roads must be repaired so that access to the reserve is not blocked to fire, police, or first-aid equipment.

An added burden is placed upon all services rendered by the county due to the fact that additional families must be accommodated as a result of the personnel which operates and maintains the Naval Petroleum Reserve.

C. Muroc Air Base

1. Several hundred thousand acres are included in Muroc Air Base and further acquisition is now under way. In this district, according to the present agreement between the Federal and State Governments, the State has relinquished jurisdiction and this land has been removed from the county tax rolls, including improvements and personal property. An extensive housing project is included in the land taken for the base and a sever load is placed on the private owners in this district to support increased enrollment in schools, maintenance of roads, protection to property and persons, and general county government costs.

D. Inyokern Naval Ordnance Testing Station

1. Inyokern Naval Ordnance Testing Station resembles Muroc Air Base except full rights have not been relinquished by the State and personal property of civilian personnel living at the station is assessed. However, the loss of several hundred thousand acres of land in a normally impoverished area has placed an extremely heavy tax load on the private owners.

E. State-owned Lands

1. The State of California owns school land and tax deeded land in various areas throughout Kern County. In the desert region private owners are able to lease this land for a very nominal rental, which rental is much less than the taxes they would pay on similar land at present tax rates even though the assessments are at a minimum. This condition is aggravated by the withdrawal of lands, such as was cited in C. and D. preceding.

F. Federal Lands

1. The Taylor Grazing Act makes it more economical for cattle and sheep men to graze livestock, at a per head rental, than to own similar land on which they must pay taxes.

2 Grazing land in the national forests creates the same problem as the Taylor Grazing Act.

3. The Department of Interior through the Central Valley Project has acquired land for the Friant-Kern Canal causing a loss of several thousand dollars in assessments.

4. The United States Army Engineers have acquired several thousand acres of land and the townsites of Isabella and Kernville to construct the Isabella Dam and impound the flood waters of the Kern River. This has resulted in a serious loss of valuation to the Kernville and South Fork Union School Districts.

In conclusion, it is readily apparent that where a majority of the land is government owned or controlled a heavier load is carried by private property owners as they must support county activities which benefit the residents and installations in the exempt areas as well. If the revenue derived from federal and stated owned lands were turned over to the county for maintenance of county government and schools in the distressed areas, the tax load on private owners would be eased and there would be greater incentive for the development of these areas by private owners.

Respectfully submitted,

J. H. HANKS
Assessor, Kern County

APPENDIX D

Testimony for Joint Hearing of the Senate and Assembly Interim Committees on Public Lands, Los Angeles, California, December 4, 1950

My name is Paul Aurignac. I am a farmer by occupation, raising primarily cattle and grain at my home near San Ardo in Monterey County. I am a member of the Wild Game and Public Lands Use Committee of the California Farm Bureau Federation, and on that committee I represent the Central California Coastal Counties of San Mateo, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, San Benito, Monterey, and San Luis Obispo.

Our committee has cooperated with sportsmens' groups and state and federal agencies, and one of our main purposes is to seek a better use of public lands in the State of California Much public land is not now used to its full effectiveness. For example, although steps are being taken to acquire a 12,000 tract in the San Joaquin Valley for a game management area and public hunting grounds, it is the belief of our committee that the land that has already been acquired by the State Wildlife Conservation Board and the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service is ample to provide resting grounds for the Pacific Coast Waterfowl Flyway. The land previously acquired by these agencies could be more fully developed to provide a maximum of feed and shelter.

We urge more effective use of public lands for the reason that whenever a government agency, whether it be county, state, or federal, acquires privately owned lands, they become tax free and therefore deplete the taxable resources of the county in which the acquisitions are made.

To illustrate this loss of tax revenue, take the case of Monterey County. Since 1939, approximately 175,000 acres were acquired by the United States Government in the County of Monterey with an assessed valuation of roughly $2,000,000. It is estimated that the tax revenue lost for the current year alone amounts to approximately $75,000. This is verified by Exhibit "A" which is attached.

Therefore, in keeping with the policy of the California Farm Bureau Federation established in 1948 at their annual meeting, and reaffirmed by our committee, we oppose in general the acquisition and retention of productive agricultural and range lands by any government, except during emergencies or in unusual cases, feeling that suitable nonproductive lands are most usually available.

We request the return of such lands, now held by the Federal Government, to private ownership and operation with as little delay as possible whenever it will not jeopardize our national defense. We have a flagrant case in Monterey County of the Federal Government acquiring and holding productive agricultural land during the last war, despite the fact that during negotiations for transfer of title to the land, it was represented that upon cessation of hostilities, the land would be restored to farming use and preference would, of course, be given to former owners. We submit in evidence of this case a letter marked Exhibit "B" from the B. F. Porter Estate which we believe is self-explanatory. We do believe that the major portion of that land could be returned to its previous owner without impeding the administration and functions of Camp Roberts.

At the present time the State of California and the Federal Government own nearly one-third of Monterey County's 2,200,000 acres; taking the State of California as a whole, 52 percent of the total area of 100,000,000 acres are under title to the State and Federal Governments. Each acquisition by these bodies means tax-free areas for them and higher taxes for the balance of us. For how long is further acquisition of private lands to go on unrestrained?

To conclude, we feel (1) that further prospective acquisitions of private lands by the Federal, State, or county Governments should be first taken up with local civic groups and then with the community in general; and (2) we request the Interim Committees on Public Lands to do all in their power to assist in securing the release of government owned lands to private ownership whenever it will not jeopardize the national defense.

I wish to thank the joint committees for granting me the privilege of making a presentation today.

58 SUTTER STREET, SAN FRANCISCO 4, November 29, 1950

Mr. R. S. McCandliss, Executive Secretary
Monterey County Farm Bureau
126 Lincoln Avenue
Salinas, California

DEAR MR. MCCANDLISS: Answering your letter of November 27 regarding our experience in a case where the U. S. Government has acquired land and not returned it to farmers, be advised that the Government acquired something over 8,000 acres under lease the early stages of the last war.

This property is known as the East Garrison of Camp Roberts, separated from Camp Roberts by a highway, a railroad, and the Salinas River. After leasing for a year or more, it was decided by the Government that they should acquire fee title to the land and, after considerable negotiations, they purchased at a very low figure something over 6,000 acres from this company. Of this tract, some 400 to 500 acres were improved by construction of barracks, machine shops, parade grounds, etc.

At all times during negotiations, it was represented that upon cessation of hostilities, the land would be restored to farming use and preference would, of course, be given to former owners. While the improved area would be of no value to the former owner, we have made long and continued attempts to re-acquire the remaining area, but have not met with success. It is our sincere belief that the Government does not need this area, considering enormous acreage in Camp Roberts proper and Hunter Liggett. It is a fact that during the past war very little use was made of the land acquired from us, with the exception of the improved or cantonment area.

I trust this is the information you desire.

Yours very truly,

APPENDIX E

Statement by Mrs. Margaret K. Sylva to the California Senate and Assembly Interim Committee on Public Lands, November, 1950

This statement is for the purpose of presenting to the committee certain facts relative to the aspects of land ownership on the economics of Tuolumne County.

The statement is presented in four parts, namely (1) those factors relative to lands owned or controlled by the Federal Government; (2) those factors relative to lands owned or controlled by the State Government; (3) those factors dealing with lands owned or controlled by counties and cities; and (4) those factors relative to lands owned or controlled by other political subdivision of the State of California.

1. Lands of the Federal Government

The Federal Government owns or controls a total of approximately 1,087,000 acres of land within Tuolumne County, which represent 74.7 percent of the total of 1,456,000 acres of all lands within the county. Of the total Federal Government lands, the U. S. Forest Service controls 619,541 acres or approximately 42.6 percent of the entire area of the county, the National Park Service controls 441,410 acres or approximately 30.3 percent of the area of the entire county and the Bureau of Land Management 26,110 acres or 1.8 percent of the area of the entire county.

There is no direct tax income from these lands; however, there are various factors which contribute to the income and welfare of the county from these lands.

With respect to the lands controlled by the U. S. Forest Service, the following direct and indirect benefits can be pointed out, as resulting from the operations of the U. S. Forest Service in the county for the year 1949.

Payments by U. S. Forest Service in lieu of taxes	$100,732.14
Taxes paid by owners of 675 summer homes, resorts and other improvements on U. S. Forest Service lands, approximately	23,525.00
Taxes paid by owners of water permits, dams, transmission lines and like improvements on U. S. Forest Service lands, approximately	36,283.00

This made a total of $160,540 in direct income from the lands under U. S. Forest Service control. These returns amount to approximately $0.16 an acre for in lieu taxes and a total of $0.26 an acre from the lands under the control of the U. S. Forest Service.

Other indirect benefits and expenditures from the lands under the control of the U. S. Forest Service may be noted as follows:

(1) Amount paid to U. S. Forest Service employees (50) during fiscal year 1949 ---------- $337,917.00
(2) Expenditures by the U. S. Forest Service for materials and supplies purchased from 102 different local merchants during the fiscal year 1949------- $59,503.89

The activity of the U. S. Forest Service has resulted in the following other indirect benefits to the county.

(A) 705 miles of public road maintained by the U. S. Forest Service at a yearly cost of approximately--- $35,000.00
(B) 742 miles of public track maintained by the U. S. Forest Service at a yearly cost of approximately--- $10,000.00

The three year average expenditures for fire suppression work in the county for the period July 1, 1947 to June 30, 1950 has been $219,-482.00.

The U. S. Forest Service, through the Bureau of Public Road has expended to date on the Sonora Pass Highway $1,203,543.00.

Other factors which may be pointed out with reference to the operation of the U. S. Forest Service are as follows:

There are numerous mining claims on U. S. Forest Service lands which are unassessed. In one instance there are 144 mining and building stone claims by one individual, some of which have buildings and other improvements situated on them. Some of these claims have been sold to persons who have purchased them for use as home sites. As these claims are not on the county assessment rolls there is no revenue to the county.

Prior to 1938 it was the practice to exchange cutover lands for stumpage. During the period 1907 to 1938 there were 26 such transactions in Tuolumne County involving a total of 70,236 acres, the majority of which involved the West Side Lumber Company of Tuolumne City with 36,466 acres and the Pickering Lumber Company (formerly Standard Lumber Company) of Standard with 16,374 acres, the remaining 17,396 acres involved transactions with various individuals in exchange of less than 1,000 acres. There have been no such exchanges since 1938.

There are also certain recreational developments on U. S. Forest Service lands, which are pertinent to the economics of land use in homes, resorts, motels, lunch rooms, service stations, stores, parking stations and similar improvements on U. S. Forest Service land along State Highway No. 108 between the City of Sonora and the top of Sonora Pass on that highway. From a compilation of data on these activities made by the "Sonora Pass Vacationland," an organization representing the commercial properties operating in this area, the following statistics are available:

The development of this area in the past 20 years has resulted in a current estimated assessed valuation of approximately $3,742,385, which is approximately 20 percent of the assessed valuation of the county. Approximately 90 percent of the patrons of this area are out of county visitors and cabin owners. The annual pay roll amounts to about $265,000 with an average employment of about 204. The estimated gross yearly income of these businesses for the last three years has been approximately $1,000,000 and the owners of these businesses have returned to the county an average of about $180,000 in taxes for the last three years.

In any discussion of returns to the county from various sources, the services rendered by the county must be considered. The services rendered by the county in the case of the U. S. Forest Service lands are limited primarily to police protection, school services and some road maintenance.

A school has been maintained at Pinecrest during the past year to provide for an enrollment of 12 pupils. This school was maintained as a branch of the Columbia Elementary School District System.

The county maintains approximately one mile of highway leading from State Highway 108 into Pinecrest Resort and is also assuming maintenance of approximately four miles of newly constructed highway to a new recreational area. This highway was constructed as a timber access road and has recently been surfaced at a cost of approximately $65,000 paid from moneys earmarked for that purpose from the county's share of stumpage fees from the area, in the last three years.

The improvements in this newly created recreational area estimated to represent an initial investment of $200,000 which has not to date been placed on the county assessment roll.

As a comparison of the returns to the county from the operation of United States Forest Service lands as noted above, the March 22, 1948 news letter of the California Supervisor's Association reported that the average annual loss of tax revenue from lands under United States Forest Service control would amount to approximately $269,000.

Some of the larger taxpayers in Tuolumne County as of June 30, 1950, are:

(1) Pickering Lumber Company paid a total of $76,613.94 based on an assessed valuation of $983,863.74 broken down as follows: Timberland, $27,613.74; improvements, $346,250; and personal property, $610,000.06.

(2) West Side Lumber Company paid a total of $30,684.95 on a total assessed valuation of $500,958.56 broken down as follows: Timberland, $7,678.56; improvements, $112,950; and personal property, $380,330.06.

The evaluation in both cases for timberlands were based on cut-over lands at $4 an acre, virgin timber at $28 an acre and big trees of no commercial value at $75 an acre.

(3) The Pacific Gas and Electric Company paid a total of $321,-800.91 in taxes on its various holdings in Tuolumne County.

With respect to the lands in Tuolumne County controlled by the National Park Service, the following factors may be presented:

The land with the Yosemite National Forest comprises about 30.3 percent of the area of the entire county.

There is no timber cutting or cattle grazing allowed within the park boundary and consequently there is no revenue or in lieu payments from those sources or in the case of the lands under control of the U. S. Forest Service.

The return to the county from the recreational development in the park is small as the distance and type of highway serving the park and Yosemite Valley through Tuolumne County preclude any large amount of travel to and from those areas and therefore limits the benefits from tourist or recreational development.

Within the last 30 years, some 11,000 acres of land of Tuolumne County timberland previously owned by a private corporation, the Yosemite Lumber Company, was purchased by the Rockefeller Foundation which in turn gave it to the National Park Service for inclusion in Yosemite National Park, thus removing the land from the tax roll of the county.

With respect to the land controlled under the Bureau of Land Management, there is no evidence at hand either as to returns or costs to the county from operation of these lands.

2. Lands of the State of California

The lands of the State of California consist of the Columbia State Park under the control of State Division of Parks and Beaches. The purpose of these holdings is to create an historic site representing a typical early California community The town of Columbia with its business district, the old Fallon Hotel and grounds, the old elementary school and grounds was selected to be developed as a state park to be the "Williamsburg of the West."

The assessed valuation of the area now included in the park was approximately $30,000 at the time of the removal of the lands from the tax rolls in 1948. The present assessed value when the recent readjustments of the value of comparable lands is considered, would be approximately 10 percent higher.

The water system previously serving the park area and adjacent area was privately owned and has been purchased by the State, thus removing these properties from the county assessment roll. This system together with a sewer system now under construction by the State will serve the area both inside and outside of the park with no revenue or return to the county.

The highway, roads and streets serving the park and adjacent area are all at the present time being maintained by the county, although it is understood that the State does contemplate taking over and maintaining the two miles of highway linking the park with the present State Highway No. 49.

It is also understood that plans are under preparation and consideration to enlarge the park boundary with further loss to the county of assessed valuation.

It is understood that the present leases of the properties in the part are on a yearly basis with compensation varying with the general conditions of the property. The residents of the area in the park were presumed to have preferential use of their former properties, however, apparently some of the contracts provide for vacation when buildings are remodeled.

The school serving the park area is maintained by the county without direct support from the area within the park. Other county services such as fire protection, a lighting district and law enforcement are furnished by the county with no direct tax revenue from the park area.

There is a grave question whether or not the loss to the county from direct taxes can be offset by any improvement in the adjacent assessed valuation due to services provided by the State, namely sewer and water or any great return to the county on account of increased tourist travel

The proposed extension of the Calaveras Big Trees State Park to include the South Grove of Big Trees would deprive the county of revenue without corresponding return.

The estimated loss from stumpage revenue would be in the order of magnitude of $1,000,000. In addition to this loss of revenue, the proposed park extension, although lying within Tuolumne County, would not be accessible to the peoples of the county, nor would any revenue accrue to the county from tourist attraction for the same reason.

The only remedy for the making of this area available would be the construction of about eight miles of costly road construction to reach the area and additional expensive road construction to cover the area and access to the present Big Trees Park.

The loss would not be limited to the stumpage loss but would include occupational and business losses in the eventual processing of these timber lands.

3. Lands of Cities and Counties

The lands in Tuolumne County in this category are the lands owned by the City and County of San Francisco. Since purchase of these lands and improvements by the city, they have remained on the assessment roll at a very nominal value. In the Fiscal Year 1940-41 the county assessor with the advice and approval of the State Board of Equalization made a reassessment of the lands and properties in which the assessed valuation was about doubled. The city protested this reassessment and as a result of litigation, negotiations and conferences between the parties involved, an equitable formula was worked out to provide a method of assessing such lands and improvements.

The formula took into account the following factors:

a. The natural properties of the land for impounding of water.

b. The state of the soil.

c. Area of reservoir.

It was further agreed that the water rights previously not included on the tax rolls should be placed on the rolls. The resulting valuations were as follows:

Water rights at Hetch-Hetchy, Eleanor and Cherry Valley $145,285.

Hetch-Hetchy Reservoir Site—550 acres at $195 an acre.

Eleanor Dam Site—$125 an acre.

In addition to the above, the reservoir site at Priests and Early Intake and miscellaneous properties at Mather which are used as recreation sites and also various rights of way for pipe and power lines are included on the assessment roll.

The total assessed valuation of all properties of the City and County of San Francisco amounted to $395.765 of which $256,480 was on real property and $145,285 was on water rights.

There is a limited revenue from the taxes on the personal properties of the residents of the Town of Moccasin situated on City and County of San Francisco property. The average assessment is between $50 and $100 for each of about 40 households.

The school facilities at Moccasin were built by and are maintained by the City of San Francisco. The city also furnishes the light and heat for the buildings. The teacher's salary is paid from regular county school funds, however the entire income for school purposes from the Moccasin School District amounted to only $615.27 for the year 1949-50. which income together with state average daily attendance funds must pay all other expenses of the school. As the enrollment averages about 17 pupils, the state average daily attendance aid is quite small.

There is also an average attendance of seven or eight high school pupils from the Moccasin area, who attend Sonora Union High at Sonora. The costs of the school services to these high school pupils including a daily travel of about 40 miles is paid from county funds.

There is some intangible benefit to the county from local purchases by the residents of the area and from the local purchase of the municipalities concerned. These municipal purchases are minor as the bulk of such purchases are made through the regular purchasing procedure of the city

4. Lands Owned or Controlled by Other Political Subdivisions

The lands include the lands and improvements owned and controlled by the Oakdale and South San Joaquin Irrigation Districts acting jointly and the Turlock and Modesto Irrigation Districts acting jointly.

The lands and properties owned by the Oakdale and South San Joaquin Irrigation Districts are situated on and adjacent to the Stanislaus River in Tuolumne County and includes water rights, Melones Dam and Reservoir sites, Tullock Dam and Reservoir site, together with certain canals and ditches with appurtenant rights of way.

The acreage of land involved is 1,009.09 acres. The water rights involved are Melones Dam water rights and water rights at Tulloch Diversion. The canals are the two diversion canals leading from Tulloch Diversion.

The 1949-50 evaluation of these lands were as follows:

615.11 acres at $100.00 an acre as reservoir site; 393 98 acres at $6.06 an acre as now flooded land; and the total evaluation for all land, water rights and improvements was about $233,051.19.

The above lands were on this tax roll prior to purchase by the irrigation districts. Upon purchase by the districts the lands were removed from the tax roll. In 1914 legislation allowed the taxation of all lands and improvements which had been on the rolls at the time of purchase. The above values represent the lands and improvements in this category.

In 1921 pursuant to judicial decision, these lands and improvements were again removed from the tax roll. In 1946 pursuant to a decision by the Supreme Court, the 1921 decision was reversed and these lands and improvements were again placed on the roll but the taxes levied pursuant thereto for 1947-48 were paid under protest by the districts on the grounds that the lands were included within the boundary of the district and therefore were not assessable in accordance with legislation which became effective October, 1947, and have not paid any taxes since on the same grounds. The districts have filed an action to recover the payments made for the year 1947-48.

The County of Tuolumne without any tax reimbursement furnishes roads, schools, police and other regular county government services to the properties and the residents living thereon

There is no planned recreational development on any of the lands or facilities owned or controlled by the districts which either directly or indirectly returns any revenue or income to the county government or business within the county. The boating and fishing which is done at Melones Reservoir is not planned and there are no facilities for such recreation, also due to the necessary fluctuation of the water surface in the reservoir, such facilities would be expensive and difficult to maintain.

The land and properties owned or controlled by the Turlock and Modesto Irrigation Districts are situated on and adjacent to the Tuolumne River in Tuolumne County and include water rights, Don Pedro Dam and Reservoir, Don Pedro Power Plant and electric transmission lines leading from the power plant.

The acreage of land involved is 3302.29 acres. The water rights involved is the right at Don Pedro for irrigation and power purposes.

The 1949-50 evaluation of these lands were as follows:

2133.75 acres at $100.00 an acre for reservoir site; 1168.54 acres at $7.50 an acre for nonflooded land; and the total assessed valuation for all lands, water rights and improvements was about $238,933.93.

The same situation as to school and other county services exists except that the school attendance is much larger and also there are five or more high school students from this area who require transportation to Sonora.

The Turlock and Modesto Districts own and operate a power plant and main transmission line within the county for which no tax revenue is obtained In the case of the Oakdale and South San Joaquin Irrigation Districts the power plant and line are owned and controlled by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company from which tax revenues are obtained.

The basis of the assessed valuations given above was the same formula as was adopted for the assessment of City and County of San Francisco lands and improvements as noted previously in this statement.

From the above data, it is apparent that there is a great difference in the manner and extent of benefits and payments thereof as related to lands under public ownership in the county.

These differences should be reconciled and an economic structure provided for such lands which would result in an equitable and uniform balance being established between benefits and revenue with due regard to both tangible and intangible results.

APPENDIX F

The Impact of Federally Owned Tax-exempt Real Properties on Local Government

By: ERNEST H. HODGE, Chairman, Federal Real Property Committee, National Association of County Officials, and County Supervisor of Tuolumne County, California

(Statement filed with the California Joint Senate and Assembly Interim Committees on Public Lands, at a Hearing in Sacramento, California, on October 27, 1950)

The grossly inequitable situation resulting from tax exemption of federally-owned properties has been recognized by the California Legislature for a considerable number of years. The problem has been given intensive study by the Committees on State and Local Taxation, and on March 25, 1947, Assembly Joint Resolution No. 29 was adopted, memorializing Congress to relieve California's taxation problem created by "the presence in the State of vast amounts of federally-owned tax-exempt real property." On May 2, 1947, Senate Resolution No. 79, introduced by Senator Hulse, was adopted, in which attention was drawn to the fact that 47 percent of all the lands in the 11 Western States is owned by the Federal Government, and that such large accumulations of real property in California and the other 10 Western States has been destructive to the fiscal structure of local government. The resolution recommended that the Federal Government assume its financial responsibilities in relation to local government by enacting legislation to provide that local government be reimbursed in amounts equivalent to taxes lost by virtue of acquisition by the Federal Government.

These properties were described as game reserves, forest reserves, public parks, public monuments, federal buildings for governmental purposes, expanding military facilities, property acquired and used in a proprietary sense, and lands remaining in the public domain

For the past six years various bills have been introduced at every session of Congress, having for their objective the passage of remedial legislation. Despite the strenuous efforts of many friends of local government, the House Public Lands Committee has not approved any of these bills, basing their refusal mainly on the contention that until the Federal Government has made a complete inventory of all federal real property in the several states, there is no way of determining how much the proposed "in lieu" payments will cost.

It should be noted that the list of properties enumerated by the California memorial to Congress included rural properties as well as metropolitan holdings, and in this connection, we wish to point out a new danger that has arisen recently. The Federal Bureau of the Budget has undertaken a study of the problem with a view of introducing an Administration Bill From all indications, this proposed bill will provide "in lieu" payments on federal property acquired after 1937, only.

Such a bill, if enacted would fall far short of solving the problem. For instance, it would leave counties overburdened with national parks and forest entirely out of the picture, and it must not be forgotten that these communities have suffered longest from federal tax exemption. Federal bureau heads contend that these public land areas have never been a part of the local tax base, and that local economy was never predicated on tax revenues from such areas, and that consequently, local government has suffered no loss. These arguments are selfish, unsound and diametrically opposed to the great American principle of "Liberty and JUSTICE to ALL." We must not ignore the fact that in accordance with that principle so frequently expressed in pledging allegiance to the Flag, all the political subdivisions of these United States were created on an equal basis, and that among the inalienable rights accorded them was the privilege and opportunity of expanding their tax bases until all the lands within their respective borders had gone on the local tax rolls, thus forming a substantial revenue for the perpetuation of their local governments.

With the abrupt abandonment of the original public land policy and the consequent withdrawal of vast areas in the West from settlement, the people of those regions were robbed of an historic birthright. The rank discrimination perpetrated at that time can only be remedied and atoned for by granting an adequate "in lieu" payment annually to those communities suffering from a preponderance of federal tax-exempt holdings.

It is our earnest plea that this honorable joint committee will recommend to the California State Legislature that a strong delegation of State Legislators be sent to Washington at the time hearings are being held by the House Public Lands Committee, with definite instructions to urge said committee to carefully consider the present plight of the Nation's rural and mountain counties in approving legislation to provide payments in lieu of taxes on federally-owned real property, giving fullest consideration to the proposed list of properties subject to such payments contained in H. R. 7478 (copy attached) The special urgent situation of counties in which forest lands are located should be emphasized.

It is further suggested that the Federal Bureau of the Budget be requested to amend their proposed Administration Bill so as to include within its remedial provisions all federally-owned tax-exempt real property, regardless of the time or manner of acquisition.

WHEREAS, Our Interstate Highway System constitutes an important part of our transportation system and its continued development is necessary for the promotion of trade and commerce; and

WHEREAS, In particular, U. S. Highways 40 and 50 constitute an essential artery of our Interstate Highway System; and

2. The committee shall consist of three Members of the Assembly appointed by the Speaker thereof. Vacancies occurring in the membership of the committee shall be filled by the appointing power.

3. The committee is authorized to act during this session of the Legislature, including any recess, and after final adjournment until the commencement of the 1953 Regular Session, with authority to file its final report not later than the thirtieth legislative day of that session

4. The committee and its members shall have and exercise all of the rights, duties and powers conferred upon investigating committees and their members by the provisions of the Joint Rules of the Senate and Assembly and of the Standing Rules of the Assembly as they are adopted and amended from time to time at this session, which provisions are incorporated herein and made applicable to this committee and its members

5 The committee has the following additional powers and duties:

(a) To select a vice chairman from its membership.

Resolution read, and ordered referred to the Committee on Rules

By Mr. Sam L. Collins:

House Resolution No. 51

Relative to initiative measures presented to the Legislature

WHEREAS, Section 1 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of California provides that, when an initiative petition proposing a law is presented to the Legislature, the law so proposed must be either enacted or rejected without change or amendment by the Legislature within 40 days from the time it is received by the Legislature; and

WHEREAS, Such measures are required to be presented to the Legislature as soon as it convenes and organizes in general session which ordinarily is the first day of the session; and

WHEREAS, The Constitution also provides that the Legislature may meet in general session for not more than 30 days and thereupon must recess for not less than 30 days; and

WHEREAS, If the 40 day period within which the Legislature may act is the first 40 calendar days after the receipt of the measure including the days within the mandatory recess the time within which the Legislature may act would be drastically reduced because the Legislature may not constitutionally be in session more than 30 days prior to the recess, and it was, in fact, in session for only 15 days prior to the constitutional recess of the 1951 General Session; and

WHEREAS, At the time the constitutional amendment relating to initiative measures was proposed to the people the sessions of the Legislature were continuous and no recess was required to be taken and under such conditions the Legislature would have had 40 full calendar days within which it could act upon initiative measures presented to it; and

WHEREAS, The constitutional amendment providing for the bifurcated session and the mandatory recess was proposed later than the constitutional amendment relating to initiative measures and both proposals were adopted at the same election; and

WHEREAS, There is nothing to indicate an actual and deliberate intent on the part of the people in adopting the provision for the bifurcated session to reduce the period within which the Legislature may act upon initiative measures presented to it; and

WHEREAS, It has proved impossible for the Legislature adequately to consider and act upon the important measures presented to it at its 1951 General Session prior to the constitutional recess and had it attempted to take hasty action upon such measures the results might have been improvident; and

WHEREAS, It is essential to the proper functioning of a legislative body that action should be taken only after due deliberation and consideration of all of the aspects of a matter coming before it, and any limitation on the time within which it must act should be construed to allow as much time as possible for the legislative process to function in a normal manner; and

WHEREAS, The constitutional provision in question is susceptible to the construction that the 40 day period is to be calculated as the first 40 days during which the Legislature is in actual session excluding the period of the mandatory recess; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That this Assembly hereby asserts and claims the right to act on any initiative measure presented to it during the full period of 40 days while the Legislature is in actual session after the receipt by it of such measure, excluding from such 40 day period the days of the mandatory constitutional recess.

Resolution read, and ordered referred to the Committee on Rules.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON CRIME AND CORRECTION ASSEMBLY CHAMBER, STATE CAPITOL
SACRAMENTO, January 22, 1951

Hon. Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly
Sacramento, California

HONORABLE SIR: Pursuant to House Resolution No. 243 of the 1949 Regular Session and House Resolution No. 28 of the 1951 Regular Session, regularly adopted, we, the undersigned members of the Assembly Interim Committee on Crime and Correction respectfully submit the accompanying preliminary report

This report deals with ways and means of providing economies in operation and expansion of our prison plant, and to more fully provide for the constant increase in our prison population.

Our capital outlay for prison facilities annually is a heavy burden upon the General Fund of our State Treasury, yet only a portion of the need is met.

It is believed that with more judicious use of prison labor, millions of dollars could be saved, or over-crowding and other anti-social conditions could be eliminated within present appropriations, in addition to work rehabilitation qualities so much desired.

Very truly yours,

VERNON KILPATRICK, Chairman
MONTIVEL A. BURKE, Vice Chairman
KATHRYN T. NIEHOUSE
HARLAN HAGEN
CHARLES W. MEYERS

PRELIMINARY REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON CRIME AND CORRECTION

WORK OPPORTUNITIES FOR PRISON INMATES

Adhering to the two-fold desire for economy and provision for further rehabilitation projects for our prison inmates, your committee has pursued diligently the subject of prison construction from the use of adobe and salvaging of waste materials. We believe the following information is worthy of your earnest consideration.

The problem of additional and useful work opportunities for the men and women confined in correctional institutions has many ramifications, and is subject to several special limitations. Work opportunities which are suitable for people in such surroundings must be adapted to the skills or lack of skills of the persons within these institutions, or must require only skills which can be easily taught with the institution's facilities. In the second place, such work opportunities must, of necessity, utilize inexpensive and easily available raw materials. In the third place, work opportunities should result in products which can be consumed within the institutions where they are produced or by other state or public institutions, or which are not highly competitive commercially and, consequently, do not represent any distribution or marketing problem. In the fourth place, work opportunities for institutionalized persons must be of such a nature that they do not require expensive capital outlays in tools, machinery, or in stocks of materials or in expensive housing and storage facilities. These requirements, of course, sharply reduce the number of practical opportunities which can be discovered. However, a very considerable number remain. A few of them are already being utilized by state correctional institutions in various degrees.

It is not out of place in this study to repeatedly point out the importance of employment to persons confined in various state institutions and to point out the benefits which accrue to the State in keeping such persons employed. It must constantly be kept in mind that the benefits of employment to the institution in the form of savings in the costs of institutional operation are of secondary importance to the institution and to the State as a whole.

The primary value of work opportunities for persons in correctional institutions is in its contribution to the rehabilitation of the individual who, in a great number of instances, will be released from the institutions at some future date. Useful work increases the skills and well-being of the inmates. It gives them opportunities to earn a stake of value to them at the time of their release or to assist in the support of their dependents, and it sharply reduces the chances of their being recommitted to the institution or to another institution at a future date. Every dollar spent in accomplishing rehabilitation saves many dollars in later police and court costs.

WORK OPPORTUNITIES IN THE FIELD OF CONSTRUCTION

Our correctional institutions are constantly expanding and in need of expansion to keep pace with California's rapid growth in population. Consequently, they are all in need of a comprehensive long-range building program. Present figures indicate that five years from now the population of our correctional institutions will have increased about 20 percent. More than 40 percent of the present population is housed in temporary or emergency structures. Basic to the development of long-range master plans must be a program which aims to exploit all of the resources of the institutions for work opportunity contributing to rehabilitation. Fairly complete plot plans of our correctional institutions showing the location of present and future buildings are already in existance. These are excellent as far as they go, but they need to be integrated into other prison programs with administration and with rehabilitation. A long-range master plan is basically a study of all of the opportunities that affect the active administration of the institutions and of the rehabilitation of the persons confined therein. This implies that the architectural construction program must be integrated with administrative and rehabilitation programs, and all must find expression in the master plan.

Even a quick look indicates that there are a great many work opportunities for persons confined in correctional institutions to participate in a construction program for expanding the facilities of the institutions. The use of inmate labor, however, raises many questions of importance, not the least important of which is the "competitiveness" of such labor with free labor in the building trades. The possible lack of essential skills in the inmate labor and the difficulties which arise when inmate labor and free labor must work side by side are also problems.

A study of the plans for institution development as they have been so far projected indicate that a relatively small emphasis has been placed upon the opportunities for using inmate labor. Construction has followed more or less conventional lines. It is here suggested that a material inexpensive and abundant and adequately suited to utilizing relatively unskilled labor should be investigated and used as often as possible. This is the use of what is commonly called "adobe" in California. Adobe, either in the form of bricks or formed earth "Pise," is ancient and still practical material for wall construction. While earth walls are generally called "adobe walls" in California, the soil which is called adobe by the soil specialist is generally unsuitable, because it shrinks too much in drying. Competent engineers and architects inform us that strong, durable earth walls may be made from any good loam soil, and there are very few areas in the State without suitable material.

We are informed that there are three methods with several variations employed in the construction of earth walls. One popular method is to set up forms similar to concrete forms. The moist earth is tamped firmly into them. This work differs from pouring concrete, however, as the earth walls are built up in six-inch courses. In the second method, the moist earth is tamped into brick forms and the bricks, which are usually quite large (4″ x 12″ x 18″ is a common size), are dried and later laid into the walls preferably with earth or "adobe" mortar: The third form of construction is rarely used today, but was in common usage in California 80 to 100 years ago. It is a combination of adobe and stone, and gives a wall which combines the best features of adobe and masonry construction. This wall is ideally adapted to be laid with unskilled labor, and the stone used can be mine or quarry waste of split cobble stones or any stone which has two fairly flat faces. The method employed is to set in adobe mortar, and on suitable foundation, parallel rows of stones with flat faces outward representing the outside and inside of the wall to be built and filling the space between them with adobe mortar and then placing a second row of stones on top and repeating the process until the wall is built to the desired height.

Windows, door casings, etc., of any material can be used in conjunction with the three methods of construction mentioned above. Earth walls are said to be very strong and capable of bearing any type of roof construction that may be desired. Adobe walls also have excellent thermal and hydroscopic properties generally resulting in a cool structure in the summer and easily heated building for winter use.

Walls can be built of adobe by any of the three methods to 20 feet in height making two-story buildings practical. Twenty foot walls would generally be 24 inches in thickness or wider at the base. There are hundreds of examples of all three types of construction in California. Some of them have stood 80 to 100 years and have been built without the benefit of any of the engineering know-how that is available to us today. Many examples, dating from Gold Rush Days, of the third method of construction can be seen in the Mother Lode Country indicating the unusual stability of the material and method in the face of very adverse conditions.

Adobe wall construction is suitable and practical for many institutional buildings one and two stories high. It can be used for buildings to house inmates and for administrative facilities, and it is particularly adapted for the use of all types of out-buildings, shops, tool houses, farm buildings, and, possibly, for much of the housing for resident employees of the institutions.

The use of adobe walls is increasing in California. Many modern architects are finding opportunity to employ earth walls. It is not an "inexpensive" or cheap type of construction save where low cost labor is available, but for construction projects to use inmate labor it is ideal. In conventional types of construction, approximately one-half of the total cost is labor cost, the rest going for materials. When earth walls are employed, the labor cost may rise to as much as 70 percent of the total cost, only 30 percent being expended for materials.

The following publications indicate the range of the present use of adobe in construction and give essential construction data.

In the field of construction, attention should be given also to the uses of earth concrete. Most soils just below the top humus strata are suitable for earth concrete. Suitability of soil can easily be tested for hardness and durability by making up small samples using various ratios of cement mixed with the soil. Earth concrete can be used in the construction of swimming pools, reservoirs, canals, storage facilities, and, in general, for any use in which the concrete is not subject to bearing heavy or concentrated loads. Some experience with this material has already been acquired by the Department of Corrections and by the Division of Beaches and Parks of the Department of Natural Resource.

The need for the rapid expansion of construction programs for our institutions is indicated in the adult institutions which at present are housing more than 40 percent of the inmates in temporary facilities. Other correctional institutions are similarly overcrowded. By the studied use of the maximum amount of inmate labor it is obvious that the construction program can be advanced much more rapidly than is possible if we must wait on the greater appropriations which are necessary for construction along present methods.

OPPORTUNITIES IN THE FIELD OF WASTE UTILIZATION

There appear to be a very considerable field for the use of inmate labor in the reclamation of industrial wastes. There has been so far only a very superficial investigation into the possibilities in this field. It appears worthy of intensive exploration.

Manufacturing is very much on the increase in the West and opportunities of reclaiming industrial wastes consequently will increase with the increases in industrial activity. Only one example needs to be given to indicate possibilities.

A large manufacturer of instruments for aeronautical uses loses approximately 2,000 small parts, many of which are made of special metals. In general, when any of these small special parts are dropped on the floor by workmen in assembling their products, it has been found impractical to pick them up by high-priced labor employed. Consequently, they go out with the sweepings on the floor from which they can generally be easily screened. They estimate that they lose seven or eight thousand dollars worth of parts in a year. Of course, one such industrial firm is not enough to make a project, but there are probably 10 or 15 other firms in California which have a similar problem. If this waste material were to be assembled and sorted by inmate labor, it would result in the recovery of very many valuable metallic parts which could be, in many instances, sold back to the industrial firms where they were originally lost, or as scrap metal they could be melted into specification ingots, or as materials useful to inmate arts and craft projects They could, in many instances, be utilized in other institutional industries.

Due to the high price and specialization of American labor, we have always put our scrap iron and steel back in the blast furnace in mixed batches. If the various specification steels containing chrome, tungsten, and other special alloys could be sorted into separate batches for reclamation, it would result in large savings The huge quantities of scrap metal that were shipped to Japan during the 1930's was very carefully sorted by the Japanese before it was re-melted.

In addition to the opportunities which may arise in the reclamation of metallic wastes, there is also the possibility of projects in the re-use of cellulose and other plastic materials. Despite the fact that one-third of our paper and rag wastes are re-used, there are still large opportunities and demands for the re-use of paper and similar products

The difficult problem in the salvaging of all of these wastes is the problem which arises in accumulating sufficient quantities at a convenient place to make a reclamation project worth while. However, these are not unsurmountable problems in many instances.

OPPORTUNITIES IN THE FIELD OF COMMUNITY SERVICES

We are already using institutional labor to perform many community services, of which probably the most important is the use being made of prison inmates in forestry camps. Cities and counties are also entering this field with jail inmates Its field of expansion is, however, almost unlimited. The typical project is generally one which would not be undertaken due to lack of sufficient available funds to complete the project with free labor. Almost every city and county has an undeveloped park or playground area which requires grading, tree planting, construction of walks, benches, and other facilities. Almost every community has a roadside beautification project or a tree planting project. Inmate labor can often be used in connection with erosion control and flood control, as well as fireproofing of roadsides. The control of insect pests and other projects connected with public health can also be considered.

Of course, these are projects which must be carried on outside of institutional walls and consequently are of use only with inmates who do not need to be subjected to total security. A survey of the needs of communities within reasonable range of each institution should reveal that there are many special cooperative projects possible and that work parties could be organized with inmate labor.

PRELIMINARY REPORT OF ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON AVIATION

GENERAL STATEMENT

Private aviation in California, a State particularly fitted for development of air travel, faces a crisis. While the number of private airplanes in the State has increased steadily and rapidly, the usefulness of each plane has diminished in recent years. The utility of a private aircraft is best measured by the number of airports in the State—and Nation—the availability and suitability of landing areas, and the number of airports in California has been decreasing steadily in congested areas.

Records of the Civil Aeronautics Authority show there were only 961 private aircraft in California in 1930. By 1941, there were 1,650 and then private aviation was virtually stopped by the war. But within a year after the end of the war there were 7,200 private aircraft in California. In another two years there were more than 10,000 and last year the State had more than 12,000 private aircraft.

Meanwhile, airports were vanishing. One measure of the rate of attrition is the fact that in 1939 there were 57 airports in Los Angeles County. In 1940, there were 33, and several of those are expected to disappear in 1951. The same thing has happened in the San Francisco area. Owners of private planes find little advantage in flying, over driving, to San Francisco for all but the longest trips, because of the time taken to get into the city from the nearest airports.

Witnesses before the committee brought out three main problems entering into the disappearance of established airports, and accounting for the failure to establish new airports in needed locations. The problems were:

Taxation—Private airports necessarily are located close to cities. With California's rapid growth, cities have reached out to surround many airports. With this development has come higher taxes on private airports. Airport owners feel they should be granted some tax relief, especially since the major part of an airport area is taken up by unproductive runways and taxiways. At the same time, airport owners are required to let anyone land on the runways. As one airport owner put it, "there are no private airports."

Several remedies have been suggested. It has been proposed that the runway portion of private airports be "dedicated" to the local government in the same manner as streets in a subdivision. Another proposal was to have the airport owner deed the runways to the local government. A third was to set up airport operation as a nonprofit business, to obtain tax exemption. All the proposals apparently have defects that make them difficult if not impossible to put into effect.

A more recent suggestion, and one that appears most promising, is to have private airports designated public utilities.

Glide Path Encroachment—Another consequence of the growth around airports is impairment of the "glide path" of airplanes landing at the fields or taking off from them. Courts have ruled that owners of property abutting airports have rights to the space above the land at least up to the 500-foot minimum level set by the Civil Aeronautics Administration for air travel. The use of a procedure of "inverse condemnation" has been suggested as a remedy, although it has difficulties, and its constitutionality is questioned.

State Airport Program—California, unlike many other states, has not aided financially in the establishment of airports. The only money so far contributed to the construction of public airports in the State has come from the Federal Government and from local governments. As a result, California has lagged in the development of airports that have a state-wide, rather than a local, importance. Gaps exist in the airport network in dangerous terrain, where the local government has neither the money nor the interest to develop landing strips. Sites near recreational areas that would draw substantial air travel have remained undeveloped. And private fields have vanished in metropolitan areas and no public airports have been established to replace them.

A suggestion has been made for a modest start on a State-wide System of Airports—as opposed to a patchwork of local fields. Since October 1, 1949, unclaimed gas tax refunds on aviation gasoline have been distributed among cities and counties for capital investment in airports. The plan has not resulted in the construction of any new airports. And the committee has received testimony that the money distributed hasn't always been used specifically for airport improvement.

The proposal is that the unclaimed gas tax refunds amounting to $250,000 to $300,000 annually, be held for allocation to specific airport projects. The California Aeronautics Commission estimates that the first 10 on a list of 45 airports it believes should be built by 1955 could be financed, with local and federal help, with the first year's receipts.

Of the other testimony taken by the committee, most striking were statements on taxation of aircraft, and on the growing use of the airplane in agriculture.

As previous committees have pointed out, taxation of aircraft is not uniform in the various counties, and there appears to be substantial evasion of taxes by aircraft owners A logical proposal is for a state license "in lieu" of local property taxation. Such a tax would follow the theory of the "in lieu" tax on automobiles. A related problem is that of state registration of airplanes. State registration is said to be "virtually" a must if private airplanes are to operate in time of emergency or war.

Estimates that 3,000,000 acres of land in California were treated or seeded from the air in 1950 show the importance of the airplane to the State's agricultural economy. Yet, farm operators testified that California was not doing as much as other states in promoting the use of the airplane in farming or in carrying on research in agricultural aviation as several other states. "Flying Farmers" representatives said they would not object to increased taxes on their operation if that would mean better airport facilities. It should be pointed out that the Legislature last year adopted a concurrent resolution asking the University of California for "the early initiation and implementation of a thorough and coordinated program of research and experimentation in all phases of agricultural aviation."

In December, a national state of emergency was proclaimed, bringing the immediate future of private aviation into doubt Private flyers feel that they can, under proper regulations, perform a service in time of emergency. Even if actual hostilities break out, they feel they can help with relief and rescue missions. In October, the California Aeronautics Commission proposed a "Civil Defense Plan for Civil Aviation" to accomplish these purposes which has preliminary approval of Military and Air Force authorities.

UNIFORM TAXATION OF AIRCRAFT

Aircraft owners have complained to legislative committees for several years that taxation of their craft varies among counties, that assessment often is arbitrary and evasion is substantial.

For instance, the results of a survey made for the California Aeronautics Commission were reported to the Assembly Interim Committee on Aviation appointed at the 1949 Session of the Legislature. The survey covered 21 counties, all that kept records sufficient for an accurate check. The figures obtained indicated that more than 3,000 aircraft of the 10,500 registered with the Civil Aeronautics Administration as based in California were escaping taxation. The survey also showed that 10 different methods of assessment were used by the various county assessors.

The present committee received similar testimony. Airport owners told of the concentration of aircraft in counties where the assessment is known to be low, on assessment day, March 15th. Virtually every person who testified on this point agreed that a tax levied and collected at the state level would be more equitable.

Hand in hand with a System of Uniform State Taxation of Aircraft would go state registration of aircraft. The only register of ownership of aircraft now is kept in Washington by the Civil Aeronautics Administration. Obviously, a State Tax System that did not depend on an up-to-date record of ownership would suffer from many of the same defects as local taxation does now. Also, there have been complaints to the committee of the time consumed in getting information on aircraft ownership from Washington.

Twenty-four other states, including many of the most populous, now require state registration of airplanes. The principal arguments brought before the committee against state registration in California were duplication and possible excessive cost. The argument against duplication of registration by Federal and State Governments can hardly be maintained in time of emergency. A complete roster of the private airplanes in the State, available at the state level, is necessary for civilian defense purposes, and in fact now is being compiled by the California Aeronautics Commission. The administrative costs should not be appreciably more than the $1 per car required for state registration of automobiles. Either the Department of Motor Vehicles or the State Board of Equalization could effectively handle the registration and assessment and collection of taxes. It has been suggested that a system of assessment similar to that used by the Department of Motor Vehicles for the assessment of the motor vehicle "in lieu" tax be applied to private airplanes.

The taxes collected on airplanes also could be returned to the cities or counties where they are based in much the same manner as the automobile "in lieu" tax.

The case for state registration and taxation of airplanes was stated by the staff of the California Aeronautics Commission at the committee's November 20th hearing, as follows:

Registration

At the present time all aircraft ownership records are maintained by the Civil Aeronautics Administration in Washington, D. C., and all liens on aircraft and aircraft engines are supposed to be recorded there. The federal aircraft certificates are issued to the owner of record and remain in effect until a change in ownership occurs. Certificates do not show liens or mortgages and an expensive and time-consuming search is required to clear titles.

At the present time all states require federal aircraft certificates (licenses) but 24 states go further and require either a state license or state registration of federal licenses. Several states require state license fees in lieu of local personal property taxes (Washington, Michigan, Minnesota, and others).

Arguments favoring state registration of aircraft include:

(a) Local recordation of liens, mortgages, etc.

(b) Enforcement of Financial Responsibility Laws.

(c) Collection of aircraft taxes at state level in the interest of uniformity and complete coverage.

(d) Aid in enforcement through availability of more accurate, up-to-date ownership records.

(e) Availability of aircraft records for control of aircraft operations as in Civil Defense Program.

The principal argument against state registration is "duplication." This is not a valid argument in view of the advantages to be gained from local recordation of ownership.

Taxation

Continued dissatisfaction with present personal property taxes on aircraft has resulted in recurring requests for assistance from commission staff personnel. An illustration of such an instance, utilizing actual figures, is outlined below:

Assessor's estimate of market valuation of 22 aircraft	$18,000.00
Book value of 21 aircraft, shown on company records	12,970.00
Commission estimate of market valuation of 21 aircraft	9,850.00

The discrepancy between the number of aircraft shown on the assessment rolls and considered by the commission and on company records results from county assessment of four aircraft which had been sold or otherwise disposed of before the date of assessment. Three aircraft absent from the base were not included in the tax statement, nor were they assessed in other areas. Thirty-three percent of the number of aircraft actually owned were, therefore, taxed in error or not taxed at all. Further complications resulted when the owner received his tax statement after the assessment roll had been closed and after the Board of Equalization of the county had completed hearings.

Efforts to adjust the obvious discrepancies in this particular situation will probably be successful. Thus far, reductions in assessed valuations have been allowed on all aircraft considered, with Commission estimates of market valuations accepted by both the operator and the assessor as fair valuations. The aircraft owner has stated, however, that he intends to locate in a county or state where "reasonable" valuations are being made, fly his equipment in on the assessment date, and pay the tax in that location rather than become involved in a similar situation next year. Such "gentlemen's agreements" have already been worked out between several large operators and county assessors, and this practice will become even more widespread as aircraft not now taxed are included on tax rolls.

Previous committees have had evidence of a wide disparity in evaluation of aircraft by the several county assessors and of an estimated 25 percent of aircraft which escape taxation altogether.

We have the experience of automobile taxation of a few years ago as an example of unsuccessful handling of highly mobile personal property at county level. The present system of in lieu licensing of automobiles is a vast improvement over the old system. Similar benefits to the aviation industry would undoubtedly occur.

Assembly Bill No. 2204 by Mr. McMillan passed the Assembly in 1949 but died in the Senate Committee on Revenue and Taxation. It sought to correct present inequities and evasions. Its principal point of contention was the basis for distribution of receipts back to the several counties. The counties object quite naturally to the earmarking of their tax funds.

Yet here is a method whereby funds derived directly from aircraft users (in lieu license fees) may be earmarked for airport development and whereby those counties which do nothing to aid in the airport system of the State may be forced to take a more active part in the program.

Conclusion

It would appear that Assembly Bill No. 2204 with necessary modifications should be reintroduced in the 1951 Session and a definite effort made to provide this additional aid to airport financing. State-wide, the amount of taxes on aircraft would approximate $400,000 annually, which amount would aid the airport program materially.

Typical of comments by men prominent in the private aircraft business was testimony by Mr. Forrest Farini of the Flying Farmers organization, and by Mr. H. W. Livermore, President of the California Aviation Trades Association.

MR. FARINI testified as follows:

"And now, I missed the first item on the Regulation and Taxation of Aircraft. That is very important to us. I might cite specific examples. In citing this, I am not recommending whether we should accept an in lieu tax the same as automobiles or not I am just leaving up to your opinion and judgment, but I do know that the inequities among counties handling our airplane tax problem is getting to be quite a racket. In my own particular case, one county had me listed for my airplane, had the tax at $51 37. In the adjoining county—I reside within about two miles of the line—that county sent me a bill for $71 on the same aircraft. I called the assessor on the phone and asked him if he would please release me from his tax rolls because the property he claimed I was owing the tax on was hangared and kept in my own business place in the adjoining county. 'Well,' he said, 'unless you can show you have paid the tax in one county' said I would have to pay it in his county; which I couldn't understand. I finally told him in plain English that I thought he was all wet and demanding something not proper; and then in a few days I got another statement, got three statements, and then at the end of the year it was finally turned over to the District Attorney for collection. Well, I had paid my taxes in the other county so ignored it I heard nothing further from it.

I know of another man who owns property in three different counties. He has checked around and found the place where the tax rate is the lowest, and that is where the plane is on March 1st.

I happen to have a strip at my home and around the end of February or March 1st my strip is practically a parking lot rather than a flying field.

MR. MCMILLAN: That is the county where the assessment was at $51 rather than at $73?

A. Yes.

THE CHAIRMAN: Isn't that primarily due to the fact that all counties don't use the same yardstick in assessing and that there should be a standard valuation, a more scientific approach to the assessment?

A. That is right; that would solve the problem. Then there are a lot of counties that feel that aircraft is something that they feel they shouldn't be expected to pay taxes on it because there is no possibility of that money getting into the aircraft fund; so they don't want to pay it.

I know one field, very inaccessible, and around that time of the year he is just loaded with airplanes and there is no tax collected.''

MR. LIVERMORE's testimony was:

''That Number 1, that 'Taxation of Aircraft' has gotten to be a serious matter. Like all taxes, they haven't been coming down. I have a case in my airport which is rather to the point. A man who has been a pilot and flying practically continuously since 1930, which you would call an old-time pilot—in 1946, he bought a Taylorcraft new, and last year, 1949, well it is three years old. He, by the way, isn't one of the silk stocking pilots; he runs a goat dairy farm for a living, and his tax on that craft was $149, and all the pleading and going to the tax assessor and collector's offices availed him nothing.

MR. BISHOP: What would you say would be the market value of that?

A. About $600; may be five now. I have a ship I bought from North American, next to the last North American to go out, at $7750, in the early part of 1947, and the tax on that last year was $156. You see there is nothing equitable about that. My tax on that is almost as low as the tax on his $2350 plane that is three years old

THE CHAIRMAN: Have you run into the problem of different counties placing a different assessed valuation on similar craft?

A. Yes. In Los Angeles County, they really shove it into you."

The committee concludes it is no more reasonable to expect the aircraft industry (as an industry) to build and maintain airports than it is to expect the automobile manufacturing industry to build and maintain highways.

The user should pay those costs over a wide base, as is the case in the State Highway System, but the cost of each unit of the Airport System cannot always be recovered by the users of that unit any more than the cost of each mile of the State Highway System can be recovered from each user of that particular mile. They must be averaged out. Hence, all revenue derived directly from aviation should be applied to the completion of a state-wide system

DEVELOPMENT OF A STATE-WIDE SYSTEM OF AIRPORTS

Generally the aircraft industry must look to government for the further development of landing fields. Private airports have a necessary and logical place in a State-wide System of Landing Places, and the committee has recommendations aimed at helping private airports stay in business. But the long term trend, especially in a rapidly growing State, is against the maintenance of the present number of private airports. let alone the development of new ones.

The principle of government aid to transportation industries is not new. From the time of federal land grants to railroads down to today's huge highway programs, government has recognized the development of transportation as having a public interest. The cities and counties of California recognized the need before the State Government did. Until 1949, the State gave no direct aid to airport construction, leaving the field to the Federal and local Government. One result has been the growth of airports of increasing size and complexity in the metropolitan areas. They are geared to commercial aviation and have outgrown private aircraft There has been no sponsorship for airports clearly needed for intrastate flying.

California's State Government started taking an interest in airport development in 1949 when unclaimed gasoline tax refunds on aviation fuel were segregated. The money has been turned over to cities and counties owning airports for capital improvement. The law setting up this fund, incidentally, expires unless renewed at this session.

The committee believes this segregation of refunds should continue. But it recommends that the money be held at the state level for allocation to specific airport projects fitting into an adequate state network. It has been pointed out to the committee that no new airport has been sarted as a result of the program. And the statement has been made that none will be as long as the money is divided among all the airport-owning local governments of the State.

One difficulty is the small amount of money that any single local government gets. In the first 12 months the law was in force, $312,597.17 was distributed. The shares ranged from approximately $135 received by the City of Hayward, to $26,375 received by the County of Los Angeles.

Not only has the money been dissipated into shares usually not large enough to do any lasting good, but the committee heard complaints that the spirit, if not the letter of the legislative act, has been violated. The law specifies that the money be used for capital improvements at airports. One witness asserted one local government used its share to replace hangar doors. Other witnesses said a number of localities placed the money in their airport funds, but reduced the amount put into the fund from other sources by an equal amount.

A statement to the committee by the staff of the California Aeronautics Commission also pointed out that the funds are not matched with federal airport funds, as would be possible if expended on specific airport projects under proper state control. "The amount could be more than doubled in effectiveness in this manner," the statement said, and continued:

"The amounts distributed to the cities and counties have been used largely to offset capital expenditures already budgeted, or to make minor improvements to existing airports. So far as is known, no new airports have resulted from this form of state aid. The allocations are being dissipated without substantial gain to the State.

"The method of distribution of funds under this act is impractical for several reasons, among them:

"(a) There is no state control over expenditures

"(b) Allocation bears no relationship to airport need.

"(c) Contingent upon ownership rather than desire to own.

"(d) Amounts are relatively insignificant individually.

"(e) Allocation wholly unfair to some counties.

"Another source of airport funds derived solely from aviation is the sales tax on aviation gasoline applied only if refund is claimed. For the first 12 months of segregation of aviation MVF taxes, this amounted to $369,027.27.

"There is ample justification for state assistance in the federal aid airport program—now extended to 1958. The states readily participate in the federal aid highway programs and all other similar federal subventures. We have indicated where $500,000 per year is being derived solely from the aviation industry. In all fairness it should be applied to an airport construction program."

The Aeronautics Commission also has prepared a "California Airport Study" recommending the construction of a state-wide system of 45 airports by 1955, when it is estimated California will have some 19,000 private aircraft. The program should provide at least a tentative basis for allocation of the unrefunded gasoline tax money. Of the program, the study says:

"The 1955 program which will fulfill most of California's airport needs, will cost about $14,800,000, of which $7,300,000 will most probably be contributed by the Federal Government under provisions of the Federal Airport Act of 1946, leaving a state and local share of $7,300,000. This expenditure of state, county and/or city funds for airports appears to be reasonable and equitable when compared to state expenditures for other forms of transportation.

Highway capital expenditure by the State alone for construction, reconstruction, and improvements, less federal reimbursements, for the fiscal year ended June, 1949, amounts to $18.05 per year for each licensed motor vehicle operator. This airport program proposed the capital expenditure of $19.89 per licensed pilot per year for a period of five years on the same basis."

The statement adds significantly:

"Privately owned airports, with some exceptions, are not considered for the reason that there is no assurance that any of these will be in existence at any time in the future."

The 1955 program proposed follows:

THE AIRPLANE IN AGRICULTURE

The airplane is becoming just as important a farm tool in California as the tractor. This fact was brought home to the committee impressively by farm delegations. And farmers who are using airplanes in their operations now believe that use of planes is still in an early stage. They compare it with the state the automobile industry had reached in 1912.

California has about 8,000,000 acres of land under cultivation. In 1947, 600,000 of those acres were treated or planted by airplane. The next year, 850,000 acres were treated by air; in 1949, over 2,000,000; and this year more than 3,000,000. This year, the airplane will be used over fully a half of California's farm acreage if unrestricted flying is permitted.

Cultivation of one important farm crop, rice, has been almost entirely converted to an air operation in California. Farmers told the committee that 95 percent of the rice in California is planted or treated by air. Many rice farmers cover their acreage three times by airplane in one season—seeding, fertilizing, and applying weed killers. A fourth operation has recently been added, application of a special drying agent to dry the rice on the stalk.

The airplane may be the tool with which to reclaim many thousands of acres of brush land in the foothill areas for pasture or cultivation. Chemicals have been developed that apparently will do the job at a cost that appears to make the method worthwhile. One witness told the committee that effective brush control would increase the value of the land from a dollar or two an acre to $25 or $30.

The farm groups testifying before the committee united in asking for more research by the University of California on agricultural uses of airplanes Research on insecticides and the so-called "weed killers" is going forward rapidly. What is sought is study of the techniques of application of these agents by air, and of any special effects resulting from their application by air. The effect of weather conditions on air application is a field in itself. The university conducted a field experiment this year in controlled brush burning. The only experimentation in air treatment of brushland so far has been done by farmers as individuals or groups.

"Technical knowledge has been available to the aircraft companies for their type of work, and to the Army for its, but in the agricultural field there has been very little technical ability applied," one witness told the committee.

Several witnesses complained that California was behind other states in research in agricultural aviation. Illinois, Texas, and Oklahoma were mentioned as states leading California in this respect. In Texas an airplane especially fitted for treatment of farm land is being designed at a state college.

The case for more research in the field was stated in a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of the Farm Bureau Federation, as follows:

> "The use of aircraft in California agriculture is expanding yearly. Major present and potential uses include the application of insecticides for insect and disease control and herbicides for weed control, the application of fertilizers, defoliants and hormones, the seeding of grains and grasses, and the emergency feeding of livestock. Other uses of significance to farm people include locating and controlling fires and the air transport of high quality perishables.

"Because this phase of agricultural endeavor is relatively new, not a great deal is known with respect to such matters as the most effective types of planes for various agricultural purposes, the factors influencing the safe use of various materials, the most efficient dispensing equipment for various purposes, the physical forms in which various materials may be most efficiently used, and a host of other matters.

"There are many private organizations doing some research along some of these lines or which would be willing to contribute or collaborate with a coordinating effort.

"It is therefore recommended that the College of Agriculture of the University of California give consideration to undertaking the responsibility for planning, coordinating, and carrying out research relative to the use of aircraft in agriculture, and in disseminating information among those groups and individuals who are involved in this phase of agricultural endeavors."

Farm groups, including the Farm Bureau Federation, also have urged the retention by the University of the College Airport at the Davis Campus, and its expansion as a center for research in agricultural aviation. Farmers also have an equal if not greater interest in the development of a regional system of small airports, both in rural areas and in metropolitan areas where the large commercial airports are virtually inaccessible to the private flyer.

Representatives of the Flying Farmers, Inc., expressed themselves as willing to pay the same tax on gasoline as paid by the automobile owners, if that would result in expansion of airport facilities. Many asked for the development of economical landing strips beside highways.

Both houses of the Legislature in 1950 approved a concurrent resolution asking the University of California to enter into a program of research in agricultural aviation. The resolution also asked for development of the University Airport. Approval of a similar resolution this year might re-emphasize the Legislature's interest. A further and more effective step would be provision of funds for such a program.

The 1950 resolution follows:

WHEREAS, The practicability and the potentialities of the use of the aircraft as a tool of agriculture has been demonstrated by many agencies, both public and private; and

WHEREAS, The major present and potential uses of the aircraft in agriculture include the application of insecticides for insect and disease control and herbicides for weed control, the application of fertilizers, defoliants and hormones, the seeding of grains and grasses, and the emergency feeding of livestock; and

WHEREAS, Statistics from the State Department of Agriculture show that over 600,000 acres of crops were treated by aircraft for pests and diseases in 1947, over 850,000 acres in 1948, and over 2,000,000 acres in 1949, thus indicating the phenomenal increase in the use of aircraft in agriculture; and

WHEREAS, The Joint Legislative Committee on Agriculture and Livestock Problems after hearings and investigations of all phases of agricultural aviation over a period of more than two years has recommended the establishment of a coordinated program of research and experimentation in all phases of agricultural aviation; and

WHEREAS, The University of California now owns and operates the University Airport at the University of California at Davis, and has the proper facilities at the College of Agriculture to carry on experiments in agricultural aviation; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, the Senate thereof concurring, That the Legislature of the State of California hereby urges and recommends to the Board of Regents of the University of California and to President Robert Gordon Sproul and Doctor Claude B. Hutchison, Dean of the College of Agriculture, the early initiation and implementation of a thorough and coordinated program of research and experimentation in all phases of agricultural aviation; and be it further Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly is directed to transmit copies of this resolution to the Board of Regents of the University of California, to President Robert Gordon Sproul, and to Doctor Claude B. Hutchison.

CIVIL DEFENSE PLAN

The California Aeronautics Commission and its staff are to be commended for taking the lead in preparing a civil defense plan for owners and operators of private planes in California. With the outbreak of World War II, civil aviation came to a standstill in California with the exception of regularly scheduled airlines. Under the plan proposed by the commission, civil aviation may continue in the State, and can play an important part in civilian defense. The preliminary stage of the plan already is being put into effect by the commission staff.

The staff worked with the Sixth Region of the Civil Aeronautics Administration, with an industry-wide advisory group and with representatives of the Army, Navy, and Air Force defense establishments in the area in preparing the plan. It has the tacit approval of those agencies.

"Our plan is specific," a statement of the commission staff to the committee said, "in that it places responsibility for doing the necessary things and taking the necessary action to meet requirements of the military establishment on the West Coast. We believe that through its adoption we can prevent the arbitrary grounding of all aircraft in this area and make the potential of civil aviation available to the defense effort and disaster relief planners."

Technicians have pointed out the tremendous waste of a valuable transportation medium that would result from the grounding or removing of California's 10,000 civil aircraft. In emergency, radio-equipped aircraft could be used by civilian defense officials for the observation so necessary to action. They could be used in traffic control in emergency, spotting bottlenecks and helping in the efficient routing of traffic.

Above all, they could be used for relief and rescue missions. Recently the necessity for importing doctors as quickly as possible from inland states, in event California was the object of an atom bomb strike, has been emphasized. Other technicians and workers would have to be rushed to the stricken area, as would supplies. Railroads can be cut, and highways also may be rendered useless by a damage at any point along their length.

But emergency landings and takeoffs of small aircraft can be accomplished from reasonably level strips of less than 1,000 feet in length. It has been calculated that 2,000 small airplanes, only a fifth of those now in California, could bring 5,000 needed personnel to a stricken area from 100 to 150 miles distance within an hour. The same number could evacuate a similar group of persons from an area under attack. Two thousand small aircraft could bring in from inland stockpiles 1,000,000 pounds of medical supplies, surgical instruments, bandages, blankets, and other material in a matter of hours.

It is possible that the private aircraft could play the similar role in an attack on California to that played by small boats in the Dunkirk rescue mission in World War II.

If there is no attack on California, removal of civil aircraft would deprive owners of planes of a $25,000,000 investment It also would halt the operation of flying schools in the state who also have a $25,000,000 investment.

The State Aeronautics Commission's plan is designed to meet the objections to civilian flights in war time by setting up a chain of communication that will allow military and civil authorities to know where each plane is at any given time. It is interesting to note that regulations issued by the Federal Civil Aeronautics Administration recently follow almost exactly the plan proposed by the state agency.

PRESERVATION OF EXISTING AIRPORTS

FRESNO, Dec. 29—An irate old farmer today forced the Civil Aeronautics Authority to order a partial shutdown of Fresno's bustling municipal airport—Hammer Field. At noon today Marshall Pipes, 70 year old farmer, moved a 40 foot high water tower a quarter-mile across his farm and smack up against the main runway's end—"out of pure spite," city officials said.

Because of the farmer's tower, the CAA banned all night or instrument landings at Hammer Field, shutting it down for 12 hours daily and for all 24 hours in bad weather. The ban affects 12 daily flights by Trans World Airlines and United Airlines, plus dozens of other civil and military flights. It will disrupt airmail service to 200,000 people in the Fresno area.

Last night the CAA wired Farmer Pipes a plea to move his tower, the Fresno Postmaster threatened action for delaying the mails, and City Attorney C. M. Izias vowed to take him into court. "It's just plain cussedness," said Attorney Ozias, "he's got 40 acres alongside Hammer Field and he claims that the airport's presence prevents him from subdividing his land. So he moved that tower over to force us to buy him out or pay him $20,000 damages, which he's claimed. That tower is a menace to aircraft and to human lives. But the city isn't going to hand over a lot of money just for Mr. Pipe's pleasure. We're going to have to fight this out. I'll probably sue for an injunction tomorrow."

Pipes has hired three attorneys for his fight against the air age. One of them, Irving T. Atten, shrugged off the fuss. "That tower wasn't moved just for spite," he said. "Mr. Pipes just wanted to move it, that's all. It's just a little tower," he said. "Of course, if the city wants to, it could always buy Mr. Pipe's property and take the tower down." In the meantime Pipe's dreams tonight were undisturbed by the roar of passing planes. Hammer Field, Fresno multimillion dollar municipal pride, was as quite as a grave. Not a plane came in.

The above news dispatch, printed in the San Francisco Chronicle last month, shows graphically one of the problems in maintaining the airports California already has. Whatever the rights in the individual situation, it would seem that the State has an interest in preservation and expansion of an Airport System. But courts have held that property owners have the right to air space above their property at least to a height of 500 feet.

While the courts hold that a property owner has not a right to air space for an indefinite height above his land, he does have a right up to the lower limit of navigable air space And that does not include safe glide paths for planes coming into airports.

In 1946, in the case of United States vs. Causby and Wife the United States Supreme Court said:

> The navigable airspace which Congress has placed in the public domain is "airspace above the minimum safe altitudes of flight prescribed by the Civil Aeronautics Authority." If that agency prescribed 83 feet as the minimum safe altitude, then we would have presented the question of the validity of the regulation. But nothing of the sort has been done. The path of the glide governs the method of operating—of landing or taking off. The altitude required for that operation is not the minimum safe altitude of flight which is the downward reach of the navigable airspace. The minimum prescribed by the authority is 500 feet during the day and 1,000 feet at night for air carriers * * *. The Civil Aeronautics Authority has, of course, the power to prescribe air traffic rules. But Congress has defined navigable airspace only in terms of one of them—the minimum safe altitudes of flight.
> "We have said that the airspace is a public highway. Yet it is obvious that if the landowner is to have full enjoyment of the land, he must have exclusive control of the immediate reaches of the enveloping atmosphere. Otherwise buildings could not be erected, trees could not be planted, and even fences could not be run."

Zoning under present laws apparently is not the answer, either. Suits by owners of property adjoining an airport still may be filed to abate the airport as a nuisance, and adjoining property owners still may build structures interfering with glide paths. Curiously, air approaches may not be protected by zoning an area for airport use, but the same result can be achieved by zoning limits for the height of buildings in an area, without mentioning the purpose of safeguarding glide paths.

One solution for public airports, although it may be an expensive one, is the purchase of surrounding lands and their resale with air easements.

For private airports, in addition to the problem of preserving approaches, is added the problem of taxation, aggravated by increasing land values. A statement to the committee by the California Aeronautics Commission declared:

> "There can be no permanence in privately-owned commercial airports and no dependence placed on their availability in the future * * * The odds are strictly against private airport ownership and operation because of excessive tax burdens, mounting real estate values, insurance costs, and most important, the recurring liability to nuisance and abatement suits. These factors render it impossible to maintain an airport offering free landing facilities to the public merely to provide a place to carry on an allied business."

A number of solutions have been proposed. Some of them would be listed as:

1. Create a subdivision of the airport property and dedicate the runways and taxiways as "public ways".
2. Deed the landing area to a political subdivision with a reversion to the original owner if not maintained as an airport, original owner retaining all rights on adjoining property.
3. Provide tax relief to privately-owned airports which serve a public need.
4. Provide, if necessary by law, that commercial airports which serve the airport needs of a community and the flying public may be owned by a non-profit corporation under rigid controls and thereby be exempted from taxation.
5. Outright purchase of the entire airport by a political subdivision.

Each of the solutions has its defects. The proposal for dedication of runways as public ways was given exhaustive study at Los Angeles County. A "guinea pig" project involving the Central Airport was set up. But the owner, Mr. E. J. Kidwell, testified before the committee that the owners' interests and the county's interests were irreconciliable. He said the final proposal was to make a public way of a strip 350 feet wide through his airport, while his unproductive property totaled 52 acres. He indicated the saving would not be worthwhile.

Mr. Kidwell also criticized the second proposal, to deed the landing area to the political subdivision, on grounds the airport operator would be hampered in developing the property. Also, the city or other political subdivision would have no return for its expense in maintaining the landing area.

Outright tax exemption would be unpopular and in these days of heavy tax burdens the trend should be away from tax exemptions, rather than toward granting new ones. Mandatory public purchase of airports hardly would be feasible to enforce. But public ownership eventually will become imperative if privately-owned airports continue to disappear.

This situation emphasizes the futility of allowing private airports to go out of business, only to be replaced anyway by public ones.

It is suggested that further legal study be made of the ramifications of non-profit operation of airports which have a public purpose. That approach has been used in other states for the continued operation of municipal airports where the city no longer desired to remain as the operator. It should be determined whether there would be a similar advantage in the case of private airports.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The committee recommends:

1. That the segregation of uncollected motor vehicle fuel tax refunds by the Controller be continued. That the Controller be directed to hold such unrefunded money subject to appropriation by the Legislature. That the Legislature declare its intention to apply the funds to the construction, in cooperation with Federal and local Governments, of a State-wide System of Airports.

2. That the Legislature substitute an "in lieu" tax for the present ad valorem tax as it applies to airplanes other aircraft flying in interstate or foreign commerce or by scheduled airlines; that the Legislature set a schedule of values of aircraft for taxation purposes based on original purchase price decreased by a scale of percentages depending on the age of the aircraft, that the tax be collected by the Department of Motor Vehicles; that the Controller disburse the funds collected among cities and counties and the cities and counties be directed to use the money solely for aviation purposes.

3 That the owner of each private aircraft be required to register with the Department of Motor Vehicles the certificate of registration issued to him by the Civil Aeronautics Administration of the Federal Government; that a small fee be charged by the department for such registration.

4. That the Attorney General be requested to make a thorough legal study of the use of the method of inverse condemnation as a means of protecting the approaches of airports in California.

5. That the Regents of the University of California be urged to formulate an adequate program of research into the agricultural uses of aircraft, and to submit a plan for such program and its estimated cost to the Legislature. Such a program should include studies of the application of insecticides, herbicides, fertilizers, grains, and grasses, and the emergency feeding of livestock by airplane.

6. That the present program of flight indoctrination carried on by the State Department of Education be maintained and expanded.

REQUEST FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT TO USE ASSEMBLY CHAMBER

Mr. Dickey asked for, and was granted, unanimous consent that the Third Annual Y. M. C. A. Youth and Government Model Legislature be permitted to use the Assembly Chamber on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, February 22, 23, and 24, 1951, for the purpose of holding a statewide convention, unless the Assembly Chamber is needed for a legislative session.

STATEMENT BY HON. SAM L. COLLINS, SPEAKER

The Assembly Journal of January 22, 1951, containing the names, authorizations, and monthly statements of legislative advocates was printed at a cost of $1,500. This contains approximately 150 names of registered advocates. At this rate it costs $10 per advocate. If all of this information is required to be printed monthly while the Legislature is in session, it will require 400 pages per month which will cost $1,200 per month. This will require printing of five Journals, which will be a total of $6,000. Also assuming that a minimum of 200 advocates continued filing monthly statements during the time the Legislature is not in session until they return at the Budget Session in 1952, this will require 3,600 pages to be printed in the Journal at the Budget Session at a cost of approximately $11,000. Therefore, the total cost of one year's operation under the present system would amount to $17,000.

If merely the name of the advocate and whom he is authorized to represent were to be printed in the Journal, it could be done for approximately $150 per year, a total savings of $16,850.

House Resolution No. 61

Relative to the creation of the Assembly Interim Committee on the Cost of Living

WHEREAS, The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics cost of living index has skyrocketed to new highs in recent weeks, thus reflecting the steeply rising costs which the people of this State must pay for the necessities of life; and

WHEREAS, The higher costs of many commodities appear to be attributable to shortages in supply and the exacting of high profits rather than to the increased costs of labor and new materials; and

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolutions were offered:

By Mr. Brady:

House Resolution No. 64

Relative to continuation of direct air route travel from Sacramento, California, to Washington, D C, via United Air Lines—and the dismissal by the Civil Aeronautics Board of the Proceeding (DOCKET 3660) which would eliminate the segment of the United Air Lines' direct route between Chicago, Illinois, and Washington, D. C

WHEREAS, Since 1943, by virtue of a certificate of public convenience and necessity granted by the Civil Aeronautics Board, United Air Lines has provided a direct route of air transportation between San Francisco, California, and Washington, D. C ; and

WHEREAS, This has brought Sacramento, the capital of the State of California, in direct route via San Francisco with the capital of the United States of America ; and

WHEREAS, The Civil Aeronautics Board has currently instituted a proceeding to determine whether public convenience and necessity require elimination or suspension of United Air Lines' through service to Washington, D. C ; and

WHEREAS, The elimination of the Chicago-Washington, D. C., segment of the direct route would necessitate a changing of 'planes in Chicago before one could proceed from the West Coast to Washington, D. C. ; and

WHEREAS, The presence of the "Chicago Bottleneck" for years had been constantly discommoding surface travel because of the necessity of changing trains and we should not permit air transport to find itself in the same unfortunate position ; and

WHEREAS, California is the fastest growing state in the Nation and as such has unusual community of interest with the Nation's capital ; and

WHEREAS, The service provided by United Air Lines is of vital importance to the heavily populated and strategic areas which it accommodates, and is particularly necessary, in uncurtailed form, at the present time when international as well as domestic exigencies demand that air transport facilities between the Nation's capital and its defense centers be maintained at a maximum level of efficiency ; and

WHEREAS, The only direct one-carrier service from Sacramento, capital of California, to Washington, D. C., capital of the Nation, is along the route now in question ; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Assembly of the State of California does hereby wholeheartedly endorse and support the petition of the United Air Lines to the Civil Aeronautics Board to dismiss the proceeding (DOCKET 3660) which menaces Sacramento's direct air service to Washington, D C. ; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly be directed to prepare suitable copies of this resolution and to forward same to the Civil Aeronautics Board, Delos W. Rentzel, Esq., Chairman, to the Chairman of the Congressional Delegation from California, Honorable Cecil R. King, and to the United States Senators from the State of California, Honorable William F. Knowland, and Honorable Richard Nixon

Resolution read, and ordered referred to the Committee on Rules

Senate Bill No. 120, "An act making an appropriation to the Emergency Fund specified in Item 277 of the Budget Act of 1950, relating to the repair and restoration of property damaged or destroyed by storms or floods and the expenditure of money appropriated therefor," in my opinion constitutes an emergency bill within the meaning of that term as used in Section 34 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of California, the consideration of which should not await the final enactment of the Budget Bill.

This measure makes an appropriaion of $2,000,000 out of the Flood Control Fund of 1946 to be used on a matching basis for repair and restoration of property damaged or destroyed by storm or flood.

The amount available for this purpose at present is not sufficient to meet the expenditures which will be required to repair storm and flood damage due to the recent flood conditions in Northern California. It is necessary therefore that this measure become effective at once.

I therefore recommend consideration of Senate Bill No. 120 as an emergency measure.

Respectfuly submitted,

EARL WARREN, Governor

Resolution ordered transmitted to the Senate.

CONSIDERATION OF HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 51

By Mr. Sam L. Collins:

House Resolution No. 51

Relative to initiative measures presented to the Legislature

WHEREAS, Section 1 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of California provides that, when an initiative petition proposing a law is presented to the Legislature, the law so proposed must be either enacted or rejected without change or amendment by the Legislature within 40 days from the time it is received by the Legislature; and

WHEREAS, Such measures are required to be presented to the Legislature as soon as it convenes and organizes in general session which ordinarily is the first day of the session; and

WHEREAS, The Constitution also provides that the Legislature may meet in general session for not more than 30 days and thereupon must recess for not less than 30 days; and

WHEREAS, If the 40-day period within which the Legislature may act is the first 40 calendar days after the receipt of the measure including the days within the mandatory recess the time within which the Legislature may act would be drastically reduced because the Legislature may not constitutionally be in session more than 30 days prior to the recess, and it was, in fact, in session for only 15 days prior to the constitutional recess of the 1951 General Session; and

WHEREAS, At the time the constitutional amendment relating to initiative measures was proposed to the people the sessions of the Legislature were continuous and no recess was required to be taken and under such conditions the Legislature would have had 40 full calendar days within which it could act upon initiative measures presented to it; and

WHEREAS, The constitutional amendment providing for the bifurcated session and the mandatory recess was proposed later than the constitutional amendment relating to initiative measures and both proposals were adopted at the same election; and

WHEREAS, There is nothing to indicate an actual and deliberate intent on the part of the people in adopting the provision for the bifurcated session to reduce the period within which the Legislature may act upon initiative measures presented to it; and

WHEREAS, It has proved impossible for the Legislature adequately to consider and act upon the important measures presented to it at its 1951 General Session prior to the constitutional recess and had it attempted to take hasty action upon such measures the results might have been improvident; and

WHEREAS, It is essential to the proper functioning of a legislative body that action should be taken only after due deliberation and consideration of all of the aspects of a matter coming before it, and any limitation on the time within which it must act should be construed to allow as much time as possible for the legislative process to function in a normal manner, and

WHEREAS, The constitutional provision in question is susceptible to the construction that the 40 day period is to be calculated as the first 40 days during which the Legislature is in actual session excluding the period of the mandatory recess; now therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That this Assembly hereby asserts and claims the right to act on any initiative measure presented to it during the full period of 40 days while the Legislature is in actual session after the receipt by it of such measure, excluding from such 40 day period the days of the mandatory constitutional recess

Resolution read, and adopted unanimously.

Request for Unanimous Consent

Mr. Brady asked for, and was granted, unanimous consent to take up House Resolution No. 64, at this time, without reference to file.

CONSIDERATION OF HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 64

House Resolution No. 64

Relative to continuation of direct air route travel from Sacramento, California, to Washington, D. C., via United Air Lines—and the dismissal by the Civil Aeronautics Board of the Proceeding (Docket 3660) which would eliminate the segment of the United Air Lines direct route between Chicago, Illinois, and Washington, D. C.

WHEREAS, Since 1943, by virtue of a certificate of public convenience and necessity granted by the Civil Aeronautics Board, United Air Lines has provided a direct route of air transportation between San Francisco, California, and Washington, D. C.; and

WHEREAS, This has brought Sacramento, the capital of the State of California, in direct route via San Francisco with the capital of the United States of America; and

WHEREAS, The Civil Aeronautics Board has currently instituted a proceeding to determine whether public convenience and necessity require elimination or suspension of United Air Lines' through service to Washington, D. C.; and

WHEREAS, The elimination of the Chicago-Washington, D. C., segment of the direct route would necessitate a changing of planes in Chicago before one could proceed from the West Coast to Washington, D. C.; and

WHEREAS, The presence of the "Chicago Bottleneck" for years had been constantly discommoding surface travel because of the necessity of changing trains and we should not permit air transport to find itself in the same unfortunate position; and

WHEREAS, California is the fastest growing state in the Nation and as such has unusual community of interest with the Nation's capital; and

WHEREAS, The service provided by United Air Lines is of vital importance to the heavily populated and strategic areas which it accommodates, and is particularly necessary, in uncurtailed form, at the present time when international as well as domestic exigencies demand that air transport facilities between the Nation's capital and its defense centers be maintained at a maximum level of efficiency; and

WHEREAS, The only direct one-carrier service from Sacramento, capital of California, to Washington, D. C, capital of the Nation, is along the route now in question; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Assembly of the State of California does hereby wholeheartedly endorse and support the petition of United Air Lines to the Civil Aeronautics Board to dismiss the proceeding (Docket 3660) which menaces Sacramento's direct air service to Washington, D. C.; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly be directed to prepare suitable copies of this resolution and to forward same to the Civil Aeronautics Board, Delos W. Rentzel, Esq., Chairman, to the Chairman of the Congressional Delegation from California, Honorable Cecil R. Senate Bill No. 120

By C. V. TAYLOR, Assistant Secretary

REQUEST FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT THAT STATEMENT RELATIVE TO CERTAIN BILLS BE PRINTED IN JOURNAL

Mr. Dunn asked for, and was granted, unanimous consent that a statement relative to certain bills be ordered printed in the Journal in 10-point type as follows:

STATEMENT SUBMITTED BY MESSRS. DUNN, GEDDES, AND KIRKWOOD IN EXPLANATION OF THE MAJOR PROVISIONS OF A. B. 1984, 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988, 1562, 2061, AND 3109

ASSEMBLY, CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE, January 23, 1951

It is believed that the following statement will more clearly indicate to the reader the major changes in the Education Code than will a perusal of the actual bills. It also shows where any of these bills contain similar provisions or suggested alternative changes.

Assembly Bill 1984

The bill proposes to place school support on the basis of the current average daily attendance rather than on the a d a. for the preceding fiscal year; to increase the amounts allowed as basic aid, to raise the foundation programs at all levels, to liberalize allowances for transportation and purchase of school busses and transportation of the physically handicapped, and to revise the method of computing average daily attendance.

Current Support (A. B 1984)

The present plan under which the State reimburses school districts for attendance in the preceding year, giving some partial aid for growth would be supplanted by one in which the schools would be paid for the cost of educating the number of pupils currently in attendance.

Because of rapid growth many districts now face the problem of educating far more children than they have money for.

Under the terms of A. B. 1984 the initial computation of state aid due each district still would be based on the average daily attendance recorded in the preceding year, but supplemental apportionments would be made not later than February 15th and June 30th for current attendance in excess of that of the preceding year. These apportionments would be based on current attendance reports on December 15th and May 31st.

The above plan would take the place of the existing formula under which some state assistance is given those districts experiencing the most rapid growth and having the least ability to raise money locally. The present graduated scale of aid, which is geared to the assessed wealth of the district and under which the district absorbs only a portion of the burden of growth, would be eliminated.

The State Department of Education estimates that if current levels of state support are retained the proposed plan of reimbursing districts for growth would increase state costs by $11,500,000 per year. However, if the foundation programs are increased in accordance with other provisions of this bill the cost of placing state aid on a current basis would be $14,500,000.

(This bill has similar provisions to A. B. 1984 for current reimbursement.)

Basic Aid (A. B. 1984)

This provision calls for an increase in what is known as basic aid, the amount which the State pays all school districts without regard to their ability to raise money from local tax sources. At present basic aid is $90 per year for each unit of average daily attendance. That is the minimum permissible under provisions of the State Constitution. A. B. 1984 would increases the amount to $97.

Assembly Bill 1986

(This bill provides for an increase in basic aid from $90 to $100 instead of to $97 as in A. B. 1984.)

Assembly Bill 1984

Foundation Programs

Foundation programs are the minimum amounts which the State guarantees will be available for the education of each child providing the school district shoulders its share of the cost by levying a specified local tax. If the yield of the local tax when added to the basic aid is less than the foundation program the State gives the district sufficient aid to raise the total to that of the foundation program.

A. B. 1984 proposes to increase not only the foundation program at each level of education, but also to increase the local tax which a district must levy to qualify for state aid.

Elementary

The present foundation program of $148 per child guaranteed with a district tax of 45 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation, would be upped to $185 with a 65-cent tax Special provisions would be made for necessary schools with small enrollments and for districts with extremely low assessed valuation. This change would cost an estimated $30,000,000.

High School

The high school program would be increased from $185 with a 32-cent district tax to $210 with a 40-cent tax. Provision also would be made for the small and the poor high schools. The increased cost is estimated at $2,500,000 a year.

Junior College

The junior college program would be raised from $210 with a 22-cent district tax to $250 with a 25-cent tax at a yearly cost of $1,700,000.

Transportation

Limits state transportation aid to districts to $3 per unit of average daily attendance in all schools and classes instead of the present maximum of $4,700,000 per year. Stricter control of the amounts allocated for current transportation expenses and purchase of school busses is authorized.

Districts unified since July 1, 1948, would be compensated by the State for purchase of busses made necessary by changes in attendance centers (schools) at any time during the first five years of unification instead of only during the first year, under terms of the bill.

The above changes would increase state costs for transportation over 1950-51, by an estimated $700,000 a year.

An allowance of $350 a year in excess of other allowances would be made for the transportation of each pupil of the following categories: Deaf, blind, cerebral palsied and orthopedically handicapped.

Minimum School Year (A. B. 1984)

To encourage more complete use of school facilities and to give longer training to the pupils the bill would increase the minimum school year from 170 days to 175 days and would fix 175 instead of 170 as the divisor in the computation of average daily attendance for purposes of determining state aid.

Assembly Bill 1987

(This bill establishes 175 days as the divisor for computation of average daily attendance in districts maintaining school 175 days or more, but retains the existing minimum school year of 170 days; provides that districts operating schools from 170 to 175 days shall use as the divisor the actual number of days school was maintained. This change would cost $1,100,000 a year.)

Improved District Organization (A. B. 1984)

As an incentive to reorganization $5 would be added to the foundation program at each level for unified districts formed after July 1, 1950. This incentive would continue for five years.

Cigarette Tax

The bill calls for a tax of 2 cents on each package of cigarettes, the proceeds to be deposited in the General Fund rather than to be earmarked. The tax would be imposed on the wholesaler and would be administered by the State Board of Equalization. To prevent "Bootlegging" a meter would be used to mark each package on which the tax is paid. No tax would be levied on cigars or tobacco.

Assembly Bill 1985

This bill is identical to A. B. 1984 except that the provisions for a cigarette tax are not included.

Assembly Bill 1988

Re-enacts without material change the existing provisions of the Education Code which expires June 30th for operation of the apportionment program. These provisions are necessary regardless of the amount of state aid fixed by other statutes.

Assembly Bill 2061

This measure continues in effect the existing apportionment law for the support of the public kindergartens, elementary schools, high schools, and junior colleges (Chapters 2, 12, 13, 14, 15, and 16 of Division 3 of the Education Code) exactly as that law existed on January 8, 1951, except in the following major respects:

1. Transportation Aid to Districts. Article 2 of Chapter 15 of Division 3 is revised (by repeal and addition) to (a) eliminate the numerous technical errors which appear in the article as enacted by Chapter 74 of Statutes 1950 First Extraordinary Session, (b) permits the Superintendent of Public Instruction to exercise more strict control over the allowance of transportation aid to districts, (c) provide that the maximum amount which may annually be apportioned by the Superintendent of Public Instruction for transportation aid to school districts shall not exceed three dollars ($3) per unit of average daily attendance in all schools and classes instead of the present maximum of $4,700,000 per year. Under Assembly Bill No. 2061, as under the present law, all transportation aid up to an amount equal to two dollars ($2) per unit of the average daily attendance upon which the maximum amount of transportation aid is based, must come out of the $120 per unit of average daily attendance which the Constitution requires to be provided for the support of the public schools, and only the remainder of the maximum is an additional charge upon the General Fund. It is estimated that the additional maximum cost to the State of this provision for the Fiscal Year 1951-1952 over the maximum amount allowed under the existing law will be approximately $700,000.

Provisions for current reimbursement are similar to provisions in A. B.s Nos. 1984 and 1985.

Assembly Bill 1562

This bill provides for an increase in teacher salaries from the minimum provided by the Constitution of $2,400 to $3,000. It applies only to regularly certificated teachers. It does not apply to those holding emergency credentials.

This measure amends Sections 10752 and 11005 of the Revenue and Taxation Code.

The bill increases the license fee for motor vehicles from two (2) percent of the market value to three (3) percent of the market value. It further provides that the receipts of the fee, after deducting, as at present, amounts for the support of the Department of Motor Vehicles and retirement of state highway bonds, shall be apportioned in equal share to counties, cities, and the Auxiliary State School Fund instead of, as at present, equally between cities and counties.

The Auxiliary State School Fund is required to be apportioned annually to the school districts of the State pro rata on the basis of average daily attendance.

The additional revenue which the bill will provide for the support of public schools during 1951-1952 will be between $28,000,000 and $30,000,000, with the cities and counties receiving like amounts. The measure will not decrease the revenue which the cities and counties are entitled to receive under the existing law.

Assembly Bill 3109

Increases the maximum rates of local taxation which school districts may levy without the necessity of first obtaining approval at a special election. The new schedule of maximums would replace those fixed in 1932.

Following are the proposed changes:

Elementary without kindergarten—from 80 cents to $1.50.

Elementary with kindergarten—90 cents to $1.60.

High school—75 cents to $1.35.

Junior college—35 cents to 50 cents.

The schedule for unified districts:

Elementary and high school—from $1.55 to $2.85.

Kindergarten, elementary and high school—$1.65 to $2 95.

Elementary, high school and junior college—$1.90 to $3 35.

Kindergarten, elementary, high school, and junior college—from $2.00 to $3.45.

High school and junior college—$1.10 to $1.85.

Assembly Bill 1562

Increases the minimum salary for fully trained and credentialed teachers from $2,400 a year to $3,000 a year. The constitutional minimum of $2,400 would remain for emergency and provisional teachers.

REQUEST FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT THAT STATEMENT BE PRINTED AS SEPARATE DOCUMENT AND 2,000 COPIES BE PRINTED

Mr. Dunn asked for, and was granted, unanimous consent that the above statement be printed in 10-point type as a separate document, and that 2,000 copies be ordered printed.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

Hon. Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly
California State Legislature

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to House Resolution No. 237 of the 1949 Legislature, your Interim Committee on Public Health was organized and does herewith submit its final report, together with the committee's recommendations and findings.

During the 1949 and 1950 Sessions of the Legislature several bills were referred to this committee for study, i.e., acute alcoholism, dangerous drugs and related subjects, chronic diseases, investigation of certain institutions, physio therapy, the practice of physical therapy, private cemeteries, chiropractors and their methods of practice, regulations of privately owned ambulances, and many other problems.

During the 1950 Session of the Legislature a preliminary report was submitted and some of the findings and recommendations made prior to the 1950 Session were reported on, and will thus be eliminated from this final report.

The committee wishes to acknowledge its appreciation for the cooperation and assistance rendered it by the medical directors and their staffs of the various state institutions; Dr. Wilton L. Halverson, Director of the Department of Public Health, and his assistants; to Dr. Frank Tallman, Director of the Department of Mental Hygiene, and members of his staff; the Members of The State Pharmacy Board; The Board of Chiropractic Examiners; to the District Attorney's Office in San Francisco; to Dr. George Uhl, City Health Officer for the City of Los Angeles; Ben H. Read of the Public Health League of California; J. A. Sullivan of the County Mental Health Department of Los Angeles, and to the many others whose wholehearted cooperation and assistance in gathering the material, made this report possible.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN F. THOMPSON, Chairman
ARTHUR H. CONNOLLY, JR., Vice Chairman

INTRODUCTION

The many phases presented to the Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health on various subjects necessitated the committee holding several meetings from Ukiah to Los Angeles in order that all sections of the State could be properly heard by those interested in the many subjects confronting the committee.

Such subjects as state hospitals, chronic diseases, acute alcoholism, radiotherapy, dangerous drugs, physiotherapy, chiropractors, and many others were requested by those interested in the above subjects.

The committee endeavored in all cases to give both sides of any controversies a fair and impartial hearing.

Because of the need of additional time in order to make a thorough and complete study of some of the important problems, it was a physical impossibility to fully complete these studies and it is the belief of the committee that another Interim Committee on Public Health should be created in order to fully bring to the attention of the Legislature the need for legislation to correct sections in our codes that will benefit and protect the people of the State of California.

The committee has spent many months in research and investigations of all phases of the protection of the health and safety of the people of the State of California, and it is hoped that this report will better enable the Members of the Legislature to pass upon the many bills that will be introduced relative to this important phase of the lives of our citizens.

MENDOCINO STATE HOSPITAL

The Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health met in the Superintendent's Office of the Mendocino State Hospital on August 1, 1950. In addition to the committee members present there was also Mr. A. Edward Nichols, representing the Department of Mental Hygiene.

In the absence of Dr. David B. Williams, Superintendent and Medical Director of the hospital, Dr. Bramkamp, the Assistant Superintendent, received the committee. Chairman Thompson opened the meeting saying in part: "For one thing, I think the members of the Legislature should have a little better idea of what is taking place in the various state institutions regarding their problems, so that when legislation is placed before committees and on the floor of the Legislature, that the members themselves will have a better knowledge of what is going on and what is needed in the way of financial assistance via the budget."

Dr. Bramkamp explained some of the situations such as over-crowded conditions, the maximum security ward, conditioned reflex treatment, sexual psychopaths, psychopathic delinquents, and alcoholics, and suggested a tour of the hospital showing the committee what was taking place and how treatments for the various patients were administered. Before starting on the tour Dr. Bramkamp gave the committee a physical plan of the Mendocino State Hospital. In brief, this is what he said:

"The Mendocino State Hospital was established in 1893. It is located near the village of Talmage, Mendocino County, and is about 120 miles north of San Francisco, which contains the nearest medical and teaching centers.

"At present the total acreage of the institution is 1215. A little more than half of this acreage is devoted to some productive farm operations, such as dairy, hog ranch, poultry farm, orchards, gardens and field crops."

Following is the annual report on farming operations at the Mendocino State Hospital for the period commencing July 1, 1949, to June 30, 1950:

Dr. Bramkamp further stated: "Most of the physical plant was built a number of years ago, and many of the buildings are far from modern. The last ward built was a ward for chronic female patients, housing approximately 300 patients. This was completed about 1938.

"The current population is approximately 2,716, of which 1,623 are men and 1,093 are women. The normal capacity of the present buildings is rated at 1,426 men and 971 women. This gives an excess population of 319, of which 197 are men and 122 are women, making a total of 13.3 percent overcrowdedness. The patients are housed in 25 words. A number of these wards have been found inadequate or improper for several reasons, and are due to be replaced. The wards in the main building housing approximately 700 patients provide adequate housing facilities, but because of the fire hazard none but ambulatory patients can be kept in these wards. Two outside male wards, housing 200 patients, and two outside female wards, housing approximately 150 patients, fall in the same category. Under orders of the State Fire Marshal these buildings are also due for replacement.

"The admission ward is fairly modern, and houses 24 female and 25 male patients. This building also contains the surgery, dental offices, laboratory, X-ray department and hydrotherapy department, as well as a few apartments for employees. Although these admission wards are considered adequate for their original purpose, the facilities are now considerably strained for a number of reasons. The more important of these are the following:

"Most of the injured and seriously ill patients of the hospital now have to be cared for on the admission wards, because of the State Fire Marshal's ruling that the sick wards previously used are now in buildings scheduled for a replacement, and cannot contain bed patients. Moreover, the increase in the number of special treatments, such as conditioned reflex treatment, insulin therapy, electric shock therapy, etc., required beds needed for newly admitted patients, and seriously strain the capacity of these two small wards.

"Another ward deserving special mention is the criminal ward which now houses approximately 300 patients, and is only one of its type in the State. This is a maximum security building which is of fireproof construction, and provides adequately modern housing, although it is considered inadequate in other respects for the carrying out of current psychiatric practices."

The following are excerpts from the Annual Statistical Report submitted by Dr. William to Dr. Frank F. Tallman, Director of the Department of Mental Hygiene:

General

"During the year, in accordance with the policy of the department, there was a considerable increase in active thereapy in a number of fields as will be noted later in the report. This was accomplished despite personnel shortages in several important classifications and was made possible because of the full and enthusiastic cooperation of all the hospital employees, particularly the ward attendants. The fields in which the most marked increase in activity occurred are the following:

Attendants Training Program

Occupational Therapy

School for delinquents on maximum security ward

Research into, and active treatment for sexual psychopathy.

"The insulin ward was continued in operation throughout the year but facilities and personnel did not permit its enlargement. An average of 101 patients were treated during the year.

"The conditioned reflex treatment was also continued and it is proving worthwhile in a considerable percentage of patients.

"More active use was also made of consulting staff and most of the members of our staff have been encouraged to make regular visits to the hospital rather than wait when called for some special problem. These consultations have also been of great assistance in providing informal instruction in their specialties to members of the medical staff. Our inability to obtain the services of a neuro-surgeon made it impossible for us to perform any lobotomy operations Efforts are being made to obtain the services of a qualified neuro-surgeon from San Francisco and it is hoped that we will be able in the future to do a number of lobotomies for those patients for whom this operation is indicated. However, some operations are being performed at the Langley-Porter Clinic in San Francisco.

"Construction continued on four major building projects; the new kitchen and feeding unit, chronic male ward with a capacity of 404, female disturbed ward with a capacity of 90, and female convalescent ward with a capacity of 164. Construction projects planned for the immediate future are an auditorium and library, administration building, hospital and treatment unit added to the present Admission Building. Current plans are to convert the present Ward 10 into a commissary and recreation building. The wrecking of several old and condemned buildings is also planned as soon as the new wards are made available, which will probably be in the early part of 1951.

"There have been difficulties in filing all of our positions, both in the professional and non-professional categories.

Personnel

"As of June 30, 1950, the following positions were filled as compared with the number of positions authorized in the budget:

	Positions filled	Positions on budget
On the medical staff	11	16
On the nursing staff	15	25
In the attendant classification (including charges and supervisor)	372	395
Other Personnel
Support	37	40
Administration	40	40
Care and welfare (other than staff, nurses and attendants, technician)	12.2	20.5
Maintenance	34	34
Extramural care (social welfare)	1	3

"There have been two 80-hour in-service training courses for new attendants of 20 each, and two courses for the older attendants, who have received additional rating on their experience, to a total of approximately 150. Another course for new attendants with a class of about 20 will be started soon.

"Special training in occupational therapy is planned for the current fiscal year. Efforts will be made for attendants to receive credit for hours of training in occupational therapy with a qualified instructor. In cooperation with the health officer of the institution, training is to be given all attendants in food handling and general sanitation.

"As of June 30, 1950, the hospital was not accredited for resident training; however, every effort is being made to comply with the American Medical Association requirements and it is hoped that approval for residents will be obtained in the near future. The institution has been accredited by following:

American Medical Association Registry

American College of Surgeons

California Department of Medical Examiners for Residency

State of California Department of Education two years residency in Psychiatry under Public Law 346.

"During the year staff physicians testified on 97 cases in the Mendocino County Superior Court. The volume of court work is gradually increasing as more patients under court jurisdiction are being received and released. The work of the staff in these cases is a part of their regular duties and at present six physicians are certified to act as medical examiners in the superior court.

Special Medical Therapy

"During the year individual and small group psychotherapy on a regular and active plan was offered primarily to two groups of patients; the alcoholics and sexual psychopaths With the cooperation of the department, an active program for the investigation and treatment of sexual psychopathy was initiated. A well qualified psychiatrist was added to the staff and the department's plan is to set up additional positions to enable the physician to engage in an active research and treatment program. These positions include one assistant physician, a senior clerk, senior clinical psychologist, and a psychiatric social worker. Despite the lack of the other employees needed for the sexual psychopath program, it is being worked on actively by the physician in charge and it is hoped that personnel will soon be available to permit a rapid expansion. The figures for the patients receiving active psychotherapy are as follows: Alcoholics average over 12 patients twice weekly, with a total of 1,248 sessions. Sexual psychopaths average over 15 patients twice weekly, with a total of 1,560 sessions.

"Electric shock therapy was continued during the year and this form of therapy was often administered as a preliminary to insulin shock therapy, the figures on which are given below:

	Number of patients	Number of treatments
Intensive electroshock	469	2,008
Patients completed treatment	79	----
Maintenance electroshock	29	----

There were no deaths during the year directly attributable to electroshock treatment. The percentages of marked improvement and recovery do not differ significantly from those which have been reported in the literature.

"Electronarcosis was not used as an alternative technique during the year.

"The number of insulin shock treatments given during the year are as follows:

	Number of patients	Number of treatments
Insulin shock	101	5,626
Percent improved	13%	----
Percent marked improved	11%	----
Percent recovered	16%	----
Deaths due to insulin	----	----

Statistically, there is no significant difference from last year's figures.

"During the year the only treatment given for syphillis of the central nervous system was penicillin, and the number of treatments given are as follows:

Number of patients treated: 54
27 patients received 9,000,000 units, a total of 4,860 injections
23 patients received 15,000,000 units, a total of 6,900 injections
3 patients received 9,000,000 units, a total of 69 injections (fortified penicillin)
1 patient received 10,000,000 units, a total of 199 injections (unfinished course of 15,000,000 units)
Number of patients improved: 25 percent

"Our current plan of treatment does not include malaria in the ordinary case and, at present, we are obtaining the best results with a course of 15,000,000 units of penicillin, usually given in doses of 50,000 units in the soluble form, at intervals of three hours.

"Chromotherapy is not employed regularly at this time.

"During the fiscal year no lobotomies were performed in this hospital.

Routine Medical and Surgical Therapy

"A clinical laboratory was maintained during the year and practically all of the services suited to the needs of the hospital were available. A full-time laboratory technician was on duty during this period. During the year microscopic pathological work was performed by the pathologists at Langley Porter Clinic or the University of California.

"A full-time X-ray technician is also on duty, and in addition to this an electroencephalographic technician is employed full-time. He operates the electrocardiograph and the electroencephalograph and assists in the X-ray department.

"During the year a clinic employing two full-time nurses was maintained in addition to the general surgery where an average of four nurses was employed full time. The activities of these two units are listed below:

Surgery:

A. General Surgery (excluding lobotomy)
1. Minor operations	42
2. Major operations	13
B. Orthopedic
1. Major operations	5
2 Minor operations	29
C. Gynecological
1. Major operations	0
2. Minor operations	2
D. Genito-urinary
1. Major operations	0
2. Minor operations	4
E. Obstetrical
1. Major operations	0
2. Minor operations	0
F Legal Sterilization
1. Major operations	2
2. Minor operations	0

"During the year one full-time dentist was on duty and another full-time dentist was employed December 1, 1949. There were two dental assistants.

"One of the staff physicians with considerable experience in pathology has been designated our pathologist and he performs the post-mortem examinations during the year. There were 112 deaths and 23 autopsies performed, a percentage of 20.5.

"The autopsies are frequently attended by members of the staff and the findings are informally discussed by them.

"The physiotherapy and hydrotherapy are administered by two full-time technicians. They are qualified to give continuous tubs, packs of various kinds, massage and heat treatments, heat cabinet treatments, Sitz baths, Scotch and fan douches. Approximately 3,674 treatments were administered during the year in the hydrotherapy departments.

"Two civil service employees are employed full-time in classification of occupational therapist. Their time is primarily spent in the shops. In addition, three employees not so classified under civil service, are doing full-time work on the wards as occupational therapists. During the year a number of new activities were initiated; among these were finger painting, ceramics, carving in plaster, fly tying, basket weaving, embroidery, crocheting, knitting, and copper work. In addition, patients have been given material and assistance and are encouraged to make their own dresses on the wards, and during the period from February 15, 1950, to September 25, 1950, after the program was started, 122 dresses were made.

"It is to be especially noted that the above projects are actually carried out on the wards by patients who are in too poor mental condition to go to the regular shops and the attendants actively assist both the therapist and the patient and are carrying out the work. In this way, considerable more occupational therapy is possible because of the constant daily contact of the attendants with the patients

"The following is a list of the number of patients engaged in institution maintenance activities:

	On ward	Off ward
Female	377	110

Patients are employed in the following occupations about the hospital, as part of their treatment, and as an incidental assistance to the maintenance and operation of the hospital:

	Number of patients
Cannery	6
Sewing room	13
Tailor shop	42
Mattress shop	4
Shoe shop	5
Paint shop	4
Carpenter shop	4
Miscellaneous	35

"During the year a full-time employee who was a licensed beauty operator was employed in beauty treatments for the patients. Space had not been found for the installation of a beauty shop but by the end of the fiscal year, space was arranged for, equipment for this purpose was purchased, and a full-time shop started as of July 1, 1950. During the year the services offered by the operator were permanent waves, finger waves, and haircuts. A considerable percentage of the operator's time was spent in instructing the ward attendants in the giving of haircuts; as a result there was a great improvement in the appearance of the patients' hair. During the year the following were given:

Permanents	126
Finger waves	166

"There is no employee at the hospital having a civil service status as recreational therapist. However, one employee devotes full time to recreational therapy and another relieves on her days off, so that there is a full-time recreational therapist on duty daily. Recreational therapy is also considered part of the duty of all attendants, doing general ward work, and excellent cooperation has been received.

"The following recreational activities are available to patients:

(a) Ballroom dancing every Saturday afternoon and folk dancing every Monday night in the auditorium.

(b) Daily activities on the wards consist of bingo, community singing and phonograph concerts.

(c) Movies are held every Friday afternoon and Saturday morning in the auditorium Special moving pictures are shown on wards once a week. Certain wards are shown movies twice a week; all wards see movies at least once a week.

(d) Special dances are held on holidays. During the summer months picnics are held for approximately 1,200 patients. During the summer season softball games are held on Sunday mornings.

(e) Vaudeville shows are held for patients for various occasions. These shows are produced by the patients. The patients also have their own M. S. H. dance orchestra; also a choral group to furnish entertainment for special occasions.

(f) Approximately 300 men and women attend Saturday dances. Approximately 175 men and women attend folk dancing. Approximately 600 men and women attend shows.

(g) Recreational therapy is extended to all wards. Each evening bingo parties are given with candy bars as prizes for the winners. Everyone joins in community singing. Musical quiz games are played. Phonograph record concerts are enjoyed. Refreshments will be served.

Most of the patients are held on the wards at night.

Plans are now in preparation to give one-act skits during these ward evenings.

Ward 12 has their own recreational director who programs activities there. They hold a regular movie once weekly, and special pictures are given during the week, attended by approximately 250. This ward has a choral group, also.

Bingo, cards, checkers, etc., are daily activities.

"No music therapist is available at this hospital but during the year the recreational therapist brought music to the wards fairly regularly. The principal mediums were records and choral group singing. A new portable public address system with attached record player was acquired during the year and was in frequent use both for ward parties and dances.

"Church services are held weekly by the various denominations represented by the patient population. Services are conducted by local ministers, who are paid by the hospital for their assistance. There is no chapel on the grounds, but the hospital auditorium is used for religious services.

Special Programs

"There is no juvenile unit at this hospital. Some juveniles are admitted as patients; these are usually classified as psychopathic delinquents and are nearly adult physically. They are housed with older patients but some special facilities are provided for them such as the school which is described below.

"The School for minors on Ward 12 was reorganized March 28, 1950. John W. Taylor, County Superintendent of Schools, decreed that the Talmage Emergency School on Ward 12 would receive county assistance. To carry out the program, a qualified teacher and supervisor was assigned to the hospital.

"There are 56 patients, 40 under the age of 21; later two additional patients enrolled. Each patient was tested by Tiegs and Clark's progressive achievement tests under the supervision of the hospital clinical psychologist. Mental ages ranged between five and 14 years. The school was divided into three divisions; basic, intermediate, and advanced; classes according to individual aptitudes. Separate classes in reading, language, and arithmetic were set up in each of the divisions. In addition, special voluntary classes in music, civics, and art were scheduled.

"The physical plant consists of a classroom, specially painted and lighted in a manner conducive to study. Arm chairs, library books, text books, athletic equipment, classroom supplies, visual and auditory aids; the property of Mendocino County schools, were made available by the county superintendent of schools. Books from the county circulating library are available to the patients. Extra classes are held in the day room and dining room when the space is available. Instruction is being given by selected volunteer attendants, who are assisting in teaching and making their lesson plans by the county school representative. The three "R" are being taught by attendants teams, four men being employed part-time, which assure continual coverage of subject matter. Music consists of singing and musical appreciation, taught by a very talented and well-trained attendant Physical training is conducted by another attendant. It consists of volley ball, ping pong, soft ball, and horse shoe tournaments. A special course in civics is designed to assist those patients who are in line to be transferred off the ward Part of the classes are being conducted by a teacher hired by the State.

"School is held five days per week, each week, between 8.45 a. m. and 3 30 p. m , making a 300 minute school day. Two sets of grades, one for academic achievement and the other for citizenship, are given each patient. Patients who qualify academically are eligible to receive an elementary school diploma, issued by the county superintendent of schools of Mendocino County, California.

"Results of the school are encouraging. Recheck tests on outgoing patients show an improvement of between one and three grades of elementary school for the three months period. To date, none of the patients transferred from Ward 12 who attended school have been returned to Ward 12. Plans for further schooling of transferred patients on Ward 15 are in process.

"The alcoholic program described in previous reports was continued during the year. Our current program for alcoholics includes a two-month period of hospitalization in the average case. During this period the patient receives the routine complete physical and psychiatric examinations. Group orientation meetings are held by a social worker who spends a major part of his time with the alcoholics. Therapeutic group meetings are also held later. Active participation of Alcoholics Anonymous meetings are held each week. Patients are urged but not compelled to attend these meetings. The ward physicians are available for individual interviews as needed. Shortly before the patient's release, the conditioned reflex treatment is given on a voluntary basis to those who have been recommended for it by staff conference. The results in those receiving conditioned reflex treatment are as follows:

Admitted to C. R. T. Laboratory	321
Treatments given	1487
Patients relapsed	67	(21%)
Patients re-treated	47

"There was no change in the physical facilities of the maximum security unit during the year. As of June 30, 1950, the ward population was classified as follows:

1026 P. C.	37
1368 P. C.	50
Prison transfers	7
Sexual psychopaths	3
Hold for sheriff	14
Psychopathic delinquents	33
Federal hold	2
Transfers from Sonoma	34
	238

"Two major population changes occurred during the year; these were the transfer of approximately 70 psychotic prisoners to San Quentin Prison by order of the Governor, and the admission of 62 patients from Sonoma for maximum security. (Some of these later were transferred individually.)

"An active library is maintained for the patients and except for nominal staff supervision, it is entirely operated by patients who satisfactorily perform all the work necessary for the operation of the unit. Small libraries are maintained on some of the wards. The library now has a total of 4,500 volumes; during the year approximately 3,000 volumes were loaned.

"Figures on the medical library are as follows:

Number of medical books	325
Number of medical journals received monthly	14
Number of nursing journals received monthly	3

Outpatient Clinic

"No regularly scheduled outpatient clinic is maintained at the hospital; however, as noted earlier, the psychologist was of considerable assistance to the local schools as well as problem children referred by physicians in this area. The staff physicians also do a certain amount of outpatient work on a rotating basis; usually the cases seen by them are referred by local physicians or are brought in by relatives for consultation and advice.

Research and Publications

"Ordinarily the regular diagnostic staff conferences are devoted to the discussion of the cases at hand, but on an irregular and informal basis, parts of these conferences are often devoted to discussions of matters of general scientific and clinical interest. Usually academic discussions of psychiatric problems are held at separate times. They are held at weekly intervals in the afternoon, and currently semi-monthly seminars are being held in the evenings, under the supervision of the acting clinical director.

"The principal research project currently in progress is that connected with diagnosis, classification, and treatment of sexual psychopaths. As mentioned earlier, the staff to expand this program is not yet available and no report of impressions and findings is possible at this time. The investigation of sexual psychopaths is to be coordinated with a similar project being carried out at Langley Porter Clinic and it is understood that some funds available for this purpose will be diverted to augment the program in this hospital."

During the tour of the hospital Dr. Bramkamp explained that Mendocino State Hospital was one of the smaller state hospitals. He explained that the majority of criminals committeed to state hospitals were sent to Mendocino together with most of the sexual psychopaths from the northern part of the State, Norwalk getting those from the south. He further explained that most of the psychopathic delinquents came from other institutions such as Preston, Lancaster, Sonoma, etc. There are approximately 85 to 100 patients of this kind at all times in the Mendocino State Hospital.

There is a constant population of between 100 and 125 alcoholic patients and there is an average of between 35 and 40 admitted each month. Alcoholics are usually kept for about two months during which time treatments are administered.

Mendocino State Hospital is the principal institution for the criminally insane, of which there is an average of about 300 at all times.

As a conditioned reflex treatment was about to be given, Dr. Bramkamp asked the committee if they would be interested in observing the treatment and its reactions. The committee agreed that it would be very educational and accompanied Dr. Bramkamp to the clinic. Dr. Bramkamp explained the theory of the conditioned reflex which does not get to the fundamental cause of drinking. It is based on Russian experiments on dogs. They found that by gradually exposing them to two stimuli such as ringing a bell and at the same time placing food before them, that they could condition them to the point that when you ring the bell and produce the food, or even without producing the food, the ringing of the bell would produce a salivary condition conducive to eating. In the case of alcoholism they reverse the situation and create an aversion to liquor. An injection is given the patient which causes nausea and vomiting and an aversion to liquor at the same time So over a period of six sessions (treatments), which is an average course, they become so conditioned to this liquor that when they pour it into them it creates such a degree of nausea that if they walk by a saloon and smell liquor they become sick. There is some similarity to antabuse but the patient has to keep taking it right along. That makes them deathly sick and it is not being used here. Langley Porter tried it and had such bad reactions that they discontinued the use of antabuse.

The question was asked what percentage of alcoholics are believed to be permanently cured by this conditioned reflex treatment, and Dr. Bramkamp stated that about 25 percent of those given the treatments returned for further treatment, 25 percent are never heard from again, so it is estimated that approximately 50 percent are recovered by this conditioned reflex treatment.

After an alcoholic patient is released from the hospital and where it is possible to have a social worker follow-up their treatment to help them to re-establish themselves, it has been found to have helped very materially. If a patient was released and left on his own the treatment would be in most cases a wasted effort. These treatments are all voluntary on the part of the patient and no patient is given the conditioned reflex treatment unless he volunteers on his own accord. About 50 percent are individuals from "Skid Row" and many of them come from subnormal financial environments. A very small percentage of those treated are women. Out of 36 patients in the alcoholic ward at the present time only four are female. The average number of women in the alcoholic ward varies from four to six per month. Out of the 36 alcoholics only eight are receiving the conditioned reflex treatment. Some patients having various ailments such as stomach hemorrhages, hernias, high blood pressure, cirrhosis of the liver, etc., cannot take the treatment.

Commitments from 1942 through 1950 are as follows:

1943, slightly over	1,000
1944	700
1945	870
1946	1,202
1947	1,373
1948	1,808
1949	2,316
1950, ending June 30th	2,718

It will be noted that during the war years commitments dropped considerably.

These are broken down into two classifications—those alcoholics diagnosed as being alcoholic with and without insanity The "withouts" are in the majority. In 1949 the figure was 1,743 without psychosis and 573 with psychosis

If a patient is financially able to do so he pays the full rate of $60 a month, but if he is unable to pay he is given the treatment just the same. About 25 percent of all patients in state institutions pay anywhere from $20 to $60 a month, which reimburses the State to approximately $3,000,000 a year, while the operating expenses of the hospitals are approximately $30,000,000 a year.

The patient that the committee observed taking this treatment was a young man 34 years old who was about to receive his fifth reconditioned reflex treatment.

Dr. Bramkamp stated: "In applying the psychological considerations to the treatment of alcoholism, the action of certain nauseant drugs is utilized to elicit the unconditioned reflex of nausea and vomiting. The sight, smell and taste of alcoholic beverages when used as the conditioning stimulant will initiate reflex activity at the centers of nausea and vomiting. A distaste is thus created for the conditioned stimilus amounting to a strong and definite aversion to the sight, smell and taste of liquor."

Within the next 25 minutes the patient was given slightly less than a fifth of whiskey (some liquors confiscated by the Board of Equalization are given to the hospital), six bottles of beer (room temperature), and a quantity of gin, rum, wine and water.

The doctor explained that the patient must "bounce this stuff back" and that timing was the biggest item. The technician administering this treatment must get the patient when he is ready to vomit to take a drink at that particular moment, for if he did not, the amount of liquor inside his system might kill him.

After the treatment the doctor explained that the patient would have very little alcohol left in him at the end of the treatment but that he would more than likely be sick from four to six hours afterward.

A patient is given from four to seven of these treatments, usually one a day, depending upon the individual case. The first treatment consists of five or six drinks, the second of four drinks of whiskey and ½ ounce of gin, the third of 12 or 13 drinks, the fifth as many as the patient the committee observed taking the treatment. The total time taken for a conditioned reflex treatment is from 45 days to two months. During the time a patient is confined to the hospital he is visited by Alcoholics Anonymous about twice a week, a social worker holds classes twice a week—a form of group therapy, where each patient has a chance to express himself—all this in addition to the work the doctor does with him. The patients are ordinarily assigned to some light job around the hospital and they observe regular hours daily. Mendocino State Hospital is the only institution using this conditioned reflex.

Dr. Bramkamp explained that at Shadell's in Seattle a patient pays $750 for this same treatment. The patients at Mendocino pay what they are able but not more than $60 a month, and they are able to care for about 10 patients at a time.

In making a tour of the hospital the committee visited the male admission ward and it was explained to the committee that the criminally insane are admitted to the maximum security ward and those patients who are too disturbed go to the disturbed wards. All patients are kept in the receiving ward a few days until it is made sure that they have no contagious diseases, etc. Here they are furnished with state hospital clothes. The receiving ward is a ward of five single rooms and sometimes it is necessary to double the patients up in order to take care of their admission. The daily average admission rate at Mendocino is less than at most state hospitals, receiving from 800 to 1,000 a year. During the month of July there were 70 new patients received, of which 36 were alcoholics. It was brought to the committee's attention that out of the 13,000 admissions in all of the state's mental hospitals, approximately 2,000 were alcoholics. Mendocino is specializing in the treatment of alcoholics and sex psychopaths.

In visiting the dining room it was explained to the committee that the ration for the hospital is set by the Sacramento office and runs about 3,000 calories a day plus vitamin, protein, and carbohydrates in proportion.

The committee was informed that the noon time meal consists of stew, roast beef or roast pork, potatoes and vegetables. The evening meal usually consists of rice, macaroni or a spaghetti dish, and tea. The old and toothless patients who might choke on uncooked food get a soft diet, and ill patients and patients who refuse to eat get special feedings by tube or intravenous. Sedentary and active workers receive somewhat different diets, but in general they are the same. The attendants eat in the dining room adjoining the kitchen and have a little different menu. One of the aims of the department is to equalize it as much as possible. Beans of various types are fed twice a week, with plenty of vegetables and prunes.

Six hundred thousand dollars a year is the ration allowance for the hospital. One-half of that amount was raised on the hospital property. The various institutions trade excess products back and forth such as vegetables, dairy products, and meat. It was brought to the attention of the committee by Dr. Bramkamp that the hospital has an excellent herd, and that quite often they raise a champion (beef, pork, or mutton) at Mendocino.

The committee inspected the facilities of the various wards, the dining rooms, etc., and found everything to be quite modern and cheerful, with brightly upholstered furniture taking the place of old drab wooden furniture found in the institutional dining rooms of the past.

The committee also visited the staff conference room where the doctors meet regularly and where each patient is brought in individually to talk with the staff. Afterward his case is discussed and diagnosed and treatment recommended.

Dr. Bramkamp stated that Mendocino had a few narcotic addicts, at the present time only six. The treatment for narcotics consists merely of withdrawal plus interviews with the doctors, etc. These patients are kept a minimum of three months. The treatment requires considerable psychology, because the withdrawal is immediate and sometimes the patients get sick. But as a rule the treatment is satisfactory. Instead of being fairly miserable for two or three weeks they are quite sick only four or five days. If they get too sick they are administered a small dose, just a few grains.

The tour continued through the women's ward where is was brought to the committee's attention that there were beautiful painting (water colors) on the walls which had been done by a woman patient. The doctor explained that this patient was in a bad mental condition, but her work was very beautiful. The dining room was painted in soft pastel colors which had replaced the flat walls in all the mental institutions of the State. While in the dining room the noon day meal arrived which consisted of beef stew, carrots, apple sauce, bread and milk.

While on the subject of food and meals, Dr. Bramkamp explained that the food arrived from the main kitchen in large aluminum cans transported all over the premises by a special truck. There being no facilities at all for keeping the food hot, it arrived in luke warm condition, making it rather unpalatable by the time it was dished up and served to the patients. Steam tables have been requested but have not as yet been approved by "Sacramento."

The committee next visited the industrial shop where all sorts of arts and crafts were being conducted by the patients under the guidance of a staff adviser and his assistant. They work about eight hours a day in the shop and here one will find all types of patients. A newspaper—The Pomo News Weekly—is published by the patients. A patient interviewed the committee and a copy of the interview as was published in the next weekly paper is as follows:

"The State Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health, headed by its chairman, John F. Thompson, of San Jose, visited M. S. H. last Tuesday for the purpose of getting first-hand information on the needs of the state mental institutions to present them to the next meeting of the Legislature. Other state hospitals to be included on their tour of inspection at this time are Sonoma and Napa. Later, all the hospitals will be visited.

"Other members of the committee making the trip are: George A. Spaulding, Sacramento, Executive Secretary of the committee; Mrs.

Christine B. Harrison, Legislative Secretary of the California State Assembly; August F. Hawkins, Sixty-second Assembly District, Los Angeles; William Byron Rumford, Seventeenth District, Berkeley; William Young, San Jose, Special Investigator for the committee; and A. Edward Nichols, Administrative Adviser, Department of Mental Hygiene.

"The committee were met, and accompanied on their tour of inspection by Dr. R. G. Bramkamp, acting superintendent. The tour included the model dairy, hog ranch, fruit and vegetable farm, industrial shops, wards, new buildings under construction, kitchen and storerooms. The committee were much interested in the conditioned reflex treatment, and the insulin "shock" ward.

"The members took time out from their busy schedule to stop and chat with a number of patients in the wards and in the shops.

"Shortly after Governor Warren took office, he declared his intention of placing California second to none among the states in the treatment and care of the State's mental patients. His broad and comprehensive program of construction and improved equipment, of the California State Hospitals, and the attention focused on the State's mental problem by the Legislature and its committees, and the Department of Mental Hygiene, have gone a long way in recent years toward accomplishing this goal."

There were workers in wood, ceramics, painting (oil and water color), copper and other metal work, and the patients also make various kinds of jewelry and other gift objects. About 32 workers a month use the shop in addition to the occupational therapy carried on in the wards such as sewing, embroidery, etc. The committee feels that they definitely need more room, which will be compensated for in part by the occupational therapy rooms being planned for all the new wards.

The shop has need for an electric kiln to fire the ceramics. There is a gas kiln in the shop which is obviously impracticable for that type of patient to use and which is too dangerous to be used, and therefore has never been put into operation. In the meantime, there are hundreds of completed ceramics taking up space until such time as a kiln is provided for their firing. The completed objects are all for sale and the proceeds go for the patients' amusement fund. Some of the patients are very skillful as wood carvers, and good wood is needed for this purpose. At the present time wood from orange crates is being used for this particular craft, and the copper used in making trays, etc., is copper sheeting which was removed from an old building that had been demolished.

The committee next visited the "disturbed wards." In the women's "disturbed wards" the nurse in charge has been there for 21 years and the committee observed that the patients all seemed to place a great deal of confidence in her. She took a great deal of pride in showing the committee the handiwork of her patients—dresses which they had made for themselves and for each other, as well as other hand work and embroidery. It was brought to the committee's attention that materials for this work were badly needed, and only a small amount was received from outside for individuals interested in assisting these patients. Some of these materials could be of the expendable type for the more disturbed patients whose work is of a negligible character, but it was found there was a great need for the better material for the patients to embroider so that the articles when finished could be sold. The profits from the sale of these articles could then be used to buy more materials. It was felt, however, that more important than the profit angle was the therapeutic angle—that more material would keep more patients busy—which in turn keeps the patients calmer and happier. Also the committee found that there is a great need for sheet music, song books, etc., as there were several patients in the particular ward visited who could play the piano, but at the present time only one patient in the ward who played for the committee could play by ear, there being no sheet music or music books of any kind in the ward. So for that reason the others who were able to play could not do so.

The committee also found a need for sewing machines as well as pianos and music. (There are 11 women's wards but only three pianos.) Recreational material of all kinds is badly needed so that instead of simply "sitting" they can entertain themselves by playing games or reading. It was suggested by the nurse in charged that possibly some of the service organizations and civic clubs might be inspired to contribute games, books, magazines and prizes.

About 35 out of the 86 women in the ward visited by the committee make their own dresses. There are 1,093 women patients with 300 more or less working on and off. Therefore the need for more equipment as well as personnel for occupational therapy is apparent.

It was brought to the attention of the committee that there was a great need for a canteen for the patients where they could relax over a soda and buy candy and magazines, etc. It would have a definite therapeutic value.

The committee next visited the kitchen where all of the food was prepared for the institution. The original kitchen is still being used, and it is most inadequate There are no facilities for preparing anything but boiled foods, and at meal time the food is distributed in aluminum cans by truck to the various buildings. There are absolutely no facilities for keeping the food hot, so it arrives in varying stages of coolness which makes it most unappetizing. However, a new kitchen is being built and will be ready for occupancy in about three months, and the old kitchen will be abandoned completely. The new kitchen will have large ovens so that the patients and personnel can be served roast meats and other baked dishes Modern electrical equipment of all kinds will be installed—coffee makers, mixers, potato peelers, deep freezers, walk-in coolers, refrigerators, etc. The most important feature of the new kitchen appeared to be the fact that it would do away with the time-honored boiling and stewing of unappetizing meals. The hospital has its own vegetable gardens, a complete dairy to process the milk from its own herds, its own butcher shop, etc.

The maximum security building was next visited by the committee, where the criminally insane are kept. They saw the cell blocks and spoke to some of the patients. They saw the tailor shop where all the men's clothing for the institution is made. The patients (prisoners) work there so it is a form of occupational therapy, but it is also a production scheme Their cutting machine can cut from 200 to 300 garments in 30 minutes.

Jeans, shirts, underwear and slippers are made in the tailor shop. Scraps from the other garments are utilized to make the slippers. Ordinarily they make only garments for their own institution, but occasionally they will accommodate some other state institution; for instance, when the De Witt Hospital needed some restraining jackets the Mendocino Tailor Shop made them for De Witt at cost. The tailor shop definitely needs air conditioning. It was very hot and unpleasantly stuffy. The shop should be enlarged, as there are many available patients that could occupy themselves by working and have so signified their desire.

The committee visited the classroom where the patients may go to school. The instructor stated that he had 56 pupils—40 of them under the age of 21. The county superintendent of school's office is interested in this school and is very cooperative. Many of the students are psychopathic delinquents.

The educational program is divided into three categories: basic, intermediate and advanced; and they are divided into three sections each: reading, language and arithmetic, with a total of nine basic courses. These classes are supplemented with music, drawing, art courses, and a civics class to help the men about ready to go out, teaching them in a simple fashion the responsibilities they will have to meet on the outside as citizens.

The instructor said the hospital had never had any trouble from any who have gone through the school. None have ever come back to the institution

The school runs from day to day all the year around. The county superintendent's office pays the teacher's salary and supplies the text books, supplies, etc It is set up as an emergency school for the county, and as such is supported by county funds. However, in the final analysis, the county is not saddled with the expense because the State reimburses the county. There is also one hospital teacher—a man brought in by the hospital who is a state employee. All other teachers are "attendant teachers." The instructor holds conferences with them and helps them set up their teaching plans. Some classes are very good and do a fine job with the patients—some of whom cannot read or write, and they advance from one to three units in just a few months. Of course they receive a very concentrated course.

The instructor is authorized to give a graduation diploma, which gives no indication that the education was secured at the Mendocino State Hospital. Students range from 14 to 37 years of age.

It was brought to the attention of the committee that with all types of patients in the Mendocino Hospital, they have less mechanical restraint than at any other state hospital.

The next ward to be visited was a women's ward where the women had freedom of action. Most of them were assigned to jobs where they spent the day and came back to the ward to sleep. The beds looked comfortable and had inner-spring mattresses, but it was noticed by the members of the committee that they had no lockers or even a bedside table where they could keep their personal possessions. The result was that all of them carried bags around with them which contained their personal belongings It was explained to the committee that the current budget has $1,500 set aside for individual lockers for each of the new wards now under construction, and each patient will have a bedside commode which will have one drawer and a small cupboard to hold his belongings.

The committee then inspected the new buildings under construction which should be ready for occupancy some time in November. Six hundred sixty-six new beds will replace the wards to be torn down. Since there are 878 beds in the units to be wrecked that leaves them 212 beds short of what they have now. However, the new receiving hospital will have 163 beds compared to the present receiving hospital which has only 40 beds.

Following is the treatment program for alcoholics at Mendocino State Hospital as prescribed by David B. Williams, M.D., Superintendent and Medical Director, and Gordon McWhirter, Th B., Psychiatric Social Worker:

At Mendocino State Hospital there is a map for the care and treatment of the alcoholic patient. For the first time at a state hospital in California the court-committed alcoholic patient has been offered a treatment specifically indicated for creating in the patient physical aversion to alcoholic beverages. This "conditioned aversion treatment" was initiated at Mendocino State Hospital in March, 1948, under the sponsorship and cooperation of the State Department of Mental Hygiene. This effort to lend practical and effective help in the problem of alcoholism has developed into the "Mendocino Alcoholic Program" (M. A. P.).

Alcoholism Is a Sickness. The Mendocino Alcoholic Program is an effort to combine and apply available therapies in an active and aggressive attack on alcoholism as a sickness. Through the interest and participation of the patient as well as of the hospital staff something has been started in the way of efficient and effective treatment for both the in-patient and the patient on leave of absence from the hospital More remains to be done to provide adequate treatment, through increased hospital facilities and through research and experiment with new techniques.

Conditioned Aversion Treatment (Cat). The conditioned aversion treatment is not new nor are its limitations unknown. As a therapy, specific in its application and measurable in its results, it has been found, however, to be both a focus point and a stimulus for a program that should combine all resources, medical and social, that may help the patient, his family and the community in tackling together America's No. 4 Health Problem—the problem of alcoholism!

Limitations of "Cat." The conditioned aversion treatment (cat) is not offered as a cure for alcoholism. Excessive drinking is a symptom of other troubles, personal and social, for which no direct cure has been found. "Cat" consists of the physiological conditioning of autonomic bodily reflexes in order to create in the patient an aversion to alcoholic beverages. This "conditioned aversion" helps the patient to extend his period of sobriety—to remain "dry" longer. While he is sober the patient has an opportunity to make use of other helps, other therapies, in an effort to bring about the personal and social adjustments necessary if he is to be able to discontinue his futile effort to drink his way out of his troubles

The Drinker Must be Treated. The problem in the treatment of alcoholism, of course, is the drinker and not the drinking. But the alcoholic patient cannot stop drinking long enough to accept and make use of the medical and social treatment he needs in order to stop drinking! This condition is only aggravated when the alcoholic patient is punished and threatened as an offender instead of being offered appropriate medical, social and psychotherapeutic help.

A Treatment Program. While the conditioned aversion treatment has been the "spark" for the Mendocino Alcoholic Program it is the entire treatment program that must be taken by the patient, and taken back to his community by him, if he is to be helped successfully. The patient who enters the hospital expecting definite and tangible help will find that he is wanted and welcome. He is encouraged not only to "take" treatment but to "give" it by participating in the program. The patients have responded to this and increasingly they are taking the M. A. P. idea home with them. Others in the community learn of the treatment program and both new and readmitted patients are found to be more favorably disposed for successful treatment.

"Sobriety Expectancy" Extended. Those patients who have had the conditioned aversion treatment have greatly increased "sobriety expectancies" when they leave the hospital. It is only while the "on leave" patient is dry that the plan of treatment can successfully be carried forward with him by the extra-mural psychiatric social worker.

The Plan of Treatment. To the previous program at the hospital there has been added:

1. The conditioned aversion treatment.
2. Regular Alcoholics Anonymous meetings.
3. Regular group psychotherapy sessions.
4. A beginning recreation program.
5. More intensive follow-up service (in S. F.)

The entire program includes, with the above:

6. Physical, mental and psychiatric examination.
7. Medical and dental care as indicated.
8. Medical conference and consultation.
9. Work assignments.
10. Social service referral of the outgoing patient to the extra-mural worker.

Forever the Good Parent. Perhaps as important as any particular treatment that might be "taken" or "given" is the patient's feeling that M. A. P. is intended for him and can help him; that in M. A. P. he is liked, appreciated and wanted; that because of M. A. P. he may go home but that if he should get sick again he will be helped again; that while he is on leave of absence from the hospital the M. A. P. out-patient worker will help him with his problems and help him to stay well and to earn his hospital discharge.

In short, it is important in M. A. P. that the patient should feel that we are on his side! The M. A. P. effort is to encourage feelings of permissiveness and self-determination in an environment where rules, regulations, and responsibilities are carried out with fairness and reason. For the alcoholic we have always to be the kind and firm good parent!

Follow-up by Extra-mural Workers. When the patient is ready to go home from the hospital M. A. P. goes with him! All patients on leave of absence from the hospital are referred to the psychiatric social workers of the Bureau of Social Work for out-patient follow-up service. Reports on the patient's personal and social adjustment, and on the services and casework treatment that has been offered to and used by the patient, are made to the hospital at regular intervals. On the basis of these reports the hospital staff is able to communicate with the field worker regarding appropriate follow-up treatment for the patient or regarding the patient's need for readmission to the hospital or for discharge by the hospital.

A Shared Medical-Social Responsibility. The welfare of the out-patient is the concern of both the hospital and the field worker and the movement of a case toward a successful discharge is advanced when doctor and social worker share together with responsibility for the patient's progress. This is especially so in the alcoholic treatment program because these are patients who are moving, who are going somewhere and who can be responsive to personal and social help and to individual and group treatment.

M. A. P. in San Francisco. Feld workers of the Bureau of Social Work make follow-up reports on Mendocino State Hospital out-patients in the areas assigned to particular workers. It has been in San Francisco, however, that, beginning in May, a special effort has been made to offer more intensive social casework help to the M. A. P. out-patients. The extra-mural worker for Mendocino State Hospital patients in San Francisco has worked closely with the hospital's alcoholic treatment program and has become identified with M. A. P. both in San Francisco and at the hospital. This "specialization" has helped to bring community resources into the hospital program and to bring an understanding of the hospital's treatment problems back to the community. In San Francisco, therefore, the alcoholic patient increasingly makes use of the M. A. P. field worker and the entire program, which centers as it should in the patient, is benefited.

The Community in M. A. P.! The out-patient is served in various ways and casework help is offered and received, as at the hospital, according to the patient's need and ability to take and use such help. Effective use has been made by many patients of the State Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation and of Alcoholics Anonymous. Referrals to other agencies are supplementary to continuous service by the M. A. P. extra-mural caseworker.

The recommendations of the committee pertaining to the Mendocino State Hospital are as follows:

1. Adequate housing.
2. Physicians' offices on wards.
3. More dental work (three need instead of two).
4. Separate service for alcoholics and treatment.
5. Acute treatment center at each hospital.
6. Psychiatric nurse training center.
7. More occupational therapists and therapy.
8. Library building.
9. Canteen and store for patients.
10. Steam tables for delivering food to the various wards and buildings.
11. Electric kiln for baking ceramics.

12. Pianos and various other kinds of musical instruments.
13. Sewing machines.
14. Recreational materials of all kinds.
15. Enlarge tailor shop.

SONOMA STATE HOSPITAL

The Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health met at the Sonoma State Hospital on August 2, 1950, and in addition to the committee members present there were also Senator F. Presley Abshire and Assemblyman Richard H. McCollister, representing Sonoma County.

The following members of the hospital staff also were present: Dr. M. E. Porter, Superintendent and Medical Director; Dr. Daniel Lieberman, Chief of Medical Service; Dr. Charles Ludwig, Clinical Director; Mrs. Arlene Messer, Superintendent of Nurses; and Mr. T. A. Bravos, Business Manager. Mr. A. Edward Nichols represented the Department of Mental Hygiene.

Chairman Thompson opened the meeting by explaining that the visit of the committee was prompted entirely by a sincere interest in the institution, its problems, and its needs. He then turned the meeting over to Assemblyman McCollister who represents the district, since he felt that Mr. McCollister was more familiar with the hospital than anyone else.

Mr. McCollister stated that it was his desire to have the committee make a thorough and complete tour of the hospital, inspecting both the old and the new additions. The new addition he explained will definitely alleviate a great deal of trouble. He also stated that from a general layman's standpoint the only real trouble at the hospital is the inadequacy of space for the population, there being more eligibles for an institution of this kind requiring public care than the facilities of the institution could accommodate.

Mr. McCollister stated that later on in the meeting the committee should inquire of Dr. Porter and his staff how they will stack up when the new units go into operation so that the Members of the Legislature have a yardstick by which to measure the institution's budget requests for capital outlay when they are made.

Dr. Porter presented to the committee copies of two letters received during the past week, one from Richmond and one from Santa Barbara, making application for the admission of children who very obviously belonged in the institution but were not there because of the lack of facilities for them. These letters are as follows:

DOCTOR PORTER
Sonoma State Hospital, Sonoma County
Sonoma, California

DEAR DOCTOR PORTER: I know you must be deluged with requests from parents and relatives asking you to admit their children to your hospital. May I add a request of my own?

I am writing at the request of Mr. W_____ B_____, who has written you on a number of occasions. Mr. B_____ has a young son (records are in the hands of Social Service, T_____ B_____, who has his name on your waiting list. Mrs. B_____ has been caring for the boy at home and two attempts have been made to admit him to a private home but both were unsuccessful. The family is physically and financially able to care for the child at home. Mr. B_____'s plea to have the child taken out of the home as soon as possible is not a question of "dumping" the child but simply a desire to save his wife from further psychic trauma. Mrs. B_____ is highly nervous, a veritable museum of inhibitions and complexes, and at the same time is a devoted mother. She is rapidly becoming a nervous wreck, suffering from insomnia and marked depression. I feel quite certain that if her son could be taken a lot of this would clear up. I know your hospital is overcrowded and I would appreciate any special consideration to this case.

Thanking you in advance for anything you might do, I am

Sincerely,

L. A. PEDERSEN, M.D.

CHAMBERS OF THE SUPERIOR COURT
SANTA BARBARA COUNTY, SANTA BARBARA, CALIFORNIA

DR. M. E. PORTER, Director,
Sonoma State Home, Eldridge, California

DEAR DR. PORTER: I hesitate to bother you with one of our local problems but it has been brought to my attention that the above named infant who is approximately three years of age and the son of Mr. and Mrs. F_____ T_____ C_____ who resides in this city is a definitely feebleminded child, in fact, a Mongolian idiot. Its presence in the family with a younger infant brother has created a most deplorable situation. The mother has recently attempted suicide and although unsuccessful she has repeatedly asserted that the only way out of their family difficulty is for her to kill the child and herself. The husband who has a very modest income has been compelled to remove the children from the home and is hiring someone to be with his wife during his working hours. It is easy to be seen that the case is a real emergency one, and I would appreciate your acceptance of this child as soon as it is humanly possible before some terrific disaster within the family occurs.

Trusting that you appreciate my position in this matter and thanking you for your cooperation, I am

Sincerely yours,

ERNEST D. WAGNER
Judge of the Superior Court

Dr. Porter explained that each member of his staff, including himself, would like to make a statement to the committee pertaining to their individual departments. This was approved by the committee, and Dr. Porter's statement was as follows:

"Sonoma State Home is a training school for the care and training of the mentally handicapped. The institution at the present time has a capacity of 2,500 patients into which 3,300 patients have been crowded so that our percentage of overcrowding has reached 36 percent. To care for this patient population we have approximately 800 employees of whom 550 are hospital attendants concerned with the direct ward care of our patients.

"The condition of mental handicap from which our patients suffer is one that exists from birth or from an early age and results in failure to develop normally, which is manifested by intellectual impairment and as a result an inability in some instances to make a normal adjustment in the community. It is estimated that two percent of the general population are mentally handicapped but fortunately only 10 percent of this two percent ever require institutional care. While the adjustment of the mentally handicapped is usually adequately handled by the community under certain social conditions resulting from the break-up of the family or the failure of the parent's health it may become necessary to institutionalize such people from time to time. It then becomes the duty of Sonoma State Home to care for and train these individuals so that they can live happier and more normal lives and if at all possible can be returned to the community as useful citizens.

"The condition of mental handicap is frequently manifested at birth so we receive in this institution infants only a few days old as well as children of all ages from birth to death. There are patients in this institution who are 80 years of age. We frequently find that a family will care for a handicapped child for possibly 50 years, at which time both parents are so infirm or die so that there is no one to provide care for the patient. At this point the public agencies then make application for admission of the patients to this institution.

"Approximately half of our population have only a mild to moderate degree of mental handicap and are educatable and trainable so that they can be returned to their families or can become self-supporting in the community under the guidance of one of our social workers. The other half of our population have such severe mental handicap that they cannot live independent lives and require permanent custodial care in the institution. Funds have been provided by the Legislature for placing our patients in family care in the community at the rate of $60 a month. During the war years and the recent post-war years we have been unable to find any substantial quantity of such homes which would help to alleviate our overcrowding.

"Each day's mail brings three or four applications for admission to the institution and since we have no space available as a result of our overcrowding these applications must be placed on our active waiting list, which on the thirtieth of June comprised 395 male applicants and 372 female applicants for a total of 767. No one can appreciate the necessity for the institutionalization of some of these cases until they come face to face with the problem in their own family or in their immediate neighborhood.

"The present building program, which is the first unit of the post-war construction program, consists of eight buildings comprising 880 beds, which are all for replacement of ward buildings that have been condemned by the State Fire Marshal as fire-traps. These new structures, which will be opened this fall, will give us no additional facilities for the housing of patients but merely replace structures already in use. In our 1950-51 budget we have money for six additional ward buildings, comprising 600 beds, which buildings will be ready for occupancy approximately two years from now. Half of these structures must be used for the replacement of other condemned buildings now in use and the other half will give us additional capacity—that is, approximately 300 beds.

"In our 1951-1952 budget request we are asking for 10 ward buildings or a total of 1,000 additional beds, half of which would be for replacement of further condemned buildings now in use and the other half would be additional capacity.

"It is hoped that this request will help us to accommodate a great percentage of the more urgent cases on our waiting list but with the rapid growth of California and our inability to expand our facilities immediately it is not possible to state accurately that our current construction request will solve our problem of space.

"In future budget requests—that is, 1952-53 and in 1953-54, each of these will contain requests for 10 additional buildings, comprising 2,000 beds, in order to completely replace our fire-trap buildings and to give us adequate facilities to correct our overcrowding and to provide for the admission of the applicants on our waiting list."

Dr. Ludwig was then asked to make his statement, which he explained in general would relate to the overcrowdedness of the hospital and the problems thus created. Dr. Ludwig's statement was as follows:

"There are many factors concerned in this complex problem. Some are striking and obvious, others subtle and indirect. Some of the factors particularly apparent to this department are as follows:

"1. With the increase in the number and activity of referring agencies and individuals, more patients are being referred to the institution.

"Active steps to clarify the aims and limitations of institutional care should be disseminated widely among such referring groups. Many problems can be handled more successfully within the community, and there is need for expansion of community facilities. Helping the community to clarify its role in the problem of mentally retarded and handicapped people will materially reduce the need for institutional care.

"2. With the continued improvement in the medical care of our patients, the death rate among the infant and small child population has dropped remarkably. This means that there is an increasing number of such patients within the institution. This greatly limits the admission rate of those infants and young children for whom institutional care is a necessity.

"With the improvement in medical care, patients are able to develop more rapidly and progress to less severely taxed facilities.

"3. There is an inadequate number of well-trained personnel in the medical, social service, and psychology departments. This results in a lack of sufficient follow-up care and reflects itself directly in a low discharge and leave of absence rate.

"With adequate personnel, all patients can be regularly reviewed by a group including the ward physician, social worker, psychologist and ward personnel. The combined skills of such a group markedly increases the leave of absence and discharge rate. This has been well substantiated on those wards which we have been able to so review.

"4. Because of inadequate industrial and special training programs, the abilities of our patients are not completely developed. This again results in a decrease of discharges and leaves of absence, and a higher rate of return from vocational placement.

"With a concentrated expansion of such facilities, patients may be trained to the maximum level that they are able to obtain. This requires personnel, facilities, and time.

"5. Wholly inadequate recreational facilities and personnel give the patient no opportunity to acquire a social acceptance guide to recreational outlets when they leave the institution. This shows itself clearly in patients "going wild" upon leaving an institution where he soon violates social custom and civil law, and must be returned.

"An active recreational program for all levels of patients is as necessary, if not more so, than adequate recreation in the life of the private citizen. This requires personnel, facilities, and time.

"6. The study of the etiology of mental deficiencies is in its infancy. Because so little is known of cause, very little is applied in prevention and cure.

"Although the least tangible of all active attacks on the problem of institutional overcrowding, research is of the most basic importance. Facilities and finances for such basic work have traditionally been lacking. The importance of an active and continuous research program cannot be over-emphasized."

Mr. McCollister asked Dr. Ludwig the following question: "In the treatment of the mentally incompetent person who arrives here, is there any attempt made with all or any of them along the lines of the furniture factory at San Quentin, or is it possible?"

Dr. Ludwig replied: "It is entirely possible, but I do not think it is the answer. I think it is more important to teach a variety of basic mechanical skills—how to handle tools—things that can be spread out among many patients We have our patients doing all kinds of work, and actually our children make far better employees in some categories than a normal person, because their goals are in keeping with their skills. Often they turn their work out as a good job much faster than you and I could—not in terms of a vast commercial shop but as a variety of skills, whatever they may be."

Mr. McCollister asked Dr. Ludwig if a request came through to start a school, whether or not it would be plausible and possible with a mentally deficient—as much as it is with a convict.

Dr. Ludwig's reply was: "Yes, I think so—more so, because their problem is not against society, it is just learning, pure and simple. If we had the facilities to teach them they would get far more out of it, actually, because they would really use it." Dr. Ludwig continued: "It is far more important in any immediate sense to have a lot of little things than a lot of big things. It is far more important sometimes to have a hammer or a chisel with a certain set of patients than a $2,500 machine which turns out book cases by the hour."

Dr. Ludwig stated: "We have three recreational therapists, four occupational therapists with one more additional therapist coming for our 4,500 patients What we need is an active recreational program going on all the time—nothing lavish in the sense of vast expenditures, just plain ordinary games."

Dr. Porter stated that he had 34 graduate nurses authorized in the budget and 495 hospital attendant positions. He estimates it will take 55 graduate nurses and 656 attendants to do the job that should be done. At the present time Sonoma has only 19 graduate nurses and 400 attendants on the pay roll. Some of these positions became available the first of July and they are in the process at the present time of recruiting.

Dr. Lieberman was next called on by Dr. Porter to make his statement, which was as follows:

"It is not necessary to be a medical doctor or an expert on public health to realize the inherent dangers when groups of people are living in very close contact. An understanding of the basic concept of transmission of contagious disease by ingestion and inhalation is all that need be known. From there the possibilities of spread of contagion are limited only by one's own imagination. History gives us many examples where huge populations of people were leveled by contagious diseases as if by an atomic bomb.

"Let us take as an example an average family of four living in an average home of five or six rooms and notice how remarkably such a simple infection as a common cold can spread throughout this family. Let us take then the condition such as exists now at Sonoma State Home where within the space ordinarily occupied by four people there are 40 people. Multiply the chances of infection ten-fold due to the habitus of our patients, namely their inability to wash, feed, dress themselves or care for their bodily needs. Multiply this product ten-fold by the fact that we are understaffed and in many cases have personnel who are not trained in aseptic medical technique. Multiply this ten-fold by the fact that many of our patients by nature of their organic diseases have very poor natural resistance to infection. Multiply this ten-fold by the fact that essential equipment such as dishwashers for the sterilization of dishes are not on hand. The product of these numbers gives one somewhat of an idea of what is facing the doctor who is concerned with the prevention and treatment of communicable diseases in this institution. Truly, much has been done with the aid of our modern drugs and by hard work to prevent the diseases from running rampant, but lack of all the things mentioned constitutes an impediment almost insurmountable.

"Specifically, the diseases which we have had to combat under these circumstances have been the dysenteries of both the bacillary and amoebic type, and all the contagious diseases common to children. In addition the very severe communicable diseases such as infantile paralysis, meningitis, and diphtheria always lurk as a constant source of worry under the conditions that exist.

"It is felt by the medical staff that alleviation of overcrowding, an adequate number of trained personnel and modern antiseptic equipment would go far in combating the real dangers that we are facing.

"We have all seen families in which tragedy has struck in the form of a newborn baby arriving deformed. The number of our infants who are mongolian idiots, severe spastics with mental deficiency, or other form of developmental monstrosity, is indeed appalling. It would be very desirable to place these infants in an institution as soon as possible. The longer they remain at home the more attached the parents become to them, and quite often they will lose their entire perspective, neglecting all else in the care of this poor helpless child. We therefore should not only be willing to accept these children in our institutions but should urge their admission, for at the present time medical science is unable to cure these conditions. With this attitude, why is it impossible for us to accept these children? Certainly our files contain hundreds of applications for such as these.

"A brief glance at our present facilities for housing these children will give a quick answer. First, we have an infant nursery in which we place the children who are under one year of age. Up to a very short time ago none of these children were accepted. However, in the past few years a place has been formed for them in the hospital which has been able to accommodate approximately six such patients. Within the past year, due to the pressing demand, we have gradually stolen rooms from our hospital to accommodate these children, until at the present time we have 22. It is necessary to hospitalize these youngsters because they are not physically equipped to withstand the infectious diseases which are constantly with us in overcrowded buildings. The facilities we have now are for from ideal, and in fact would be considered very poor for a nursery, but we still consider it better than having these children at home and imposing a heavy burden on many other lives It is obvious then that a real need exists for an infant nursery. This, I understand, is due to come about within the next two or three years and will probably represent the largest nursery of its kind in the United States.

"For the children over one year of age and up to five or six there are two buildings, one for males and one for females. They are both 100 percent or more overcrowded, with children having to sleep two and three in a crib. In addition, the cribs are shoved so closely together that it is impossible to walk between them. Cribs not only fill the dormitory rooms but overflow into the dining hall and the play areas. Toilet facilities are inadequate. Sterilizing facilities are inadequate. The majority of the personnel is untrained in medical aseptic technique. The same conditions hold true for two other wards housing children between the ages of 6 and 12.

"It is no wonder then that dysentery here is an endemic disease. Nor is it a wonder that when one or two patients catch chickenpox or mumps that it spreads throughout the ward. True, we have been able to treat most of these illnesses with considerable success, and in fact have a cure rate for dysentery well above that reported in other parts of the Nation, but this disease cannot be eradicated without instituting proper public health and sanitary measures which are impossible to execute with this amount of overcrowding.

"Aside from the immediate medical indications for remedying this situation, it would be most desirable to institute a recreational and teaching program for these children which would give them the means to function at their maximum capacity. No matter how we may personally feel about children of this type, it is our duty as professional servants of the State of California to care for these children of our citizens to the best of our ability and to give them all that is at our command in the way of medical care and treatment."

Mrs. Arlene Messer's statement was as follows:

"The public health in relation to the nursing service and its affects on overcrowding is complex. Mechanical and structural inadequacies combined with a shortage of personnel are the principal contributing factors.

"The use of patient help in the care of our patients results in a breakdown in the establishment of any technique for their adequate care. Attendant training program endeavors to teach attendant personnel nursing procedures and an awareness of public health measures. We have found that there is no such substitute for the quality of supervision given by adequately trained graduate nursing personnel. Graduate nurse supervision and on-the-job instruction are a necessity if classroom teaching is to become meaningful.

"A large proportion of our new admissions are children of from birth to five years of age. These children require much greater nursing care than older ambulatory patients in order that they may develop normally and to learn such simple procedures as to walk and to talk it is necessary that they receive a great deal of individual attention from competent employees. It is, of course, our objective to make each of these youngsters as happy and useful as possible and to this end they must develop as normally as their mental handicap will permit with the final objective of placing them in the community either as self-supporting individuals or in some form of family care.

"Attached is an outline showing the basic minimal personnel to accomplish this goal."

Hours of nursing care per patient per day to give adequate care to our patients at Sonoma State Home.

1. Infants and crib patients	4	hours per day
2 Adult bed patients	2	hours per day
3. Wheelchair and infirm	1	hour per day
4. Low-grade, untidy, destructive	1½	hours per day
5. Working patients	½	hour per day
6 School children—young	1	hour per day
7. School children—older	½	hour per day
8. Tuberculosis patients	2	hours per day
9. Medical and surgical patients	3.2	hours per day

To adequately care for the present population we need		The present population consists of
Graduate nurses	55	Graduate nurses	34
Hospital attendants	656	Hospital attendants	495

It has been agreed that 21 new buildings each housing 100 patients will be needed to care for the future increase in population.

An average of two hours of nursing care per patient per day may be assumed. A large proportion of new admissions will be under 12 years of age therefore the average hours of care is higher.

2,100 patients × 2 hours of nursing care needed per day = 4,200 hours of nursing care needed per day × 7 = 29,400 hours of nursing care needed per week.
40 ÷ 29,400 = 735 employees to give 2 hours of nursing care per patient per day hour week to 2,100 patients.

For adequate supervision and instruction a ratio of one graduate nurse to 10 attendants should be obtained.

Following is the statement by Mr. T. A. Bravos, Business Manager:

"A sound program in the field of modern business administration and institutional planning must be carefully correlated with modern medical and psychiatric therapy requirements. This requires continuous re-evaluation and review of all existing physical facilities and the countless ancillary service departments.

"At Sonoma, we have an institution of approximately 3,300 beds that was planned to accommodate 2,500 people. As a result, many of our facilities that are vital to the proper over-all program have fallen behind our present population with resultant difficulties to the medical staff. Some of this, unfortunately, would have been impossible to avoid. On the other hand, there have been many instances where we have condoned things that would have brought severe censure to a private or nonvoluntary institution.

"I have taken the trouble to innumerate some of these areas. These requirements are taken from the California Administrative Code, Title 17, Public Health, and are published by the Bureau of Hospitals, State Department of Public Health as a guidance to large general hospitals; however, the regulations are highly applicable to our institution.

"1. Gross overcrowding of beds in general ward and hospital facilities.

"2. Inadequate over-all maintenance and upkeep of all buildings.

"3. Sanitation (water supply)—Satisfactory.

"4. Sewage disposal—Meeting minimum requirements.

"5 Garbage disposal—This has been a rather sadly neglected area and as a result, has caused difficulty with insects, flies and resultant dysentery.

"6. Incineration—None existent but in planning construction stage

"7. Food sanitation—Grossly inadequate—no refrigeration.

"8. Dishwashing—Generally unsatisfactory. No physical facilities.

"In some of our wards, general hospital and tubercular hospital we have never had a dishwashing machine One will be installed in our general hospital sometime during this next month and the new tubercular hospital will provide a very modern setup for food preparation and service. The million dollar, central kitchen unit which has been budgeted for this year is, at present, in the active planning stage and has been given top priority in the projects to be completed.

"The areas that have just been noted vary considerably in their degree of effectiveness. Active planning has been instituted to accommodate and improve each of them; however, it will take us time to bring each item to a necessary level. It will enable the institution to meet minimal standards in the physical facilities that have been noted.

"Countless other areas in the general hospital have been neglected, such as central supply, laboratory, pharmacy; however, these areas will be considered in our hospital addition.

"9. Hospital equipment—We are, at present, thoroughly evaluating all of our equipment standards and are working on more sterilizers, stainless steel equipment, etc., that will have longer lasting and more highly effective operating qualities.

"10. Building program—The building program instituted since the end of the war has provided us with several vitally needed ancillary units:

(a) We have a new $500,000 laundry which has been a tremendous boost in the quality and quantity of laundry we are able to provide for our patients.

(b) In addition we are just completing a boiler room which will provide us with more hot water, steam and heat—all vitally necessary to a growing institution.

(c) The seven ward buildings and the 200-bed tubercular hospital will be generally replacement units and enable us to vacate the oldest fire traps and worn out structures on the grounds.

"The attached plan is a brief resume of our capital outlay construction projects for the next five years. Completion of these projects, coupled with an intensive program in minor construction and deferred maintenance, will enable the Sonoma State Home to provide our medical staff with the kind of facilities they must have to carry out a modern medical and psychiatric program.

" 'Attached herewith is a compilation of the capital outlay construction projects envisioned by this institution as of present date, for a five-year period. This resume has taken into account monies appropriated for construction for the 1950-51 Fiscal Year.

'Population figures reflect conclusions that have been agreed upon in past conferences with your office. General thinking has been predicated on the fact that the institution's maximum population should not exceed 5,000. This exact figure is predicated upon an estimated capacity of 4,500 with an allowance of 10 percent for overcrowding. At the present time, including the moves that will be made in the next few months, the institution will still have thirteen (13) buildings which have either been condemned or will be condemned as a fire hazard or a costly maintenance project. In addition to this, the institution will require sixteen (16) new buildings for additional population. These sixteen (16) buildings, coupled with thirteen (13) replacements will provide the institution with adequate bed space for ultimate assumed population. Present overcrowding is approximately thirty-six (36) percent; in short, we have an institution with a capacity of 2,475 and an actual population of 3,350, which approximates an overcrowding of 36 percent.

'The projects listed below are given in order of their respective priority. Those projects with an asterisk before the number are the ones which will be requested in our 1951-52 Budget.

Major Construction—1951-1956

*1.	Ten (10) ward buildings	$2,900,000
*2.	Crematorium	70,000
*3.	Garage and transportation center	25,000
*4.	Athletic field, including swimming pool, service unit, baseball diamond, bleachers, lights	90,000
*5.	General warehouse building	110,000
*6.	Superintendent's cottage	35,000
*7.	Two physicians' cottages	42,000
*8	Employees' apartment house	180,000
9.	Ten (10) ward buildings	2,900,000
10.	Patients' and employees' store	50,000
11.	Industrial training shop	125,000
12.	New engineering offices and machine shops	100,000
13.	Nine (9) ward buildings	2,610,000
14.	Two physicians' cottages	42,000
15	Security unit for girls—special training	90,000
16.	School addition	90,000
17.	Recreational therapy area—Reynolds Ranch	40,000
18.	Children's unit—pilot study	250,000
19.	Receiving hospital (addition to general hospital)	250,000
20.	Employees' apartment house	180,000
21.	Two physicians' cottages	42,000

Items 1, 8, and 13: The twenty-nine (29) ward buildings that have been requested are, as we have pointed out, partially replacement (13) and partially new (16). They are to relieve our present overcrowding of thirty-six (36) percent and reduce to approximately ten (10) percent and adjust a waiting list that now stands at roughly 600

The list below indicates what buildings would be replaced.

	Building	Bed Capacity		Building	Bed Capacity
1	Poultry and dairy colony	100	8	Male infirmary annex	100
*2	Judah annex	100	9	Haven	100
*3	Judah hall	100	10	Oak Lodge	100
4.	Bentley hall	100	11	Walnut	100
5	Bentley annex	100	12	Slater	100
6.	Laurel	100	13	Surplus—No 2 and No 3 above	100
7	Bane annex	100

* These two buildings now house over 300 patients and will require three replacement buildings when they are eventually moved

These buildings will be replaced by thirteen new structures in the approximate order indicated; however, because of certain changes which are constantly going on respecting classification, and various problems concerning maintenance, it is probable this list might have to be adjusted

As we pointed out earlier, the sixteen (16) new additional buildings would be new bed space, 100 beds each or a total of 1600 new beds

Commencing with the 1951-52 Budget, we should like to have five buildings replaced and five buildings new of the 10 we have asked for and follow this procedure until we have completed the replacement of old and new additional structures

"Detailed justification for the remaining projects has been submitted to our department.

"In summation, it was felt that the committee would be interested in some general figures governing the operation of this institution for the next fiscal year. Our over-all operating costs will be, exclusive of capital outlay, in excess of $3,000,000, which approximates $2.65 per patient, per day. Our food costs will average around 60 cents per patient, per day.

Drug Costs: Maximum of $10 per year, per patient. Although these figures have been on the increase for the past few years, they still represent a low operational cost when one compares them with other hospitals and other types of care. Increasing our operating costs so that we could return more patients to the community may appear expensive intitially but, in the long run, it represents a terrific saving to the taxpayer and the State because, rather than simply holding people here on a custodial basis, we would be processing them through a therapy program that would enable the majority of them to become self-supporting."

McCollister: How much are you able to recover from family contribution or county participation?

Bravos: We charge the counties $20 per patient. This has been a subject of controversy in legislative and administrative circles for a long time.

McCollister: That is the County of origin?

Bravos: Yes.

Nichols: The law says you can spend up to $40 but we have maintained $20 rate consistently. We do not want to place too great a burden on the counties. The question is whether we should seek to recover the actual costs, abolish it entirely, or should we leave it as it is.

McCollister: You will be lucky to get it left as it is. That does play into your $2.65 figure, does it?

Nichols: No.

McCollister: Over and above the figures you gave us, there is still $2.65 a year per patient?

Nichols: That $2.65 is your actual cost, and this $20 a month goes into the state treasury and is not included in your figures, right. We do not take that as a credit against our appropriation. It goes directly to the State Controller and runs to about one million dollars a year for Pacific Colony and Sonoma.

McCollister: And the family is also directed to make a private contribution?

Nichols: The family pays the county where they have the ability. That is a matter for the County Social Welfare Department to determine.

Bravos: We have a relatively extensive farming program. That is credited to our costs. It goes into our food budget as a credit. That $20 goes straight to the General Fund.

Thompson: That wouldn't enter into your cost per day then?

Bravos: It is not that substantial, to be truthful. This figure doesn't purport to be a perfect cost figure but it does give the committee a rough general idea.

McCollister: If you didn't have this farm arrangement, your percentage would be higher?

Bravos: Right. It doesn't amount to too much in terms of the all over picture.

Porter: Just one final remark. The opinions expressed this morning are those of myself and the staff, and the department is represented by Mr. Nichols. There has been no discussion with Dr. Tallman on this meeting. He has a viewpoint which sees all 12 institutions in his department and if he disagrees, it is based on factors we are not aware of. We have expressed purely our own opinion. If there are grave differences of opinion, Dr. Tallman will give you better information.

McCollister: This might be embarrassing as many of our citizens serve as trustees, but in simple conversation, are your trustees, assuming they gather once a month—are they essential and of help to you?

Porter: I think the theory is excellent. We have one of the leading citizens of Healdsburg as a trustee, one in Santa Rosa, one in Petaluma, and one in Sonoma. The fact that those people meet here regularly and know what is going on, and then go out into the community and spread the gospel, and put the pressure on you gentlemen, etc., is in theory excellent. There are 12 boards. We happen to have a most excellent, helpful board. I do not think any of them are too potent politicians. They are good average citizens and they play the game squarely. They will do everything to help. They are allowed expenses but no remuneration. They give their services freely and my experience in the last four years is that they are definitely of value, particularly the two members in the little town of Sonoma. How much value they are, for instance, in Petaluma, Santa Rosa or Healdsburg, I have no way of measuring. You probably run into that in your activities more than I would. The theory is excellent and we have an excellent board, and we attempt to keep them informed so that they know what is going on. How far they can take it, we do not know—as to how effective they are is not always apparent.

Abshire: Do you consider them as ambassadors of good will?

Porter: My feelings is they are solid citizens in the smaller communities. They would rally around if you were to take the bread out of our hands. They would have contacts and assist us in getting our program over—not by petty politics. We feel that they are a group to help us with our program by getting community interest and support.

Nichols: It has been a question in the minds of a good many—even in the Legislature—and there was a bill to abolish it. It is a carry-over from an old law in which, at one time, they were given considerable power. This was replaced by centralized authority and they are merely advisory now. It has been my experience that they are not only good pressure agents, but they are public relations representatives in the communities, and render us a good service. They are of no expense to the State excepting the meals they might get when they come here. There is no pay and very few put in any claims for travel. They do give us these two services which I can point to:

1. They can recommend, from their observations of the hospitals from the outsider's standpoint, improvements and suggestions which are too close to our picture. We get that angle from the average citizen on those boards.

2. I know of one specific case where they were of real value. At Agnews we had a complaint about a patient being mistreated who subsequently died. Her daughter made quite an issue of it, and Mrs. Heffner arranged with the trustees to have a hearing, as an impartial board, so as not to give the situation an air of a whitewash. They met and heard testimony from and concerning the employees, and it is those aspects of their service which are of real value to us. They all have to be appointed by the Governor.

Nichols: We also have a sterilization law in this State. It is more active here at Sonoma than anywhere else except Pacific Colony. It is voluntary. The Director of Mental Hygiene secures the consent of relatives on an adult patient. If a minor, the hospital superintendent recommends that sterilization would be wise, and then it is approved by the Director of Mental Hygiene. A patient is never sterilized if there is a protest of any kind from anyone.

Thompson: You suggest the law needs changing?

Porter: We have four or five families where we have a mother and children in institution, or others from the same families, and we will let you see some of our families to show you why we recommend and practice sterilization.

Nichols: Yes, we have three generations of one family being cared for by the State by reason of not being sterilized.

Porter: That is right. They come in gradually over a period of years, and sometimes they go out, but as a result of not being sterilized, these families continue to grow. We think sterilization is of the utmost value.

Nichols: You perhaps recall the Dolwig Bill introduced in the 1949 session. It would have stopped the sterilization program in the State because it would have demanded a court order in each case. We think there is some justification to the demand made by Mr. Dolwig to change the law, particularly so as to improve the procedural aspects, but we certainly do not feel that the policy of the State for over 50 years should be completely abandoned. We think the law is alright as it is, with possibly a change in procedure, and we are at the present reviewing the law in other states in an effort to frame the best possible law which we will then submit to the Legislature, leaving the authority in the supervision of the institutions in those cases where there is consent, and where there is protest, leaving it to the courts to decide.

McCollister: Your suggestion then to the committee is to hold the present law, with procedural changes?

Nichols: Would this committee be interested in having this submitted to it as an interim committee, since it is in the field of public health?

Thompson: It is something we could take notice of.

Following is the sterilization record at the Sonoma State Hospital:

	Males	Females
Total as of June 30, 1950:	2,490	3,040
Sterilized during July, 1950:	3	12

The committee then started its tour of the wards and went first to an infant nursery in the main hospital where there were 22 babies under one year of age.

Lieberman: This is in contrast to what you will see in the other wards. We have the feeling that these children will grow up to be a bit less dumb when they grow up than those in the wards.

The first room held the mongoloid type babies and Dr. Lieberman said he thought the time would come when they were going to be able to help those babies. They estimate that three out of every 1,000 babies are born mongoloids, probably caused by a disturbance of the endocrine gland—perhaps pituitary shots will help—no one knows; but Sonoma is going to give the 22 babies in the hospital ward the very best care medically and every way as the basis of a research which will determine whether such care can raise the mental level of mongoloids and make them happier and more useful individuals.

The committee saw spastic children—a nerve condition occasioned they think, before, or at birth. Some spastics are mentally sound and some are not. These children will also be given that extra special care to determine if their condition can be substantially improved.

Also receiving research were the "gargoyle" type of babies (symptoms—large head, short extremities, become blind sometimes, enlarged liver and spleen and curved spine—in general, symptoms of old age). Gargoyles usually live from 9 to 18 years. It is some sort of a metabolic disease.

Spastics usually die around seven years of age. The State has 400 in institutions.

Someone mentioned syphilis and Dr. Lieberman said "syphilis is the biggest false alarm there is."

The committee saw hydro-cephalics and micro-cephalics—overly large and overly small heads, respectively. These babies can live to an adult life, and mongoloid babies have been known to live as old as 60 years. The average age expectancy is 8 to 10 years but the next few years with modern methods and drugs, etc , for the care of these children, will increase their age expectancy.

(Mongoloid children can be recognized by their slanting eyes, they are usually quite double jointed, and there is an unusually large space between the large and second toe). The committee saw one mongoloid who had two thumbs. Dr. Lieberman said very often these babies are recognized as mongoloids at birth and before the mother ever sees them, they are brought to Sonoma. The committee also saw a little girl who had been born without arms and legs and they have not yet determined whether she is mentally defective. Mongoloid babies are ordinarily attractive looking babies and very friendly.

The committee then went into the wards where similar babies were being cared for under the old deplorable conditions—two or three babies in cribs and the cribs so crowded into the room that in some cases it was impossible to walk between them. Dr. Lieberman pointed out the impossibility of preventing the spread of contagious diseases, dysentery, etc., under such conditions. He did say, however, that the conditions were not nearly as bad as they used to be and dysentery was being controlled to a great extent.

With respect to the danger of fire, the committee was told that that particular building could not be classed as a fire trap exactly but that it would be a matter of carrying out all the patients—and bad as it seemed, it was vastly improved over two years ago.

Some of these babies have epilepsy.

En route from one building to another the committee was told that the campus consisted of 2,000 acres—a great deal of it rather mountainous, and not too much table land.

The committee then visited North Cottage—a dormitory for a varying degree of low type mental patient of younger group. The next building visited was thrown up some years ago as a temporary structure and is a definite fire trap. It is to be torn down as soon as new facilities are ready. This houses 126 young adults of school age who do not possess enough intelligence to go to school. They spend their time sitting on the front steps or in the back yard. There are no facilities for any kind of program for these patients. Dr. Porter said: "If we had a good program all the way along for these boys, some of them would not be as dumb as they now appear. They would have an emotional development with a better adjustment potential. They might be so much better that some mild degree of schooling might be indicated."

The Fire Marshal has condemned 14 of the buildings, eight of which will be replaced by the new dormitories now under construction. The new building to replace the one mentioned above is built to house only 100 patients and there are well over 100 in the present building. They plan on 10 percent overcrowding to start out with.

The present structure for the young adults is so unsafe that if the patients couldn't help themselves in case of fire, it would be difficult to get them out. Dr. Porter said even if they put their very best patients in there it would be unsafe for them.

Elaborating more on the type of patient in that dormitory, Dr. Porter said the patients were of such low mentality they could not keep themselves clean. They soil themselves at night and in the daytime. All are untidy. There is a rubber sheet on every bed. They run them to the bathroom at regular intervals. The population of this ward is bright enough to do bed making, sweep, etc., but nothing else.

The committee then went to Bane Annex where the boys in the younger school age bracket are housed. They are a pretty good potential and live in cheerful surroundings. They have a man attendant who arranges ball games and various kinds of recreation. All new male employees are rotated through this ward.

There are two full-time dentists and a third allowed but not recruited, two dental hygienists, one full-time X-ray technician and another allowed. There is a full laboratory set-up. There is also a full-timed druggist.

The committee returned to the administration building where Dr. Porter had assembled the various "families" mentioned earlier.

There was the Gomez family of three children—16, 12 and 17—two girls and one boy; the Alphonse family with three children. The mother came to the institution in 1925 and has gone home on vacation several times. She is now hoping to go out on parole She was married only once, and her husband is now dead. The girls have been here 10 and 11 years, and have been taught to cook and sew. One has been out on parole. She was out for three years and three months, and returned for dentistry.

The other girl has been here for 10 years and has never been out. The mother and daughter who has been out are sterilized.

Next there were Jessie Kilpatrick and Naomi Mathewson—aunt and niece respectively who had identical characteristics—a pale square face and head and a most unusual growth of hair, pale eyes and absolutely expressionless faces. The doctor said they intended reporting this rare clinical entity

Then there was Julia and Joseph Rodrigues, mother and son. There are also three other children there, two of the girls being on vacation. The mother came to Sonoma on May 23, 1944 and was out for three months at one time. The son who is 16 years old has been there four years, and he attends school.

Next were Helen, Nina, and Henry Enriques. There are two other children of the family living on the outside. The mother used to be at Sonoma; in fact, the mother and a baby were there recently. The mother is now sterilized, and the baby seemed normal but is probably defective.

Porter: We have at the present time 30 or 40 such groupings, and this is one of the bases upon which we ask that the sterilization law be kept in effect. We sometimes receive two or more cases from families where the parents are normal. The cause is unknown but we believe the inheritance comes from generations past.

The committee then visited the locked units, Paxton and Goddard, for psychopathics and defective delinquents. Paxton is for boys 19 and above and Goddard is for the younger boys.

Goddard was visited first.

Porter: This is for boys up to 18 years of age (12 to 18), adolescents. They are either committed through the courts as delinquent children, or various other categories. Some are mentally defective and some are not. The majority are. These are our border line cases—our high grade patients—some of normal intelligence, placed here for the correction of behavior problems. Very few cases were admitted as psychopathic delinquents, five, six or seven perhaps. The rest are children who cannot get along adequately without security. In fact, our doctors feel that the security here is too severe for 80 percent of our patients. It is maintained at this high level for the other 20 percent.

Nichols: Do you get cases here from the Youth Authority for observation?

Porter: Oh yes, but we rarely get more than two per week We never have at one time more than three new children unknown to us here. All of the observation children are here because we have trained personnel in these wards. They have the feeling for this kind of work Hunches can sometimes be more correct than anything else. The juvenile courts also send them here. We have all categories of observation cases, normal children, epileptics on occasion, and every type of observation case for children we have here.

Spaulding: Do you have any particularly outstanding case here?

Porter: Only one. One psychopathic delinquent diagnosed by my conference of a 14 year old boy whose acts were sufficiently violent to indicate that if he were in the outside world he would react in an unsavory way. He is not old enough to go to Mendocino and sit there with the criminals. He came here through the juvenile court. He had attempted to kill, and for all practical purposes, killed a small child by slitting open her abdomen. The child did not die and the patient was sent here.

I would like to point out what our program at this time is here. We realize that, as I told you, we are having to restrict activities for 80 percent of our cases in order to maintain the security of the entire unit. In the past there has been no way of knowing—or having the staff regularly studying each of these children all the time. Therefore, we had nothing scientific to say whether a child was good or bad except the past record. If you have ever had anything to do with commitment forms, you will know it takes a sense of balance to know what is true and what is put in to influence us to put them here. We are in a position now with the increased staff, having observed them over a period of time, to know which children we can let out between that door and the fence. We give them as much freedom as they can take without blowing. If they are not held back too long, their chances of recovery are better. Even normal people—those in the Army for instance, will require readjustment. We want to teach them some of the finer arts of living so they can appreciate more of the means of entertainment, besides stealing someone's car or socking someone. They didn't have a playground so the children built one. They didn't want anyone to violate their program so they lose their entertainment. We have not given extreme punishments We might take the good group of boys up in the orchard or some other privilege. Eventually we will have a ball team. When we feel they are ready, they will finally go down to an open ward. In the past, children were here from two to five years and went out. Our parole violation rate was incredibly high. So, we are not so much interested in having everything neat and tidy as we are in having something constructive for them to do. They have games between the two wards and on several occasions outside teams have been brought in to play with them. The boys then begin to have the feeling that maybe there is something "out there" for them. In such an environment their bad character begins to stick out like a sore thumb, whereas before you couldn't tell. Now we are building up standards for comparison so that after a two year period we know whether a child has profited or not. We are trying to work out with the Youth Authority and other agencies a much freer exchange.

Much later on it may be possible to work much more individually with the children. We are aware that having a fork and knife to eat with is better than a seven-course meal. My own opinion is that clear cut control environmental therapy is the only obvious solution to this problem, but we only have personnel to sit down with 10 percent of the population. This is the only program we can see any hope for. Further, this unit will outgrow its usefulness pretty soon.

Ludwig: We have other personnel besides the psychiatrists working on these units. Dr. Lieberman works with me and Dr. Frederickson works with the female group. The most important group are the ward attendants They are the go-betweens for the children. We process this ward by means of a team which we mean to extend to all other wards in the institution; a psychiatrist, a social worker, a member of the ward and a medical doctor. Our discharge rate has gone up three or four fold. We want to know he is ready. We have had this in effect since the first of the year, but the beginnings started some time ago.

The committee saw the rooms where the boys do various kinds of craft, but where a great deal more equipment is needed.

Speaking of the cell blocks, one of the doctors said "So far as I am personally concerned, when we have to use those cells because of our own inadequacies of handling the children, we defeat our purpose. When you see a whole block of cells before you with children in them you can be very sure something is wrong with the program. We have had no escapes or any serious difficulty since our recreational activities began. We have about 30 children out for the summer. If they make it for those three months, we will let them try it some more, but if the home situation is bad, they are better off here.

Thompson: Does the county education group help with your educational program?

Porter: No, the educational facilities are strictly Mental Hygiene. The county presents us with certificates, etc. Our teachers are employed by our department and have nothing to do with the county board of education. I know in Mendocino it is part of the county school program, but our teachers are all hired by our department.

In answer to a question by Senator Abshire, Dr. Porter stated that the boys who were now out on probation were called on regularly by a social worker under the Department of Mental Hygiene, and if the probation office was helping, it was on a voluntary basis. Dr. Porter mentioned a boy from Santa Rosa who had committed a minor sex offense. He was not particularly dangerous but because of the feeling engendered, they did not want to send him back to the community from which he had come. So the family moved to another location and they felt it was then safe to send the boy home—followed up regularly of course by the social worker. Dr. Porter said the average stay of the boys in this particular category was about three years. He stated what they were endeavoring to do was to break down the population of this ward to 50.

The dining room at Goddard was very cheerful, having recently had a furniture replacement.

Mention was made of the fact that the few television sets they had were making a tremendous difference in the morale of the boys. They have five or six sets and 33 wards, and their next budget will ask for 10 more sets.

The committee was now in Paxton in a ward of 74 patients all 18 and over. The doctors said they had a real fine personnel man running that unit who has a feeling for the patients. The cells in this unit are used mostly for overflow beds and have been empty longer than ever before because of the interest of the attendants in the patients. This ward has as good discipline or better than any other ward in the institution. There is only one patient in the cell block now.

The doctors said their patients go insane from time to time but when they do they send them to Napa or Mendocino. Temporarily they have to place them in cells.

The boys in this ward play basketball and baseball but are not as active as the younger boys. It is a very mixed ward, with many patients there who do not belong there at all, but they have no intermediate place to put them.

The committee then went through the shoe shop which Dr. Ludwig thought was on its way out. "How many people with an I. Q. of 65 would like to work in a shoe manufacturing company?" he queried. This is a highly specialized kind of thing and this is no place for specialties, he continued, and eventually they hoped to make a change there. This is an example of what they meant by "unwise industrial training."

Mr. Bravos said they knew definitely that the manufacturing of shoes was not wise in an institution like theirs, both from the standpoint of cost and the kind of shoes they get. However, they will probably always have to have a place for the repair of shoes. It costs $4 a pair to make the shoes, and they could buy good shoes for $4.50 to $5.

The committee then went to McDougall Cottage for generally delinquent girls from 14 to 25 years of age. Here the girls did beautiful handwork of various kinds—sewing, crocheting and hooking of rugs, copper work, jewelry, etc. Here they have a television set, a piano and a nice recreation yard. They have only one recreational director for the entire institution, Mr. Massa. Someone stated they did not have as much fire drill as they should. Here there is no accordian wire on the fence, and as a matter of fact, the tremendous security with the men represents not the patients but what the community fears. The patients do not have the hopeless feeling they had before, with increased recreation.

The committee then went to Stoneman Wing, a part of the main building. Here were housed chronic bed patients, severe organic cases, in general the physically incapacitated. Here the patients are cared for by other patients. It was this group of patients who were menaced by the fire in the administration building of a few weeks previous. It is a very distressing ward from every standpoint.

Back in Dr. Porter's office Mr. Nichols wanted to know what could be done about the long waiting lists, outside of new construction, new beds, increased personnel, etc.

Dr. Porter: Last year in the budget, and again this year, the Depart- of Mental Hygiene requested a sum of money to have a pilot project in Los Angeles County probably. This would be to secure personnel and some suitable space in which to teach parents of children on our waiting list to better care for their children at home, a training program for parents who can't get their youngsters institutionalized. One result will be better care for the children and perhaps they will not have to be institutionalized. That is one item. Another thing, a pilot study for Pacific Colony, by having a psychiatrist, social worker, psychologist, and extra attendants, they can screen the patients intensively, treat them intensively, give them more personal attention, and keep figures to see what that does with the discharge rate—how many more go out than in the past without it. Dr. Ludwig has pointed it out beautifully. In the past we did not have personnel to see the patients individually. At the present time we can see certain of them regularly, treat them intensively and have more activities. This has already reduced our population as mentioned. The pilot study at Pacific Colony will prove in figures the value of such a program and will be presented in time for this or the next budget. We will attempt to prove that qualified personnel will get results. That makes room for others to come in and take their place. It will do those two things.

We have about 33 wards but have had time to show you only six, which, however, have hit the high spots of our overcrowding. The overcrowding on the female side is considerably worse than on the male side.

Mr. Thompson: How do you feel about these private institutions for the care of patients for whom you have no room here?

Mr. Porter: Our theory is that a good private sanatorium is an excellent answer if you can afford it. In the Mary Burke case it didn't work out well. The other private institutions around the Bay are strictly limited. Not too much help in taking care of the waiting list. It would appear that private care is too expensive for the average American. It is only the rather well-to-do who can afford it. The average man who spends $200 to $500 a month for this kind of care cannot raise his normal children properly. Therefore, it does appear that the State is going to have to subsidize the State or county to supplement the small fee paid by the parents. Certainly up to this point the California private institutions have not been too helpful and have left the burden strictly up to the state facilities. The counties do not want to touch it at all.

The thing we touched on early this morning—the funds given us for family care—is a great thing. Dr. Tallman has provided us with social workers to intensify it. Placing a child in a good foster home is better by far than institutionalizing him. So far we have not gone very far on this program but we are starting now and will do better. It is difficult to find normal children homes, but with the state program to pay for the care of defective children we hope to be successful in that program. Over in the Sacramento area they have a lot of mental patients in homes there and it is working fine, relieving to some extent the overcrowding of state hospitals. It would seem to me a small valley such as Sonoma Valley, if the orchard business is not too good, should be able to interest a considerable number of people to take children to their homes for $60 a month. This would be a delightful climate in which to set up such a center. In other states they have found little areas where people take care of the state's charges in their homes.

Mr. Nichols: That is called family care, in that children are not turned back to home families because they do not have any, but if we can place them in a private family and pay them for it, it is cheaper for the State to do that than to build additional hospitals.

Mr. Thompson: Will the State adequately supervise this program?

Mr. Nichols: They are investigated frequently.

Mr. Thompson: That was true of the Mary Burke Foundation, wasn't it?

Mr. Nichols: No, that was a private institution, inspected once or twice a year. These family care homes are small homes which have two, three or four patients and they are under the supervision of our social workers. We have a staff of about 60 social workers, increased now by 30 more, covering the whole State to do this kind of supervision.

Mr. Thompson: With 90 social workers, plus $60 a month, isn't that quite an expense to the State?

Mr. Nichols: Well, it has been carefully reviewed and the more we look at it, the more we like it. It is a saving to the taxpayer in not having to build additional hospitals. About 7,000 patients are out on leave now—some of them in this program. If we didn't have the 90 supervisors, we would have to have two more hospitals, and it costs $10,000,000 to build a hospital.

The recommendations of the committee pertaining to the Sonoma State Hospital are as follows:

Sonoma State Home is a training school for the care and training of the mentally handicapped. It is the duty of the home to provide modern care and training for those mentally handicapped individuals who are in need of the services of such a unit so that they may live happier and normal lives and can be returned to the community as useful citizens whenever possible. To reach this goal there are four fundamental areas that must receive complete support:

1. Personnel. There is an insufficient number of well trained personnel on the institution staff which results in an inadequate program for the mentally handicapped and reflects itself directly in a low discharge and leave of absence rate. Increased personnel is necessary in all areas: medical, nursing, social service, rehabilitation therapies and other ancillary groups. This will result in an increased service to the people of the State and will be a true economy in that more patients will be returned to the community to live more self-sufficient lives.

2. Buildings. Additional ward buildings are necessary to relieve the overcrowded condition now existing in this institution and to provide care for those patients now on the waiting list. These buildings should be constructed as rapidly as possible in conformance with the program sponsored by the Department of Mental Hygiene and based upon statewide population studies. Existing facilities are unable to accommodate even one more patient.

3. Material and Supplies. For the maximum utilization of the personnel and the buildings increased material and supplies are essential.

4. Research. The study of the etiology of the mental deficiencies is in its infancy. Little is known, for example, of such conditions as mongolism and cerebral palsy. Although the least tangible of all active attacks on the problem of the mentally handicapped, research is of the most basic importance. Facilities and finances for such basic work have traditionally been lacking. The importance of an active and continuous research program cannot be overemphasized

NAPA STATE HOSPITAL

The Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health met at the Napa State Hospital on August 3, 1950, and in addition to the committee there was also Senator Nathan Coombs, representing Napa County, together with Dr. T. K. Miller, Superintendent and Medical Director of the Napa State Hospital: Dr. Reginald Rood, Assistant Superintendent; Dr. W. A. Oliver, Director of Clinical Services; Delbert J. Bradley, Business Manager; and Mr. A. Edward Nichols, representing the Department of Mental Hygiene.

Dr. Miller thanked the committee for meeting at the hospital and assured the members that he wanted to make their visit just as informative as they could. Dr. Miller, in his opening statement, stated: "Napa is the second oldest institution in California, having been completed in 1875 The old main building was the entire institution at that time, housing patients, personnel, administration, and everything Stockton is the oldest institution.

"Our aims are treatment, teaching and research. Our particular aim now at this institution is that everyone in the hospital, among the personnel, that is, shall be a therapist. We feel that making everyone in the hospital a therapist is going to do much more for the patient than we did in the past. The hospital attendant spends 24 hours a day with the patient. There is no way to tell which patient is going to respond to treatment and which will not. We must consider every patient as one who is going to get better. So, we give every attendant this "in-service" training, teaching all the personnel in the hospital to be therapists. We use every recognized therapy. In addition to that, we feel that we have to improve the patients' living conditions. In moving out of the old buildings into the new, we moved 100 male patients who were always bed patients. We put 50 in one ward and 50 in another and within a very short time they had all but four patients in one ward out of bed, and all but 12 in the other. This is attributable in large part to more pleasant living surroundings. They are interested in living again. We think that it is very important to make living conditions in hospitals approximate normal living conditions. There are many patients who are not going to get well. They are entitled to live as normally as possible, because, unfortunately, they are individuals who came here through no fault of their own. They have committed no crime. So their living should be as comfortable as possible. In doing this, we have bought pianos out of our benefit fund. Every ward now has a piano. Every ward has occupational therapy, orchestras, sings, dances, and has good times not possible without pianos. We have added a vanity shop for the women to go to, and permanents, shampoos and waves, and other beauty treatments are prescribed as part of their treatment We have found that this is a big boost for these women without any cost to them.

"We have purchased a 16 mm. movie projector and have two or three shows every night, which the patients go to regularly, and then we also bring some shows to the wards for those who are bed-patients.

"We have taken the patients' orchestra to the women's actively disturbed ward where those women listened to the orchestra in the day room, and the next day the attendant called me and said the ward was the quietest it had been in a year. It is all good therapy—a form of psychotherapy.

"We have also bought pool tables for the patients, and television sets We have two sets and have ordered 20. We put one in the men's parole ward for six months where from 40 to 100 patients watched the show every evening We have a problem here that there is not too much for them to do in the evening and many used to go to bed right after dinner. With television they have asked to stay up until 10 or 10.30. They like to watch the wrestling matches especially. Maybe we can get money from the State for all of these things, rather than from the benefit fund.

"One thing we have stressed at this institution is ground privileges for the patients Close to 1,000 patients now have ground privileges. They go to and from work on their own responsibility. We are not a penal institution. Our patients are mentally ill. A good form of treatment is to give them a little more responsibility just before they go home—let them go around unattended—to the canteen, etc We have heard from relatives such things as this: A doctor in Oakland had a relative here and we realized this person could not get along outside the institution. The doctor said he had been asked to take him home, but as soon as he was moved into the new building he was willing to stay. That reflects in a way the atmosphere we are trying to create. It is through your help and the Legislature as a whole that we are able to do these things. This last Legislature has allowed us more professional personnel. We have 4,000 patients here, and we had no recreational therapists. We had six occupational therapists, a very small number for so many people. You gave us three occupational therapists and supervisors, more doctors and professional people, psychiatrists, etc., to do a better job. We were also able to increase our nursing personnel.

"I would like to just say that of these 4,000 patients we have one unit for children—60 behavior patients sent to us by the juvenile courts for a 60-day observation. Their behavior problems might indicate a mental disturbance which, with early treatment, might prevent them from developing into juvenile delinquents. This unit is in a sense a research ward. We will learn early signs of mental illness, treat them earlier, and prevent them from becoming criminals perhaps. This will start them out with a chance to rehabilitate themselves, and will keep them from becoming an added expense to the State at a later date

"In the last few years we have had consultants, specialists in certain categories, to help us in our treatment of patients Dr. Soto-Hall of San Francisco, an orthopedic man, has been helping us in fracture cases, etc. He brings a team of four or five men with him who work with him all day pinning hips, reducing fractures, and in general, helping immensely. We have other specialists too like eye, ear, nose and throat, T. B., etc., who come once or twice a month.

"We also are supposed to take care of the T. B. mental patients in the northern part of the State. We have one unit of about 240 active and possibly 250 inactive, or arrested, cases here We plan on a new building to take these patients from other institutions They have given us additional equipment for that reason and at the present time we have reduced the incidence in the state hospitals remarkably by taking chest X-rays of all new patients as they come in. The Public Health Department comes out and takes films of the patients and the employees in the hospital.

"We have one new building coming up for a treatment center, and will house the receiving unit and a few wards Buy us some X-ray therapy equipment and if this is concentrated at one institution, it will represent a tremendous saving to the State.

"Dr. Williams at Mendocino called up one day and said: 'We have six eye cases up here—six patients with glaucoma. Will you take them down there?' We can see this institution developing into a specialty hospital for the physical treatment of patients, those requiring X-ray, eye conditions, T. B. and other conditions The patients will get better treatment where we have the equipment to take care of them.

"It has been very gratifying to me in the last few years to get letters from former patients. In fact, when our patients leave the hospital, we write and say we would appreciate hearing from them and would they tell us what helped them most in the hospital, and what would have helped them more, had we had it. Of course sometimes we receive constructive criticism, but there has been a falling off of complaints relative to the treatment of patients. They have diminished very remarkably due to the fact that we are making everyone treatment conscious in the hospital—teaching them to take an interest in the patient.

"I want to make some comment on our ground privileges. Out of 1,000 patients with ground privileges, we have about 20 or 25 leave each month without permission. They are usually in better mental condition reaching the approximate time when they will leave the hopsital, and they just get overanxious to get out and take off. Only occasionally do we have a dangerous patient getting away. When we do we notify the local sheriff, and the sheriff from the commitment county; and if he is especially dangerous, an all-points bulletin is sent out so everyone in the State is alerted.

"We will develop here residents and internes. We have had for a year now six graduate students from the University of California in psychiatric social work, and two residents every three months from Langley Porter in San Francisco. They spend three months here and at San Quentin, and three in San Francisco hospitals We feel and know that the mental hospitals are an untouched field so far as research is concerned. We have over 30,000 in these institutions We feel that universities and clinics will take advantage of this opportunity to carry on research in institutions. At the present time there is no money for research. The time should come when they will allocate us money to carry it on."

Dr. Wrenshall A. Oliver, a member of the staff of the Napa Hospital, presented the committee with the following reprint written for the American Journal of Psychiatry, Vol. 106, No. 4, October, 1949 Dr. Oliver wrote the article himself and it has received national recognition.

A State Hospital Children's Unit

"As children's units in state hospitals are a relatively new departure in institutional psychiatry, it might be of some interest to survey the experiences of this hospital from the standpoint of past difficulties and future planning. In 1943 a children's unit was established at Camarillo State Hospital for the Southern California area, and later the same year a similar unit was set up here at Napa State Hospital for the northern part of the State. Provision was then made in the Welfare and Institutions Code enabling the juvenile courts and the California Youth Authority to commit children for 90-day observation periods for psychiatric study. In view of the insatiable need for and well-known lack of such facilities in general, the units were soon filled and have had long waiting lists ever since. Considering the complicated nature of psychiatric problems in children, prolonged intramural observation has obvious advantages over the outpatient type of examination and work-up, no matter how expert or complete.

"Admissions to the unit are of three types—the observation commitment mentioned above, superior court commitment where actual psychosis has been diagnosed prior to entry, and the voluntary admission in which the application is signed by the parent or guardian Of all admissions to this unit so far, 57 percent have been from the juvenile courts, 16 percent from the California Youth Authority, 7 percent mental illness commitments, and 20 percent voluntary admissions. With the exception of the voluntary application, the hospital exercises no selection over admissions, which circumstance, in view of the crowding and long waiting lists, had led to numerous heated discussions among the staff. It would, of course, be nice to accept only cases that would not be troublesome and that present a good prognosis, but the prevailing opinion at present is that no one has the psychiatric omniscience to make such selections, an opinion that has been strengthened by the not infrequent favorable outcome of cases that would certainly have been rejected under the selection system. Another result of this situation has been an informative and interesting experience with a wide range of problems.

"The unit is housed in a cottage-type structure appropriated (but not designed) for the purpose, located on the hospital grounds in close proximity to the other buildings. It consists of two mirror-halves to permit segregation of the sexes, with 26 beds on each side. Most of the beds are in dormitories, with a few in individual rooms, and there is a dining room on each side. Food is brought to the building from a main kitchen, but there are some kitchen facilities on the wards for the preparation of refreshments for parties, etc. There is space for occupational therapy, some office space, and two play halls, one of which is half-filled with beds. A temporary structure apart from the building serves as a schoolroom, and the children have access on a part-time basis to the main hospital's recreation hall for sports and recreational activities. Children of all ages up to 18 are housed in the unit, with the exception of the frankly psychotic, and the severe behavior problems in the 16 to 18 year group, who are housed in certain of the adult wards. The unit is staffed by two psychiatrists, a clinical psychologist, a psychiatric social worker, an occupational therapist, four teachers (one of whom functions as recreational director), and 10 attendants on various shifts. The general atmosphere is permissive, the children are given considerable freedom of the grounds, and there is no segregation of the sexes in the planned social and recreational activities. Diagnoses, plans of treatment, and dispositions are decided by the entire staff in weekly conferences conducted by the clinical director. The work-up consists of the usual medical and psychiatric examination, plus such psychological testing as seems indicated, and reports by the social worker of contacts with members of the family and other social agencies."

"The vagaries of psychiatric diagnosis being what they are, the following figures are no more valuable than other similar ones, but may serve to indicate in a general way the types of problems dealt with. Of some 600 cases handled by the unit since its inception, 30 percent have been classified in the primary behavior disorder group, 12 percent in the neurotic group, 20 percent in the functional psychosis group (93 percent of these were schizophrenic), 15 percent in the psychopathic personality group, and 8 percent as mentally defective. The remaining 15 percent were made up of a variety of conditions such as juvenile paresis, convulsive disorders, chorea, etc."

Problems Encountered

"The first problem is that of physical facilities. It is recognized that these are inadequate, from the standpoint of size, arrangement, and location. While it is doubtful if any children's psychiatric unit, no matter what size, would ever be large enough to make a dent in the total problem, it is nevertheless within the realm of possibility to visualize housing and staffing two or three times the present bed capacity. We should like also to get away from the ward idea, which too much resembles the old-fashioned orphanage or the average detention home, and approach the cottage type structure housing smaller numbers, and permitting better age-group segregation. Plans have been formulated and funds appropriated for the construction of such a unit, which incidentally will be located away from the main hospital grounds.

"An even more vexing problem has been that of public relations, the word 'public' including the local townspeople, law enforcement agencies, and certain juvenile court authorities, to say nothing of many employees of the hospital itself, who took the traditional attitude that there were bad children who should be securely locked up (somewhere else) and not permitted to disturb the peace. This punitive attitude is of course understandable and is furthered by the permissive therapeutic approach which leads to some escapes and local misdemeanors. It must be said, however, that this difficulty is steadily diminishing, due partly to the effect of time, and partly to extensive efforts to acquaint the public with the purpose of the undertaking. These efforts have resulted in obtaining financial assistance from service groups and the use of community recreational facilities such as nearby 4-H Club camping facilities, and in other ways.

"The staff problem can be summed up in a few words—lack of trained personnel; but it has been a source of pleasant surprise to learn that there is no lack of intelligent interest, and we have obtained some excellent attendants purely by the process of trial and error. Such intelligent interest plus a certain knack (for want of a better term) in the handling of children are very good substitutes for formal training.

"From the purely psychiatric standpoint, we are babes in the woods of the youngest branch of a young science, facing innumerable unsolved questions of etiology, diagnosis, treatment and disposition. It has been said that diagnosis is of secondary importance in dealing with psychiatric problems, especially in children, and with this we agree. But "secondary importance" does not mean no importance at all, and we are not ready to toss overboard years of training in scientific medical discipline. Diagnosis is a good point at which to crystalize thinking, and there is a faint suspicion that our impatience with this situation is a rationalization of ignorance. One needs only to peruse the American Psychiatric Association nomenclature which is mandatory in the California state hospital system, noting particularly the categories primary behavior disorder and psychopathic personality with their long lists of peccadillos, misdemeanors, and felonies Here is diagnosis on a strictly symptomatic level, something which is frowned upon in every other branch of medicine. There is growing dissatisfaction, reflected in recent psychiatric literature, with the whole concept of psychopathy, and one way to change thinking on the subject might be to discard the term altogether. From the semantic standpoint it has acquired for psychiatrists an aura of hopelessness and provokes fear-laden rejection on the part of juvenile authorities and social agencies In many ways the situation is reminiscent of epilepsy, which is now universally regarded as symptomatic, and the fact that some cases are labeled idiopathic means only that the etiologic factors are unknown and furnish a subject for research. Epilepsy is no longer a visitation of God. While we are not ready to propose a new nomenclature to be added to the many now in existence, we are convinced that the reactions and behavior patterns of children should not be judged and labeled from the standpoint of those of adults, and that diagnosis and treatment should be oriented toward dynamics rather than external manifestations.

"Treatment facilities are those which are more or less standard in any children's psychiatric unit—individual and group psychotherapy, occupational therapy, remedial education, recreation and athletics, correction of contributory physical defects, shock therapy in selected psychotics. The question of which case responds best to which treatment is a matter of accumulating experience and will be the subject of future papers. Some children seem in desperate need of individual therapy, others do better without it. Our experience with juvenile schizophrenics is not encouraging, agreeing with that of others, but the shy, introverted, possibly prepsychotic child does well, encouraging us to feel that psychosis may be prevented. The first real advance in cancer research came with the five-year study, and this must be applied to psychiatry if we are to assess the value of our efforts. The follow-up study is the autopsy table of psychotherapy, revealing mistakes and lighting the way for the future.

"In disposition of cases lies by far the most difficult problem of all. While they are far from perfect, facilities do exist for the defective, the psychotic, and the severely delinquent 'psychopath,' but the bulk of our cases are not in these categories. The treatment program might be summed up as preparation of the child for an adjusted environment to be followed by provision of the adjusted environment; and if their half of the program fails the entire effort breaks down This means continued psychotherapy for the family as well as the child, or the finding of suitable placement in those instances in which the family is out of the picture, as is frequently the case. Outpatient facilities exist in the larger cities but are completely lacking in less populous areas. Placement facilities are also inadequate but to this is added the difficulty of a wide variety of independent social agencies—city, county, state, private, religious, etc., with rigid financial, geographical, and other limitations. We have felt that some centralization of these efforts would result in better utilization.

Summary

"The development and functioning of a state hospital children's psychiatric unit have been sketched. Problems of physical facilities, staffing, and in the diagnosis, treatment, and disposition of cases have been indicated. We would welcome communication from other similar units for the exchange of information and experience."

The request was made of Dr. Oliver that he make a distinction between the psychopathic delinquents in Mendocino and Sonoma and the cases brought to Napa. Dr. Oliver's reply was as follows: "Ours are sent here by the courts, by the Youth Authority, and we also have voluntary admissions for study. They are usually cases in which a behavior disorder is present and in which mental or physical disorder is suspected as a possible cause. We would consider the cases at Mendocino and Sonoma as failures in which there was insufficient study and treatment early in the course of the disorder. Only a small percentage of children from Napa go to Mendocino and Sonoma. Those that do have usually come to us too late.

"As regards our adult cases, we have felt for a long time that a considerable percent are acute disorders not lasting very long, relatively young individuals, which, if we could treat them intensively, could be restored to normal mental health and return to society without ever getting into a chronic state which so many developed into in past years. The tendency has been for chronic cases to pile up but we hope we are, and think we are, on the right track—that we are preventing this sort of thing. We have set up a special ward for that kind of case in both the men's and women's sections. In the men's ward in the first year they handled 229 cases—about one-fourth to one-third of all male admissions for that year. Of the 229, we were able to discharge at the end of the year's period 135. I mean to say that at the time these figures were compiled 135 had left the hospital, and the average stay was 15 weeks, which is less than four months. A similar group of cases without being treated intensively would have an average hospital stay of seven months That has cut three months off for that particular group. This was a small ward. There are more such cases than we can handle and we want larger facilities for that type, and more personnel and equipment for that purpose. The women's ward had a similar record."

Dr. Oliver then explained some of the activities of the hospital. He takes the patients that are admitted and weeds out the different variety of cases, he taking only for his own observation the mental cases, in order to make up a chart indicating the activities of the hospital. This chart was started in August of 1947 and was to be kept over a period of years in order to observe the trends. The trend is gradually upward in admissions and also upward in leaves of absence.

When a patient is ready to go home he is given a period of home adjustment, and if for any reason the home adjustment period is not satisfactory, the patient may return without the necessity of going through a court commitment again. A vast majority remain at home and are discharged after a certain period on leave of absence.

In June of 1950 there were 99 admissions of mental cases and 53 leaves of absence, and a total of 118 leaves plus discharges The admission rate at the present time is approximately 150 per month on the average, which includes all types of cases. If all patients could be treated intensively, the hospital stay would only be about three to four months. Another important factor is that about one-fourth of the patients are senile, presenting chiefly medical problems, not psychiatric. They require a different type of treatment altogether. They present two problems at once.

Mr. Nichols, representing the Department of Mental Hygiene, stated that Dr. Tallman, the Director of the Department, is deeply concerned over this senile problem, and stated that the department takes care of them because the county from which they are committed cannot take care of them. The Governor, the Department of Social Welfare, and the Department of Public Health are also greatly interested in these cases.

They are a growing and mounting problem and will be given careful consideration at the state level. It has been discussed with the supervisor's association. Because of this serious existing condition the Governor is calling a special conference on September 14th to discuss ways and means of taking care of this senile problem, and the Governor's message presented at the conference together with a preliminary report of the Governor's Conference on Care and Treatment of Senile Patients will be found further on in the report.

Mr. Nichols also stated that many of these cases were pensioners, and as they did not receive their pensions while confined in the institution they were unable to pay for their care while in the hospital. However, under H. R. 6000 recently signed by the President, the provisions include the payment of pensions to these individuals, out of which they will be able to pay the $60 per month charged for their care while confined.

Mr. Nichols also stated that it was not so much the fact that seniles were a load on the state hospitals that the department was concerned with, but the state hospitals are set up for active treatment and these people do not need active treatment. One of the things that is annoying is that when an older person has been sent to an insane hospital, the whole family feels it is in disgrace. Why should they be, when he is only old and physically handicapped? Other arrangements should be made for these persons so that they would not have to be placed in a mental institution such as many counties have, for instance, Rancho Los Amigos in Los Angeles which is not large enough to take care of the number of people who desire admission; and the Laguna Honda Home in San Francisco County which cannot meet the need either.

Dr. Oliver commented on research as follows: "Research requires three things—people to do it, time and money. We have cooperated in several research projects here. Recently there was a joint effort by the University of California, the Langley Porter Clinic and ourselves on the subject of arteriosclerosis. We have a brand new lead on that which has not been published yet. But we devoted time to this by robbing it from something else. We have 19 doctors for 4,000 patients, and that includes Dr. Miller and myself—also Dr. Rood of our administrative staff. When you divide that, you can see the demands put upon the professional staff in all categories. There was another project—a U. C. student who is a Ph.D. doing a research problem on physical therapy for six months. It took a good deal of time to assist her.

"T. B. represents another problem. There are lots of new drugs and treatments but they are expensive to start. Some of these drugs cost us $10 to $12 a dram. So you can see it is expensive and we cannot dip into our appropriation to buy these new drugs so we have to wait until they come down in price before we can start to use them. I would like to see a fund set aside for the use of some of these things so we would not have to be the last ones to use them. Strepto mycin is very important to the treatment of T. B. right now."

Dr. Miller then asked Mr. Bradley, the business manager, to explain to the committee the building needs. He stated as follows: "At the present time, as you probably know, our plant is being almost entirely rebuilt. The main building is going down which held 1200 patients. We are trying to find out our total need. Two buildings have just been completed which were built for a particular kind of patient—the locked ward patient. Half of them were originally planned for bed cases and are not now working out because we have improved treatments and facilities, and they are now ambulatory patients. We do not have enough capacity for parole patients—not the proper type of facility. We are going to ask for an additional building to take care of that type of patient. We are contemplating at one time a capacity of 7,000 which all agree is entirely too large for a mental hospital; but, nevertheless because there was a capacity problem, it was decided Napa would be that large. But Dr. Tallman is now holding it down. We have approximately a 4,000 capacity here now and it may only go up to 6,000. Our boiler plant will carry that larger institution and we are just now finishing the new kitchen which we hope to move into in two weeks. It will handle up to 8,000 if necessary. That was built with the idea we would have a capacity of 7,000 and we would be able to carry 7,500 patients and the increased personnel to serve them. We have been working out of an old kitchen area built to take care of 3,000 patients. We have been ashamed of it but couldn't do anything about it.

"We have also been asking for an incinerator and we finally have the money for it. We received it from the Legislature two years ago. The Public Works Department designed one and is just ready to start it. We have been burning a certain amount of wet garbage which we couldn't feed to the hogs; and we have had an open fire for the burning of dry garbage. We are very grateful that we will have an incinerator to take care of that."

Dr. Miller: "When I came here the patients were only allowed one bath a week and one change of underclothing. We decided it would be well if they could chance twice a week and bathe every night if possible. From that day to this the laundry has been inadequate. Some patients slept all day long and slept in the night in the same underwear. We are trying to get night clothes so they can change their clothes twice a week. The laundry has been a bottleneck but we have plans to expand it. We have to graduate from what we did for years when they took one bath a week; and when you try to step up the care, you run out of facilities."

Mr. Bradley: "We do not do the laundry here which we could do and should be doing. We have never caught up with our linen needs, but are getting caught up now. We do have some money for a laundry now and hope to get started on that. That is another reason why we want to get final determination of our capacity here. It is foolish to build a laundry beyond our needs. I was also interested in this old age discussion for the same reason. We were contemplating the enlargement of the unit to take care of that type of patient also. They merely need physical care. At the present time we have a small unit which we know as the Coombs Ranch. There is a nice quiet little group up there taking care of themselves. We were planning to expand that if it became a regular state responsibility."

Dr. Miller: "I have never known any institution to overbuild yet. We never have the facilities we need, and have never caught up on our building. From experience in New York, the better and bigger you build them, the more they will send to you. Not so many years ago they sent patients to us as a last resort. If treatable, they didn't want to send them here. Now it is economically sound to send them here, get them cured and out."

Senator Coombs stated: "There is one value of Napa which neither the people nor the Members of the Legislature realize. They confuse our climate with the valleys and think it is hot here. This is a beautiful cool summer climate—a mild weather climate."

Dr. Miller: "Yes, I have worked in two institutions and would pick this one out as having the best climate."

Dr. Miller continued: "We might just briefly cover the needs of the hospital. The hospital is working on building the patient's food up to standards of employees. Some states now have the same kind of food. We do not but are working on it.

"Another big problem is overcrowding. We have 4 percent over and Agnew has 40 percent overcrowding. It cuts down on the treatment angle. At one time we had beds up and down corridors to rooms, and everyplace else. We have been told we will have to enlarge other hospitals. We have to add 16 new beds in each new building. (In this respect, the State makes the laws but also breaks them.) We are also going to put in a swimming pool at this time, as that is a good therapeutic agent. Palo Alto has one, I know. Back in Connecticut they have a nice pool. It gives patients an opportuntiy to wear off a lot of energy.

"We need money for research.

"We have a new auditorium coming up. That means we can put on a picture show for 1,000 at a time. Many recreations are curtailed in winter months for lack of proper auditorium space.

"There is one thing I do want to mention. We do have about 100 women coming here every week from Marin County, Napa, Solano and Contra Costa who give us lots of help in occupational therapy, taking the patients for rides, downtown shopping, etc. Then too, the service groups sometimes take our patients to ball games, etc. They recently took a group to Oakland.

"You will probably read in papers about escapes from the childrens' unit. They are not psychopathic delinquents. They are children who need help. We tell them that this is not a penal institution. We want to make them feel they are wanted. They are practically in open cottages now.

"They go to school and have other activities. A certain number run away at times but we have found that ordinarily that is good therapy. If a child runs away and finds he is not gaining anything, he will come back and be benefited They find ours is a very liberal program. We want the children to know we want to help them. We had one girl here who completed her school work in the institution and who was given the same examination as the Napa children receive, and she was graded 95 percent. We do not have anything happening in our childrens' unit which does not happen in the public schools in any community. We want to develop a 150 bed unit. We have a long waiting list and would like to accommodate all of them. We are satisfied in our own minds that we are accomplishing something and should make it available to more. We have about 100 children in the hospital and about 60 are in the children's unit. We sometimes take some of the older boys and put them in an older ward.

The judge from Ukiah called us about a 16-year old boy he wanted to do something for and when we told him we would have to put him in an adult unit, he said he didn't want him with the insane patients He came down and looked over our therapy wards and talked with the probation officer, and after that he had no further objection to sending the boy down. I know you do not have much time today but I want to give you an invitation to return at any time and look over what we have here."

Mr. Nichols: "There is another point. In planning for the staff of the new juvenile unit—that is something the Legislature will be asked for—the actual money to build this unit. I know you plan to build it on separated property and that will certainly come up in your budget request—how does that go into your over-all plan for psycho delinquents? How does it work into the plan where you have your other mentally ill patients? How does it fit in?"

Dr. Oliver: "It would be part of the same administrative set-up. These children require personnel of higher rating—social service workers, recreation and occupational therapists, good doctors of psychiatry, psychologists—in general, more specialized personnel rendering a constructive service in saving them from becoming criminals and remaining in state hospitals or jails. These cases are so often mild behavior problems and while the court feels there is something wrong with them, they do not have the facilities in the counties to do an expert job So they are sent here for a brief period of observation and diagnosis and then a recommendation is sent back to the court. Often they do remain here for more than 90 days so the treatment can be continued, and inside of a short time they are pretty well cured. They go back to the juvenile court and the court sends them back home. If we do not feel the therapy here is sufficient, we send them back to the juvenile court and the judge decides what should be done with each individual case, depending on the seriousness of the offense. If mild, they take care of it locally, and if serious, they send them to the Youth Authority. We make a recommendation to the judge and he sometimes recommends commitment to Sonoma. We try to keep away from all feeble minded cases because they belong in Sonoma or Pacific Colony. We can't mix them with this group. We try to limit the cases to behavior problems."

Dr. Miller: "With respect to this children's unit, we made quite a study of the problem and visited five different units throughout the United States Our conclusion is that they are better off in a cottage type residence for about 15 patients, rather than in dormitories. We try to get away from the institutional atmosphere."

Tour

The committee made an inspection of the old and new kitchens. The old kitchen was the original kitchen built for the hospital in about 1875, with stone floors, boiling pots and very little baking facility. Here the outmoded facilities were preparing food for 5,000 people three times a day. As in the other old kitchens visited by the committee, the diet consisted principally of boiled foods, most unappetizing. The food is carried in large cans in trucks to the various buildings.

The old bakery and butcher shop were also visited to give the committee an idea of the comparison between the old facilities and the new kitchen, bakery, butcher shop, etc., which were to be in use in about two weeks.

The new kitchen, bakery, butcher shop, etc., represents the very latest in equipment of all kinds—tremendous mixers, revolving ovens, walk-in refrigeration, deep freeze lockers, huge steamers for vegetables, slicing and cutting machines, ice cream makers, doughnut machines, and many other modern innovations. The cafeterias were also modern works of art for both employees and patients. (Napa has 900 employees.) The buildings all face west. Nine hundred fifty thousand dollars was the cost for the new kitchen, dining rooms, bakery, butcher shop, etc.

The committee then visited the ward for the acutely disturbed women. Here the surroundings have been made more cheerful recently by the use of colorful chairs, tables, draperies, etc., replacing the drab wards of the past with the long wooden benches, etc. The committee heard disturbed patients, saw patients who had received shock treatments lying in a darkened room in wet sedative packs which produce a relaxing, quieting effect. They were taken into a room where the patients are given quieting baths for an hour or two in 100-degree temperatures.

The doctors pointed out one or two cases where the patients had had prefrontal lobotomy operations, an operation on the brain which reduces emotional pressure. It is used as a last resort for their very worst type of case. Patients must be in the hospital for five years before such an operation is performed, and not until every known treatment has been given is the operation made. Results are very encouraging and they find they can send the patients home in a relatively short time. The patients revert to childhood and have to be re-educated, but they learn quickly.

Dr. Miller pointed out that in this ward, as in all of the new wards, the arrangement is that the doctor has offices right in the ward rather than in the central administration building. That means that he spends 90 percent of his time right in the ward with the patients.

The next stop was one of the new wards being used as a convalescent ward and a ward for the patients who were soon to be discharged. These wards were painted in soft blending pastel colors and furnished with colorful chrome furniture. The beds were all comfortable and covered with bright colored spreads, and there was a bedside table and locker for each patient. The aim now is to make the wards (especially the convalescent and parole wards) approximate as nearly as possible normal living, and Dr. Miller said no finer facilities would be found anywhere in the United States. All of the mistakes of other institutions have been corrected in these new wards. The nurse's desk is arranged so that she has access to and can see into four wards at once. Dr. Miller said the doctors responsible for certain buildings would have an office in the center of the group. Large photo murals adorned the walls of the new wards but the Division of Architecture had decided that there would be no more for reasons of their own. The staff and the committee felt that the murals were most appropriate for the adornment of the day rooms in these new buildings.

Each doctor in these new units is responsible for 436 patients. Many patients were sitting outside who previously were bed patients, many were in wheel chairs, but all of them were vastly improved in health since they had been moved into the cheerful new wards.

The dining rooms for these wards were also very attractive. The state dietician sets up the standards for their meals, but when the new kitchen is finished, they plan to give the patients a choice of their main dish—something they have never had before. Each ward has employes' quarters also where they have lockers and where they can shower and change their clothes. There is also a barber shop in each group of buildings and a dentist, (one dentist to every 1,000 patients) who pulls teeth, makes dentures, etc. There is a visiting room right off each ward and a room for occupational therapy. Each ward also has a diet kitchen for special diets, a treatment room, a clothes room, etc.

Dr. Miller said a hospital the size of Napa should have 52 doctors and 80 therapists.

The canteen was visited next where the patients may buy soft drinks, magazines, candy, cigarettes, etc. This is a non-profit enterprise, with all of the profits going to the patient's benefit fund. All patients with ground privileges are allowed to go to the canteen if they have money to spend. There are three paid employees in the canteen and seven patients.

The Vanity Shop was next on the itinerary. Here the operators were very patient. They only had five operators and would like to have 12. They average 43 patients a day, giving them finger waves, shampoos, manicures, permanents, etc. An employee attendant is in charge, who explained the therapeutic value of the beauty treatments on the patient. Some patients are afraid to have permanents, etc., and in this case they are usually allowed to sit in the beauty shop for a day or two until they are convinced there is nothing to be afraid of and that a treatment will improve their appearance. The morale building value of this particular therapy cannot be overestimated. In the larger wards a patient gets a beauty treatment every third or fourth week; in the smaller wards, every other week, and patients are worked on for special occasions.

The next stop was the Children's Cottage. The committee was taken into a large room which was a combination recreation, conference and sitting room. The building is in two sections with the smaller girls on one side—as young as 5 years old; and the larger girls have an average age of 15. All are of normal intelligence or better. They primarily represent behavior problems—maybe children where the juvenile court judge needs assistance—or they are children showing early signs of mental illness. There are three teachers for this cottage and the girls go to school all the year round. They are taken swimming and they play games and baseball.

While the committee was there, there were several Gray Ladies working with the girls. Their school is a special type of school, giving remedial reading for those who are emotionally disturbed, occupational therapy, various therapeutic activities; and the psychologist sees certain cases several times a week. They are taught group activities like cooking, and the superintendent of nurses is holding a class in home making. One of the teachers is a former athlete and organizes athletic teams, and between them they manage to keep the girls pretty busy.

Dr. Oliver stated: "Every child is thoroughly worked up when he comes in. A complete examination and history, lab work, psychiatric examination, psychological tests (I.Q.), a complete review of former records. (Some have had studies made in other places). Then we have staff conferences and discuss each case, discuss their physical defects, and determine upon a type of treatment—whether individual or in a group. After two months we hold another conference as to results—getting staff opinions as to the outcome, and whether further treatment is recommended, and if so, should it be here or where. Whether the child needs a foster home is also considered, or whether it should go to a Youth Authority institution, etc. Some are actually psychiatric and they are treated much as we treat similar adult patients. In many ways they are more complicated than adult patients. There is not as much knowledge about child psychiatry. Juvenile court cases are sent on a 90-day basis, but we can keep them for another 90 days if we wish. On some we extend the time to two or three times if we are definitely getting results. We prefer to keep them on until the job is finished.

"The voluntary cases have no particular time limit set on them, and we keep them indefinitely unless the parents insist on taking them out. Sometimes the parents are harder to handle than the children. However, the voluntary admissions are increasing with parents bringing their children in. That is true also of the adults asking to come in.

"Then we have this new public health commitment law for old people which obviates the court procedure. The public health officer examines and determines if the person needs care in an institution, and if he does, and if no one objects, we accept him. If the patient himself says he doesn't want to be here, they won't take him or keep him, so no one can ever say a person was kept here against his will. But the vast majority of adults come to us under court commitment."

The girls in the cottage also have a nice recreation yard, and a cheerful dining room. There are 22 girls in cottage now, with a capacity of 26. The problem girls live in dormitories and the others have rooms.

The recommendations of the committee pertaining to the Napa State Hospital are as follows:

ADDRESS OF GOVERNOR EARL WARREN

PRESENTED AT THE

CONFERENCE ON THE CARE AND TREATMENT OF SENILE PATIENTS

Sacramento, California, September 14, 1950

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: Today I welcome you to Sacramento and to this important conference on the care and treatment of the senile aged. Of all our State's resources none is so valuable as our people, old and young alike. And as with other resources, much of their potentiality has yet to be developed. There is no group of whom this is more true than our older citizens.

It is our responsibility to see that the aged have the opportunity to lead dignified, productive, and independent lives. We must agree that we are short of this goal.

The facts reveal that older people constitute the most rapidly expanding age group in our population. During July, 1950 it was estimated that there were nearly 900,000 persons 65 years of age or older in California. A large percentage are economically independent and are leaders in our social and business world; but regrettably, nearly half of them are dependent upon public assistance or upon relatives or friends for support.

The problems of older people in our society can be understood clearly only in the light of changes in our ways of living and the increase in our life expectancy. Whereas in 1900 life expectancy was 47 years, by 1950 twenty years had been added.

During this time, other basic changes were taking place. Families formerly living in an environment which was predominantly rural and self-sufficient moved to the cities. At the same time, the size of families decreased, their living quarters contracted, and it became more difficult for them to house and maintain their older members. Our society affords little means of support for retired wage earners, and we have yet to provide adequate social, recreational, and service outlets for our middle-aged and the elderly. Thus, more and more old people are sentenced to inactivity and marginal living.

Retirement from work and the resultant curtailment of income can impose major adjustment problems in their life program. Too, they may suffer the loss of their life partner or the onset of chronic illness, and the decline of their physical and mental functions may reduce their activity, while society's attitude tends to consign them to comparative isolation. Inevitably, the effort to make the adjustment profoundly effects their physical and mental well-being.

Not unlike the younger person, the older person whose need for affection is not satisfied often becomes lonely and depressed; and lack of status may result in feelings of worthlessness. Thus unsatisfied, psychological need may cause a multitude of personality difficulties and physical complaints; and if the need for bodily comfort is not satisfied, the reaction is often pain and irritability. These are facts that any facilities or programs devised to provide more adequate care for the senile must take into account.

There is an immediate and practical issue with which we are confronted today and which justice demands we settle to the best of our ability. I refer specifically to the nonpsychotic senile patient who finds himself routed from home to general hospital, to psychopathic ward, and finally to a mental institution because no other facilities are available. Such surroundings are at best strange and confusing. Even younger, more flexible people would find such experience frightening and disturbing. We know senile patients certainly need our care and protection. But the question is, is a mental hospital the place for them?

We have only a few hours in which to consider this matter and since the need for action is imperative, I believe that our conference should limit its deliberations to:

a. An analysis of this problem and a review of existing facilities for meeting it.

b. A discussion of facilities which can be devised to provide needed services and how these facilities can be financed.

c. Recommendations for administrative, legislative, and community action.

I recognize that many of your recommendations will hinge upon the adequacy and source of funds. In this connection, certain provisions of H. R. 6000 which has recently become federal law may ultimately prove of help. As you know, provision is made in this law for the Federal Government to share in the cost of payments to recipients of old age security, aid to the blind, and aid to the permanently and totally disabled living in public medical institutions other than those for mental disease or tuberculosis.

The act further provides that to qualify for such payments to individuals in public institutions, there must be created a state authority to establish and maintain standards for such institutions. Plans are now under way to make the proper provisions for California, and to that end I have included this matter in my special call to the Legislature. The State wishes to assume its full share of responsibility and is willing to work cooperatively with local jurisdictions in financing such services.

A study by the State Department of Mental Hygiene of the 220 patients over the age of 60 admitted to our state mental hospitals during June 1950, shows that more than one-third were nonpsychotic and should have been cared for elsewhere than in a mental hospital. The age of 60 was selected since senility may begin at about this period in life. These patients had one or more of the symptoms typical of senility—forgetfulness, confusion, restlessness at night, irritability, and untidiness. Many of them had no symptoms except forgetfulness and confusion and were quiet and easily manageable. In addition to the nonpsychotic, 19.5 percent of the group were considered borderline, with major symptoms such as delusional thinking.

Projecting from the survey, we can say that of the 2,454 patients over 60 admitted to state hospitals during the year ending June 30, 1950, about 1,350 or 55 percent might more properly have been cared for in their own communities, had there been adequate facilities.

Some additional statistics concerning older patients in California state hospitals further accentuate the problem. The rate of first admissions of persons over the age of 60 increased from 106.5 per 100,000 in 1930 to an estimated 147.1 per 100,000 of the aged population in 1950. Patients aged 60 or over constituted 18.2 percent of all first admissions to state hospitals in the year ending June 30, 1940, as compared to 28.9 percent in the year ending June 30, 1949. This percentage dropped in 1950 as the result of a request by the Director of Mental Hygiene to the courts that nonpsychotic senile patients be cared for in local facilities if possible. However, local facilities are overflowing and the admission rate of the patients to state hospitals is rising again.

Many aged patients are suffering from acute or chronic physical illnesses at the time of their admission to state hospitals. It is not unusual for them to die en route to the hospital or shortly after admission. Their mental difficulties frequently seem incidental to their terminal illness. Thus about every sixth patient over the age of 60 admitted to our mental hospitals in the year ending June 30, 1949, died within 45 days after admission, and one of three died within a year.

Older persons form a larger proportion of hospital population than of admissions. In fact, about one-third of all patients in California's mental hospitals are aged 60 or over.

On the other hand we cannot regard all aged patients as incurable. Of the patients aged 60 or over who were admitted to state hospitals in the year ending June 30, 1949, about one in six were back in the community on June 30, 1950, restored to a fairly satisfactory life with their family and friends.

Senile patients are found in our county as well as our state hospitals. A survey by the State Department of Public Health revealed that over 7,000 patients, or 35.5 percent of all patients in the county hospitals of the State are senile.

These facts call for renewed consideration of rehabilitation programs and restorative services for the aged, and should include in addition to plans for general and special hospitals a discussion of various specialized institutions, convalescent nursing homes, and the possibility of home care. We realize that more definitive surveys are needed of the many aged persons suffering the various infirmities due to old age. We must know more of their social and economic circumstances and the needs for specialized types of services and care.

We realize also that the most effective ways to assist the aged are those undertaken before they grow old. Adequate food, housing, and medical care are necessary for everyone's security, but it is equally important that a wholesome, flexible way of life be established in earlier years to prepare for the later ones.

So we are faced with a long-term task; first, to make possible a way of life for all people so that they can remain physically and psychologically healthy as they grow old; and secondly, to help families learn how to live with their older members and handle the problems of aging.

But today at this conference we are primarily faced with the necessity to plan more adequate care for those who are now senile and need our help. Our plans should take into account their physical needs for shelter, food, comfort, and protection from harm, as well as their emotional needs for recreation, companionship, and continued ties with families and friends. We must remember that these senior citizens, each of whom has made a contribution to life, richly deserve to have every consideration during their declining years.

I know that in the hours ahead your deliberations will be most fruitful. I assure you that your recommendations will receive the earnest consideration of both myself and our state departments.

PRELIMINARY REPORT OF THE GOVERNOR'S CONFERENCE ON CARE AND TREATMENT OF SENILE PATIENTS

This conference, to which 116 people were invited, was held in the Senate Chambers of the State Capitol in Sacramento, on September 14, 1950. The conference was called for the purpose of planning more adequate care for senile persons in California.

Governor Warren opened the meeting. He welcomed the members of the conference; presented a general statement of the problem and its implications; and asked that the conference devote itself to defining the problem, determining what facilities can be devised to solve it and how these facilities can be financed, and preparing and voting upon recommendations for action.

Dr. Frank F. Tallman, Director of the Department of Mental Hygiene, then called upon representatives of four agencies especially concerned with providing care for these patients, to report on the problem as they saw it.

Dr. Lester Breslow of the State Department of Public Health reported that over a third of all patients cared for in California's county hospitals, or about 7,000 patients, are senile. Also, about 10 percent of the patients in private nursing homes are senile.

Mr. Louis Kuplan of the State Department of Social Welfare reported that in July, 1950, there were in California nearly 900,000 people aged 65 or over, 30 percent of whom received old age security. Nearly half of the aged population of the State are dependent upon public assistance or upon relatives or friends for support. By 1960 there will probably be about a million and a half people aged 65 or over in California. Since a large proportion of old people, and hence of senile patients, are financially dependent, their care will be an increasing problem for government in years to come.

Mr. Kuplan also briefly summarized provisions of H. R. 6000, which recently became federal law. H. R. 6000 establishes a new class of persons eligible for benefits—permanently and totally disabled, and some senile patients may be eligible for this aid. H. R. 6000 also provides that the Federal Government will participate in payment of old age security, aid to the blind, and aid to the totally and permanently disabled while the recipient is receiving medical care in a public medical institution, unless he has been given the diagnosis of mental illness or tuberculosis. All the implications of this law are not yet clear, but it will have a vital effect upon our planning for senile patients.

Mrs Genevieve Dodge of the Los Angeles County Mental Health Department reported on the county program for senile patients, which is the largest in the State. The senile patients who are brought to the Los Angeles Psychopathic Court are usually far beyond the point of suitability for care in their own homes, and their families have been struggling with the problem for years before seeking help. These patients need not psychiatric care but good food, adequate supervision, and freedom from anxiety There are now over 3,500 senile patients cared for in Los Angeles County under the supervision of the Mental Health Department. The greatest present need is hospital facilities for senile patients who are physically ill. However, the county will need help from the State for any increase of services.

Dr Lawrence Kolb of the Department of Mental Hygiene said that one of the most striking and depressing changes in our cultural pattern during recent years has been the failure to provide care at home for the aged and the tendency in all states to send more aged people to mental hospitals, although all psychiatrists agree that such hospitalization is unsound. Although these patients do not belong in mental hospitals, many improve there because they receive good food and care. More than 15 percent of the patients aged 60 or over who were admitted to the California state hospitals in the year ending June 30, 1949, had been discharged by June 30, 1950. On the other hand, many aged patients admitted to state hospitals die within a few days, and it is evident that these patients were not psychotic but suffering from a terminal illness accompanied by mental symptoms.

A recent survey of patients aged 60 or over who were admitted to state hospitals in June, 1950, indicated that about 55 percent of these patients probably could have been cared for more appropriately elsewhere if adequate facilities existed. More than half of the aged patients now resident in our state hospitals have the diagnosis senile dementia or cerebral arteriosclerosis, and more than half of the patients with these diagnoses could probably be cared for better elsewhere.

As a preliminary to group discussion, Dr. Tallman defined the group of patients properly called senile: Aged persons who have marked loss of memory, are childish, mildly irritable, restless at night, careless in toilet habits, bedridden by the infirmities of old age, and who become troublesome nursing problems because of soiling or difficulty in feeding. Not included are old persons who become markedly delirious or depressed, agitated, destructive, or paranoid and threatening, as these are proper patients for admission to state hospitals.

Dr. Tallman emphasized that the group was to direct itself to consideration of providing more adequate facilities for senile patients, not to preventive measures and gerontology, although these must form part of any complete program for this group. Dr. Tallman then asked that members of the conference present additional data on the problem as they knew it.

A conference member presented additional material on the problem in Los Angeles County. The psychiatric ward at the county hospital, which has a rated capacity of 100 beds, has been overcrowded for five or six years, at times housing 190 patients. A new psychiatric hospital with a rated capacity of 268 beds will be opened in 1951. It is hoped that part of the space can be used for treatment of acute psychiatric illnesses. It is feared that, instead, these facilities will soon be overcrowded because of a heavy influx of senile patients. The county has recently increased its rate of payment for care of patients in private sanitariums, and plans expansion of Rancho Los Amigos, the county facility for care of senile patients However, the county taxpayers cannot continue to assume full responsibility for this extensive and still growing program.

The chairman of the health and hospital committee of the county supervisors' association reported that all of the counties are acutely aware of this problem. All county facilities are overcrowded, especially those for the senile. Only 30 percent of county hospital beds are available for senile patients, who constitute 36 percent of county hospital patients. County psychopathic wards are sometimes crowded 100 percent beyond capacity.

Many counties now spend 30 cents of the tax dollar for welfare costs. In all but eleven counties, tax rates for 1950-51 have increased by between one and eighty-eight cents. This is a greater average increase than in any previous year, and to a great extent it is due to the county cost of old age security. House Resolution 6000 may help but the counties will also need assistance from the State in capital expenditures for increased facilities and in per-day-patient subsidies.

During the discussion which followed, members of the group brought out general considerations in planning for the aged which reached beyond the assigned task of this conference. It was agreed that adequate planning for senile patients involves community and individual education about the aging process, guidance, consultation services, group work programs, and provision of recreational and vocational resources. Opportunities for group living and continuing usefulness can do much to retard the deterioration of the aged.

Governor Warren said he was sure that all of these matters would be discussed during a subsequent state-wide conference to consider the provision of more adequate services for the aged to be held in the spring of 1951. The special problem of institutional care for the senile was singled out for this conference, because of its urgency and the need for prompt action.

Several discussants stressed the importance of encouraging the family to continue their responsibility for aging members, and urged that no action be taken which might make it easier for families to place this burden upon the community.

Governor Warren felt it was the general will of conference members that our planning for senile patients should foster independence and family unity and keep as many patients as possible out of institutions.

It was pointed out that, rather than trying to "dump" their aged relatives on the community, many families continue to keep senile patients at home at a great emotional cost, especially to small children. If families are to keep their older members at home, they need expert help and guidance from professional people—doctors, psychiatrists, nurses, and social workers—in how to handle problems of the aged without damage to family life. Also, old people themselves would benefit greatly from guidance services.

The group recognized that, allowing for the maximum degree of family responsibility, government still must protect and care for the aged who are alone or whose families cannot care for them. Government must have facilities for these patients, and if the financial burden becomes too heavy for the local community, state resources should be used. Government also is responsible for protecting patients, whose families can pay for care in boarding homes or private institutions, by setting standards for housing and care.

The group agreed that mental hospitals are not the proper facilities for care of these patients. If circumstances permit, the old person is usually happiest in his own home. If placement outside the home is necessary, the choice of facility depends upon the patient's means and his condition.

Licensed boarding homes for the aged offer a comfortable and protected living situation for senile patients with mild symptoms. About 6,000 old people, many of them mildly senile, are now cared for in such homes, and the program might be expanded considerably by active recruitment of homes and careful selection of patients for placement. Private nursing homes, rest homes, and convalescent homes are also suitable for these patients.

Many senile patients are physically ill and need the facilities of a private or public general hospital.

Another large group of senile patients need close supervision so that they will have physical care, protection from the possible dangers of forgetfulness and confusion, and help in caring for their own personal needs. These patients need the kind of care which can be provided by a private nursing home, a private institution licensed for care of the mentally ill, or infirmary facilities attached to a county hospital.

One discussant suggested that we need to work out a flexible program for these patients, which will make it possible to provide each patient with the kind of care he needs promptly and without the necessity to take him through a court procedure and declare him mentally ill as the only way to provide public funds for his care. The removal of such cases from the jurisdiction of the courts would save money and protect the patient and his family from an experience which is often painful and frightening Representatives of private sanitariums indicated that complicated licensing regulations and rigid application of local zoning ordinances were limiting the possibility of expanding their facilities to offer additional service to these patients.

A number of members of the group felt that even maximum expansion of private facilities would not meet the entire need, since this maximum is limited and the cost of care in these facilities is high. Hence, there is urgent need for expansion of public facilities for institutional care of senile patients.

There was general agreement that elaborate medical institutions are not needed and that cottage-type facilities attached to county hospitals would be less expansive and more home-like and cheerful. Reduction to the minimum of state regulations for construction of such facilities would make it possible for small counties with limited funds to provide more adequately for these senile patients.

General hospitals, both public and private, should be encouraged to establish geriatric and infirmary units so that the senile patient can be given appropriate care and moved within the hospital when his condition requires it.

At this point, the group went on to consideration of how more adequate public institutional facilities for senile patients may be financed, and Dr. Tallman called upon Mr. Charles I. Schottland, Director, Department of Social Welfare, who had just returned from a meeting in Washington on HR 6000, to explain the provisions of this legislation further. He stated that, in order to be eligible for federal funds while cared for in a public medical institution, the aged, blind, or disabled person must be receiving medical rather than merely custodial care. A person is considered "totally and permanently disabled" if he is unable to perform any kind of work, even ordinary household duties, and if he cannot be cured by any resource now known to medical science. Many senile patients, if not diagnosed as mentally ill, will be eligible for aid under this program.

Use of Hill-Burton funds for construction of hospital facilities for these patients was discussed. It was pointed out that funds cannot be granted for construction of purely custodial or infirmary units, but can be granted for acute units or geriatric units with a definite program of medical treatment.

The group agreed that, in order to provide more adequate care and treatment facilities for senile patients, the counties will need financial help from the State in both construction costs and operating expenses.

The provisions of the Hill-Burton Act and of HR 6000, if these are implemented by the State Legislature, will assist the counties. However, it appears that additional aid from the State will be needed.

In the light of this discussion, four resolutions were framed, presented to the conference, discussed, and adopted unanimously. Governor Warren then thanked the conference members for their contributions and closed the meeting.

The four resolutions follow:

1. We recognize the importance of increasing our cultural understanding of and respect for the process of aging and all that it entails, and we recognize that the ideal environment for taking care of the problems of the aged is the closest attainable to the home environment. To the greatest possible extent, these principles should be applied in meeting the problems of the senile through the development of educational, religious, public welfare, public health, voluntary, and other related services. Beyond this, we recognize that local and individual circumstances may make adequate home care impractical and that the need for developing adequate institutional facilities is acute, both to meet the needs of the senile themselves and to relieve the present burden which these patients place upon the facilities of the mental hospitals and the general hospitals in the State.

(Committee Chairman: E. S. Rogers, M.D.)

2. We resolve that:

a. It is clearly recognized that private family resources and the facilities of private institutions which meet publicly established minimum standards should be utilized to the maximum in the care of senile patients.

b. It is also clearly recognized that additional and more appropriate public facilities are needed to care adequately for these patients.

c. These public facilities should be constructed and operated by the counties and the State under state-established standards.

d. The cost of constructing and operating these public facilities must be shared by the State and the counties on an equitable basis.

(Committee Chairman: Right Reverend Monsignor Thomas J. O'Dwyer.)

3. Since the elderly person presents special treatment problems in a general hospital, we recommend that:

a. All general hospitals in sizable communities establish geriatric units in order that special attention may be given to the treatment of acute illness in elderly patients

b. For the construction of such geriatric units, general hospitals should use federal funds now available on a matching basis.

c. Each county of sufficient size should establish an infirmary unit for the care of the chronically ill, located within easy travel distance by ambulance from a general hospital.

d. State funds should be made available to supplement the cost of the care of acute and chronic patients in the geriatric and infirmary units of general hospitals.

(Committee Chairman: A. E. Bennett, M.D.)

4. This conference strongly urges the State Legislature to enact all necessary legislation to enable the State of California to take full advantage of recently enacted federal legislation (H. R 6000) in the provision of adequate aid and care for senile persons.

(Committee Chairman: Dr. Milton Chernin.)

CHRONIC DISEASES

Magnitude of the Chronic Disease Problem [1]

Chronic diseases accounted for the deaths of 66,518 persons in California during 1947—more than two-thirds of the total number of persons who died in the State that year. Forty percent (26,108) of the chronic disease deaths occurred among persons under 65 years of age. Cardiovascular diseases and cancer were the leading causes of death.

The number of persons who die each year from the chronic diseases is only a fraction of the total number of persons who suffer from chronic illness. The best available data suggest that in 1947 California had approximately 104,000 persons disabled the entire year by chronic illness and approximately 351,000 disabled for periods ranging from one week to one year. Over two-thirds of these 455,000 persons were less than 65 years of age.

The estimated number of diagnosed cases of cancer during 1947 in California was 50,000; the number of diagnosed cardiovascular cases was several times as large. During the first year of operation (1947) the California disability insurance state plan, covering less than one-third of the State's population, paid disability benefits amounting to more than $7,000,000 for a total of 380,000 weeks of illness due to certain of the chronic diseases. This expenditure, partial compensation for wage loss, did not include the cost of medical care, hospitalization and allied services required for most extended periods of chronic disability.

The cases included in the above estimates are, of course, those which have been diagnosed. Accurate estimates cannot be made of the number of undiagnosed cases. There are indications, however, that without being aware of it, as many as 100,000 Californians have heart disease and 70,000 have diabetes.

There are relatively few families not affected by a chronic disease at some time. There is hardly any area in the State that is unaware of the effects of these diseases on the welfare load and on the demands for medical, hospital, nursing and related services.

A significant proportion of disability from chronic diseases might be prevented with present medical knowledge. For example, it is estimated that 30 percent of the patients that now die of cancer could have been cured [2] had they received prompt and adequate treatment when the lesion first was discoverable.

SENATE BILL No. 1424

Introduced by Senator Hugh M. Burns

January 29, 1949

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC HEALTH AND SAFETY

An act to add Article 9 to Chapter 2, Part 1, Division 1, of the Health and Safety Code, relating to cancer and other chronic diseases, providing for a chronic disease program and establishing the Advisory Chronic Disease Council.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Article 9, comprising Sections 425 to 425.5, inclusive, is added to Chapter 2, Part 1, Division 1, of the Health and Safety Code, to read:

Article 9. Cancer and Other Chronic Diseases

425. The term "cancer and other chronic diseases" as used in this article refers to all chronic diseases except tuberculosis and mental diseases.

425.1. The Governor shall appoint an Advisory Chronic Disease Council to advise and consult with the State Department of Public Health in carrying out the chronic disease program provided for in this article. The council shall consist of the State Director of Public Health who shall serve as chairman ex officio and ten (10) members appointed by the Governor from a list of nominees selected jointly by the State Director of Public Health, the Chairman of the Senate Standing Committee on Public Health and Safety, the Chairman of the Assembly Standing Committee on Public Health, and the President of the California Medical Association. The ten (10) appointed members shall include representatives of professional groups concerned with chronic diseases and representatives of the general public. Of the members first

[2] That is, these persons would have survived at least five years without evidence of the disease appointed, five shall be designated by the Governor to hold office until October 1, 1950, and five shall be designated by the Governor to hold office until October 1, 1951. Members other than the members first appointed shall hold office for terms of two (2) years, except that any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed, shall be appointed for the remainder of such term. Council members while serving on business of the council, shall receive no compensation, but shall be entitled to receive actual and necessary travel and subsistence expenses. The council shall meet as frequently as the director deems necessary, but not less than once a year. Upon request by five (5) or more members, the director shall call a meeting of the council.

425.2 The department shall conduct a program directed toward the reduction of deaths and disability from cancer and other chronic diseases. In carrying out this program the department shall:

(a) Collect, analyze and make available statistical information on cancer and other chronic disease morbidity and mortality.

(b) Develop methods and sources for obtaining current data on chronic illness without resorting to universal, regular reporting of individual cases of all chronic diseases.

(c) Expand the tumor registry on a voluntary basis to include all hospitals, clinics, and where practicable, private physicians.

(d) Assist and participate in programs of advanced professional education and training in the field of the chronic diseases.

(e) Encourage local communities to make available adequate facilities and services for the chronically ill; and advise and assist local health agencies in the development of locally administered programs for the prevention and control of cancer and other chronic diseases.

(f) Cooperate with research institutions and professional societies in a survey of research institutions in the State to determine what additional physical facilities are needed for conducting expanded research on the chronic diseases.

(g) Cooperate with all official agencies and all voluntary societies and organizations concerned with the chronic disease, in the development, improvement, and coordination of necessary services and facilities for an effective disease program.

425.3. The department may accept financial or other assistance made available to it by any private, state, federal, or other source, to further the provisions of this article.

425.4. This article does not authorize any form of medical or physical examination, treatment, or control of any person.

425.5. In carrying out the purposes of this article, the department shall submit to the Governor and the Legislature, at each regular session of the Legislature, a full report on chronic disease prevalence, control, prevention, facilities, and care in the State.

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE—1949 REGULAR SESSION

ASSEMBLY BILL No. 1500

Introduced by Messrs. Thompson, Connolly, Mrs. Niehouse, Messrs. Huyck, Geddes, and Rumford

January 25, 1949

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC HEALTH

An act to provide an appropriation for the chronic disease program of the State Department of Public Health.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Out of any money in the State Treasury not otherwise appropriated, there is hereby appropriated the sum of _____ dollars ($_____) to the State Department of Public Health to be expended during the 1949-50 Fiscal Year for the chronic disease program of the State Department of Public Health.

LOS ANGELES MEETING, OCTOBER 12TH, 1950

At the committee's meeting held in Los Angeles on October 12th, 1950, there were discussed many phases of the problems regarding chronic diseases. Senate Bill Nos. 1424 and 1425 together with their companion bills, Assembly Bill Nos. 1499 and 1500 had been introduced in the 1949 Session and were referred to the Interim Committee on Public Health for further study, and the following portion of the report relates to these specific bills.

The first speaker to be heard was Dr. Wilton L. Halverson, Director of the State Department of Public Health. Dr. Halverson explained that Senate Bill Nos. 1424 and 1425 and Assembly Bill Nos. 1499 and 1500 were bills based on recommendations made in the 1949 Report of the California Chronic Disease Investigation, said report having been compiled and printed in accordance with House Resolution No. 58 (1949), by Assemblyman John F. Thompson, Chairman of the Assembly Committee on Public Health.

Dr. Halverson went on to explain that in 1947 the California Disability Insurance State Plan paid disability benefits amounting to more than $7,000,000 for a total of 380,000 weeks of illness due to certain of the chronic diseases. This expenditure—which is only partial compensation for wage loss—does not include the cost of medical care, hospitalization, and allied services required for most extended periods of disability.

Dr. Halverson continued:

"If public health means the health of the people, we in the State Department of Public Health cannot ignore the diseases among our people which are the chief causes of death, serious illness, and disability.

"Since 1946, under its general statutory authority in the field of public health, the department has been carrying on a limited program of chronic disease investigation, particularly in the field of cancer. For this work, federal cancer control funds, and more recently, federal heart disease control funds have been exclusively used.

"Senate Bill 1424 would provide a program as recommended in the California Chronic Disease Investigation. To finance the chronic disease control activities proposed in S. B. 1424, the department estimates that an annual appropriation of $100,000 would be needed. A start could be made with a smaller amount.

"It is, of course, pertinent to inquire as to what the department would do about the chronic diseases if the proposed legislation is enacted. Our general answer is that the department would, under the direction of the advisory committee, provided in Sec. 425.1, carry out the functions listed in S. B. 1424 as recommended in the California Chronic Disease Investigation.

"First, as noted under Sec. 425.2—a, b, c, the department would gather, compile and make available current information on cancer and other chronic diseases in the State. For example, the department in cooperation with the Cancer Commission of the California Medical Association and with the Association of California Hosptals, is now gathering detailed information on cancer cases from a limited number of hospitals in the State. In this way, current information is being provided on the survival of cancer patients under present methods of diagnosis and treatment. Physicians are greatly interested in data on the survival of cancer patients with specific reference to the effectiveness of different methods of treatment. Current information on other phases of cancer control and on heart disease and the other chronic diseases is needed and could be obtained if the proposed legislation is enacted.

"Secondly, Section 425.2-d, the department would assist and participate in programs of advanced professional education and training in the field of the chronic diseases. To a significant extent progress against the epidemic and other acute communicable diseases has been associated with the development of advanced professional education and training in the prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of such diseases. Similarly, we need to promote and stimulate comparable advanced professional education and training in the newer methods of prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of the chronic diseases. For example, a method has been discovered for the early detection of cancer of certain organs of the body. This method—known as the "cytological technique"—is especially effective in the early detection of the uterus and of the lung, which together make up about 20 percent of all cancer cases. In cooperation with the University of California Medical School, the department has made available a four months' training course in this new technique for laboratory technicians. Incidentally, there are approximately 15,000 cancer deaths in California each year. It has been estimated that 30 percent of the persons who now die of cancer could be saved if the disease were detected early, and if prompt and adequate treatment were received.

"Thirdly, subsection e, the department would—as it has done in other fields—encourage local communities to make available adequate facilities and services for the chronically ill. It would advise and assist local health agencies in the development of locally administered programs for the prevention and control of cancer and other chronic diseases. To illustrate this function, the department has been working with local health departments, local heart associations, and local medical societies in demonstrating new and relatively inexpensive methods for the early detection of such significant diseases as cancer, heart disease, and diabetes.

"This function—of encouraging, advising, and assisting in the development and maintenance of locally administered services and programs—is consistent with the basic policy of the department, the policy of promoting and giving full recognition to local autonomy in the administration and control of local public health services.

"Finally (subsection g), if the proposed legislation were enacted, the department could intensify its cooperative activities with all official agencies and all voluntary societies and organizations working for the development and improvement of necessary services and facilities for an effective chronic disease program for California. Here again the department is on familiar ground. For many years the department has worked closely with all public and private agencies in the State for the control of the epidemic and other acute communicable diseases. Such cooperative work pays large dividends in ensuring an efficient teamwork approach and in avoiding duplication of activities. A cooperative attack on the chronic diseases—with private and public agencies on the same team—offers real promise of success in reducing deaths and disability due to these causes.

"A fundamental feature of the proposed legislation merits special emphasis. S. B. 1424 is aimed at the prevention of the chronic diseases and the prevention of disability and premature death caused by these diseases. If we apply our present medical and public health knowledge and techniques to the control of the chronic diseases, a significant proportion of disability and premature deaths could be prevented.

"As our population increases and becomes progressively older, we can expect to have an increasing number and proportion of chronically ill persons. Directly and indirectly, our State has already accepted many costly responsibilities relating to the chronically ill in connection with welfare expenditures, medical care and rehabilitation expenditures, and expenditures for the construction of hospital facilities. As time goes on, it is likely that the effects of these diseases will result in increasing demands upon the State Treasury, and of course, increasing costs to the taxpayers.

"Thus, the State of California has a very real and substantial interest in prevention of these conditions and the disability which they cause.

"Briefly, chronic disease concerns the heart and the circulatory system, cancer, diabetes, arthritis, rheumatism, etc. Principally we talk about cancer because most of our work has been done in that field. I would like to say that two-thirds of all the deaths we record are deaths from chronic disease and 40 percent are under the age of 65. They are a major factor in serious illness and disability in the state and county hospitals; and our clinics, institutions and rest homes are filled with patients with chronic diseases. The welfare and medical loads which result from these diseases are really tremendous. As I have said, our principal work has been carried out in the field of cancer control. Since 1946 with federal funds and under our general statutory authority, we have carried on a limited program of chronic disease investigation, particularly in the field of cancer, and approximately $184,000 of federal funds have been used, principally in voluntary tumor registrations in some of the hospitals of the State.

"The reason for this is that we wish to secure information as to what happens to people with cancer under all different kinds of treatment. This kind of research is of course of great interest to the doctors also. The technique for the diagnosis of cancer is very complicated and requires considerable training. If our bill was passed, we could use some of the funds alloted us to send technicians to the University of California from our county laboratories and other places where technicians are used. This should be augmented, and I am sure that with the development of this technique and other techniques it will be possible to diagnose cancer and other diseases earlier in the game. About 30 percent of the people who now die of cancer could be saved if given proper treatment early enough.

"The death rate from tuberculosis has been cut in half during the last eight years. In 1942 the death rate in California was 50 and this year it will be about 25. That is an example of what can be done if the private physician, the voluntary agencies, local communities, and state organizations, such as the Department of Public Health, get together to get a job done.

"The fundamental feature of our program in chronic disease is prevention. You can't prevent all chronic diseases, but you can prevent some; and you can prevent a great deal of disability from chronic disease if you just apply yourself to it and apply the present knowledge which is resulting from our research.

"In conclusion, I would like to say that with our increasing population, this load of chronic disease is becoming more and more unbearable and insupportable. We are doing as much as we can in the field of prevention now but with help in the way of appropriation and facilities there can be a real and substantial saving in the number of deaths and cases of disability resulting from these diseases."

Assemblyman Connolly: Dr. Halverson, on this program, did I understand you to say you have it broken down * * *?

Dr Halverson: Yes, we have a breakdown here but there would probably have to be some changes in it. I would just like to say that this $100,000 is an arbitrary figure. We feel that is just about what it would take to activate the program in a reasonably short time. It could be less or more, but this is the breakdown which we had when we talked about it. And, as I say, it is subject to some change.

Proposed Budget for 1949-50—Chronic Disease Service
California Department of Public Health

Chief of service	$7,728

Equipment	$1,000	$1,000
		$101,446
Salary savings		$1,446

Assemblyman Connolly: Now, just for the purpose of the record, this proposed budget which was set up for 1949-50, this includes $43,000 plus for personnel, $52,000 plus for operating expenses, $4,000 for retirement charges, $1,000 for equipment; making up an approximate total of $100,000. This is presumably close to what it would be for next year?

Dr. Halverson: Yes, that is right; if we decide we want to go that fast, that is just about what it will take Assemblyman Connolly These federal funds—$184,000—that has been given to the department over the past several years?

Dr Halverson: Yes, but not in that same figure. In addition there was $85,000 from the Heart Foundation used. Most of the money was made available to local agencies, and used in Los Angeles and San Diego, mostly for diagnostic work and surveys.

Assemblyman Connolly: Is that $184,000 an annual figure?

Dr. Halverson: That is the approximate amount received the past year and we expect the same amount this year.

Assemblyman Connolly: Then, in addition to that there was the $85,000 from the Heart Disease Fund. Is that on a matching basis?

Dr. Halverson: Not a strictly matching basis, no.

Assemblyman Connolly: In other words, that is appropriated directly to the state department for these investigations?

Dr Halverson: Yes, and reallocated to the communities. A large block of the cancer fund is being used in tumor registries in the larger hospitals, at the present time, to get information on what happens to cancer cases under various treatments.

Assemblyman Connolly: Is it safe to assume that these federal funds will continue?

Dr. Halverson: For this coming year they will be as they are now, but from then on, I don't know.

Assemblyman Connolly: That was allocated out to the local communities in a large part?

Dr. Halverson: Yes, plus, in addition to that, the small staff we have at the present time—its salaries are paid from that fund.

Assemblyman Connolly: Were many of those people included in your budget for last year?

Dr. Halverson: They are not included here except for the fact that we feel that the chief of the service should be on the state pay roll.

Assemblyman Thompson: Has this been brought before the Ways and Means Committee?

Dr. Halverson: We did not appear before them and it was not considered by them. However, it was approved by the Senate Finance Committee.

Assemblyman Connolly: On our side it was held in our committee so it didn't get to Ways and Means.

Assemblyman Thompson: On this $100,000—wasn't it $120,000 last year?

Dr. Halverson: No, it was $100,000.

Assemblyman Thompson: Then the $184,000 does not take care of what you have listed here?

Dr. Halverson: No, we have felt that these features which were decided upon by the advisory committee and by the department should not consume these federal funds allocated for purposes I have mentioned —tumor registry, local surveys, etc.

Assemblyman Connolly: Well the only thought I have, doctor, and perhaps I am only suggesting things to you for your consideration—what amount of this staff might be continued on out of federal funds, thus decreasing the appropriation necessary for the State to dig up; in other words, is it possible to work that out? You have a limited staff now under federal funds. If it would be possible to carry them on, it would be a saving to the State.

Dr. Halverson: It would be possible excepting then the program would have to be curtailed by that amount.

Assemblyman Connolly: In other words, your staff under the federal funds is busy full time now.

Dr. Halverson: That is right.

Assemblyman Rumford: What type of program would you set up for the prevention of heart disease? What type of program would you attempt to administer it?

Dr. Halverson: That is a rather complicated subject and I think an expert should answer it, although I may say that there is one thing * * * in the mass surveys which we have attempted, we have found that when you X-ray a person, principally for detecting tuberculosis, of course, an X-ray of the chest will often at the same time show some cardiac condition not found before. These patients can be placed under care earlier if there is some way of doing it. The main purpose of the X-rays of course is to detect tuberculosis and the money is provided for that purpose. But that is one way in which some results could be obtained in the field of heart disease. I think we have some witnesses here who might answer it more fully. The answers are not as simple in these chronic diseases as they are in communicable diseases, about which we know more at the present time. But we must start somewhere. We must use the information we have at the present time much better than we are now using it.

Assemblyman Connolly then asked what, if any, overlapping there is between such a program as this and the various voluntary organizations doing work in this field, and to which people are asked to contribute funds.

Dr. Halverson: I do not think that there will be any overlapping at all. One example is the cancer program. We do not overlap. We work on the program together so there is no overlapping. Section G says we will work with voluntary organizations—both official and voluntary, so there will not be duplication and overlapping.

Assemblyman Connolly: Can you give me a quick answer as to voluntary organizations—as to what they actually do with those funds? How do they disburse them?

Dr. Halverson: Yes, but there are some other folks here who can give you a better answer. In the field of education, their funds are limited. These funds are not used to any great extent for treatment but principally for the type of thing we call "health education", and for early diagnostic procedures. This work is carried on in the county hospitals through the Cancer Commission and the work of the association.

Assemblyman Connolly: That is the immediate problem that occurs to me. The American Cancer Society is working in the preventive field and you propose to do the same thing. If you both work in the preventive field, can you utilize funds without overlapping?

Dr. Halverson: That is an important question. I think that can be answered from both standpoints in a strong affirmative.

The next witness called on was Lewis W. Guiss, M.D., who testified in the role of a private physician and surgeon interested in the problem of cancer, its treatment and diagnosis. His testimony was as follows:

"The first major project I am interested in is the tumor registry at the county hospital. Its work has been possible through funds designated in part by the American Cancer Society and in part by the State Department of Health, and through these funds we have been able to set up a tumor registry through the county hospital where all cases of cancer or suspected cancer cases are registered. And by this registry we are able to know exactly what the cancer load in the hospital is, what the results are from the various forms of treatment. It gives us a great deal of information in regard to what the treatment is and, in addition to that, it helps us a great deal in maintaining the patients in treatment. At any time the patient fails to show up for treatment on schedule we know immediately through our follow-up system that he has failed his visits, and we investigate to see why. Through this method we have been able to improve our care a great deal. We are reaching about 1,500 cases annually and it is consistent. Through our follow-up endeavors we have a running record of what is being accomplished. This work would have been impossible for us to organize and carry out had we not had the interest of the State Department of Health.

"The other project I am interested in is the mass patient X-ray survey. When this program was begun it was obvious that a number of chest tumor suspects would be uncovered, and it would give us definite information as to what the residence of lung cancer might be in the general population. There was a great deal of discussion early in the program as to just who should deal with this program Everyone agreed that a registry should be set up, but no one was quite sure who should do it. The American Cancer Society did not feel it was one of their duties. Accordingly, the problem was turned over to the Cancer Committee of the Los Angeles Association, and after a meeting it was decided this was a proper function of theirs. Accordingly then we set up a plan of registering all suspects and following them to see what happened to them. Again in this case the entire cost of the project was supplied by the State Department of Health, primarily because no local funds were available and it was considered a worthy cause. The data is still incomplete because the survey is still going on. However, we have a total of about 1,200 chest tumor suspects that have been uncovered through this program. We have them registered and we are following them to see just what is going to happen to them. Over half of these patients have been referred back to their private physicians for care. We do not enter into the treatment field at all, but we are trying to encourage the patient to seek the treatment he needs. Of the proven cases that we have in the registry the surgeons were able to operate and remove the lungs of 65 percent of these patients, and almost without exception, these were patients who did not know they had anything wrong with them at all and they were cured during an early stage of the disease."

Rumford: In regard to your mass X-ray surveys—is there any cooperation between the American T. B. Association and the effort?

Guiss: I can't tell you exactly. All I know is that the chest tumor survey has been made possible by state help.

Rumford: I was wondering if there had been any referrals from the association.

Guiss: We work together on it. They investigate it and refer it to us if they feel there is a possibility of a chest tumor there.

Connolly: You are familiar with this expanded program of the state department that we are considering today?

Guiss: Yes.

Connolly: What do you think about the proposal?

Guiss: It seems to me to be very worthwhile. Apparently an advisory committee will be appointed to act in an advisory capacity and will have a great deal of say along the lines that it will be directed.

Connolly: As I understand, the program at the moment provides mostly for this cooperation and advice, etc. The present program did not make any more funds available for local use because the funds are somewhat limited in nature and would be used up at the state level. Does that sound logical to you, or do you think more funds should be made available for the local people?

Guiss: I am not sure just how the money would best be allocated. I am not in a position to say that. I feel that the extension of the tumor registry is important. I know that the general standard of care of cancer cases in institutions that are able to maintain it is higher by the fact that a registry is there. How many hospitals and institutions will be able to organize them I don't know, but I think almost all tumor registeries and clinics do have to have some outside support.

Connolly: There may be some provided in here.

Guiss: The proposal is to expand them, but I don't know whether the present budget calls for any financial assistance. That would be a problem as to whether or not the local people could set up a registry without outside help.

Dr. Halverson: I think the budget shows about a fourth of the money for that.

Connolly: There would be $2,500 at least available to the local communities for these expanded registeries.

Dr. Edward M. Butt, Chairman Executive Committee, American Cancer Society (California Division), Professor of Pathology, University of Southern California Medical School, was the next to appear before the committee, and he testified as follows:

"We have the clinical tumor registry to which the State has given funds, along with the Cancer Society, to support it. We also have a tissue registry for tissue which we collect from all over the State. The money is supplied principally by the American Cancer Society. We also have surveys of blood, urine and excretions of the body which we test for tumor cells. This is more or less a new development in which the state department has been interested; in fact, they have given most of the money to train technicians in the county hospitals. We think it is a very fine division. This has given us an opportunity to check up on a great many cases of carcinoma. (Papanicalaou department.)"

Chairman Thompson: Would you tell us where funds for the chronic disease program would help your hospital?

Dr. Butt: Certainly, from the development of this department it was very essential. We had no other way of getting money for this training. Certainly I feel the help we have been given for clinical registry—well, we would have been unable to work without state funds to take care of it.

Chairman Thompson: The money which you have received—does that come from the state or federal appropriations?

Dr. Butt: I think it is from the federal appropriation but administered through the state division.

Following is the testimony of Leroy R. Bruce, Member of the Board of Trustees and Past President of the Association of California Hospitals, and Director of the Los Angeles County General Hospital:

"I am principally interested in this program because of its aspects with relation to the administration of hospitals. I believe it is a well known fact in California that we are very short of hospital beds. That is especially true here in Los Angeles County, probably more so than in any other area of the State We find that most hospitals, and particularly public institutions, are pretty badly jammed with chronically ill people. The occupancy of an acute hospital bed in the institutions, such as I administer, which is a hospital designed by the taxpayers for the care of acute medical and surgical cases, when those acute beds are occupied by the chronically ill person it deprives the acutely ill person of his proper care. Well, let's put it this way: The average daily stay of an acutely ill patient is approximately 13 days A chronically ill person occupies it anywhere from three months to a full year, and even longer. That bed is then denied to a critically ill person.

"There is a National Council on Chronic Illness which is a voluntary organization, set up because of the recognized fact that chronic illness is a situation which needs attention, not only on the local, but on the national level. However, this organization is primarily engaged in educational and research types of inquiries, and nothing in the way of prevention, treatment, or prevention facilities. There is a great need for a program, I believe, which is coordinated to the extent that all of the hospitals and all of the people in the professions can have the benefit of the information gathered at the local level. You can't do that unless you have one agency to correlate the information and make it available to the other institutions and agencies throughout the State and Nation; and I believe, as the administrator of the hospital, that it would not have been possible for us to have carried on this work in tumor registry which has been mentioned here before today. You might be interested in knowing that when this tumor registry was set up with money provided by the State Department of Public Health, the Cancer Society and the U. S. Public Health Service, we went back and reviewed the cases of 10 years standing, and there was a follow-up on every single cancer case which had gone through our hospital within a 10 years' period, to determine what had happened to the individual case, whether or not treatment or surgery had been successful, or whether patient had died; and if living, what was his present condition, etc. It is interesting to comment that the result of our follow-up was a 98 percent reply. We even found that some of the patients had been operated on for cancer in foreign countries, in Denmark, Sweden, I believe there was one in Peru, and one in Alaska So, it gives to the professional person that information. Then they can go back and study the records of the case to find out the results of different treatments, and eventually set up a pattern. It would also have been impossible to conduct our program which provides microscopic slides of tumor tissue of various kinds to laboratories all over the State and other states. Some are unusual cases and rare types of cancer and the benefit of this knowledge is tremendous to all organizations working with cancer. Where we now have 82,000 patients a year, we will have probably twice that many going through the outpatient every year who need a clinic of that type. The benefit of all this clinical, medical and chronic disease information would have been entirely lost to the public and to the individual had not this follow-up been made. We have received, in addition to the support for these registries, additional money from the Cancer Society for assistance in converting a building into a cancer research laboratory where we will follow up in medical research and other activities, the information which is being developed and brought to the forefront by the tumor and tissue registries. Out of a daily occupancy of 3,300 beds, 471 are occupied by the chronically ill, outside of those with tuberculosis and outside of those who have senile psychosis. They are occupying beds designed for the cure of acutely ill medical and surgical patients."

Assemblyman Connolly: I have a question—the only one which occurs to me right now, Mr. Bruce, is the question of your problems from the hospital standpoint in connection with the continuing use of beds by chronically ill patients and depriving the critically ill of those beds. A program like this, if carried out, would probably bring in more, rather than less, of the chronically ill.

Mr. Bruce: It might immediately, but I think on the long term plan of a preventive program, we see what has been done in tuberculosis and venereal diseases, and many other fields of medicine, which has cut down the incidence of such disease. If we could determine not only what causes cancer, but what causes multiple sclerosis, cardio vascular diseases, diabetes, and other things, and set up a preventive program, we will have less of a demand of this type of patient upon the facilities of the State. I am not speaking solely of the Los Angeles hospitals, but as past president of the Association of California Hospitals, which position I held for two years, I know pretty much what the problem is throughout the State. Our hospital is typical of most county hospitals and also in the voluntary hospitals, that chronic patients are their great problem. Any patient who has to occupy a hospital bed for more than three months is considered to be a chronic patient.

Assemblyman Rumford: Doesn't this program pretty much cover the whole field of medicine? It seems to be quite extensive for the amount of money you are going to have to work with.

Mr. Bruce: I think this will only be a start. After all, many states have already set up a program for the study of the chronically ill and the conditions that jam up the professions and the institutions with this type of case; and certainly, ultimately, out of these combined surveys will come some answer.

Assemblyman Rumford: Do you have any prevalence of sickle cell disease in your institution?

Mr. Bruce: I would have to ask some of the medical men. I know that we do have that type of disease because it becomes my responsibility to approve very extensive medication necessary in those cases. Anything out of the ordinary, or which is going to cost more than a normal amount of money on any individual case, comes to my attention because it is my responsibility as the administrator having the responsibility for the budget, to approve it. I do know they are there and they come to my attention in that way, but there are other members of our staff here—Dr. Butt is here—I think he can tell you. They are isolated cases, I think.

Dr. Butt: We have a great many patients with sickle cell disease and it has been the subject of study by our pathologists. It is one of the chronic diseases we are very much interested in.

Following is the testimony of L. A. Alesen, M. D.:

"The California Medical Association is interested in supporting any legislation that will make available to any citizen the best possible grade of medical care at a price that citizen can afford to pay. I do not believe I need to substantiate that statement, because we were the pioneers in developing in California the California Physicians Service which, as you know, has grown by leaps and bounds.

"I ask your permission to digress in bringing a bit of background. Let's talk about the equilibrity of the species and I will show you why I am so interested in it. Let's go way out into the Pacific. At any given time upon the islands there will be found a certain number of species of plants and animals representative of an organization of life on that island. From time to time, depending on climatical changes found, those numbers and kinds will vary. But here is the most important factor. Nature tends to limit the number and kind of animal and plant species, and that equilibrium of the species represents the greatest possible number of plants and animals that that particular geographic location can support at any given time. That represents the most effective use of it. Nature has been working on this for many years. We have taken on pants and dresses, etc., so that the thin veneer doesn't amount to too much economically. Today we have about 150,000,000 people offering their goods and services for exchange in what we used to call the free market. The result of getting the most effective use of the goods and services offered is what is known as the equilibrium for any good service or commodity, and that price is the price that most citizens are willing to meet. As a result of the free market in this country, we have the greatest civilization this country has ever known. Other countries have far greater natural resources than we have. The only reason America is so highly superior is because until recently we have interfered with the natural intent of nature to a minimum degree.

"This has a very direct bearing on our medical care. The American people today are the healthiest people in the world, bar none, when comparable populations are considered, and I would like to impress that. To be sure, there are two or three other nations in the world where the death rates are said to be lower than is to be found in America. For example, Australia and New Zealand statistics are quoted. We are always hearing about Sweden and Denmark. Swedes live longer in Minnesota than in Sweden.

"The California Medical Association has instructed me to say to you that we are interested in supporting any measure to help the health of the American people. We don't always see eye to eye with Dr. Halverson but we usually arrive at some satisfactory conclusion. We can see no objection to the appointment of an advisory committee as is set forth in Article 9, Section 30. In the psychology of most of Section 432 particularly we see no objections, if satisfactory safeguards are provided. I was amazed to hear Dr. Halverson say today that he was talking about the treatment of diseases so much. They have told us time and again they did not wish to engage in any treatment at all You will recall that the statement was made in Section 29. Now as far as we are concerned we do not want to be in the position of saying 'No' to all good legislation. We believe there is a place for legislation of this kind if it can be safeguarded properly. What could this do? It could afford a very excellent means of collecting statistics on chronic diseases. You should all like to know something about the various kinds of treatments and their effectiveness, and I think the public is entitled to know something about that also. If the public health department is willing to stay in that field, well and good.

"There are two questions I would like to bring forth. First, is there no private agency by which the individual could receive the same type of service? I believe that has been answered somewhat in the negative, that there is apparently a lack of facilities, so I think that such a bill has at least some desirable point. Second, what does this proposed legislation do to the individual member of California society? Would it tend to make him more or less dependent on his own resources? If this particular piece of legislation merely limits its activities to the collection of statistics I think the bill is desirable, because it would not in any manner weaken the individual's reliance on himself.

"The cost doesn't seem to be too great. The figure of $100,000 has been mentioned here. If a program gets started there will emerge other reasons for expanding the program, and when we are trying to curtail expenses, I doubt if the Legislature can see its way clear to increase this too much. Let it be remembered that our medical people are going to be called upon for medical services and it may be that this may be a reason for curtailment. The Los Angeles County General Hospital has 1,000 staff members who give their services freely and conscientiously to their patients. Of course they profit, but in the long run the patients profit more.

"The California Medical Association will support a measure of this kind providing Section 434 remains and provided that the Legislature will not try to enter into the field of medicine by the back door."

Connolly: With regard to this collection of statistics, you agree that there is no agency at the present time which is doing a job in this field, and you agree it should be done. Is that your position?

Alesen: Yes. There is no agency which coordinates all these various kinds of services, but apparently such an agency could collect and correlate those data, and second, it might further serve the purpose of making available to the public the various types of treatments which are available.

Connolly: As I read the specific provisions, they seem down the line to refer to statistical information and obtaining current data, expanding the tumor registry and encouraging the local communities to make these facilities available and advise and assist them. So it apparently is set up here as statistical and educational and advisory, and so far as you people are concerned if that were the situation and if any additional safeguards were necessary, it would be limited to those you people would be in favor of.

Alesen: That is right. It was our feeling about a year ago.

Dr. Lester Breslow, Chief, Chronic Disease Service, State Department of Public Health, made the following statement:

"With heart disease, as with other diseases, the important thing is to find the persons early enough so that with proper care they may become well sooner and perhaps back on a job sooner than if they did not receive care until the later stages of the disease. Our problem is how to find them early enough. One of the techniques is the mass chest X-ray which has been used to detect tuberculosis. These mass chest X-rays are uncovering many previously unknown cases of heart disease—perhaps more cases of heart disease than tuberculosis; but of course it so happens that the surveys have been organized through tuberculosis resources and it is only proper that the funds be devoted primarily to that purpose. With what little heart funds we have been able to use, we have made the maximum use of these surveys.

"Secondly, we are in cooperation with one of the city health departments—Los Angeles carried out a survey, using civil service population, to detect heart disease early, using electro cardiograph, etc. Those should be followed up.

Thirdly, we know that obesity is correlated with heart disease. The excessively obese die at several times the rate the normal population dies from heart disease. Therefore, we have worked with the nutrition people at Berkeley to develop a program of group approach to people who are obese, with the hope that with a reduction of weight, we can put down hypertensity.

We might mention one more. In one county they have a heart service so that people treated at clinics are followed up. Through occasional visits at the home, they are better able to follow advice and so kept out of the hospitals. That is one of several ways we have in mind.

Assemblyman Rumford: The whole thing is so extensive with several diseases mentioned, for instance arthritis. You could just pile in people who suffer with the disease and you can locate them very easily, but what to do about it is different.

Dr. Breslow: With respect to arthritis, I agree with you that our treatment is very limited. But with cancer, heart disease, tuberculosis—if untreated they go into prolonged cases. If found early, there may be a period—a brief period—of hospitalization and then the patient resumes his normal work. For instance, in Los Angeles we found people with cancer who had been treated early enough and were back at work. If not found early they would have been using the hospital beds for long periods.

Assemblyman Rumford: I can readily see that you could carry on an extensive program with cancer.

Dr. Breslow: There is one statement I would like to make in general. Here in Los Angeles we have illustrated the kinds of things we can and have been doing in chronic disease prevention, and the manner in which we work. Dr. Guiss and Dr. Butt have been vigorous in their statements that this was made possible principally through the State Department of Public Health; but, as a matter of fact, the physicians themselves have been so interested in the program that the time they have put into it far exceeds any money we have put into it. What we want to do with our funds is to help the people in the various communities throughout the State to get started, and they can make contributions in kind. What you have heard today is principally the work we have done here in Los Angeles. Here it is easy to work because they are well organized, but with an expanded program it will be possible to carry this work further into the State. Our applications at the present time are far beyond our facilities and we are at the limit of our federal resources. Other states which have instituted programs of this kind are Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York—there are some others—Illinois, Alabama, and Missouri.

Assemblyman Rumford: As a result of their program, what seems to be the decrease in the prevalence of disease?

Dr. Breslow: In Massachusetts they have carried out a program which demonstrated that the cancer death rate decreases at a more rapid rate than in other parts of the Country. They attribute that to their program.

Assemblyman Rumford: And other diseases—diabetes, arthritis, heart disease—how do they compare?

Dr. Breslow: I do not know of any state except possibly Georgia or Alabama where there is a state program on diabetes. Many communities have carried on surveys similar to what was done by Santa Clara County some years ago with assistance from our department. Mr. Thompson and the medical society of his county deserve a great deal of credit for a program which has now become a model for other parts of the Country to follow. This has been done in other communities than California—at Oxford, Massachusetts; Richmond, Virginia; Milwaukee, Wisconsin; and Dallas, Texas. They carry on a program for diabetes the same as we do for tuberculosis.

Assemblyman Rumford: I think that is a program where we should concentrate on certain things. If we concentrated on cancer, we might be able to do something; but, if we branch out into all ailments you will have people coming in and saying they have a bad toe, etc.

Dr. Breslow: Well, we in the Department of Health would like to concentrate on no more than three diseases—cancer, heart disease and diabetes Other diseases have been included at the insistence of our advisory committee, which we respect. There is a great feeling on the part of people that we need a broad program, but we would agree to a limited number of diseases.

Assemblyman Connolly: One question with regard to the report: Have you any idea—with all the recommendations in the report of what should be done—have you any possible conception of the size of that program in dollars if undertaken? It would certainly be beyond the $100,000 we are talking about.

Dr. Breslow: As a matter of fact, that referred not only to what the State Health Department should do but what everyone should do. The bill pertains to governmental work and state health work pertains only to specific aspects.

Assemblyman Connolly: From a legislator's aspect, you are talking about a program, and perhaps you could use three-quarters of a million dollars a year What we have to consider and bear in mind is that we would have to go back to these same people and ask them if they still want it done for three-quarters of a million dollars in tax money to do it. That is what it boils down to.

Dr. Breslow: That is why I think Dr. Halversen has wanted to inaugurate the program on a reasonable basis of $100,000. It could be done with a lesser or a greater amount. Our only answer is that $100,000 could be well used in this program. We depend on the use of such funds for local interest, professional interest, etc. We can go no faster than the doctors and the communities want to go. They are pressing us to go further.

Assemblyman Connolly: We, as legislators know, and this is not meant to be derogatory, if this program is instituted and you embark on it and collect statistics and information, you, by the same token, collect demands, so that in the following years there is a public clamor for more and more; and we as legislators, are then called upon and have no defense to it because the demand is there and before you know it it is $500,000 and then on down the line. That is no reason for discouraging it, but that is one of the problems we have when the tax payers come to us about expanding costs of government.

Dr. Breslow: We certainly respect that point of view and recognize it. That is why we made a modest request. I would like to make one comment on your remarks, Mr. Connolly, and that is this—that the Legislature, the counties and the Federal Government are being asked for amounts not in the tens or hundreds of thousands, but in the millions for the construction of facilities and other costs for welfare of patients who could have their health problems prevented. We could assemble quite a list of patients whose diseases (and their physicians would be willing to testify to it) could have been prevented.

Assemblyman Connolly: In other words, you could have rehabilitation which would cut down your welfare cost

Dr. Breslow: That is right. If we put $7,500 of federal funds into mass chest X-rays and find that there are several hundred cases of chest tumors detected which would not have been detected otherwise, I think it could be stated conservatively that somewhere between 25 and persons will be saved by that expenditure of $7,500.

Mr. Bruce: The saving of only life is important. On this mass chest X-ray, they came over to our hospital and 99.44% of our 4,632 employees had their chests X-rayed. We have a supervising nurse who has been in charge of pathology for years who had no idea she had anything wrong and the X-ray showed she had a tumor of the lung. This was in March. She was operated on—she had a lobectomy—it was caught early enough before it spread and she is back on the job, and I think that that one individual justifies the expenditure of $7,500.

In view of the fact that the request for funds for chronic disease investigation is stated to be primarily for the purpose of compiling statistics on the prevalence of certain types of chronic illnesses, and in view of the fact that the Department of Public Health already maintains an active Bureau of Vital Statistics, it would appear that the functions of the requested study might properly be carried on under the present bureau. The $100,000 requested is broken down into approximately $44.000 for the addition of 12 employees and $56,000 for educational, reporting and general services; the proportions here would appear to be overbalanced in the direction of personnel and the program would seem to be amenable to allocation to the Bureau of Vital Statistics with the present, or at most a slightly increased, staff. Such allocation merits investigation, especially as to its financial requirements as compared with the request for $100.000 made in S. B. 1424 of the 1949 Legislature. The organization of the Department of Public Health should permit the absorption of the proposed program within the present framework of the department.

In its activities in the field of chronic diseases, as in all its activities, the functions of the Department of Public Health should be those of preventive medicine and sanitation, not those of diagnosis or treatment. The diagnosis and treatment of disease, chronic or acute, is available to all citizens through either private or public sources and the services of health departments are not needed and should not be extended to clinical medical care except in those instances where other sources of such care are not available. Rabies immunization and similar procedures might come within the exceptions.

In the definition of preventive medicine and sanitation might be listed the collection and analysis of vital statistics; public health education in cooperation with community agencies and professional organizations; public health laboratory services for the control or prevention of communicable diseases; communicable disease control through epidemiological investigation; maternal and child health services through educational means, and environmental sanitation such as inspection of food establishments, water, milk, and meat supplies, air pollution, vector control, supervision of sewage and garbage disposal and similar functions. While these items may not be all-inclusive and while public health functions should not be strictly limited by such a listing, the Department of Public Health should stay within a framework of this type and should not enter into the practice of medicine through diagnosis or treatment of individuals.

The committee, in discussion with Dr. Halverson, Director of the Department of Public Health, and members of his staff, agreed with the doctor and his staff that certain amendments to the Health and Safety Code should be offered at the 1951 Session of the Legislature affecting the local Public Health Law and the Clinical Laboratory Act. These proposed amendments and what effect they will have are as follows:

Local Public Health Law

Chapter 8, Part 2, Division 1 of the Health and Safety Code, relating to state financial aid for local health administration, gives the State Department of Public Health authority to approve "provisionally" those county health departments which do not serve all of the cities within that county of 50,000 population or less. The concept as stated in this legislation was that "the minimum of population necessary for efficient administration of local public health units is approximately 50,000." As a means of giving encouragement to the affiliation of cities of less than 50,000 with county health units, the statute provided that provisional approval to such county units could be given only for the period terminating on the 91st day after the final adjournment of the 1949 Regular Session of the Legislature. In 1949 this was changed to read 91st day after the final adjournment of the 1951 Legislature. While many small cities have affiliated with the county health departments since 1947 when the law was enacted, there are still 10 counties where small cities are not so affiliated. It is now the feeling of the department that such counties should not be disqualified for public health assistance because some cities have not seen fit to affiliate with the county public health organization. At the present time the following counties come under provisional approval because the cities listed are not affiliated with the county health organization:

County	Cities
Alameda	Albany
Fresno	Coalinga, Kingsburg, San Joaquin
Los Angeles	Beverly Hills, Vernon
San Bernardino	Ontario
San Mateo	Colma
Santa Barbara	Santa Barbara
Solano	Benicia, Dixon, Fairfield, Rio Vista, Suisun City, Vacaville
Stanislaus	Modesto
Santa Clara	Alviso

Therefore legislation will be proposed retaining the concept of provisional approval for such counties but deleting the date at which termination of this provisional approval shall be effective.

Vital Statistics Laws

The statement made in the preliminary report to the Legislature by the Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health, as published in the Assembly Journal of March 28, 1950, clearly outlines the problem of needed revision of vital statistics laws.

> "The vital statistics laws of the State of California, represented by Division 7 and 9 of the Health and Safety Code, are codifications of various independent statutes which have been enacted over a period of the past 40 or more years. In a recent Attorney General's opinion, he stated '* * * the provisions of the Health and Safety Code * * * dealing with vital statistics are confusing and difficult of interpretation.'
> "The need for a general revision, condensation and clarification of the vital statistics acts has long been recognized. Such a project would require a section by section analysis of the intent of the legislation, and its revisions into terminology which is easy of interpretation and from which irrelevant material has been deleted."

Careful study has been given to the vital statistics laws with the view toward clarifying and simplifying the statutes. Also certain changes will be proposed which it is believed will improve procedures. The following items have been given consideration and are believed appropriate for legislative consideration.

The appointment of local registrars of births and deaths, as presented in Sections 10100 to 10110 of the Health and Safety Code is very confusing and indefinite. The intent of this legislation appears to be that the health officer shall be the local registrar for births and deaths in those areas where there is an organized public health department, and that in other areas, the state registrar may appoint suitable persons to act as local registrars. In many areas outside of organized public health department jurisdictions the city clerk or the county recorder is the local registrar. It is proposed that these statutes be amended by a simple statement of authority for the local health officer to be the local registrar in organized and approved local health departments, and clarification of the authority of the state registrar to appoint local registrars in all other registration districts.

Duplication exists in the files of birth and death records which must be maintained in local offices. With the original enactment of the vital statistics laws in 1905, there were very few organized public health departments. Thus in order to properly serve the public, it appeared necessary to establish a county-wide file of birth and death records in each county recorder's office, since local registrars were scattered through the county and each one maintained a file for only his local registration district. However, at the present time, in most counties of the State there is essentially a county-wide health department and the application of the old vital statistics laws makes necessary the maintenance of a complete file of birth and death certificates by the local public health department, and also by the local county recorder; in some situations these files are in the same city and even in the same building. It is proposed that permissive authority be given for the disposition of the duplicate records in the local registrar's custody in such situations, thus requiring only one local file in the county recorder's office, whose facilities and equipment make the maintenance of records a primary responsibility. Before such disposition, adequate investigation would be made to ascertain that the state and recorder's records were complete. Also, it has been found that huge files of burial permits are maintained in many local registrars' offices, whereas the death certificates include data as to the place of burial, and the local cemetery is required by law to maintain rather complete records. The burial permit is the document which gives authority for the cemetery to bury a body. Therefore, it is further proposed that statutes be enacted giving permissive authority for the local registrar to dispose of such records.

In further elimination of duplicate records, it is proposed to amend the code to exempt the City of Los Angeles from the requirement of filing copies of birth and death certificates with the county recorder, since their offices are in close proximity in the Los Angeles Civic Center.

Since the records on file in the county recorders' offices are primarily for identification purposes, it is proposed to omit from the copy of the birth and death certificates which are transmitted to the county recorder, the medical and health data.

The statutes at the present time stipulate monthly transmittals of birth, death and marriage certificates to the state office and to the county recorders by the local registrars. Since this causes a monthly peak of work in these offices, a proposal has been made that the transmittal of documents be on a weekly rather than a monthly basis in order to even the flow of work in such offices in indexing and processing.

Confusion exists with relation to the handling of affidavits to correct a record. In order to make corrections on a document, once it is filed, it is necessary that an affidavit be prepared and executed and the procedure for handling such affidavits is not clear. Clarification can be provided by simple amendments to certain sections of the code.

For many years the United States Census Bureau secured transcripts of all birth and death certificates from the State, at its own expense, and authority for making the records available to them is provided in the code. Since the federal public health statistical function has now been assigned to the United States Public Health Service, it is proposed to make corrections in the nomenclature of the appropriate sections of the code. Also, authority for making available to the Public Health Service copies of marriage certificates is also proposed; it may be that such data will be requested in the near future.

The Health and Safety Code now stipulates in detail the items which appear on the birth and death certificates. While no substantive change in the items on these documents is contemplated, the statement of the items will be proposed in a condensed form.

The county recorders have brought to the attention of the State Department of Public Health the fact that certificates of registry of marriage now need not be filed with them until 30 days after the marriage ceremony has been performed. Since it is believed that in a few situations this has encouraged a laxity in the filing of such documents, it is proposed to amend the statutes so that certificates or registry of marriage must be filed with the county recorder within four days after the marriage ceremony, this four-day interval being the time already specified for the filing of other vital statistics documents. It is believed this will give encouragement to the prompt filing of the certificates of registry of marriage, which action is so important to the participants.

Provision exists in the code for the "sealing" of the original birth certificate in cases of adoption. Comparable legislation providing for the "sealing" on the original certificate in cases of legitimation is proposed, since it is believed that the "legitimated" children are entitled to this same type of protection.

CLINICAL LABORATORY ACT

The current laboratory act comprising Sections 1200 to 1305 of the Business and Professional Code was enacted by the California Legislature in 1937. The department has now had some 12 years experience in the administration of this act. This experience has indicated the need for a number of additions and amendments.

Some phases of this problem received some consideration in the last session of the Legislature. The department was not prepared at that time, however, to consider the whole problem. During the past two years the act has been subjected to intensive study. Assisting the department in this study has been the various professional organizations that are affected either directly or indirectly by the provisions of this law. Out of this study and associated discussions has developed the recommendations that are to be proposed by the Department. There has been, so far as we know, concurrence on the part of the various groups to the proposals that are to be made.

In general, it may be stated that the proposed amendments will accomplish the following:

1. Bring the duties of the board and the department into line with their respective duties as provided for in the Health and Safety Code. When the law was originally adopted, the Board of Health was an executive board. Since that time the executive duties of the Department have been assigned to the director, and the board serves as a legislative, judicial and advisory board. In several places it is necessary to amend the Clinical Laboratory Act in order to bring the Act in line with current practice.

2. Provide for the registration of clinical laboratory technician trainees. Under the present Act there is provided no jurisdiction over the apprentice or trainee individual. Under the proposed amendment such trainees would be registered and their prerequisites cleared in advance of beginning such training in order that the individual would know precisely the requirements before entering into this field of activity. This will avoid misrepresentation and will serve as a protection to the trainee.

3. Provide for the approval of laboratory training schools. The present act is silent on the matter of approval of training schools by the department, leaving this matter entirely open. Under the general powers of the Board of Health a limited training school approval has been accomplished by regulations. It is proposed to place authority for such approval directly into the law.

4. Provide for the approval of laboratories for apprenticeship training purposes. Under the present law any duly constituted laboratory is indirectly approved for training. Experience has indicated that many laboratories that are operating provide such a limited scope of testing that they are inadequate for internship type of training. It is proposed in this amendment to authorize the department to establish minimum standards for laboratories desiring to provide training programs.

5. Provide for the department to expend funds under this act to assist laboratories and organized groups of laboratory workers in the evaluation of laboratory procedures and in the improvement of standards of laboratory practices. This is merely to make it possible for the department to enter more actively into the field of attempting to improve laboratory practices on a purely cooperative basis.

6. Permit the publication of a directory of licentiates under the chapter. The present law is silent on this matter. The proposal would make it possible to publish such a directory from time to time, but not more often than each biennium.

7. Require the department to maintain a current name and address file of licentiates and require licentiates to report any change of address.

8. Define more precisely the limits of application of the law, particularly as it relates to laboratory work done in offices of private practitioners of the healing arts. The current law may be interpreted to indicate that no laboratory work whatsoever may be done in California except while a licentiate under this act. It is proposed that the exemptions of federal and state institutions be expanded to include the offices of private practitioners.

9. Extend venipuncture privileges to bona fide student technicians. The last session of the Legislature extended these privileges to licensed technologists and technicians leaving the question of trainees or students without legislative consideration. This amendment would fill in this defect.

10. Outline minimum requirements for admission to the examinations for technologists and technicians. These requirements are currently covered by regulations of the Board of Health. It is proposed to place these regulations, essentially in their present form, into the law.

11. Prohibit the reissuance of temporary licenses after failure to pass an examination. Such reissuance is possible under the current act, but the groups involved feel that this should not be continued.

12. Provide for requirement of a permit in order to operate a clinical laboratory. Currently laboratory personnel are licensed, but there is no control whatsoever over the laboratory owner or the laboratory as such. Some years ago it was found that a lacensure for drug stores materially facilitated enforcement of pharmacy laws. Under this proposal laboratories would be required to obtain a permit from the department in order to operate.

13. Several amendments have to do with the clarification of definitions of offenses against the chapter.

14. There are several amendments dealing with revenue, particularly adding sections for laboratory permits and trainee fees.

15. Clarifying and making more specific the grounds for denial, revocation and suspension of licenses and permits.

LOS ANGELES MEETING, OCTOBER 13TH, 1950

DANGEROUS DRUGS

Assemblyman Rumford, as Chairman of the Subcommittee on Dangerous Drugs, made the following statement:

"We have held hearings on the problem of dangerous drugs and there have been some suggested changes to take care of the increasing number of drugs on the market today.

"We have no way of meeting the emergency with the new drugs. They are immediately taken out and put on the market by the various producers, and if it is dangerous, we almost have to wait until the Legislature meets until we can act without harm to the particular company or its products. We have had certain suggestions from the Board of Pharmacy with regard to them; and also, the Board of Pharmacy has made certain suggestions with regard to phenylhydantoin derivatives which are used for erysipelas and other diseases. In this respect we have a communication from the board requesting that we act on it at the next session of the Legislature and take it off the restricted list. We feel that because of its extensive use, and the necessity to use large quantities, it should be eliminated from the list now under the Barbituric Act."

Mr. Rumford submitted to the committee the following amendments to the Health and Safety Code suggested through Mr. Gus Affleck for the State Pharmacy Board:

Mr. Burnell H. Blanchard of the Division of Narcotics testified relative to the use of empirin and codeine compound, and the refilling of such prescriptions.

Assemblyman Rumford asked at this point whether or not, for the sake of a patient, druggists and doctors get together and arrange for the refilling of such prescriptions over the telephone, and whether the restrictions on the refilling of these prescriptions should be removed to allow prescribing over the telephone.

Mr. Blanchard replied: "My instructions are, and my personal opinion also, is that it would not be to the best of the public interest to do so. Although it is commonly thought that particular drug does not cause drug addiction, that is a fallacy. We have had two physicians addicted to that particular drug who have gone through the normal court procedures and will go before the medical board. We have had two medical nurses forging prescriptions for empirin and codeine. In other words, our records will substantiate it is habit forming. It is more or less a stepping stone to the stronger narcotics, and for that reason, we do not think the restrictions are too burdensome for the physician to meet.

"Another thing, with respect to telephoning narcotic prescriptions, we find no small quantity has been reaching the streets by persons representing themselves to be bona fide physicians. There are a number of these gentlemen in San Quentin at the present time for this practice. It is very difficult to trace the calls to check on all of them and for that reason we do not believe any narcotics prescription should be telephoned, nor should any regulations on these two be relaxed at this time. We feel that we have had an unfortunate experience when in the last Legislature certain of our laws were relaxed to permit probation on a first offense. Our records are filled with abuses of that law. We have cases where an outright peddler of narcotics has been granted probation. They are destroying the young people of every city in the State and it should be stopped. To relax the laws any further would be ill advised."

Following is the statement made by Mr. Howard Hassard, Counsel for the California Medical Association: "The basic difficulty with narcotics and their use legitimately is that there is a fundamental clash between two things, each of which is in the public interest. One is the protection against narcotic addiction—the misuse by unethical people—the problems Mr. Blanchard and others in the enforcement field face. One cannot quarrel with the public policy which emanates from the Harrison Narcotic Act and state laws to stop this traffic as soon as possible; but there is another public policy which frequently clashes, and that is that such drugs, if used properly by licensed physicians and surgeons, are life saving and pain alleviating things. Frequently, as Mr. Rumford has in mind, the immediate availability, the immediate supply of a particular drug is in the interest of a patient who is suffering. The law doesn't prohibit that at all. In fact, it encourages it. But how to make it practical and feasible for an immediate supply to be available for a legitimate medical purpose, and at the same time close the door to the narcotics traffic, is a problem which I am afraid is going to be difficult to solve.

"On the other hand, there is the situation where a physician, with the multiple demands upon his time, must go on another call, but an emergency arises where a patient needs a drug immediately. The physician telephones the druggist and the drug is sent. The physician and the pharmacist are known to each other, the pharmacist knows for what the purpose the drug is to be used; but actually, under the present law, that is a technical violation at both ends of the telephone. I think what Mr. Rumford is searching for, and the California Medical Association joins in the same search, is some means by which immediate availability of the drugs to the physician and patient, when legitimately needed, can be assured without either being law breakers, while at the same time definitely not relaxing the means of apprehending and enforcing the law of narcotics. Perhaps the telephone is not the answer, but there might be some way devised by which telephone use could be so checked that the imposter couldn't get by. I can understand Mr. Blanchard's point that it is possible, if you do not see a person's handwriting, and of course that could be forged too—I know of instances where forgery has been done wholesale—but I suppose a face to face transaction is the only authentic system one could have to make certain they are not being imposed upon in the dispensing of drugs.

"The Dangerous Drug Division of our law is one separate division (Division 22 of the Health and Safety Law). It started out several years ago to control dangerous drugs, patterned after the Harrison Narcotics Act, with licensing requirements, control over record keeping of prescriptions, etc. In the last session, Division 22 was amended, not particularly in connection with its fundamental purpose to control dangerous drugs, but to add a new and second licensing system on top of the existing one, relating to hypnotic drugs. The bill was S. B. 1005 (1949) and Senator Kraft of San Diego was the author. The members will recall that during the hearings on hypnotic drugs in the Assembly Committee on Public Health, and in the Senate, there was considerable controversy, not over the intent of the bill, but over its language, and over various and sundry amendments to it. I think, having been present at the hearings, that the Legislature in its state of mind was clear enough, but the language which became law is far from clear. In fact, it is one of the most scrambled things in the law.

"S. B. 1005 required a second licensing, over and above the regular license, to prescribe and dispense hypnotic drugs on the part of the doctor and the pharmacists who have the supply on hand. An odd thing happened in the legislative drafting. The bill specified that Section ____ and ____ was added to Division 22, and Section ____ and ____ was amended. Down in the body of the bill, the important sections of the bill, it is provided that this chapter is amended to provide such and such. Then the numbers in the Health and Safety Code which were given to those sections were such that after the bill became law, when it was printed, the two sections that complimented each other were put in two different chapters. The bill did not say which were going to what chapters. One is Section 29000 and the other is Section 29020, and each referred to this chapter. Back in the Health and Safety Code, Chapter 1 started with Section 29000 and Chapter 2 started with Section 29015, or something. In any event, the bill itself did not specify that it was amending any particular chapter. In two of those sections is a provision to the effect that the licensing requirements of the bill did not apply to physicians and doctors who furnished or dispensed this particular hypnotic drug to their patients in the ordinary course of their practice, that means for nothing other than the specific purpose of the physician-patient relationship. I am sure the Legislature wished to accomplish what it set out to do—to exempt doctors and dentists in the offices, and in their homes, and to exempt them from having to have another license before they could give a patient an empirin compound, for example.

"However, because of this mixup in numbering of chapters, the opinion has been expressed that the exemption section doesn't apply at all because the licensing got into one chapter and the exemption in the other. I think it is sufficiently important to the pharmacists, the medical profession, dentists, etc., that a clarifying section be introduced, not to change the law but to get back into it the intent of the Legislature—the intent the Legislature had at the last session."

House Resolution No. 19

Relative to directing the Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health to investigate the need of legislation regulating the use of electrical therapeutic instruments

WHEREAS, There appears to be a constant increase in the use of electrical therapeutic instruments in the treatment of persons for various diseases and ailments; and

WHEREAS, Complaints made by citizens of this State indicate that the use of such instruments by untrained or unqualified operators has resulted in numerous injuries; and

WHEREAS, The public welfare will be served by a study of this subject, designed to determine what, if any, legislation is necessary to regulate the use or operation of such machines; and

WHEREAS, Such an investigation is within the scope of the functions of the Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health (created by House Resolution No. 237, 1949 General Session) is hereby directed to ascertain, study and analyze all facts and laws relating to, bearing upon, or any way affecting the subjects expressed in the recitals of this resolution and to report thereon to the Legislature not later than the fifteenth legislative day of the 1951 General Session, including in its report its recommendations for needed legislation concerning the use or operation of electrical therapeutic instruments.

LOS ANGELES MEETING, OCTOBER 13TH, 1950

ELECTRICAL THERAPEUTIC INSTRUMENTS

During the 1950 Session of the Legislature, House Resolution No. 19 was introduced by Mr. A. I. Stewart relative to directing the Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health to investigate the need of legislation regulating the use of electrical therapeutic instruments. Due to the many subjects and problems referred to the Interim Committee on Public Health, and in order to make a thorough study of each individual subject, it was impossible for the committee and its investigators to thoroughly complete the study for the need of legislation governing the use of electrical therapeutic instruments.

The committee has gathered a lot of valuable information but the need for further study is so great because of the harmful use made by inexperienced operators of these instruments, that we feel we should withhold this portion of our report and refer it together with our findings to the Interim Committee on Public Health that will undoubtedly be created during the 1951 Session.

Following is a brief report given the committee by Mr. William H. Young, the investigator for the Interim Committee on Public Health, and the information reported was gathered from various electrical engineers who Mr. Young interviewed:

"The machines number in the hundreds as far as operation, and are broken down into various names, and there is a new machine that comes under radionics. Electrical engineers inform me that you get just as much treatment from attaching a couple of wires to a pinball machine to find out if you have high or low blood pressure. There is a general consensus of opinion that any machine that puts electricity into the human body causes some damage, and in passing, I might state that there are over 7,000 therapists who use various types of machines, and this is only taking into consideration the physiotherapists. There are 5,600 chiropractors in the State of California and other people of the various subprofessions who use these machines.

"There is a generalizing function of the electric or radiotherapy which introduces electricity into the human body which creates what is known as electrolysis. The most common type of this is called sinusoidal. During this sinusoidal type of treatment one-half of the current is blocked off and not allowed to enter the body, but it consists of about 10,000 cycles a second. This restricts the function of the level cells to the motor cells only. It is used as a curative means and it goes quite deep. But the current disassociates the cell sack and causes scar tissue, and it is the theory of many specialists that this is the first form of cancer. A great deal of research, medical research, would be necessary to determine whether certain diseases or damage to cell tissue is actually caused by the machine. If an opinion were necessary I would take the opinion of experts I have talked to who declare that actually there is damage done.

"What we intend to do in this investigation from the standpoint of my abilities is to determine the operational extremes of the machine, the total machines in operation in the State of California, who operates them, and what qualifications a person needs to go to a manufacturing concern and buy a machine that will introduce electricity into the body.

"There is some mention of beauty parlor operators who remove hair by use of the machine and who give facials and, I think, remove warts. There are a lot of good things about these machines, but I have never been able to find anyone who has anything against electric needles to remove growths, but that would require expert opinion too. It is also the aim of the investigation of the committee to determine whether legislation should be enacted to limit the manufacturers and to set any minimum qualifications for the person who is to operate the machine. At the present time, to the best of my knowledge, there is no legislation that acts directly on the person operating the machine. There is some indirect control, in that in order to become a licensed chiropractor or beauty operator you must pass certain educational qualifications, and in their schools they require certain courses on physiotherapy and the operation of various machines. After a chiropractor is a chiropractor he can study further in regard to X-ray. Very few have done so. The X-ray machine is possibly the most dangerous machine there is. One electrical engineer informed me when I outlined what I intended to investigate that we should start in with the county X-ray machines, that they are not under as good control as they might be, so I can't impress upon you too much the danger of deep X-ray treatments. So as near as I can figure out, at the present time the only control over the machines and treatments is an indirect control which is placed on the schools who educate the people who later become physiotherapists and other subprofessionals.

"The question arises whether the person operating the new device keeps pace with the new inventions annually, whether they take it upon themselves to investigate the new machines, so that they thoroughly understand them and understand the operation of the machine, or whether they merely read a pamphlet put out by the manufacturers and go ahead and start using it. I am interested in whether there has been any research on the part of the medical profession to determine whether scar tissue and cell damage is directly related to the operation of the various devices, and to determine at the same time if actually the scar tissue is related to the introduction of the electricity into the system.

"The investigation is very interesting, probably due to the fact that I am not qualified to determine anything except through the opinions of others who are specialists in their own lines, and it is enlightening to the point where it is necessary to get from professionals the true happenings of this type of device. I can only guess that a great deal of work will have to be done. It is in a pioneering field as no one has paid any attention to the control of the machines and the qualifications of the people who are to operate them. It represents a large order in investigation and reporting and meeting the properly qualified experts to be able to outline to the committee their findings and not their opinions, and the actual conditions that exist in persons who have used the machines. There is no doubt that the machines can do good. The question is the qualifications necessary for the person to have who operates the machine."

Rumford: Have you investigated to determine the number of machines that operate around the country?

Young: Only to determine that there are a lot.

Rumford: Most of your X-ray equipment and most of your radio diathermy, etc., in a doctor's office is operated under his control, including the X-ray machine.

Ben Read: Since 1935 there have been attempts to regulate such machines. There is no requirement today. I can go out today and buy an X-ray machine and start using it. It should be done under the direction of someone who knows something about it. There was a very serious situation in San Pedro where a number of persons were injured, and it practically broke one insurance company, where a number of people were injured from fooling around with the machine.

Young: I have seen a number of people who have been burned, and the burned portion is exactly like the body of a person who has been cremated. You have to see it to understand what this X-ray machine will do. The skin turns black and peels off and it smells of burned and decayed matter. X-ray machinery is used for a multitude of things. It is used to cure some degree of bone injuries such as bursitis, which is a growth on the socket of the elbow or knee. There are many things that have to be looked into. It is a loose system whereby the person can tell you you have a bursitis and this machine will fix it.

Read: A lot of these machines in the doctors' offices are run by the girls in the office who don't know any more about them than a school girl. The doctor is responsible.

Rumford: That is a professional service. It is assumed, when these machines are put on the market, that they have been inspected and approved.

Young: I expect to receive data from the engineers who invent these machines, data from pathologists, and what they have found in their post mortems.

Thompson: It seems to me that it is very serious if they are out in the state like you mention, and they sell from house to house and any person that wants to can buy one and set it up as a cure-all. We are in a deep problem. If we put up a big sign in front of an office, "Electric Therapy," and if people came in there for $3 a treatment, anything could happen.

Rumford: You and I could get one if there is no license required.

Thompson: I could call myself an electric therapist, and nothing would happen.

Young: There is another theory, and that is this. As near as I have been able to determine, in the new radionics machine that I mentioned to you as being similar to a pinball machine there is no possibility of damage to come from that, but the consensus of opinion is that that machine is nothing but a fraudulent thing. People come in to find out about their blood pressure and hook themselves up to those jackets and various lights light up, etc. The question is whether this is being honest with the people or whether the persons operating them are preying on the ignorance of certain types of patients. I have also heard some qualified medical men say that these machines are good to get rid of the neurotics, as they are just not happy unless they are being treated for something. So it opens too much of an avenue for the unscrupulous to use the gadget.

Thompson: In a subsequent meeting could we subpena some of these people and have them bring around their machines and show us what they are?

Young: Yes, I want to do that.

Thompson: Isn't there any way to break down their demonstration?

Young: Yes. It can be disapproved.

Thompson: Is it the desire of the committee that we go into this further?

Rumford: I think we should contact an expert in the field, and if we can get him before the committee will mean an awful lot to any legislation that would come.

LOS ANGELES MEETING, OCTOBER 14, 1950

PHYSICAL THERAPISTS

The practice of physical therapy has been one of the most controversial subjects undertaken by the Interim Committee on Public Health during the past two years. Many arguments pro and con have been presented to the committee by various groups interested in physical therapy, even among the physical therapists themselves.

The first witness to appear before the committee at this meeting was Virginia M. Parsons, Legislative Chairman of the Southern California Chapter, American Physical Therapy Association, who said in part: "Since there is no legislation before the Legislature, now, we believe, is a good time to seriously consider the qualifications of a registered physical therapist.

"Once we have explained our part in what we believe to be good medical care for the people of California, we do not believe you will do anything to decrease those standards. Rather, we feel certain that you will stand for high standards. We hope, too, that you will not consider legislation which will tend to confuse the people of California by licensing those, who in the opinion of the medical leaders, are unqualified.

"First, then, what are registered physical therapists? What is their educational background? What training must they have before being given the privilege and the responsibility in assisting in the care of the polio patients, veterans in our government hospitals and the hundreds of others for whom physicians prescribe physical therapy?

"The American Physical Therapy Association is the professional organization of qualified physical therapists in the United States. Founded in 1921 by a group of World War I reconstruction aides and incorporated as a nonprofit organization in 1930, the association has at present over 4,000 members. There are approximately 600 members in the State of California. The association established and maintained educational standards for the training of physical therapists until 1936, when the responsibility was assumed by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association. The association assisted in the formulation of standards for the physical therapists employed in State Agencies for Crippled Children, and has assisted materially in establishing professional classification for physical therapists employed under federal civil service. It has in recent years assisted the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis in the recruitment of physical therapists for epidemic areas.

"The American Registry of Physical Therapists was established in 1936. The purpose of this registry is to cooperate with the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association in the attempt to maintain high standards and to make available to physical therapists a registry which will help protect ethical members of the profession and provide adequately trained physical therapists for institutions or agencies using physical therapy. Only graduates of schools approved by this council are eligible for the registry examination. Therefore, we have used the term 'registered physical therapist' for 14 years.

"Members of the association and the registry subscribe to essentially the same code of ethics as practiced by the medical profession. Furthermore, members may give treatments only under the direction of a licensed doctor of medicine. Members do not diagnose a patient's condition, prescribe treatment or advertise. We are constantly striving to promote high educational standards for those wishing to enter the profession.

The Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association has formulated "essentials of an acceptable school for physical therapists" and schools meeting these requirements are commonly referred to as "approved schools." There are four ways in which a person may qualify for the profession of physical therapy. They are as follows:

1. Graduation from an approved school of nursing.
2. Graduation from college with a B.S. degree in physical education.
3. Graduation from college with a science major, or
4. Two or three years of college with a predominance of science courses.

"This background, obtained in any of the four ways mentioned, then qualifies a person for admission in an approved school. The registered nurse, the physical education major or the science major is then ready for an additional year's training, at least in any one of the five highly respected institutions where physical therapy courses are offered in the State of California. These schools are:

University of California School of Medicine at San Francisco
University of Southern California at Los Angeles
College of Medical Evangelists at Los Angeles
Children's Hospital at Los Angeles, and the Stanford University at Palo Alto.

"The subject of standards of medical care is one which might consume hours of deliberation between those who believe them too high and those who would like to lower them. However, to resolve the question very quickly, I'm certain you will agree that where you personally are concerned, or where the life of a member of your family is at stake, or where the rehabilitation of our battle casualties is concerned, the best is none too good. That is why those of us who have devoted years of our lives to training, and propose to carry on for the rest of our working years—urge that our standards—if they are not to be increased by legislation, at least not be lowered.

"Untrained hands can cause irreparable damage to the human body. They can cause damage by not giving enough treatment as well as overranging or overexercising. Trained though we are, let me emphasize, we work only under the direction of doctors. And physical therapy prescriptions can be as complicated as any of the other complex care the physician may prescribe. Trained though we are, we know that to practice without the supervision of the physician, who in turn is calling upon his years of experience, would not be for the best interest of the patient.

"Since our profession is so closely allied to the medical profession and since we, like all other registered physical therapists, work under the supervision of the physicians in the profession, we feel the right to license should be maintained in the Board of Medical Examiners. We believe that those who would like to join our profession should be willing, certainly, to meet the standards and regulations we have met. We are not here asking that legislation be passed to give us more, shall we say, business at the expense of other practitioners. Since we do not advertise, our patients are referred to us by the attending physician.

"We do not obtain patients by advertising imagined maladies and holding forth with fancied cures. Such tactics, in our opinion and in the opinion of the medical profession, are beyond the need of comment.

"It goes without saying that we are proud of our chosen profession. But, in that, we are hardly more proud than any other person who has given long years—and many years at almost inconsequential salaries—to attain our present position in the field of medical care

"In this brief presentation we have avoided any emotional appeal, and, in closing we would like to repeat our words of faith in you as legislators for the people of this State. As we said in 1949—we repeat again this year—'We trust you will assist us to maintain high standards of physical therapy care—high standards for your protection'."

The next witness called on to testify was Dr. Harold Crow, orthopedic surgeon from the Orthopaedic Hospital in Los Angeles, who said: "I have for many years been interested in this subject I would like to point out to you that at one time there was a time and place when people knew what a doctor was. That was in the Old World before Hitler got it all mixed up. Even in that country the lowly human knew if you called a fellow a doctor, he had gone through a school for doctors and had received a doctor's degree. They knew if he carried the title "Doctor" that he had earned the right to treat sick people. In America, on the contrary, titles are very loosely used, and the title "Doctor" has been used for treatments of almost any kind available, especially in California, which is notable throughout the world for the variety of treatments you can secure if you want them, and this situation has been more or less uncontrolled in the past We have, of course, presented the idea to you that if the physician is trained adequately, he should be able to diagnose and prescribe treatment, and the physical therapist should be (like a pharmacist) in a position to fill prescriptions. Consequently, a physical therapist will fill a prescription by a doctor for therapy treatment, in our opinion, but only after proper diagnosis by a legitimate professional person, with the interest of the patient the first consideration

"I am sure that the members of this audience are aware of the existence in this Country of two great groups of people: There are the neurotic whom we meet everywhere—people who transfer their emotional disturbances into physical illness and go on and on seeking cures for an imaginary ailment. They are numerous. You have as well a great group of individuals who are seeking cure and relief from effects of chronic diseases, such as polio, or any of the other diseases with long and painful convalescences. These are the ones the physical therapists choose to treat. Both of them are wide open, and from our point of view they need protection, because our consideration is for the welfare of the patient. Now, if we can legislatively regulate the possibility of these people falling into the hands of practitioners who will go on and on, I believe that any bill which will set up a legitimate procedure of diagnosis by a trained physician, with a prescription of treatment to be administered by a trained prescription filler (just like a pharmacist) it would be a protection to these individuals They are very numerous and need protection from their own ignorance.

"In this country we will call anybody doctor who will treat you; and, unfortunately, people in our State make it a business instead of a profession. When the poor discouraged invalid can go on and on as long as he can pay, this is not in the interest of the patient's welfare, whose interest lies in both the physician and the trained physical therapist"

Rumford: "From my point of view, I am aware of the background of the physical therapists and we have this problem before us. What will we do with these people who have used this for a number of years? We know of your dispute with them. Do you have any solution so far as they are concerned? Do you want us to solve it for you? We have recommendations from them and from you, and I would like to know if there is any possible way we can satisfy both groups."

Dr. Crow: "Speaking not as a medical physician (because I have been in orthopedics treating people for 20 years) I can only give my own personal opinion, but I do not feel we can change the past or the people who have been practicing. It is difficult to ask the Legislature to close their shops I think that would be going too far, but certainly it should be possible to legislate and lay down rules for the conduct of that form of treatment, so that as the years pass and youth takes the place of age, you will have your adequately trained person so that the care of the patient is constantly improving. The Legislature can start at this point as a starting point to improve the future.

"I see at least three groups. We have these people who are here this morning with qualifications and all that we are positive of, such as Miss Parsons. We have other groups rendering good service, more or less under physicians' instructions, who are competent but may not have the educational qualifications, but we know they will qualify; and then we have the other groups who are definitely not qualified but they may have an office and equipment and a practice as well. I think you all know that in the past the third group has very often been an extremely illegitimate group and possibly legislation could stop that sort of thing; but the thing I think of is the boy or girl who through the second world war had a lot of experience in the actual application of physical therapy and who now want to be one It is impossible often for those people to fulfill present requirements, and now if that ability could be guided into channels where it would be useful to the community and not a means of simply stripping the disappointed patient of whatever money he has left, I think they might be used. That ability might be used, but the thing we think of and try to defend is the discouraged despondent patient who will turn to anything for help. I have always been inclined to tell my patients where I find they have gone from doctor to doctor, if they are still in trouble and not getting satisfactory results, they can usually find advertisements regarding their ailments in the newspapers, because the advertiser is collecting these disappointed people. In the newspapers you can find pretty well listed the answers which the scientific men do not have. Cancer, arthritis, and other diseases are still a problem to us but they guarantee cures regularly."

Rumford: "Are you familiar with the draft of the bill the California Physical Therapists Association has submitted? They have made certain changes and I wonder if you would still object?"

Mr. Howard Hassard, Counsel for the California Medical Association answered:

"I think I can answer that better because Dr. Crow is not familiar with the bill. I can answer it by saying 'Yes', and then explain why in about two minutes. The bill proposed in 1949 and now modified by the California Physical Therapy Association is still at the present time substantially as it was in 1949. It permits anyone licensed under it as a physical therapist to start in on the diagnosis of a patient on his own, without any necessity of a physician having first seen the patient, and that is the fundamental objection of the California Medical Association. This is probably a poor analogy but it would be the same as if a pharmacist instead of filling prescriptions determined their ailment. As you know, the practice of medicine consists basically of three steps: one, and most important, is the determination whether or not the patient is or is not ill; whether he is or is not in need of medical care, and if in need, what care. That is diagnosis. The second step is to determine what type of treatment. That is the prescription; and the third step is treatment. Physical therapy is one phase of the third step and that is all. It is a particular kind of treatment for a particular type of injury or illness. It is not diagnosis and it is not a prescription. That is the reason Mr. Levering's bill which we sponsored calls for a system of registration to work under physicians and surgeons and not set up a separate entity."

Following is the proposed bill as it will be introduced for the American Physical Therapy Association at the 1951 Session of the Legislature:

An act to add Chapter 5.6 to Division 2 of the Business and Professions Code, relating to the practice of physical therapy by registered physical therapists.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Chapter 5.6, comprising Sections 2600 to 2630, inclusive, is hereby added to Division 2 of the Business and Professions Code, to read as follows:

CHAPTER 5.6 REGISTERED PHYSICAL THERAPISTS

Article 1. General Provisions

2600. This chapter may be cited as the "Physical Therapists Practice Act."

2601. "Physical therapy" means the treatment of any bodily or mental condition of any person by the use of the physical, chemical, and other properties of heat, light, water, electricity, massage, and active and passive exercise. The use of roentgen rays and radium, for diagnostic and therapeutic purposes, and the use of electricity for surgical purposes, including cauterization, are not authorized under the term "physical therapy" as used herein.

2602. "Physical therapist" or "physiotherapist" means a person who practices physical therapy.

2603. "Board" means the Board of Medical Examiners of the State of California.

Article 2. Registration

2606. A person who has not been registered by the board as a physical therapist shall not represent himself as being so registered.

2607. The board shall not register any person as a physical therapist who does not conform to the following conditions:

(a) He shall be at least 21 years old;

(b) He shall be of good moral character;

(c) He shall have been graduated by an approved high school;

(d) He shall have been graduated either

(1) By a school of physical therapy approved by the board;

(2) By a school of physical education approved by the board, and in addition shall have completed an approved course in physical therapy;

(3) By a school of nursing approved by the board or by the Board of Nurse Examiners, and in addition shall have completed an approved course in physical therapy;

(e) He shall have passed to the satisfaction of the board an examination conducted by it to determine his fitness for practice as a physical therapist.

2608. A person who desires to be registered as a physical therapist shall apply to the board, in writing, on a blank furnished by the board. He shall embody in that application evidence under oath, satisfactory to the board, of his possessing the qualifications preliminary to examination required by this chapter. He shall pay to the board at the time of filing his application a fee of twenty-five dollars ($25).

2609. The board shall examine applicants for registration as physical therapists at such times and places as it may determine. It may employ registered physical therapists to aid it in such examinations. The examinations shall embrace such subjects as the board deems necessary to determine the applicant's fitness and shall include practical demonstrations and written and oral tests of such fitness.

2610. The board shall register as a physical therapist each applicant who proves to the satisfaction of the board his fitness for registration under the terms of this chapter. It shall issue to each person registered a certificate of registration, which shall be prima facie evidence of the right of the person to whom it is issued to represent himself as a registered physical therapist, subject to the conditions and limitations of this chapter.

2611. Each person granted registration under the provisions of this chapter shall pay an annual tax and registration fee to the board on or before the first day of January of each year, and such annual tax and registration fee is the sum of two dollars ($2).

2613. Failure of any person holding a certificate of registration as a physical therapist to pay the annual tax and registration fee during the time his certificate remains in force shall automatically work a forfeiture of his certificate after a period of 60 days from the first day of January of each year. Such a certificate shall not be restored except upon written application and by the payment of a delinquency fee of ten dollars ($10). No examination shall be required for the reissuance of a certificate that has been forfeited under the provisions of this chapter.

Article 3. Refusal, Revocation and Suspension of Registration

2616. The board, after due notice and hearing, may refuse to register any applicant, and may refuse to renew the registration of any registered person, and may suspend or revoke the registration of any registered person;

(a) Who is guilty of habitual intemperance or who is addicted to the use of narcotic drugs;

(b) Who has been convicted of violating any state or federal narcotic law;

(c) Who has been convicted of any crime involving moral turpitude;

(d) Who is guilty, in the judgment of the board, of gross negligence in his practice as a physical therapist;

(e) Who has obtained or attempted to obtain registration by fraud or material misrepresentation;

(f) Who has been declared insane by a court of competent jurisdiction and has not thereafter been lawfully declared sane; or

(g) Who has treated or undertaken to treat ailments of human beings otherwise than by physical therapy and as authorized by this chapter, or who has undertaken to practice independent of the prescription, direction or supervision of a person licensed in this State by the Board of Medical Examiners to practice medicine and surgery.

Article 4 Restrictions and Penalties

2620. A person who is not registered under this chapter as a physical therapist, or whose registration has been suspended or revoked, or whose registration has lapsed and has not been revived, who uses in connection with his name the words or letters "R. P. T.," "Registered Physical Therapist," or any other letters, words, or insignia indicating or implying that he is a registered physical therapist, or who in any other way, orally, or in writing, or in print, or by sign, directly or by implication, represents himself as a registered physical therapist, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

2621. A person who makes a wilfully false oath or affirmation in any case in which an oath or affirmation is required by this chapter, or who obtains or attempts to obtain registration by any fraudulent representation shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars ($1,000) or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or by both, in the discretion of the court.

2622. A person registered under this chapter as a physical therapist shall not treat human ailments by physical therapy or otherwise except under the supervision and direction of a physician and surgeon licensed by the board. Nothing in this chapter shall be construed as authorizing a physical therapist, whether registered or not, to practice medicine, surgery, or any other form or method of healing except as defined in Section 2601. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

2623. Nothing contained in this chapter shall be construed to limit or prevent the use of physical agents by any person not registered under this chapter, if such person does not represent himself to be a registered physical therapist.

Article 5. Powers and Duties of Board

2626. Each person engaged in the practice of physical therapy on or prior to the effective date of this chapter may be registered by the board and be issued a certificate as a registered physical therapist, upon submitting evidence satisfactory to the board either (a) that he has practiced physical therapy under the direction of a physician and surgeon licensed by the board for not less than three years either in a hospital, sanitarium, clinic or office, or (b) has taught physical therapy for not less than one year in a school of physical therapy acceptable to the board, or (c) that he has fulfilled the requirements of Section 2607, subsections (a), (b), (c) and (d) on or before the effective date of this chapter. Evidence of the practice or teaching of physical therapy submitted to the board must conclusively show to the satisfaction of the board that such practice or teaching shall have been performed within a five-year period immediately prior to application for certification. The authority of the board to issue certificates under this section shall expire one year from the effective date of this chapter.

2627. All persons who have been administering physical therapy as commissioned officers in the Medical Corps of the United States Army, or in the Medical Service Corps of the United States Navy for a period of one year or more prior to the effective date of this chapter, or who have been administering physical therapy as noncommissioned officers in the Medical Corps of the United States Army or in the Medical Service Corps of the United States Navy for a period of one year or more prior to the effective date of this chapter, and who either hold certificates of completion of training in the physical therapy department of an Army or Navy hospital, or can prove to the satisfaction of the board that they have satisfactorily completed training in physical therapy in the physical therapy department of an Army or Navy hospital, may also apply for and be granted registration without examination by the board.

2628. The board is authorized to adopt reasonable rules to carry this chapter into effect and may amend and rescind such rules at its discretion. The board shall keep a record of its proceedings under this chapter, and a register of all persons registered under it. The register shall show the name of every living registrant, his last known place of business and last known place of residence, and the date and number of his registrant and certificate as a registered physical therapist. The board shall, during the month of May of every year in which the renewal of registration is required, compile a list of registered physical therapists authorized to practice physical therapy in the State. Any interested person in the State is entitled to obtain a copy of that list on application to the board and payment of such amount as may be fixed by the board, which amount shall not exceed the cost of the list so furnished.

2629. Blind persons shall not be denied registration solely on the basis of such infirmity.

2630. The board shall investigate every supposed violation of this chapter coming to its notice and shall report to the proper district attorney all cases that in the judgment of the board warrant prosecution. Every police officer, sheriff, and peace officer shall investigate every supposed violation of this chapter that comes to his notice or of which he has received complaint, and apprehend and arrest all violators. It shall be the duty of the district attorneys of the counties in this State to prosecute violations of this chapter.

SEC. 2. If any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances in held invalid, such invalidity shall not affect other provisions or applications of the act which can be given effect without the invalid provision or application, and to this end the provisions of this act are declared to be severable.

Connolly: I was going to ask the doctor * * *. You have a situation now apparently where you have a lot of people qualified or not, and at the present time they are acting individually and outside and from under any contact with the medical profession. They are diagnosing and treating illness at the present time. Isn't that true?

Dr. Crow: It is a question to which I cannot give you a factual answer because it would require a survey of the State to determine exactly what is occurring in every part of the State and that is a job which even this committee does not have the means to do. From my information, which may or may not be correct or adequate, I can only answer in this way, that to the extent that people who are not licensed to practice under any of the existing license acts, are undertaking to diagnose the ills of other people and determine the type of treatment, they are acting unlawfully, and I do not think that should be legalized.

Connolly: That is the point we seem to get to. As I understand you, doctor, physical therapy treatment should properly only be done after a proper medical diagnosis of what treatment is required along those lines.

Dr. Crow: I think that is the ideal use of this form of treatment and there is certainly a difference between the treatment for illness and treating the tired business man at the time when the temperature is 104 degrees and he goes to the club and gets rubbed down because he feels better from massage. That is not a treatment for disease, but certainly if it is for treatment, the nature of the disease should be determined and treatment prescribed for that known ailment.

Connolly: In other words, there is a dividing line in there for massage of sore muscles and aches and pains on the one hand, and physical therapy for a particular illness.

Dr. Crow: Yes, it certainly should be on a prescription, just like filling a prescription for drugs.

Connolly: And if physical therapists are at the present time diagnosing or doing anything more than massage at the club, it would be acting unlawfully since it is not within the present provision of the law.

Hassard: You have to bear in mind that the term physical therapy has in the past couple of decades acquired in usage a much broader meaning to you and I as attorneys than it does to Dr. Crow. To him it means a specific therapeutic treatment after a diagnosis of a specific illness or injury. It is used in a broad sense to cover anything from massage or manipulating a gadget—or the use of physical things such as heat, light, air, and physical exercise. When we say physical therapy in that sense, we are talking not about one thing but a multitude of things. So far as massage is concerned, it is not in the practice of medicine or any other branches of the healing arts.

Connolly: One further question, under this proposed bill that the American association proposes, if that legislation were adopted, would they then be in a position to diagnose?

Hassard: Yes, they would be.

Mr. Chairman, I think we have presented the points of view of the California Medical Association and the Physical Therapy Association. Mr. Levering's bill, A. B. No. 555, still represents our views. We ask for its favorable consideration by this interim committee. I might point out that we propose legislation on physical therapy on the use of the term registered physical therapists in a broad sense along the same lines that a nurse who has gone through nursing school and has graduated and passed the necessary qualifications is entitled to use the term registered nurse. But the law does not permit her to practice nursing. A. B. No. 555 has the same approach to the physical therapists. It merely sets up a means by which the public may determine the educational qualifications of the physical therapists by restricting the use of the term registered physical therapists to those who have fulfilled the necessary qualifications. We do not propose to put anyone out of business who is now lawfully operating. We have restricted those to acting under the direction and supervision of a physician or surgeon. They cannot act until a physician has referred a case to them.

Rumford: Does that mean that they could not have a place of their own?

Hassard: No. It does not mean that they would have to be in the same room as the physician. As a matter of fact, that is impracticable. They could have facilities anywhere as long as the work to be done is determined first by the physician.

Rumford: I think that is the crux of the whole fight here, but we failed to see in the bill where it has been included so far.

Hassard: The California association bill as passed in 1949 contained a section that those who were now practicing physical therapy could do so, but those who were licensed in the future would have to be referred by a physician.

Rumford: Is your group in agreement with this section that was deleted?

Hassard: Our point is that physical therapy is a fundamental type of treatment.

Rumford: Our question is, what to do with these people who are already licensed and practicing?

Hassard: If they are limiting their practice to massage there is no problem. We do not propose to prohibit the use of the term physical therapist.

Hawkins: What do you propose to do to restrict those who are now practicing who might be advertising misleadingly?

Hassard: I think existing laws are adequate to cover it if they were enforced. This committee has had some things before it in this line. The Legislature has enacted enough laws over the years to prohibit unqualified people from practicing. The enforcing of these laws has been difficult.

Hawkins: Where is enforcement at the present time?

Hassard: Enforcement is in the State Board of Medical Examiners, but it all has to go through the district attorneys in the different counties. This has been going on over a period of many years. Sometimes there will be an energetic district attorney, and many times not. It is not a question of more laws, it is a question of enforcing the ones there are.

Hawkins: The only question is with respect to referrals hereafter. There is no disagreement as to what we can do at the present time.

Hassard: There are more issues than just that, Mr. Hawkins. For example, the bill that Mr. Rumford was referring to sets up a new state board, and the California Medical Board feels that is unnecessary. We propose that such legislation as may be enacted to regulate physical therapy be under the Board of Medical Examiners, which also includes the Board of Osteopathic Examiners. We have had it before us session after session. We feel we have enough boards already.

Mr. Niel Sellers representing the California Physical Therapy Association stated as follows: "I have listened to all that has been said here today, and in summing it up, the first point I would like to make is that the members of the American Physical Therapy Association desire the title to be 'registered' instead of 'licensed.' Under the present law it would only give them a title, because 2392 definitely states that a doctor can even refer a patient to someone who is not licensed, and if we are breaking a law, the doctors are. We all need a law, and to let them work regularly it would have to be a licensing act and I don't think you can discriminate against the group and show them as registered physical therapists. And it would give discrimination against them. There are doctors in the State who do practice and prescribe physical therapy, and these people have been doing this for years. I think they should be allowed to do physical therapy under the law now. There is plenty of law now for them to work under.

"There is a great need for more schools in physical therapy. There are about 28 of the private schools today and the total number of students that can be taken in would be about 620. Physical medicine formerly was looked down on. It is one of the oldest forms of medicine there is. It is only in the last few years the need has been seen for it, and it is gradually becoming part of the schools. I noticed a clipping out of the paper which stated that there is a need for 15,000 physical therapists. That is not counting the doctor's offices and others that need hospitalization. We lack 40 or 50 of the necessary physical therapists in our state hospitals today, and we have many patients who need that work. If we could get enough physical therapists to fill our vacancies it would aid us very much in returning many of these people to their homes sooner. I have talked to doctors on this, medical doctors, and they can see no need for that type of qualification at the present time due to the extreme need of the physical therapists. And in the future, raise the standards up. We have gone along with the specifications set-up, and I can see no need at the present time for higher standards. The people out in the public do not desire to go to the doctor first, for they say it is two fees they have to pay. With the high standards set-up, I can't see how they can do anything wrong."

Connolly: You spoke about the shortage of the physio therapists. I still don't understand your point about the lack of physio therapists.

Sellers: The schools are not turning out enough, and under the present school situation it will be years before they could. In some schools they have an age requirement of 35 to 37 years, and a lot of the people feel they will put three years of college first. They feel like why not put in a little more time and be a doctor. I have been in the field of physical therapy for many years. I started out in the U. S. Navy right after the First World War.

Thompson: You have been doing physio therapy work at Agnew for some time, haven't you?

Sellers: I have been in charge of that since 1937. We have thousands of patients going through there Last year, about 6,000. Physical therapy, although it is the oldest form of physical medicine, has only been accepted in recent years. To a lot of people it is helping the man feel better. We know fatigue is not a disease. But if you want a good massage and it relieves you, it is very hard to distinguish in many cases whether you are treating a disease or not. A lot of the people are operating under the name physical therapist, but there are a lot of them who aren't.

J. Ed McClellan, attorney for the California Physical Therapists Association, stated: "There was a point brought out by Dr. Crow which I believe is quite an important point and we have stressed before on this, that the Legislature should begin somewhere to set a standard and take care of the future of this growing profession of physical therapy, not by setting up an ideal standard which will go in immediately, but so that when replacements come in future years, the public will be assured of adequate training. That is not provided for in the bill which Mr. Hassard represents. Mr. Hassard pointed that out himself. They do not prohibit the practice of physical therapy by untrained persons. We believe that the Legislature should set a standard—spell it out in legislation. That is not done in A. B. 555 which was introduced last year. It does not set up any educational standards but leaves it discretionary with the board to approve or disapprove schools. We do not think that is the proper approach. We have set up specific standards in our bill. We have also provided for a grandfather's clause which permits those now in to continue with reference to the new standards, but new ones must meet new standards, which is exactly what Dr. Crow proposed, and I believe should practice. Let us set up a standard by law and require those in the State to meet it. We cannot help it that those now in have not had the degree of training they should have, but let's set up a standard for the future which everyone will know, so the schools and pupils may know what standards they will have to meet in order to be able to receive a license later. In that respect, we believe our bill meets the problem, whereas the other does not.

"When Miss Parsons was talking, she referred to their very high standard. As a matter of fact, standards set up in our bill are not very different from the standards set up by the committee of the A. M. A. They require more class training than we require, but I believe the committee should learn there is a difference between a voluntary standard and a standard set up by statute. There should be a beginning minimum standard and a voluntary standard can be as high as the sky. We suggest what we believe is a reasonable standard of education. We believe it is high enough to start with, and we can go along with it for a good many years, but the standard we set up is specific. It is in the bill and compares very favorably with standards set up by A. M. A. for schools of physical therapy."

Following is a draft of the proposed bill prepared by the California Physical Therapy Association:

An act to add Chapter 5.6, comprising Sections 2600 to 2640, inclusive, to Division 2 of the Business and Professions Code, and to amend Section 11501 of the Government Code, relating to the practice of physical therapy, schools of physical therapy, and the registration of physical therapists, creating the Board of Physical Therapy Examiners and declaring the powers and duties of such board and prescribing penalties for violations thereof.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Chapter 5.6, comprising Sections 2600 and 2640, inclusive, is added to Division 2, of the Business and Professions Code, to read as follows:

2603. Any vacancy in the board may be filled by appointment by the Governor and, if the Senate is in session, confirmation by the Senate; provided, however, that if any such vacancy is not so filled within 60 days after its occurrence the remaining members of the board may fill such vacancy by majority vote.

2604. Before entering upon the duties of his office, each member of the board shall take the constitutional oath of office.

2605. The Governor shall have the power to remove any member of the board from office for neglect of any duty required by law or for incompetency or unprofessional or dishonorable conduct.

2606. Special meetings may be held at such times as the board may elect, or on the call of the president of the board or of any three members thereof. A written notice of the time, place and object of any special meeting shall be mailed by the executive secretary to all members of the board who are not parties to the call, at least 15 days before the day of the meeting. Four members of the board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at any meeting. It shall require the affirmative vote of four members of the board to carry any motion or resolution, to adopt any rule, or to authorize the issuance of any certificate provided for in this chapter.

2608. The board shall keep a record of all of its proceedings, including a register of all applicants for registration under this chapter and the action of the board upon each application.

2609. The office of the board shall be in the City of Sacramento. Branch offices may be established in Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Fresno and such records as may be necessary may be transferred temporarily to them. Legal proceedings against the board may be instituted in any county in which any of the four cities above mentioned is located.

2610. Each member of the board shall receive the sum of twenty dollars ($20) per diem for each day spent in the discharge of official duties. In addition, each member shall be reimbursed for his necessary travel and other expenses incurred in the performance of his official duties.

2611. There shall be a full time executive secretary appointed by the board from an appropriate civil service list and the board may employ, subject to law, such inspectors, special agents, investigators, clerical assistants and other employees as it may deem necessary to carry out its powers and duties; and, except as expressly otherwise provided in this chapter, the board shall be the appointing authority for all such positions. The executive secretary shall not be a member of the board but shall perform such duties as are delegated by the board and shall be responsible to it for the accomplishment of such duties. The salaries of the executive secretary and other employees employed by the board shall be as fixed by the rules and regulations of civil service for their appropriate classifications. Any employee shall be reimbursed for his necessary traveling and other expenses incurred in the performance of his official duties. The executive secretary shall give bond to the board in such sum with such sureties as the board may deem proper. He shall keep a record of the proceedings of the board, which shall at all times during business hours be open to the public for inspection. He shall keep a true and accurate account of all funds received and all expenditures incurred or authorized by the board.

2612. The board may from time to time adopt such rules and regulations consistent with general laws as may be necessary to enable it to carry into effect the provisions of this chapter.

2613. The procedure in all matters and proceedings under this chapter shall be governed by the provisions of Chapter 5 of Part 1 of Division 3 of Title 2 of the Government Code of the State of California.

2616. On or before the first day of January of each year the board shall transmit to the Governor a full and true report of all its receipts and disbursements.

Article 2. General Provisions

2617. The term "physical therapy" shall mean the treatment of any bodily or mental condition of any person by the use of the physical, chemical, and other properties of heat, light, water, electricity, iontophoresis, massage, and active, passive and resistive exercise. The use of roentgen rays and radium, for diagnostic and therapeutic purposes, and the use of electricity for surgical purposes, including cauterization, are not authorized under the term "physical therapy" as used herein

2618. "Physical therapist" or "physiotherapist" or "physical therapy technician" shall mean a person who practices physical therapy. For all purposes of this chapter the terms "physical therapy" and "physiotherapy" shall be deemed identical and interchangeable.

Article 3. Registration and Certification of Practitioners

2619. After the thirty-first day of October, 1952, no person not holding a certificate issued under this chapter shall practice physical therapy in this State for compensation received or expected; provided, however, that this prohibition shall not apply to any of the following:

(a) Physicians and surgeons, osteopaths, dentists, drugless practitioners, chiropractors, chiropodists and midwives licensed to practice as such under the laws of this State;

(b) The practice of physical therapy procedures by registered nurses when such practice is incidental to their conventional nursing duties and is performed under the direct orders and supervision of a person licensed in one of the healing arts;

(c) Any activities of nonregistered nurses permitted by Section 2731 of this code;

(d) Any activities authorized by their licenses on the part of any persons licensed under this code;

(e) Any persons employed by any agency, bureau or division of the government of the United States, while performing the duties of such employment;

(f) The demonstration of any physical therapy equipment by a salesman or merchant engaged in selling such equipment;

(g) The administration of massage, external baths or normal exercise without the use of electro-therapy equipment.

Mr. McClellan went on to state: "There is a dispute with the association I represent with respect to two things. One is whether or not the treatment of a patient with physical therapy involves diagnosis and whether or not they should be permitted to diagnose. I believe most of our people will say that because of its nature, physical therapy and its application does not involve diagosis. They do not tell a patient that the patient has cirrhosis of the liver or anything specific. As I understand it, they do not try to treat a specific disease so they do not have to identify it. If the mechanical processes of the body are kept in a free flowing operation, the body itself will take care of the disease. If they discover evidence of disease, they send the patient to a doctor because it is out of their realm. There is that thought strongly held that they are not dealing with disease. If they are doing a specific type of treatment, that comes from a doctor anyway. But, if a person comes in who is just tired, or for some other reason needs his muscles loosened up, that is not determining or treating a disease. The bill we propose does not condemn any reference to operating under the direction of a prescription or a physician. As a matter of fact, a very large proportion of the work done by the California Therapists Association is done by reference from doctors. There is no question of that. When you come to the subject of prescriptions by doctors, however, I believe that most doctors prescribe physical therapy in very general terms, and very few medical doctors can give a specific treatment for certain conditions or designate the length of time to operate a diathermy machine, etc. That is not in their training."

Thompson: Has physical therapy been defined in either bill?

McClellan: It has been defined in both bills and they are not very different, except that A. B 555 makes a distinction between registered and nonregistered physical therapists and performing physical therapy upon a patient under the instructions of a medical man, duly licensed by the Medical Board. We make no such distinction. I would like to point out another thing. Under the present law, if the laws were enforced, people who are practicing physical therapy beyond mere massage are practicing illegally. The present laws do not make any distinction between the registered and unregistered physical therapists, so, if the operations of the unregistered are illegal, so are the operations of the registered.

Connolly: That was as to diagnosis—not as to treatment.

McClellan: I wanted to make sure it was because it could have been interpreted more broadly. I wouldn't want any misunderstanding. Registration of physical therapy now is voluntary and is not covered by any law. We feel that there should be a law and those not meeting the standards should not be licensed; but persons now practicing should be licensed under a grandfather's clause. Then, as replacements come, the new standards will apply; and over a period of years we will get a body of physical therapists with exclusively highest training. There could still be voluntary considerations and restrictions. Hospitals could say they would only accept registered therapists from certified schools. Our bill would set up the minimum standards and they could have them as high as they please.

There is one other thing, and that is the matter of an independent board. Mr. Hassard says he feels the board is not necessary. If it is a matter of whether there are an excess number of boards or not, there are a great many who feel that there are. However, if they want it badly enough, the mere fact that there are many boards should not interfere with their having a board composed of trained physical therapists. Some physicians are highly trained physical therapists and many are not They depend on technicians. Many would not pass an examination and I doubt if the Medical Board could. It seems to me that the board responsible for giving examinations and determining what shall be in those examinations, determining who shall pass, and then administering the laws regulating the practice, should be made up of men trained in that field. They can be physicians and surgeons partly, but first, they must be physical therapists, and if they are, they do not need to be physicians and surgeons. That should be all required of them. Being physicians or surgeons would not qualify them. It seems to me there should be a separate board and it should be composed of physical therapists. I assure you the people I represent, those who have a lot of money invested, and the profession, need it very badly; so, unless there is a very strong reason against the board, I think that desire should be recognized by the Legislature.

Connolly: I can't get over this point of diagnosis somehow. Rosenthal's Bill (A. B. No. 1213) provided that nothing in this chapter shall be construed to provide that the person representing himself as a physical therapist is allowed to diagnose or prescribe in terms of treatment. In your bill that language is not there to that extent. Is there some point in your association's thinking that lacks this distinction?

McClellan: I think our association would be willing to adopt a provision that would prohibit them from diagnosing disease. I don't think they would in all happiness agree that they operate under physicians and surgeons, but I do believe they would accept a prohibition against diagnosis.

Connolly: If you had a provision that they work closely under physicians and surgeons, you wouldn't be getting at this massage situation, would you?

McClellan: No. No, it seems to me there should be a medium ground there upon which all people who are interested in the public health would meet. I believe if we could sit down together, we would work out a clause which would prohibit diagnosis of disease by people not trained for that. Quite frankly, we admit we do not propose to make physicians and surgeons out of our people. If our educational standards do not qualify them to diagnose disease, I believe that we could agree on a clause to protect against unqualified diagnosis and still let our people operate.

Following is the opinion rendered by the Office of the Legislative Counsel as requested by Assemblyman John F. Thompson, Chairman of the Interim Committee on Public Health:

Practice of Physical Therapy—No. 2156

DEAR MR. THOMPSON: You have asked us questions concerning the practice of physical therapy which are considered separately below.

QUESTION

Is there any existing law regulating the practice of physical therapy?

OPINION

Our search has revealed no existing law specifically regulating the practice of physical therapy.

ANALYSIS

The Business and Professions Code regulates the practice of medicine and surgery in this State and requires that all persons who practice in particular fields of medicine be licensed and be issued certificates defining and limiting the scope of their practice. The practice of physical therapy is not specifically defined nor specifically regulated by the Business and Professions Code, nor is there any provision for the licensing of physiotherapists in this State.

However, we have found no authority for distinguishing persons giving treatments known as physical therapy from other unlicensed persons, which would exempt them from the general regulation of medicine intended by the provisions of the Business and Professions Code.

We call your attention to Assembly Bills Nos. 1213, 555, and Senate Bill No. 277, which were introduced in the General Session of 1949, all relating to the practice of physical therapy and providing for the regulation, licensing, and disciplining of physiotherapists.

QUESTION

May any licensed physician "refer or direct" patients for physical therapy treatments to persons who are unlicensed to administer such treatments without violating Section 2392 of the Business and Professions Code?

OPINION

It is our opinion that a licensed physician who directs or refers patients to any person who performs any act as a treatment of the sick, and who is not licensed as provided by the Business and Professions Code to perform such acts, does so in violation of Section 2392 of said code.

ANALYSIS

Section 2392 of the Business and Professions Code reads as follows:

"2392. The employing, directly or indirectly, of any suspended or unlicensed practitioner in the practice of any system or mode of treating the sick or afflicted or the aiding or abetting of any unlicensed person to practice any system or mode of treating the sick or afflicted constitutes unprofessional conduct within the meaning of this chapter."

In construing this section, the courts have found no need for construction in order to bring any particular set of facts within its terms. Every person of common knowledge is held to know what "treating the sick or afflicted" means. The doing of any act, in accordance with "any system or mode" of treatment, would be within the terms of the definition. Howson v. Board of Medical Examiners, 128 Cal. App. 35.

The practice of physical therapy by its general definition is "the treatment of disease by physical and mechanical means, as by massage, regulated exercise, water, light, heat, electricity, etc.; also, the branch of medicine concerned with such treatment" (Webster's New International Dictionary, Second Edition).

Since by this general definition the practice of physical therapy is held to be "the treatment of disease," it is the practice of "any system or mode of treating the sick or afflicted" within the meaning of Section 2392 and is regulated thereby.

It is, therefore, our conclusion that a licensed physician who directs or refers patients to any person who performs any act as a treatment of the sick and who is not licensed as provided by the Business and Professions Code to perform such acts, is aiding and abetting an unlicensed person to practice a system or mode of treating the sick or afflicted which constitutes unprofessional conduct within the meaning of Section 2392.

In construing such regulatory statutes, courts have noted that such acts as may come within the definition of physical therapy, when performed as a mechanical art and not as a treatment of the sick, do not come within the regulation of such statutes Consideration has been given to the distinction between a mechanical art and a profession unless the statute clearly manifests other intent, since the courts will not presume that the Legislature intended more than necessity actually requires to interfere with the right of one to engage in a common and useful occupation for which he is qualified. Dvorine v. Castleberg Jewelry Corporation, 185 A. 562; Milling v. State (Texas) 150 S. W. 434, 435.

There is some authority for the proposition that where certain acts are done by unlicensed persons under the immediate supervision and direction of a licensed physician, such acts do not constitute the practice of a mode or system of treating the sick. Chalmers-Francis v. Nelson, 6 Cal. 2d 402.

QUESTION

You point out that Section 2146 of the Business and Professions Code provides that "nothing in this chapter shall be construed so as to discriminate against any particular school of medicine or surgery, or any other treatment" and suggest that physical therapy is covered by the words "any other treatment."

OPINION

We believe that physical therapy is included in the words "or any other treatment."

ANALYSIS

Section 2146 of the Business and Professions Code reads as follows:

"2146. Nothing in this chapter shall be construed so as to discriminate against any particular school of medicine or surgery, or any other treatment, nor shall it regulate, prohibit, or apply to any kind of treatment by prayer, nor interfere in any way with the practice of religion."

Where general words follow the enumeration of a particular class of persons or things, the general words will be construed as applicable only to persons or things of the same general nature or class as those enumerated, People v. McKean, 76 Cal. App. 114.

The words "any other treatment" are general words to cover all systems or modes of treatment of medicine or surgery, since they are preceded in the section by the terms "medicine or surgery."

Since physical therapy is a treatment and also a branch of medicine by definition, it is a like subject and may be included within the scope of the general words.

The fact that Chapter 5 regulating the practice of medicine nowhere specifically mentions nor specifically provides for the practice of physical therapy does not work a discrimination against the field of physical therapy. The Legislature cannot be expected to anticipate the founding of new systems of thought or methods of healing and specifically name and specifically regulate all fields.

Section 2192, as you point out, does not include in its required courses the subjects defined under physical therapy. However, we fail to see that this constitutes a discrimination. Section 2192, read with the title of Article 5 in which it is found, enumerates what each applicant for a physician's and surgeon's license shall show as evidence of professional instruction, according to a schedule set forth therein. This section does not purport to set forth all the subjects which a physician and surgeon may include in his practice.

The scope of a physician's and surgeon's practice is a wide one and is authorized by Section 2137, which reads as follows:

"2137. The physician's and surgeon's certificate authorizes the holders to use drugs or what are known as medical preparations in or upon human beings and to sever or penetrate the tissues of human beings and to use any and all other methods in the treatment of diseases, injuries, deformities, or other physical or mental conditions." (Emphasis added.)

This section, we believe, includes authorization to perform acts which constitute the treatment known as physical therapy.

Section 2141 of the Business and Professions Code in defining who is guilty of a misdemeanor does not prohibit the practice of, nor discriminate against any system or mode of treating the sick, but it does prohibit the practice of any system, mode, or treatment of the sick by a person who does not have, issued and valid at the time, any one of the certificates authorizing such treatment issued pursuant to the provisions of the Business and Professions Code.

Very truly yours,

RALPH N. KLEPS, Legislative Counsel

DOCTOR L. A. BRINKLEY

Los Angeles Meeting, November 17, 1950

Hearing of the Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health, regarding the Chiropractic Practices of Dr. L. A. Brinkley of Los Angeles

As a result of numerous complaints having been received by various law enforcement agencies, the State Board of Medical Examiners, State Board of Chiropractic Examiners, and the Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health, the services of William H. Young, a special investigator, were employed, and he was instructed to conduct an investigation of the activities of Dr. L. A. Brinkley of Los Angeles.

The complaints dealt with the reported unethical practices and unethical advertising of said Dr. Brinkley, D.C. The complaints came from various persons whom he had treated and from other chiropractors and doctors in the southern part of the State. The complaints are in the files of the Los Angeles City Health Officers, Board of Chiropractic Examiners, Attorney General's Office, Los Angeles Police Department's Bunco Squad, Better Business Bureau of Los Angeles, and the Board of Medical Examiners.

The first offense complained of by former patients was that Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C., his staff and technicians verbally guaranteed curing various diseases and ailments and advertised in such a manner, and subsequently failed to produce any cures—but did succeed in inducing the patients to take prolonged series of treatments which did nothing toward relieving their ailments, but did relieve them of their cash. The patients invariably complained of high pressure sales methods being used on them. Complaints number in the hundreds.

Following is the report by William H. Young, special investigator:

History and Background

Dr. Lynn Andrew Brinkley, D.C. holds license No. 6502 issued by the California State Board of Chiropractic Examiners, August 23, 1946. Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C. formerly operated in Huntington Park, California, where he is reported to have been associated with Viola Einer and Bernard D. Einer, both chiropractors at 6312 Seville Avenue.

The Brinkley treatment is advertised and commonly called the New Yorker Technique. Offices are located at 355 South Broadway, Los Angeles 13, California. Phone: Trinity 7031.

The New Yorker Technique was first owned and operated by John R. Osborne. Osborne operated under a Naturopathic license granted him from Battle Creek Sanitarium in 1900. On June 28, 1948, John R. Osborne was arrested in Los Angeles for five counts of violating Section 2141 of the Business and Professional Code—"Practicing of the Healing Arts without a License." Osborne subsequently pleaded guilty on one count. The others were dismissed. He was denied probation and fined $200. Osborne has prior convictions, one of which resulted in his imprisonment in Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary, January 31, 1927. This conviction resulted from his gigantic swindle on the sales and resales of the Valhalla Park Cemetery during 1924, 1925, and 1926 Osborne was also reportedly arrested later for bookmaking.

After Osborne's arrest at the New Yorker, Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C. appeared as the owner and operator of the place, and at inquiries by the Board of Chiropractic Examiners, proof was presented that Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C. is purchasing the New Yorker from John R. Osborne. This was handled by Brinkley's attorney named "Chesebro" reported to be the son of Los Angeles City Attorney.

During his operation of the clinic, Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C. and other New Yorker chiropractors were cited to appear before the Board of Chiropractic Examiners on at least two different occasions. There is no record of disposition of the Brinkley cases before the Board of Chiropractic Examiners.

Most recent action of the Board of Chiropractic Examiners is contained in the following letter dated July 6, 1950:

July 6, 1950

DR. W. W. PERCY, Secretary, State Board of Chiropractic Examiners, 1020 N Street, Sacramento 14, California

DEAR DR. PERCY: At the board of directors meeting in Oakland, May 25, 1950, among other matters that brought forth much discussion was that of Dr. Brinkley. Out of this discussion there was a motion by Dr. Harrod that the board of directors adopt a resolution petitioning the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners to take steps immediately to suspend the licenses of all individuals known or reasonably presumed to be aiding and abetting an unlicensed practitioner.

We trust this will have your usual good attention.

Cordially,

W. P. WILLIMOTT
Executive Secretary

Current Activities and Operations

The staff at Dr. Brinkley's establishment, 355 South Broadway, Los Angeles, is a large one consisting of 16 licensed chiropractors, over 100 technicians and his offices contain 43 private treatment rooms.

Dr. Brinkley advertises the following numbers treated:

1948	18,240 treatments
1949	30,000 treatments
1950 (January)	9,884 treatments
1950 (February)	15,122 treatments

Affidavits and statements from former employees and patients concur in the following modus operandi of his practice:

The patient, attracted to his office for a trial treatment at an advertised fee of $3 is given consultation and diagnosis, being put on a colonic table. One of the doctors does the examining and in his examination he always finds one of the following: an impacted colon, ptosis of the transverse, spastic descendancy, or an impacted sigmoid. The patient is then informed that this condition is the source of his trouble. The extent of the supposed condition is exaggerated to the patient who is then given a colonic treatment by one of the technicians who also outlines the series of six treatments for $95 The patient is also shown colored physiological charts and kinked colons and other things are pointed out as a prelude to setting him up to buy the first series of six treatments.

The second and third treatments are subsequently given, and at the time of the third treatment, the blood pressure of the patient is taken and diagnosed as being too high or too low. The patient is then sold a course of vitamins at a price of $40.50 to $42 50 as a supplement to the treatments. In July, 1950, a new vitamin course for $64 was originated.

The fourth and fifth treatments are merely super-saturations of the colon and the sixth treatment is different only in that the patient is told that he or she has made progress but that another series of six treatments is needed to thoroughly correct the condition. This method is continued until the patient quits.

Chiropractors and technicians are thoroughly instructed and attend classes and lectures on how to sell the patient treatments and vitamins. A bonus is given on a percentage basis to technicians who sell extra treatments and vitamins

Patients have been resold series of treatments whether they needed them or not and there are instances where the patient has bought 100 treatments or more.

Only variation in the series of six treatments is that before the first treatment, the patient is given a 10 ounce bag of barium meal to take 14 hours before the treatment so that the barium will be in the colon at the time the patient is examined behind a fluoroscope. The patient is usually diagnosed as having a ptosis colon or an impaction, a spasticity or enlarged liver or enlarged heart. This provides the sales point used to sell subsequent treatments.

Affidavits signed by chiropractors who formerly worked for Dr. Brinkley corroborate the above, as well as statements of former patients.

The financial arrangements under which the other chiropractors work for Brinkley consist of a flat salary per month, usually around $300 and one-half of one percent of the gross, which averages around $70,000 per month. Some days as much as $5,000 has been taken in. The chiropractors also get 50 cents on every bottle of Carter's Little Liver Pills which are sold for the sum of $4.50.

Some former employees state that John R. Osborne actually owns the clinic. Dr. Leo S. Calloway, D.C., states that John Osborne informed him that Brinkley was not satisfactory, that Brinkley received $500 per month and 1 percent of the gross, and that he, Osborne, had the place leased to Dr. Brinkley with a 30-day cancellation clause. (See affidavit of Dr. Leo S. Calloway, D.C.) It is rumored that a Mrs. Lucille Cummings, titled "office manager", is a partner of John Osborne in the venture.

ADVERTISING

Advertising of the Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C. New Yorker Technique with offices located at 355 South Broadway, Los Angeles 13, California, is promoted on a grand scale in which television, radio and the five principal newspapers are used.

A survey of the newspapers reveals that Dr. Brinkley advertises daily, using large display-type ads of from 30 to 60 inches. He probably comes in the 6,000 to 10,000-inch rate per six months which would be between $2.13 per inch to $2.98 per inch (lowest rates). This indicates approximately $27,000 per month in each of the five largest Los Angeles papers, a total of over $325,000.

Brinkley has used television advertising over KTLA, Channel 5, in a series of programs on consecutive Sundays.

Radio Station KRKD broadcast his program daily for a long period of time.

In his display ads, he alternates quotations by other doctors, and testimonials of patients. His ads are cleverly composed so that the average reader can easily compare a symptom in the ads as synonymous with one of his own. The advertised trial treatment for $3 is the "come-on" to get the patients in. Then the pressure salesmanship is used.

NOTE: (Brinkley has thousands of letters and testimonials from patients These letters and testimonials credit him with a wonderful treatment. Complaints number hundreds Commendations number thousands)

Brinkley's ads quote other chiropractors and doctors. They quote, in most instances, only a fragment of printed material of the person. In some quotes, it is not clear whether the quote refers to the New Yorker Technique or some totally irrelevant matter. In some instances the use of the quotation has been objected to by the person quoted.

Dr. L. A Brinkley, D.C., also publishes and distributes a 120-page booklet entitled "The True Cause of Disease." This booklet is distributed free and mailed to anyone on request. It contains articles by Dr. Charles A. Tyrrell, M.D., Alcinous B. Jamison, M D., Dr. J. H. Kellogg, M.D., and by Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C.

The booklet also contains testimonials that are far-reaching in descriptions, to wit:

"After 83 years of suffering a woman was 'suddenly' completely cured and resumed her 'very active' life."

"A woman dope addict was cured of a pint of worms. (Color and type not given as they were flushed away too fast). She also threw away all her drugs."

"Another person's stones dissolved!"

A 75-year-old man who suffered for 20 years can now do more work per day in addition to a "10-mile walk"

After only 30 days, a woman, age 73, gained 90 pounds in weight, and can now work all day.

A woman was able to put "my shoes and stockings on" after three years of going barefoot.

After two unsuccessful operations on a "nervous stomach" by M.D.'s, a woman was cured of this condition in nine days by Dr. Brinkley's enemas.

A woman passed enough gall-stones to fill a dump truck.

A woman who had insomnia and couldn't turn over in bed, can now sleep with anybody. "Nervousness disappeared like snow on an April roof."

Another passed "many gall-stones without missing a day's work."

All of these testimonials give full credit to Dr. Brinkley and the New Yorker treatment for all cures.

SUMMARY AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Investigations of Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C., his methods, operations and advertising, have been made by:

Chiropractic Board of Examiners, Earl Hall, Investigator.

Los Angeles Police Department, Bunco Squad, Detective L. B. Ruppers.

Medical Board of Examiners, Bydie S. Woodruff, Investigator.

State Department of Justice, Office of Attorney General, Howard S. Goldin, Deputy Attorney General.

Better Business Bureau, Los Angeles, Robert J. Bauer, General Manager.

Los Angeles Health Officer, George M. Uhl, M.D.

California Pure Food and Drugs, Mr. Duffy and Mr. Shliff.

Complaints emanating from former patients have reached the above offices and are on their files. Various investigations have been conducted and the findings of the above form a concrete pattern showing Dr. Brinkley's methods.

There is no violation of Section 10a, the Chiropractic Act of California. This section provides for the suspension of the license of any person who violates its provisions regarding advertising. As the section is written, there is no mention of anything prohibiting advertising except advertising to cure menstrual difficulties; to cure venereal diseases; to cure sexual diseases; lost manhood; sexual weakness or sexual disorders or any disease of the sex organs.

The wording of all of Dr. Brinkley's ads, summarized, state in effect that a clean intestinal tract is conducive to good health. The testimonials and quotations are blended into the ad for sensational effect and to appear as endorsements. The composition of the advertisements is misleading to the layman.

Section 17500 of the Business and Professions Code does not contain any prohibition against "sensational or fabulous" advertising.

Section 17500.1 Business and Professions Code precludes a state board or commission within the Department of Professional and Vocational Standards from enacting a rule or regulation restricting or prohibiting advertisement which does not violate the provisions of Section 17500 of the Business and Professions Code. Section 17500.1 repeals existing rules or regulations conflicting with said section.

Note: The above ruling was given by Howard S. Goldin, Deputy Attorney General, in a meeting with Dr. E. Paulsen, D.C., a member of the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners, April 28, 1950.

While rule number 311 of the Board of Chiropractic Examiners appears to prohibit "sensational or fabulous" advertising, this rule is invalidated by Section 17500.1 of the Business and Professions Code.

The Chiropractic Board cannot add additional advertising grounds for discipline than those enumerated in Section 10a of the Chiropractic Act, which prohibit advertising a cure for sexual disorders and diseases.

However, on page 80, under female disorder, in a chapter entitled "Disease and Its Causes," and continuing on pages 81, 82, 83, and 84, Dr. Brinkley states that the cause of failure of these sex glands may be gland paralysis. The gland paralysis may indirectly result from constipation. This would appear to be a violation of Section 10a of the Chiropractic Act. The apparent defense against charges of this violation would be the contention that the booklet is not advertising material or that it is educational material.

Recommendation: That this possible infraction be brought to the attention of the office of the Attorney General or other enforcement agency.

Code No. 1680, Page 38, Business and Professions Code. Unprofessional conduct is defined to be any of the following: * * * (2) The obtaining of any fee by fraud or misrepresentation, * * * (11) The making use of any advertising statements of a character tending to deceive or mislead the public, * * * (15) The employing or the making use of solicitors.

Code No. 2380, Page 69. All advertising of medical business which is intended or has a tendency to deceive the public or impose upon credulous or ignorant persons and so be harmful or injurious to public morals or safety constitutes unprofessional conduct within the meaning of this chapter.

It appears that misrepresentation is done by the advertising of Dr. Brinkley in the instance of quoting from the Munro book. Telegram July 21, 1950, from Bartholomew House denying permission to quote was given. (Robert J. Bauer, Los Angeles Better Business Bureau, has information of fraudulent use of quotes from Munro book and the telegram so stating.)

Brinkley has used quotations from the works of a De. McCoy. McCoy Publications deny permission. (Bauer, Los Angeles Better Business Bureau has denial of permission.)

Other quotations used in Dr. Brinkley's ads are only fragments of statements and do not include the entire thought. Brinkley also quotes a chiropractor from the East who is a convicted felon, (L. B. Ruppers, Los Angeles Police Department Bunco Squad has records). It appears that this type of advertising is misleading and deceptive to the public.

Recommendation: That these facts be brought to the attention of the proper authorities for further investigation.

The Chiropractic Act, Section 10, paragraph (a), has no provisions for the governing of any advertising except with reference to the aforementioned curing of malfunctions of sex organs and diseases of sex. It is recommended that a study of the Chiropractic Act be made by the committee to determine the feasibility of amending that portion regulating advertising to include restriction of amount, types of advertising, defining "fabulous and sensational" advertising and defining "educational" advertising as it appears in the Board of Chiropractic Examiners rules.

Section 5. The Chiropractic Act, could be studied to determine feasibility of an amendment to include a provision making it unlawful for any licensed chiropractor to aid and abet an unlicensed person in the practice of chiropractic.

Recommendation: That the Board of Chiropractic Examiners be given greater enforcement powers to govern and regulate the chiropractic practice.

Recommendation: That a hearing of the State Assembly Interim Committee on Public Health be held for the purpose of determining necessary legislation with regard to the above matters.

WITNESSES. POTENTIAL TESTIMONY

The following persons and their offices have files on the Dr. L A. Brinkley, D.C., practice and operations, complaints, and findings. They can be a great help to the Committee on Public Health with their testimony:

Earl Hall, Investigator for the Chiropractic Board of Examiners, Mirror Bldg., Los Angeles. Mr. Hall has received "hundreds" of complaints, has investigated, and has knowledge of the existing paper-lease or agreement between Osborne and Brinkley This agreement reportedly is on file with his office. Mr. Hall can also testify to other hearings on complaints of Dr. Brinkley and his citations before the board.

Dr. Joseph Molle, D.C, Vice President of the Chiropractic Board. He is suggested as a witness because he lives in Redlands, California, closer to Los Angeles than other officers of the board. Dr. Molle can testify to all activities of the Chiropractic Board with respect to citing Dr. Brinkley, the complaints, the attitude of the Board of Examiners, the restrictions on the Board of Examiners with respect to powers of regulating chiropractors, and recommendations for more powers for the Board of Examiners. He was suggested by Dr. Edward C. Poulsen, D.C., Santa Cruz, formerly President of the Board of Chiropractic Examiners. However, much aggressive action previously was instituted by Dr. Poulsen.

Willard W. Percy, D.C, Secretary, Board of Chiropractic Examiners, 1020 N Street, Sacramento 14, California. Same as above. Dr. Percy is probably better informed on past citations of Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C.

Bydie S. Woodruff, Investigator, State Medical Board of Examiners, Mirror Bldg., Los Angeles. Mr. Woodruff has a very complete file on this matter. He has conducted extensive investigations and investigated and filed the complaints on John R. Osborne for practicing the healing arts without a license, prior to Osborne transferring the business to Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C.

Detective L. B. Ruppers, L A.P.D., Bunco Squad. Has received many complaints. Has record of previous arrests of at least one of Dr. Brinkley's chiropractors used as advertising matter. Has other affidavits of complaining persons. Ruppers turned over some of Dr. Brinkley's B-12 vitamin tablets to Dr. Max Dunn.

Dr. Max Dunn. University of California, Westwood. Received B-12 tablets for analysis. No report has been returned as yet.

Robert J. Bauer, General Manager, L. A. Better Business Bureau, 742 So. Hill St., Los Angeles. Mr. Bauer has documentary evidence to show fraudulent advertising and unauthorized use of quotations. Bauer also has a tape recording of a complainant's statements regarding Brinkley's pressure-salesmanship and the treatments. A four-page printed "expose" of Brinkley's practice has been printed but not realesed yet by Mr. Bauer. This "expose" contains letters and telegrams from concerned parties regarding some of Dr. Brinkley's advertisement claims. Mr. Bauer has gathered data for at least one year and has much background material for testimony.

Dr. George M. Uhl, (M.D.), Los Angeles City Health Officer. Has received many complaints. In most instances the complaints have been forwarded to other offices.

Mr. Duffy and Mr. Shliff, Pure Food and Drugs, 708 State Bldg., Los Angeles. This office has conducted some investigation with regard to the vitamins sold by Dr. Brinkley. Particularly, they can testify to the terrific price of the vitamins sold by Dr. Brinkley's over what the normal retail price is, sometimes like 1,200 percent over the normal retail price.

Dr. Neal, L. A. County Health Officer, 808 No. Spring St., Los Angeles. Has received many complaints

G. P. Sitton, Quarantine Officer, Los Angeles. This officer has direct knowledge of a flagrant case of false diagnosis and treatment by Dr. Brinkley, reportedly the Montez case where a communicable disease was not diagnosed correctly with grave results.

The following were former employees of Dr L A. Brinkley, D.C., at 355 So Broadway, Los Angeles They can offer detailed testimony regarding the general practice at the New Yorker:

Dr. Leo S. Calloway, D. C. 3206 W. 8th St. Los Angeles, California. (See affidavit attached). Can testify to pressure-sales, routine diagnosis, treatments, financial arrangements, prima facie evidence of control or ownership by John R. Osborne.

Dr. Milton A. Musser, D.C., 1750 No. Kingsley Drive, Los Angeles, Calif. (See affidavit attached.) Musser may be practicing in Fresno at present. Can corroborate Dr. Calloway's testimony.

Dr. Dean L. Bosserman D.C., 1805 Cherokee, Los Angeles, California Reportedly quit working for Dr. Brinkley when he learned he was actually working for John R. Osborne. (July 13, 1949). Bosserman made this statement at Board of Chiropractic Examiners.

Mrs. Case, former New Yorker technician, now a student of physical therapy at U.S.C., Los Angeles. She is the wife of a Los Angeles Police Officer.

Viola R. Jordan, former employee, 1405 No. Coronado St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Other chiropractors who have worked for Dr. Brinkley's are:

Pettingill	Turner
Sockoloff	McDonald
Loftus	L. Paul
Brooks	Hayhurst
Lewis	Sassone

Full names and addresses are on file with Chiropractic Board of Examiners. In order to conceal the impending hearing, the undersigned did not request full data.

The committee may desire to also call the State Board of Equalization person who is competent to determine whether Brinkley has a retail sales license to permit selling of the vitamins and to check on whether Brinkley has met all necessities with respect to the Board of Equalization on retail sales. (The undersigned did not investigate this as it is understood that the Board of Equalization is at present conducting their own investigation.)

The following newspapers in Los Angeles carry numerous and huge display ads of Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C. They could testify to the quantity and cost of advertising.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA }

I, Dr. Leo S. Callaway, D.C., residing at 3206 West Eighth Street, Los Angeles, California, first being duly sworn, state that I make the following affidavit of my own free will and accord

I state that I am properly licensed as a doctor of chiropractic in the State of California, having practiced since 1940.

I further aver that upon seeing an advertisement in one of the Los Angeles newspapers L. S. C. on February 23, 1949, requesting that applicants apply at 355 South Broadway, Suite 216, Los Angeles, I answered this advertisement and discovered this to be the "New Yorker," at which time I was interviewed by Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C.

During this interview, Dr. Brinkley inquired as to my prerequisites and then stated: "You know this is an advertising office. Have you had any experience in an advertising office?" I stated "No." He said, "You are the type of man I am looking for, due to the fact you are a big man and well dressed. With your passing average of 91.33, state board, you should be able to sell and treat, but selling is all-important." He reiterated that it was an advertising office. He said, "These patients must be sold on their initial trip to this office. If once they come in, and are not sold a series of treatments, you could never get them back again."

He then explained the procedure he used to be that when a patient comes in for a trial treatment there is a consultation and diagnosis, costing $3. The patient is prepared for treatment and put on a colonic table, then the doctor goes in; and Dr. Brinkley advised that the doctor must find, upon palpating the colon, either an impacted colon, ptosis of the transverse, spastic descendancy, or an impact sigmoid. The patient is convinced at this time that the primary source of the physiological disfunction that exists is caused by the poisonous substance from retained material in the colon, as diagnosed to the patient by the attending doctor.

Dr. Brinkley then advised that the doctor excuses himself and the technician takes over from there and gives this colonic, at the same time informing the patient that six treatments will be $95. There is no mention of vitamins at this time.

I went to work February 24, 1949, and was placed with Dr. McDonald, a senior doctor at that time, for further instructions. Dr. McDonald would take me in to the patient, introduce me, and I would listen to the sales speal by Dr. McDonald, which was the same as to the first treatment Dr. Brinkley had told me.

Immediately after my employment, while watching and listening to Dr McDonald, it appeared the second treatment was a supersaturation of the colon On the third treatment the patient was advised, after taking the blood pressure, that the pressure was high or low—regardless of what was actually found. Also at that time it was recommended that the patient take a course of vitamins for a week in some cases, and up to four weeks in others, ranging in price not lower than $40 50 to $41.50. (These findings as to colon condition, blood pressure and recommendation of vitamins, was a standard procedure.) The doctor received instructions not to state the price of the vitamins, as the technicians would then take over the patient for a full hour, at which time she would have more time to convince the patient of the need for those vitamins.

From my observation, the fourth and fifth treatments were only ordinary supersaturations of the colon; but on the sixth treatment, as a matter of standard policy, the patient was told that he had made progress; that he was not completely well, and that he needed another series of treatments. The regular sales talk given to all patients at this time was that they had an initial investment of $95 for the first six treatments, plus the $40 50 or $41.50 for the vitamins, and that they owed it to themselves to take the additional treatments to thoroughly correct the condition.

Subsequently, during my employment at the New Yorker, until August 13, 1949, Dr. Brinkley would reinstruct and insist that each one of the practices mentioned above be followed, regardless of the patient's need or condition. These instructions were given practically every day, during a staff meeting, with all doctors present in Dr Brinkley's office.

When the patient was sold the second series of treatment, either on the second or third day of that series, they were put on a diet, preparatory to draining the gall bladder—with four ounces of olive oil and four ounces of lemon juice—and at that time they were instructed to pick up a special bile formula, ranging in price, ordinarily $7.50, and were convinced that that was necessary in order to bring about a condition of correctness to the liver.

The remaining three treatments were similar to those given in the first series, but on the sixth treatment the patient was again advised to purchase the vitamins, in the event they were out of any one vitamin, at the same cost.

This policy of reselling the series of treatments to the patient was made, regardless of whether the attending doctor actually believed the patient needed this treatment or this type of treatment, and was done under instruction from Dr. Brinkley.

The continued sales program was used on all patients and some patients have taken from one to as many as 100 treatments. No patient during my stay at this institution was ever discharged.

On the trial, or the first treatment of the series of six, the patient was given a 10-ounce bag of barium meal to be taken orally 14 hours before their appointment time, so that the emptying time of the stomach would provide for the presence of barium in the colon. When the treatment is given, the patient is put behind the fluoroscope and is told the various conditions that exist, and the doctor then outlines that condition on a sketch of the abdominal cavity, always showing the condition to be somewhat exaggerated that is, ptosis colon or an impaction, a spasticity, or enlarged liver or enlarged heart.

This exaggerated condition is then used as a salespoint at that time, or when the sixth treatment is given, wherein the barium meal and fluoroscope are again used. During the sixth treatment the patient is advised, regardless of the true facts, that they have improved as to whatever their condition may have been first diagnosed, or that slight improvement has been made. This is a standard instruction from Dr. Brinkley.

When I first went to work at the New Yorker, I did not know who owned the establishment. I was suspicious that Dr. Brinkley did not own it, as he had only passed the State Board in 1947, and I doubted if he had sufficient funds to operate the establishment.

Subsequently, Dr. McDonald advised me it was owned by John Osborne. John Osborne, from the time I went to work at this establishment, was present as advertising manager and we were instructed by Dr Brinkley never to call him Mr. Osborne, but to call him John. Brinkley did not explain to me the reason for this instruction, but I subsequently learned that Osborne had been in trouble with the State for practicing medicine without a license.

Shortly after the first of June, 1949, and during this month, Dr. Brinkley did not come to work, and during the first week in June, John Osborne called me into his office and said "Brinkley has let me down. He is not capable of running this office the way I want it run, and I can see that you are. Eventually I am going to cancel Brinkley out." I asked "What do you mean by that?" He said "I have this place leased to Brinkley with a 30-day cancellation clause I am paying him $500 a month, plus 1 percent of the total gross. I withheld the first three months of his commission. When he has the second three months commission coming, I pay him the first three months In other words, he always has three months' commission coming. If I close Brinkley out, I have to pay him that extra three months' commission, so as soon as he gets on his feet I am going to serve notice on him that I am closing him out and I am going to put you in charge." A few days after that he had some advertising printed, and told me from time to time that he was still going to make this change, but due to the investment in the advertising it was held up temporarily; but while Dr. Brinkley was off, he mentioned it more frequently, and also stated he wasn't going to let Dr. Brinkley down entirely, that he would put him on a pension—enough to cover his current expenses.

During the month of June, at various times, there were meetings held in John Osborne's office, at which various times Doctors L. Paul, Hayhurst, Sassons, Bosserman, and Pettingill were present, and John Osborne stated that the New Yorker might be placed in the hands of various other doctors by Osborne, and that Dr. Gallaway might be in charge at a later time, even though he was temporarily Chief of Staff in Dr. Brinkley's absence. During this period of time we had a staff meeting each day, at which time Mr. Osborne gave the same instructions as hereinbefore set forth, that Dr. Brinkley had given us in regard to sales talk, manner of treatment and operation, including the various guises used, as set forth above.

It is also pointed out that Mrs. Lucille Cummings, who has the title of Office Manager, employs, discharges and gives instruction to all technicians, trainees and operators. It is rumored that she is in partnership with John Osborne in this venture.

The Dierker Colonic Machines, the Battle Creek Health Builder, oscillator, violet ray lamp, Fisher Therm Short Wave machines, are some of the equipment in the establishment The fluoroscope machines were purchased from the Cutler Physicians Equipment Co., 926 Venice Boulevard. The Dierker machines, I believe, were purchased from the Dierker Company by John Osborne.

I further state that my employment started with a salary of $300 per month, plus one-half of 1 percent commission on total gross income of the New Yorker to be effective at the end of 60 days. Subsequently, during Dr. Brinkley's absence, my salary was increased to $400 a month, plus $300 a month basis plus the percentages mentioned I further state my addition commission was paid on a gross business of $70,000 per month by the New Yorker.

The doctors did not receive any percentage on the sale of the vitamins, but Osborne stated that he was going to have manufactured a substitution for Carter's Little Liver Pills, which would sell for $4.50 a bottle and on which the doctors would receive 50¢ commission per bottle. This was not in effect during my employment there and, further, the purpose of this medicine was to make the patient believe he was receiving laxative relief from the colonic treatments.

Also, on the sale of the vitamins, the technicians received 10 percent commission, in connection with a commission of $20 if the patient took a third series of treatments.

During my term of employment the following doctors were fired: Doctors Pettingill, Sockoloff, Loftus, Brooks, Lewis, Turner, McDonald, and Musser. Dr. Dean L. Bosserman and I resigned from this employment.

Also a Mrs. Case was discharged during this period of time. I believe her husband is on the Los Angeles Police Force. I believe she is going to U.S.C., taking a GI Physical Therapy course at the present time.

Being duly sworn, under oath I state that I have examined and read the within statement, consisting of four pages, and that the statements made and content herein contained are true.

I, Dr. Milton A Musser, D.C., residing at 1750 North Kingsley, Los Angeles, California, first being duly sworn, state that I make the following affidavit of my own free will and accord:

I state that I am a properly licensed Doctor of Chiropractic in the State of California, having practiced since December 5, 1936.

I further state that on or about June 23, 1949, in answer to an advertisement in one of the Los Angeles newspapers, I called at 355 South Broadway and found this to be the New Yorker, and was interviewed on that date by Dr. L. A. Brinkley.

During this interview I gave Dr. Brinkley my antecedent record and qualifications, and was hired immediately. Dr. Brinkley hired me and told me to accompany Dr. Paul when handling patients for the next two weeks, to keep my eyes open and learn his technique. He also told me to forget anything I had learned in Chiropractic College and to merely follow the pattern set by Dr. Paul. The next day Dr. Brinkley was absent. I understood he was ill at that time, and I then talked with John Osborne. John Osborne said "We have an organization here and I happen to be the advertising manager. It will be your first duty to go down to Fowler's Book Store and purchase the book entitled 'Man Alive, You Are Half Dead,' by Daniel C. Monroe, M.D."

I failed to buy the book and the next day Osborne told me to buy the book—that it was our bible and not to come to work without it. (This book sets forth the necessity of vitamins, colonic irrigation, and diet, concerning the health of the individual).

During my conversations with Osborne he told me that I would receive $300 per month and after a 60-day trial period, I would receive one-half of 1 percent commission on the gross income of the New Yorker, which would amount to about $300 to $400 a month. My employment only lasted for 10 days at this establishment.

During this time I was present during three meetings called by John Osborne, at which meetings Drs. Callaway, Brooks, McDonald, Bosserman, Hayhurst, Paul, and Sassome were present These meetings were presided over by John Osborne, who is not a D.C. We were instructed by Osborne that the procedure used was that when a patient came in for a trial treatment, it was to be a consultation and diagnosis costing $3. The patient was to be prepared for treatment and put on a colonic table, then a doctor went in and upon palpating the colon, he, the doctor attending, must find either an impacted caecum, ptosis of the transverse, spastic descendency, or impacted sigmoid. He said the patient was to be convinced at this time that the primary source of his trouble was caused by the poisonous substance from retained material in the colon, as diagnosed to the patient by the attending doctor

Osborne advised that immediately thereafter, the doctor was to excuse himself and the technician would take over then and give the colonic, at the time informing the patient that six treatments would cost $95, and no mention was to be made of the vitamins at this time.

He also instructed that the second treatment was a super-saturation of the colon, and that on the third treatment the patient was to be advised as to their blood pressure, that is, it was either high or low, regardless of what was actually found. Also, during the course of treatment he instructed us never to raise or lower the blood pressure more than three or five points at any one time, in making our report. (These findings as to the colon condition, blood pressure and course of vitamins was a standard procedure.) Also, on this third treatment it was to be recommended that the patient take a course of vitamins We were instructed that the doctors were not to state the price of vitamins, as the technicians would then take over the patient for a full hour, at which time she would have more time to convince the petient of the need for them.

We were instructed that the fourth and fifth treatments were ordinary super-saturations of the colon, but on the sixth treatment, as a matter of standard policy, we were instructed to tell the patient that he or she had made some progress, that he or she was not completely well, and needed another series of treatments. Also, we were instructed at this time to advise the patients they had an initial investment of $95 for the six treatments, plus the cost of the vitamins, and that they owed it to themselves to take the additional treatments to thoroughly cure heir condition.

Also, during the trial or first and on the sixth treatment, we were instructed by John Osborne that the patient was to be given a 10 oz. of barium meal to be taken orally 14 hours before their appointment time and when the first treatment was given, the patient was to be put behind the fluoroscope and was to be told that various conditions existed, and that the doctor was to outline such findings by using a sketch of the abdominal cavity; that the doctor was always to show the condition more aggravated than it actually existed, that is, a ptsosis colon, spasticity, an impaction, enlarged liver or enlarged heart We were instructed this exaggerated condition was to be used as a selling point during the trial or first treatment and, further, when the sixth treatment was given we were instructed to advise the patient regardless of the true facts, that they had improved or that a slight improvement was made. This was particularly used to sell a second series of treatments.

I further state that I did not know who owned the New Yorker when I first went there to work but it was commonly rumored that it was owned by John Osborne, and I so understood this to be the fact from the various instructions that he gave the doctors.

I also state that when accompanying Dr. Paul during his treatment of patients during my short employment, that the practices described herein were used.

I further aver that at no time during my employment did I hear or know of any patient being finally discharged from the treatment given at this establishment.

I also state that Mrs. Lucille Cummings, who had the title of office manager, employed, discharged and gave instructions to all technicians, trainees and operators, further it was rumored that she was in partnership with John Osborne in this venture.

Also, John Osborne mentioned the fact that he intended to have a substitute manufactured for Carter's Little Liver Pills, which would sell for $4.50 a bottle. The doctors were to receive a 50 cents commission per bottle when they sold them to the patient. This was not in effect during my employment, and I further state that the purpose of this medicine was to make the patient believe that he was receiving laxative relief from the colonic treatments.

Also, on the sale of vitamins, the technicians received a 10 percent commission in connection with a commission of $20, if the patient took a third series of treatments.

Being duly sworn, under oath I state that I have examined and read the within statement, consisting of three pages, and that the statements made and content herein contained are true.

Q. Where do you live?
A. 6 Marguerite, Alhambra.
Q. Do you have a telephone there, sir?
A. Yes, AT lantic 22610.
Q. Did you ever have the occasion to go to 355 So. Broadway to the offices of one L. A Brinkley?
A. Yes.
Q. When was your first visit there?
A. On the third of June.
Q. What was your purpose for going there?
A. To see if I could get some relief from gas pressure.
Q. On your first visit there, who did you talk to?
A. This Dr. Petrene (indicating).
Q. Would you state in substance your conversation with Dr. Petrene?
A. Well, I went there. He gimme a checkup and said right away that he thought he could do something for me and he gave me that trial treatment which was supposed to cost $3.

Q Was that the total conversation that you had with him at this time?

A. Well, he took me into this here room. I guess you call it a fluoroscope. Anyway, he said I had a large heart and a large liver.

Q. Anything else?

A. Well, that—let's see—how was it he brought that in. He said you know—he says, "This trial treatment will cost you $3. $95 is what the fee would be and $50 down. I told him I could not give him no money until I come again. Then I went back on Monday morning

Q. You went back on Monday morning.

A. They washed out my—colonic treatments. Yes, I think I had Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Wednesday I could hardly get home Then they took me on Thursday and gave me another treatment and I was lucky to get home. Then Mrs. Simmons, my landlady, said, "You had better not take any more of those treatments." Then I started trying to do myself up and I have not been back there since. I think it was on Thursday, no I guess it was on Wednesday I made arrangements to pay the balance.

Q. When you say Wednesday, what was the date?

A. It was the seventh, or the seventh or the eighth. I would not say positive I have not eaten anything, only this apple juice. What put me next to them he said he was going to change my diet. That was on Thursday. He went calling off the different vitamins that I was supposed to take. $30 and the government tax. I said, "Now, doctor, you know I told you I was on pension. I cannot pay any money like that." Which I told him in the first place. So then he went on out and said to the nurse that she could explain to me. I don't know what about. But I was through right then.

Q. You keep referring to a card here from L. A. Brinkley, D.C. and Ph.C., at the top of which it has appointment time No. 1, Technician Alexander and immediately below that the name Petrene, indicated as doctor on the card. It seems to be a diet. Is this the diet that Dr. Petrene told you to follow at the time of his interview?

A. Yes.

Q. You followed that diet?

A. Yes, I didn't do anything that I done before that would interfere with his instructions.

Q. You also handed me three bits of paper that appear to be receipts?

A. Yes.

Q. The first one, dated 6-3-50, for the amount of $3 It has trial treatment written on it and the initials "J. O." appear on the bottom. Do you know who this J. O. is?

A. I don't know, unless it would be the lady at the desk.

Q. To whom was this $3 given?

A. To a lady there that gave out the receipt.

Q. It was given on the third of June?

A. Yes.

Q. The second receipt, dated June 3, for the amount of $7, initials "J. O." That was given on the same date and to the same person?

A. Yes.

Q. Appearing on the lower left hand corner there appears to be a balance of $88. Did you subscribe to the full treatment, the total of which was $95?

A. Yes.

Q. The third receipt, dated June 5, for the amount of $43, appears to have initials "E N." in the lower right hand corner. It shows a balance due of $45. Was that given by you to the lady on the desk?

A. Yes, to the lady at the desk. Whoever made the receipt.

Q. You don't know who the initials "E. N." stand for?

A. No.

Q That is the total amount of money that you have paid to L. A. Brinkley, Doctors' Offices.

A. Yes.

Q. At present, you owe them $45 for the completion of the treatments?

A. Yes.

Q. How many treatments did you take, Mr. Herr?

A. I think I took four, beside the trial treatment.

Q. After these treatments did you notice any benefits or ill effects from the treatments?

A. Ill effects because I could not keep anything on my stomach at all. I tried to build myself up so I could go down and see them. Then I got to thinking that it was a gyp game and I would go and take it up with the authorities that should know about it.

Q. You have stated to me that you could hardly get home on a couple of those occasions. Would you be more explicit?

A. It was on Wednesday and on Thursday. On Thursday was when ——

Q. What happened on Wednesday first?

A. I took a bus and came home, got off at Electric. And walked down to the end of the street, the intersection. When I got in the middle of the road I felt nauseated and put my hand over my mouth to keep from throwing up until I got off the street. When I went to the corner of the building there and I emptied myself out. I got into the house and lay down then and the Mrs. says to me, "I am afraid them treatments are too much for you."

Q. You went back to Mr. Brinkley's on Thursday?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you describe what happened?

A. I was just so weak I could hardly make it.

Q. You were not nauseated, but just extremely weak?

A. Until 9 o'clock that night and then I got sick again. Then I really made up my mind to take no more of them treatments.

Q. On Thursday, the eighth of June, was your last visit to Dr. Brinkley's?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you been to any other doctor since the eighth, Mr. Herr?

A. No.

Q. Had you been to any doctor, prior to going to Mr. Brinkley's?

A. No.

Q. This Dr. Petrene endeavored to sell you some vitamin pills, is that correct?

A. Yes, he was going to change my diet.

Q. Did he make a statement to the effect that vitamins were a part of the treatment, in conjunction with the colonics?

A. I don't know how to answer that. Let's see, that day I was on the table there. They were giving me colonics and he said, "I am going to change your diet." He named off several vitamins. Then he mentioned liver pills. And I says to him, "Doctor, how much is that going to cost me?" He enumerated them. He said they would come to $38 and the government tax. I told you, "You know I told you I was on a pension and I can not pay no money like that."

Q. Did you ever have any contact with anybody up there, other than Dr. Petrene?

A. No.

Q. Did you have any conversation with anybody else?

A. No.

Q. Did you meet anybody named Johnson?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see anyone around with one arm, a heavy set fellow?

A. I don't think so.

Q. This technician listed here on the diet card and whose name also appears on the receipts. did you have any conversation?

A. No, only in regard to the balance I was to pay.

Q. Was it a Miss or Mr. Alexander?

A. A lady who made out the receipts.

Q. Was her title ever told to you, such as nurse or doctor?

A. No.

Q. Has Dr. Brinkley's offices ever billed you or dunned you for the balance due to them?

A. No, I have not been back since. I had Mrs Simmons call up and say I would not be down there on the 9th. They have not called up. As quick as I was able to come down I went to look up wherever was the right place for me to come.

Q. What had been your general health condition, prior to your visit to Dr. Brinkley's?

A. Good, outside of the gas pressure that I had had.

Q. In other words, you felt strong. Your only reason for going to Mr. Brinkley's originally was for the gas condition.

A. Yes.

Q. After taking the trial treatment and four other treatments, what was your general health condition immediately thereafter?

A. I would say it was pretty bad when you cannot navigate.

Q. Please describe it?

A. It knocked the props out from under me.

Q. In what way were you weak, nauseated, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. How long was it after the treatments that you became normal again?

A. It was a week.

Q. By a week, you mean until around the 15th of June?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything that you would like to tell us now that I have forgotten to ask that you would like to add?

A. Well, only that I talked to that desk sergeant the day I came in, the first day I felt like coming down. He advised me to wait until Mr. Ruppers came back from Chicago. I took his advice. I have not been back to Brinkley's since.

Q. In the event that the district attorney feels that we have sufficient evidence for a complaint to be issued would you be willing to testify in court?

A. I sure would.

(Signed) E. D. HERR

After the committee had reviewed this report by Mr. Young, it employed the services of Spencer E. Van Dyke, an attorney in Los Angeles, and all of the information gathered in the above report together with other information obtained by the committee was given to Mr. Van Dyke, with instructions to prepare the case and subpena witnesses to testify at this meeting.

In questioning the representatives of the various Los Angeles newspapers it was found that Dr. Brinkley had expended the following amounts of moneys to the following newspapers, from January 1st to November 15th, 1950:

[1] Los Angeles Times	$86,235.08
[2] Los Angeles Herald Express	73,550.21
[3] Los Angeles Daily News	37,025.42
[4] Los Angeles Mirror	44,214.70
[5] Los Angeles Examiner	84,184 54
Total	$325,209 95

[5] Exhibit 17.

Mr. Robert J. Bauer, General Manager of the Better Business Bureau of Los Angeles, was called to testify as to the complaints his office had received against Dr. L. A. Brinkley and the New Yorker Technique. He stated that his office had received scores of complaints against Dr. Brinkley by telephone, letters, and by people personally, and testified that because of these complaints an investigation was made by his office, and his report was compiled in the following manner:

BRINKLEY ADVERTISING FALSE!

Advertising of L. A. Brinkley, D.C. is detrimental to public interest; is false and misleading; tends to destroy public confidence in advertising and is unfair to legitimate advertisers of health services. Advices to this effect have been submitted to newspapers and radio stations by the B. B. B. with the recommendation that Brinkley's advertising privileges be withdrawn.

Currently Brinkley is the largest chiropractic advertiser in Los Angeles. During the week ended July 16, 1950, his advertising occupied more than 1,500 column inches in five Los Angeles metropolitan newspapers and is estimated to have cost $8,700. In addition, he used radio and TV. Continued at the present rate, Brinkley's annual advertising bill will be more than a half million dollars.

Contrary to the claims and implications in the advertisements of L. A. Brinkley, D.C.

1. Rheumatism is not caused by constipation, auto intoxication, or toxemia.

2. Appendicitis is not caused by these things.

3. Neither is gall bladder trouble, high and low blood pressure, kidney and bladder complications, liver disorders, or "practically all the ills of mankind."

4. Residents of Los Angeles are not fortunate in having an office that practices methods formerly used by John R. Osborne and known as The New Yorker Technique.

5. Residents of Los Angeles are not fortunate in having an office that practices the methods of Dr. Charles A. Tyrell.

6. Dr. William Frederick Koch is not recognized as one of the world's greatest cancer specialists.

7. Daniel Colin Munro, M.D., is not associated with L. A. Brinkley, D.C., and Brinkley has received no authorization to quote his book.

8. The Brinkley method of treatment is not "inexpensive."

9. The $3 price advertised for the trial treatment is not typical of the Brinkley charges of $95 for six colonics.

10. The M.D.'s quoted by Brinkley are not employed by him.

11. There is not one licensed medical doctor on the "staff of 16 licensed doctors (all specialists)" mentioned in some of his copy.

The Brinkley type of claim that "practically all the ills of mankind * * *"—starting with acne, anemia, appendicitis, asthma and on through the alphabet to rupture, rectal troubles, rheumatism, stomach trouble, tonsilitis, torpid liver, tuberculosis and vericose veins, to mention a few—"are caused by constipation" is not new but has been thoroughly discredited.

A few years ago such claims appeared in the advertising of a firm which was marketing a colonic device known as the Gordon Detoxifier. In issuing an order restraining the firm from further false advertising, the Federal Trade Commission formally found in part that "statements that appendicitis, asthma, colitis, constipation, excessive fatigue, foul breath, headache, gall bladder complications, high and low blood pressure, indigestion, irregular heart, kidney and bladder complications, liver complications, lumbago, menopause disturbances, muddy or pimply complexion, migraine, nervousness, pruritus ani, rheumatism, sinus trouble, run-down condition, shortness of breath, sleeplessness, ulcers of the stomach and bowels, and ulcerative colitis are almost invariably caused by intestinal toxemia, are erroneous and misleading Essentially these statements are based upon the theory of auto-intoxication, which is now rejected by the consensus of medical and scientific opinion."

The so-called Brinkley course of treatments consists of six colonics, and does not constitute an effective treatment against any of the conditions mentioned except constipation and possibly headaches due to constipation, any more than did treatments wherein the Gordon Detoxifier was used. Brinkley's office does not use that machine, but there is no primary difference between it and the machines his office does use.

In our opinion the primary findings of fact by the F. T. C in ordering the false advertising of the Gordon Detoxifier to stop, clearly disclose the falsity of the Brinkley claims. These findings were that the consensus of medical and scientific opinion rejects the theory of auto-intoxication and, hence, that statements to the effect that appendicitis, asthma, rheumatism, etc., are almost invariably caused by intestinal toxemia, are erroneous and misleading.

Brinkley's immediate predecessor in the use of cure-all colonic claims was John R. Osborne, who advertised in Los Angeles newspapers under the name "The New Yorker." Osborne was located where Brinkley is now located, 355 South Broadway. His price for a trial treatment was $3, as is Brinkley's. His price for a course of six colonics was $95, as is Brinkley's. He advocated colonics as a cure-all, as does Brinkley. Osborne wasn't a chiropractor, as is Brinkley.

The New Yorker

Osborne's advertising over the signature of The New Yorker appeared in Los Angeles newspapers late in 1946, 1947 and up until his arrest on charges of violation of the Medical Practices Act in the summer of 1948. The size of the advertisements increased after he had been advertising a while. The advertising included "treatises" on such subjects as Gallstones, Ulcers, Constipation, Diabetes, Kidney Stones, Bladder, Asthma, etc. These advertisements quoted many of the same so-called authorities who have since been quoted in the Brinkley advertisements. The New Yorker also employed a technique since used by Brinkley, namely, of lifting whole paragraphs from copyrighted books, without first troubling to get permission from the copyright owners Investigation has disclosed that one day the treatise would be a verbatim copy from pages 82, 83, and 84 of the 1926 edition of "The Fast Way to Health," by Dr. Frank McCoy, D C. The next day it would be from pages 35 and 36, and a couple of days later from pages 118 and 119 of the same book. McCoy Publications, owner of this copyrighted material, has advised us that no permission to use the material was granted to either Osborne or Brinkley and that they have objected to this misuse of the copyrighted material.

Osborne Arrested

On June 28, 1948, John R. Osborne, 56, was arrested on six counts of practicing medicine without a license. At that time he was identified as a former federal prisoner who received a 10-year sentence and a $12,000 fine for using the mails in a scheme to defraud in connection with the promotion of Valhalla Memorial Park. He was released after serving about four years on the death fraud In 1938 he was involved in a numbers racket, and the next year admittedly became the operator of "the largest bookie joint west of Chicago."

His arrest in the summer of 1948 on the medical charges proved to be only a minor interlude. Before the summer was over, he plead guilty on one count, paid a fine of $200,000, and that was it. Newspaper stories said he had admitted to probation officers that he had given 30,000 treatments and that he owed more than $40,000 in back taxes to federal and state governments, repaying them at the rate of $450 monthly. Within days, after Osborne's fine was paid, the New York Technique was being advertised at the same old stand, in the same old way, but now over the signature of Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C. Osborne no longer appeared as principal, but only as advertising manager.

Brinkley 1946 Grad

Brinkley, the new advertiser, had graduated from the College of Chiropractic June 7, 1946, and received his state license August 23, 1946, approximately two years before becoming the titular head of the New Yorker Technique colonics irrigation institution which now bears his name.

Died 32 Years Ago

Sometimes Brinkley's advertising states "Residents of Los Angeles are fortunate in having an office that practices the methods of Dr. Charles A. Tyrrell." Actually, the opposite is true. We dislike digging up skeletons, but that is figuratively necessary in the case of Tyrrell because he has been dead for 32 years. Brinkley advertising refers to Tyrrell as "of national fame" and sometimes as "the world's greatest advocate of this method." Before he died the A. M. A. exposed him as a quack. When Brinkley quotes him in his advertisements, he is likely using statements issued by Tyrrell when many, many years ago he was peddling the J.B.L. (Joy, Beauty, Life) Cascade, for the self-administration of rectal enemas. Born in 1843, Tyrrell received a diploma from the Eclectic Medical College, New York, in 1900, at the age of 57. Soon, he claimed to have originated a theory of "Disease and its causes." Here it is: "There is only one disease, but with many manifestations. There is only one cause for disease and that is auto-intoxication." A pamphlet on mechnical nostrums by the American Medical Association many years ago, in discussing Tyrrell, said: "Whether the theory was devised as a convenient accessory to his exploitations of the Cascade and the patent medicine that goes with it, or whether it is merely an indication of stupendous ignorance, makes little difference; it is bizarre and fantastic to the point of silliness."

A typical Brinkley ad says: "Dr. Tyrrell declares: 'There is only one cause for disease.' This may sound strange, for the majority of people imagine that there is a different and specific cause for every ailment, and physicians generally do not * * *"

Tyrrell claimed that the "J.B.L. Cascade" was invented by him. The records of the patent office at Washington show that the device was invented and patented by one H. M. Guild who assigned the patent to the Tyrrell concern.

Tyrrell was also president of the concern that peddled the "Ideal Sight Restorer" as a cure for most eye ills. Advertisements for it said: "Cures not only the refractory errors of the eye—near sight, far sight, old sight and astigmatism—but also such dreaded diseases as cataracts, glaucoma, cross-eye and paralytic blindness." It was a piece of tubing with a rubber bulb attached, for the purpose of producing a partial vacuum over the eyeballs. Dr. Tyrrell's advertising, like Dr. Brinkley's, included testimonials. An A M. A. pamphlet tells about one of Tyrrell's Cascade testimonials, from one Reverend Walter W. Kent, Cincinnati, "Chaplain First Ohio Infantry U. S. V. R. and also ex-President Mt. Lookout Businessmen's Club." Reverend Kent's "testamonial" (spelling original) said, in part: "I often suffered with nervous headaches from brain fag, like most literary people and thinkers do."

Tyrrell is the man Brinkley says is the "world's greatest advocate" of his (Brinkley's) methods; obviously a great authority.

Brinkley's advertising repeatedly quotes Dr. William Frederick Koch and describes him as "one of the world's greatest cancer specialists." Time Magazine ran this story about him September 6, 1948:

"THE KOCH METHOD

"Dr. William Frederick Koch pronounces his name to rhyme with joke. His patients have found very little to laugh at in his practice—which is bluntly described by the Journal of the American Medical Association as 'Koch's cancer quackery'—though the families of his patients have often seen the point, too late. For years the Federal Food and Drug Administration has had a suspicious eye on Dr. Koch. But last week he was still doing business at the same old stand: his Koch Foundation, an old brownstone house on Detroit's East Jackson Street. And Dr. Koch's business was still brisk (about $100,000 a year).

"Ever since 1919, a year after his graduation from a reputable medical school, Dr. Koch has been peddling 'cancer cures' (Time, December 10, 1934; April 20, 1942). In 1942 he and his office manager brother Louis were indicted for introducing a misbranded article into interstate commerce. The jury disagreed. The second trial, in 1946, ended when a juror became ill

"For $25 (sometimes a bargain rate of $15), testimony showed, Dr. Koch sells a two-cubic-centimeter ampoule of a drug he calls 'glyoxylide.' Until the law began reading them, the labels promised cures for 'cancer, allergy, and infection.' Food and Drug accuses him of claiming to cure 'practically all human ills, including—tuberculosis.' Glyoxylide, according to Dr. Koch, is the 'internal anahydrides' of glyoxylic acid. Chemists know all about glyoxylic acid, but they never heard of anybody having isolated its internal anhydride. Food and Drug Attorney William W. Goodrich said government chemists could find nothing in it but distilled water, called it a 'formula for nothing.' The government's parade of witnesses gave some shocking testimony. They had, they said, followed Dr. Koch's instructions in treating cancer patients: first a 'detoxicating regime' of enemas and a diet of fresh apple and vegetable juices, then injections of glyoxylide. Koch insisted that no other drugs be used except 'the smallest amount of morphine by mouth only.' Many of the victims might have died anyway, but his instructions denied them even enough morphine to ease their pain. An osteopath told of trying the Koch treatment on five cancer patients (including his wife); all died.

"Last fortnight the federal court was asked to nol-pros the case. Koch, the petition said, has changed the labels on his drugs; they no longer claim a cure for anything. The Food and Drug Administration will continue to keep a suspicious eye on Dr. Koch. But interfering with his $100,000 business will not be easy; Koch is, says Lawyer Goodrich, 'probably the smartest, brightest quack in the U. S.' "

Frequently Brinkley copy has this paragraph: Dr. F. E. Chidester, A.M. PH.D., says: "Two of the most distinguished cancer experts in the world (one British and the other American) have furnished evidence that not only rectal cancer but breast has been cured in hundreds of cases by relieving Intestinal Stasis."

Who is this Chidester? Some years ago the Bureau of Investigation, American Medical Association, wrote: "F. E. Chidester of Toronto is a Master of Arts and a Doctor of Philosophy, but not, so far as our records show, a Doctor of Medicine. Some of his writings include statements which do not have adequate scientific background, in the opinion of this bureau. For example, in his article in Liberty for September 9, 1939, 'Science Fights Cancer With Diet,' he recommends substituting sea salt (dulse, seaweed) for iodized salt, and lists 'occasional sea salt' and 'appropriate amounts of sea food' under the heading 'These Things Help to Prevent the Onset of Cancer'."

Chidester also wrote a book on "Nutrition and Glands in Relation to Cancer," which was mentioned in the advertising of a firm selling patent medicine.

Brinkley's advertising frequently contains the following statement: "Dr. Alcinous B Jamison, M.D, noted intestinal specialist, says: 'Twenty years as a specialist in diseases of the lower bowels have demonstrated to the writer that chronic inflammation, and often ulceration of the rectum and sigmoid flexure, in 29 cases out of 100, are the causes of chronic constipation and the long army of ills resulting from it!' "

Actually, Jamison does not "say" anything. He has been dead for 12 years. During his lifetime he appears to have written literature which was put out by at least two concerns selling rectal enemas, and he wrote a book called "Intestinal Ills" which was issued by the Tyrrell Hygienic Institute, another business of Dr. Charles A. Tyrrell, referred to before. About the same time, another concern in the same line of business, calling itself the Eager Colon Cleanser Company, issued an advertising brochure puffing its enema and entitled "Dr. A. B. Jamison's 16 Reasons Why the Internal Bath."

While we haven't found the article from which the Jamison quotation used by Brinkley was taken, it seems likely that it may be from some of the early advertising of Tyrrell or the Eager Colon people.

Daniel C. Munro, M.D., has been quoted in advertisement after advertisement by both Brinkley and Osborne as saying: Daniel C. Munro, M.D., says: "If I were to write the story of all the cases in which my method seemed to lift the patient from the very jaws of death it would fill volumes."

This is almost a verbatim quotation from page 161 of the book "Man Alive, You're Half Dead," written by Daniel Colin Munro, M.D., and copyrighted by Bartholomew House, Inc. Actually, Brinkley has substituted "my method" for the words "enemas and colonic irrigations." The point is, however, that Bartholomew House, Inc., has wired this bureau: "L. A. Brinkley has no authorization to quote Munro book 'Man Alive, You're Half Dead.' Would appreciate your stopping unauthorized use of copyrighted material." It is also pertinent to note that in other places in Dr. Munro's book he recommends that you consult a physician; Dr. Brinkley is not one and, as far as we know, his establishment has none.

Brinkley advertising repeatedly contains the statement: Dr. Kellogg, M.D., of Battle Creek Sanitarium fame, says: "That these measures are successful has been demonstrated by the experience of the Battle Creek Sanitarium where they have been systematically employed in the treatment of more than one hundred thousand invalids."

Actually, Dr. Kellogg is dead. He doesn't say anything, and never commented upon Brinkley's methods as he was dead before Brinkley became a chiropractor.

Not Inexpensive

The opinion of patients who have filed complaints with the Better Business Bureau is at variance with Brinkley's claim that his treatments are inexpensive The patients don't think that $95 for six colonics is very cheap. But that isn't the end. After the patient has had three or four colonics an attempt is made to sell him vitamins for $21 to $40. When the course of six treatments has been completed, attempt is made to sell another course

It is hard to believe, but some patients have paid literally hundreds of dollars for treatments at the Brinkley institution. One man reported to the bureau he had paid a total of $885; one paid $250; another $380; $838.69; etc

Commission Basis

Disgruntled former employees of the establishment, both chiropractors and those serving as nurses, have voluntarily come to the bureau and supplied sworn statements, regarding the high pressure sales methods employed in the establishment. The chiropractors swore that they were paid on a salary plus commission basis. The nurses said they were paid a salary plus commission; no commission on the sale of the first course of treatments, but 20 percent on the sale of vitamins and 20 percent for resale on the $95 course of colonics. In addition to these sworn statements filed with the B B. B., an inspection of complaints filed with the State Labor Commission discloses the existence of the commission scheme.

Treat or Treatment

The B. B. B is not informed as to whether the music which is played while the patient is getting the colonic is part of the therapeutic treatment, or a part of the selling effect. In either event, sources consulted consider it a new accessory in the chiropractic kit.

"Shear" Authorship

The "author" of the Brinkley advertising does most of his composing with a pair of shears, rather than a pen. As a result, the headlines frequently have little or no relationship to the text of the copy. The headline offers to explain the causes of cancer, then the text goes on to discuss its symptoms and what somebody said about colonics. It doesn't explain its causes. This might be a little difficult in view of the fact that in spite of the millions of dollars being spent in research, the causes are still in the suspect stage.

Or the headline may say "The sick are healed as if by magic" and the subheads list arthritis, diabetes, etc., and the second subhead may say: "Amazing testimonials—many diagnosed as incurable."

Confusing

It's a little confusing when you read such ads, if you go on through the text, because there may be nothing more said of healing as if by magic, or what happened to the people who were diagnosed as incurable, or who diagnosed them as incurable.

Both dead and live people who have never heard of Brinkley are quoted in ways which might lead readers to believe they are connected with the institution. Some of them are quoted in ways which might lead the reader to believe they are talking about Dr. Brinkley.

Unfortunately, the scissor authorship producing the Brinkley copy not only produces confusion but deception.

Irate Readers

Some newspaper readers, who are not patients of Brinkley's, have become irate about the continuing appearance of such copy. Wrote one such reader, complaining about a Brinkley advertisement headline which stated: "Constipation. 100 consecutive deaths predicted by noted physician. 90 percent died within a week after prediction." Said this reader: "I consider it the most disgraceful thing I have ever seen. The headlines imply, purely by juxtaposition, that a noted physician predicted 100 deaths from constipation, of which 90 died within a week. This might terrify the average person (who is so easily moved by headlines) into patronizing the advertiser. The body of the advertisement, of course, said that these persons died of a wide variety of conditions. I consider the '(newspaper)' to be equally reprehensible in accepting and printing this atrocious rubbish"

Upon examination Graham P. Sitton, Senior Communicable Disease Inspector and Special Health Officer of the County of Los Angeles testified as follows:

"On November 10, 1949, a form was sent through to our department stating that a patient by the name of Ernesta Griego, a Mexican, 28 years old, had left a sanatorium, which was Olive View. She had a positive sputum, was diagnosed as far advanced active tuberculosis. We considered her in a communicable state and our department was ordered to find her. The notation was to isolate her in the home or wherever found, and through various channels I located her on November 30, approximately 20 days later, living in the home of her mother. I served with an order of isolation confining her to those premises. Her husband was present at the time. He said that since she had left the sanatorium they had gone to Dr. L. A. Brinkley, and he showed me a receipt of $95. This receipt was signed by a Dr. Hayhurst. I took the signature from the receipt. This is the information of the husband, and the wife verified it. They had told her that she had no T.B. at all, and that the Health Department had been giving her pneumoperitoneum, which was air given through the stomach by needle, and that had turned her intestines upside down, and unless she went through the series of treatments of colonic massages that she would die in a very short time. He said that they had given her either five or six, but she had to have more. I told her that she was not to leave the house for any reason whatsoever, and if necessary we would put an officer on the front and back door to see that that order was kept. I told the husband that he was free to go and consult this doctor if he wished, that I would make a report of it, and that the only way they could go back to this doctor's office and see him was by written pass from our department. I went back and made the report to the office, and five days later we obtained a bed for her, an emergency placement, and took her to Elliott Sanatorium in Duarte. And at the time that she was picked up, I was accompanied by the Quarantine Officer from the City of Los Angeles, due to the fact that she was in the city at that time and we wanted no slip-up on technicalities. The husband said that he had been back to consult with Dr. Brinkley's office, and they told him that there might be a little T.B. there. He informed them of all that I had said. He showed them a copy of the isolation order I had served on the wife. This girl stayed in the sanatorium a short time, and she left there, and a warrant was issued for her arrest, and again we attempted to locate her and take her into custody, and found she had gone to New Mexico. As required by our law or county ordinance, we had to notify the Department of Health in the State of New Mexico. They made an investigation, and I can read you parts of the letter they returned to us, which would be of interest, I think. She was located in Las Cruces, New Mexico. It says: "The main points of our nurse's investigations are that Mrs. Griego expects a baby, and she is apparently in fairly good health; she preferred a home delivery at her sister's home here rather than have a hospital delivery in California. This appears to be the main reason why Mrs. Griego left. In addition, Mrs. Griego advises our nurse that she has a statement from Dr. Brinkley, 355 South Broadway, Los Angeles 12, California, indicating a negative sputum, and he told her verbally that she was a closed arrested case of tuberculosis."

"That is the information that we received from the State Board of Health in New Mexico. We haven't located her at the present time. We have reason to feel that she may be back here in California. She may be under Dr. Brinkley's care. I have no knowledge of that.

"The next time that I ran into a similar situation was when I was ordered to pick up a man. I can't find him in my files here. We had another copy. That come through the office made out on April 6, 1950 and reached our office a little later, approximately a week after, to pick up a man in the City of LaVerne, 1983 Sixth Street, LaVerne. The background of this case was that he had a positive sputum on March 3, 1950. He was diagnosed as pulminary tuberculosis, far advanced, active. They sent two men out to pick this man up and place him in a sanatorium; due to his background with two years in San Quentin and two years in Folsom Prison, we thought we might have a little trouble. He recognized the authority, so there was no trouble except that he could not understand why he had to be isolated in a sanatorium due to the fact that he had gone to Dr. Brinkley's office on March 28, 1950 and returned there three days consecutively for treatment. Dr. Brinkley told him he did not have T.B. He took two sputum tests which were negative. He also took a fluoroscope and said there was nothing there in his system except some poison, and there was no T.B. that he could find anywhere. He was charged $85. He said if he continued treatment he would cure him. This man gave us the information he had seen the advertisement over television. I myself had paid no attention and seeing none of these advertisements or have heard anything about them. My only connection is when I run into them with these patients. I reported back to my office of this fact, and we placed the man in quarantine in a sanatorium out in Duarte."

Dr. Leo S. Calloway, D.C., upon examination testified as follows:

Q. Are you duly licensed as a doctor of chiropractic in this State?

A. Yes.

Q. When were you so licensed?

A. 1940.

Q. Are you acquainted with Dr. L. A. Brinkley?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first meet Dr. Brinkley?

A. In February of 1949.

Q. What were the circumstances under which you met Dr. Brinkley?

A. Dr. Brinkley offered me employment in his office at 355 South Broadway.

Q. Did you solicit this employment or did you answer an ad?

A. I answered an ad.

Q. Were you employed as a member of Dr. Brinkley's staff?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, during your interviews with Dr. Brinkley prior to the time that you were employed, what conversations did you have with Dr. Brinkley regarding your qualifications?

A. He offered me employment at $300 a month basic pay for the first 60 days, and then $300 per month after that, plus one-half of 1 percent commission.

Q. And do you remember what date you went to work there?

A. February 24, 1949.

Q. And when you first went to work there, did you have a discussion with Dr. Brinkley about the New Yorker technique?

A. Yes.

Q. Prior to this time had you ever had any connection or did you know anything about the New Yorker technique?

A. No.

Q Did you discuss the New Yorker technique prior to the time you were hired by Dr. Brinkley?

A. No.

Q. When did you first discuss the New Yorker technique with Dr. Brinkley?

A. At the interview in February of 1949.

Q. This was after you were hired?

A. Yes.

Q And what discussion took place?

A. Well, Dr. Brinkley informed me at that time he needed a salesman more than anything else, that chiropractors were a dime a dozen, but what he needed was salesmen at that time, and when the patient came in he stated to me it was through his ads in the paper, and that it was lure advertising In other words, they were lured in there on their advertising, and that the procedure was to be able to sell the patient on a series of treatments after their initial treatment of a $3 trial treatment. He illustrated quite elaborately on the process for which he wanted me as an employee, that the patients come in there answering the advertising, and that patient was to be diagnosed as per his setup or his routine there. They were to be found constipated and either high or low blood pressure, they had cholostitis, or they had anteritis, which is inflammation of the lower bowel; they had a sluggish liver or an enlarged heart, etc, anything to fill out the comments at the bottom of the examination, and that patient was to be so impressed at that time that they would be induced later on in the treatment room as to where they would submit to a series of six or more treatments at $95 a series of six. The initial treatment cost $3. At that time they were to have a physical examination made on this patient. Then the doctor would turn this patient over to the technician, and she would impress upon his mind or her mind that it was necessary for them to submit to a series of six treatments to correct this condition, and after that first treatment—the first treatment or the trial treatment is known as the cleanser—then when they come back for a series of six treatments. The first treatment was known as the super-saturation, and during the treatment or during the first treatment this patient was to be introduced to the doctor who was going to administer the treatments there, and he was to make a brief "pitch," so they call it, at that time, and then he or she was to be turned over to the nurse or the technician in charge, and they were to drill the fact that this patient needed these treatments in addition to the vitamin therapy that went with it.

Q Now, Dr. Calloway, at the time you were interviewed, were you interviewed by anyone else in this office other than Dr. Brinkley?

A. No, not at that time; shortly after.

Q. Did you have any discussions with John Osborne?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was stated at these discussions?

A. At that particular time, just prior to my interview with John Osborne, I happened to go through the same college that Dr. Brinkley did prior to his graduating, so I asked him the first day I was in his employ there, "Dr. Brinkley, you either had a lot of money, or you got off to a flying start. How come you have a place like this?" The patients were flocking in there by the dozen at that time. To the best of my recollection, they were running approximately $35,000 or $40,000 a month gross at that time He said, "Calloway, I have bright futures for you." I said, "I am glad to know that." I said, "What do you mean by that?" He said, "I don't know whether you know the story or not, but Dr. Brinkley doesn't legally own this institution." He said, "I do." And he said, "If you stay with me—"

Q. Right here let me ask you about when this conversation took place.

A. That was around the 26th or 27th. It was on or about the 26th or 27th of February.

Q. Where did this conversation take place?

A. In the hall outside of the consultation room.

Q. Was anybody else present?

A. No.

Q. Continue on.

A. So I go back to Brinkley again, and I ask him, "What is the score here, Dr. Brinkley?" He said, "Well, as I told you, it is a deep, dark secret." And I said, "Well, more power to you." I said, "You have a good business here I hope I can become one of your staff," and not knowing at that time what the situation was. So as time went on, they had a doctor there at that time. I don't know whether he is there now or not—Dr. McDonald. So I tried to pump Dr. McDonald what the score was. He told me that Brinkley was only a name at that time, that Osborne really owned it. Then he told me about Mr. Osborne being arrested for practicing medicine without a license.

So shortly after that, well, I was put on the floor at that time in a selling capacity. Shortly after that Brinkley put me in the front office as a diagnostician, and he seemed at that time to be very impressed with my manner of sales.

Q. What did you do as diagnostician?

A. Well, the patient came in there as answering the ad, and we made a diagnosis—objective diagnosis—of the symptoms that we could observe from the patient in what they told us. And it seems as though sales started going up at that time, and Brinkley gradually slackened off on his consultations with the patients and left me in the office permanently as diagnostician It was my duty to sell the patient on the idea that they needed these treatments.

Q. You are referring to the six colonic treatments?

A. Yes, the trial treatment and the following six treatments. It had to be some one why had a psychology with the patient that they were in need of these treatments. I don't know whether you have any way of tracing down this record. It seems after I went into the office, that business started getting better. It wasn't long after that that Brinkley evidently took down with a heart attack. We will say that is what it was. In other words, the grapevine news was that he was off on a big drunk.

Q. Who told you that?

A. Mr. Osborne. At that time he made me chief of staff.

Q. Who made you chief of staff?

A. John Osborne. And there was some literature or correspondence went out, and in fact it went to the State of Arizona over my signature as Dr. Leo S. Calloway, chief of staff, at which time I questioned him about the authenticity of that, and he retracted that and cancelled the correspondence. At that time he was trying to put over what was known as the applicator. It was more or less of a, well, you would call it an enema bag, and I objected quite strenuously to my name being used in the manner in which he was advertising to a state that I wasn't licensed in. I happen to be licensed in the States of California and Missouri. So Dr. Brinkley was called in and asked his advice on it. He said, "Well, if I was in his position, I wouldn't go for it either." So then two or three days after that, Mrs. Cummings, who is supposedly Osborne's partner in business—Lucille Cummings——

Q. Does she work there?

A. She is his business manager or so he says.

Q. What does she do?

A. She has charge of the office force. So she called Dr. Brinkley and myself into the office and said she didn't want any part of it and she didn't want the embarrassment of going before the postal inspectors again. Osborne told us he had been in better penitentiaries in the United States that had rugs on the floor, and so I inquired about that; come to find out he had been in the Valhalla Cemetery scandal, and he had done a hitch in Leavenworth or somewhere like that. So I became curious about the whole thing, and as time went on Brinkley did come back, and I still had the title of chief of staff, and it was looking blacker and blacker all the time as per my license in the State of California. So I hired this Dr. Bosserman. I forget what his first name is.

Q. Dean L. Bosserman?

A. Yes, from Hollywood, and Dr. Bosserman was quoted by Mr. Osborne as being a fast and fancy talker. So we had to serve a 60-day probationary period there before we went on the one-half of 1 percent commission. We were on the $300 a month base pay until we served 60 days, and then we went on the one-half of 1 percent. At that time the total gross was mounting by the thousands. I think our total sales when Brinkley took down sick, the total gross sales were around 22 percent, and they went as high as 64 percent or 74 percent before he came back.

Q. Do you have the records?

A. I have records in my bill fold. Osborne raised me from $300 to $400 a month base pay.

Q. When was that?

A. After Brinkley took down sick. I think that was in June. Then he wanted to lengthen the hours, and he raised me from $400 to $450, plus one-half of 1 percent.

Q. Who did you have the conversation with when your salary was raised.

A. Osborne.

Q. Did you talk to Brinkley about it at all?

A. He wasn't there at that time.

Q. You talked to Osborne?

A. Yes, I talked to Osborne. At that time Osborne promised me the place that Brinkley had, and he said he was paying him $500 and 1 percent of the total gross.

Q. He was paying Brinkley that?

A. Yes, $500 a month and 1 percent. The way the gross was at that time it would raise my pay to about $1,100 or $1,200 a month. He said he wanted to make me independently wealthy if I stayed with him.

Q. Were you offered Brinkley's place?

A. Yes. But shortly after that, within a period of three or four days, he came out with the pamphlets. I forget the title of it now. Anyhow, he told me he had around $7,000 or $8,000 tied in that and couldn't cancel it at that particular time, and was going to pension Brinkley off, and was going to give Brinkley his current expenses, plus a pension for the rest of his life, providing I would take over where Brinkley left off.

Q. About when was this conversation?

A. That was possibly in the latter part of June or May or the first part of June.

Q. Where did it take place?

A. In 355 South Broadway, in Room 210 at that time.

Q. In Osborne's office?

A. Yes. So it went on for possibly two weeks after that, and I asked him, "What are you going to do with Brinkley?" At that particular time he said, "Brinkley is going to be back here, but only on part-time. Things are going exactly like I like them, and I don't want you to clash with Brinkley, or I don't want you to take one word of orders from Brinkley. If he issues orders to you, he is just a name here. You refer him to me, and I will straighten the whole thing out." Brinkley came back, and possibly the second or third day he was there he started giving me orders. I mentioned it to Osborne. I said, "Brinkley wants this done, and he wants that done." He said, "Pay no attention whatsoever to Brinkley." At that time I had hired Osborne, I had hired Hayhurst——

Q. You said you hired Osborne.

A. I meant I hired Bosserman, I had hired Hayhurst, and I had hired Sassoni and several other doctors there at that particular time, and I was in full charge, and Osborne ordered these "pep talks" held periodically, possibly three times a week in my office and in the consultation office and was giving complete instructions at that time.

Q. Who gave instructions?

A. Osborne.

Q. What were they?

A. They were all "pep talks" in sales. There were too many people coming in and taking the trial treatment and no more, and those who took the series of treatments were not taking the vitamins. We had one salesman—Dr. Paul—there who I think had the top record at the time I was there. I think it ran around $300 and some odd dollars in sales in vitamins in one day. That was Dr. Paul. And then there were several technicians that were let go at that particular time, and I had to administer the bad news of their severance with the institution. I think you have some in there in the Better Business Bureau record. Miss Jordan was one. I would have to refer to those names of the employees there at that time.

Q. Dr. Calloway, on these new doctors that were hired for the staff, what instruction was given them with regard to the so-called New Yorker technique prior to the time that they did work on patients?

A. They came in there, and they were told a trial treatment consisted of a colonic and a physical diagnosis at that particular time which was blood pressure and hemoglobin test, and Bursminsky, and they were to be escorted to the waiting room at that particular time.

Q. What does that test mean?

A. It is a nerve test for syphilis.

Q. Anything else?

A. No, not at that particular time. They gave a percussion test for enlarged heart at that time. Then they escorted them to the treatment room where they were disrobed and given a gown, and they were put on the Dierker colonic table.

Q. What was that?

A. That is where they get the colonic irrigation. Then the doctor on the floor that was assigned to a certain number of technicians, either two, three or four, was called at that particular time, and he made an abdominal palpation. He was instructed always to find an impacted colon starting with the cecum.

Q. Were you ever so instructed yourself to find that?

A. Yes, by Brinkley at that particular time. When Brinkley was doing the consultations there, we sat in on as many as a half-dozen or more consultations to get the routine which he had adopted. Then we found an impacted cecum, a transverse colon, a spastic descending colon and there on down. Then we always found a little tenderness in the gall bladder area known as cholostitis. To dwell on that they were told it was unnecessary to cleanse that colon. Now, the doctors on the floor had a routine manner in which they adhered to that the colon was—the large colon was—twenty-two feet six inches, and the small colon was six feet four inches. They had to be properly cleansed in order to rid the colon of auto-intoxication, of which the fecal material was throwing off this toxic poison. It was primarily the cause of all disease. But it was built around a complete sales talk, and if you didn't sell that patient, you were called on the carpet by Osborne, not Brinkley. You were reprimanded as being a poor salesman, and you would have to better yourself in order to stay in the organization.

Q. Did Osborne ever tell you what you must find?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell the other doctors in your presence what you must find?

A. Yes, because every doctor that came to the consultation office was broke in on this routine findings. First you started off with constipation. Then you either checked for high or low blood pressure. Then you checked for cholostitis, and then auto-intoxication, and then vertigo. Then you checked for nervousness, but you had to fill out the comments at the bottom of the examination sheet completely in order to give the doctor something to sell after they got into the treatment room.

Q. Well, Dr. Calloway, what is your definition of the New Yorker technique after working there?

A. Do you want a simple and brief to the point explanation? A racket.

Q. What I am trying to find out, Dr. Calloway, is what the New Yorker technique consists of.

A. It consists solely of a colon irrigation or a super-saturation as they diagnose it after you start your series of six treatments. The first treatment is known as a cleanser. Then after that the same treatment exactly is known as a super-saturation, plus vitamin therapy, and if it is asked for they will give you a chiropractic adjustment.

Q. At the time you were there, how many other doctors were employed there?

A. At the time I was there, I think they had Dr. Sassoni, Dr. Paul. Dr. Hayhurst, Dr. McDonald, and Dr. Paul someone. I forgot what his name was.

Q. Just about how many?

A. About six besides myself.

Q. And when did you discontinue your employment with Brinkley?

A. Saturday night as of August 13, 1949. My reason for leaving there was due to the fact that Osborne had called me on the phone incessantly and wanted me to get Bosserman back, because he was a super-salesman. When I contacted Dr. Bosserman, he told me he would come back providing I was his immediate supervisor, and he didn't want to have anything to do with Osborne or Brinkley. He said he would come back and take care of consultations. When I called Osborne, he said he couldn't do it because of the legal technicalities involved there. He said, "I can't have a part of it." I said, "If you can't have Bosserman back, I won't come back Monday morning myself." I was drawing at that time above $700 a month.

Chairman Connolly: You said in the early part of the time that you were there they were taking in $35,000 to $40,000 a month gross?

A. Yes.

Chairman Connolly: It increased after that?

A. Yes.

Chairman Connolly: Do you know off-hand, or do you have some approximation as to what the gross was about the time you left?

A. I think I could find it for here, sir. I have got it here somewhere. My last month I think it was better than $70,000 a month, somewhere in that neighborhood. I have the check stubs here.

Chairman Connolly: In July presumably?

A. Yes. I think in July that the colonics ran—No, this was in June possibly. The colonics ran $48,914.55. The refunds on that during the month was $306. The net was $48,608.55. Now, there were some side sales made on diathermy of $170. The vitamins at that time ran $9,905.95, and the spray tips for these enema bags ran $692.65, and the sales tax for that month was $309.98. So that left a balance of $59,506.94. My commission besides my salary for that month was $295.28. Dr. Hayhurst drew $295.28, and Dr. Paul drew $295.28. I think I have some more here.

Chairman Connolly: That answers my question, Doctor. I just wanted some approximate figure as to the gross at about that period of time.

A. Then it advanced after that to around $70,000 some odd dollars. In fact, I had to take them to the Labor Commission to get the last $152 and some odd cents that I had coming, due to the fact that I had quit there because of my own volition. Brinkley told me at the time I picked up my instruments and things of that nature that he didn't pay a commission on less than 30 days, so I took it to the Labor Commission, and they ruled in my favor, and they gave me a commission of $152 and some odd cents.

Mr. Rumford: Dr. Calloway, while you were chief, were you interested in the welfare of the patient, or were you trying to make money for the institution itself?

A. Well, at the time I thought possibly there could be some good done there, because Osborne had explained that was to become the largest institution in the world of its kind, that he was sending Brinkley back to Chicago and possibly myself to see that Brinkley stayed sober during this course of education back there in the treatment of cancer, that he intended at that time to open an office in San Diego, one in San Francisco, possibly one in Dallas, Texas, and Lord knows where else, that I was going to be in charge of all the foreign offices, because I didn't mind leaving the State of California. I was in such a position at that particular time that I could be away from home. He was going to put me in charge of the foreign offices outside of Los Angeles. He wanted Brinkley here. So it looked like at that particular time I was going on a much increased rate of salary and a much increased rate of total gross percent in which I would top Brinkley. That was Osborne's intention at that particular time. It seems as though Dr. Brinkley had a tie-up with him financially and legally, and that he couldn't get around as well as advertising, because he just put out $7,000 worth of advertising at that time in the form of pamphlets. So it went on from time to time, and Brinkley finally came back to work. Brinkley and I didn't get along. Osborne told me not to take orders from Brinkley, and Brinkley was not to take orders from me, and there was a dissention there. So when Bosserman said he wouldn't come back providing I couldn't be his immediate superior, then I just told Osborne I wouldn't be in Monday morning.

Mr. Rumford: On a whole, the atmosphere was one of trying to make money for the institution, not trying to do very much really for the patients?

A. That is right.

Mr. Rumford: Did you say anything about the type of pills or the type of vitamins that were given?

A. Well, ordinarily speaking, they were just the mill of the run type of vitamins that can be bought in any vitamin store. If you subpena some of my diagnoses before your committee, you will find they are all the same. There was a set rule that you got vitamins, minerals, B_1, Plan-Ex, B_2, C, D, and E, and that ran $42.50. Then on your second course of treatments you got bile salts which ran $7.50. Then he had some hormone substances there for the male and female that ran I think $21.50 for the male or thereabouts and $27.50 for the female.

Mr. Rumford: Regardless of what the complaint was, they got the series of vitamin treatments?

A. Yes, it was a set rule. In case there was a man and wife who came in for treatments, such as the Johnsons you talked about this morning, that had to be changed to keep from coinciding with the same treatment for both of them.

Mr. Rumford: They wouldn't have given him E?

A. No, they would change that around and give him Plan-Ex and something else, just in order to change the prescription.

Mr. Rumford: I have one more question. At any time was your institution visited by members of the Chiropractic Board or the Board of Medical Examiners?

A. Not to my recollection.

Mr. Rumford: That is all.

Mr. Lipscomb: Would you say that Osborne was diagnosing these cases by remote control?

A. In my own mind, I would, because he has called us in his office numerous times and told us the prescription that he gave his mother for calluses on her feet and bunions and things like that, and putting her on strict diets and things of that nature, and in the event we had patients it would give them an added result in order to boost the sale of another treatment, and we were to advise the patients of that treatment if they had a corn or a bunion and we were to put them on fruit juice diets, and things of that nature.

Mr. Lipscomb: He actually was diagnosing the cases ahead of time?

A. I would say personally, yes.

Mr. Lipscomb: It was an indirect way of practicing medicine?

A. Yes.

Mr. Smith: On these instructions you were given, did you so instruct the doctors you hired?

A. Yes, I gave them the routine that was handed down to me in order for them to make the sales on the floor out there. Any time a patient didn't take any more than six treatments, they were called on the carpet.

Mr. Smith: From the standpoint of ethics of a chiropractor's association, how did they follow that?

A. We were diagnosed by Osborne. He hates medical doctors and chiropractors and osteopaths. He hates anybody that is legitimate.

Mr. Rumford: Osborne does?

A. Yes.

Mr. Smith: Do you think that the organization as it is operated is for the good or benefit where you saw it of the public health of the citizens of the State of California?

A. Definitely not.

Mr. Smith: In other words, you think it is a detriment to the public health?

A. Yes.

Mr. Smith: And not to the teachings of the chiropractory that you learned?

A. No, that is the reason I severed my connection with the institution down there, because prior to that and since that I have not been in practice, and I quit a job that was paying me in the neighborhood of $800 a month, and people don't quit those jobs if they don't have to live with their conscience.

Mr. Smith: As you mentioned, it is more of a racket than anything else?

A. In my own personal mind, it is a racket. Those people are brought in there and they are pounced upon from the minute they enter. In other words, the vultures leap at them down there. The doctor comes in and grabs the large colon. If there is nothing wrong with it he says it is impacted and they are going to die if they don't get it corrected.

Mr. Earl Hall, Special Investigator for the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners was next questioned, and he testified as follows:

Q. Have you in your position as an investigator for the chiropractic board received complaints against Dr. Brinkley or the New Yorker technique?

A. Many.

Q. Do you know how many you have received?

A. Well, approximately since the office has been functioning, especially since Dr. Brinkley has been connected with the office, I would say between 80 and 90 complaints.

Q. Over what period of time have these complaints been received?

A. I just don't know the exact date when Dr. Brinkley took over at 355 South Broadway. I don't recall it but it was about that time, shortly after that. I don't recall the exact date.

Q. What has been the general nature of the complaints that have been received?

A. The most complaints received by me and through the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners in our office in Sacramento have been in the form of letters sent them and then relayed to me as persons dissatisfied with treatments and wanting a refund of money only. Part or all have been to send back money paid.

Q. And what have you done about these complaints?

A. Turned the complaints over to the Attorney General's office.

Q. All of them?

A. Every one of them.

Q. All the complaints, in other words, that you received in writing?

A. Yes. Many of these complaints, gentlemen, were in the form of anonymous phone calls, people who would not even give their names. They would ask for my opinion. They would say, "Mr. Hall, I was advised to call on you. Would you please intercede in my behalf as per a refund." I said, "For what?" They would say, "For treatments taken at the New Yorker office in Los Angeles." I said, "What form of treatments were they?" They said, "Colonics, adjustments, Battle Creek method, and diet." I said, "Yes, but did you sign anything with that office?" They said, "Yes, I did." I said, "What did you sign, an agreement or a contract?" They said, "Yes." I asked, "For how many treatments?" They said, "Six treatments at the cost of $95." I said, "Now what do you want?" They said, "Well, after the sixth treatment I don't feel any better than I did before I took the treatments." I said, "That doesn't prove a thing to me. I am very sorry. Now what do you want?" They said, "Well, I feel that I should be entitled to a refund." I said, "Of the whole amount or just part of it?" They said, "The whole thing." I said, "I am sorry, but we have no jurisdiction over fees, and we just can't collect it for you, but I will refer you to where you can take your case," which I did. They could go to the small claims court or in some instances they could go to the public defender and ask their opinion on it. I told them, "If you get a case against those people that they are not doing the right thing by you, the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners would do something about it." There have been instances where some of these calls—and they have been more or less of a daily nature, mainly regarding a refund or a part of a refund—that wanted to know if they started a case, would we cooperate with them. I have said, "Yes, I would be glad to, but you would have to prove in court that you didn't derive benefits from the treatments. I don't know whether you did or didn't, and mind you, I am for you too." It boiled down to the one gripe. That was, "I want my money back, if possible, or part of it back," or "The treatments didn't do me any good." One old lady came to the office. She didn't give her name. I believe she was referred to me from the Medical Board Office. She had been into them and asked them about this New Yorker set-up, and they said, "Go in and see Mr. Hall." She came in. She said, "Mr. Hall (I believe she said she was on state relief), I have spent all my money over there, and I don't feel any better." I said, "When did you start taking the treatments?" She said, "I just took the six treatments." I said, "What did you pay?" She said, "I paid $95 for six treatments." I said, "What did they consist of?" She said they consisted of so and so and so and so. I said, "Did you sign anything for those treatments?" She said, "Yes." I said, "Did anybody make you sign for those treatments?" She said, "No." I said, "In other words, you just signed up and took the six treatments at $95?" She said, "Yes, I did." I said, "Now you are telling me that you don't feel any better. Have you been to other doctors before you went there?" She said, "Yes."

This old lady said, "The medical doctors were robbing me. They weren't doing me any good. I went to an osteopath. He was not doing me any good." I said, "You are a shopping patient. You have shopped around and have tried everything. Your next move will be faith healing. Have you tried that yet? I am going to be honest with you. I can't help you in collecting the money. The board has no jurisdiction no more than any other board does over fees charged by their doctors."

Q. In these complaints that have been made to you, did the patients of Dr. Brinkley state what their difficulty was diagnosed as by his office?

A. No, we never went into that. Their main complain was, "Will you help me get some money back, or all of it?" One lady came to my office from Beverly Hills here about three months ago. Her name was Baer. She said, "Mr. Hall, I received very fine treatments. I am not complaining about the treatments received." She said she had taken the two weeks course, and it had cost her $95 for the series of treatments She had had six treatments She said, "I was induced by them to take some vitamins. They charged me $30 for them." She said, "Mr. Hall, I have paid for these pills In taking those, some of those tablets in there caused me to have a gas formation in my abdomen that made me ill. I can't continue taking them." I said. "What do you want me to do?" She said, "If I were to take those back, do you think I could induce the office to give a refund?" I believe she said she paid $30. I said, "I will call Dr. Brinkley and see if they won't cooperate and give you back the money." She said, "I can bring them over." I asked her, "You used a few?" She said, "Just a very few." She called me later and informed me that the doctor did give her back the money, whatever she paid. Most every complaint I had has been regarding a refund

Mr. Rumford: What are your duties as an investigator?

A. I am a state investigator investigating complaints regarding unlicensed doctors practicing without a license, running down court cases, etc.

Mr. Rumford: What is the "etc."?

A. On renewal time I check on delinquent doctors. I check to see that they are not practicing while their license is delinquent. I check on out-of-state doctors practicing in other doctor's offices without a license. I check on chiropractors who are not using the proper degree following their name as per their law. I check their offices to see that they are not violating the law as far as drugs and surgery, etc., is concerned.

Mr. Rumford: Did you have occasion to call upon Dr. Brinkley to inform him as to his ethics?

A. Yes. In fact I had two board members visit the office with me.

Mr. Rumford: What did he say?

A. He said, "I am doing nothing. I am practicing more chiropractic here than any other office in the State of California" He was giving chiropractic adjustments. That is the basic principle of chiropractic. He said, "We are also giving colonics under physical therapy. We are using the Battle Creek, which is a modality."

Mr. Rumford: You reported these to the board, did you not?

A. All these records are at the State Board.

Mr. Rumford: The board stated they had no authority under the law?

A. And also to the Attorney General's Office Various deputies at San Francisco and here have been piled up in their office that high with these ads.

Mr. Rumford: As an investigator you feel the State should enact further laws to protect people in these instances?

A. Yes.

Mr. Rumford: Are you prepared to submit such a recommendation at the next session of the Legislature?

A. Well, I would be glad to, yes.

Mr. Rumford: Or the board.

A. Speaking for the board, I am sure they would.

Following is the testimony upon cross examination of C. A. Mead, Special Agent for the State Medical Board of Examiners:

Q. Have you as a result of your position with the board received complaints against Dr. L. A. Brinkley or the New Yorker Technique?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you know about how many complaints have been received by your office?

A. There were approximately 60 investigations made by our office, and many, many more complaints were made.

Q. When were these complaints received?

A. April 11, 1946, is when our earliest complaints were received, and they come right down to the present.

Q. When were the investigations made?

A. Well, from April of 1946 up until approximately the middle of June of 1948.

Q. Was that when Dr. Brinkley took over?

A. Yes, sir. There have been some investigations made after that.

Q. Well, as a result of these investigations you made prior to the time that Dr. Brinkley took over, what was the result of those investigations?

A. We filed charges against John Osborne for five counts of practicing medicine without a license. It is a violation of Section 2141 of the Business and Professions Code, and we arrested him, and he pleaded guilty.

Q. Subsequent to that time, you continued then to receive complaints, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the general nature of these complaints about the same as prior to this prosecution?

A. Yes, sir, our complaints seemed to be, the victims seemed to fall more or less into groups of not feeling well after their treatments, also they felt that the amount of money charged them was excessive, they complained about the price of the vitamins, and one thing I noticed was that in most of the investigations that I made, they were always diagnosed as having gallstones, and in some instances the victim, while being given a treatment, would be told that the gallstones were now passing, and that the victim was passing his gallstones.

Q. What have you done, if anything, with the complaints that you have received since the prosecution took place?

A. Since Dr. Brinkley came in?

Q. Yes.

A. The complaints came into our office, and we have been sending them over to the Bunco Squad of the Los Angeles Police Department. At least I have. And I think our secretary has been so instructed. Possibly she has sent some to the Chiropractic Board. We are more or less powerless now because Dr. Brinkley has a license and can diagnose and treat.

Chairman Connolly: I have one question. Your office is aware of the fact that—at least it has been stated today by several witnesses—Osborne still is in the same office. Is your office aware of that?

A. Yes, sir, but we have to go to the City Attorney's Office and secure a complaint and then turn it into a warrant.

Chairman Connolly: Nothing has been done on that particular phase of it?

A. In order to do it, we have to show someone not licensed is diagnosing and treating. He can go back and say Brinkley did the diagnosing, so we are powerless.

Mr. Rumford: Mr. Mead, what was the basis for your investigation? In other words, how could you act? On what basis did you act in this particular case?

A. You mean in the arrest of Osborne?

Mr. Rumford: No, I mean in investigating complaints.

A. Well, in the event we receive a complaint through the mail or personally or over the telephone, we call on the alleged victim and ask as to their treatment, what happened, when they went to the New Yorker, and in some instances they would say, "I went up there, and I talked to a man. They called him Dr. Osborne, and I sat down at his desk, and he told me I had gallstones, and a bad heart, and that a course of his treatments would help me, and I took them." The diagnosis was that it was gallstones and a bad heart, and colonics were the prescribed course of treatment, which is a violation of the law.

L. B. Ruppers, sergeant attached to the Bunco Detail of the Los Angeles Police Department was next called, and he testified as follows:

Q. Sergeant Ruppers, has your office received complaints against Dr. L. A. Brinkley or the New Yorker Technique?

A. We have.

Q. Do you know approximately how many have been received by your office?

A. Not exactly, no. I have not worked on this for the last three months, and there have been some since I quit working on this case.

Q. Have they been numerous since the time you have been working on it?

A. Yes, we have had as many as five complaints a day.

Q. How are the complaints made, in person, by telephone or by mail?

A. Sometimes they have been by mail, sometimes by telephone and sometimes in person.

Q. What is the general nature of these complaints?

A. We have had several different types of complaints. Some of them claim malpractice, some of them claim overcharging, and I have several here that I think could be called malpractice.

Q. What have you done about these complaints?

A. I have taken it to the City Attorney's Office for possible complaint. There is nothing here that we could do as far as the theft is concerned, which is what we are concerned with, and I have gone to the District Attorney's Office, and I discussed it with the deputy there.

Mr. Rumford: Under the present law you find it impossible to make any complaint or at least to file a complaint and prosecute?

A. That is right.

Mr. Smith: How about a little more detail about the malpractice, the nature of one or two of these complaints to get an idea of what they are complaining about.

A. We have a complaint here of a Fred Ahlquist. He had a breaking out condition on his hands and over his body, a sort of a rash, and he saw the advertisements in the paper. He went to see Dr. Brinkley. I can't find out from him who he talked to, but some doctor took him into a room and gave him a rub-down, and during the course of the rub-down, and before he went in he had a hernia, and the hernia was granulated. I hope the doctor doesn't catch me up on the medical terms. But before he got home his hernia had swollen up to the size of a football. So his wife called Dr. Brinkley and wanted somebody to come out right away, and they told her they couldn't come out to their place, that he would have to come in there. Well she told them he had paid in advance. He gave a check for $100 for a week's treatment in advance, and she demanded the money back. They told her the appointments were made, and she would lose the money. So she immediately called the bank which was just about two hours after Mr. Ahlquist gave them the check, and the bank is located by Manchester and Vermont, and the bank told her someone had been out there and cashed the check already. Mr. Ahlquist's address is 1244 West 51st Place. His phone is AX minister 15665.

Then we have a case of Betty Jean Lauritzen. She is aged 21, and suffering from epilepsy. Her mother took her to Dr. Brinkley. She had seen the advertisement regarding the epilepsy cures, and they paid a total of $544, and by the time the girl had taken several weeks treatments she was committed to the General Hospital, and from there sent to Camarillo, and her mother was later, over worry over the girl, sent to Camarillo also. Is that sufficient?

Q. By Mr. Van Dyke: Let me ask you this, Mr. Ruppers. Have you checked to see if there is a police record on John R. Osborne?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you find a record?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you state what that is. Let's make that Exhibit No 18.

A. His Los Angeles number is 1010D16. On June 15, 1927, he was arrested by the Sheriff's Office in Los Angeles charged with Section 215 of the Federal Penal Code, and on the 23d of June, 1927, he was sent to the United States Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kansas, charged with mail fraud. He received 10 years and 10 days. On October 2, 1928, he was committed to Carson City State Penitentiary on a mail fraud charge. I imagine that is the same charge. He did his time in Carson City instead of going to Leavenworth. And on June 28, 1948, he was arrested for violation of Section 2141 of the Business and Professions Code. I imagine that is the medical charge. He was arrested on five counts. Four counts were dismissed, and he served three days on the one.

Mr. Rumford: Is it necessary in the City of Los Angeles to have a business license to operate this type of a business?

A. It is.

Mr. Rumford: Is there any way possible that such a license can be revoked for unethical practices?

A. As far as the City License Bureau is concerned, all they are concerned with is the revenue from the license. I do not believe they have any police powers or any powers of revocation of the license.

Mr. Rumford: In other words, if they apply, they have to give it?

A. Yes. Lynn A. Brinkley has a retail and professional license out of the City License Bureau.

Chairman Connolly: At any time have you ever discussed it with his attorneys or anything like that?

A. No. I believe in one case, in this Lauritzen case I believe I talked to Mr. Mayo regarding her complaint of being overcharged or some such thing. I understood later there was a settlement made on her bill. I am not sure of that We are not interested in refunds at all, and I can't go into it.

Chairman Connolly: Mr. Mayo is representing Brinkley?

A. Yes, Dr Brinkley.

Mr. Van Dyke: Who did you talk to in the City Attorney's Office?

A. I talked to Mr Boyd Taylor and Don Redwine.

Milton P. Duffy, Chief of the California Pure Food and Drug Department, State Department of Public Health, was called, and his testimony follows:

Q. Mr. Duffy, have you conducted any investigation in connection with the activities of Dr. L. A. Brinkley?

A. We have, yes.

Q. And what was this investigation concerned with and what is the result of it?

A. Well, as testified to by C. A. Mead, Special Investigator of the Medical Board, on June 28, 1948, I assigned Senior Inspector W. G. Behrins to work with Woodruff, Mead and Chester Lloyd and J. A. Williams of the State Medical Board conducting an investigation, resulting in the plea of guilty by Osborne who then operated that clinic. We took numerous samples of preparations he had there, but the manner and method of labeling them are within the provisions of the California Pure Drugs Act

Q. Did you check on the prices of any of these?

A. Well, at that time it was the same business of $98 for the treatments.

Q. Did you make any check on the price of the vitamins?

A. Not at that time, no.

Q. That was subsequent, was it?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you find out in that connection?

A On April 26, 1950, L B Ruppers of the Bunco Fugitive Detail of the Los Angeles Police Department delivered a package to me labeled, "Twenty tablets, New Yorker, Vitamin B_{12} Concentrate, the amazing red vitamin, each tablet contains Vitamin B_{12} five gamma; copper, 100 gamma; stomach and duodenal substance, dessicated and defatted, below 37° Centigrade; directions: one tablet every other day as prescribed by doctor; fabricated especially for New Yorker, 355 South Broadway, Los Angeles 13."

That vial of tablets I had identified by a No. 2975 on the 26th day of April, 1950 at 2.30 in the afternoon. I had that vial delivered to Professor Max Dunn, who is an authority on vitamins at the Bureau of Chemistry at the University of California at Los Angeles where an analysis was made of the same. Carrying the investigation further, I was told by Mr. Ruppers that this sold for $62.50 from the Brinkley Clinic. We checked the price on Vitamin B_{12} of products similar to those through the firm of Horton and Converse in Los Angeles. They advised us that they cost $2 63 per 100 wholesale. They would retail 100 tablets for $3.85; on a prescription for 20 tablets they would charge $1.30. We likewise checked with Exclusive Prescription Pharmacy in Los Angeles and they advised us they paid $4.95 per 100, which had fellic acid in combination. They would retail the same package for $8.25 per 100. On a prescription for 20 tablets, they would retail it for $2.30.

We checked with E. R. Squibb's and Company, manufacturers of this product, of New York. They advised us that 100 tablets would sell wholesale at $4.90 and at retail for $8.35 per 100, and for 20 tablets $2.30.

Boyle and Company of Los Angeles advised us they would sell it wholesale for $4.75 a 100, and it would retail over the counter for $6.95 a 100.

Eli Lilly Company would sell Vitamin B_{12}, 200 micrograms for $3.90 wholesale and they would retail for $6.50 per 100. This Lilly Company is in Indianapolis.

Mr. Rumford: The only thing I am interested in here is possibly, did you determine who manufactured the vitamin for this particular company, Brinkley, and if they made an analysis to determine if the content was proper as labeled?

A. Well, no, I didn't determine that, but we determined through Professor Max Dunn it did contain the labeled amount approximately of Vitamin B_{12}.

Mr. Rumford: It wasn't mislabeled.

A. No.

Mr. Rumford: It was just an excessive price?

A. Yes. Could I testify into the record what should correct this abuse? I think that the Legislature should enact an amendment either to the Business and Professional Code or a special law to have it all inclusive the use of testimonials in incurable diseases be prohibited. We have Section 26271 in the Health Code on incurable cancers, heart disease and the like. My suggestion would be that it be all inclusive to take in all the healing arts and prohibit them from advertising treatments and/or cures, because under 26271 of the Health and Safety Code the fake patent medicine racket in California is practically wiped out due to that section. Every faker that comes in tells us about Brinkley and others in the telephone and in the daily newspapers.

Dr. Leo S. Calloway was recalled to the stand and was re-examined as follows:

Chairman Connolly: Doctor, these witnesses after you have been on have been testifying about all of the complaints that have been received in the various agencies. I wonder, did people come back and complain directly to the office at any time?

A. Yes, sir.

Chairman Connolly: And how were those complaints handled?

A. If they weren't able to be resold on another sale of a series we were reprimanded.

Chairman Connolly: When they came back to complain you were supposed to resell them on some more?

A. Yes.

Chairman Connolly. Did you ever have any discussions with Mr. Mayo, the attorney, in connection with any of these complaints?

A. No. The only direct contact I came in with Mayo wasn't in direct contact. It was with Chesebro who is Brinkley's attorney. I has been repeatedly stated they have an air-tight contract between Brinkley and Osborne due to the fact that Ray Chesebro is the son of the City Attorney, and Jerry Mayo who is Osborne's attorney, and they are in turn law partners. In any "beefs" that come up, they take it to the old man, and it is quashed right there.

Chairman Connolly: Did somebody ever make that statement?

A. Osborne made it to me He said that it would be very little trouble to get rid of Brinkley. All he would have to do was take a twenty minute walk around the block and see Mayo and cancel Brinkley's contract. He has a contract—I believe at the time he told me he had a contract —with Brinkley under a thirty-day cancellation, although he had to advance Brinkley 90 days commission, which was 1 percent of the total gross, plus his salary, and he could get rid of Brinkley. That is what he promised me down there at that time. He said Brinkley was a drunkard at heart and he was going to get rid of him. He said all he had to do to get rid of Brinkley was to take a 20-minute walk around the block and see Mayo, and Mayo and Chesebro are law partners, and Chesebro is the son of the City Attorney. He has repeatedly bragged before the whole staff down there, not only to the doctors.

Chairman Connolly: Who are you referring to?

A. Osborne. He said that he had an air-tight contract down there that nobody could shoot a hole in. He said he has been against the wall before, and he has perfected his means of operation down there so nobody could shoot a hole in, due to the fact that he has Mayo as his attorney, Mayo is a law partner of Chesebro, and Chesebro's old man is the City Attorney, and nothing can be done about it.

Chairman Connolly: These statements were made on several occasions?

A. Yes. If you look Brinkley's record up, I think he was a captain on the fire department in Huntington Park at the time he took up chiropractic. He couldn't buy yesterday's newspaper as far as cash was concerned. He was bootlegging second-hand refrigerators and gas stoves during the war, and was fired from the fire department. He takes over the institution, and he goes into a $400,000 a year advertising program.

Mr. Rumford: You don't treat drunkards down there at Brinkley's, do you?

A. They will treat anything that has $95.

Following is the testimony of Dr. Edward C. Poulsen, D C., Member of the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners:

Q. During the time that you have been a member of the board, have complaints been brought to your attention against L. A. Brinkley or the New Yorker Technique?

A. They have been brought to the board's attention through our investigator, Mr. Earl Hall, and by letters to our office many times.

Q. What have you done about these complaints?

A. Well, we have contacted the Attorney General's Office. I have made a trip to the Attorney General's Office personally as far back as—I want to say—1946. I may be in error. It is quite a while back. I made another trip to Los Angeles and saw Mr. Goldin. I spent a day with Mr. Goldin.

Q. Mr. Goldin was at the Attorney General's Office?

A. Yes.

Q. What were you told on these occasions?

A. On all occasions we were told that the board has no power, that our law is weak, and until such time as we can correct the weakness through legislation that the Attorney General's Office is powerless to help us.

Q. Well now, Dr. Poulsen, have you read some of Dr. Brinkley's advertising?

A. I have.

Q. What is your opinion with regard to this advertising?

A. I think it is misleading and falsifying at its worst.

Q. Have you checked any with the so-called New Yorker Technique?

A. I don't follow you there.

Q. The New Yorker Technique?

A. Do I know what it is?

Q. Yes.

A. I know from hearsay what it is. I have never been in that office.

Q. Now, let me ask you this, doctor. You have read the statements made by Dr. Brinkley in his advertising. Is there any chiropractic school in the State of California that you know of that teaches any subject which covers this material quoted by Dr. Brinkley?

A. If you are referring to colonic irrigations, yes. I would say all of our chiropractic colleges teach colonic irrigation as an adjunct of chiropractic, yes.

Q. Is there any limitation placed upon it by the Chiropractic Board or by the schools when they teach it?

A. No.

Q. With regard to the state examination, is this subject covered by questions in the state examination?

A. It is.

Q. Do you have any recommendations that you can make to the committee with regards to legislation that you feel would be of assistance to the board?

A. I do. First before I do, I would like to say for the record's sake that this particular operator and a few more are a minority in our profession, and we dislike—the majority of our profession dislikes—it as much as anyone else does, and we would be more than happy if we could rid our profession of them. Our board was very much in favor of having this committee go on record in putting two additions to our act, and that is an aiding and abetting clause, and also one on unprofessional conduct. I would like to read what I have on aiding and abetting and also on unprofessional conduct:

"The employing directly or indirectly of any suspended or unlicensed practitioner in the practice of any system or mode of treating the sick or afflicted, or the aiding or abetting of any unlicensed person to practice any system or mode of treating the sick or afflicted constitute unprofessional conduct within the meaning of this chapter."

The definition of unprofessional conduct is, "The procuring, aiding or abetting in procuring of criminal abortion, paying for steering of patients into one's office, obtaining a fee on the assurance that a manifestly incurable disease can be made entirely well, the wilful betrayal of professional secrets of a patient to the detriment of the patient, chiropractic advertisements—making false or unethical claims, conviction of any offense involving moral terpitude, wilful neglect of a patient in a critical condition," and we suggest that there shall be no advertising of price or price quoting; there shall be no displaying of internal organs in advertising; no statements or claims shall be made in advertising that cannot be substantiated by standard diagnostic and laboratory methods; no advertising shall be permitted which may be construed as comparative. And that is just about all that we as a board feel is necessary. We feel if our law is changed to where these two clauses are included in it that we can take care of all our problems.

Q. Dr. Poulsen, you mentioned in your letter there something about false or unethical advertising or claims, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what in your opinion should the standard be to define what is ethical and what is unethical advertising?

A. Away back in 1944 we were given the job of trying to correct the advertising in this State. I went to see Deputy Attorney Ward Sullivan who wrote up, with the assistance of Deputy Martin, a rule for our board.

Q. Were these men from the Attorney General's Office?

A. Yes, and this rule I will read. We at that time thought that we had the problem licked. We do encourage advertising of an ethical nature, but since that time, every time we have tried to cite one before our board, we have run up against a stone wall, that the rule will not stand in court, and the Attorney General's Office will not back it. "Advertisements: Constructive, educational publicity is encouraged, but the use by any licensee of advertising which contains misstatements, falsehoods, misrepresentations, distorted, sensational or fabulous statements, or which is intended or has a tendency to deceive the public or impose upon the credulous or ignorant persons, constitutes grounds for the imposition of any of the following penalties:

"(a) Suspension of said licensee's rights to practice in this State for a period not exceeding one year;

"(b) Placing said licensee upon probation;

"(c) Taking such other action, excepting the revocation of said licensee's license.

"In relation to disciplining said licensee as the board in its discretion may deem proper, the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners has issued a directive to the investigators to inform all chiropractors who advertise their services to comply with provisions of Rule 311. Violation of this rule will cause you to be cited before the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners."

Q. That rule was adopted when?

A. November 2, 1948.

Q. That was adopted by the board itself?

A. That is correct.

Q. And were you advised by the Attorney General's Office that this rule would not stand up, is that what you mean?

A. The board has been so advised, yes. The last letter was directed to me on July 21, 1950, from the Attorney General's Office. And in conclusion, it says, "Your attention is directed to the provisions of the recent Section 17500.1 of the Business and Professions Code which precludes a state board or commission with a Department of Professional and Vocational Standards from enacting a rule or regulation restricting or prohibiting advertising which does not violate the provisions of Section 17500 of the Business and Professions Code. Section 17500.1 repeals existing rules or regulations conflicting with said section. Since Section 17500 of the Business and Professions Code does not contain any prohibition against sensational or fabulous matters, the enactment of a new section would invalidate the board's Rule No. 311 insofar as it relates to fabulous and sensational material." This was signed by Mr. Goldin.

Chairman Connolly: I want to ask one question, Doctor. You make your recommendations there about no comparative advertising and no quotation of price and no pictures of the body, etc. What you are really saying in effect is that the advertising should be restricted just to name and address, aren't you?

A. And educational material that has a tendency to enlighten the public or to enlighten the different doctors, but to have these fabulous pictures of internal organs shown in the newspapers, etc., we are very much against it. We would like to have it stopped.

Mr. Smith: When you get down to it, you don't have control over what your members do as far as advertising and practice is concerned?

A. Our law was written in 1922, and there are many changes that it could stand right now. We have a very weak law, yes.

Mr. Smith: Did you hear Mr. Duffy's suggestion as to the amendment of the law so there would be no use of testimonials in advertising?

A. I am in accord with Mr. Duffy's recommendation.

Mr. Smith: You think that is a good idea?

A. I do.

Testimony was also heard by Dr. Tobin and Dr. Molle, members of the State Chiropractic Board, who verified what Dr. Poulsen had said upon examination, and in addition Dr. Molle stated that all of the practicing chiropractors in the entire Country do not spend as much money collectively as does Dr. Brinkley in one year.

Dr. Edward C. Rosenow, M.D., acting as Medical Advisor to the committee and who is an Associate Professor of Medicine at the University of Southern California, Senior Attending Member of the Los Angeles

General Hospital Staff, Counsel Member of the Los Angeles County Medical Association, President of the Los Angeles Society of Internal Medicine, Vice President of the Los Angeles Heart Association, and a Fellow of the American College of Physicians, testified as follows:

Mr. Rumford: Doctor, you have heard the testimony regarding the treatment that is given by Dr. Brinkley, this New Yorker treatment. On the basis of your medical knowledge would you say that excessive colonics do physical harm to the body, or do you feel that there is nothing to be gained one way or the other?

Dr. Rosenow: In a normal intact bowel, you mean?

Mr. Rumford: They don't have normal bowels in this case.

Dr. Rosenow: A diseased bowel could definitely be damaged by excessive colonic irrigations. I doubt very much if you could actually injure a normal, healthy, intact bowel with even pretty frequent colonic irrigations. I don't know just what you would call excessive.

Mr. Rumford: The New Yorker treatment.

Dr. Rosenow: I don't imagine that would do a healthy, normal bowel any harm. I don't believe it would discharge any gallstones from the gall bladder, however. They are quite a ways apart, approximately 21 feet apart. An interesting side statement I might make on that is that somewhere in the testimony, maybe it was Dr. Calloway or somebody, the diagnosis they made on these people was an impacted caecum and irritable colon, and they would palpate in the region of the gall bladder and diagnose gallstones, which can't be diagnosed by palpation In fact, it is doubtful to me that more than maybe 10 or 15 percent of them could be seen in an X-ray without giving them special dyes and things to outline them, because only 15 percent of all gallstones are visible in the X-ray anyhow.

Chairman Connolly: They couldn't be detected at all by palpation?

Dr. Rosenow: No. Let's say this, that if a person had a distended gall bladder, you could suspect it had some stones in it.

Mr Van Dyke: What is your opinion on this: In some of this advertising it states as follows: "I had fat patients that eliminated from their body as much as 50 to 60 pounds of waste and 10 to 15 pounds alone from the colon mainly consisting of foreign matters, especially old hardened feces." Have you ever had occasion in your practice to run across a case like that?

Dr. Rosenow: There is only one kind of a case that would even approximate that particular statement and that would be a person who has what is called Hirschsprung's Disease. It means just they have an enormous colon. They were born with it. It is five to ten times larger than a normal colon. They will only evacuate maybe once in two weeks.

Mr. Rumford: The New Yorker treatment would do well.

Dr. Rosenow: The particular one with all the symptoms, you understand, come from costiveness and sluggishness of the bowel. Those particular people, many of them, feel fine, and they have the most fecal material in their colon of anybody for the longest periods of time. They are never without unless they are continuously using colon irrigations. They feel fine. They don't have any trouble. They have no autointoxication at all.

Chairman Connolly: Could you for the purpose of the records give us a concise medical definition of autointoxication? We have been talking about it all day. I don't know whether we have a definition of it.

Dr. Rosenow: I don't think I could. I know approximately what is meant by it.

Chairman Connolly: I don't know. I am trying to find out.

Dr. Rosenow: It isn't a term that I use in my practice. It is supposedly all of the various bad feelings that people have as the result of constipation, is my understanding of it, which varies considerably. It may be headaches, it may be backaches, it may be just a general no good feeling, the jitters, the nerves, and all sorts of things. Some of them may be due to that. A most interesting experiment was once done, I think, by Walter Allres who proved this was not autointoxication, but merely a nervous reflection. Some people that have an upset stomach get other things purely through their nervous systems as a reflection, and what he did was first cleaned out the colon very thoroughly, and then put a wad of cotton in the rectum to stop up the bowel, and within a short period of time they had all the symptoms of autointoxication. Obviously they hadn't had an accumulation of toxins after they were cleaned out to give the symptoms, so he postulated the thing was purely a reflection thing and not an autointoxication.

Chairman Connolly: Just nerves?

Dr. Rosenow: Yes

Chairman Connolly: Do you have any other observations?

Dr Rosenow: One thing that interests me very much is that all things are due to constipation. The misleading thing about these advertisements, and I think that these gentlemen would agree with me, is that all the ills that beset humanity are due to constipation, according to this kind of advertising. Well, that is a pretty safe gimmick, because probably better than 65 percent of the male adult population and probably 85 percent of the female adult are constipated and have symptoms of pretty near anything, so when you see an ad like that, and especially if you see the lists of conditions that they have, there is hardly any possibility that it wouldn't fit some symptoms that the patient complained of, which makes it a very nice "come-on."

Mr. Van Dyke: Doctor, in one of these ads it says that, "One good stool a day means nothing." Would you say that that was true?

Dr. Rosenow: Yes, I think that is true

Mr. Van Dyke: Would you say in one of these ads that it is not at all improbable that many cases of heart failure, paralysis, hernia, reproductive gland failure and uterine displacement may be due to this hitherto unsuspected cause; would you say that is true?

Dr. Rosenow: No. I don't think that is true at all. I think the logic is poor.

Mr. Van Dyke: Do you think autointoxication has anything to do with heart disease?

Dr. Rosenow: No.

Mr. Van Dyke: Cancer?

Dr. Rosenow: No. The logic is poor. It isn't the science necessarily, but even the logic is poor. You take something that everybody has some of, and that is sluggishness of the bowel occasionally, and then go from that. I mean all the people that have these diseases probably at sometime or other are constipated, and it has no relationship. They are coincidental findings. Let's put it that way.

Mr. Howard S. Goldin, Deputy Attorney General, upon examination testified as follows:

Q. Mr. Goldin, you have, I think, been consulted on numerous occasions by members of the Chiropractic Board and others with regard to Dr. L. A. Brinkley, is that right?

A Yes, I have.

Q And have these complaints been made about Dr. Brinkley's advertising to you?

A. Yes, there have been complaints about his advertising.

Q. Well, what advice have you given with regard to his advertising?

A. Mr. Van Dyke, with this group's permission, I think my advice can be best summarized by reference to a letter that I wrote to a member of the Board of Chiropractic Examiners pertaining to this Dr. Brinkley, and with your permission I would like to refer to it.

The letter is addressed to Dr. Erward C. Poulsen, Member of the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners, and is dated July 21, 1950, relative to Lynn Andrew Brinkley, D. C. (New Yorker Offices) and it reads as follows:

"Pursuant to your request, I am forwarding our entire file on Dr. Brinkley, which file is to be returned to me as soon as it serves your purpose. You will recall that for some time the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners in this office have been deluged with complaints relative to the advertising of Dr. Brinkley. Some examples of such advertising material are to be found in the file accompanying this letter.

"It is a cardinal rule that the causes for disciplinary action are limited to those specified by statute, thus Section 10(a) of the Chiropractic Act sets forth the exclusive grounds for which a chiropractor in this State may be disciplined. That section purports to cover advertising of specified types, namely the menstrual period in women, sexual impotence and venereal disease. It would appear that an accusation based upon prohibited advertising would have to be limited to the specific types of advertising designed in Section 10(a). Stated otherwise where a statute frowns upon only specified types of advertising, all other types of advertising would not constitute grounds for disciplinary action. Moreover, the Chiropractic Board by rule cannot add additional advertising grounds for discipline for those enumerated in Section 10(a)."

If I may digress from the letter for a moment, I wish to point out that whereas the initiative act does empower the Board of Chiropractic Examiners to promulgate rules and regulations, it does not make the violation of such rule and regulation a ground for disciplinary action. It has been my understanding of the law, and still is, that by rule the agency may effectuate the legislative declared purpose, but that such rule does not enable the agency to set up new substantive offenses. I am leaving a short portion of my letter which I believe has no relevancy to the matter here under discussion, and then I continue as follows:

"Directing your attention to the wording of the usual Brinkley advertisement, it will be noted that the custom is followed wherein a multitude of lengthy quotes, successively state in effect that, 'A clean intestinal tract is conducive to good health.' Apparently there seems to be no prohibition against such advertising tactics upon the part of Dr. Brinkley or any other chiropractor."

Again digressing, immediately thereafter I wrote the following portion of this letter, and upon reconsideration I have slightly changed my opinion in the manner that I will attempt to explain before this body. I wrote then:

"There is of course a possibility of singling out specific portions of Brinkley's advertising material upon which to base an accusation, but the desirability of following such a procedure is open to question. For example, the customary Brinkley ad recites, and I quote, 'Dr. Brinkley has a staff of more than 125 people, 18 licensed doctors (specialists) and more than 60 specially trained nurses and technicians.' Such statement is misleading in that the public is not informed what type of licenses these 18 alleged doctors possess, nor is there any indication as to the specialty of each of these doctors. However, as a practical matter, it may be unwise to base an accusation upon such an assertion alone in order to preclude Brinkley from getting himself into a position where he could state to the board with full knowledge of his advertising methods, and with samples of his materials before it singled out and charged him with only specific misrepresentation. Certainly we do not wish to tacitly approve the balance of Dr. Brinkley's advertising."

Now with respect to the comment that I just read from my letter of July 21, upon reconsideration I have come to this conclusion that, for example, with reference to this ad that Brinkley has a staff of a certain number of people—18 licensed doctors, specialists, etc.—now Section 17000 of the Business and Professions Code does set up a prohibition against misleading and untrue advertising, and make the violation of that statute a misdemeanor, but there is no disciplinary cause of action based upon misleading and untrue advertising. In other words, a violation of the misdemeanor statute in and of itself is not a ground for disciplinary action under the Chiropractic Act unless the Administrative Act does make it a ground for disciplinary action, and it doesn't with reference to this particular statute.

Now, I conclude my letter with the following comments:

"In conclusion, your attention is directed to the provisions of the recent Section 17500.1 of the Business and Professions Code which precludes a State Board or Commission within the Department of Professional and Vocational Standards from enacting a rule or regulation restricting or prohibiting advertising which does not violate the provisions of Section 17500 of the Business and Professions Code. Section 17500.1 repeals the existing rules and regulations conflicting with said section. Since Section 17500 of the Business and Professions Code does not contain any prohibition against 'sensational or fabulous' matters, it would seem that the enactment of the new section would invalidate the board's Rule No. 311 in so far as it relates to 'fabulous and sensational' material."

I believe, gentlemen, that is the last portion of this letter which would have any significance to this body, and then I signed it. I believe that the comments contained in that communication just about express my legal analysis as to our ability to proceed against Dr. Brinkley under the present state of the law.

Q. Do you have any recommendations, Mr. Goldin, as to changes?

A. I have some, but before I venture them, may I make it clear that these suggestions are purely tentative. They are not based upon any substantial research, and are merely advanced as thoughts which might bear further investigation. I have not exhaustively researched the problems, and I don't profess to talk as an oracle on the law, but I am merely throwing these suggestions out for whatever consideration this body deems them worthy of.

Now, before I proceed to my own suggestions, for the first time this morning I did see a list of proposed legislative changes that the Board of Chiropractic Examiners now advocates. Unfortunately I had never seen them before this morning. I rather suspect that they were drafted after consultation with one of our deputies in the northern branches, but unfortunately I personally have no knowledge as to their contents, nor have I satisfied myself as to their merits, but with respect to my own suggestions of a tentative nature, I believe that a more stringent penal statute on falsifying is desirable. The difficulty with the present statute lies in the proof necessary to sustain a conviction under that statute.

Now, my second suggestion relates to the existence of a section in the Health and Safety Code, No. 26271 which deals with falsifying. That section provides that, "The advertisement of a drug or device shall be false within the meaning of this division if the drug or device is represented to have any effect on certain specified enumerated diseases." My thought would be to include in that section after the word device, the words, "or course of treatment." In other words, the type of advertising promulgated by the Brinkley interests can't be reached under this section because evidently neither drugs nor devices are utilized in that particular technique, but I believe that if there is the insertion of the words, "or course of treatment," the statute may be broad enough to then eliminate a substantial portion of the evil.

Now, I believe that that same comment that I made pertaining to Section 26271 may also be utilized in 26270 which reads, "An advertisement of a drug or device shall be deemed to be false if it is false or misleading in any material particular." My suggestion would be again to add the words, "or course of treatment" after the word "device" as appearing in that section.

Now, in other words, my suggestion stated quite simply, to make it unlawful for advertising a course of treatment as having an effect on specified diseases.

Mr. Smith: Is it course or cost?

A. It is C-O-U-R-S-E. They are not contained in the statute at present. That is purely a suggestion emanating from myself.

Now, my last suggestion follows these particular channels: I realize of course that the Chiropractic Act is one which came into being as an initiative measure, but it is my understanding that that does not preclude the Legislature from setting up additional clauses for disciplinary action against chiropractors. Now, to my mind, the fact that the chiropractic law was set up by initiative doesn't mean that the Legislature has no authority to pass legislation which supplements the Initiative Act, provided that such legislation is not inconsistent with the Initiative Act, but rather is consistent with it.

Now, I have one particular pet hate as concerns the causes for disciplinary action under the Chiropractic Act. I am not particularly satisfied with the complaint with which this body is going to be particularly concerned, but, for example, under the present state of the chiropractic law, let's assume that Joe Dokes, chiropractor, is charged with the crime of abortion. He enters a plea of guilty, but the court suspends the proceedings before the imposition of judgment. Now, it is impossible in the absence of a conviction—and there is no judgment of conviction when proceedings are suspended prior to the imposition of sentence—at the present time for the board to prove the facts of an abortion and discipline the particular chiropractor. Now, in other words, the situation may well result that you have two individuals, Joe Dokes who by the grace of God and in the court's leniency he is lucky in that no judgment of conviction is pronounced against him. We can't do a thing to him, whereas we can get the chiropractor who is convicted of the crime involving moral turpitude. Now, to my mind I think that is a pretty obvious deficiency in the law.

Mr. Rumford: You said convicted of the crime of moral turpitude?

A. Yes.

Mr. Rumford: He has been convicted. Isn't that the same thing?

A. There is no judgment of conviction in the event that proceedings are suspended prior to the imposition of sentence, in which event we have no judgment of conviction upon which to predicate a disciplinary action. If, of course, a judgment is pronounced and the execution of sentence is suspended, in that event we do have a judgment of conviction upon which we can maintain a disciplinary action. In other words, whether we can or cannot proceed may depend upon the particular point in the proceeding, which proceedings are suspended before or after the imposition of judgment. Do I make myself clear?

Mr. Rumford: You made yourself clear as far as the chiropractor is concerned, but the case of moral turpitude is not clear in my mind.

Chairman Connolly: Under the Medical Practice Act, as I understand it, the situation you recite would result differently, where disciplinary action could be imposed even though there was no guilty plea or anything else.

A. I don't purport to be an expert on the Medical Practice Act, but I am fairly well satisfied that your statement is true.

Chairman Connolly: So there is a difference between the two situations?

A. Yes, that is right.

Based upon the findings of the hearing regarding Dr. Brinkley, the committee makes the following recommendations together with recommendations regarding physical therapists:

The testimony indicates that the advertising of Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D.C., at the time of the hearing was somewhat in excess of $325,000 for the year 1950. It would appear therefore that at the present rate, the total expenditure for 1950 would be over $500,000. Testimony indicated that Dr. Brinkley's advertising consisted of quotations from publications of other persons, which quotations were inserted in the papers without the authors' consent. It does not appear from Dr. Brinkley's advertising that he definitely states that he can cure diseases which are set forth in his advertisements, many of which are deemed incurable. The statements contained in such advertising do state that autointoxication may be the cause of such diseases. By implication, therefore, this advertising is both untrue and misleading.

It was brought to the attention of the committee that the recent Section 17500.1 of the Business and Professions Code precluded a state board or commission within the Department of Professional and Vocational Standards from enacting a rule or regulation restricting or prohibiting advertising which does not violate the provisions of Section 17500 of the Business and Professions Code. Section 17500.1 repeals the existing rules and regulations conflicting with said section. Section 17500 of said code makes unlawful the dissemination of untrue or misleading statements. It does not contain any prohibition against sensational or fabulous advertisements.

It should be noted that the Chiropractic Act, Section 10A, provides for the suspension and revocation of the license of any person who violates its provisions regarding advertising. As this section stands, there is no mention of any prohibitions with regard to advertising except advertisements to cure (a) menstrual difficulties, (b) venereal diseases, (c) sexual diseases, (d) lost manhood, (e) sexual weakness or sexual disorders or any disease of the sex organs. The State Board of Chiropractic Examiners in addition instituted a regulation known as "Rule 311," with regard to advertisements. This rule is as follows:

> "311. Advertisements Constructive educational publicity is encouraged, but the use by any licensee of advertising which contains mis-statements, falsehoods, misrepresentations, distorted, sensational or fabulous statements, or which is intended or has a tendency to deceive the public or impose upon credulous or ignorant persons, constitutes grounds for the imposition of any of the following disciplinary penalties: (a) Suspension of said licensee's right to practice in this State for a period not exceeding one (1) year. (b) Placing said licensee upon probation (c) Taking such other action, excepting the revocation of said licensee's license, in relation to disciplining said licensee as the board in its discretion may deem proper."

It should be noted that Rule 311 provides for disciplinary action for distorted, sensational or fabulous statements in advertisements.

In view of Section 17500.1 of the Business and Professions Code, it appears that the board's Rule 311 has been invalidated Section 17500 of the Business and Professions Code does not contain any prohibition against "sensational or fabulous" matters, and it appears therefore that such a provision cannot be had by any rule of the Chiropractic Board.

Recommendations

I. At the hearing conducted on November 17, 1950, various members of the Chiropractic Board appeared before the committee, and at that time they requested two additions to the chiropractic section Dr. Poulsen, secretary of the board, stated to the committee that with these two additions they should be able to take care of their problem with regard to the type of advertising used by Dr. L. A. Brinkley, D C It is therefore recommended that the following additions be made to the Chiropractic Act, substantially as follows:

(a) The employing directly or indirectly of any suspended or unlicensed practitioner in the practice of any system or mode of treating the sick or afflicted, or the aiding or abetting of any unlicensed person to practice any system or mode of treating the sick or afflicted, constitutes unprofessional conduct within the meaning of this chapter. Unprofessional conduct is defined as follows: The procuring, aiding or abetting in procuring of criminal abortion, paying for steering patients into one's office, obtaining a fee on the assurance that a manifestly incurable disease can be made entirely well, the wilful betrayal of professional secrets of a patient to the detriment of the patient, chiropractic advertisements making false or unethical claims, conviction of any offense involving moral turpitude, wilful neglect of a patient in a critical condition.

(b) That there shall be no advertising of prices for any course of treatment; that there shall be no displaying of any internal organs in advertising; that no statements or claims shall be made in advertising that cannot be substantiated by standard diagnostic and laboratory methods; and no advertising permitted which may be construed as comparative.

With regard to the above changes recommended by the Chiropractic Board to the Chiropractic Act, the record contains testimony of Howard S. Goldin, of the Attorney General's office, that even though the Chiropractic Act is an initiative measure, it does empower the Board of Chiropractic Examiners to promulgate rules and regulations, and that the Legislature is not precluded from setting up additional clauses for disciplinary action against chiropractors. Specifically, Mr. Goldin made the following statement: "The fact that the Chiropractic Law was set up by initiative doesn't mean that the Legislature has no authority to pass legislation which supplements the initiative act, providing that such legislation is not inconsistent with the initiative act but rather is consistent with it."

II. It is recommended that Section 26271 of the Health and Safety Code be amended to prohibit the use of testimonials for the diseases listed in that section. That Section 26270 and Section 26271 of the Health and Safety Code be amended to include the words "* * * or course of treatment." Such an inclusion would make it unlawful to advertise a course of treatment as having an effect on the diseases specified in that section

III. It is recommended that a new section be added to the Business and Professions Code, under Part 3 of said code which deals with representations to the public, which section would provide that where quotations are made in such advertisements from any person or any writing, the advertisement contain a statement showing specific consent and authority by the author for the use of such quotations. That further when such quotations are used for advertising purposes, the exact qualifications should be stated in such advertisement, showing the author's qualifications to make such a statement, and also the time when such statement or writing was made by the author.

IV. It is recommended that any advertisements which contain statements that a professional man is employing doctors or specialists or specially trained nurses and technicians, etc., that such advertisement must contain information showing what kind of doctors are employed, and what type of specialists, nurses and technicians, are employed when such advertisement contains a statement to the effect that these latter employees are "specially trained."

ALCOHOLISM

LEGISLATION FOR THE TREATMENT OF ALCOHOLICS[1]

The popular conception of the alcoholic is the "skid-row" derelict—the stuporous drunk, the panhandler, the court repeater. The problem of alcoholism is thought to be essentially one of community eyesore and nuisance. This is erroneous. "Alcoholism is no respecter of age, sex, family background, education, professional competence and success, or financial position." The skid-row derelict represents only a very small fraction of the total alcoholic population. Less conspicuous is the alcoholic businessman, the lawyer, the schoolteacher, or the skilled worker living in the suburbs with his family. Alcoholism has been the object of surveys, research, political campaigns, hundreds of laws, even a constitutional amendment. This note will deal with only a limited segment of the entire problem: the need for state legislation providing for the rehabilitations of the alcoholic. Many authorities believe that a sound rehabilitation program, in addition to serving an immediate need, is the most effective method for prevention of alcoholism. It offers an early check on incipient alcoholics and has a considerable educational influence on the nonalcoholic population.

What is alcoholism? Authorities stress the fact that it is a health problem and not a penal one. It is a resultant of two factors; the individual's original psychological maladjustment, and the depressant effect of alcohol which creates of itself new maladjustments. The alcoholic feels he cannot successfully adjust to his environment without alcohol, but actually he cannot adjust successfully so long as he uses alcohol. The problem, then, is not solely alcohol but the individual and the manner in which he uses it. When an alcoholic shows pronounced mental and physical degeneration, he is termed "chronic."

Alcoholics are to be distinguished from the social and the excessive drinker. Social drinkers are in no way dependent on alcohol for adjustment to the problems of life. They constitute approximately 94 percent of the drinking population. The excessive drinker exposes himself to sufficiently large quantities of alcohol to interfere with his job, family, or community responsibilities. But drinking has not become his major means of adjustment. The excessive drinker is the incipient alcoholic.

I. EXTENT OF THE PROBLEM

It is estimated that there were 3,750,000 alcoholics in the United States in 1945, of which 750,000 were chronic. The rate of alcoholism has increased since that time. The magnitude of the problem is best demonstrated by the financial burden cast upon the community. An estimated 3,000,000 alcoholics in 1940 cost communities in the United States approximately the following amounts: 12 million dollars for care in mental hospitals; 18 million dollars as the excess over normally expected cost of illness; 188 million dollars as the probable cost of crime in large part referable to them; 89 million dollars in accidents resulting in injuries and property damage; 25 million dollars for maintenance of "drunk tanks" in county jails; 21 million dollars for support of alcoholics' dependents by private welfare agencies; 431 million dollars as the total wage loss—a total of over 778 million dollars. If adjusted for the increased rate of alcoholism, the cost probably would be in excess of 1 billion dollars.

California had the highest number of chronic alcoholics per capita of any state in 1944 In 1947, there were 283,000 alcoholics of whom 71,000 were chronic Alcoholism was listed in California as a primary or secondary cause in more than 1,000 deaths in 1946—probably an underestimate Another 554 persons were killed that year in automobile accidents involving intoxicated drivers More than 1,000 alcoholics are committed to California mental hospitals each year. Now that much attention is directed toward prevention of sex crimes, it must be recognized that alcoholism is a contributing cause of these crimes.

However, California's alcoholic problem is reflected most significantly in the cost of arrests for drunkenness in our cities. California's Special Crime Study Commission found that alcoholism is one of the major problems facing law enforcement agencies today. Among 13 of the largest cities in the United States, San Francisco and Los Angeles ranked first and second in the number of arrests for drunkenness per 100,000 population in 1946. Sixty percent of the 72,000 arrests in San Francisco were for drunkenness; estimates of the cost average about 1 million dollars or approximately $23 per arrest Figures for Los Angeles are comparable; 92,000 arrests for drunkenness, representing over two-thirds of all arrests. Estimated cost to the city was 2 5 million dollars, more than $27 per arrest. This penal handling is not localized to San Francisco and Los Angeles—it is a state-wide community problem. The total cost for police measures for alcoholics in California is probably between six and ten million dollars annually. This seems conservative; the Los Angeles County budget allocation to alcoholics is over 4 million dollars. These figures are more significant if it is remembered that only about one-tenth of the alcoholic population run into impact with the police. By conservative estimate, California's share of the total cost of alcoholism must be well over 50 million dollars a year.

II. IS THERE A SOLUTION?

While it appears that a single "cure" for all alcoholics is impossible in the light of present knowledge, authorities agree that rehabilitation is possible Predictions of the percentage of alcoholics who can be successfully rehabilitated vary according to the comprehensiveness of the program and the rehabilitation goal set. For these reasons, estimates range from 40 percent to 80 percent. Success in rehabilitation is a relative term The director of the Connecticut Commission on Alcoholism asks:

> "What do we mean by success? Do we mean that under treatment patients develop complete sobriety, losing their dependence on alcohol, and become thoroughly adjusted and contributing members of the society? Or do we mean that patients are termed successes when their addiction to alcohol has been corrected and their marital and societal conflicts are in better balance, and adjustments to them are made from an intelligent and realistic approach? There are all degrees of success."

With elimination of drinking and integration of the individual into an acceptable environment as the standard, a very high rehabilitation rate is possible through a state program. Even conservative estimates justify the cost of state intervention.

III. CAUSATIVE PATHS

An understanding of the causative paths to alcoholism is necessary in evaluating present rehabilitation measures and in the development of new ones Alcoholics practically defy complete classification. A partial categorization, however, must be made though it represents an oversimplification of the picture In general, there appears to be: (1) symptomatic drinking, (2) problem drinking, (3) habituated drinking, and (4) compulsive drinking.

Symptomatic drinkers have underlying disorders such as feeblemindedness, epilepsy, senility, or one of the psychoses. In the case of psychotics, for example, special treatment apart from that for the alcoholism is essential. It is difficult to determine whether an underlying basic disorder exists until the individual is taken away from his alcohol environment and studied The underlying disorder may then be diagnosed, and care in a mental institution provided

The problem drinker classification includes those who drink as an escape from or "solution" to some psychological maladjustment. These persons are not psychotics, rather, they are individuals with deep-seated personality problems Considerable psychotherapy is necessary either to eliminate the basic maladjustment or provide adjustment to it. The limits of this class are difficult to define.

The habituated drinker apparently has no underlying serious maladjustment or neurosis Therapy designed to interrupt established habit patterns and substitute new ones appears essential The "chronic social misfit" may be classified as an habitual drinker. He has always existed on the fringe of society, and presents the most difficult rehabilitation problem since he never knew a better life and has little desire to attain sobriety Many persons erroneously believe all alcoholics are of this type.

There also appear to be compulsive drinkers—actual alcohol addicts. Addiction may appear in connection with one of the other causes of alcoholism. They may have an acquired uncontrollable craving for alcohol, or initially had a special predilection for or sensitivity to alcohol. Much additional research probably will be necessary before an explanation for addiction will be found.

These causative paths must be considered essentially primary. There usually is a secondary reinforcing factor which leads to alcoholism or increases its severity: for example, the physical effects of a hangover may be so severe that drinking is immediately resumed to diminish the pain. In many cases the excessive drinking creates imaginary problems which lead to increased drinking to anesthetize their influence. These alcoholgenic problems make periods of abstinence essential to the success of any rehabilitation program.

We have considered briefly the complexity of the alcoholic's personality, the seriousness of the effects of alcohol upon him, and the extent to which alcoholism pervades and burdens community life. From this it is clear that any satisfactory rehabilitation program must include medical and psychotherapeutic treatment and social welfare assistance, as well as special environmental control for alcoholics. Is California meeting this need?

IV. CALIFORNIA'S PRESENT TREATMENT

All authorities concede that treatment of this problem by California's governmental agencies is inadequate. In consists, in general, of commitment to state mental hospitals and, on the local level, the "revolving door" treatment or confinement in county jails or farms.

State Mental Hospitals

Sections 5400 through 5408 of the Welfare and Institutions Code provide that upon the filing of an affidavit by any interested party, a superior court judge shall hold a hearing to determine if a person is "subject to dipsomania or inebriety in such a degree as to require custodial care and treatment." If so, the alcoholic may be committed for a maximum of two years to a mental hospital or confined in an industrial farm or road camp, or in a branch of the county jail where inmates perform agricultural and other out-of-doors labor. If the alcoholic is dissatisfied with the court's commitment order, he may demand a jury trial on the issue. Approximately 30 percent of first admissions to mental hospitals in 1948 were made under these provisions. Those who have definite psychoses, and have developed alcoholism as a result, should be treated by the mental hospitals. However, mental hospitals are in no position to handle the usual nonpsychotic alcoholic. Because of limited facilities, the mental hospitals are usually unable to segregate alcoholics from psychotics. The effectiveness of any therapy will be greatly diminished if there is no segregation. The director of one state mental hospital has observed that little more is done for the alcoholic at the present time other than "drying up" the physical need for alcohol, giving some additional medical care and limited occupational therapy, and encouraging contact with Alcoholics Anonymous. Despite this inadequate treatment, the rehabilitation rate has been reported as high as 25 percent—and if follow-up care on release were available, the rate would undoubtedly be higher. Though alcoholics may be committed for a two-year maximum term, some judges refuse to commit them for longer than a three-month period. This is inadequate for effective rehabilitation. The attitude of other courts is not to commit alcoholics to mental hospitals if they are not psychotic. Even the limited treatment facilities of a state mental hospital are unavailable to the great majority of alcoholics.

An alternative statutory method of handling alcoholics is theoretically available in California. The Inebriate Colony Act of 1939 provides for the establishment of state inebriate colonies, and allows commitment of alcoholics to the colonies. Unfortunately, no funds have ever been appropriated for these colonies.

The Revolving Door

At the local level, the so-called "revolving door" treatment is prevalent. Drunks are picked up on the streets, jailed overnight, and released the next morning—perhaps to be arrested again within a few hours and the procedure repeated The revolving door treatment is denounced as "ineffective, expensive and undesirable." It has no advocates or defenders.

In San Francisco, for example, an average of 119 drunks are arrested per day. As many as eight men may occupy an unfurnished cell six by seven feet in size. There is no need to emphasize the conditions inevitably arising from such crowded confinement. Judge Twain Michelson of San Francisco has called this "cruel and unusual punishment." Yet, San Francisco's jail treatment is not unusual. Ninety-seven percent of all those arrested are released the next morning without further consideration. Those who are so sick or battered that they cannot maneuver on their own go to a county hospital for medical care but receive no treatment for the alcoholism itself. Though no records have been maintained, 153 persons interviewed in the San Francisco jail had been arrested an average of 50 times per person. Those whom the judge recognizes as chronic repeaters or who volunteer may receive short-term sentences to county jails or farms. Short-term sentences are relatively worthless for rehabilitation purposes since treatment for the alcoholism is rarely given.

County Rehabilitation Centers

The Welfare and Institutions Code was amended last year to provide that "Where a rehabilitation center for the care and treatment of inebriates" is maintained by a county, voluntary patients may be committed to it without a hearing. No provision had previously been made either at the state or local level for voluntary patients. A number of counties maintain farms or work projects to which alcoholics and other prisoners may be sent. Confinement to a farm or work project may be beneficial where rehabilitation treatment is given. However, at the present time, only Los Angeles, Alameda, and San Francisco counties appear to have "rehabilitation centers" which could qualify under the new code section.

Neither this commitment procedure, nor the revolving door treatment offers much encouragement to the "hidden alcoholics"—the estimated 9 percent whose behavior has not yet brought them into contact with law enforcement machinery. A proper expenditure of the money presently wasted upon such a grossly inadequate handling of the problem might well result in a great reduction of the number of alcoholics, and perhaps, in an eventual elimination of alcoholism as a major health problem.

V. RECOMMENDED PROGRAM

At least 23 states now have statutes providing for public education, investigation, or some treatment of alcoholics. The programs in Connecticut, New Hampshire, and the District of Columbia seem to be among the most advanced. Current activity indicates that other states may enact legislation during 1950.

The 1949 session of the California Legislature witnessed the presentation of bills covering some aspects of a rehabilitation program This was the first major demonstration of California legislative interest in the subject of alcoholism. State action is necessary to insure adequate standards in rehabilitation, obviate the inertia of local governments, avoid wasteful duplication of facilities, cope with the problem of the alcoholic "floater," and provide facilities which local governments could not or would not finance independently.

Administrative Machinery

One authority recommends that the commission be an independent agency rather than one incorporated within an existing department. This would give more adequate recognition to the importance of the problem. However, balanced against the advantages of an independent commission is the general reluctance to create new agencies and multiply administrative costs. The consensus at the recent San Francisco meeting of the Assembly Interim Subcommittee on Alcoholism seemed to be in favor of establishing the machinery within the Department of Public Health.

The commission—whether independent or incorporated in an existing department—should be given full power and adequate finances to inaugurate a basic program and expand as further experience and research dictate. It should be given wide discretion. To tie its hands with an inflexible detailed program based on present experience and surmise, would impede development of new treatment methods. However, it is necessary to understand the basic features of a workable rehabilitation program in order to draft a proper enabling statute.

Apprehension and Screening

The initial concern of a rehabilitation program necessarily is to provide machinery to bring the alcoholic under the care of the commission. A screening center should be established employing full or part-time medical, psychiatric, and psychological services At the screening center, patients would be given necessary medication by an attending physician and kept overnight. In the morning, they would receive a thorough mental and physical examination Social drinkers could be separated from the alcoholics and incipient cases. Clinic personnel would prepare case history records and recommend further disposition for those in need of treatment. No state has, as yet, this type of facility for the screening of all alcoholics.

The screening center would receive alcoholics from three sources: (1) police arrests for drunkenness, (2) apprehension upon affidavits filed by family, friends, or other interested persons, or (3) voluntary application for treatment.

Our initial problem is to eliminate the revolving door, yet maintain the police apprehension of drunks. The revolving door is authorized by the California Constitution which permits local governments to enact such police, sanitary, and other regulations as are not in conflict with state laws To make this local procedure illegal, the Legislature must: (1) repeal Section 647(11) of the Penal Code which makes drunkenness a penal offense; (2) designate the alcoholic to be a health problem and subject to compulsory screening and treatment; and (3) provide that persons found drunk in a public place must be delivered immediately by local police authorities to screening centers to the extent of the commission's ability to handle them.

Clinic screening is preferable to the drunk tank since it offers early diagnosis and prevention. In the beginning, the excess above the program's capacity could be handled by the local governments in the usual way to insure some protective custody—an unfortunate, but necessary measure until adequate facilities are established. The continuation of the revolving door, or some modification, by the local governments for this excess would be legal since the state law conflict occurs only as to those for whom adequate commission facilities are available.

The commission should be empowered to order the apprehension of hidden alcoholics upon the filing of affidavits by friends, relatives, or other persons. The threat of a civil suit would protect the individual from affidavits being filed that are not based on reasonable belief An alcoholic should be defined, for legal purposes, as:

> "Any person who chronically and habitually uses alcoholic beverages to the extent that he has lost the power of self-control with respect to the use of such beverages, or while chronically and habitually under the influence of alcoholic beverages endangers public morals, health, safety or welfare"

Legislation should authorize the commission to accept voluntary patients for screening. Hidden alcoholics are often keenly aware of their need and desperately in search of help. Sympathetic personnel and an attractive physical plant will be invaluable in encouraging them to submit voluntarily to treatment.

Alcoholics arrested for criminal offenses probably should be screened by the clinic, as well. This procedure would enable the court to make a more intelligent disposition of cases. Commitment to a course of treatment for alcoholism would often be desirable in addition to or, in the case of minor offenses, as a substitute for jail sentences.

Commitment

Within a "reasonable time" after the alcoholic arrives at a screening center, the commission should be required to initiate commitment proceedings or release the alcoholic Symptomatic Drinkers. For those who are diagnosed symptomatic alcoholics, the commission should be empowered to institute court commitment proceedings to mental institutions under Division 6, Part 1 of the Welfare and Institutions Code. The commission should not be charged with the care of these alcoholics since other agencies are trained and better equipped to handle them. The court's commitment order should provide for transfer of the patient to the commission's care where subsequent guidance under the alcoholism rehabilitation program becomes feasible.

Other alcoholics.—Legislation should be adopted requiring the courts to commit all other alcholics to the care of the commission. The commission should be given the exclusive authority to institute such commitment proceedings. It would be undesirable to provide for jury trials since the question whether or not an individual is an alcoholic is one for experts. Jury trials are time-consuming and expensive. They are not a constitutional requirement in inebriacy commitments Commitment even by a court has undesirable aspects, however. It would be somewhat cumbersome and expensive under a large-scale program. The "criminal" nature of the proceedings would tend to have a negative effect on the alcoholic and increase his resistance to treatment. Since the alcoholic was diagnosed by the screening clinic, it would be desirable to create a commitment board composed of its professional personnel. They would be most qualified to determine the need for treatment. This would eliminate the penal flavor of court procedure and avoid multiple handling. Commitment by such an administrative board does, however, raise some important constitutional problems which would have to be considered by the Legislature before adoption. Whether the board or the court commitment procedure should be used depends upon whether the desirability of a board commitment warrants the risk of a court battle over its constitutionality.

Term of commitment.—Whether the courts are to continue handling commitment procedures or authority is placed in a board, legislation should require the committing authority to detain an alcoholic for some minimum period of treatment. The judges who are reluctant to commit for a longer period than three months seem unaware of the complexity of the alcoholic's problem. Mandatory indefinite commitment—until satisfactory rehabilitation is achieved—would be even more desirable than a minimum sentence. The commission could release the alcoholic on probationary status after short confinement. To protect against unwarranted retention, the alcoholic should be given a right to petition the commission at certain intervals for a hearing on the question of whether he is entitled to release. The commission should not have discretion to deny a hearing. If no administrative remedy is provided, however, the writ of habeas corpus would always be available on the ground that once he is "cured" he would no longer be subject to the commission's jurisdiction.

Treatment

After screening is completed, and the alcoholic has been committed to the care of the commission, the actual treatment would begin. The rehabilitation program should have four main functions: (1) medical care, (2) psychotherapy, (3) coordination with social welfare and other agencies, and (4) research.

Medical care.—It is clear that there can be no successful rehabilitation without providing medical care for the alcoholic. As one authority states,

> "The physical condition of the alcoholic * * * will often be poor. * * * For some days or weeks, or longer, the individual is likely to have had insufficient and irregular food and rest, suffered from one or several accidents, and lived in a state of emotional uproar. There may be accompanying conditions not directly related to the spree, e. g., arthritis, head injuries, skin disorders."

It will be essential to put him in a proper physical condition to respond to the treatment of his basic psychological problem. This is particularly true in the case of chronic alcoholics, where the need for medical care is imperative.

Medical care could be provided in general hospitals. This, however, presents a threefold problem. There is a general shortage of present hospital space; hospital care is expensive; there is a reluctance on the part of hospitals (and physicians) to accept any alcoholic for treatment. An unsympathetic attitude will impede successful rehabilitation. Since hospitalization is usually necessary only for short periods some provision might be made for medical treatment in the screening clinic, or in facilities set up for psychological treatment. Where medical care and psychotherapy can be administered simultaneously, speedy recovery will be aided. Arrangements for long-term care in hospitals could be made for the exceptional cases.

Psychological care—Treatment of the alcoholic's underlying psychological problem may range from complete psychiatric treatment in an institution to informal guidance on an outpatient basis. Though symptomatic alcoholics would not be handled within the commission's treatment program, there should be cooperation with mental institutions to secure the maximum treatment for the alcoholism consistent with the special treatment necessary for the mental disorder. Permanent institutional care may be necessary in extreme cases of chronic alcoholism.

At the next level are patients who, though nonsymptomatic, need intensive psychotherapy. They would be poor rehabilitation risks if allowed to remain at large, and should be removed from the streets to eliminate the cost of the present revolving door handling. Many are presently unemployable, without families, or other responsibilities. They require a controlled environment. Treatment should include physical rehabilitation and psychological guidance to encourage self-confidence and responsibility, as well as occupational training for placement in favorable outside environment. A farm probably would be the least expensive method of providing a controlled custody since inmates could be relatively self-sustaining. Alameda County, through its Santa Rita farm, is presently experimenting with the possibilities of such a treatment center.

The alcoholic who shows sufficient promise at screening should be treated on an outpatient basis. Many, perhaps most, alcoholics will be rehabilitated by this method alone. It is the core of the program. Alcoholics who receive institutional, farm, or inpatient treatment must also have this outpatient follow-up care if they are to retain sobriety. An outpatient clinic would conduct periodic guidance interviews and aid in the alcoholic's adjustment to his environment. Treatment and screening clinics often could be combined to prevent duplication of personnel and plant requirements. A study of the facilities established by the Yale group, as well as the clinic recently inaugurated in San Francisco, will be valuable in planning clinic layout and procedure. In small communities where the alcoholic load does not warrant a full-scale independent clinic, it might be expedient to incorporate a screening and treatment clinic within existing hospitals.

Coordination with other agencies—Clinics would also have an important function of coordinating the services of various social welfare groups such as Alcoholics Anonymous, which has proved to be of enormous aid in rehabilitation. These agencies may help provide the vital need of the outpatient for food, clothing, shelter, and satisfactory employment, as well as help in expanding his social contacts and interests. Re-education of the alcoholic's family to change their attitude toward him may be necessary.

Research—Various organizations have endorsed an Assembly bill appropriating three million dollars for the construction of two 250-bed research hospitals for alcoholics. This would be one practical method of insuring a continuous, concentrated inquiry into the cause of alcoholism. In the long run the development of inexpensive, improved techniques might justify the cost. However, large institutions have generally had poor rehabilitation success. Many states which established hospitals subsequently abandoned them. It seems advisable to postpone this proposal until the commission acquires more evidence of the need for such hospitals. It is possible that use of outpatient clinics and farms may prove so successful that these research hospitals would be relatively unnecessary. The incorporation of inpatient facilities in the treatment clinic will give an opportunity for some research.

Financing

The cost of a state rehabilitation program will ultimately depend on the decision of the commission as to the type of treatment facilities that are to be established. To the extent that existing city and county facilities can be utilized by the commission, the cost of a state program may be reduced. The initial appropriation should be sufficient to allow the inauguration of pilot programs in key areas. When subsequent commission estimates are available, the Legislature must provide adequate financial backing if the rehabilitation program is going to be successful. The fate accorded the 1939 Inebriate Colony Act should not await the new program. A provision for an assured percentage of state revenues, perhaps from liquor taxes, would avoid uncertainty in planning. If the commission is placed under the authority of an existing department, separate funds should be maintained. Otherwise, the funds might be siphoned off for other projects of the department.

The commission should be authorized to fix the cost of treatment per patient and require alcoholics with financial means or those liable for their support to pay for this treatment, in whole or in part. Alcoholics usually are quite willing to pay for their treatment and could often do so after they are rehabilitated. The commission should be authorized to accept gifts or grants from any source consistent with the legislative program.

VI. CONCLUSION

Alcoholism has become one of the most serious and complex health problems in the United States today. Only a small part of its burden can be measured in terms of money; even that totals hundreds of millions of dollars yearly. The problem is especially acute in California, where the rate of alcoholism is the highest in the Nation. Most people have some idea of the seriousness of the situation; most people are not aware of the fact that a considerable percentage of alcoholics can be rehabilitated if given adequate treatment. California's attempts to deal with alcoholism are completely inadequate. The present legislation which treats alcoholism as a penal problem should be abolished. A commission should be created with full powers to establish and operate a state-wide program of rehabilitation. The cost of such a program would not be small, but it could not approach the cost of alcoholism—over 50 million dollars a year in California alone.

LOS ANGELES MEETING

October 13, 1950

The first speaker to testify before the committee was Dr. Lawrence Kolb, Deputy Director of the Department of Mental Hygiene, who testified as follows:

"It is difficult to separate the acute from the chronic—one runs into another. We have given this matter a lot of thought in the department, and to start off, I might mention that we do do something about this already in the mental hospitals. I have prepared a table here which may be of interest to you, the admissions during the year of those who are insane with alcoholism, and those who are just chronic alcoholics. Also, what the other states do might be of some interest perhaps. We think several things should be done about chronic alcoholism, perhaps through the department, but I do not feel we can handle this alone, because there are probably two to three hundred thousand people arrested in the State in a year for drunkenness. The largest problem to be handled is the local problem of cities and counties. You cannot disassociate the police factor from this problem all together, although it has been stressed too much, we think.

"One of the most important things is prevention. We, of course, have been working on the treatment angle of it. We believe a better education on alcoholism would help to a certain extent and that education should be given in the schools more than is now given, so that children during the impressionable age when things sink in on them would get an accurate idea of what excessive drinking does, and would be more careful as they go on in life about drinking to excess and becoming alcoholics.

"In this connection, you can never tell in the beginning when people start to drink which will be chronic alcoholics. There is apparently nothing to size up a person to show that those personalities are different from those who do not become so. We know that the social environment and the conditions people are up against often start their drinking. We believe some people are especially sensitive, both psychologically and physically, so the more we can do to prevent them from indulging socially, the fewer we will have. So, education is one of the features which would have an effect on this thing.

"Another thing I think, and I think the department agrees, is making it more difficult for people to get drinks. I believe we did have a wartime closing hour of 12 o'clock. That was a very simple thing but after it went out of effect, highway patrolmen noticed that the highway accidents had a curve up. They attribute that to excessive drinking. I think that modifying the law to restrict the hours of sale would be helpful. England, as you know, put this on during the first world war and they have kept it because it was so effective, and I think that method would be effective in reducing excessive drinking.

"On the treatment level, we believe in the Department of Mental Hygiene that outpatient clinics would be a preventive, as well as a treatment measure, for people who have gone on to chronic alcoholism. We can't handle the total program in hospitals, as Mr. Connolly has stated, but some hospitalization is desirable, even for chronic alcoholism. The thing we have had in mind for several years was two small hospitals—one in the north and one in the south—where we would treat a few alcoholics and do some research about it. We do not know everything about this thing. We could use these hospitals also in connection with the university educational program. As we have thought about it, more and more, we believe these hospitals should be in Los Angeles and San Francisco, and I have been thinking maybe 100 beds would do, and then have a large outpatient department operated by the State where we would treat chronic types after they leave the hospital, with certain kinds of treatment. That would be one help the State might give while it was studying it, while also treating the patients more intensively at these hospitals than we were able to in the large state hospitals. We used to take them into the state hospitals and practically nothing was done for them except abstinence. Nothing was done in a therapeutic way about it, but now we are carrying on, as you probably know, we are using group psychotherapy on these people and at all of our hospitals we have Alcoholics Anonymous clubs. We encourage them to join Alcoholics Anonymous groups after they leave the hospital.

"There have been various thoughts coming up in the department and perhaps they come from the outside, about an Alcoholic Commission to study the subject and establish clinics, etc., and I don't know but what it might be a good idea, but we believe the participation of the State would be a good thing. I do not know just in what manner, but I think in small hospitals here and there. As an illustration, in Boston they have the Washington Hospital which is not run by the state but by a local agency. It has 45 beds and patients come there both on a voluntary basis and by temporary commitment. They have to stay at least three days to sober up and take some psychotherapy. The temporary commitment is for three weeks and psychotherapy is given. The average stay is from a few days up to a year. That hospital has an organization in connection with the social activities and the various agencies of the city. They have encouraged their patients' participation in Alcoholics Anonymous and have really done a very good job. It is quite an alcoholic city—equal with our cities here, which is saying something! That is the type of institution which can be useful.

"There is another thing which could be done about the acute cases which are continually being arrested by the police—we have heard about cases where men have been arrested once or twice a day. We think all public hospitals should have beds set aside for the treatment of acute alcoholism. We feel much could be done about them during that particular time to interest them in trying to lead sober lives. The American Hospital Association has recommended that all hospitals have at least 3 percent of their beds set aside for the treatment of alcoholics. Of course it adds to the expense; those people are difficult and nobody wants them around. Even the doctors get discouraged because of the repetition of their visits. But there is a problem there which should be met.

"New York City has this developed very nicely. Every one of the municipal hospitals takes acute alcoholics, either on a voluntary basis, or they are brought in by police who take them there instead of to jail. That is in line with the very small arrest rate in New York. Several states have established commissions. The District of Columbia has a commission authorized to open clinics and operate them. They have done it.

Virginia just recently established a commission, a year or so ago. Whatever is done, I do not think we need very large hospitals, and I believe the Department of Mental Hygiene should continue to take alcoholics in its mental hospitals. While some people get discouraged about their returning over and over, they do occasionally—often, they have success in the treatment of these cases. The fellow who goes out and doesn't come back again we do not hear of at all. Whatever we do about these two hospitals wouldn't interfere with what we are doing now in the mental hospitals. Some states have previously established hospitals and have received quite a bit of criticism because they have all closed. That is true but the reason for closing these so-called inebriate hospitals was that they were never really hospitals at all That hospital attitude which people have, including many physicians, to alcoholics prevailed in these special institutions in New York and Minnesota (some years ago) so that if a person was in there once and became alcoholic again their attitude was—well, we gave him a chance, now let the police handle him. That is the wrong attitude. Our failure in the treatment of alcoholism is due to our ignorance. People are treated and cured even after numerous returns to institutions. If they were treated adequately by understanding people, with these organizations like Alcoholics Anonymous, etc., cooperating, and if there was then some follow-up by social workers, many hundreds would be rehabilitated which are not now. We do not say we can promise to cure all of them with our present knowledge. It would take too much time to expect even the best psychiatrist to cure all. Some are cured by different psychiatric approaches and it is difficult to tell in the beginning which will respond. Some have extreme neurotic backgrounds; others have other types of backgrounds; and in some cases it is really a man's environment which tempts this man over and over again. Family situations can sometimes be adjusted to help people over their difficulties.

"I believe that is the substance of what I have to say; and I would emphasize that I think those two hospitals with 100 beds would be a very good thing for us to have in our two large cities."

Assemblyman Connolly: Doctor, these small 100 bed hospitals which you speak of—they would, as I understand it, provide outpatient services, as well as inservice?

Dr. Kolb: I think we should have an extensive outpatient department—larger than the inpatient. Keep them a few weeks or months and follow up by outpatient. Lots of patients who never come on an inpatient basis could come on an outpatient basis.

Assemblyman Connolly: Have you any theories on the commitment procedure—or the absence of it?

Dr. Kolb: I would treat some of these people voluntarily, and I would establish this temporary care treatment, such as they have in Massachusetts at the hospital in Boston, and I would continue the present treatment we have to apply either to this hospital or to the mental hospitals. The only modification would be voluntary commitment and this temporary commitment for three weeks for a person on the application of a regular police officer. A patient could be taken in, desensitized, and interested in some kind of treatment. Also, have all we do have now, whether they keep them for a period of two years—I do not think a two-year confinement for an alcoholic has any particular merit, except in rare cases. We do not keep ours. I think the average is about three or four months and, of course, they do not get the intensive type of attention that we visualize for persons who come to these two hospitals, contemplated hospitals, for intensive treatment.

Assemblyman Rumford: Doctor, I would like for you to elaborate on your program of education, if you have any. You probably have some ideas on it because, regardless of how many people we are * * *

Dr. Kolb: I do not know just what the schools do now, but the thing has been studied and written up in various journals, but so far as I know, no state now has any school for that purpose or any schooling. I would teach these children just the actual facts without any propaganda to it. I think that such an approach as this would have an effect upon children who now see so much drinking by their own relatives, by their fathers and mothers, and nothing has happened. If we draw a lurid picture for them, I don't think it would have any effect, but if we can teach physiologically in the schools what it does to the body, I think we would be getting somewhere. Give them actual figures such as I have here. For instance, 7 percent of those we admit have alcoholic insanity. Then if we can teach them what it does in crime and social disorders—very, very serious things like homicide, sex crimes, and other things—most of these crimes and acts are committed by drunken persons, even those of the homosexual nature. Many people have that nature but it is never expressed until they get drunk and then it comes out, and at that time they are liable to commit a sex crime. Some studies have been made along this line and in New York a report by Ralph Dena shows that many homosexuals committed sex crimes while under the influence of alcohol. These things should be taught in the schools—the social disorder that chronic alcoholism brings about, together with the physiological effects, and the low-down criminal and immoral effects.

On the larger level, I am thinking that in the Department of Mental Hygiene, in our central office, we should have more organization, more facilities, so that we could make real studies of these things, and by talks, pamphlets, etc., give the people the facts. Give the people in a factual way—not by propaganda—such facts, so that everybody would appreciate these things—including the physicians. It is startling how little information they have if they are not psychiatrists on the subject of alcoholism.

Assemblyman Rumford: Do you know if the State Department of Public Health is conducting an educational program on this?

Dr. Kolb: No, I do not think so. Of course it could come from there. They do publish a health pamphlet here and there.

Assemblyman Connolly: So far as I know, the Department of Public Health is not doing anything on it at all, and as a matter of fact, there is the problem, assuming we want to take over this program—it is a question of which department should take it over, and that takes us into the commission set-up like Connecticut has—an independent commission. We probably wouldn't want to go into that but there is a difficult problem right now as to whether the Department of Public Health or the Department of Mental Hygiene is the better to administer the program, whatever it might be. Certain aspects of it fall in one department and certain others fall into the other.

Dr. Kolb: I think our department could perhaps handle it better because we have a nucleus of people trained in that work and, of course, if those hospitals should be established, I think we should operate them. I think that Public Health should cooperate, and, of course, there is a provision of law where the Health Department is authorized to cooperate with us and we with them.

Chairman Thompson: On this education side of things, I have noticed among certain nationalities where they use wine, more or less. The wine is available to children at an early age. In a great many cases I have seen these children grow up and they have had it before them all their lives. From my observation, a great number of them do not drink.

Dr. Kolb: That is true. In Italy, for instance, if you cannot get water, you always have wine and they do not have much chronic alcoholism. Perhaps that race is a little less sensitive than some others. Then too they are perhaps too poor to buy strong drink. That may be why we have so much more drinking, because we have prosperity. That is the temptation. That is something you can't get away from—prosperity does increase temptations.

Assemblyman Thompson: Isn't wine and winos one of the worst forms of drunkenness in this country?

Dr. Kolb: They call these people winos who drink wine and become drunkards. Some people say there is a difference, but I don't know why there should be any difference on going broke over wine or liquor. Probably the difference is that these people are in a different social strata. They get the wine and just drink and drink it because there is plenty of it. The difference in their social strata and environment all together is probably attributable to the wine rather than to the alcohol. Perhaps there is a difference between what wine will do to you and just plain ordinary alcohol. There is this possible difference—wine does have some vitamins, whiskey does not. That may make some difference.

Chairman Thompson: What I am getting at is this: Here is a nation where wine is their main drink, where they do not have as great an alcoholic problem as we do Over there wine is their drink and yet wine over here is creating a difficult situation.

Assemblyman Connolly: There is a great difference. The French, for instance, most of them will dilute their wine with water when they drink it. Our skid row people buy the most highly fortified wine and drink it straight The people who have been brought up with it, dilute it.

Chairman Thompson: When we go into that from the educational standpoint, would they teach them it is a sin to drink—if used in moderation?

Dr. Kolb: I don't think we should teach them it is a sin to drink unless you can say it is a sin to put anyone in a situation where he can go to the dogs. I think we should teach people the truth, however, that you can never tell in the beginning when people get into a social environment of drinking, who is going to go to excess. You know there are a certain number of people who drink socially and get into tempting environments, who will go on and on, and others won't. You no doubt have heard this before—women do not go on and on to the same extent as men do because it is the wrong thing for a woman to get drunk. It is supposed to be morally and socially wrong, so not too many do it. Among the Jews there are not many alcoholics. Apparently they teach that it is a low down thing to get drunk, and maybe they are not as sensitive as some other races Maybe they have come through the ages drinking moderately, and something has gotten into their heredity and environment where they can take it moderately—and maybe they have lost their sensitivity to alcohol. The northern European races apparently do not have any of that immunity. They are all heavy drinkers and are alcoholic races. The Irish and the Swedes all have a great deal of alcoholic psychosis, whereas the Italians, for instance, just don't. We do not have enough French to make any particular study but perhaps they do have less, but they do drink a tremendous amount of wine in France. Probably the alcohol they consume is more than here but they perhaps also drink more wisely than we do here.

Assemblyman Connolly: In this program problem, at our hearing in San Francisco the people there, at least some of them, were of the definite opinion that because of the nature of the problem, and for various reasons connected with it, it would be better for the State to provide funds to the local communities to maintain clinics of their own rather than for the State to embark on its own program.

Dr. Kolb: Well, I can express this opinion that the State should not go into every county and city and set up clinics. If there are clinics of that kind to set up, I think the State should help with funds to the counties and cities. I certainly do not see why the State should set up clinics to treat thousands all over the State It wouldn't be done any better, and it wouldn't encourage the counties and cities to do it unless they received some help with funds.

Assemblyman Connolly: You think operation of the clinics by local authorities with financial assistance from the State, coupled with the small 100 bed hospitals for research and treatment, would be a good combined program.

Dr. Kolb: That would be a good combined program, I think. Surely I do not think the State should go on to a tremendous program of hospitals and clinics. Every county does it differently, and somebody may come up with a different idea which might be very useful. With a variety of approaches, we may come up with something entirely new in the way of treatment.

Assemblyman Connolly: Our only problem from the legislative standpoint is this, we might find ourselves in a position where we couldn't do both and we would have to decide between them.

Dr. Kolb: I don't think we should go beyond the little intensive treatment centers at the present time, and perhaps set up some little organization to continually intensify the educational program. Of course we probably would have to educate the educational people to the desirability of increasing that kind of education in our schools. I often speak of the analogy between the social outlook on alcoholism and drug addiction. We have the feeling a drug addict is the lowest thing on earth. As a matter of fact, he is generally much safer than an alcoholic. You read accounts of how they capture $3,000,000 worth of narcotics. It makes me mad because the idea is foolish. I find it is about $300 at the wholesale price but the newspapers publish that fantastic figure and the people think that drug addiction is a terrible thing. If the newspapers would publish that somebody murdered three people and found it followed heavy drinking—if they reversed it—that a drinking bout caused three murders, that would be the educational thing to get into the homes. I talked to a newspaper man along that line and he said they knew that, but if they did that everybody would accuse them of advocating prohibition. I do not think that is the attitude we should take, but I think the newspapers should join with us and emphasize that drinking causes many of these things. That fellow who was executed from Sonoma—he was drunk when he did that. In all articles you will usually find that in the last paragraph alcoholism is mentioned. That is the thing, the cooperation of the newspapers, which would help build up the social attitude toward excessive drinking. We should have in our departments, and I haven't quite decided what—some increased personnel, perhaps one person who could collect statistics on those things, make talks about them, and if we could interest the newspapers (which I do not think we could do) but draw them to the attention of the public, it would have a great deal of effect—just making the people really conscious of what too much drinking will do.

Rumford: Would you handle that through Public Health or Education?

Kolb: It is hard to say. We want perhaps to get together with the Education people, perhaps through the physiology courses in the schools. The ones I have seen are not adequate. They have the wrong approach.

Rumford: That preventive thing, I think, is very important.

Dr. Kolb concluded by stating that he felt a program of rehabilitation for alcoholics should be part of the permanent program of the State and he, himself, would continuously advocate it.

Next to testify was George Reick, Vocational Rehabilitation Officer with the Department of Education, who testified as follows:

"The last four years I have specialized in the rehabilitation of chronic alcoholics. I went to Hopkins five years ago for research and also to Yale for summer school this year. I have recognized the alcoholic as being handicapped and therefore eligible for our services, and have received referrals from Northern California and have worked closely with the alcohol clinic in San Francisco and get referrals from there.

"In Connecticut they took over a clinic in 1945 and only recently did they get a 50-bed hospital, but they have been doing some wonderful work. The State of Virginia is doing a very good job I think information and education centers by the State for the individual where he is interested in doing something about his problem so he can come and get information and be referred to the proper places for further help is necessary. This is an over-all problem. It is not only mental. Not many of these alcoholics are actually mental cases. I think the Department of Health could handle that and open beds in the general hospital for chronic alcoholics. Now the San Francisco General Hospital will accept acute cases on the recommendation of the Alcoholics Anonymous. I have a man in my office who is about ready to go to D. T.'s, and I can't do anything about him. If we had a clinic to follow the individual up with a physiotherapy and group therapy, it would be helpful. The follow-up is very important. To take a man to the state hospital for 60 days won't do him much more good than sending him to jail for 60 days. I get referrals from the hospital before the men leave the hospital. I try to meet them at the bus. Quite often they don't arrive in San Francisco but get drunk on the way down. I have had many cases that way. I get them and take them to a hotel, guarantee them a place to eat and sleep and make an appointment for him to meet me the next morning, but they don't make it. They go out and get drunk. The San Francisco Hospital is doing a good job. A man who has been drinking for a number of years has physical ailments, not from alcohol but from nutrition. It is a definite physical injury then."

Connolly: Your idea then is more along the line of the local outpatient clinic with follow-up therapy?

Reick: By the State, rather than by the community. In the first place, the community will never appropriate enough money and when it does, they will look for a clean-up of Skid Row. There will always be those people, and we can't help it. Skid Row is the least part of our problem. In San Francisco we have more chronic alcoholics on Pacific Heights than we do on Third and Howard Streets. That is the least of our problems. The individual who hasn't quite hit that bottom and who knows that he is at the point where he is going to hit Skid Row if he doesn't do something about it, is the one we can help most. That is not peculiar to any age group—most of them are in their thirties. We hit a few under 30. But it takes 13 years or more to make a chronic alcoholic, so we don't have too many in their early twenties. The doctor's idea on education is very important. We have had some of our teachers go to Yale or Harvard and study the problem. They are doing that in Utah and several other states. They go to school and then go back and teach the other teachers. I frequently go into the schools and the students are interested. I give them straight facts about what can happen. We have about 65,000,000 drinkers in the United States, but only about 4,000,000 chronic alcoholics. There are people who are inadequate in the beginning, and use alcohol as a means of escape.

Connolly: Do you have any set idea as to how the State should start out on this program? You stated that you consider the State should do it. What would be your ideas?

Reick: I would say as a Bureau of Public Health and in connection with the university hospitals. Open outpatient clinics where the alcoholic will voluntarily come for treatment. Have beds in general hospitals for alcoholics without too much red tape to get in there. The first step would be information and education centers in the large cities where the individual can come and ask, and with a knowledge of the problem he could be referred to the proper agencies for help. There are alcoholics who want to quit, and don't know how to do it. And there should definitely be an educational program in the schools.

Connolly: That could be set up under the State Department of Public Health Information Centers for the general public.

Reick: Just getting a man sober isn't enough. He may be sober and out of a job. Also, the job he may be doing may be a hazard. It may be causing the alcoholism. I had one man who was vice president of a bank and he was discharged for drunkenness, as far as the bank was concerned. He was referred to us and it was found the job was too much responsibility for him. He has been sober now for two years and has a good job—not as a bank vice president. But I think in the clinic we need more than just a psychiatrist.

Connolly: Our problem of course is that the State Department of Public Health doesn't operate in the hospitals, whereas the Department of Mental Hygiene is already doing that.

Reick: I am advocating the use of the general hospitals that we have now. The State is appropriating money to the county hospitals, and the counties are accepting alcoholics, and they should be allowed to go there for help.

The next to testify was J. A. Sullivan, Department Counsel of Mental Health of Los Angeles County, who stated: "Since I talked before this committee in San Francisco there has been a survey made of Los Angeles County by Yale University. Dr. Marcus Grahan was appointed to head a committee interested in the problem of alcoholism to see what could be done in Los Angeles County, and the committee asked the Board of Supervisors for $5,000, which was granted. Yale University brought a staff of men out here on a survey, and the final report has just been released. I have five copies here which I want to turn over to you. As I stated before, our primary need is for something to be done in California, and I believe that the most immediate thing needed is clinics. The cost of the clinics could be afforded by the larger cities but would work a hardship on the smaller communities, and if the State could see fit to go in with them I believe we would have clinics that would do a great deal of good. I have often made a statement that 50 percent of the alcoholics are not alcoholics. It is symptomatic of some other disease. The remaining 50 percent would be treated for alcoholism and with a smaller number, we could accomplish more. I believe there should be a set-up in the State of California to attack it on a state-wide basis, and such recommendations as they would make would probably be a good basis for the Legislature to follow out.

"The alcoholics flock to the centers in Los Angeles and San Francisco for treatment. I was back to Yale this year for the course. Connecticut has built a 50-bed hospital in Hartford. The 50-bed hospital seems small, but it isn't, it is large. As large as we would need in Los Angeles or San Francisco, because you only hospitalize the alcoholic for three or four days But that is going to be a center for an outpatient clinic, and I think nine-tenths of the good will come from that clinic basis. Any hospital could be on a 50-bed basis until they were tried out. That is all we need."

Connolly: Can you summarize what the report of the Yale people was?

Sullivan: Very much along the same lines as I have just given.

Connolly: In other words, they favor the outpatient clinic.

Sullivan: Yes. That is considered the primary thing in the whole program.

Connolly: Dr. Kolb spoke before you came in. He expressed the same idea on the basis of local clinics, and then he added the suggestion of two small state hospitals in the two metropolitan areas which would be a center of research and study and education. Does that sound logical?

Sullivan: Yes. Our ideas agree exactly, because we are both working for the same thing. My ideas are not my own. They are from everyone else.

Connolly: The one thing we don't need is a big state hospital out in the country someplace to help the alcoholic.

Sullivan: That is right.

Rumford: I wanted to bring forth these two points: that we are faced with an acute shortage of beds for the chronically ill now, and we are faced with the proposition of raising money. I am sure you consider these things.

Sullivan: Very much I have one other point that has never been stressed very heavily, and that is the need for research into alcoholism. Practically the only thing that has been done is at Yale University.

Dr. Norman Nelson, Assistant Dean of the U. C. L. A. Medical School and Associate Professor of Preventive Medicine was called upon, and he spoke as follows:

"My field is preventive medicine, and I have been interested in this since 1947. I came out to U. C. L. A. then. The county board of supervisors were interested in something being done in this field, and we organized to find out how much we knew about the subject and to bring what we knew to the commission. Since then we have been interested in it from various standpoints.

"I want to substantiate what has been said about combining basic research with the active treatment of these people. Let me point out that at the present time Dr. White, who came to U. C. L. A. from Yale, has been doing a very interesting bit of research on different types of alcoholic beverages. He has had 40 sent to him, totally unlabeled. He has been testing them on various types of tissues. And he has found, interestingly enough, that some of these beverages seem to increase the rate of the enzym systems in the body. In other words, we know that sclerosis of the liver is due to the fact that we have an interference in the metabolism. Now certain conditions that may result in these winos might be entirely due to products that are present in certain types of wines and not in others. The direct result of such an investigation is to determine what it is in these various beverages that destroy enzym systems or enhance them.

"I am not here to represent the University of California, but if I am called upon I feel it is my duty as a private citizen to point out these things. We have to have the facts as we go along. We need these basic researches before we can do anything that would be of advantage to the people."

Connolly: You feel research should be conducted jointly with the rehabilitation?

Nelson: I certainly do. Where we can follow these people and see how much good we are actually doing. We should have a continuous organization where we can find out and keep track of what is happening to these people. To do so we must think of it from a preventive aspect. Dr. Kolb and I have had many talks on this.

Thompson: How much follow-up is there when the patients leave the mental hospitals?

Nelson: I think Dr. Kolb could answer that much better than I. We do lack much basic research even in that sort of thing, as what sort of work a certain type of mental patient could go into after he leaves. As yet we haven't done the basic work that should be done. I am sure that they would like to be able to do a lot more than they are doing.

Connolly: At the moment, the outpatient clinic is the best method there is.

Thompson: There is quite a follow-up there at the present time, isn't there?

Kolb: We follow them up when they leave from Mendocino, but we are not able to follow them up from the other hospitals.

Dr. Phantill of the Los Angeles City Health Department next testified as follows: "I would like to say that I am in complete agreement with everything that has been said, except that I have some additions to make. For one thing, most of the clinics are in the terminal stages. We used to consider a combination of symptoms. They came together so often that we began to feel they belonged together. We often saw combinations of T. B. because of lack of nutrition in an alcoholic, a disease that gets worse. You start out with alcohol and end up with a lot more. I definitely would like to propose that legislation be put in action to make alcoholism a disease like other dangerous ailments. It would be advantageous not only for the individual, but also for public health.

"The other suggestion I would like to make along that particular line is in regard to preventive psychiatry. It would be very easy to help these people in the beginning. When a person is told he is dangerous to others, it is this shock that is sometimes the beginning phase of alcoholism. A great deal of preventive work can be and should be done."

Connolly: You are stronger for clinical work than in the educational program?

Phantill: It is more than education. During the pre-natal cases we sometimes have people who are on the breakup of their marriage, and they often turn to alcohol. Before the child is born we can do a lot for these people as well as for the unborn baby. At that time you have to spend so much less than you have to spend to treat a chronic alcoholic.

ALAMEDA COUNTY FARM SEEKS TO AID ALCOHOLICS[1]

In Santa Clara County (and in the majority of the other counties throughout the Nation) the forgotten man is the fellow who gets sent to jail time after time because he is an alcoholic.

The average citizens feels the impact of these sentences once a year when he gets his tax bill, but the alcoholic's name is not listed on our tax bills, few people realize his great cost to the county and little is done about him.

In fact so little has been done about him that physicians and social workers have no real knowledge of what can be done for him. The subject is almost completely unexplored and there is no yardstick of case histories which runs deep enough to be dependable.

However, it is a hopeful note that many governmental bodies are recognizing that a problem does exist, and a few have started practical experiments with the alcoholics. Outstanding among these experimenters is Alameda County.

At the Santa Rita Industrial Farm near Pleasanton, a separate staff of doctors, psychiatrists, nurses and social workers has been added to the regular organization.

[1] Editorial from the San Jose Mercury-News, Sunday, November 12, 1950.

Santa Rita's average number of "guests" is in excess of 700. Screening indicates that at least 65 percent of these are there for reasons which are related in some way to alcohol.

None but the most confirmed optimists believe that all or even a great part of this 65 percent can be cured of alcoholism by any treatment presently known. As a matter of fact the figures compiled after the clinic staff interviewed 513 persons recently are not too cheerful.

These figures show that 487 of those studied were alcoholics.

Of the 487 there were 156 who flatly denied being alcoholics.

And of the 487 there were 204 who took advantage of the rule which makes treatment voluntary, and refused to take any treatment.

In spite of these depressing figures it is indicated that considerably more than half of the victims want help, and as experience in treatment is broadened they will be able to get better help.

The experiment at Santa Rita follows a common sense line.

The authorities have recognized the fact that nothing can be done for the average alcoholic within 30 days. Those who are sent to the institution for crimes and misdemeanors which are related to alcohol, are sentenced for six months and placed on an additional two years' probation.

In addition to those who are sentenced to Santa Rita for violations of the law the clinic also accepts all civil alcoholic commitments from Alameda County and all voluntary self-commitments.

Once at Santa Rita, all persons from these various groups are treated exactly the same.

Most of them are suffering from semistarvation. They are given expert medical attention and in most cases put on a primary vitamin diet.

After a patient's physical condition has been built up he moves into the occupational therapy stage. He is put to work in the fields or shops of the partially self-supporting establishment. When his general outlook has reached a satisfactory state he is brought into contact with Alcoholics Anonymous, which holds weekly meetings at Santa Rita, and has a branch organization there.

And last but not least the patient is introduced to antabuse.

Antabuse is a drug which has been described by ex-alcoholics as "willpower with a label on the bottle."

Antabuse is not to be confused with the "aversion" or "conditioned reflex" therapy which has been widely used for many years. It is simply a sensitizing agent which makes the patient severely allergic to alcohol in any form.

In fact if a person takes even a swallow of beer within eight days of the time he has had the antabuse treatment he will be so sick he will probably wish he could die.

Antabuse is compounded of some of the elements which go into the manufacture of synthetic rubber. It is tasteless, odorless and has no effect on the system, until you take a drink. Then it brings about a partial oxygen starvation. Extreme, though not fatal, illness results.

A person cannot drink if he has taken "antabuse."

At Santa Rita patients are put on the drug therapy only at their own request. When they leave the institution they continue to use this therapy only on their own initiative. Antabuse has not yet been released for general public sale, due to the regulations of the Federal Food and Drug Administration, but Alameda County patients can obtain a regular supply by calling at the office of the physician in charge of this phase of treatment. (And they always know that they have eight days to get around for another batch of pills when they run out.)

As part of the program at Santa Rita a patient who has been confined because of most troubles rooted in alcoholism can be released from custody as soon as the officials are convinced that he will progress better without confinement.

The Alameda County experiment has only been in operation for a few months. It is too early to tell what the final results will be. But no matter what they are, it is a step in the right direction. It is bound to be better than the indifference of the past.

ALCOHOLISM IN CALIFORNIA

Population at Risk

Estimates: In order to determine the extent to which the intemperate use of alcoholic beverages affect the health and well-being of the population of California, it is necessary to estimate the minimum population at risk.

This has been done in the following manner:

(1) The population figures for the estimated number of potential drinkers in 1945, 1946 and 1947 were obtained by applying 69.6 percent to the total estimated population. This percent represents the proportion of the population of ages 21 years and over in California in 1946. (Table 1)[1]

(2) The estimated number of "users of alcohol" is based on information from a publication by Doctor E. M. Jellinek [2] in which it was stated that use was made of information obtained in a Gallup survey (public opinion news service release September 1, 1946). The results of this poll were that two out of every three voters surveyed were against return to prohibition and that two out of every three, of the nations adults. drink. The second of two questions asked in the survey was "Do you ever have occasion to use alcoholic beverages, such as liquor, wine or beer or are you a total abstainer?" Responses to this question showed that 33 percent were total abstainers and 67 percent drank alcoholic beverages. Based on these data, the factor of two-thirds was applied to the estimated population aged 21 years and over, the resultant figure for the years 1945, 1946, 1947 being used as estimates of the number of "users of alcoholic beverages" in California.

(3) The estimated numbers of intemperate drinkers and chronic alcoholics are based on ratios established by Jolliffee and Jellinek [3]. These ratios indicate that probably 6 percent (6%) of the "users of alcoholic beverages" are intemperate drinkers (includes chronic alcoholics) and one and a half percent (1.5%) of the "users of alcoholic beverages" are chronic alcoholics.

ESTIMATES OF THE NUMBERS OF POTENTIAL DRINKERS AND USERS OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES, INTEMPERATE DRINKERS AND CHRONIC ALCOHOLICS

California, 1945, 1946, 1947

Year	Total population	Number of potential drinkers-population aged 21 and over	Number of users of alcohol	Number of intemperate drinkers	Number of chronic alcoholics
1945	8,822,688	6,140,000	4,093,000	246,000	61,000
1946	9,529,282	6,636,000	4,424,000	265,000	66,000
1947	9,876,000	7,086,000	4,724,000	283,000	71,000

Definitions: (1) Potential Drinkers: Jellinek [4] states that "alcoholic beverages are consumed within only a certain age range of the population, namely the ages of 15 years and over. This range may be designated as the "population of drinking age". The consumption of alcoholic beverages by the population below 15 years of age is so negligible that for practical purposes it may be disregarded entirely. Chronic alcoholism, alcoholic mental disorders and death from alcoholism do not occur in the entire range of the population of drinking age but are limited with fractional exceptions to the population aged 20 years and older, which will be designated here as the "adult population".

The expression "minimum population at risk" was used in the first paragraph of the section on population at risk. These estimates may be considered minimum inasmuch as they do not include populations between the ages 15 to 20 years.

(2) Users of Alcohol: The moderate user is defined as one who "does not seek intoxication and does not expose himself to it. He uses alcoholic beverages as a condiment and for their milder sedative effects. Alcohol constitutes neither a necessity nor a considerable item in his budget." [1]

(3) Intemperative Drinker: Bowman and Jellinek [2] have described an alcohol addict as a person with "an uncontrollable craving for alcohol. The outstanding criterion is the inability to break with the habit. Alcohol serves the purpose of creating an artificial social adjustment."

(4) Chronic Alcoholic: "This designation is properly reserved for those drinkers only who, from the prolonged and excessive use of alcoholic beverages—usually over many years—finally develop definite physical or psychological changes." [2]

After listing states in the order of magnitude (maximum to minimum) of the number of wine gallons of absolute alcohol consumed per person aged 15 years and over, three states were selected at each quartile position.

The resident death rates from alcoholism per 100,000 population were then listed for the respective states. No relationship is shown to exist between the apparent consumption figures and the death rates from alcoholism. Furthermore, the death rates themselves are open to question since other causes of death are frequently given precedence over alcoholism when the primary cause is selected. In a sample run of certificates coded for all causes of death in California (February, 1947) it was found that of 56 certificates of death on which alcoholism appeared, this cause was considered primary in only 15 cases (approximately 27 percent) while other causes were given precedence over alcoholism in 41 cases a loss of 73 percent, of alcoholism appearing on death certificates. No generalizations of the loss of alcoholism as a cause of death may be made at this time, but it is obvious that alcoholism and its relation to death should be investigated further before comparisons such as these are valid.

In California, intemperate drinkers who are drivers of motor vehicles have been involved in 1,681 fatal accidents and in 24,725 accidents causing injury in the three-year period 1944-46.

They represent approximately 14 percent of all drivers involved in fatal accidents and 13 percent of all drivers involved in accidents in which injuries have occurred. (1944-46)

In 1945 there were 3,705 persons killed, and in 1946, 3,820 persons met death in motor vehicle accidents.

Assuming that approximately 14 percent of the drivers who were responsible for fatal accidents (4,246 in 1945 and 4,604 in 1946) were responsible for the same percentage of persons killed in these two years, it may be said that the deaths of 1,054 persons were indirectly caused by the intemperate use of alcohol

In the three-year period July 1, 1944 to June 30, 1947, there were 3,454 first admissions of alcoholics. In the same period, there were 803 readmissions These may include overlap of cases since what was a new admission one year may have been a readmission the next. It should be noted that 62 percent of the new admissions of alcoholics were of persons without psychoses.

In 1944-45, over half of the first admissions to and discharges of alcoholics from state mental hospitals fall into the age group 25 to 44 years of age (58 percent and 53 percent respectively). When compared with the age distribution of all patients admitted for the first time and discharged from the same hospital, this percentage seems high since only 39 percent of all patients were in this age group.

If economic status as measured by the financial condition of the immediate family is considered, there are fewer dependent persons among the alcoholics (approximately 3 percent versus 9 percent) when compared with the economic status of all patients; more in the marginal group (84 percent versus 76 percent) and about the same percent in the comfortable group (13 percent versus 14 percent).

Duration of residence of alcoholics at state mental hospitals includes residence during the present as well as prior admissions to any state mental hospital. When compared with duration of residence of all groups, it is evident that a definite attempt is made to limit duration of alcoholics to two years.

Of the 64 deaths among alcoholics, 15 occurred among the group whose duration of residence was three years or more and all were designated as alcoholics with psychosis. Only 10 of the 64 deaths were attributed to "intoxication" and/or "chronic poisoning."

Disability From Alcoholism

In data presented from the California Disability Insurance Program pertaining to Section IV B "Outline of Chronic Disease Investigation," it is shown that there were 796 paid spells of illness for alcoholism, under the state plan * (including alcoholic psychosis), averaging 9.7 weeks per spell at a cost of $178.69 per spell and representing a total expenditure of $142,240.

Among employed men under the state plan, 7.4 percent of all paid spells of disability from selected chronic diseases in the age group 25-44 years were attributed to alcoholism, and 3.2 percent, in the age group 45 to 64 years. Of the paid spells of disability attributed to alcoholism, 51.1 percent occurred in the age group 25-44 while 45.2 percent occurred in the age group 45-64, with 3.2 percent in the age group over 65 years.

Psychoses were reported in 18 percent of the spells of disability for alcoholism. An interesting parallelism was found in the experience of a large county hospital in California where approximately the same percentage of alcoholic psychoses was reported in the Fiscal Year 1945-46. Of 1,310 new admissions for alcoholism, 246 presented conditions of alcoholic mental disorders. Parallelism such as this should be investigated further.

* Paid spells of disability reported terminated 1947, including spells reported terminated December, 1946.

[a] Estimated by applying the ratio obtained from mortality data for alcoholism as a cause of death (primary and secondary to other causes) U S Registration States, 1940 The secondary cause group represents 55 1 percent of the total deaths from alcoholism

In the sample run of death certificates (California, February, 1947) coded for multiple causes, alcoholism appeared as a cause of death in 56 instances 15 times (27 percent) as the primary cause and 41 times (73 percent) as a secondary cause Although these percentages are based on a small sample, it represents the only available data of its kind for California Until more complete analyses of multiple causes of death are made all estimates of the importance of alcoholism as a mortality and morbidity problem must be considered minimum

[b] Estimated by applying the ratio obtained from mortality data for cirrhosis of the liver as a cause of death (primary and secondary to other causes) U S Registration, 1940 The secondary cause group represented 16.4 percent of the total deaths from cirrhosis of the liver This is a conservative estimate inasmuch as the California experience in a sample run of deaths from this cause for primary and secondary to other causes (February, 1947) was secondary in 41 of 164 deaths or in 25 percent of all deaths from cirrhosis

[c] In the same sample of death certificates (California, February, 1947) it was found that cirrhosis of the liver appeared as a cause of death in 164 instances (primary and secondary) and with mention of alcohol in 49 instances (29 9 percent) Until more complete analyses of multiple causes of death are made, all estimates of the importance of alcoholism as a mortality and morbidity problem must be considered minimum

The minimum average annual death rates per 100,000 potential drinking population, aged 21 years and over for 1946 (based on experience and estimates for the three-year period 1945-47) are as follows

California, 1946

Deaths (Primary and secondary causes)	Occurrence: Number	Occurrence: Rate per 100,000 aged 21 years and over	Residence: Number	Residence: Rate per 100,000 aged 21 years and over

Alcoholism	433	6.5	421	6 3
Cirrhosis of liver with mention of alcohol	596	9 0	594	9.0

For rates per 100,000 total population in California, 1946 (9,529,282) are as follows

California, 1946

Deaths	Occurrence Rates per 100,000 population: Total primary and secondary	Occurrence Rates per 100,000 population: Primary only	Residence rates per 100,000 population: Total primary and secondary	Residence rates per 100,000 population: Primary only

It is evident from these rates, that the usual published death rates from causes relating to alcoholism are very low minima

SUMMARY

Although no organized data are available at the present time on the magnitude of the problem of the intemperate drinker of alcoholic beverages in California, certain facts and estimates therefrom have been collected and presented in this report. It is believed that the estimates may be considered minimum. If all deaths directly and indirectly attributable to alcohol were to be related to the population at risk, the percentage would be sizable.

The following consolidations of figures is presented:

Deaths due to alcohol	Number of deaths by occurrence [a] average 1946
	Total	Primary cause only
Total	1,585	1,310
Alcoholism	433	194
Cirrhosis of liver with mention of alcohol	598	562
Motor vehicle deaths attributable to intemperate drinking	554	554

[a] Based on experience and estimations in the foregoing tables (1945-1947).

The number of deaths by occurrence must be used instead of the deaths by residence since a considerable percentage of out-of-state drivers of motor vehicles are involved in accidents.

Rates per 100,000 total population must be calculated since persons of any age may be killed in automobile accidents.

If the number of deaths from alcoholism and cirrhosis of the liver with mention of alcohol appear as causes of death (whether primary or secondary to another cause) and the estimated number of persons killed by drivers of motor vehicles in which the use of alcohol contributed to the accident are added, the rate is 16.6 per 100,000 total population and the 1.7 percent of total deaths (95,015 by occurrence).

If the number of deaths from alcoholism and cirrhosis of the liver with mention of alcohol is limited to those for which these causes are stated as primary, the death rate becomes 13.7 per 100,000 population and the deaths represent 1.4 of the total deaths (95,015 by occurrence).

When compared with death rates from other important chronic diseases, the rate of causes of death directly and indirectly related to alcohol falls within the group represented by diabetes 20.5 per 100,000 population; cancer of the breast, 14 1; cancer of the respiratory system 13.8. These latter rates are for the year 1947.

The committee recommends that an in- and out-clinic together with sufficient funds for future research and the rehabilitation of patients be provided for, with one in Northern California, preferably in the San Francisco Bay region, and one in the southern part of the State in the vicinity of Los Angeles.

RABIES

Upon receipt by the committee of the following resolution from the Los Angeles County Club of Adult Blind, the committee conducted an investigation and recommends that legislation be introduced for the protection not only of the public but also for those people who are afflicted by the loss of their sight and depend upon their ability to walk the public streets with the aid of seeing eye dogs:

WHEREAS, A guide dog is an integral part of his blind master to the extent that when the dog is quarantined the master is also imprisoned; and

WHEREAS, The ruling of the State Board of Health requires the quarantine of all dogs, including guide dogs, upon a mere statement without proof of bite and without granting any form of hearing to the blind man who must be imprisoned with his dog, thus depriving him of his constitutional rights by conviction upon accusation; and

WHEREAS, Quarantine is for the purpose of inspection of the dog at regular intervals rather than the fear that the dog might be infected with rabies, and such regular inspections can be made at any time since the guide dog is always available; and

WHEREAS, The public safety of the community is in no way jeopardized by the guide dog being quarantined in custody of its master rather than quarantined in an inclosure, thus robbing the blind man of his means of livelihood; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Los Angeles County Club of Adult Blind at its regular monthly meeting in Los Angeles this the 28th day of July, 1950, That we strongly condemn these injustices and that a committee be appointed to seek redress from the State Board of Health by all legal means at their disposal, including political pressure and the support of public opinion through the press, the radio, and television.

Rabies, or hydrophobia, is an acute infections disease Which is 100 Percent Fatal Both for Man and Beast. It is caused by a virus which attacks the brain and spinal cord. Man and warm-blooded animals are susceptible to it. It is spread to man and healthy animals by the saliva of a rabid animal which contains the virus. The saliva enters the body through a break in the skin, usually through a dog-bite, but it may occur from the bite or scratch of a cat, or from exposing the broken skin to the saliva of any rabid animal, for example, cows, squirrels, coyotes, or foxes.

Rabies virus may be present in the saliva from eight to ten days before symptoms of the disease appear So it is well to be suspicious of any animal bite even though the animal seems to be healthy.

Rabies does not always develop after a rabid animal bite or after wound contact with the saliva of a rabid animal, but no one who has once developed rabies has ever recovered.

It takes, on an average, two to six weeks after a bite for rabies to develop but it may develop in less than 10 days or not for several months. Since the virus reaches the brain by way of the nerves, the closer the wound is to the brain, the more quickly the symptoms of rabies appear.

Following is a copy of an animal quarantine notice issued by the City of Los Angeles after a dog has bitten a human or has been exposed to rabies with a known rabid dog:

1. If there is evidence that a dog has been exposed to rabies infection, such dog shall be quarantined in a segregated kennel at the animal shelter for a perior of not less than 14 days for observation.

2. Any dog where there is no evidence of rabies exposure that bites a human shall be quarantined in the custody of its master and must remain upon the premises available for inspection for a period of not less than 14 days, unless such dog shall be a seeing eye dog, or a guide dog in service to its master.

3. A seeing eye dog or guide dog that has been exposed to rabies infection shall upon evidence of exposure, be quarantined at the animal shelter.

4. A seeing eye or guide dog that bites a human without evidence of rabies exposure shall be quarantined to the custody of its master and permitted to continue as a guide Special care shall be taken by the blind master during the period of quarantine that the dog shall not leave his custody.

5. Any person who shall be bitten by a dog, shall immediately notify the health authorities and show proof of such bite; and any person owning a dog that shall bite a human, shall immediately notify the health authorities.

6. All dogs kept at the animal shelter shall be humanely cared for and their owners shall pay a fee of 50 cents per day, or $7 for the two-week period of quarantine to cover the cost of food and care.

Failure to comply with these regulations shall constitute a misdemeanor.

At the committee's hearing in Los Angeles on October 14th, Mr. James B Garfield, President of the Los Angeles County Club of Adult Blind, testified as follows: "The reason for quarantining does not imply exposure or contact with a rabid animal. It does not indicate that they are rabid. The reason for quarantining is so that they can check up on the dog during a 14-day period and see if it does have rabies. If the dog is normal the dog does not have to take the treatment. That is the reason, as I understand it, for quarantining. The present regulations seem to be otherwise, in that a person may claim a dog bite even when there is no evidence. If I go to the hospital and say I have been bitten, they will quarantine your dog. If a dog is infected or has been exposed to hydrophobia, that dog should be quarantined at the animal shelter where it will be taken care of. If a dog bites an individual in self-defense or play, that dog should be quarantined on the premises unless that dog be a guide dog If it would be a guide dog and it has hydrophobia, I am no fit custodian for a dog infected with hydrophobia. That dog should be segregated. If the bite is a normal bite, the dog should be quarantined to its master, so he may continue to do his work. These dogs are constantly in quarantine. They are a Siamese twin."

As previously stated, legislation will be introduced not only to protect the public but the well-being of those afflicted people who can not see and depend upon the companionship of their seeing eye dogs.

APPLICATION TO PRACTICE MEDICINE

From time to time Members of the Legislature have received letters from unsuccessful applicants for a license to practice medicine, complaining against the Board of Medical Examiners. Practically all of these letters have been from individuals whose applications were based on licenses issued by other states.

The committee requested the Board of Medical Examiners to supply figures on the number of such applicants during the past 10 years and the number of certificates issued to that type of applicants during that period. The yearly figures for 1940 through 1949 are submitted herewith.

It is evident that the percentage of failures is fairly consistent. Since there has been a changing personnel in the examiners over a 10-year period, it appears that the reason for failure lies not with the type of examination or personality of the board, but rather with the inability of applicants to meet the requirements of California standards. These standards are comparable with other states of similar size.

The committee can see no basis for charges that California is keeping out applicants from other states. Witness the number of certificates issued as compared to the total number of applications filed. The State has a duty to protect its citizens against unqualified physicians and surgeons, and the committee would suggest that applicants for license properly prepare themselves for examinations.

FINAL REPORT ON THE SALARIES OF THE STATE JUDICIARY BY ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON EQUALIZATION OF SALARIES, QUALIFICATIONS AND JOB CLASSIFICATIONS OF PUBLIC EMPLOYEES

(HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 255, 1949)

WILLARD M. HUYCK, Chairman
THOMAS W. CALDECOTT
JOHN E. MOSS, JR.
WILLIAM H. ROSENTHAL
STANLEY T. TOMLINSON

To the HONORABLE SAM L. COLLINS, Speaker, and to the Members of the Assembly:

Your committee has made separate studies of two aspects of the problem assigned to it. This report has to do with salaries for the State Judiciary.

In this study we have had the cooperation of court officials, the State Bar, and individuals concerned with the problem, as well as of authorities in some of the other states from which we sought comparative information. To all of these we express our deep appreciation.

The gathering of information and preparing of analyses on which the committee's findings and recommendations are based was done by Louis J. Kroeger and Associates, management consultants, of San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The staff report to the committee has included proposed drafts of legislation to give effect to the committee's recommendations. Such legislation does not appear on this report, but will be introduced in the Assembly by the members of the committee.

THE PROBLEM

Every member of the Legislature knows that the method of setting salaries for our court officials has been unsatisfactory.

1. We have set salaries through separate local measures rather than having an integrated plan for the whole judiciary.

2. The local measures on which we have acted have depended to a large extent on local politics. Action insofar as the superior courts are concerned has by custom required recommendations by the County Grand Jury and board of supervisors Rather than preserving the independence of the judiciary, this makes the local judges dependent upon political action by the legislative branch of the local government. The current practice of requiring a Grand Jury recommendation is particularly unfortunate in those counties in which we have but one judge, because that judge appoints the Grand Jury and then is in turn dependent on its recommendations for his salary.

3. All of the cost of judges' salaries above a fixed base is borne by the counties. This puts the salary at the mercy of every local pressure group interested in holding the tax rate down.

4. The authority of the Judicial Council to assign judges to other counties in effect creates a state judicial system, while the manner of setting salaries hampers its effective operation as such.

5. The Legislature has been responsible for approving these salaries, but has not had the means to do the job right, nor have we had any disposition to do more than listen to local arguments.

6. The municipal courts and the superior courts are the more numerous and the more politically active. In the metropolitan areas many judges of these courts are former members of the Legislature. As the years have passed, the salaries for these courts have been given disproportionately more attention than has been given to the higher courts.

7. The Legislature has been burdened with a mass of local legislation to set the salaries of superior court and municipal court attaches. The salaries for these employees have no more state-wide significance than would the salaries for the clerks in the administrative departments of the county and city governments. An equitable salary structure in the public service cannot be maintained when the authority to prescribe salaries for the administrative agencies is vested in local authorities while that for the clerical arm of the courts is vested in the Legislature.

8. The problem of setting judicial salaries recurs each two years, and is given piecemeal treatment each time. The treatment usually is proportionate to political strength and local interest rather than to the requirements of the judicial system.

Every student of the subject—within the judicial system and out of it—agrees that basic principles should be established and an objective system created by which these salaries can be adjusted hereafter.

SUMMARY OF PRINCIPAL RECOMMENDATIONS

The balance of this report will develop in detail the following principal recommendations:

1. That the present 13 different salary rates being paid to superior court judges be reduced to three.

2. That the basis of support for superior courts be revised so that the counties pay a uniform base rate in each of the three salary categories proposed, with the State assuming the balance.

3. That the custom of requiring recommendations from county grand juries and boards of supervisors be discontinued.

4. That the salaries for superior court judges be related to existing cost-of-living factors, and that future adjustment take into account those same factors.

5. That a fixed relationship be established between the salary established for the superior court and for the other courts; and that this same relationship be hereafter preserved whenever an adjustment is made in the basic rate for superior court judges.

6. That the manner of setting salaries for all attaches and employees of the judicial system be studied further.

7. That all measures setting salaries in the judiciary hereafter be referred to a single committee of this Assembly.

THE SUPERIOR COURT

We have selected the superior court as the keystone of our entire plan for judicial salaries because it is the most numerous, universal and basic court in the State's judicial system. We have selected it, too, because it is the victim of the most uncertainty and illogical treatment in the past, due to the influence of local political factors and the piecemeal manner in which the problem has been dealt with by the Legislature.

Following is a tabulation of the distribution of salaries now being paid to superior court judges:

$15,000 per year	in	4 counties
13,000 per year	in	1 county
12,500 per year	in	5 counties
12,000 per year	in	13 counties
11,000 per year	in	2 counties
10,500 per year	in	2 counties
10,000 per year	in	9 counties
9,250 per year	in	1 county
9,000 per year	in	5 counties
8,700 per year	in	1 county
8,500 per year	in	13 counties
8,000 per year	in	1 county
7,000 per year	in	1 county

We find two faults with this array of salaries. One is that there are differences of as little as $200 per year, with no factual basis for such fine distinctions. The other is that the spread from a low of $7,000 to a high of $15,000 is greater than the difference which in our judgment exists in the responsibilities of the judges.

Your committee has reviewed the relative population, case load and other factors which might possibly have a bearing on differences in salaries for the superior courts. We find no consistent relationship between the rates now established and any of these factors This circumstance in itself supports the finding of the committee that salaries have been set in the past without regard to logical or objective factors.

The most frequently repeated proposal made by those addressing the committee has been that all superior court judges should be paid the same salary. The arguments which favor this view are as follows:

1. The superior court is a state court, having the same jurisdiction, the same kind of cases and subject to the same law, regardless of the size of the county.

2. At the direction of the Judicial Council, any judge of the superior court may be assigned to a court in another county, or may even be assigned to the appellate bench. The extent to which these assignments are made is shown by the following figures from the report of the Judicial Council for the Fiscal Year 1947-48:

To the Supreme Court	6	assignments
To the district courts of appeal	13	assignments
To the appellate departments of superior courts	1	assignment
To superior courts	523	assignments
To municipal courts	40	assignments
To city and township courts	50	assignments

3. While it is true that a judge assigned to another court is paid the salary established by law for that court, his initial selection should have been in relation to a salary high enough to qualify him for more difficult assignments.

4. Variations in work load between the courts in different counties should not necessarily be a controlling factor, because any significant difference in work load is offset by creating additional judgeships or by the assignment of additional judges by the Judicial Council.

5. The character of the case load does not vary enough between counties to justify significant difference in salary. To the extent that the nature of the case load does vary, there are offsetting factors which tend to minimize the net effect of these differences. The court in a metropolitan county may be departmentalized, but the judges are usually rotated between the specialized departments. The judge in the small county, on the other hand, must deal with the complete diversity of cases coming before his court; and he has less access to specialized services of administrative departments, such as those dealing with juveniles and psychopathic cases.

6. Under modern conditions of communication and transportation, the cases in a given county are not limited to the people and problems of that county. Litigants and attorneys come from all over the State.

7. The considered opinion of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, justices of the appellate courts and many of the judges of Superior Courts who have appeared before the Committee is that salaries should be uniform throughout the State. While we cannot regard mere consensus of opinion as an objective factor, it is an important corroborating point.

The arguments which have been advanced against a uniform salary for all of the superior courts are as follows:

1. Some of the judges contend that there is a difference in the amount and character of work load, which justifies a difference in salary. This view is expressed by judges who have served exclusively in the metropolitan counties, whereas most of the argument favoring a uniform salary comes from the judges in small or medium-sized counties, who have worked on assignment in the metropolitan areas as well. We recognize that they may be a little less objective, because there is the possibility of a salary increase for them, but we are convinced that even discounting for this factor, there is enough sincerity and objectivity to justify giving the point serious consideration.

2. It is argued that there are differences in living costs which favor a higher standard for the metropolitan county judge. This factor is not recognized by the State in setting salaries for its administrative officials, nor have independent salary surveys which have come to our attention indicated that this is enough of a factor to make a significant difference.

3. The setting of a uniform salary for the entire State would be contrary to long-established custom and might therefore encounter obstacles in the Legislature. The committee is well aware of this possibility, but it is charged with the responsibility of making objective findings in this field. It cannot be influenced by the habits of the past if the evidence shows that old habits have been wrong.

4. To increase the salaries of the judges now in office will not automatically improve the caliber of those on the bench. This is an obvious truth; but on the other hand, the standard cannot be raised except by first taking the step of improving the salary structure to attract better judges.

5. If the salaries are made uniform it must be obvious that they will have to be set at or near the level now prevailing in the large counties. This would increase cost and give undue influence to small groups of voters in the smaller counties.

6. Under the present distribution of costs between the State and the counties, a uniform salary would impose a heavy burden on the smaller counties.

After careful weighing of the arguments for and against uniform salary for all judges in the superior courts, your committee finds that the facts justify recommending three salary rates for superior court judges. We base this conclusion on the following reasoning:

1. Fundamentally, we believe that the job of a superior court judge is the same anywhere in the State. We accept, in short, all of the arguments advanced above in support of a uniform salary.

2. On the other hand, not all of the counties have enough work load to keep a judge fully occupied. Some differential is justified to recognize this fact and to provide an incentive for such judges to take assignments elsewhere.

3 In some larger counties the establishment of municipal courts has altered the jurisdiction of the superior court, and thereby has given it a higher concentration of more difficult cases.

4. The smaller counties should not be required to bear the disproportionate increased cost which uniform salaries would impose.

5. If a uniform salary were set (and it necessarily would be set near the present rate in the larger counties) a very few voters in the smaller counties would be privileged to elect a high-salaried judge.

The counties in which the creation of municipal courts has affected the character of the superior court work load are Alameda, Los Angeles, Sacramento, San Diego and San Francisco.

It is difficult to say what constitutes a full-time case load for a court. A mere count of filings and dispositions is inconclusive, because the character of the cases and the work habits of the judge and the attorneys who appear before him all have a bearing on the work load. On the other hand, if an arbitrary distinction is to be made, these statistics of case loads are the only ready standard available.

Having no other alternative, we propose that the standard of 375 dispositions per year for the last fiscal year be the measure of what constitutes a full-time case load for the superior court of a county. We arrive at this figure by deducting from the 365 days in the year the 104 Saturdays and Sundays and 11 legal holidays, leaving 250 normal working days. We have not deducted vacation time, because such periods are frequently covered by the assignment of another judge. To this we apply a factor of 1½ dispositions per day, resulting in the 375 disposition standard. This standard has the further virtue that in recent times some of the counties have fallen clearly below this point and all the others have been clearly above it. There is an advantage in having a division point standing in the clear, because it eliminates the possibility of quibbling over a few cases one way or another.

The effect of this distinction is to establish that there is less than a full work load in the Counties of Alpine, Amador, Calaveras, Colusa, Del Norte, El Dorado, Glenn, Inyo, Lake, Lassen, Mariposa, Modoc, Mono, Nevada, Plumas, San Benito, Sierra, Tehama, Trinity and Tuolumne.

It is not within the scope of this study to suggest reorganization of the judicial system. Yet our findings clearly indicate a basic problem badly needing attention. We have 20 counties in which the work load is so light and the population represented is so small that we cannot justify a salary equal to that paid in the other 38 counties. The real solution, in our judgment, lies not in paying a part-time salary—as we feel compelled to recommend under present circumstances—but in equalizing the work load by the creation of judicial districts embracing more than one county.

Your committee urges that the Legislature, the Judicial Council, the State Bar, and the counties concerned unite in an effort to bring about this badly needed reform.

Having concluded that the should be three ranges for superior court judges, the next question is what the rates should be. There are certain well-established factors which have generally been used in determining salaries for administrative positions. It has been increasingly evident as this study progressed, however that it would be difficult to apply these same factors to judicial posts. These factors are discussed briefly below to show that they were considered and to show why they have not been a useful guide in solving this particular problem.

1. Training Required. This factor can be divided into (a) amount and kind of education required and (b) amount and kind of prior experience required. Aside from the basic requirement that a superior court judge must be trained in law, there is no fixed pattern to which a salary standard can be related. The training required clearly marks a judgeship as a professional position, but the amount of training required beyond basic professional instruction is too nebulous to be used as a salary factor

2. Variety and Difficulty of Duties. The difference in jurisdiction between the various courts is defined by law, but the degree of difference in the difficulty and variety of judges' duties and responsibilities is subtle. We find no possibility of reducing the varied aspects of judicial work to a set of objective and measurable factors. Distinctions have to be arbitrarily made, instead. The consequences of a given case in terms of its effects on the litigant and its consequences in determining the future course of the law do not lend themselves readily to being measured by points and weighted averages.

3. Volume of Work. The volume of work, as measured by work load statistics, is easy to see; but we have misgivings about the significance of the data for more than limited purposes, for the following reasons:

a We are uncertain of the accuracy of the data.

b. If work load figures were to be used in setting salaries, it would be important to find items which are at the same time a true measure of work load and yet beyond influence by action of the court.

c. Work load has only a limited influence in the superior courts, because when it reaches a given point, additional judgeships are created or the situation is eased temporarily by the assignment of another judge by the Judicial Council.

d. The work load of a court is not a true measure of what is required of the judge because the Judicial Council may assign him to other places, including the appellate bench.

4. Nature and Extent of Responsibility. Responsibility is usually measured in terms of effect on the lives of others and on money and property, and by other public consequences By these criteria any judicial position must be rated high. Translating the factor into objective terms which can be applied equally in the future would in our judgment be too arbitrary a step to be defensible.

5. Hours and Conditions of Work. There is little concrete data on hand but we understand that practice varies a great deal among the courts and it apparently varies between the courts and other kinds of employment. The nature of judging law and facts is such, however, that we give this point relatively little consideration in this study. The responsibilities of a judge cannot be measured by a mere count of the hours he spends on the bench or in chambers.

6. Strain. Some salary evaluation plans include a factor for physical, mental or emotional strain. It is a rather intangible factor, and in any event we hold the view that the strain a job imposes on a man is as much a measure of the man as it is of the job he holds.

7. Special Skills and Aptitudes. For the purposes of this study we have not been able to find that this is a factor separable from training.

8. The Labor Market. In many fields of employment salary levels are influenced directly by the economic law of supply and demand. Considering the responsibilities of the judiciary, we believe that the job ought to seek the man and that the salary should be at a level which will command the services of the man the job requires.

9. Prestige. Some authorities argue that prestige is a partial substitute for higher salaries. We have no doubt that the social, professional and political prestige of a judgeship is one of the considerations which induces an appointee to abandon a more lucrative private practice, but prestige in a community carries with it certain community responsibilities, and salaries must be high enough to support these responsibilities.

10. Perquisites of Office. The compensation cannot be measured by dollars of salary alone. The most important of these perquisites is the system of voluntary retirement provided for judges Under this plan a judge may retire at half pay at age 65, after 20 years of service; or at age 70, after 10 years of service. The Judges' Retirement Fund is supported by a deduction of 2½ percent from judges' salaries, and a matching contribution by the State. To illustrate the advantage of this plan: a judge appointed to the superior court in a metropolitan county at age 45, at the present salary of $15,000, could retire at age 65 on a stipend of $7,500 per year, after contributing a total of only $7,500 over 20 years—the equivalent of only one year of the retirement allowance. A private citizen, starting at age 45 to develop an annuity of $7,500 per year starting at age 65, would, in contrast have to set aside about $4,000 per year—or $80,000 over a 20-year period.

11. Job Costs. A salary should take into account the cost of getting and holding the job. Theoretically, in the case of the superior court judge, this includes the costs of periodic campaigns for office. Practically, the records show that the majority of the judges in the superior courts are gubernatorial appointees who generally have been re-elected for successive terms with only nominal opposition. This has become so characteristic of the judicial scene that the judge who has a brisk contest is apt to be one whose record on the bench has not been up to standard.

12. Bargaining Power. In industrial relations this factor overshadows all others in the setting of pay. In the field under study here bargaining power is measured by political power. It has been our observation that the municipal and superior court judges have the greatest power in this respect, partly because they are closer to local government and partly because so many of them have previously been in the Legislature. One evidence of this greater power is that many superior court judges get salaries equal to those of justices in the appellate courts. We hope by the findings of this committee to produce legislation which will put judicial salaries beyond the need for or the influence of this type of bargaining power.

13. Integrity. For positions carrying wide discretionary responsibilities, the point is sometimes made that salaries must be high enough to remove the temptation of outside financial influence on decisions. While this may be an argument against unduly low salaries for the judiciary it does not indicate what the exact amount of the salaries should be. If a man will be influenced by outside financial temptation, it is difficult to set a salary high enough to remove the temptation. The best that can be done is to set a figure high enough to provide a respectable living and a fair return for the nature of the work.

14. Salaries for Comparable Positions. In the final analysis, what usually is done in most salary surveys is to gather data on salaries for comparable positions elsewhere and to make comparisons which will establish the rate that ought to be paid as a prevailing rate.

The procedure has certain fairly obvious drawbacks, which are emphasized in the case of judicial salaries.

a. It is not always possible to be sure that the jobs compared are alike in every detail of duty and responsibility.

b. It is not always possible to assure that all of the working conditions and indirect compensations are equal.

c. The salaries for positions found to be comparable may not have been set on any more logical basis than those under study, and in that case it is a matter of the blind leading the blind or the inadequate supporting the inadequate.

Notwithstanding these limitations, we have for comparative purposes sought data on salaries being paid by other jurisdictions. A summary of this information is included later in this report.

15. Ability and Willingness to Pay. In the public service an important controlling factor in setting salaries is the ability and willingness of the public to pay. In the case of the superior courts, the evidence is clear that some of the inequities which now exist are the result of the unwillingness of local governing bodies or local pressure groups to increase costs If the effects of their attitude were confined to the home county, we would not be too concerned. But a low-paid (and hence possibly poorly qualified) judge from such a community is not able to do his share in the statewide judiciary the Judicial Council administers.

16. Cost of Living. Ideally, salaries ought to be related to living costs in such a way that the "take-home pay" remains constant. By this standard the judiciary has lost ground in recent years. The judges have shared this fate with many top administrative and supervisory officials, who usually take the deepest cut in times of depression, get the smallest increase in prosperity, pay the higher income tax, and assume the greater burden of supporting charities and other community activities. Judges' salaries should be high enough to meet the costs of living at the standard of living a judge must maintain. Some will argue that this will justify different salaries in different parts of the State, but our studies have shown that costs are not vastly different in different parts of the State; and the uniformity of federal and state administrative salaries, regardless of location, bears that out.

Your committee concludes that the net effect of all the foregoing discussion of factors is that the setting of salaries for judges cannot be guided by all the principles normally prevailing in salary studies, but that the soundest basis on which to establish the salaries is to combine consideration of existing practice and the cost of maintaining a decent standard of living for a superior court judge. From that basis, we believe it possible to establish fixed ratios between the courts of different jurisdiction, and to designate economic factors on which future adjustments will be based.

As a starting point in determining the cost-of-living at a reasonable standard for judges, we have adopted the findings of the Heller Foundation. In 1947 the foundation established a minimum budget for an executive's family of four, totaling $12,530 per year. In our judgment this budget constitutes a good starting point in determining a rate for superior court judges, providing that 20 percent is added to provide a differential above minimum requirements imposed by the responsibilities and by the necessities of the standard of living of a superior court judge bearing a full work load.

At the same time a salary of $15,000 per year was established for the superior court judges in the Counties of Los Angeles, San Francisco, Alameda and San Diego. Although applying to only four of the 58 counties, it applies to 104 of the 203 superior court judges.

The range of salaries for the principal trial courts of other states of comparable size indicates many variations, but the salary of $15,000 is close to prevailing practice. Those reported by other states include:

Illinois	$10,000 to $17,000
Maryland	$13,000 to $15,000
Massachusetts	$14,500
Michigan	$9,000 to $18,500
New Jersey	$7,500 to $20,000
New York	$23,000 to $28,000
Ohio	$4,347 to $12,000
Pennsylvania	$11,000 to $18,000

As one further corroborating point supporting this rate, the report to the Legislature by the State Bar of California in April, 1947, recommended the salary of $15,000 for the four metropolitan counties. The bar at that time recommended a differential in other counties, but through questioning by the committee, it has been developed that that recommendation does not mean that the bar is necessarily convinced that a differential is justified, but rather signifies the bar's acceptance at that time of an existing practice.

We recommend that the salary for superior court judges in the 35 counties having municipal courts be established uniformly at $15,000 per year, in relation to the economic factors prevailing in 1947, subject to further changes proposed below. This salary then becomes the base figure in relation to which all subsequent proposals will be developed.

The foregoing proposal having combined a desirable cost-of-living budget with a salary already set for many of the judges, we propose that hereafter adjustment be made in consistent relation to a cost-of-living index. The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics establishes a monthly Consumers' Price Index for food and a quarterly Consumers' Price Index for all items. There is a separate index for San Francisco and for Los Angeles. In recent years the index for the two cities has been close, but never identical. Rather than selecting one or the other as the guide for future adjustment in judges' salaries, we propose that an average of the two be used. In September, 1947, when the Heller Foundation budget previously mentioned was established, the Consumers' Price Index for all items in San Francisco was 165.7; for Los Angeles it was 161.6. The average was 163.65.

Your committee recommends that to keep the basic salary consistent with economic developments, there be an adjustment, up or down, of $500 per year at each Session of the Legislature at which it is determined that the Consumers' Price Index has advanced or declined five points (or 4 points and a major fraction) since the salary was last fixed.

As of October 15, 1950, the index was 176 for San Francisco and 171.3 for Los Angeles, or an average of 173.65. Therefore an adjustment in the $15,000 base is already in order, to $16,000.

In considering these and all other salaries mentioned, the Legislature should keep in mind the additional compensation for judges through their retirement system, discussed earlier in this report.

We recommend that for the 33 counties having a full-time superior court, but no municipal courts, the base salary be $13,500 per year. These counties are Butte, Contra Costa, Fresno, Humboldt, Imperial, Kern, Kings, Madera, Marin, Mendocino, Merced, Monterey, Napa, Placer, Riverside, San Bernardino, San Joaquin, San Luis Obispo, San Mateo, Santa Barbara, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Shasta, Siskiyou, Solano, Sonoma, Stanislaus, Sutter, Tulare, Ventura, Yolo, and Yuba.

This figure is selected on the following basis:

1. It is 90 percent of the salary established for the large counties having municipal courts; and we propose that this relationship remain constant hereafter.

2. It provides a differential above the salaries we propose for municipal court judges.

In view of the change in the index this figure should be adjusted to $14,400.

For the courts in the 20 smaller counties (those having a case load of less than 375 dispositions per year, and consisting of the Counties of Alpine, Amador, Calaveras, Colusa, Del Norte, El Dorado, Glenn, Inyo, Lake, Lassen, Mariposa, Modoc, Mono, Nevada, Plumas, San Benito, Sierra, Tehama, Trinity and Tuolumne) we recommend a basic salary of $10,000 per year. This figure is selected on the following basis:

1. It is 66.67 percent of the salary established for the larger counties; and we propose that this relationship remain constant hereafter.

2. It is the highest salary now being paid by any of the smaller counties.

3. The differential between this and the higher salary is significant enough to provide real incentive for the judges in the small counties to accept assignments to the larger counties, with their more congested courts.

In view of the adjustment in the index, the rate at this time should be adjusted to $10,667.

We reiterate that this lower salary is in effect a salary for part-time work, at the same rate as that applying to the other counties not having municipal courts. It is proposed only because of the illogical arrangement which leaves these counties with less than a full work load.

Distribution of Cost

The State now pays $5,750 per year towards the salary of each superior court judge. To reiterate an earlier point, the payment of the difference by the counties contributes to the illogical pattern of prevailing rates.

All of those who have addressed the committee in behalf of uniform salary for the superior court judges have argued that this cannot be accomplished unless the State assumes the entire burden of financing judicial salaries. Your committee believes that a workable alternative is to give the counties a uniform part of the burden, which should not exceed by very much that now being paid by the smallest of the counties. We think that the Legislature should not establish high salaries without regard to local wishes, if at the same time it imposes the financial burden of that decision upon the counties. On the other hand, we think the counties should continue to pay a share of the salary for an officer who is locally elected. Moreover, payment of a share by the county will tend to cause careful local consideration of efforts to create more judgeships.

For reasons already developed, we believe that the salaries should be made more nearly uniform, and the result will be to raise them in most counties. Under the circumstances we see no alternative but for the State to assume a greater share of the burden of this cost. In the general trend toward the assumption of local costs by the State, we can think of no more worthy purpose to which to devote state funds than to provide adequate salaries for a better judiciary.

We recommend that in the 38 larger counties, the county be required to assume $5,000 of the annual salary of each judge; and that the share of the 20 smaller counties be $3,000.

The State's contribution to the salaries of 203 superior court judges at this time is $1,167,250 per year. The county share amounts to $1,475,700. Under the revised proposal the cost to the State would be $2,047,940 per year and to the counties $970,000 per year. The over-all effect is an increase of $374,990 per year in the total cost with an increase of $880,690 in the cost to the State and a decrease of $505,700 in the cost to the counties.

THE MUNICIPAL COURTS

All of the arguments that support uniformity of salaries for the superior courts apply equally to the municipal courts. Here we do not have the problem of the smaller unit, because under the Municipal Courts

Act and under the approved reorganization of the inferior courts, there is a minimum requirement of a population of 40,000 to be served by a municipal court.

There has been some argument to the effect that the salary for municipal courts and the superior courts should be very nearly equal, on the grounds that the judges are dealing with essentially the same type of cases, differing only in the money value of civil cases and in the degree of crime in criminal cases. It has been argued with some logic that to the parties involved a small case is just as essential as a large case.

Viewed from the standpoint of society as a whole, however, felonies are more serious crimes than misdemeanors, and the civil cases involving large sums of money and broad issues are more generally of greater public significance. The very fact that we have a system of courts which includes both superior and municipal courts requires a salary structure which recognizes a differential.

We recommend that the salaries for all municipal court judges be established uniformly at 83.33 percent of the rate for the superior court in the larger counties In relation to the base rate of $15,000, this will produce an annual salary of $12,500 for the municipal courts. It should be $13,333 on the basis of the current index.

This provides a higher salary for municipal court judges than that for the superior court judges in the smaller counties. There is no likelihood that this will cause direct conflict, because the total population of each of the counties proposed for the lower salary would not justify the creation of a municipal court in any of them. Should one of these counties grow to the point where a municipal court is justified, it will at the same time have an added superior court work load sufficient to justify the higher salary.

It will be pointed out that this reduces the salaries in the municipal courts in San Francisco and Los Angeles. Your committee believes, however, that the salary proposed represents a fair relationship between the municipal and superior courts; and it is more nearly consistent with the relationship previously recommended by the State Bar. The fact that a higher salary was adopted by the Legislature in this instance, contrary to recommendations before it, and contrary to what appears to us to be the logic of the situation, should not justify retaining the higher salary.

THE DISTRICT COURTS OF APPEAL

Having established a basic salary for the superior courts of the larger counties, your committee believes that the soundest basis for establishing salaries for the district courts of appeal is to have a uniform percentage of difference between the superior and appellate courts. Having established a 16.67 percent differential successively between the superior courts in the smaller counties, the municipal courts, and the superior courts in the larger counties, we propose that this 16 67 percent differential be projected upward to provide a base salary of $17,500 per year for the associate justices of the district courts of appeal. It becomes $18,667 when adjusted to the current index. In addition, we recommend an added increment of $500 per year for each presiding justice.

SUPREME COURT

To carry the plan to its ultimate conclusion the salary for the associate justices in the State Supreme Court should be established at 33.33 percent above the rate for the superior court judges in the larger counties. This is a base of $20,000 per year; and adjusts to $21,333. In addition, we recommend a constant additional increment of $1,500 per year for the chief justice.

ATTACHES

The committee has considered proposing the local fixing of salaries for court attaches, except those few whose work is judicial in character. However, there are so many factors involved that we recommend that this subject be referred to an appropriate committee for further study.

LEGISLATIVE PROCEDURE

Assuming that the foregoing program may gain legislative approval at this time, the problem still will not be solved for all time, because there is no feasible way to make the plan self-executing. Your committee cannot consider its work completed without suggesting three important points for future consideration:

First, the legislation which will be introduced in support of this program will not include the cost-of-living formula on which our current proposals are based. We urge, however, that in the future the Legislature use this formula as a guide, and that other factors not be permitted to influence rates except on showing of very good reason.

Second, the present custom of relying on the recommendations of grand juries and boards of supervisors should be abandoned. These are salaries for state officers, set by the State Legislature, and to be paid mostly out of state funds. They should be removed from local influence.

Third, if uniformity of treatment is to be accorded to salary measures affecting the judiciary, all such measures should be sent to a single committee of each house. The practice of referring bills on this subject to any one of three Assembly committees contributes to inconsistency of treatment.

PROPOSALS TO JUDICIAL COUNCIL

We recommend that basic legislation define the various classes of superior court for salary purposes, and that the Judicial Council be authorized to change a count from one class to another when it meets new conditions prescribed by law.

We suggest to the Judicial Council that it advise the Legislature whenever a change in any of these criteria seems desirable.

Furthermore, we urge upon the Judicial Council that it take firm action to improve the accuracy of reports on superior court work load.

CONCLUSION

There may be disagreement expressed after the filing of this report, particularly as to the salary levels proposed. We believe they are adequate in light of present conditions; and that they provide adequately for meeting future conditions. Above all, we believe that the basic relationships established should be left undisturbed. If rates are changed, we urge that these accepted relationships still be recognized.

PRESENT AND RECOMMENDED SALARIES OF STATE ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICIALS

REPORT BY STATE ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON EQUALIZATION OF SALARIES, QUALIFICATIONS AND JOB CLASSIFICATIONS OF PUBLIC EMPLOYEES

January, 1951

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE

WILLARD M. HUYCK, Chairman

January 23, 1951

The Honorable Sam L. Collins, Speaker, and the Members of the Assembly, State of California
State Capitol, Sacramento 14, California

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: In pursuance with the provisions of House Resolution No. 255 of the Assembly, 1949 Regular Session, your interim committee has made a thorough and impartial analysis of the various facts bearing upon the equalization of salaries of specified administrative and executive officials in the Government of the State of California.

Your committee has had the advisory and technical assistance of the survey staff of J. L. Jacobs & Company, Consultants in Public Administration and Finance of Chicago and Los Angeles. The survey staff has assisted the committee in making necessary analyses and evaluations of the duties, responsibilities and salaries of state administrative officials in California and in eight other state governments and in the preparation of the draft of the following report and recommendations.

The committee has given careful consideration to the findings and recommendations in the following report and earnestly commends these recommendations to your close consideration and action at this legislative session. The committee urges early enactment of necessary legislation to establish equalization of present salaries and to provide continuing determination and maintenance of equitable salaries for the administrative and executive positions in the State Government.

Favorable action by the Assembly on the recommendations will accomplish the purposes of the Assembly in creating our committee and in providing an objective basis for the valuation and equalization of the salaries of state administrative positions on the basis of duties and responsibilities and qualification requirements.

The committee desires also to acknowledge the cooperation by the various state administrative officials and departments and the assistance in furnishing specific information on the statutory powers and duties and salaries of the state administrative officials by the Director of Finance, the Legislative Counsel, and the State Personnel Board.

The committee also takes this opportunity to express its appreciation and that of the survey staff for the interest and assistance by the state executive and personnel officers who furnished specific information on the salaries of comparable positions in the states of Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Washington.

Your committee will gladly furnish any supplementary information that may be required for the consideration and use by the Assembly.

Respectfully submitted,

WILLARD M. HUYCK, Chairman

ELECTIVE AND APPOINTIVE POSITIONS NOT INCLUDED IN SURVEY

The review of the list of elective and appointive officers of the State whose compensation is fixed by statute, has indicated the necessity of eliminating certain of the list of positions for the reasons indicated in the following paragraphs. The evaluation of such positions and recommended salaries are accordingly not included in this report.

(a) Director of Social Welfare. At the time this position was considered, changes in the organization and administration of the Department of Social Welfare were to be made effective March 1, 1950. The information on the specific duties and responsibilities of the changed position should be obtained as the reorganization is completed. Such information should then be used as the basis in determining the relative value and in recommending the equalized salary for such office in accordance with the plan recommended herein.

(b) Director of Planning and Research. This position was abolished during 1949 and has therefore been excluded from the list of administrative and elective officials.

(c) Deputy Director of Department of Justice. This position was vacant at the time of the survey and information as to the duties and responsibilities of the position was not available. The information on the duties and responsibilities of this office should be prepared upon the filling of this position and such information should then be used as the basis in determining the relative value and in recommending the equalized salary for such office in accordance with the plan recommended herein.

(d) Franchise Tax Commissioner. The office of Franchise Tax Commissioner was abolished by action of the State Legislature effective January 1, 1950. No recommendation is therefore made with respect to this office.

(e) Legislative Counsel. The Legislative Counsel has the primary duty and responsibility of giving legal consultant and advisory assistance to the Legislature This position has therefore not been included as one of the administrative and executive positions for which equalization of salaries is recommended herein. Upon request by the State Legislature, the joint salary review committee recommended herein should make the necessary evaluation of this position as a guide for fixing the salary by the Legislature

(f) Adjutant General and Assistant Adjutant General. According to the policy of the State Legislature and similar policy in other states, the pay and allowances to the Adjutant General and the Assistant Adjutant General are fixed to correspond to the pay and allowances for Major General and Brigadier General respectively in the United States Army. This policy and plan has worked out satisfactorily in this State and other states and such policy should be continued for these two offices.

(g) Officers and enlisted men of the National Guard, Naval Militia, etc. The information on the duties and responsibilities of these positions indicates that they are closely related to the military service and the salaries should be fixed in accordance therewith. No recommendation is therefore made with respect to these positions in this survey for equalization of salaries of elected and administrative officials.

PART TWO

The above recommendations on salaries for administrative positions were determined on the basis of: (1) objective evaluation of the duties and responsibilities of each position included in the survey; (2) check of the validity of the position evaluations through comparison with the relative values of comparable state administrative positions in other large states; and (3) integration of evaluations of positions with the equitable salary rates based upon a cross section of the salaries provided for such administrative positions, for other positions in the State Government, for administrative positions in local governmental jurisdictions in the State of California, and with reference to the level of compensation for executive salaries in private industry.

II. RECOMMENDATIONS FOR OTHER OFFICIAL POSITIONS

(1) Governor. The present salary of the Governor should be continued at the present rate of $25,000 in line with the legislative policy of establishing the salary of this office in line with the broad responsibilities of this office. The present salary for the Governor of California is the same as the salary for Governor of New York and Governor of Pennsylvania. The salaries of governors in the other states in the country are generally lower than those fixed for the Governors of California, New York and Pennsylvania.

(2) Lieutenant Governor. The annual salary for the position of Lieutenant Governor should be increased to $14,000. This relationship to the Governor's salary of $25,000 compares favorably with the salary of the Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania as well as with recommendations made for other positions in the State Government.

(3) Attorney General. The annual salary of the Attorney General should be in accordance with the provisions in Constitution Article V, Section 21, which provides that the Attorney General shall receive the same salary as prescribed by law for an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

(4) Governor's Secretaries. The Legislature has established the maximum annual salary for Governor's secretaries at $10,000. In order to maintain a uniform standard of fixing these salaries in proper relationship to other positions for which the salary is fixed by the Legislature, serious consideration should be given to increasing the present maximum salary for Governor's secretaries. The current salary range for Governor's secretaries is $7,200 to $10,000, and the present practice pemitting a Govenor to fix the salaries of his secretaries in accordance with the maximum salary established by the Legislature should be continued.

(5) Members of the State Personnel Board. The salary of each of the members of the State Personnel Board should be fixed at $4,000 per year. This is based upon the evaluation of the extensive duties and responsibilities of these officials which are performed on a part-time basis, or approximately one-fourth of full-time employment.

(6) Members of the State Board of Barber Examiners. The salary of each of the members of the State Board of Barber Examiners should continue to be fixed at $5,000 per annum. This is based upon the evaluation of the duties and responsibilities of these officials which are performed on an extensive part-time basis or at least one-half of full-time employment.

(7) Board of Pilot Commissioners. The duties and responsibilities of the Board of Pilot Commissioners are of an on-call and part-time nature corresponding to approximately less than one-fourth of full-time employment. The salary of $2,000 per year should be fixed for each of the members of the board on the basis of such part-time employment.

(8) Board of Harbor Commissioners (San Francisco Harbor). The duties of the Board of Harbor Commissioners (San Francisco Harbor) are of a part-time and limited basis and an annual salary of $3,000 should be fixed by the Legislature for the members of this board in accordance with the relationship of their duties and responsibilities to other boards and commissions of State Government.

(9) Board of Harbor Commissioners (Humboldt Bay). The duties and responsibilities of the members of the Board of Harbor Commissioners for Humboldt Bay are of a part-time limited character and the present annual salary of $400 as fixed by the State Legislature should be continued.

III. SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS FOR APPLICATION AND ADMINISTRATION OF THE SALARY PLAN

(1) The initial adjustments to bring the present salaries into conformity with the recommended salary rates should provide: (1) that the salary of any administrative official receiving less than the proposed salary should be increased to the proposed salary where the length of service in such position is over one year, (2) that the salary of any official receiving more than the proposed salary for the position should not be reduced unless there is a change in the person filling such position, provided that the salary for any administrative official should not be changed where the recommended salary provides for either an increase or decrease in salary of $400 or less per annum.

(2) In order that the policy of objective evaluation and equitable salaries for state administrative positions be maintained, the Legislature should provide for an advisory joint salary review committee consisting of a representative of the Legislative Auditor, the Pay Division of the State Personnel Board, and the Bureau of Budgets and Accounts of the Department of Finance.

(3) The present statutes and rules should be amended to permit the application of the civil service provisions to the positions of Field Worker for the California School for the Blind, the Cashier in the Treasurer's Office, the Deputy Superintendents of Public Instruction, the Associate Superintendent of Public Instruction, and such other positions which have technical and supervisory and semiadministrative duties and responsibilities under the heads of the respective departments and institutions of the State Government.

PART THREE

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR APPLICATION AND MAINTENANCE OF THE SALARY EQUALIZATION PLAN

A. APPLICATION OF RECOMMENDED EQUALIZED SALARIES

Except where otherwise noted, the recommended salaries have been determined on the basis of the relative valuation of the duties for full-time employment in the respective positions.

In cases of individual positions where full-time employment is not required, the actual compensation for such positions should be determined on the basis of the approximate proportion that the actual service bears to the total full-time service.

In order to bring the present salaries into conformity with the recommended salary rates, the initial adjustments should be made effective in fixing the salaries of present incumbents through amendments adopted by the Legislature as follows:

(a) The salary of any state administrative official receiving less than the maximum salary prescribed for the position should be increased to the maximum where the length of service in such position is over one year in such position, except as provided in paragraph (c).

(b) The salary of any state administrative official receiving more than the maximum salary prescribed for the position should not be reduced unless there is a change in the person filling such position, provided that no further increase in the compensation should be provided for the present incumbent during the period that the present salary is in excess of the maximum salary prescribed for such position, except as provided in paragraph (c) below.

(c) The salary for any state administrative position should not be changed where the recommended salary provides for either an increase or decrease in salary of $400 or less per annum.

(d) In view of the determination of the relative value of the duties and responsibilities of the individual positions to each other, the salary recommendations in this report should be presented to the Legislature in one bill which would also amend the provisions of all other codes and statutes pertaining to the salaries of the positions studied in this survey.

B. RECOMMENDATION FOR MAINTENANCE OF THE SALARY EQUALIZATION PLAN

The House Resolution No. 255 (1949 Regular Session) creating this committee lists the following conditions on which action was desired to assure equalization of salaries and definition of qualifications in state administrative positions:

"WHEREAS, Each session of the Legislature is confronted with numerous bills affecting the salaries of persons employed in various capacities in local governmental subdivisions of the State; and

"WHEREAS, The enactment of laws affecting these matters in some local governmental subdivisions and failure to enact similar laws affecting other subdivisions widens the existing disparity between salaries, classification and qualifications among city, county and state governmental agencies; and

"WHEREAS, These conditions hamper the efforts of the state and local governmental subdivisions to stabilize and equalize governmental wage scales, job classifications and qualifications of public employees and to insure the payment to all of the prevailing wage for similar work, the result in the 'pirating' of employees among such agencies; and * * *."

The evaluations of the existing state administrative positions and the recommended equalized salaries for such positions have been made on the basis of impartial analysis of the duties and responsibilities of the individual positions. Such evaluations and equalized salary reflect the character, difficulty and scope of duties and responsibilities of the position and not the individual qualifications of officials who are now filling such positions.

In order that the policy of equitable evaluation and salaries for all state administrative positions be maintained, current maintenance of the factual evaluation and salary plan is essential.

Changes in the organization, in the duties and responsibilities of existing positions and of new positions, as well as changes in economic conditions will require regular review and evaluation and action in fixing equitable salaries based upon such changes.

In order to assure effective administration and maintenance of the equalized salary plan for state administrative positions, the present statutory provisions fixing the present salaries of the above administrative positions should be repealed and salary equalization statute should be enacted providing for setting out the recommended equalized salaries and providing for the application and maintenance of equalized salaries for the existing and any new or changed administrative positions in the State Government.

Such legislation providing for the adoption of the equitable salaries for the administrative positions should also provide for periodic review and recommendation on necessary adjustment of the salaries of existing positions and of new or changed positions on the basis of changes in organization, duties and responsibilities of the respective positions.

In order to provide for such periodic review and information for the State Legislature on salaries for existing and new administrative positions and to assure integration of the salary recommendations with the policy of salary standardization for other state supervisory and technical positions in the State Government, the Legislature should provide for an advisory joint salary review committee consisting of a representative of the Legislative Auditor, the Pay Division of the State Personnel Board and the Bureau of Budgets and Accounts of the Department of Finance. Such committee should have the duty and responsibility of making periodic surveys and recommendations to the appropriate legislative committees on the salaries of state administrative positions on the basis of salaries of comparable positions in the larger states of the country and in conformity with the legislative policy of establishing standardized prevailing salaries for other offices and positions in the State Government, including proper consideration of the effect on the relative compensation of these positions when general percentage increases in compensation are granted to employees having civil service status.

It is further recommended that such necessary staff members that are employed and assigned by the above agencies in making salary surveys for other positions be assigned on the salary survey for state administrative offices. This will insure integration of the salary recommendations based upon the relative importance of the duties and responsibilities of all offices and positions in the State Government. Such services by the members of the joint salary survey committee and the staff should be furnished without additional compensation over that provided for these officers and employees.

In order to permit objective evaluation and recommendations on equitable salaries for existing positions and for any new positions, such joint salary survey committee should obtain and maintain statements of the duties and responsibilities of existing and proposed changes in state administrative positions and of the duties and responsibilities and salaries of comparable positions in the other large state governments. The adoption of legislation and rules providing for the above and the periodic survey and recommendations filed with the Legislature not later than the fifteenth legislative day of each session will make available necessary information to the Legislature for fixing of equitable salaries for the state administrative positions, related both to salaries of comparable positions in other large states and to the salary levels for other offices and positions in the State of California.

The committee specially urges consideration and action on the above by the Legislature so that the conditions and objectives listed in House Resolution No. 255 creating this committee may be alleviated and adequate information be made available to the Legislature on all matters relating to salaries, classification and qualifications in all branches of the state employment and all other matters related thereto.

C. RECOMMENDED CHANGES FOR INCLUSION OF SPECIFIC POSITIONS UNDER CIVIL SERVICE

A number of positions listed among the state administrative positions for which salaries are fixed by the Legislature are similar to the many technical and supervisory positions which are filled after civil service test and certification by the State Personnel Board. Among these are the positions of field worker for the California School for the Blind, the cashier in the Treasurer's Office, the Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction and the Associate Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The present statutes and rules should be amended to permit the application of the civil service provisions to the above positions, as well as to other positions which have technical and supervisory and semi-administrative duties and responsibilities under the heads of the respective departments and institutions of the State Government. This would also permit of the provision of equitable salaries for these positions on the basis of the classification and salary standardization plan now in effect for other state positions.

PART FOUR

SALARY CHANGES FOR STATE ADMINISTRATIVE POSITIONS SINCE 1941

An analysis has been made of the main changes in salaries of selected state administrative positions in the California departments between 1941 and 1949, inclusive.

The salaries for the state administrative positions in the years 1941, 1943, 1945, 1947, and 1949 are shown in the tabulation on the following page The percentage increases in the salaries for 36 of these positions for which salary data were furnished for 1941 and 1949 are summarized in the following:

Percentage increase since 1941	Number of positions
200% or more	1
100% to 200%	11
75% to 100%	5
50% to 75%	12
1% to 50%	4
No change	2
	36

It will be noted that of the total of 36 positions, the salaries of 12 positions have been increased by over 100 percent, the salaries of 17 positions have been increased by over 50 percent, the salaries of four positions have been increased up to 50 percent, while the salaries of three positions have not been changed or were decreased since 1941.

The information on the methods and amounts of salary changes shows variations in treatment of different positions and disparities between the salaries and the relative values of the positions as determined by objective evaluation of positions.

The Assembly in creating this committee and in providing for this survey indicated its desire to alleviate such conditions which result in disparities between the relative values and salaries provided for all positions.

In order to assure the adoption and maintenance of an equitable salary plan for the state administrative positions the recommended legislation should require that the plan should be established and based on the relative value of positions and equitable salaries for comparable positions both in the larger states and for other supervisory and technical positions in the State of California.

PART FIVE

SALARY EQUALIZATION FOR STATE ADMINISTRATIVE POSITIONS

A. MAIN OBJECTIVES AND BENEFITS OF SALARY EQUALIZATION PROGRAM

As previously indicated, the main objectives and benefits from the establishment of equalized salaries for state administrative officials are to provide equitable salaries on the basis of relative difficulty and importance of the duties and responsibilities of the positions and to assure that salary rates fixed should be on the basis of salaries of comparable positions in the other large state governments and for other supervisory, administrative and technical positions in the State Government.

In addition, the provisions for regular review and maintenance of the equalized salary plan by the present personnel staffs under the proposed joint salary survey committee will insure objective and impartial position classification and evaluation on the basis of duties and responsibilities of both existing and new positions. They also will provide salary rates based upon the relative importance of the duties and responsibilities of different positions and upon changes in economic conditions and prevailing levels for comparable positions.

Additional benefits for other phases of personnel administration include the following:

(a) Makes available basic information to the departments and to legislative committees and the Legislature on matters relating to job classification and qualifications of different state administrative positions.

(b) Provides a yardstick for evaluating each position in relation to all other positions in the state organization.

(c) Furnishes the legislative and management officials and the employees with information as to the relative values of requirements of duties and responsibilities of each of the positions.

(d) Provides basis for equitable salary plan based on the prevailing salaries of comparable positions in other large states and in California municipal and county governmental jurisdictions, adjusted and integrated with the salary and wage levels for other officers and employees in the State of California service.

(e) Provides definite procedure for collecting periodic data on the prevailing salaries of comparable positions in other state governments and in local governmental jurisdictions of California as well as within the state organization.

(f) Provides satisfactory management and employee relations program by establishing equitable valuations and salaries for all positions in the state organization.

(g) Provides definite basis for determining budgets for salaries with the use of classification and salary rates for respective positions in the state departments.

B. INITIAL STEPS IN ANALYSIS OF INDIVIDUAL POSITIONS

The initial steps in the evaluation process consisted of the collection and analysis of the duties and responsibilities of each of the positions to determine the scope and character of duties and extent to which the factors for evaluation are present in the respective positions.

A description of the duties and responsibilities for each position was obtained from each of the state administrative officials and members of the commissions included in the survey. A copy of the questionnaire form used to obtain these descriptions is included as Appendix B to this report.

Study was made of the statements of the duties, responsibilities and other significant requirements of the positions. The descriptions furnish detailed information about the duties and responsibilities of the positions, in addition to the available information on the position duties as described in the statutes and summarized in Appendix A of this report by the Legislative Counsel.

Following the analysis of the duties and responsibilities of the individual positions, a series of meetings were held by the committee with a number of officials to review the duties and requirements of their positions. Conferences were also held by the survey staff with other state officials and with representatives of public and private agencies who furnished valuable additional information on the relative importance of the respective positions.

Study was also made of the general organization and distribution of functions in the respective departments and of the budget appropriations in order to obtain information about the extent of responsibilities of the respective positions.

C. OBJECTIVE DETERMINATION OF RELATIVE VALUATION OF POSITIONS

The main purpose of the position evaluation was to determine objectively the relative value on the basis of kind, difficulty and importance of the duties and responsibilities of each position.

Such position evaluation is an orderly process used in determining the relative worth of positions and providing equitable salary differentials based upon the values of the different positions. It is an inventory and appraisal of the duties and responsibilities of the positions and is distinct from determination of the individual qualifications and efficiency of the employees in the positions.

Uniform evaluations of all positions on the basis of the relative value of positions were then converted into relative salary rates on the basis of the relationship of the relative values to the equalized salary levels in the State Government.

The relative valuations of equalized salaries for the administrative positions were determined as a result of: (1) objective evaluation of the duties and responsibilities of each position included in the survey; (2) check of the validity of the position evaluations through comparison with relative values of comparable state administrative positions in other large states; and (3) integration of evaluations of positions with the equitable salary rates based upon a cross-section of the salaries provided for such administrative positions, for other positions in the State Government, and for administrative positions in local governmental jurisdictions in the State of California.

As this survey deals only with top administrative positions in the State Government, use has been made of the evaluation factors found in administrative positions. In summary, such procedure includes:

(a) The analysis of duties, responsibilities and determination of the factors and requirements present in each position.

(b) The application of the uniform evaluation yardstick to evaluate positions on the basis of point ratings for specific factors and degrees present in each of the positions and the summation of point ratings for the respective factors to furnish the total evaluation and the relative values to other positions.

(c) The over-all cross comparison of requirements of each position and the relative values of the positions, with each position being considered as an entity.

(d) The comparison of the final total relative values with the relative values of comparable positions in other states.

(e) The conversion of the total numerical evaluations into money values of salaries on the basis of the equalized salary curve for administrative positions in the State Government.

The analysis and evaluation of positions as outlined above and over-all comparison were made of the relative values of the positions with each position considered as an entity. Such over-all comparison furnished additional information on the individual evaluations and provided a summary check on the accuracy of the total initial point evaluations.

On the basis of the detailed evaluations and the over-all comparison of positions, final evaluations were determined for the respective positions. The relative evaluations of positions included in the survey are shown according to point evaluation brackets on the table on the following page, together with the present and equalized salaries for the respective state administrative positions.

D. COMPARISON WITH VALUES OF COMPARABLE POSITIONS IN OTHER STATES

In order to obtain information of the present salaries in comparable positions in other large states and the validity of the administrative position evaluations in the State of California, information was obtained from executive and personnel officials in the states of Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Detailed information on the duties and responsibilities of all of the positions were not available in such states and the relative values of such positions were determined on the basis of the salaries provided for such positions.

This analysis indicated wide variations in the case of a number of such positions but showed close relationships of such relative salary values of some 31 of the 45 positions in four of the six larger states which were covered.

In order to test the validity of the values of such positions in California, the point evaluations developed for the 31 selected bench mark positions and the median salary evaluations of the positions in the six other states were plotted on a graph. The resulting scatter diagram and prevailing salary curve in the other six states is shown on the chart on the following page.

The bench mark positions in the other states on which there was general consistency as to relative valuation and salaries paid in the six other states are shown in the following. References to the specific positions are indicated by the number as shown on the chart in the following list and the chart which follows:

average salaries in proportion to the higher point evaluations. This interrelationship of point evaluations and median salaries of positions in the other states gave further valdity to the point evaluations developed for the state administrative positions in California.

E. DETERMINATION OF EQUALIZED SALARIES

As previously indicated, the position analysis and evaluation was directed to determine the relative value of positions in terms of numerical point evaluation and not in money values. Accordingly, the next step consisted of the conversion of the point evaluations into money values on the basis of salary equivalents for objective point values.

The main objective of the work of the committee was to determine and recommend equalization of salaries for the administrative positions. In order to provide for such equalized salaries, the relative evaluations of the California positions, together with the present levels of salaries for the positions were plotted on a graph in order to establish the salary curve which represents the present salary levels for such positions in the State of California. Such graph and best fit salary curve are shown on the chart on the following page.

It will be noted that a large number of the bench mark positions cluster around the curve, with a reasonably equal distribution of the positions above and below the curve. This indicates that the curve is representative of the present salary level for state administrative positions.

It is recommended that the salary plan provide for a series of salary levels for the respective positions since experience in objective salary evaluation has demonstrated the value of such salary levels so that the total point ratings within each prescribed level carry the same salary schedule.

Under this plan, all positions having total point evaluations within one range or salary level should be paid the same salary rate.

Based upon the total point evaluations and salary levels of existing salaries of state administrative positions in California, the equalized salary for each position was determined by use of the evaluation points for each position and the salary level in which such position falls.

The listing of the evaluation levels, the present salaries and the equalized salaries for each of the state administrative positions are shown in the table on page 1280.

F. SALARIES OF COMPARABLE POSITIONS IN OTHER STATES

In order to secure first hand information on the present salaries and practices in other states dealing with the comparable administrative positions, a questionnaire requesting information on prevailing salaries and practices was submitted to the governors of the six largest states and also to the Pacific Coast States of Oregon and Washington. The executive and personnel offices in all these states expressed much interest in this survey and cooperated in furnishing the information requested on the questionnaires.

The data on the respective questionnaires have been tabulated and summarized as shown on the tables on the following pages. Copy of the salary survey questionnaire used in this study is included as an exhibit in an appendix of this report.

The following information is shown on the tables:

(a) The annual maximum salaries of selected state administrative officials is seven largest states including the State of California, and the state median of salaries in the six states.

(b) The percentage relationship of salaries of the selected state administrative officials in the six larger states.

(c) The annual maximum salaries of selected state administrative officials in the States of Oregon, Washington and California.

The information on the annual maximum salaries of the selected administrative positions in the six larger states furnished the basis for determining the median salaries of these positions in the six states for use in determining the relative evaluations. These data were used for comparative purposes and for determining the relative evaluation of the bench mark jobs in the different states. Following are observations from analyses of the data included in these tables:

(1) There are marked differences in salaries provided for comparable positions in the different states due either to differences in organization and in duties and responsibilities and the variations in economic conditions and legislative policies for fixing the executive salaries in the respective states.

(2) The present salaries provided for comparable positions in the State of California are consistently higher than the six-state median salaries, with a total of 33 California positions above the median, five approximately on the median curve, and seven below the median salary curve.

Point Evaluation of California State Administrative Positions states and the median salary percentage in these states. The salary for Superintendent of Public Instruction has been used as the 100 percent base for this comparison as this position has been found to have substantially similar duties and responsibilities in the different states covered.

The information collected from the salary survey in the six states indicates the relative value of these positions as expressed by salaries paid in the respective states. Eliminating the positions where there are distinct variations both in the duties, responsibilities and salaries provided, the relative values for 31 of the 45 positions fall within 10 percent plus or minus of the median salaries in four of the six states. These relative values of the bench mark positions are sufficiently similar to furnish valuable information for comparative purposes

This information on the relative values of the bench mark positions which were within 10 percent of the median salaries had been used as a check on the evaluations of the state administrative positions in California.

The data on the salaries paid in the States of Oregon and Washington are shown on the table on page 1288. This shows the salary conditions in the Pacific Coast states as compared with salaries of similar positions in the State of California. As these states have substantially smaller organizations and the conditions vary materially from those in California, such salary data has not been used for comparative purposes or as a check on the relative values or salaries of comparable positions in the State of California.

G. SALARY LEVELS FOR ADMINISTRATIVE POSITIONS IN CALIFORNIA AND SIX LARGER STATES

In order to furnish an over-all comparison of the relative value and the salary levels for state administrative positions in California and in the other six larger states, salary curves are shown on the chart on page 1291 for both the State of California and the median of salaries in the six other larger states.

These curves show the relationship between the total evaluations of positions in California and the present salaries for state administrative positions in California and the median of salaries for comparable positions in the six larger states.

The curves have been developed by plotting on the curve the evaluation points for the respective positions and the corresponding salaries in California and the median of salaries in the six states.

It will be noted from this chart that the general salary level for the state administrative positions in California are higher than the median of salaries in the six other larger states and that the margin between the salary levels is greater in the case of the state administrative positions with lower evaluations than for positions with higher evaluations. This is significant in that the salaries for the lower grade positions in California are generally higher than for comparable jobs in the six other larger states.

PART SIX

DETERMINATION OF RECOMMENDED EQUALIZED SALARIES

The factors used in determining the equalized salary for each position have been considered in the determination of the recommended equalized salaries for the state administrative positions.

The recommended salaries are based upon the orderly evaluations of positions and the equalization of salaries related to such objective evaluations.

Consideration of such relationships provides an integrated compensation plan and assures substantially similar compensation for the state administrative positions in the State Government having similar basic responsibilities.

The main criteria or factors which were considered in determining the recommended equalized salaries are as follows:

(1) The character and importance of the duties and responsibilities of each position.

(2) The relative over-all evaluation of the duties, responsibilities and other requirements of each position.

(3) The equalized salaries for a cross section of the state administrative positions having close inter-relationship between position evaluation and salaries.

(4) The general economic conditions in California and changes in salaries for different positions and of salary levels provided for administrative positions in the States of New York and Pennsylvania, in local municipal and county governmental jurisdictions of the State of California, and in private industry.

(5) The policy of the Legislature in approving salaries for other state supervisory and technical positions in order to insure integrated salary schedules in the state service.

The determination of appropriate compensation for executive positions is much more complex and involved than determining the salary for specific craft or clerical positions. In the latter, direct counterparts of the state positions may be found in private industry and in govermental jurisdictions. However, for executive positions in the state service, it is difficult to make direct comparisons with specific executive positions in either private industry or in other governmental jurisdictions due to wide differences in organization, size, and scope of activity. The difficulty in making direct position-by-position comparisons for salary fixing purposes presented one problem in the determination of appropriate compensation for these positions and the requirement that the State must recruit qualified and experienced personnel for state administrative positions presented a second problem particularly due to the present extent of nation-wide defense preparations. With due consideration to both problems, and after careful investigation subsequent to the determination of the relative (equalized) value of each of these positions, the recommended equalized salaries were based upon the general level of compensation for similar or comparable positions in the states of New York and Pennsylvania and in local municipal and county governmental jurisdictions in the State of California.

Comparisons were made between the level of compensation for a selected group of 15 department heads in California with similar groups in the States of New York and Pennsylvania since New York and Pennsylvania are the two states, of the six states originally surveyed, most comparable to the State of California in size and all three have fixed the annual salary of their Governor at $25,000. The 15 selected executive positions in New York range from $15,000 to $20,000 a year, and in Pennsylvania concentrate at the $15,000 level. In California the top 15 executive salaries range from $12,000 to $16,000, with a concentration at $15,000.

Because of the size and complexity of its program requiring large budgets and staff coupled with the complicated problems arising from state-wide administration, it might be assumed that the State of California would have more executive and administrative positions in the $15,000 to $20,000 salary range than local governmental jurisdictions in the State. However, the survey indicates that the large local governmental jurisdictions in the State have a considerable number of executives and administrators at salaries of $15,000 and higher and, in addition, several such salaries are found in the smaller cities and counties in California. In spite of differences in size, comparison indicates that of the executive positions studied California has six positions at $15,000 a year and one at $16,000, while in San Francisco there are eight positions at $15,000 and two at $18,000; in Los Angeles County, six positions at $15,000, and one position at $18,000; in Los Angeles City, 12 positions at $15,000, five at the $17,000 level, and five at higher levels up to $27,456. Salaries of $15,000 and higher are found in many smaller jurisdictions. The top executive salaries of San Francisco, Los Angeles County, the City of Los Angeles, are listed on the table on page 1295.

A review of executive salaries in private corporations in California indicates that it is not possible for government to match the salaries paid in private industry. The average salaries paid by nine public utility companies range from $18,495 for the chiefs of major divisions to $60,625 for the presidents of these firms. A table of the average salaries paid to these executives of private corporations is on page 1295.

In view of the disparities in compensation which exist between the executive and administrative positions in the State of California with the levels of administrative compensation for similar positions in the states and local governmental jurisdictions mentioned above, as well as with private industry and the continuous requirement on the State of California to recruit qualified and experienced personnel for executive and administrative positions, the salary level for executive positions in the State of California should be increased. Comparisons with private and other governmental agencies indicate that the present level for state executive and administrative salaries is not in proper relationship with those found elsewhere. Such outside salaries justify the conclusion that the level of compensation for executive and administrative positions should be increased from a present range of $8,000-$15,000 a year, to a range of $10,000-$17,500. The listing of the recommended salary for each executive and administrative position is shown on the table on page 1296. Specific notes on the proposed salaries for other positions are included in Part Two, Section II. The point evaluation and salary curve based on executive salary levels in other jurisdictions is on page 1297.

PART SEVEN

OUTLINE PROCEDURE FOR PERIODIC SALARY SURVEY

The following outlines the more important steps recommended to be used by the proposed joint salary survey committee in making periodic salary surveys of comparable bench mark positions in the larger states:

(1) Review and revise the list of representative administrative positions on which prevailing salaries and other employment data for comparable positions was used in the current salary survey.

(2) Review and make any necessary changes in the descriptions of duties and responsibilities of the positions on which comparable salary data are to be obtained.

(3) Review and prepare the salary questionnaire with detailed instructions on the information to be obtained.

(4) Review and make necessary revision in the list of governmental organizations of comparable size and character, from which salary information should be requested.

(5) Send letter with the questionnaire to each participating agency, outlining the purpose of the survey, promising that the information received will be kept confidential and that each agency will be furnished with a copy of the summary tabulations prepared from such wage survey.

(6) Arrange for necessary follow-up with certain agencies in order to review the information furnished and to assist in clearing up any questions on position content and on data dealing with salaries and working conditions as requested on the questionnaire.

(7) Review salary and other information included on questionnaires from reporting governmental agencies, make necessary rechecks and corrections of data and obtain supplemental information from California departments and agencies to assure proper sample and distribution.

(8) Tabulate the information on prevailing wages and working conditions of comparable positions by reporting governmental and other participating agencies.

(9) Prepare report and recommendations to the legislative committees on any change in salary schedule for specific positions on which the prevailing salary data indicates variations from the base salary schedules in the salary plan.

(10) Follow through on action taken by the Legislature authorizing any change or adjustment of salary schedules and record changes on the compensation plan.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON FINANCE AND INSURANCE
SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, January 23, 1951

Hon. Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly
State Capitol, Sacramento, California

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Among the projects undertaken by your Interim Committee on Finance and Insurance is a study pertaining to unemployment insurance and problems related thereto. Because of its widespread interest to others as well as to members of the committee I transmit this as a semifinal report on this subject at this time with a request that it be printed in the Journal.

Very truly yours,

ERNEST R. GEDDES, Chairman

Cumulative Report on UNEMPLOYMENT AND UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE AND ITS ADMINISTRATION IN THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA

The subject of unemployment insurance is of practical economic concern to every employer and every wage earner, which probably accounts for the fact that from inception it has been highly controversial.

The basic theory of unemployment insurance is widely acclaimed but almost every individual facet of its operation has been subjected to violent attack. Fine for the other fellow, comparatively few want any part of it for themselves.

There is, therefore, a general inclination to believe the worst about unemployment insurance and there is a constantly nagging feeling that there is widespread corruption, fraud, chiseling and mismanagement existent in the operation of the system. As a consequence, when abuses are brought to light, public reaction is both immediate and violent and often in disproportion to the offense.

Because of this general concept we have sought to uncover the causes for this thinking, to arrive at the basis of this reasoning and to offer concrete suggestions for improvement in the operation of the system, which is now so definitely a fixed part of our economic lives.

BACKGROUND MATERIAL

Some guideposts were available to this committee as a result of the "Senate Committee's Report on Employment Stabilization" * to the 1949 Regular Session of the Legislature; the studies of the "Interstate Conference of Employment Security Agencies" † of the same year and the fruitful conclusions of the "Governor's Conference on Employment" ‡ in December, 1949.

Classification and study of the material available from these sources helped determine the path to be pursued if we were to add to our knowledge in this field.

SURVEY OF DEPARTMENT OF EMPLOYMENT

In an attempt to arrive at a comparison of staff used, work allocations and results achieved by the Department of Employment in September, 1949, when the spectre of widespread unemployment was abroad and a year later, when unemployment was approaching a new low, the following questionnaire was prepared by the committee. The department furnished this information, on a qualified basis, for each of its 95 offices and made a summation as shown below.

The department does not possess data that will permit the submission of requested information showing the number of people engaged in claims activities and placement activities in each of the local offices during the months of September, 1949, and September, 1950.

In lieu of the requested information an approximate ratio was computed based on a sample time technique for approximately 16 local offices in each of the months of this report and applied to the state totals only since these ratios are not necessarily indicative of any particular office.

NEW STUDIES INSTITUTED

The initial step was obvious, since on January 1, 1950, it became necessary to increase the rate of contribution by employers to the State Unemployment Fund, due to the balances as of that date having fallen below the minimums fixed by statute. We, therefore, instituted a study to determine, if possible, the "Factors Affecting the Solvency of the Unemployment Insurance Fund"* which focuses attention on some aspects of this matter, heretofore vaguely suspected, but in this report definitely confirmed.

Then, because the operative methods were suspect, there naturally followed a study of the agency charged with the administration of this complex legislation and of the relationship existing between that department and the employers and wage earners it serves. The report on the "Functions of the California Department of Employment"† accomplished the first objective while an electrical transcription of two afternoon briefing sessions held with employers by public information representatives of the Department of Employment‡ furnished some insight into the scope of this phase of the problem.

Critical analysis of these several reports covering, as they did, practically every major phase of unemployment, indicated that many statements and conclusions expressed in all the studies were really assumptions, unfortunately not based on provable facts. For that reason this committee concluded that a "grass roots" approach should be made to obtain provable data, which could be confidently used to bring us to close grip with the problem and, if possible, provide bases for concrete suggestions for improvement in the act, its administration, and in the attitude of all concerned therewith.

A "GRASS ROOTS" APPROACH

The mechanics of this phase of our work were placed in the hands of the John B. Knight Company of Hollywood, who, working closely with our committee office staff carefully prepared the plan, set up the procedures, conducted the interviews and tabulated the replies. Here follows an explanation of the type of investigation conducted, an analysis of the findings and, as an appendix, the tabulations from which the analytical findings are taken.

It was early determined, in order to secure the desired information, that a simple public opinion survey, in the sense that it is ordinarily understood, could and would not answer the purposes of the committee. Instead it would be necessary to carefully analyze all that segment of the population having a direct interest in this matter, chart the true proportions of each category, weigh and balance the percentages and finally arrive at an adequate sampling that could be depended upon to represent the whole.

PERSONAL INTERVIEWS REQUIRED

The end result of these studies pointed up the necessity for interviewing a total of 2,379 representative individuals; among employers (250), their employees (1,200), the unemployed (900), and managers of local offices of the Department of Employment (29).

EMPLOYER SAMPLING

Employer sampling was by types of industry and percentagewise thereto, in relation to the extent of that industry in the State, as per the following figures:

	Percentage according to Department of commerce	Percentage of sample attained in this survey
Agriculture, forestry, mining and fishing	2	1.6
Construction	9	10.1
Manufacturing	28	30 0
Public utilities	9	8.1
Wholesale trade	9	7.3
Retail trade	23	22.7
Finance and insurance	6	6.9
Service	14	13.3

This sample was further broken down by classification of number of employees of each of the employers in each of the industries.

EMPLOYEE SAMPLING

The 1,200 employed persons interviewed were properly proportioned as to occupation, age, sex, size of establishment in which employed and in accordance with the distribution figures of the labor force of the State, as provided by the census bureau. These interviews were procured both on the job and in the home of employees.

The 900 unemployed persons interviewed were divided almost equally among those at the time drawing unemployment insurance benefits and those making new or reopening old claims. In most instances the interviewees were taken at random from "the line" by employees of the department, thus removing the choice from the hands of the interviewer.

DEPARTMENT OF EMPLOYMENT SAMPLING

Of the 95 Department of Employment offices in the State, 29 were visited and in each case the manager or his chief assistant was interviewed. Offices were selected by number of employees and type of applicants making up a majority of claims handled. Following is a list of Department of Employment offices in which not only were the managers or their assistants interviewed, but the interviews of the 900 unemployed were conducted:

Los Angeles Area
- Alhambra
- Huntington Park
- San Pedro

Total samples were broken down on a proper geographical and population basis.

Interviews were obtained by trained personnel skilled in this type of work. All had been carefully schooled as to the objectives of the investigation and instructed that nothing be said which could or would bias or distort the true answer of respondents.

DEFINITION OF OBJECTIVES

Objectives desired were carefully worked out by the committee staff and once the goals had been established a sequential questionnaire was developed for each group of individuals from whom answers were sought.

A trial run was made on the first questionnaire form and it was subsequently revised, submitted to and approved by committee members, representatives of labor, management and the Department of Employment.

Specifically all four questionnaires were designed to develop:

(a) Basic concepts of the Unemployment Insurance Act

(b) Knowledge concerning its principal provisions

(c) Appraisal of and reaction to administration of the act, with suggestions for improvement

(d) Secure a measurement of the degree of cooperation and understanding existent between the four affected groups

(e) Effectiveness of administration in handling claims against the Unemployment Insurance Fund

(f) Functioning of the disability insurance provisions of the act.

Data peculiar to each group was also sought.

From the employers:

(a) Their employment practices

(b) Their experience with seasonal labor and its relationship to employment stabilization

From employed persons:

(a) Term of employment

(b) Personal experience with unemployment insurance

(c) Efficacy of employment service

From the unemployed:

(a) Incidence of repeat experience in unemployment

(b) Average weekly earning power

(c) Efficacy of employment service in his behalf

From department managers:

(a) Degree of cooperation enjoyed with employers and labor unions

(b) Internal problems of administration

Using only approved techniques and procedures for such investigatory survey work, the required number of completed questionnaires were obtained, classified, correlated, checked and tabulated with the results as shown on the following pages.

At the specific request of the chairman, no formal anaylsis was made of these returns, but they were submitted for committee study without outside bias or prejudicial interpretation.

ANALYSIS OF FINDINGS

General Misconception of Purpose of Act

The most outstanding fact revealed by this survey is the amazingly widespread misconception existing in all walks of life as to the purpose of the Unemployment Insurance Act, how it derives its financial support, the basis of its administration, or any concern regarding its future solvency.

When 87.4 percent of the labor force, 80.9 percent of all employers and 37.9 percent of the managers of employment department officers say the purpose of the act is to:

"Provide financial aid to the unemployed" it becomes evident that a distorted perspective is a common rather than rare occurrence.

After pointing out that the purpose of the act is to stabilize the economy of the State, there is still wide disagreement as to how these benefits accrue. While 82.3 percent of both the labor force and their employers think the operation of the act is beneficial to the economy of the State, only 38.3 percent of this number could specifically say how these payments benefited that economy, i.e., by:

"Maintaining purchasing power,
Maintaining economic standards,
Keeping money in circulation."

Approximately the same percentage ascribed it to:

"Keeping people off relief,
Out of the bread lines and off charity lists."

To say the least this is a rather far-fetched conception of how a state's economy can be benefited.

Wrong Idea of Who Pays Costs

The next most unbelievable fact that came to light was that 78.1 percent of all employed persons, 80.7 percent of the unemployed and 62.1 percent of all employers (who themselves pay all costs) actually thought that the wage earners of the State contribute to the Unemployment Insurance Fund.

Approximately half of all these wage earners and employers thought the fund was sustained jointly by the contribution of both employer and employee, while only 13.3 percent of the employed persons, 9.5 percent of the unemployed and 35 5 percent of the employers knew that the fund is maintained 100 percent by contributions from employers.

These figures become more significant when it is remembered that the change from joint contribution of employee and employer to sole support by the employer was legislatively enacted four and one-half years ago.

"Unemployment Insurance" Deductions on Pay Checks

Delving further, 93.6 percent of both employed and unemployed who believe they are paying into the Unemployment Fund say the reason they know is that such a contribution or tax is taken out of their regular pay checks and the deductions appear on their pay checks or pay envelopes.

One explanation of this misconception may be found in the fact that a cursory survey among employers disclosed that even some of the largest employers in the State have not troubled to change their old check forms showing "U. I." as one of the listed deductions. And—even though no figures are entered in the space opposite the indicated "U. I." the impression left with workers is that a deduction is being made for this fund.

It is not to be pre-supposed from this widely accepted misconception, however, that the work force would assume any share of the cost burden of unemployment insurance, but rather that they are fully convinced of the fact that they are now and have continuously been contributing to this fund.

Belief That Worker Should Pay

More basic probably, is the inherent philosophical concept of both the work force and the employers that the wage earner should contribute to this fund. Such a belief is expressed by 78 4 percent of the employed.

83.8 percent of the unemployed, 84.7 percent of the employers and even 55.2 percent of the local office managers of the Department of Employment.

Probing deeper, for the "Why" of these answers, we find 73.9 percent of all employed persons queried, 76.5 percent of the unemployed, 73.2 percent of the employers and 33.5 percent of all employment office managers gave as their reason for so thinking that:

"Both are concerned,
Both benefit,
It would be fair."

Surprisingly only 7.1 percent of the employed persons, 5.6 percent of the unemployed, 7.2 percent of the employers and 41.4 percent of employment office managers thought this fund should be supported solely by the employer and the reasoning given for so thinking has little sound basis. The first three groups say:

"Employer has more money,
Employer's moral responsibility,
Employer benefits by employee's labor."

While the employment managers justify their response by arguing:

"Employees cannot contribute to unemployment insurance and disability insurance both,
Stabilizes employment,
Removes employee feeling that it is his money,
Makes law more effective."

Who Is the State?

Cause for deep reflection is provoked by the response of 28.2 percent of all employed persons, 32.9 percent of the unemployed, 17.7 percent of the employers and even one out of the 29 Department of Employment managers who believe that the State Government only should contribute to this fund, completely ignoring the fact that it is the employer and the employee who constitute the State Government.

Entitlement to Benefits

Answers to the question:

"Under the Unemployment Insurance Act, which of the following groups are entitled to receive benefits?"

were composites of both the knowledge and the philosophy of the persons interviewed. Therefore, the unanimity of opinion regarding payments to those who lose their jobs through no fault of their own is convincing support of its fairness, 86.5 percent of all employed persons, 93 percent of the unemployed and 99.2 percent of all employers, so subscribing.

On the other three parts of this question (all of whom can and do receive benefits after a prescribed waiting period) no more than 18 percent in any group subscribe to entitlement to receive benefits.

Again delving deeper in an attempt to get at the basic thinking of these interested people, we find that only 10.5 percent of the employed, 10.2 percent of the unemployed, 10.5 percent of the employers and 7.1

percent of the department managers thought the first provision (benefits for those who lose their jobs through no fault of their own—one week waiting period) an unreasonable one and this only for the reason that all of them believed that in such instances benefits should begin immediately—without the requirement of a week's waiting period.

Opinion as to reasonableness of the present provision concerning those who leave their work due to a trade dispute shows a greater range of disagreement than any other of the major provisions of this part of the act. Thirty-eight and nine-tenths percent of the employed, 41.2 percent of the unemployed and 15.4 percent of the employers think it unreasonable because:

> "The individual doesn't have the say (is sometimes forced to strike),
> Worker is trying to better himself,
> Worker has paid into the fund, or > Worker has to live."

On the other hand, there is complete unanimity of thought among department managers that this provision is wholly reasonable, in that it permits the Department of Employment to remain in a nonpartisan position at all times.

Now, an entirely different attitude is expressed by all concerned as to that provision of the act covering those who voluntarily quit their jobs and are required to observe a waiting period of two to five weeks before any benefits can be drawn. Here, 22.8 percent of the employed, 28 percent of the unemployed, 47.1 percent of the employers and 32 percent of the department managers think this provision is unreasonable and give as their reason the belief that such persons should either be completely deprived of any benefits under the act or, as a very small percentage contend, be forced to endure a much longer waiting period or suffer heavy monetary penalties.

This sort of thinking also holds true concerning the provision of the act covering those discharged for misconduct in connection with their most recent work, i.e., a two to five week disqualification.

On this, 22.7 percent of the employed, 22.2 percent of the unemployed, 37.7 percent of all employers and 19.2 percent of the department managers think this unreasonable and for exactly the same reasons as just given for the previous provision.

Looking then at the over-all picture of the thinking concerning all four of these provisions, half of the labor force is satisfied with the reasonableness of their workings, 25 percent would like to have it relaxed as to the first two provisions and the other 25 percent would like to see it stiffened as to the last two. Thirteen percent of the employers would relax the first two, 42.4 percent would like to see the last two tightened. Two department managers want relaxation on the same two, 10 want the third provision stiffened and six the fourth.

Extension of Benefits to Other Workers

A significant disclosure of this survey is the attitude of all groups concerning the extension of benefits of unemployment insurance to:

Agricultural labor,
Domestic service workers,
Government workers and Self-employed persons where a composite percentage of 62.8 percent of employed persons, the unemployed and the employer groups, as well as 93.1 percent of the department managers favor their inclusion under the act, 28.3 percent of the first three groups and 6.9 percent of the managers think they should not be included and 8.9 percent replied that they did not know. The reasons both for and against inclusion were so varied that no compilation is possible for reporting purposes.

Unemployment Insurance Like Life and Fire Insurance

The percentages expressed in the answers to the question:

"Do you look upon unemployment insurance in the same light as life and fire insurance insofar as your right to receive benefits is concerned?"

provided surprising confirmation of the belief which the work force holds that workers contribute to the Unemployment Insurance Fund.

Among employed persons 78.1 percent thought they contribute and 72.3 percent look on those contributions as payments on an insurance premium. Among the unemployed the percentages are 80.7 percent and 73.1 percent. Then if substantiation were needed the answer to the "Why" question provided it by 55 percent of both groups saying definitely:

"Because I personally paid for it."

The less than 20 percent of the work force who do not so construe unemployment insurance express a wide variety of opinions as to why they do not so think, with only 3 percent of the total number realizing that it is but a temporary stop-gap to assuage a faltering economy in the particular worker's circumstance.

Getting at Basic Concepts

All the foregoing questions were posed to the four groups directly, vitally and daily concerned with this act, in order to evaluate their knowledge of its basic concept, and determine how nearly their personal philosophy regarding its place in the scheme of things squared with the facts in the situation.

These are the inescapable conclusions:

1. Regardless of faults in legislation, or criticism of interpretation or administration there is almost universal acclamation of the program.

2. There is a preponderance of opinion among all groups that its benefits should be extended to other workers.

3. The existent area of ignorance concerning almost every aspect of the act and its administration, among all groups, is so great that constant controversy, abuses, fraud and mismanagement cannot help but be natural concomitance.

Explorations Concerning Administration

The next area of appraisal explored was that of the reactions of all groups to the present administration of the act and the expression of some measurement of opinion concerning the requirements for bettering the administration through suggestions for improvement and an estimate of the degree of understanding and cooperation existent between all parties concerned.

Excessive Claims Payments

Purely as a lead question and to channelize the thinking of the persons being interviewed, this question was posed:

> "Do you believe that your local office of the State Department of Employment is paying an excessive number of claimants who are ineligible?"

Averaged out, one-third of all four groups, including department managers, are in agreement that such is their belief, while 25.9 percent say "No" and 39.2 percent say they "Don't Know."

Asked "Why" they so believed, more than half of the employed, the unemployed and employer groups of this opinion ascribed it to:

> "Belief of the unemployed that their contributions entitle them to all the insurance they can get."

This, of course, traces back directly to the two widely held misconceptions already discovered, (a) that employees do contribute to the Unemployment Insurance Fund and (b) that unemployment insurance is regarded in the same light as life and fire insurance. There is a surprising unanimity of opinion of both employed, unemployed and employer respondents, almost one-third of all those thinking too many ineligible claims are paid—who ascribe this to a lack of sufficient personnel to properly investigate the claims before making payment. A like number of the employed and employers believe such erroneous payments are being made because of a lack of desire on the part of the Department of Employment to properly investigate claims. However, this belief is concurred in by only half as many of the unemployed.

One the other hand, 90 percent of all department managers say this situation is due to a lack of interest on the part of employers in protesting and appealing claims.

Incidentally, but important to observe in this respect is the fact that 86.2 percent of all department managers interviewed report that it is the employer with 100 or more employees who most carefully handle unemployment insurance claims and that manufacturers, as a class, are the type of employer doing this job best, 65.5 percent so reporting, while retailers, transportation, service trades and other types of business failed to muster a percentage of as much as 14 percent. Furthermore, more than 50 percent of the department managers say that not more than one or two employers out of 10 throughout the State are doing a reasonably good job in keeping informed on the functions of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Eighty percent of these managers also state that these claims slip through because of a lack of time and personnel to properly investigate.

Approximately one-third of this group of employers, 50 percent of the department managers, 25 percent of the employed and 14 percent of the unemployed, ascribe this condition to a lack of proper legislation.

On Adding Restrictions for Benefit Payments

Half the labor force is in favor of tightening up on benefit payments, a third are not in favor and the balance answered "Don't Know." More than three-fourths of those in favor of tightening up on the restrictions of payment want to eliminate chiseling, while 50 percent of those who are against any further restrictions believe they are tight enough now and want the matter to remain as it is.

After bringing to the attention of this group the fact that they pay no part of the cost of this program and then asking if they were called upon to pay for it, would their answer be the same, 75 percent replied in the affirmative.

Unemployment Insurance Claims Record

To get further confirmation, if possible, on how strongly the labor force feels about the payment of ineligible claims, this question was then asked:

> "Do you think that applicants for a job should be questioned concerning their previous unemployment insurance claims record, if this type of information would prove valuable in reducing unnecessary withdrawals from the fund?"

Two-thirds of both employed and unemployed agreed that such information should be secured. When employers were asked whether they sought such information of prospective employees only 6.8 percent replied in the affirmative. However, 92.9 percent of the department managers did not think such a question should be asked of prospective employees for the primary reason that it would not correctly determine ability for the job and secondarily it was not any business of the employers how many unemployment insurance claims he had in his past record.

Making Severance Statements

It having become obvious from all background studies that probably the greatest area of disagreement in the entire unemployment insurance lies in the differences of opinion which exist between employers and employees as to the cause of severance from employment, this question was inserted:

> "Do you think that a statement of reasons for leaving a place of employment, signed by both employer and employee, at the time of leaving, would or would not be valuable in reducing the number of claims?"

Three-fourths of the entire labor force and 82 percent of the department managers endorsed such a plan. Only 17 percent of each said "No," yet but 14.5 percent of the employers follow such a practice.

Claims Effect on Unemployment Insurance Costs

The labor force was queried concerning whether or not they thought the number and amount of unemployment insurance claims against any employer could or would result in a difference in his costs or contribution rate.

Forty percent of them thought that such difference would result and 80 percent of that group knew why, i.e., that the rate is based on claims made against the employer's account. The other 60 percent frankly did not know or thought the rate was standardized or was based on the number of employees in any given firm.

Length of Employment and Benefits Drawn

Two-thirds of all employed persons had been on their present job for more than a year, 33 percent for less than a year, and this was borne out by the admission of 32 3 percent that they had received unemployment insurance. Of this percentage drawing unemployment insurance, more than three-fourths drew benefits for less than 13 weeks; 38.8 percent for less than four weeks; 24.7 percent for five to nine weeks and only 12.8 percent from 10 to 13 weeks Furthermore, of the 33 percent of the unemployed who had been on jobs for less than a year and had drawn unemployment insurance benefits there were 75.4 percent who had drawn these benefits on but one or not more than two different occasions, i.e., had been out of employment but once or twice in that period of time.

Among the unemployed better than 90 percent are seeking year-around employment while approximately 10 percent only want seasonal or part-time employment. Yet, out of all the unemployed, there were 58 6 percent who had been out of work not more than twice before during the past five years and another 16.4 percent had only been out of work as many as three times during the same period. Again among these unemployed persons there were 73.7 percent who drew benefits for less than 13 weeks, and 87.7 percent of all the unemployed had not drawn unemployment insurance on more than one or two previous occasions.

Another view of this particular situation is furnished by the fact that 58.1 percent of the unemployed, by reason of accumulations in their benefit year, were entitled to the maximum weekly benefit and 82 percent of them drew more than $21 per week.

Cause of Unemployment

Asked the cause of unemployment 68.8 percent of these unemployed said the reason for leaving their last job was because of: a lay-off, job completion, or due to the fact that it was seasonal work. Of these 56.2 percent had been employed in that particular place for less than one year, and significantly 47.6 percent of them had been earning in excess of $50 per week.

The State Employment Service

The employed, the unemployed and the employer groups were probed for their opinions concerning the operation of this service.

Among the employed who had in the past received unemployment insurance benefits, approximately half rated the department as doing a poor job in helping them to secure jobs, while the other half rated them "fair" to "good." Approximately one-third thought the jobs to which they were referred were comparable with the qualifications they had to offer, another third did not, and the remaining third did not know. In any event only 10 percent of the interviewed employed persons had ever secured a job through the California State Employment Service while 90 percent had not. In the case of the unemployed, 22.4 percent had secured jobs through this service, while 77 6 percent had not.

Referrals

Substantiation of this latter claim is furnished by answers given by the unemployed showing that only 17.9 percent of them had been referred to a job by the Department of Employment, while 82.1 percent had not, and of the 17.9 percent referred to jobs, 67.9 percent were referred to only one job and 17.6 percent to two jobs. Of the referrals, 75 percent thought they were qualified for the jobs offered but 25 percent thought they were not, largely because it was not their line of work. When those referred were asked the question as to why they were not working on any of the jobs to which they had been referred, 32 5 percent said the job was taken on arrival, someone else got the job, or too many others had been sent out; 24.2 percent said it was due to lack of experience or because it was not their line of work.

On Getting a Job

With the foregoing information secured the next question was:

> "Do you consider your local California State Employment Service Office the best agency you can use to help you get a job?"

Among the employed 39.2 percent said yes, 49 percent said no, and 11.8 did not know. Among the unemployed 57 1 percent said yes, 40 percent said no and 2.9 percent did not know.

Employed workers, to the extent of 80 percent of those who had no faith in the Department of Employment as the best agency to help them secure a job, thought the department gave poor service, made no effort to secure jobs, 30.9 percent were not interested and undertook no screening, another 25.6 percent thought they had available no variety of jobs, failed to have the particular types of jobs which could be filled by the worker and that there were not available enough jobs of any kind. "I'm my own best agent," said 24.1 percent and only 7.3 percent of the unemployed workers stated that they obtained jobs through their union.

The unemployed were not so critical of the first premise, only 8.2 percent saying "poor service, no effort, etc.," but in the second category there were 4 percent more among the employed. Here 20 percent of them thought they were their own best agent, but 29.5 percent relied on their unions to secure them jobs.

In this same connection employers were asked specifically whether they considered their local California Employment Office a good source for securing new employees in five given classifications:

Professional and managerial
Clerical and sales
Service
Skilled Semiskilled
Unskilled

Only the last two classifications received as much as a 50 percent vote in the affirmative, the first four ranging from only 24 percent to 45 percent. The universal and major complaint against workers in each of the classifications was "poorly qualified referrals" running from 34.3 percent in the professional and managerial classification to as high as 51.3 percent for service workers. In the first three categories 20 to 23 percent of all employers preferred other sources of supply, while in the latter three classifications from 28 to 45 percent of all employers preferred to hire through the unions.

Sixty-eight and eight-tenths percent of all employers interviewed stated that they do not use the State Department of Employment in the securing of any employees.

Approximately an equal number of employers both report and fail to report to the department when they find referrals do not sincerely seek employment or are unqualified for the job to which they have been referred, and only one-third of them take the time or trouble to notify the department when they do employ a person who has been drawing unemployment insurance.

Department managers themselves, at least nearly 65 percent of them, say that not more than 3 out of 10 employees depend upon the employment service to secure them a job.

Sincerity of Effort

All four groups were asked for an opinion as to how many unemployed persons referred to a job by the department they thought were sincerely seeking a job. The highest percentage among the employed, the unemployed and the employers were those who answered "Don't Know." Of those who expressed an opinion among the employed there were 19.6 percent who thought 5 out of 10 were honestly seeking work, in the unemployed group 18.8 percent thought 9 out of 10 honestly sought jobs. Employers thought very much like employed workers, the largest percentage—9.6 percent said 5 out of 10. However, there was a vast change in the pattern of thinking on this point when interviewers reached the department managers, for 83 percent of them said that 8, 9 or 10 out of 10 of all their referrals were sincerely seeking work. This, it will be seen, is almost double the percentage of the same opinion among the unemployed, nearly four times that of the employed group and six times that of the employers.

What About the Administration of This Act?

The preceding questions were asked of two, three or all of the groups and except for the questions on the Disability Insurance Fund complete the unilateral study conducted among all groups. A statement of conclusions adduced from answers to this group of questions on the administration of the act now follows, and in turn will give way to analysis of answers obtained to questions peculiar to each group.

Summarizing, the answers to the foregoing questions show:

1. A third of all concerned believe a great many ineligible claims are being paid because of:

(a) Erroneous concept of employees of purpose of act and who pays for it

(b) Lack of interest on part of employers in protecting ineligible claims

(c) Insufficient time and personnel for department to investigate eligibility statements made

2. Half the labor force is for and half against any further restrictions on benefit payments. Those in favor of further restrictions argue that it will stop chiseling, those against, that the present restrictions are rigid enough.

3. Two-thirds to three-fourths of the labor force endorse ideas of having employers examine previous unemployment insurance claims record of prospective employees, and for providing statement of cause of employment severance when worker leaves a job. Department managers take exception to first, endorse the second. Employers presently do neither except in small percentage of cases.

4. The fact that one-third of the labor force has changed jobs within the past year and have been recipients of unemployment insurance benefits would appear to be a natural concomitants of a rapidly changing state economy.

Nearly 40 percent of these unemployed workers drew benefits for less than four weeks, 75 percent of them drew for less than 13 weeks and 58.6 had not been out of work more than twice during the preceding five years. Eighty-two percent of all such unemployed had sufficient wage credits to permit benefits of at least $21 per week. Particular attention is called to the fact that 68.8 percent of these unemployed ascribe their unemployment to lay-offs, job completions and seasonal work, all conditions beyond their control.

5. Half of all workers and employers criticize the job the department is doing, with reference to having jobs available, investigating qualifications of employment seekers, fitting jobs to workers, referring workers to possible jobs and following through after referral. A majority of employed persons, unemployed and employers place no reliance in the Department of Employment in helping to get jobs. Approximately 22.5 percent of both the unemployed and the employed rely upon themselves as their own best agents in securing a job and a like percentage entrust the task to their unions. Employers look to the department for semiskilled and unskilled labor half of the time, but in other categories use other sources of supply. Sixty-eight and eight-tenths percent of all employers do not use the department as a source of supply for any employees.

No more than one-third to one-half of the employer-respondents cooperate with the department by reporting referrals who do not sincerely seek jobs, or are unqualified for the job, or have previously been drawing unemployment insurance.

6. While 83 percent of the department managers thought 8, 9 or 10 out of every 10 unemployed persons are sincerely seeking work when they go out on a referral, only 45.6 percent of the unemployed themselves thought so and only 25 percent of the employed workers and 15.6 percent of the employers have any such idea.

Among Employers

Certain specific questions were directed to employers only to adduce certain facts, opinions and practices, pertinent to their operations.

1. It was found that 70 percent of respondents pay maximum contributions into the fund, and only 11.6 percent hold merit ratings entitling them to a contribution rate of less than 2 percent.

2. Among them 47.4 percent knew that there was a method of reducing their rate of contribution, 28.3 percent said there was no such method and 24.3 percent frankly did not know. Those who knew such a thing was possible also knew how it could be accomplished.

3. Over 50 percent of the interviewees had at some time paid less than the maximum contribution rate while about 43 percent had not and about an equal number ascribed the increase to:

(a) Recent automatic increase ----------19%
(b) Recent increase in number of claims filed--18.1%
(c) Low reserves in the fund----------17.2%
(d) Poor employment record of the company--17.2%

A. Significant in cross-checking the sample taken in this study is the fact that of the employers interviewed

41.2% employed 1 to 7 people
33.6% employed 8 to 49 people
12. % employed 50 to 99 people
13.2% employed 100 or more people

The employed persons questioned, being from the same plants, were in the same proportion with respect to size of business in which occupied.

5. Seventy and nine-tenths percent of all these same places of business were conducted on a year-round basis, while but 10 percent of them had as much as 50 percent seasonal employment. In 80 percent of these plants the annual labor turnover did not exceed 25 percent; 25 percent experiencing no labor turnover, 25 percent from 1 to 9 percent and 30 percent from 10 to 25 percent change in the labor pattern.

6. A fourth of these employers make it a rule to give preference to employees with previous employment status in California, three-fourths of them do not.

7. Eighty-one and nine-tenths percent of the employer respondents examine all claims for unemployment insurance to determine whether there is a question of eligibility, while 16.5 percent do not make it a practice to do so.

8. When doubtful claims of eligibility arise, 70 percent question or protest them, while 30 percent do not.

9. Queried as to whether, in their opinion, there were other grounds than those presently provided upon which employers should be permitted to question the eligibility of benefit claims, 75 percent either stated they did not know or had no suggestions to make. Of the other 25 percent about one-fourth of them thought protest should be permitted for:

"Quits without good cause" which of course, is now a cause for declaration of ineligibility.

10. Only half of these employers say they have ever protested any unemployment insurance claims, while the other half admit they never have made such a protest. Of those who have made protest, 80 percent report reasonably prompt consideration of protests and 62.6 percent thought protests were given fair and impartial consideration.

11. But—of the approximately 70 percent of the employers who make it a practice to question or protest doubtful claims, only 32.4 percent stated that adverse rulings by the Claims Examiner, which they consider unfair, are appealed. Of the 63.2 percent who make first protests, three-fourths of them state they never had occasion to take the matter to an appeal board, while the others say, "too much red tape, not worth the time, claim examiner unfair or just plain too lazy."

12. Only 10 percent of the employers have been exposed to the informational meetings, held by the department for employers on the subject of unemployment insurance. Fifty-three and four-tenths percent of all employers content themselves with simply posting such information as is received from the department and consider their duty done by their employees, while 29.5 percent frankly say that they do nothing toward keeping their employees informed concerning the purposes of the Unemployment Insurance Act and of their eligibility for claims thereunder.

Obvious conclusions are:

(a) Only the large employer is concerned with merit rating, largely due to ignorance on the part of the great majority of all employers as to the fundamental provisions of the act.

(b) Labor turnover is not excessive in view of changing economy and rapid acceleration.

(c) Not enough attention is being paid by employers to protection of Unemployment Insurance Fund by giving first preference to previous California employment.

(d) Great laxity on the part of employers in both filing and pursuing claims that might be ineligible.

(e) Limited exposure of employers to information programs of the Department of Employment.

Looking at the Department of Employment

Finally there were propounded to the managers of the Department of Employment offices interviewed a number of questions, designed to secure a cumulative expression of their opinions and procedures with regard to the particular problems with which they are confronted.

It will be remembered, when provisions of the act were considered earlier, there were certain managers objecting in varying degrees to some of the provisions as they now exist. Concerning voluntary quits, 12 percent of the managers thought no benefits should be paid, and another 20 percent thought additional penalties should apply in the form of longer waiting periods before claim could be filed. Concerning discharge for misconduct in connection with their last work, unreasonableness was charged on the same grounds as voluntary quits by 7.7 percent of the managers for the first reason and 11.5 percent for the last reason. In addition 7.1 percent of the managers thought that in the case of the person losing his job through no fault of his own, benefits should begin immediately rather than after a waiting period of one week.

This review is made because of the suggestions offered by these managers when asked to recommend, in the light of their experience, the changes which would make the Unemployment Insurance Act more effective. The 29 managers interviewed made 34 suggestions. Seven of them suggested that unemployment insurance for seasonal workers be limited to the work season. Two managers concurred in three different recommendations:

"Invoke a rule of finality in regard to eligibility and ineligibility and clarify the terms 'equity' and 'good cause.'"

"Clarify requirement that one must seek work."

"Write clearly into the act that pregnant persons are not eligible."

Individual recommendations made were:

Should have more uniform laws throughout the State.

Must find a way of determining real labor market

Law is changed too often by Legislature; there is no possibility of establishing precedents.

A revision of the act based upon experiences of local department offices.

Modifications to toughen drawing of unemployment insurance.

Clarification and elimination of the ambiguity of the laws.

Put some real teeth into the disqualifying provisions.

Claimants should begin to draw benefits from the first day of filing.

Closer delineation between disability and unemployment insurance.

Simplify and have less forms.

More personnel for better screening.

Employers don't cooperate with department in policing the law.

Any time a claimant removes himself from the labor market the claimant should prove his availability by subsequent employment and earnings of at least four times his weekly benefit amount (As done in Washington.)

Penalty time should be deducted from total payments to make it effective.

Changes in regard to "trade disputes."

A stricter enforcement of the act that pertains to misconduct and discharges.

Trade disputes should be in effect one month before claims can be presented.

Voluntary job quitters should not be paid any benefits

More complete coverage of agricultural and government claimants.

Acts of misconduct and voluntary quitting should be penalized more.

Don't know.

Merit Rating

Twenty-four managers believe that present provisions of "merit rating" are desirable in that it helps to stabilize employment, encourages employer cooperation with the department, and provides an incentive for employers to reduce their unemployment insurance contribution. Five of the managers interviewed do not think "merit rating" is a good thing; two believe it causes unreasonable protests by the employer and the others gave as their reasons:

(a) Employers attempt to force employees to quit rather than dismiss them,

(b) Gives an advantage to large employers,

(c) Penalizes the employer whose business is seasonal.

Labor Union Cooperation

Department managers rate labor unions from fair to good in disseminating information among their members concerning the act, its provisions and the changes occurring, and poor to fair in referring their members to the department for job placement. However, in the matter of helping to prevent chiseling on the fund, they are almost equally divided in their opinion as between the assistance being good, fair or poor, with a slight edge for a good job.

Claim Protests

Twenty-four of the 29 managers saw no additional grounds for protest of claims but five others offered six suggestions including pregnancy (2), misrepresentation by employee when being hired, refusal to take jobs, too narrow range of suitable jobs and when employee deliberately has himself fired. When it comes to protesting claims, there was a wide divergence of opinion among the managers as to the extent it is practiced by employers even when there are good and sufficient grounds for such a protest. Twenty percent thought only one out of every 10 eligible claims were protested, another 20 percent thought 5 out of 10 such claims were protested and the other 60 percent ranged in opinion from 1 to 9 out of 10.

Asked why they thought these good and sufficient claims against eligibility were not protested two-thirds of the managers thought it simply a lack of employer cooperation. 25 percent thought it due to lack of knowledge of the act, 10.7 percent attributed it to employers' desire to retain good relationship with employees and 10.7 percent said "Don't know."

Twenty-five out of the 29 managers interviewed thought that adequate investigation was made of every protest filed by an employer, while four thought not, due to lack of time, personnel and investigative facilities. The answers to this question do not coincide with the responses given to the question previously asked this group concerning whether they believed an excessive number of claims were being paid claimants who really were ineligible. To that question 10 of the managers answered yes and gave as their reasons for so believing: Lack of interest of employer, lack of time for proper investigation, lack of adequate legislation and improper statements of claimants.

Stability of Fund

At the time this survey was conducted (April and May, 1950) two-thirds of the managers were of the opinion that a very serious threat to the stability of the Unemployment Insurance Fund existed, 18 of them ascribing it to failure of employers to protest ineligible claims, 10 thought it due to a reduction in revenue because of the application of employees' contribution to the Disability Fund. The same number mentioned "chiseling" as the cause, eight thought it might be the employees' misconception of their rights to the fund and as many as three mentioned too broad coverage, inadequate administration and the merit rating provisions of the act as causes for instability. (Multiple answers account for total of more than 29.)

Asked specifically whether such danger arose from present attitudes of employer, employee, Department of Employment or other causes, the answer percentages were 46.4 percent, 42.9 percent, 3.6 percent and 17.9 percent in that order. (Exceeding 100 percent account multiple answers.)

Public Criticism of Department

Asked for a personal opinion on whether they thought there was widespread criticism of the Department of Employment, 16 out of the 29 managers queried replied in the affirmative. These gave as their reason:

"Lack of understanding of the act," thought that the public blamed

"Administration within the department" and gave it as their opinion that the way to lessen this criticism was to "Educate the public"

"Improve public relations."

Internal Office Procedures

At this point in the interview, the committee representative asked to see the Department Manual, which is supposed to be maintained in each office covering all amendments to the act, department rulings, interpretations, procedures, etc. The question was then asked if this manual was posted to date and 28 out of 29 managers said yes, while one said he was only two days behind with such posting. Queried concerning the number of such amendments, rulings, decrees, etc., issued from the department main office during the preceding 60 days, the answers ranged all the way from 15 to 120, while 11 managers frankly said they did not know. Asked how they keep abreast of all changes, the majority said through reading the bulletin board when changes were posted and in staff meetings. Then asked whether the staff was kept abreast, 100 percent of the managers said "Yes" and in response to the inquiry as to how this was accomplished, 93.1 percent said through staff meetings, 37.9 percent said through reading and 10.3 percent said through supervisory training. (Multiple answers account for the more than 100 percent.)

The Result

Main inferences to be drawn from the answers made to these questions asked of department managers are:

(a) The act is so loosely drawn that widely differing interpretations of the same provision are easily possible. Obvious loopholes provide escape hatches for both employer, employee or department worker to give personal definition to most any given claim.

(b) Lack of clarity in legislation plus indifference of majority of employers concerning claims filed constitute a heavy drain on the Unemployment Insurance Fund and imperil the stability of the fund.

(c) Every possible means should be used to encourage cooperation by labor unions and employers with the department and chief, for this reason managers approve of merit rating for employers.

(d) Widespread criticism of the administration of the act is acknowledged and ignorance on the part of all groups concerned is blamed.

(e) Procedural "red tape"—due to complexities arising from changes, amendments and additions to the act—so enmesh the administration that consistency of action on any given course becomes impossible.

Disability Insurance

Only a cursory examination was made of this subject but significantly the answers are most revealing.

Asked who pays for disability insurance, the largest percentage for any one answer among the employed was 24.7 percent who thought both employer and employee pay for it, 19 3 percent thought the employee only paid for it and exactly the same percentage did not know. Fourteen and seven-tenths percent thought the employer bore the cost and 11.9 thought both employer, employee and the State shared the cost, 8.4 percent thought it was borne by the State Government.

Among the unemployed, one-fourth of all respondents had no notion of who paid for disability insurance, but the next highest percentage 19.1 percent represents answers of persons thinking the State Government bears the cost. Fourteen and five-tenths percent for employers, 13.7 percent for both employer and employee, 12.7 percent for the employee only and 12.6 percent thinking it was jointly borne by employer, employee and the State.

In the employer group less than half, 43.4 percent to be exact, knew the employee was bearing the cost of disability insurance, 25.2 percent thinking it divided between the employer and the employee, 9 2 percent thinking that they themselves paid it, 7.2 percent thinking it divided between themselves, the employee and the State and 12.7 percent not knowing.

Drawing Benefits

Only 10.7 percent of the employed and 14.9 percent of the unemployed had ever drawn benefits under this act and of this number a quarter of them had received benefits in excess of 10 weeks while the next highest percentage, an average of 15 percent had only drawn benefits for up to one week.

Eighty-two and one-tenth percent of the employed and 87.1 percent of the unemployed testified they had no unreasonable difficulty in establishing or securing claims and this was concurred in by 75.7 percent of the employers, while 20.7 percent professed ignorance.

Provisions of the Unemployment Insurance and Disability Insurance Acts

Asked the comprehensive question as to whether or not the respondent was generally satisfied with the Unemployment and Disability Insurance Act as now written and administered, 54.9 percent of the employed and 64.2 percent of the unemployed so expressed themselves, while 15 percent of the employed and half that percentage of the unemployed expressed any dissatisfaction. The reasons therefor were almost as numerous as the respondents in this category, thereby barring any attempt at tabulation.

Claims Allowance

Half of all employers interviewed had no idea whether an excessive number of claims were being paid, 37.8 percent thought not, while 12 percent were of the opinion that such was the case. Those so believing thought it due to fraudulent claims made, poor investigation, insufficient legislation and lack of personnel. On the other hand, those of the belief that no excessive number of claims were being paid thought that in disability insurance the fund was better protected, there was good administration and the fact that a medical doctor's certificate is required all operated to guard against excessive claims.

The conclusion to be drawn from this cursory examination is that there is a great deal more general confidence and acceptance of the disability insurance program than that of the Unemployment Insurance Act, though probably as great an area of ignorance is existent here as in the unemployment insurance program.

TABULATIONS OF RESPONDENT ANSWERS TO QUESTIONNAIRES

Here follow the questions propounded by interviewers to the various groups and a tabulation of their replies expressed percentage-wise to the group or to the whole as the case may be. These answers have been arranged as nearly as possible to conform in sequence with the preceding analysis.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

January 8, 1951

Honorable Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly
California State Legislature

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to House Resolution No. 32 of the 1950 Session of the Legislature, your Interim Committee on State-wide Riding and Hiking Trails Development was organized, and does hereby submit its final report. Because of the fact that no money was appropriated for this committee, only one meeting was held and a very thorough study was made.

A full report by the Division of Beaches and Parks on the development of riding and hiking trails was made by General Warren T. Hannum, Director of the Department of Natural Resources, and other representatives of his department.

Members of various riding and hiking clubs were also heard and their desires as to future developments of the State-wide Trails System are included in this report, together with the committee's recommendations.

The committee is indebted to the Legislative Auditor and to the Division of Beaches and Parks and members of their staff for their cooperation and assistance in the preparation of this report.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN F. THOMPSON, Chairman
RICHARD J. DOLWIG

RESOLUTION CREATING COMMITTEE

By Messrs. Thompson, Dolwig, and Dickey:

House Resolution No. 32

Relative to the creation of the Assembly Interim Committee on State-wide Riding and Hiking Trails Development

WHEREAS, It is the public policy of the State to promote the conservation, development, and use of the natural resources of this State for the purposes of health, recreation, and protection against fire and other hazards; to increase the accessibility and encourage the use of such natural

4. The committee and its members shall have and exercise all of the rights, duties and powers conferred upon investigating committees and their members by the provisions of the Joint Rules of the Senate and Assembly and of the Standing Rules of the Assembly as they are adopted and amended from time to time at this session, which provisions are incorporated herein and made applicable to this committee and its members.

5. The committee has the following additional powers and duties:

(a) To select a vice chairman from its membership.

(b) To contract with such other agencies, public or private, as it deems necessary for the rendition and affording of such services, facilities, studies and reports to the committee as will best assist it to carry out the purposes for which it was created.

(d) To report its findings and recommendations to the Legislature and to the people from time to time and at any time, not later than herein provided.

(e) To do any and all things necessary or convenient to enable it fully and adequately to exercise its powers, perform its duties, and accomplish the objects and purposes of this resolution.

"Trails" means riders' and hikers' trails for public use.

"California Riding and Hiking Trails Project" otherwise referred to in this article as the "project" means any work or undertaking to:

(a) Plan, chart, map or survey any trail area.

(b) Acquire land for the building of trails.

(c) Provide for the project, which may include buildings, equipment, recreational facilities, rest stations, shelters, and other real or personal property with necessary, convenient, or desirable appurtenances, including water service, camp site preparation, together with administrative, recreational, educational, and publicity services, including the issuance for public use of trail maps and bulletins, and all other purposes related thereto.

SEC. 2. Out of any money in the State Park Fund, not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) is hereby appropriated to the Division of Beaches and Parks to be expended in carrying out the purposes of this act.

CHAPTER 112

An act making an appropriation to the Division of Beaches and Parks for the establishment and development of riders' and hikers' trails, declaring the urgency hereof, to take effect immediately.

[Approved by Governor March 10, 1946 Filed with Secretary of State March 11, 1946.]

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Out of any money in the State Park Fund not otherwise appropriated, the sum of three hundred thousand dollars ($300,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated to the Division of Beaches and Parks to be expended in the establishment and development of the California Riding and Hiking Trails Project as provided in the California Riding and Hiking Trails Law. So much of the moneys appropriated by this act as shall be necessary, and approved by the Director of Finance, therefor shall be available for the support of the Division of Beaches and Parks in carrying out the purposes of this act.

SEC. 2. The appropriation herein is made subject to both of the following conditions:

(a) That all land, easements, and rights of way acquired with moneys appropriated by this act or the proceeds thereof shall constitute a part of the State Park System.

(b) That all of the powers and duties of the State Park Commission and of the Chief of the Division of Beaches and Parks with respect to State parks and recreational areas shall be applicable to the establishment and development provided for through moneys appropriated by this act or the proceeds thereof.

SEC. 3. This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety within the meaning of Section 1 of Article IV of the Constitution and shall therefore go into immediate effect. A statement of the facts constituting such necessity is as follows:

Increasing land utilization for homes and increasing land values resulting from the increasing population and development of this State makes the acquisition of rights of way and construction of a riders' and hikers' trails system increasingly difficult and costly.

In order to provide a reservoir of employment for the building crafts and unskilled labor, against the inevitable time when such employment must be provided to augment the employment furnished by private enterprise, it is necessary that funds be made available at once to finance these preliminary steps before the time at which said employment must be immediately available for the welfare of the State.

The lack of suitable outdoor recreational facilities for the public makes the development of such a system more vital than ever before. In order that this development may take place at the earliest possible date, keeping always in mind the objective also of providing employment, and securing to the people of the State of California the outdoor benefits to be derived therefrom, it is essential that this act take effect immediately

INTRODUCTION

The Committee on Riding and Hiking Trails held its only meeting on August 10, 1950, in the State Building in San Francisco, which was attended by representatives of the Department of Natural Resources and many members of the various riding and hiking clubs in California.

Because of the fact that no moneys were appropriated for this committee this was the only meeting held during the interim, but the committee feels that a very thorough and comprehensive outline of what the Division of Beaches and Parks has done and is doing was obtained.

In 1945, the Governor approved Senate Bill No. 630, Chapter 1469, appropriating $20,000 out of the State Park Fund to the Division of Beaches and Parks to promote the conservation, development and use of the natural resources of the State for the purposes of health and recreation, and to encourage increase in riding and hiking as an influence for the improvement of the health of the people; and to provide for the establishment, development, maintenance and use of a state-wide System of Riders' and Hikers' Trails.

Again in 1946, Senate Bill No. 70 was introduced and approved by the Governor, and became Chapter No. 112. This act appropriated out of the State Park Fund the sum of $300,000 to the Division of Beaches and Parks, which was to be expended in the establishment and development of the Riding and Hiking Trails Project as provided in the California Riding and Hiking Trails Law. Subsequently, in 1947, Chapter 486 appropriated an additional $100,000 for the establishment and development of riding and hiking trails out of the State Park Fund. Chapter No. 2 of the 1950 Session of the Legislature appropriated out of the Postwar Employment Reserve $100,000, making a grand total of $520,000 appropriated out of the State Park Fund to the Division of Beaches and Parks for the development and maintenance of riding and hiking trails. On August 31, 1950, there had been a total expenditure of $224,240.88. (See Statement of Appropriations and Expenditures as prepared by the Legislative Auditor.)

Prepared by Legislative Auditor, September 20, 1950

FOREWORD

It is not possible to estimate with any degree of accuracy the pro-rata share of divisional and departmental administrative and supervisory costs that would be applicable to the Riding and Hiking Trails Program. However, it might be pointed out that in the Budget for the 1949-50 Fiscal Year total expenditures by the Division of Beaches and Parks for administrative purposes was equal to approximately 11 percent of all other support expenditures of the division. Consequently, it might logically be assumed that the cost of administration for the expenditure of $224,240 on behalf of the Riding and Hiking Trails Program would be approximately 11 percent of that figure, or $24,500.

According to the report made by the Division of Beaches and Parks, it was brought to the attention of the committee that the following expenditures for construction of riding and hiking trails were made through July 31, 1950:

Contra Costa County	$19,816.50
Los Angeles County	27,058.64
San Diego County	20,076.67
Butte—Plumas County	23,397 15
Making a total of	$90,348.96

It will be noted that in Contra Costa County 19½ miles of trail have been constructed at an average cost of $1,016.23 per mile. In Los Angeles County where 83 miles of trail have been constructed, the average cost per mile was only $326. San Diego with 48¼ miles has an average cost of $416.09 per mile, and in Butte-Plumas Counties 35 miles have been constructed at an average cost of $668.49, making a grand total of 185¾ miles of constructed trails at an average cost of $486.40 per mile. It was further brought to the attention of the committee by the Division of Beaches and Parks that there are various items of construction in all of the above areas which will require some additional expenditures; for instances, another $500 or $600 in Contra Costa County for additional signs, and the same in Butte-Plumas Counties. But for the most part, unless extensive changes are made, the cost figure per mile will not change appreciably. Costs thus far are well in line with the original expectations, as estimates range from $480 to $800 per mile, exclusive of right of way.

There is a great deal of trail in Butte-Plumas Counties and in Yuba County which, upon completion of contemplated construction projects fall into the trail adding a lot of mileage at very low cost. It is fully expected that upon completion of the whole Butte-Plumas area trail the average cost per mile will come down very close to that now reported in Los Angeles County, which will also lower the over-all average considerably. Following are expenditures for riding and hiking trails from July 1, 1945, to June 30, 1950, as prepared by the Division of Beaches and Parks:

Following is the requested Progress Report submitted to the committee by the California State Riding and Hiking Trails Advisory Committee:

1. At this time it is desired to review the legislation, organization, methods of operation, construction progress and financial status of the state-wide riding and hiking trails project It is believed that a thorough review of what has passed and a consideration of further steps to be taken on this project, including operation and maintenance, is in order.

LEGISLATION

2. The Riding and Hiking Trails project was adopted by the Legislature (Chapter 1469, Statutes of 1945). It is known as the California State Riding and Hiking Trails Law. This law set forth the purposes of the legislation, designated the name of the project, provided that the project should be administered by the Division of Beaches and Parks under the supervision of the Director of Natural Resources in accordance with policy approved by the State Park Commission. It provided that the State Park Commission might appoint an advisory committee of six members—two from the northern, two from the southern and two from the central portion of the State. It authorized the State Park Commission to accept grants on behalf of the State and asked for financial assistance for, or in aid of, the project and stated that the right of eminent domain might not be exercised to acquire property, any interest in property, or use of any property of the trails contemplated thereunder.

It appropriated some $20,000 to be expended in carrying out the purpose of the legislation.

3. In 1946, the Legislature made all property acquired or to be acquired under the California State Riding and Hiking Trails Law a part of the State Park System. In the same legislation, (Chapter 112, Statutes of 1946) $300,000 was appropriated for the establishment and development of the trails project Other appropriations were made in 1947 and 1950 in the amount of $100,000 each. Of the $520,000 thus appropriated, $1,279.27 and $70,655.17 under Chapter 1469, Statutes 1945 and Chapter 486, Statutes 1947, respectively, were not expended and reverted to the General Fund. In addition to these funds, certain expenditures from the support budgets of the Division of Beaches and Parks have been made for salaries and wages, travel and miscellaneous expenses. A complete accounting of these funds is not practical at this time. An estimate of the same is given on the attached financial statement showing the status of all funds as of August 31, 1950, (Table I). Table II gives the expenditures by projects for construction only.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE

4. On December 5, 1945, the State Park Commission appointed the six members of the advisory committee. Changes in the personnel have taken place since that date as shown in the following summary:

John M. Diggs ---------- December 5, 1945 to date
Hamilton McCoy ---------- December 5, 1945 to April 8, 1949
Paul F. Seiersen ---------- December 5, 1945 to December 20, 1946
Virgil Jorgenson ---------- December 5, 1945 to May 21, 1950
Edward M. Fellows ---------- December 5, 1945 to April 8, 1949
Kent Weaver ---------- December 5, 1945 to date
Arthur Johnson ---------- January 31, 1947 to date
Roscoe Hazard ---------- April 8, 1949 to date
Dan Beebe ---------- April 8, 1949 to date

Mr. John M. Diggs served as chairman of the committee from its first meeting on December 5, 1945 to May 31, 1949, at which time it was decided that the term of office of the chairmanship should be for one year only. Mr. Kent Weaver served from June 4 to August 10, 1950. Mr. Arthur Johnson became vice chairman on June 4, 1949 and chairman August 10, 1950. Mr. Dan Beebe became vice chairman August 10, 1950.

5. Immediately after the appointment of the committee, it met and considered many of the methods and procedures to be used furthering the project. It was decided that the cooperation of the riding and hiking groups and of the county officials of the 36 counties through which the trail was to pass would be essential to the success of the project. The original general route of the trail had in general been determined by the interested horsemen working through a committee constituted of the same members as were subsequently appointed to the advisory committee. Prior to the approval of the law, this committee had drawn up a brochure setting forth the general location and many policies which it hoped would be followed if the bill creating the trail became law.

6. At the time of its first meeting, an employee of the division was assigned by the chief of the division to work with the advisory committee in furtherance of the program. Shortly thereafter, steps were taken to obtain the names of interested parties in each of the counties through which the trail passed as shown in the above mentioned brochure. Operating through the California Horsemen's Association, the names of one or two men in each of the majority of the 36 counties were furnished to the Division of Beaches and Parks. A general letter was sent to each by the chairman of the advisory committee requesting him to serve as temporary chairman of a committee in his county, pending the appointment of a permanent committee. It was recommended that the committee in each county be composed of representatives from the riding and hiking organizations, from the county surveyor's office and from the State or Federal Forest Supervisor or Fire Warden. The committees were requested to make a survey to determine the desirable location of the trail through the county and to coordinate with the adjacent counties as to the point of entry to and exit therefrom. It was then requested that these committees obtain approval of the plan by the board of supervisors and submit the same with estimate of cost to the Division of Beaches and Parks for the approval of the State Park Commission. The results of this action were fairly encouraging to the advisory committee. In most instances, however, the plan had no estimates of cost and had little more than paper locations on a small scale map. They were valuable as an indication of general location of the trail. Ten of these plans were received by the middle of February, 1946. The status of the master plans as of August 31, 1950, is as shown in Table III.

7. At this time and before any detailed investigation of any of the trails could be made, the advisory committee decided to ask for an appropriation from the special session of the Legislature. The Legislature took action upon their request, and by Chapter 112, Statutes 1946, appropriated $300,000 to be expended in the establishment and development of the California riding and hiking trails project.

8. This act of the Legislature immediately changed the functions of the Division of Beaches and Parks and the advisory committee from that of making a survey of the trail to the concurrent one of making the survey and proceeding with the acquisition of land and the construction of the trail. Normally, the survey of the 3,000-mile trail, irrespective of acquisition difficulties, could not have been made properly in less than two to three years.

INVESTIGATIONS, TITLE AND LAYOUT

9. No personnel was immediately available to undertake the investigation. However, one extra man from the division was placed upon this duty. Upon the advice of the advisory committee, investigations were started in Contra Costa, San Mateo and Los Angeles Counties. Tentative trails based upon the recommendations of the San Mateo, Contra Costa and Los Angeles Counties' committees were investigated. The committees in these counties functioned well and had definite ideas as to the location of the trail, although in Los Angeles County, the location proposed was found to be undesirable by one of the members of the advisory committee and a complete new plan and layout at higher elevation adopted. In Contra Costa County, acquisition difficulties promptly arose, necessitating many relocations and many investigations. Acquisition difficulties in San Mateo County brought the project in that county to a standstill for a period of several years. Investigation and layout of the trail has been continuous throughout the years whenever personnel could be spared from other pressing duties. Layouts and locations have kept ahead of acquisition. Where refusal of property owners has necessitated rerouting, further investigations and relocations are recommended. In all, it is estimated that well over three times as many miles of possible trail have been investigated than will ultimately be utilized in the counties investigated to date.

ACQUISITION

10. During the period from the initiation of this project to July 1, 1947, layout and acquisition were the joint responsibility of the Engineering and Lands Sections of the division. By May of that year, the determination of exact trail location and tentative negotiations for acquisition of easements had indicated that further acquisition personnel was required to make any real progress. From July 1, 1947 to December 31, 1948, all matters with respect to acquisition, up to the point of processing, from the division to the Department of Finance, was under the Engineering Section. Three acquisition officers were obtained and active negotiations of rights of way were begun. Again due to limitations in law upon the use of the right of eminent domain, efforts to acquire property resulted in unsatisfactory progress although many easements in Contra Costa, Los Angeles and San Diego Counties were obtained and forwarded for processing. Gaps still remained in the trail alignment and construction could not be started.

11. On January 1, 1949, all acquisition matters were placed under the Lands Section and control of the three acquisition men already on the rolls were transferred to that section. These men then carried on and have been successful in obtaining the formal easements which had started prior to their transfer. In addition thereto, work has been extended into San Bernardino, Riverside, Kern, San Diego, Plumas, Butte, El Dorado, and Marin Counties.

12. The status of the acquisition program is given in the following report from the Lands Section:

Plumas County

Acquisition completed and the trail has been constructed.

All tracts are situated in Plumas National Forest.

All private land inside forest is being acquired by U. S. Forest Service.

Tehama-Butte (portion)

Total parcels to be acquired unknown. This property is within the Lassen National Forest and all private properties are being acquired by the U. S. Forest Service under cooperative agreement.

El Dorado County

Total parcels to be acquired, forty (40). Due to refusal of three owners to grant a right of way, it may be necessary to reroute entire trail for the third time, again pointing up the costly procedure necessary due to our lack of the right of eminent domain.

Yuba-Butte (portion)

Because of litigation over title to approximately 20 miles of alleged private road over which the trail is routed, the total number of parcels yet to be acquired is unknown. Thus far, there are six known parcels to be acquired.

Marin County

Due to the refusal of various owners and exorbitant demands of others, the only trail we are sure of is between Mt. Tamalpais and Samuel P. Taylor State Parks.

Contra Costa County

Total parcels to be acquired, thirty-five (35). Parcels remaining for acquisition, five (5).

Alameda County

Parcels to be acquired, unknown. Acquisition delayed pending working out of agreement between county and State for use of county roads.

San Mateo County

Total parcels to be acquired, fourteen (14); four in process.
Parcels remaining for acquisition, one (1).

Riverside County

Total parcels to be acquired, one hundred fifty-two (152).
Parcels remaining for acquisition, eighty-eight (88).

Kern County

Total parcels to be acquired, thirty-six (36).
Parcels remaining for acquisition, fifteen (15).

San Diego County

A total of one hundred thirty-five (135) parcels have been acquired. Acquisition is complete in this county.

Los Angeles County

Acquisition complete.

13. To August 31, 1950, rights of way through purchase, gift, easement or use permit had been secured for approximately 608.5 miles of trail, broken down by counties as follows:

	% Complete	No. Miles*
San Diego	100	94.5
San Bernardino	90	95.0
Riverside	25	30.0
Los Angeles	100	110 0
Kern	60	70.0
El Dorado	60	42.0
Yuba	70	18.0
Butte-Plumas	90	48.0
Tehama	80	44.0
Contra Costa	50	19.5
Marin	1	0.5
San Mateo	95	37.0
		608.5

*Note These mileages are subject to modification after survey No acquisitions have been made in other counties Gaps in the proposed rights of way exist in many counties, precluding the possibility of construction at this time

CONSTRUCTION

14. From the initiation of the project to June, 1950, the construction has been under the direct supervision of the Engineering Section operating from Sacramento. In June, 1950, the construction in San Diego County was placed under the supervision of the district superintendent of the southern district. The contracts and agreements with the various national forests' supervisors have been and still are being prepared in the Engineering Section. As rapidly as possible, it is proposed that the construction in all counties be made the responsibility of the district superintendents. Contracts with the national forests will be prepared by the Engineering Section and copies furnished to the district superintendents for their information. Detailed inspection of all construction will be by the district superintendents, with general supervision and inspection from Sacramento.

15. Engineering functions in respect to review of new master plans, field investigations of the proposed trails in company with local groups, layout, flagging and determination of structures, fences, gates, etc., to be built, standards of construction, presentation of plans for approval of the State Park Commission will remain the function of the Engineering Section.

CONSTRUCTION

16. Construction has followed closely upon the heels of acquisition. Before construction on any stage of the trail has been initiated, determination was made as to whether the trail met the following qualifications:

(a) Was it satisfactory to the interested parties?
(b) Was it of sufficient length to assure a thoroughly useable portion of trail?
(c) Was acquisition of additional stretches of the trail at each end thereof assured so that no trail would have to be abandoned?
(d) Was there access to a useable portion of trail?
(e) Had the acquisition of all parcels in the entire stretch received the approval of the Department of Finance?

The first satisfactory stretch became available in 1947, followed by a short stretch in Contra Costa, and then in San Diego, Plumas, Butte and San Bernardino Counties. Table IV shows by projects the percentage of completion of each portion of the trail upon which construction has already been initiated or funds therefor allocated. In the notes thereafter are shown also the status as to engineering investigations.

17. Summarizing, it may be said that 193 miles of trail have been completed; 63 miles are practically ready to obligate; 30 miles have been engineered and are in process of being placed under construction and 37 are under construction at the present moment and are expected to be completed by February 1, 1950. Also, it is anticipated that 142 additional miles can be placed under contract or construction by the end of the fiscal year. There are attached hereto 37 maps indicating their status as of August 31. The construction includes some drainage, 58 riders gates, 27 drive gates, two cattle guards, 51,000 feet of barbed wire fence, five 25-foot bridges and one 110-foot bridge.

DESCRIPTION OF TRAIL

18. In order to set forth the status of a project which is in the process of construction and to keep the advisory committee informed, it is proposed to furnish from time to time a description of the trail in each county from the southern end to the north thereof. The first of these descriptions is given in Appendix I, covering only those trails completed or under construction. They give the length, general description and structures erected.

MAINTENANCE

19. Until February, 1950, the maintenance problems in connection with the riding and hiking trail were not serious. The trails constructed to that time were still being patrolled from time to time and final maintenance was being carried on by the construction forces as part of the construction program. The problem of maintenance and patrolling, however, have been the subject of long and serious debate in the meetings of the advisory committee. The occasion for these debates was that the property owners from whom easements or rights of way were being obtained were justly concerned as to the standard of construction, the frequency and thoroughness of patrol and the effectiveness of such patrol. The owners recognized the dangers from the users of the trail in disturbing cattle, creating nuisances and causing fires. Regulations for the use of the trail, visualizing all of these factors, were drawn up and approved by the advisory committee and the State Park Commission. In view of those discussions, visualizing the necessity for maintenance, personnel for those duties were requested in the 1949-50 Budget, together with the equipment necessary for their proper operation. State rangers were obtained and have gained considerable experience in connection with the maintenance and patrolling of the trail. It is as yet too early to definitely state the number of rangers required for the project. In fact, the number of rangers required in different localities varies greatly with the type of terrain, the character of the developments on each side thereof and the use that is made of the trail. Certain portions of the trail will be very heavily used. Other portions will receive little use, especially at certain periods of the year. The maintenance required in the summer time will generally be considerably less than that in the early and late spring when the grass and weeds are growing rapidly and must be cut prior to the fire hazard season. It is proposed that the maintenance of the trails in the national forests be covered under agreements with the individual forests. Extensive stretches of the trail will lie in such forests. As yet, the exact mileage lying within the boundaries of the national forests and outside thereof cannot be definitely determined. It will probably be in the neighborhood of 50 percent within and 50 percent without the boundaries of the forest.

From the short experience so far gained, it is believed that the average trail that can be covered adequately by one ranger is from 30 to 60 miles, depending upon location, terrain, improvements and use. In the spring and early summer when the trail is being put in shape for summer use, additional help will be required.

APPENDIX II

Detailed Features of California Riding and Hiking Trail
San Diego County

Otay Lake to Cuyamaca Park

	Cumulative mileage
Otay Lake	0.0	Private dirt road. Installed four riders' gates and graded road which was in poor repair.
County Road	4.2	Use road shoulder. Placed trail signs and signs "Keep Horses Off Oiled Road." Installed two riders' gates at cattle guards 4.5 miles.
Dulzur Creek	8.7	Crossed under Highway 94 at bridge on Dulzur Creek, crossed creek. Trail is on road shoulder for 100 yards then through field (no trail tread prepared) to Honey Springs Road. One-fourth mile. Built trail for approximately two miles generally to 10 percent grade with some short steep pitches. Trail tread 36-inch minimum. Crossed Hollenbeck Canyon where water for animals is available. Trail enters on to truck trail to Lee Valley. Placed signs on truck trail and installed a drive gate and a riders' gate. Distance 4 3 miles.

Beaver Hollow Truck Trail	14.5	Used truck trail, built fence on either side (8,200 feet in all). Installed drive gates and graded trail, widened corners and blewout large boulders along trail to give better sight distance on sharp curves. (This road, although private, is used frequently by residents of Beaver Hollow). Beyond fenced portion, left truck trail and built trail through brush in rocky, steep terrain approximately 0.75 mile and back to truck trail again. This to avoid arable land as agreed in easement. Used farm road under freeway bridge over Viejas Creek. Constructed two cattle guards, five riders' gates, two drive gates and 300 feet of fence. Built temporary trail pending construction of dam on creek which would make a long bridge. Since a new easement has been obtained, it is unnecessary to construct the bridge. However, 600 feet of graded road is still to be built. Total distance 1.2 miles.

Following are excerpts taken from the only meeting held by the committee on August 10, 1950, at which time many interested people were heard together with General Hannum, Director of the Department of Natural Resources; Colonel Kelton representing the Division of Beaches and Parks of the Department of Natural Resources, and members of his staff. The meeting proceeded as follows:

In General Hannum's opening remarks to the committee, he said: "As I recall, the Legislature passed the Riding and Hiking Trails Act; established it as a part of the State Park System, at the Session of 1945, and Governor Warren signed the bill at the celebration of the Bear Flag at Sonoma that summer. At that time he said he hoped the construction would start soon and that he would be happy to see the trail completed and in use. The bill provided that the Park Commission might—or they were to appoint an advisory committee. The Park Commission appointed this committee and it has been maintained since that time, and has had meetings at various times and places. Probably an average of four or five a year, and its members have been very conscientious in suggesting ways and means and assisting in securing easements for the establishment of trails. The bill provided that the power of condemnation should not be exercised. Therefore, it was necessary to secure easements for the trails on a voluntary basis. As a result it has been very difficult to secure a permanent and definite location for the various sections of the trails. There might be some 15 or 20 in a section, 10- to 20-mile stretch, who would give consent, and then one person objecting and refusing could hold up the program, and this has occurred in a number of cases. However, at times it appeared very discouraging and at one time the committee was almost ready to report it was impractical to carry out the program unless the Legislature could grant power of condemnation. There has been a good deal of discouragement and some criticism. The trail is constructed by sections, as Colonel Kelton will testify, and service agreements on small contracts are let where it is practical to do it that way. However, since the civil service regulations require that laborers be taken from eligible lists, it is difficult and delaying at times to get a force of workers together to do work in some places that are distant, like 70 or 80 miles from San Diego or Los Angeles. It is difficult to get the men to go out there. The present status can be explained by Colonel Kelton, who is in charge of the construction program."

KELTON: The act that was passed in 1945 went into effect in October of that year. An advisory committee was appointed and we immediately considered the method of expediting the program. We realized that on a three thousand-mile trail passing through 36 counties that we would need the assistance of the local people, the riders and hikers, and the support of the board of supervisors in those counties. In conjunction with the committee therefore, we worked out a plan of having a rider or a hiker from each of those counties appointed as a subcommittee to draw up a master plan for the trail in that particular county. We assumed the responsibility of coordinating the points between the counties so there would be a coordinated plan. Moving on that scheme, within a few months we had master plans approved by the board of supervisors for about 10 counties. Those plans varied in perfection because of the lack of detail in which they were drawn up. Some were mere map plans as you can well imagine. We started with limited personnel to investigate in various counties. Shortly after that an appropriation was made by the Legislature. This first work was being done out of $20,000 appropriated for the survey. In 1950 another $100,000 was made available, making a total of $520,000 available for the project. Two thousand dollars of the first $20,000 appropriation reverted to the General Fund. I don't have the figures as to how much of the $100,000 of 1947 reverted.

DOLWIG: Will you explain why it reverted?

KELTON: We were unable to get adequate personnel and the investigations were carried on along that line. When you come within a few thousand of expending your funds you come as close as you can. The part that reverted from the $100,000 was due to the cause General Hannum mentioned, due to the inability to get sufficient lengths for the rights of way for the expenditures.

Under my supervision is the contact with the counties, the original lay-out of the trail, the investigation of the trail as laid out by the county officials, and the determination in conjunction with our Land Section with the owners along the trail, the acquisition connected therewith, then follow-up with the Land Section. Then, after a sufficiently long continuous stretch of trail has been obtained, it is turned back to the engineering section for construction. After the trail is constructed it then becomes the duty of the Park System as a whole to maintain the trail as a part of the State Park System. That maintenance will be done and is being done under the direction of our district superintendents. Now, to give a further picture, I might say we have received the heartiest cooperation from the United States Forest Service. Much of our trail goes through the national forests. We are building trails there through contact with the United States Forest Service and entering into contract agreements with the forest service for the maintenance of the trail. I think that about covers the status of the program.

MCCOLLISTER: Relative to the $175,000 remaining for this work, is any of that in danger of reversion?

KELTON: The $100,000 that was appropriated in 1950 will be subject to reversion. We now have approximately 200 miles of continuous trail ready for construction. We have agreements which have been engineered and are already to go through as soon as we can get one general agreement with the National Forest Service to expend or obligate $200,000.

MCCOLLISTER: Either you or the general or someone from the department would come to the Legislature and ask us about the matter in case there is a danger of reversion, wouldn't you? I wouldn't want to lose any of that money. If there is a danger of reversion we should make proper note of it before the next session.

KELTON: Yes.

THOMPSON: How much of that money has been set aside to be used for rights of way for future construction?

KELTON: It is a very small sum. I would like to have Mr. Hennessey answer that. The actual payments made to owners have been small. The cost of interviewing of these people and then possibly having to throw out a long line of trail because of inability to get one owner to sign up has been rather high.

MCCOLLISTER: As long as you are getting them as easements without payments you are getting that for free. Then by comparison the amount spent for interviewing would be a small percentage. Isn't that so?

KELTON: Yes.

MCCOLLISTER: I thing as compared to the value of the rights of way we get, it is a bargain and should be considered as a minor percentage on the over-all program.

THOMPSON: I would like to know whether it wouldn't be better policy to go ahead and acquire the rights of way rather than consumate so much of the construction work at the present time?

DOLWIG: I would like to get that point straightened out too.

KELTON: I have given you appropriations made expressly for riding and hiking trails. In addition, the personnel is carried on the regular support budget of the division. For instance, part of my services go into riding and hiking trails. It is carried more or less as overhead.

DOLWIG: You allocate certain percentages of salaries to riding and hiking trails, and so forth?

KELTON: The accounting office told us it is not necessary since we are all part of the Division of Beaches and Parks. I attempted at one time to make an estimate of the actual salaries that have gone into the Riding and Hiking Trails Division and I would say it approximates, over the four years, about $40,000 for the period.

DOLWIG: In the Division of Beaches and Parks, certain employees devote full time to the trails program and other employees spent part time, and you make allocations on that basis, and since there is no overlapping of duties, you think about $40,000 came from that fund?

MCCOLLISTER: I think the chairman asked you if the policy for the department, with $275,000 on hand, is to spend that money on construction on rights of way now obtained, or is part to be spent to obtain more rights of way? I don't believe we have had an answer to that question yet

KELTON: The budget for the fiscal year we are now in assigns $18,000 to acquisitions, then for the improvement, construction of trails, the remainder was given to the Engineering Division for construction. The $18,000 is adequate to cover any acquisition. If they need more they would cut down on construction and allocate to acquisition.

MCCOLLISTER: But I think everyone in this room will understand there is a certain political value to the acquisition to assure your coming into the next session asking for further allocation. We are all aware what faces California in the financial future. Chances are very strong we will need more sources of revenue to keep things going. If a legislator comes from a county or area where there are enthusiasts of this program, and nothing has been done in his county, and he learns that $275,000 was spent somewhere else to construct a short portion of this trail, I can't help but feel that it isn't going to look very good for the program, from a legislative standpoint. I am debating whether your policy should not be changed and that you should obtain as many easements and rights of way as possible before the bulk of the money gets spent in one or two locations.

KELTON: I agree with you 100 percent.

MCCOLLISTER: I have the distinct feeling that not enough has been done on the acquisition of the rights of way. The entire program is liable to be ridiculed. We are in the position of having thoroughly improved short segments of the trail, with the program as a whole suffering because of the lack of rights of way. I have a lot of riding and hiking enthusiasts in my own district, so has Mr. Dolwig—as a matter of fact, all of us have. I am pressed at home in my own district. We want a lot of things in the expenditure of state funds. I am sure the committee will agree with me when I say that I think the primary thing is that every effort should be made by the Riding and Hiking Trails Division to obtain rights of way first. I think it should have priority.

KELTON: For the first time this year, in fact within the last two months, we are in a position to have enough rights of way secured to assure a continuous program of construction.

DOLWIG: That's just the point that Assemblyman McCollister is making. Is that your policy, or are you going to expand the acquisition program beyond that?

KELTON: The only program on expanding the acquisition activities. is in the number of personnel placed on it They have just taken on one extra man on acquisition.

THOMPSON: Does that depend on county participation to some extent?

KELTON: It does to some extent. We already have some plans which we have not as yet started work on.

DOLWIG: You mentioned you have 200 miles under acquisition Is that continuous?

KELTON: San Bernardino County is practically complete on acquisition, so is Riverside County Kern County is nearly complete San Mateo County is rapidly approaching completion. In Marin County we have been unable to get rights of way from Mt. Tamalpais State Park. We are working north from there and expect to increase our activity in that territory. We also expect to increase the activity in Ventura County.

DICKEY: Would you break down the total mileage in these different areas? How much mileage in San Bernardino County?

KELTON: I have not tabulated that There is approximately 110 miles.

DICKEY: How much in Riverside?

KELTON: About 75 or 80 miles.

DICKEY: In Kern County?

KELTON: About 120 miles, most of which is on county highways, in which construction will be a very minor matter.

DICKEY: Practically all the mileage is in San Bernardino, Riverside and Kern Counties?

KELTON: No, we have not included El Dorado County in that because there are still a few gaps When you have a gap, you never know whether you have the right of way or not. The whole trail may have to be rerouted. In El Dorado County that is exactly what happened. Three-fourths of the trail had to be rerouted and started again.

DICKEY: In case you did reroute the trail, who would you call into consultation relative to the rerouting?

KELTON: The riders in that area.

THOMPSON: Is there any particular group that you recognize first of all?

KELTON: We follow the advice of the advisory committee. They are in touch with the California Horsemen's Association. One of the members is also on the Sierra Club.

DICKEY: May we have the names of the advisory committee?

KELTON: Kent Weaver is chairman, Arthur Johnson is vice chairman, Dan Beebe, John Diggs, Roscoe Hazard, and there is one vacancy at the present time.

MCCOLLISTER: I seem to be a bug on this same point, but I am trying to see what we can do to protect this particular feature. Do I understand correctly when I say that you are pursuing acquisition with sufficient effort to keep enough rights of way on hand so that you will use up what funds you have available for construction? You are just sort of keeping yourselves even. All right, and you agree that is the policy. I want to propose that that be considered before other points, where you expend effort and money on completing the easements and the acquisition, the whole 3,000 miles if you could. We have a whole trail on our hands which you authorize and which we want to improve, and therefore we need more funds. In keeping with your account, we have done our job and now we need more money for the perfection of the rights of way. If that were the policy of the department, the problem would be a great deal easier in the Legislature As it is you darn near need an airplane to cover where you have a right of way and where you haven't. That's the way I see it. I am proposing to the committee that your policy be changed to head for acquisition as fast as you can. Go right in and get your easements and follow up with construction as best you can.

KELTON: I think Mr. Hennessey can explain what his requirements for personnel are for such a program. That will come in the detailed budget for our department. We make up the budget. I think Mr. Hennessey can tell you how many extra men he needs.

MCCOLLISTER: We are not going to question you in detail if we are faced with a hundred thousand dollar program. I seriously propose that the policy be changed. Now I certainly foresee objections for giving this program any more money.

Next to testify before the committee was Mr James E. Warren, Assistant Civil Engineer, Division of Beaches and Parks, who testified as follows:

WARREN: I have maps that I will submit if you wish (Map was submitted of the California Riding and Hiking Trail prepared by the Department of Natural Resources, Division of Beaches and Parks. Map was explained by Mr. Warren.)

THOMPSON: It if is agreeable to the members of the committee, Mr. Warren will explain what has been done up to this time and what is contemplated for the immediate future

WARREN: On this map we have attempted to show the over-all picture of the trail to date The yellow ones are counties of which we have received master plans for these counties, but the plans have not been approved. The green ones have been submitted and approved by the county board of supervisors and the advisory committee and State Park Commission. The approximate route of the trail is shown. The red is where the trail has been built. Where it is blue is where right of way has been acquired but no construction has taken place. Where it is brown is where right of way is acquired and construction is under way.

San Diego County is about half way complete as far as construction goes and we are now entering upon the last phase of construction Riverside County is better than half completed in right of way San Bernardino has one very small section still uncompleted as to right of way.

At the present time some of the Division of Beaches and Parks personnel with the Forest Service are going over this section to reroute We expect that will be completed upon the completion of this present trip. In Los Angeles County one link of the trail is completed as to right of way and construction as to a 3- or 4-mile strip in the center of the county and in the northern end of the county. There is another leg to come through into Ventura County upon which we have not done any work yet. At the present time we are preparing maps preparatory to beginning right of way work in that area. Kern County—the right of way is about half way completed. There is a considerable amount of rerouting to be done there The river will flood out a portion of the trail There is no right of way work at all from Kern County to El Dorado County, which is about half complete as to right of way. In Nevada County there is no right of way work undertaken. Yuba County is about to go under construction Butte and Plumas County rights of way and construction are nearly complete. Tehama County—about to go under construction there as soon as we can arrive at an agreement with the Forest Service Shasta County—no right of way work has been done. In Sonoma County —no right of way. Marin County—there are two state parks there and at the present time we have a right of way acquired but not approved by the Department of Finance for the land in between those two parks San Mateo County is about completed as to right of way. Contra Costa County is complete as to right of way and construction with the exception of the piece right in the center of the county that is controlled by the U S. Bureau of Reclamation. Alameda County—work has been started but 90 percent or a large portion of the trail goes through the grounds of the City and County of San Francisco who will not approve it. So there is no progress thus far in Alameda County. Santa Barbara County—right of way work about to begin there. We are preparing maps and compiling the names of property owners.

DICKEY: I don't know whether you are the proper gentlemen to ask this question, but it would appear to me in watching the map and your explanation of it, that the Centennial Commission chose the route through the Mother Lode, because no one would ever place a trail there for beauty or enjoyment or anything else

MCCOLLISTER: How far above Sonora would that proposed trail be?

WARRLN: The trail shows it in between Sonora and Jamestown.

DICKEY: There are only about two seasons when anyone would want to ride through there for enjoyment So any expenditure of state money for a trail in that area would be a waste of money. Have the national parks been consulted?

WARREN: Yes.

DICKEY: Have they agreed to cooperate?

WARREN: In every way they can.

DICKEY: Do you know that the national forests are preparing trails?

WARREN: Yes.

DICKEY: You have probably hiked and ridden. Do you know any particular reason why this trail shouldn't be moved up so that it could join with some of the national forest trails so it would save the State some money and be far more scenic? Do you know whether the committee has considered that it might expedite the completion of these trails by cooperating with the national forest and leave the routes as specified there to a later time and complete these trails now, because you have almost continuous trails through the national forest that could be joined onto

WARREN: The State Advisory Committee has considered the use of these trails wherever possible.

DICKEY: I believe they haven't done it by routing the trail in that manner.

WARREN: Now that has been done here in Butte County. The original plan shown in Butte County came down very low. A present member of the advisory committee asked that it be rerouted and taken up into Plumas which at that time was not on the list of counties through which a trail should pass. So this trail is a result of that action

DICKEY: Where does that trail strike in Plumas? In Buck's Lake?

WARREN: Yes. It runs at about 4,500 feet. The rest of the trail is at an elevation of about 800 feet. I think that is primarily due to the fact that when the trail first came into being it was thought it should run about 2,500 feet and should be an all-year-round trail. It could be open the year around but it wouldn't be a pleasure to ride. I think that is why so many of these trails are shown in the lower country. And in almost all cases the final determination has been to force the trail farther into the mountains, for then we run into the Forest Service more often and get the benefit of going through public lands where our right of way problem is solved and we get the benefit of the trails now constructed by the Forest Service.

THOMPSON In looking at the map and hearing your explanation of it, it would appear that the rights of way have been acquired in a portion of the state where it is easy to acquire them. Don't you believe that the most important thing would be to get the trails that are closer to the larger cities?

WARREN: It would appear so.

MCCOLLISTER: The final determination of the location of the trail is up to the approval of your division?

WARREN: Yes, that is right. I don't know of any cases where if it were at all possible to get through, where the local committee wants to, that we haven't done so. Where it has been necessary to make a rerouting, the committee has been conferred with.

DICKEY: In coming back to Tuolumne County, what local committee would recommend that route? The reason I ask is that all of us who have ranches in that area, when we want to go there, we go up above. My place is 3,000 feet level, about 2,000 feet above where that trail is.

WARREN: I think Mr. West is the chairman of the committee. I know Jim Dunlap was on it. West is a horseman. At the time, he was the county engineer. As I say, I believe it has been put at that elevation because of the original idea.

HENNESSEY: I want to bring out one of the facts that General Hannum brought out, and that is the right of domain. You gentlemen can appreciate that in a matter of this kind you have trouble to get a right of way and it is very expensive. In numerous cases we have had to throw aside easements already obtained and call on the engineers to reroute the trail. I don't mean that we should have eminent domain, but it would be very helpful if we did. They won't give it to us under any condition. Even with the local horsemen working with us, we have a great deal of difficulty. Now you mentioned that we should put on more right of way men, which would require more engineers. Under our present financial situation this is not practicable. Our procedure is that the Planning Commission prepares these plans and often they have to be rerouted. To get a trail through the whole State we run into difficulty, because people insist on a lot of work being done sometimes within 60 or 90 days. So we can't get too far ahead of the engineers on that. We might also cite the delays of as long as six months due to legal technicalities between the Forest Service attorneys. We have had a battle that has held up on the construction on a question of who would assume the liability in case of any trouble. We have a case in San Mateo County of a horseman who has property which took a long time to clear. The case of the City and County of San Francisco that will not grant a right of way until they see what happens to San Mateo County. They will not do it unless there is a clause that will allow them to come in and do any repair work necessary. We have had a very discouraging program to purchase property under this method. We have been criticized for delays and we will have delays. This will take a long time under the present set-up. We have capable men but they can't get rights of way where the owners refuse them. Marin County is held up by one man. The same thing is true in Contra Costa County.

McCOLLISTER: From the metropolitan area around the bay, if you had a complete riding and hiking trail you would have something, and have a lot more supporters. Now it is my knowledge that the ranch you are talking about is at the very beginning of what you want to do, and it is my understanding that because you couldn't get that particular owner to cooperate that nothing further north has happened. Sonoma is on the map but nothing has been touched. Now the fact still remains that if you are stopped elsewhere, here is a good route that should be developed. You should forget Mr. Dias.

HENNESSEY: We have almost completed negotiations to go ahead without him. The engineers of our staff have to go out there and select the routes beforehand. They are starting to do that.

McCOLLISTER: I think this whole committee got started with a complaint from the Redwood Empire Association and others that work had been neglected or stopped when Mr. Dias wouldn't cooperate. That got us busy to complete the program. It is your statement that work in Sonoma and Marin Counties is being undertaken?

HENNESSEY: It is under way in Marin but not Sonoma. In Sonoma County we will start in as soon as the maps are turned over to us to go ahead.

McCOLLISTER: The master plan is on file with us and has been for over a year, but nothing has been done on it. Let us have the department's answer as a whole. Are you going to Sonoma County, and if so, when?

HENNESSEY: I couldn't tell you.

COL. KELTON: It has been a question of personnel. Certain personnel has been allowed but the fact is that in the budget for this year the engineers section was cut eight below what the budget called for in our engineering section. I had to lay off two assistant civil engineers from riding and hiking trails, so I am short in the riding and hiking trails at the present time. We are asking next session for an additional civil engineer and one or two assistant junior civil engineers and one aide to expedite the work. At the rate we have been going, we would need two more junior civil engineers in order to go ahead with the work.

MCCOLLISTER: You are not going to start until you get the new budget?

COL. KELTON: We are working now. We have Mr. Warren and two other men.

MCCOLLISTER: What is your expectancy in Sonoma County?

COL. KELTON: That is put up to the advisory committee They are close to the people. We ask them what the priority will be, as they have established a priority. What we try to do is to concentrate enough on one particular area to get a long enough stretch to go to work, and then go to work as soon as we get the necessary personnel.

MCCOLLISTER: What can I tell my board of supervisors?

COL KELTON: Tell your board of supervisors that we will look on them with sympathy.

DICKEY: Colonel, you had a budget before, didn't you? And in that budget there were no engineers cut out, were there? In other words, you say by reason of the last budget you had to lay off some engineers?

COL. KELTON: We were unable to obtain the full personnel in 1946 and '47, that we were allowed. I can give you——

DICKEY: If you were unable to obtain them then why was it that you didn't ask for them when you submitted your last budget?

COL. KELTON: We did. There are many stops between our division and the time the budget reaches the Legislature.

DICKEY: I realize that. How long ago was the master plan of Sonoma submitted?

COL. KELTON: Nearly three years.

DICKEY: And in that time you have done nothing?

COL. KELTON: That is right.

MCCOLLISTER: When can we expect you there?

DICKEY: I think the first question is, Why aren't you already there?

MCCOLLISTER: They want more men and a larger budget

COL. KELTON: This is due to the county advisory committee.

DICKEY: In other words, in order to have all parts of the state equally represented or considered, it might be better to change the advisory committee. That would probably be the best answer.

MCCOLLISTER: But the interest in that area has generated to a momentum and probably so because you have been stopped in other areas. So the northern part of the State has been neglected, and it is a very good question to ask you fellows when you are going into the North Coast Route, into Sonoma and Marin Counties. This was all started because of complaints that you were completely stopped, doing nothing. You are going to Camp Taylor. That is fine, but it is small. When you have an outing in the bay area you should have something for them by completing that area in the northern part of the county, and it is more important than wondering about routes in smaller places. Do you agree?

HENNESSEY: Yes.

MCCOLLISTER: Then when will you be there?

HENNESSEY: We will go any place we are instructed to go.

MCCOLLISTER: You are looking to the department as to when everything is clear and ready for you to go. Our own work has been done and is waiting for you. Somebody should speak for your department as to when you are coming over to us.

GEN. HANNUM: As has been explained, the advisory committee considers where we should go in to secure these rights of way and when the Park Commission approves the set-up we follow in, as the advisory committee recommends and the Park Commission approves Now so far as Sonoma County is concerned, I do not believe that the advisory committee has recommended that we go into there up to this time.

DICKEY: Have you ever questioned their judgment?

GEN. HANNUM: I have sat in on about 80 percent of their meetings. We will try to meet your problems somehow. That is about all I have to say.

DICKEY: Do you feel that it would expedite the program, now that you have ironed out the difficulties between the National Parks System and the State Park System, do you feel it would expedite your work to reroute your plans so that there would be more money available to expedite counties such as Sonoma and Marin? Isn't it possible right now to tie in from San Berdue County the trail at some point in your National Park System of trails and continue that line on north?

HENNESSEY: That is a very good idea and it is being done now in all the national parks.

DICKEY: Has anything been arrived at between the National Parks System and the department as to where the trail would go?

HENNESSEY: That is handled by the engineers and I don't know. Mr. Warren can advise you.

WARREN: Yes, we have had discussions with various departments along that route and have come to agreements with them for the use of certain areas of the trail. In picking the routes through those counties there are generally representatives from the forest service on that committee.

DICKEY: Have you shown on any map any particular trail where you could avail yourself of their trails?

WARREN: No. Only in local areas.

DOLWIG: In other words, you have not sat down with the National Park Service to outline a definite trail wherein you could hook the state trail up with that of the National Park System.

WARREN: Only in particular counties or particular areas where the trail was so constructed that it does tie into the forest district's system of trails.

DICKEY: I am somewhat confused. By that, do you mean that you are taking the existing trail that is suggested and as a side trail you are tying into their trail?

WARREN: We are in most cases moving up to a higher level.

DICKEY: I wonder if you could show that on the map.

WARREN (indicating on map): The original route of the trail follows very closely to the metropolitan development. The trail now goes through into the mountains and the Big Bear Lake and across the ridge into Arrowhead Lake And then of necessity it has to come back down into the Mojave Desert area and we are crossing that section as quickly as possible on an old road. Then into the Angels' Forest. That trail is constructed now with very small portions still missing and that trail is probably an average elevation of 5.000 feet. In general it is along 6,500 feet elevation, goes on and ties into the Rock Creek area. The forest is divided into two portions through which we had to go through private land and build a trail. But the rest of the trail through here is almost all on forest trails or through trails some of which we have had to go and construct and bring up to a standard. Then of course we have another desert area to cross going into Kern. We have taken county roads leading directly back into the forest. Then after we are about half way through Kern County we drop down a little bit in elevation. That particular forest is rather spotty as to ownership of the trails and not too well developed.

DICKEY: What is your elevation? Where do you go up from?

WARREN: We cross the highway at about 15 miles east of Mojave. I have larger scale maps here to show.

DICKEY: I wonder if it would be possible to indicate the exact location that you have agreed on with the National Forest Service? In other words, taking the individual counties as you go up from that point and indicating on that where you have reached your agreement.

WARREN: From this point on any talks we have had have been very general and not too many, because this area has not been worked out. We received the plans only within the last week or 10 days

DICKEY: What I am thinking of are the conferences that you might have had with the forest service.

WARREN: We have not worked in that county.

DICKEY: I am not speaking of that area.

KELTON: The entire north area we have not gone into.

DOLWIG: Haven't you reached some conclusion in your conferences with the national parks?

KELTON: Not as yet.

DICKEY: Well, is there anything we can do through friends in Washington?

KELTON: I don't believe there is any lack of cooperation. It is a lack of personnel to attack a 3,000-mile trail at one time.

DICKEY: How many people do you need? I can sit down with the maps and it wouldn't take long, if you are familiar with the country, to figure out trails that would be available the year around. Any person should be able to figure it out with a topo map without any engineers. What I was wondering, is why that has not been considered.

KELTON: Because of the concentration in other areas. The larger populated areas such as San Diego and Los Angeles have taken the entire attention of the personnel that we have had.

HENNESSEY: I think there is one thing to consider, and that is we haven't gone into those areas because the route of the trail has been determined by the county committees, subject to our approval.

DICKEY: As far as the county committees are concerned, they have no authority.

HENNESSEY: They almost always have a member of the Forest Service staff on their committee, generally the supervisor of the forest or a ranger.

DICKEY: Then how did you happen to get the location on that map?

WARREN: This is a projected location prepared a long time ago, and we have made corrections as the time came.

DOLWIG: If that is a projected route and if a large part of the route is in U. S. parks, those routes could be connected and the trails could be completed without too much difficulty

DICKEY: We have a certain amount of money in this fund, and if the National Forest Service will cooperate, we will have trails immediately and the other funds can be used in other places where it is more needed than up there.

WARREN: As far as that goes, I have shown on maps in our office where I would change the trail.

HENNESSEY: We still have to pay the Forest Service to maintain the trails.

DICKEY: The National Forest Service five years ago started on quite a program. They came out from Washington and went through all the parks in that area and designated certain trails that they would immediately go to work on, and they did. Those are trails we could ride over now. The national trail is open, available and in good condition at the present time. The National Park Service has done a wonderful job It is just a question of running the state trail so it will connect with the other route The Forest Service has those trails all marked

MR. KENT WEAVER, Chairman of the Riding and Hiking Trails Advisory Committee: Regarding the lay-out of the trail in Tuolumne County, some reasons were asked as to why it was put there. When this whole plan was conceived a committee was appointed to meet and decide in a general way how this trail was to go. We met and we decided we would try to keep the trail at a level of about 2,500 feet. We thought it would be more available to people and that it would be of more use the most of the year, and if we wanted to get into the High Sierras we could put feeder trails to lead us there.

DICKEY: I was thinking that the committee might have been influenced by the Centennials Committee that held many carnivals in the Mother Lode country.

WEAVER: The members of the committee would have no way of knowing the best place to locate a trail, and we have had to take the recommendations of the Division of Beaches and Parks.

DICKEY: Don't you find that the Federal Government is reaching out gradually in extending the parks until they are down near the Sacramento Valley and San Joaquin Valley?

WEAVER: I am not familiar with that, but there is nothing to prevent moving the trails up.

DICKEY. You would have a devil of a time at my place to go into Sonora even to shop, because it is too hot. This trail is below Sonora WEAVER: Well, there is no trouble to move it up. There would be no opposition to moving it.

DICKEY: Mr. Warren is familiar with the county, the same as I am But my only point in bringing this up this morning is that we should buy the rights of way around the metropolitan areas and at the same time we would not be depriving people of the right to ride in the hill country because we can hook up these trails with the national forest trails.

WARREN: We run into trouble in the metropolitan areas In Contra Costa County we had a trail practically through and much of the trail was acquired gratis. We came to one small piece of trail and the appraised value put on it was $300. The woman wanted $1,500 for it—a difference of about $1,200. We fooled away more than $1,200 worth of time trying to get it. We had gotten most of it for nothing, so I suggested that we pay it, but I was told that it would not get by the Department of Finance Months afterwards we finally made arrangements with this woman to go through there on a temporary basis until such time as she decided what she wanted to do with it.

DICKEY: This committee is an unusual committee in this respect. It is probably the first interim committee in the history of the State that is working without an appropriation. In setting up a program as to the practical standards of trails, does your committee do that or is it left entirely to the Engineering Division?

WARREN: That is all discussed with our committee.

DICKEY: The reason I brought that up is because some time ago I noticed that a bridge was being constructed for riders over a narrow wash or creek. I never could see any reason for the bridge, but if a bridge was necessary it seems to me that it should be constructed so that a horse could turn around on it and standards should be considered from the viewpoint of the poorest rider going over the trail. Everybody isn't an expert horseman. I would guess that perhaps a large majority of the riders are not experts.

WARREN: That is true to a certain extent. But there would always be some riders that would have trouble.

DICKEY: Are you familiar with this particular spot that I have referred to?

WARREN: Yes, I believe I am, and while no standard was ever set in our committee for that particular bridge, my recollection is that it is about six feet wide. That is considerably wider than this table. It would take a pretty poor horseman not to get over that bridge.

DICKEY: You are a good rider, Mr. Warren. We are going to have other people on the trails that are not expert riders. I am thinking now of the expenditure of our moneys. If someone rides that once a day, why is it necessary to put that bridge in there?

KELTON: There are a few times in the year that the water through there is approximately six feet deep and the bridge is needed.

DICKEY: Why not put rock in it? In other places it is being used all the time because it has been filled in with rock.

PELTON: Probably 360 days in the year it would be perfectly feasible not to have a bridge.

DICKEY: For five days in the year then should be expend that amount of money?

KELTON: We happened to think that in that particular place a bridge should go in.

DICKEY: I have had occasion to watch some of the surveying of these trails and then another group come out there the next day and another group comes out the next week to check on the other two groups figures.

KELTON: We have done practically no surveying as such on the trail, Mr. Dickey. We have done no instrument surveys except where we have had to determine a section corner. We found that the cost for such work is excessive and we haven't done it since.

DICKEY: When you estimate $486 per mile for the construction cost of these trails——

WARREN: Our figures were 185 miles of trails, expenditures—$173,000, making the average cost of $486 per mile.

DICKEY: You said 183 miles and $175,000. That's pretty close to $1,000 per mile. Let's forget the $486, I don't know how they arrived at that figure.

WEAVER: That's all right, this is very interesting.

DICKEY: We are watchdogs up there in the Legislature, and trying to get a dollar for a dollar.

WEAVER: I am satisfied that if some competent man, who had the knowledge and had the money placed at his disposal without red-tape and regulations, were to build this trail, it could be built at a portion of the time and for a fraction of the cost.

DICKEY: When you look over this budget, you didn't go for these fancy restrooms?

WEAVER: I don't think there was any intention to build fancy restrooms. They did intend to build children's restrooms there. They were to be comparable to restrooms in the state parks.

DICKEY: In building the trail we have money for bulldozing, and for this and for that, and it is my contention that in riding a horse, you get more enjoyment from riding on the back trails.

WEAVER: There is nothing fancy about the trails in Contra Costa County. Even some of that trail, they could not get over in the winter time.

DICKEY: The maintenance would be merely discing your grass in.

WEAVER: Yes, that's about all.

DICKEY: Don't you feel that the Horsemen's Association would report any signs that were down or any other needed or necessary——

WEAVER: I think that is true, but unfortunately congested counties like Contra Costa County, they are not always careful of the rights of others and there are lots of vandals loose and it is hardly safe sometimes to leave tools or stock loose. I think there would have to be some system of policing and I think that was part of the consideration we gave when we got the rights of way through there.

DICKEY: That is that they would be policed from fires and so forth Mr. Warren may I ask how you explain the figure of $486 per mile and yet only 183 miles have been completed and the cost is $175,000, which looks like about $1,000 per mile to me.

WARREN: On the over-all picture with the expenditure of $175,000 it is approximately $1,000 per mile——

DICKEY: Let's take a mile through Contra Costa County. Take any one mile and tell me how much it has cost to construct it?

WARREN. Contra Costa County was never built at $486 per mile, it was around $1,036 per mile.

KELTON: The figure is $1,016.23 per mile for Contra Costa County.

DICKEY: How many miles in Contra Costa County?

KELTON: 19½ miles. The total cost was $18,816.50.

DICKEY· Will you break that down for me. What does the $19,000 represent How much in bulldozing, in lumber? I would like to find out why it is costing $1,000 per mile.

KELTON: I think Mr. Warren can give you a better breakdown.

DICKEY: You had a bog over there that gave you a bit of worry, didn't you?

KELTON: Yes, and we decided not to build the bridge and put in some gravel in the stream.

WARREN: In your report to the advisory committee, you expended $18,816.50. In order to arrive at that figure, you must have had some figures from which you arrived at this total? Those are the figures I would like to have?

WARREN: In the first place, here's 35,330 feet of fence, approximately 35,000 feet of fence built in Contra Costa County at about 30 cents per lineal foot.

DICKEY: What type of wire?

WARREN: 6,100 feet of three-strand fence wire. 3,100 feet of four-strand barbed wire. Some on wooden posts, some of steel posts, depending on what the owner designated.

DICKEY: What is the cost of wire?

WARREN: $7.10 per roll.

DICKEY: You made a report here to the advisory committee of $90,348.96 for three counties? We are just taking Contra Costa County. Who gave you this figure? James E. Warren signed this report. Where are the figures?

WARREN: These figures came from the departmental accounting office.

DICKEY: I was trying to get a breakdown to find out if we are gilding it too much on these construction jobs. Who recommended the four-strand on the fences?

WARREN: The owner of the property. They recommended——

WEAVER: I am only telling you my opinion, but we have to build the kind of fences the owners want or we do not get the land This was paid out in building all the fences demanded. They worked for days in Contra Costa County. The people did change their minds and two or three brothers and a sister sometimes would tie up a piece of property. Without the right of condemnation it is practically impossible for us to get through.

DICKEY: I can understand why, when you are getting land for nothing, it is only human nature to do more for that land owner than ordinary If we have to buy land, what I was trying to determine is what work was actually done for these costs in those particular miles, because if we have to buy land in addition to this, it is a question of expending the money where it will do the most good.

Mr. Clyde Edmonston, representing the Redwood Empire Association, was called on to answer a few questions propounded him by members of the committee, and his testimony is as follows: The association comprises nine counties and is owned and operated by the taxpayers of those counties. These are our recommendations:

RECOMMENDATIONS BY REDWOOD EMPIRE ASSOCIATION

1. That the State Legislature appropriate funds adequate to complete construction of a comprehensive system of riding and hiking trails.

2. That these funds be made available for both the Primary and Secondary Trails System.

3. That a fair share of these funds be made available for trails in the Redwood Empire. The empire embraces: San Francisco, Marin, Sonoma, Napa, Lake, Mendocino, Humboldt and Del Norte Counties (plus Josephine County, Oregon, not herein affected).

4. That, from current funds, the State immediately proceed with acquisition of rights of way and construction within those counties that have filed master plans with the State Park Commission.

5. That, following filing of master plans by remaining Redwood Empire counties, acquisition and construction be commenced and completed.

NOTE: It is respectfully pointed out that a prime consideration and justification for these expenditures is the fact that such an adequate system of trails would provide fire breaks; also supply access for fire fighters and fire fighting equipment. Too many fires are destroying our natural resources, for lack of such fire breaks and fire trails

Further, the construction of these trails will contribute to further development of animal husbandry; will contribute to the health and well-being of those members of the public who would use these trails for riding and hiking purposes.

DICKEY: Mr. Edmonston, what and how much area is covered by national or state forests in the Redwood Empire?

EDMONSTON: About 30 percent.

DICKEY: That 30 percent would probably be the most desirable place to build a trail, would it not?

EDMONSTON: I would say so.

DICKEY: Have there been any plans filed? Shouldn't the trails be in conjunction with the trails in the national and state parks?

EDMONSTON: I would say this should be done.

DICKEY: The State Trail System should be with that of the National Park System.

EDMONSTON: We haven't met with the individual boards yet, we want them to proceed with their plans and file them.

DICKEY: In those particular counties do they have any representatives of the national forests sitting with those committees?

EDMONSTON: I don't know. I will call Mr. Raesch.

Mr. Albert G. Raisch of Marin County was next called on.

RAISCH: My position is that I was appointed by the Marin County Supervisors to represent them on the Redwood Empire Trails Committee

DICKEY: First of all, you have a very competent and able legislator over there who is probably one who gave birth to this committee. He has been fighting in behalf of Marin and Sonoma Counties at all times. Has your organization or the supervisors of your county gone in and tried to assist to get this particular rancher that Mr. McCollister spoke about this morning? Have they tried to get him to cooperate?

RAISCH: I believe that when we are really ready to get this particular property, I believe they will be reasonable. It depends on where they want the right of way. If they want to go right through the middle of it, I don't believe he would want that. That grazing land over there is worth anywhere from $40 to $50 to $60 per acre.

DICKEY: The reason I was going into this is that, "they want dough," is the expression they used some time ago. I want to know what the Boards of Supervisors of Marin and Sonoma and Contra Costa Counties are doing to assist?

EDMONSTON: If the land is near a highway, it is naturally worth more. I know that the general value of $40 is considered about the average run of straight grazing land.

DICKEY: Mr. Edmonston, I want to put this particular question to you. What is the Redwood Empire Association doing to cooperate?

EDMONSTON: It is the function of the board of supervisors to handle matters of that type. They have appointed one member to cooperate with the committee. These committees are available to cooperate with the State Park Commission and any of its representatives at any time.

DICKEY: May I ask one of the gentlemen who testified what the reply has been when they have contacted this particular rancher? In contacting that rancher, what reply did you receive, Mr. Hennessey?

HENNESSEY: He had no objections to people riding over there, but he said that he would not sell under any circumstances The last contact that was made was within the last three or four months.

DICKEY: Do you feel it would be of any value if the board of supervisors in that county would act as a liaison?

HENNESSEY: We would recommend any help.

Next to testify was Sidney Grove, Regional Vice President of Region No. 1 of the California State Horsemen's Association.

DICKEY: Mr. Grove, from remarks made by Mr. McCollister this morning, it develops that the State could not acquire a right of way for the reason that this one rancher will not cooperate. Because of this, the Sonoma County plan is stymied.

GROVE: In other words the Sonoma County program should be started right now?

DICKEY: Yes, and it has been held up because they could not acquire a right of way in Marin County.

HENNESSEY: We have not started in Sonoma County at all.

DICKEY: I understand that.

THOMPSON: How long has it been since your plans were approved?

GROVE: I believe it was in the fall of 1947.

THOMPSON: There is a great deal of interest in your county on your program, isn't there?

DOLWIG: Mr. Grove, you are not on the Advisory Committee? What is your function?

GROVE: I am interested in the Redwood Empire Association, also the California State Horsemen's Association.

DOLWIG: Have you taken your problem up with the State Trails Committee?

GROVE: Yes, but I have never received any information. It was more or less passed up.

DOLWIG: Did they ever give you any explanation in writing?

GROVE: No, it was always on this particular piece of property in Marin County.

DOLWIG: The only explanation was that they could not acquire the property in Marin County and could do nothing in Sonoma until that was acquired.

GROVE: Yes.

Next to testify was Nester Barrett, Secretary-Director of the Santa Clara Planning Commission, who spoke as follows: I would like to say to the committee that we are one of the counties which have not filed with the commission any final Master Plan approved by the supervisors. This is the first opportunity we have ever had to find out what this program is all about. When it was first put into operation a horseman came to the board of supervisors and asked that the Planning Commission prepare plans, and then we went through a period of time. We had with our neighboring counties some difficulty in ascertaining where the trails were to hook up. Because of our being in the dark on our program we have gone to a great deal of work in preparing our plans. I would like to show you some of our plans which are about 80 percent complete but which will be completed about the first of October. We have attempted to do the work and secure rights of way from property owners and have had wonderful cooperation from the local riding and hiking people. We understand when the time comes to acquire the rights of way it will all go through very easily. I have never personally been called upon by any person connected with the State in connection with this program. I have one letter stating that the program was started.

DICKEY: You never received a communication from that committee asking whether your plan was going to be filed?

BARRETT: No.

DICKEY: You did know they wanted it?

BARRETT: I knew it was necessary to have a master plan.

DOLWIG: The thing I am wondering about is that the duty of the division is a coordinating job, and you should have had their cooperation.

BARRETT: I haven't asked for it since the beginning of the program. Perhaps if we had, we would have received it.

DICKEY: Mr. Barrett, in view of the fact that you have just stated that through your office and through the cooperation of the horsemen's association in your area you contacted most of these property owners so that when the State wanted to acquire this land it would be easy to do so, if the State does not do this right away the land may not be available a year from now.

BARRETT: In our county a vast majority of the land is up in the mountain and we have attempted to use county trails and county roads so only a limited amount of the land is through private ownerships. Most of these are large and as they have been contacted the problem of land acquisition probably will not be very great although some time elapses. Down by Morgan Hill it would be a problem.

DICKEY: Although you may acquire three-fourths of the property easily it would be advisable to step in right now and get the land you need.

BARRETT: Of course we are at fault in not having filed a Master Plan. It was supposed to go through Santa Cruz County but we couldn't get those people together. These people are now interested again and that is the reason for this plan being submitted today. It is a little difficult in getting it away from Santa Cruz itself.

DICKEY: I would say a very masterful job has been done, and if they have contacted the property owners it seems the division ought to step in immediately and acquire these lands, because if you wait much longer it will be hard to do. What would your opinion be?

BARRETT: We are discussing it with the Acquisition Officer now. Mr. Henley from the department has been quite active on this and we are anxious to get it through. We would prefer to file a complete plan, as this is only about 80 percent complete.

Mr. Ed Zwierlein, Chairman of the Trails Committee, California State Horsemen's Association, made the following remarks and then called on members of his association to explain various phases of the State Horsemen's Association and their desires.

ZWIERLEIN: Our organization as you know covers the whole State, and with all the meetings that are going on we know what the horse people want. And yet at most of these meetings very little time has been given to asking question as to "what do you think is needed?" We used to get the progress reports and each one seemed to be the same as we went over the statements showing what had been done the following month. Mr. McCollister spoke this morning that we should work on the whole program and get all acquisitions done. There has been a feeling that you don't get the interest in various areas. You get the people enthused about it and nothing is done. This is what has happened in Santa Clara County. That program was started three or four years ago and nothing was done and now it has been taken over by another county. Another thing, the State Department makes up the budget, and the horsemen are never asked where it should be spent.

I have a number of people I would like to call upon and I think we could bring out the cooperation that the horse people could give your organization. I would like to call on Mr. Fred Anderson of Oakland who has had a great amount of experience in this and I think all of these things should come up today, and I would like to call on a few of these interested people to give you their ideas. Mr. Anderson, President of the California State Horsemen's Association. (Fred E. Anderson, Oakland, California, President of the California State Horsemen's Association.)

ANDERSON: I believe that if the horsemen are given the opportunity to cooperate, that we can obtain results throughout the state as we have in Alameda and Contra Costa County. We happen to have in Alameda County two parks. Originally when we wanted trails in there they didn't want to give them to us as they thought there weren't sufficient horsemen. But when we convinced them we could put 200 horses in there, they were convinced. Through the aid of the horsemen of the Metropolitan Horsemen's Association which is composed of ten associations, the purpose of organizing that association being to get the trails in the parks, we went before the Park Department and showed them we were ready to cooperate. At the present time we have about 150 miles of horse trails. They are good safe trails and we have week-end trails where many people ride over those same places. Where there is a crossing of a river bed we throw in a culvert and make it sufficiently wide for the people to pass over without hindering the flow of the water. In many cases we have hired a bulldozer to build a trail that will connect with the park trails. There is a side trail maybe 3 feet to 4 feet wide but it is safe, and I can't think of any occasion when we have had any trouble due to the fault of the trails. They have been constructed at a nominal fee, but I don't have the figures here today. That is the experience in Alameda County, and we have as fine trails as anywhere in the state. To this time, when the Park Commission wants cooperation they call on the horsemen in our area, and we go so far as to erect our own gates and police them. We get rights of way for we are friendly with the people. In cases where we get rights of way we put in gates and maintain them. That is the way it is done in Oakland and Alameda County. We in the Horsemen's Association are of the opinion that if we could construct more trails, as recommended by Mr. McCollister, if we could get more trails and rights of way through the state so our members could have the benefit of these trails, it would be a far better area than holding up one area until we developed another. We are of the opinion in regard to the over-night shelters that those things need not be constructed at this time. What we need at this time is trails. We want to develop one county so it will join with another, so that we have the fraternizing of horsemen throughout the State. In Alameda County we have been very cooperative with our supervisors. They approved our trail 2½ years ago with one exception. The right of way is acquired from the Spring Valley Water Co. As a gentleman from the Planning Commission brought up today, there is no reason why we can't tie the counties up. That, of course, is all under way.

DICKEY: Mr. Anderson, you heard the testimony this morning to the effect that they couldn't get the East Bay Municipal District to cooperate with them nor the county board of supervisors, when they were crossing roads. You say that by permission you cross the East Bay Utilities property Don't you think it would be possible to acquire a permanent trail through there?

ANDERSON: I hardly think it would be necessary. If we were fortunate enough to pass over that and tie up with the state trail it would be quite nice. But that is a federal trail and does not come under the jurisdiction of the state trails.

DICKEY: In this particular plan you filed with the State, didn't that cross the East Bay Municipal District?

ANDERSON: No.

DICKEY: Didn't I understand this morning——

ANDERSON: No. That was the San Francisco Water Company.

DICKEY: Another question, Mr. Anderson—have you ever seen the figures on what it cost per mile? From your recollection, can't you tell me what it was?

ANDERSON: I have not seen those figures. No, I don't know what they are.

DICKEY: The terrain that would be crossed in that park would be somewhat similar to Sonoma or Marin. Is that pretty rugged?

ANDERSON: Yes, that is pretty rugged.

ZWIERLEIN: May I call on the next gentleman? I would like to call on Mr. Creed Haberlin from San Mateo County, who will discuss San Mateo County. It has been the recommendation, as you gentlemen heard this morning, that the area around the metropolitan area be completed first, such as Marin, and then complete the ones in Southern California. The plan for San Mateo was the first one approved and it is the last one to be worked upon. Will you give us something on that? (Creed Haberlin, San Mateo, San Mateo County Horsemen's Association.)

HABERLIN: I have been interested in the trail program for a period of years. I don't want to spend too much time on our own county, as this is a state program. We appreciate the problems of the beaches and parks. To acquire land without condemnation is a hard job, and we feel they have done a good job considering everything that had to be done in our county. We had a problem with the San Francisco Water Company and they finally agreed to give the State a right to travel through Spring Valley.

When this meeting was opened the chairman said he was glad to see the interest here in the meeting. If it was an evening meeting, it would produce 1,000 people from our county alone. In an evening meeting we could have 4,000 or 5,000 people, so there is a real interest in the program.

Our planning commission secretary is here, who will deliver you his reactions to the program. I personally feel that the power of condemnation should be considered somewhere in the State, because to acquire these rights of way from the people and then find two or three people who will hold out, is discouraging. After a county has 75 percent or 80 percent of their trail in they should be considered for construction. The remainder of the trail can be solved, because I think if the power of condemnation could be worked into this program it would solve a lot of problems. We would like to see this Spring Valley work done, because we have a certain number of years to complete the job. It also has a bearing on Alameda County, because they want to see what happens in San Mateo County. So we of San Mateo County would like to see some construction.

The other point I would like to make is the advisability of acquiring throughout the State as many easements as could be obtained. I think the problem is concentrated somewhat to get the trails completed in the counties that are developing fastest. So the picture changes. Probably the owner is friendly now, but if he sells out to a subdivider then you have a problem. So I believe the Division of Beaches and Parks have cooperated very well with the horse groups and county officials, but we would like to see construction, and possibly ask them to hurry along and get more done. But I think we owe them a vote of thanks for what they have done.

ZWIERLEIN: Someone asked about the cost in Alameda County. I would like to introduce a person in the Woodside Trail Club, and I believe the gentleman has an idea of cost which you people have been worried about. May I present Mr. Sam Campbell of the San Mateo County Mounted Patrol and Woodside Trail Club.

CAMPBELL: After hearing hundreds of thousands of dollars tossed around this morning in the Land Department and Engineering Department and all sorts of machinery, I feel I haven't anything to say that will interest the committee. We have a little trail at Woodside, just a wide place in the road. We haven't hundreds of miles of trails but approximately 150 miles. We have had those trails for 30 years. For about 10 years I have been responsible for construction and maintenance of those trails. Probably they are not comparable to the other state trails. They are on private property, very simply constructed by hand, and we use no bulldozers at all because we have found from experience that a bulldozer spoils the natural beauty and makes a tremendous dust bowl in the summer and a bog hole in the winter. Women, children and older men ride the trails and have no difficulty with them. Generally speaking, we concentrate on cutting the brush out, removing dead trees, and then leave the rest of the country as nearly like God made it as possible. We have built very few bridges as they are very expensive, and generally there are ways to get around this. We have never had an accident on our trails due to any fault of the trails, but we have had accidents because people didn't know how to ride.

As to cost, the trail system has been run for 30 years and the annual membership fee is $5 per person. We spend about $800 to $1,000 a year to maintain 150 miles of trail. Now there are one or two things that struck me this morning as I listened to the testimony that probably make our situation not quite comparable. We don't have miles of fencing I can well see where you acquire a permanent easement that is necessary. I have a feeling though that quite a few miles of trail can be constructed at a low cost if the work is done in a simple way.

Now the shelter system. We have found over the years that the property owners who give us rights of way don't want any fires or camps because of the hazard in the dry season. I think if you erect shelters, you will have a great deal of that kind of difficulty. I would urge that the trails be constructed as nearly as possible like our trails are constructed, because I know the property down there and that is the way they want it. Once you get a large, wide trail you invite motorcycle clubs and people in jeeps wanting to ride there. A horse trail does not have to be fancy. The main thing you have to do is take brush out and be sure that where you are going along the side of a hill the horse has a good solid footing. I think, roughly, our maintenance expense would run $7 to $8 per mile.

DICKEY: Would you have an idea as to the cost of construction?

CAMPBELL: We have made use of old roads or county roads, any old road we could find, and once in awhile when we have to relocate a trail we do it by hand, and it can run into a lot of money. We have spent as much as $500 on one-half mile. But if you construct them very simply it isn't too expensive.

DOLWIG: In other words, from a horseman's standpoint, you wouldn't use a bulldozer?

CAMPBELL: There are places where you have to resort to that. For example, you might have a steep hill But these are small stretches, and by and large the use of a bulldozer is objectionable In the summertime the dust is so thick and in the wintertime it is bogged.

ZWIERLEIN: As long as we are speaking of the trails that are already in, we have a representative here from Contra Costa County, and I think there are a few things he would like to talk about. I would like to call on Mr. Leo Armstrong, the representative from the Contra Costa Trails Committee.

ARMSTRONG: I would like to compliment Mr. Henley for the fine work he has done in Contra Costa County in acquisition. I believe only $800 or thereabouts has been expended for property in that county. We have been impressed by his willingness to do the job, but frankly, it seems that his hands have been tied. We have observed this over a period of months. He is ready to go ahead and do the job and gets so far, and then he is stymied. We believe he should have a little more help. We don't know what is holding it up, but we do feel if some of the barriers were removed we could see much more development in the various counties But we would urge and beg you at this time to give Mr. Henley the help that he must have to do the best job possible. I would like to say that in March a representative of the horsemen met in Sacramento and at that time we made an earnest plea to be advised of the monthly meetings. When John Diggs was chairman we understand that a monthly meeting was held and progress made. I would say that if we are not holding the number of meetings necessary that we make arrangements to have them more often. I believe the horsemen are willing to give up their time if they are called upon for assistance.

At the meeting in March we had several recommendations. We recommended that a five-foot gate be adopted and were assured that all gates would be that from now on. If any additional gates are constructed, they should be wider. Unless some considerations are given to the recommendations of the horsemen, we will have problems. We want to go on record that we are demanding five-foot gates. We feel that the monthly meetings give us a chance to accomplish something and that we should be invited to attend them. If you will call upon us, we will help. We should be invited.

ZWIERLEIN: I would like to call on the Planning Commissioner, Frank S. Skillman, of San Mateo County.

SKILLMAN: San Mateo County was the number one county in the State on the riding and hiking program. We were in on our own before the State even started talking about it. I have been close to the picture. San Mateo County has had its program for some years and we have the same problem as others in acquiring rights of way for trails. It is very easy for some clubs to get together and put locked gates through their property. That is one thing that is fairly simple to accomplish. But I think the gentleman from Woodside will be the first to admit it is difficult for the State to come along and ask for an easement for all times for a permanent trail. The days are numbered in the Bay area when the rights of way can be acquired for the trails. In our endeavors to get in our feeder trails we have had a great deal of difficulty. We were going along very nicely but one property owner held up the whole program. I feel that the power of eminent domain will have to be given if we are ever going to complete the program. I don't think it can be completed otherwise. We do have that right in San Mateo County, and it has helped in trying to arrive at the locations we desire. I want to close by saying we have had close cooperation with the horsemen's groups in the county, and they have worked a great many hours.

ZWIERLEIN: I would now like to introduce Mr. William T. Nulty of the Contra Costa County Horsemen's Association.

DICKEY: What criticism do you have in connection with the trails in Contra Costa?

NULTY: Three years ago the trails bogged down, and by cooperation of farmers and property owners, we went to work. We received 100 percent cooperation from Mr. Henley. I listened to the money that was spent in Contra Costa County. Outside of the fences I don't know where it is. They had a machine out there that was an excavator to make trails. They had the wrong kind of machinery. In fact, people called me to take pictures of the toy that was working on the Johnson property. They gave their ground with the fence to be protected, with the understanding that their ground would be disced and kept disced on the trail. That has not been done up to the fourth of this month. Others had the same experience. One person can hold up the whole program. The State has not paid out any money to these people. If this would happen, we could get the trail where it would be secured. One man offered to give us a trail up there if the fire district and the county and the State would pay one-third each. I know this went to Sacramento as the papers all came back. I think when we are trying to get the people's property for nothing, we should cooperate with them. We drafted a letter to the representatives and asked Colonel Kelton and Mr. Hennessey when they would have the advisory meeting so we could be there. We have got no place at all with them, only promises. They said they would advise us when the meetings were to be held but we were not notified so we could have representation there. How can we work with people if they don't work with us? Practically all the land in Contra Costa County was given without cost. The State has not kept its promises in disking the ground and that is the only way we got through that property. The fire hazard is great there. The trails are not at all like we originally planned them.

DICKEY: The trails are 20 feet. If the 20 feet was properly disced, would that be sufficient as a fire break?

NULTY: I believe it would.

DICKEY: I would think a 20-foot fire break would be sufficient.

NULTY: It is a stock county and they would not let us have the ground unless at least 20 feet on this side of the fence was made into a fire break.

THOMPSON: Who made these promises?

NULTY: Mr. Henley. I wanted to know what I could promise the people. Mr. Zuppen locked his gates because this was not done. Some of the gates are not proper. Some are off on the hinges. Three years ago I asked in Sacramento to put in six-foot gates. We told them in Sacramento we would cut our horses on the small ones when we went over the trails. Now these gates practically anywhere over there are not situated right. For instance, the fence will come in here and here and the gate will be put right in the corner. I have asked to have the gate put in the center of the 20-foot right of way. One gate 51 inches was put in. That is what we got when we asked for a six-foot gate We can't cross over Walnut Creek in the condition it is in. The county is scenic but we can't get up there for the reason that the State refuses to pay one-third of the fire trail going up there. What good is a trail if you don't finish it? Someone said we should complete all land acquisitions, but we should work on these trails. We have supervisors 100 percent to work with you gentlemen in Contra Costa County. We had a meeting last week.

DICKEY: In your years of experience in riding—on that particular ridge, did you feel that those banks were too steep?

NULTY: No. Just to show you gentlemen that it can be done, I rode those trails with my grandsons and we had no trouble. A lot of the people who were riding there got off the horses and pulled themselves by the barbed wire fences. A little money spent in widening out the trails would eliminate this.

DICKEY: How much money has been spent per mile outside of the fence?

NULTY: They put in a couple of bridges in there. Outside of the lumber and labor, that is about all it cost. There was no need of the bridges at all. If you dump rock in the bottom to give a foundation, you could put a horse through.

DICKEY: It is your feeling that the bridges that are already constructed were not necessary if the banks had been sloped and rock put in the bottom. What other expenses are there?

NULTY: I don't know. I can't see how it would cost so much.

DICKEY: In order to disk, you would have to use a track layer. If you have property there, wouldn't it be better to acquire 40 feet so that you could zig-zag back and forth?

NULTY: We are getting this property for nothing. I thought if we got a start on it and found out where we made a mistake we could show them where we would need more property and probably the State would give us more money. There was a lot of money spent someplace there, but apparently it was spent for salaries, etc.

DICKEY: This Mr. Henley Who is he?

NULTY: The man in the Lands Division.

DICKEY: I wonder, Mr. Henley, if you would answer a question?

HENLEY: As to the 20 feet and the discing of the 20 feet on either side. This is only to be done on their request.

DICKEY: I am not questioning the advisability of this but I am wondering if we are making a promise that we cannot fulfill. Would the Controller acknowledge a warrant and would the Treasurer pay it? In other words, we are using state funds for work on private land.

HENLEY: All I know is that it was passed and the Department of Finance approved it and it has been recorded and returned. They must put in the request for the outside discing.

THOMPSON: Have these people put in a request, have they asked for it? Mr. Henley, must that request go in in writing and to whom?

HENLEY: It must come in in writing to the department in Sacramento.

DOLWIG: There is only one piece of property that you have acquired where it is supposed to be done?

DICKEY: The understanding was when they secured the property that it was to be disced and kept disced.

HENLEY: The reason is that the grass got high and dry before they got around to do it.

DICKEY: How high was the grass?

HENLEY: I would say from 15 inches to 18 inches.

NULTY: One reason the ground should be disced is because it is on the side ground.

THOMPSON: Wouldn't it have been better to have operated some of it when the grass was right?

DICKEY: Would it be more economical to contract from some farmer who owns some cat or a disc to do it?

NULTY: Yes. A farmer has lots of time between crops when they could do it and would gladly do it.

DICKEY: In other words, it would be better ____

THOMPSON: Can they get in to these trails from these ranches?

NULTY: Yes. There is a gate for the rider to get through and a 12-foot gate for stockmen to get cattle through.

DICKEY: In other words we have too many people in the upper bracket and too few fellows in the field doing anything.

NULTY: That's right.

THOMPSON: Is there anything in the law now that prevents a motorcycle from going over these trails?

DICKEY: Off hand there is nothing I know of to prevent it. I would hesitate to say so definitely until I looked it up but I don't know of anything.

ZWIERLEIN: I would like to call upon the Executive Secretary of the State Horsemen's Association, Mr. Stone.

RAY STONE: I would like to say this, there have been several different counties represented and the desire expressed by the representatives for action on the state trail. Probably a lot of counties would like to have been here to express their views.

THOMPSON: Assemblymen Burkhalter and Hinckley are members of the committee but were not able to be present.

STONE: I was trying to point out that several of the counties I can think of would probably put in their bid for some action if they were here today. When this thing first started to roll a policy was adopted by the Advisory Committee. They foresaw just such a thing as we are up against today. In foreseeing this difficulty they decided that priority would be passed upon in the order in which the county plans were submitted to the Advisory Committee and Park Commission I thought that was an equitable arrangement. Much was made of the Sonoma County project I think it was submitted in the fall of 1947 and one of the copies of the magazine there would indicate that in June of 1948 San Bernardino and Kern Counties projects were submitted This goes to show that counties submitted much later are being worked on now and Sonoma County is not being worked on. I believe a policy should be established whereby some justification is evidenced for this sort of thing. Another point, I would like to bring out something about what Mr. Zwierlein said. I have a copy here of the agreement between the Public Utilities Commission who control the Spring Valley water portion of the water system and that agreement was reached on the 15th of July, 1949, and as has been stated before, it took two years of political finagling to get this right of way at all. We are told the entire trail had to be completed in a certain length of time. When I requested a copy of this, there is no such clause in it. In going over the situation with Mr. Hennessey we discovered in the correspondence the State had agreed that the permit to use the land could be terminated if the right of way or if the trail had not been acquired and open to the public through San Mateo and Santa Cruz Counties in eight years. It is a matter of record, a letter written to Mr. Eckhard from Mr. Kelton. It is another indication of why—well, why the trails should be completed. We are not favoring any particular section. We are trying to look at it from a state-wide picture. We have members in all parts of the State. I think some solution should be suggested to this problem and some arrangement that a project will be done in a certain order to eliminate any bickering as to who gets what and when. I don't agree with the statements made about the power of condemnation being necessary later. I believe that San Mateo, as was stated here today, is practically completed. The same is true of Los Angeles and San Diego. In all the metropolitan areas they have already secured rights of way. I believe they can get them without the rights of condemnation. Some of the cow county legislators were the ones who objected to this thing on the grounds that they would go right through the middle of ranches, etc. They did not want the State to come along and condemn a trail in the middle of their ranch. They said they would go along if it did not have the power of condemnation. We would like to maintain this. I think we should if possible stick with it. I don't agree at all with what Mr. McCollister said this morning about abandoning construction in favor of acquisition. I think it is possible to seek a compromise between what is being done now and his idea. I think it would be a bad idea to abandon construction in favor of acquisition THOMPSON: I don't think that is what Mr. McCollister meant. He stressed acquisition rather than going all out for construction.

STONE: I certainly think the construction is very necessary. Particularly in view of certain agreements that we have run into. In making these recommendations, I want you gentlemen to realize that I have been connected with it at every meeting that has been held in California, practically. I have also been connected with the State Horsemen's Association since 1943. I am making my recommendations as I feel the horse people of the State would feel if they could all speak. I think the Advisory Committee coud well consider eliminating the construction of hostels. Mr. Warren said in making up their budget they had an item in there for hostels. The horsemen are usually used to roughing it and I think most of the horsemen think that way about it. Unfortunately Santa Clara County has gone to such lengths in the submission of their reports because, as was brought out by Mr. Dickey, by the time they get around to working on them the property will probably be in other hands. We have not urged counties such as ones illustrated on the map as not having submitted their plans, we have not urged them in any way, because this thing was passed upon as a 10-year proposition in the first place. The acquisition as Mr. Hennessey said is considerably ahead of construction anyway. We have not urged Tuolumne and a few of the other counties to get their plans in because if they once get their plans in they will feel they should have the work done. These are the only observations I have to make. The state horsemen are the ones that have to go out and try to get money for the riding and hiking trails for the Park Department to work with and maybe it is not strictly the thing to do in the state business, but I think we could very well be taken into consideration when the State Park Department is making up their budget to make up what they need. I think we know more about how the Legislature feels and we should be taken more into consideration when the budget is being made up.

DICKEY: Your Association is made up in a number of component parts You have districts, etc.?

STONE: We have about 235 clubs and the State is cut up into 12 regions.

DICKEY: Don't you think your organization might render a great deal of assistance by constructive criticism that might be brought to our attention? For instance, the gentleman from Contra Costa County who mentioned the many things that were unnecessary to do. If we knew the feeling of the horsemen riding these trails as to what was necessary for the budget, and what would be considered surplus. The bridges, etc., being unnecessary expenditures and such things as that, then this money could be expended and appropriated in a more efficient manner. Many times I receive complaints from horsemen, they don't like a certain trail and want me to vote "No" on something, but give no reason for it. If they will submit some criticism it should be constructive criticism where they feel the department is spending money not judiciously. This can be done throughout the State. I learned things about Contra Costa County trail that we can certainly use as an example in appropriating money for other trails in other counties.

ZWIERLEIN: Would you want this to come direct to the committee?

DICKEY: Yes. Send us a copy of it and a copy to the department. We are going to ask the department's advice as to what they are doing and need. We want information.

THOMPSON: Should that go to the advisory committee?

DOLWIG: Certainly.

DICKEY: The advisory committee, the department and this committee. We want to know what the department is doing and we would certainly inquire from your organization if certain expenditures are necessary. if you feel that they are necessary. I think it is a question of cooperation all the way around If we had more testimony like we got here a few moments ago from the gentleman from Contra Costa County, we are going to know what we are doing when we look at that budget.

STONE: I would like to suggest that if the chairman thinks there is time, that maybe this committee could briefly take a look at the 1951-52 budget.

DICKEY: Ordinarily we don't see the figures of any department except through the courtesy of the head of the department until it comes to the Ways and Means Committee.

DOLWIG: You mention you have been in from the beginning of this program Can you give us a little information about the Butte-Plumas trail program?

STONE: I frankly just don't remember. I presume that * * * actually they have been working on it two and a half years. They started in December, 1947. I presume they started on a priority basis.

DOLWIG: What basis was the priority established?

STONE: I think originally it was first come, first served.

WEAVER: I was going to suggest that you ask Mr. Diggs. He was chairman of this committee at that time.

THOMPSON: I think, gentlemen, we should have a five-minute recess at this time.

THOMPSON: Mr. Phillips, do you have anything on your mind?

JAMES PHILLIPS: I think pretty nearly everything has been said. I am president of the Sacramento County Horsemen's Association and the gentlemen who have spoken today are mostly from counties where the trails have gone through. When you are talking about the Coast Ranges and the Sierras where the trails are going, most of the riders are quite a ways from those trails. Most of the counties are not on the trail routes Many of these people look forward to the time when they can go into the____. This is a state-wide program from border to border each way. Many of the people have not been here today. They have a deep interest in it but they don't bear the responsibility of the trails. The people in Sacramento and in other counties are looking forward to the time when these trails are available. Sacramento County is taking the responsibility of establishing feeder trails out to these trails. We are looking forward to getting feeder trails out to the main trails. The horsemen's outlook is that this particular type of recreation is being pretty much pushed out of existence in those areas. California is a great horse state and it is as justifiable to spend money for this type of recreation as it is to spend it on parks, skiing and many other sports. Some of the horse people up there who are farther away have asked me to speak for them. We feel it is worthy of study by the Legislature and something worth while can come out of it. Particularly when the Legislative Auditor was making certain recommendations. I felt that there was a certain amount of danger in the Legislative Auditor's recommendation of no money. That's as much as saying, kill the program. They did not mean that and what they were saying was you people get together and work with the horse people, the Legislature still believes in the riding and hiking trail program and we hope it will be continued to the satisfaction of the taxpayer and those interested in the program. These trails will be as important to the hikers as they are to the horsemen When they are established the hikers will get as much pleasure out of them as the horsemen. The highways are being improved so you can use a car and the State Legislature should continue to make these trails available.

DICKEY: I would like to ask Mr. Phillips a question. You were here this morning when I was asking about a trail in the Sierras. Knowing the back country and the trails, do you feel that it would be better to be able to ride up around a 4,000-foot level or better to ride around Jimtown, etc.?

PHILLIPS: I feel it would be better to ride around the 4,000-foot level. I was curious to know where it was going to go in Tuolumne County. Sometime in 1946 or '47 I was told that the route had been approved roughly from Mariposa to Angel's Camp. I know that that is rather a hot trip and there is nothing of interest to look at. I don't think the present trail could be ridden in the day time, it would only be used at night.

I wonder if the board of supervisors had the proper conception of this trail program when they laid it out. Now it occurs to me that they should take a pretty close look at these trails before they are put into effect.

DICKEY: There are logging roads in there and roads that the CCC boys built.

PHILLIPS: Yes. Lot's of logging roads through there. About all that I believe would be necessary now for more desirable trails would be to find them. I don't think you would have much of a right-of-way problem up in that country. I just thought a review of any originally proposed trails in that area might be worthwhile and help that part of the problem out.

THOMPSON: Any more questions, gentlemen? Then we will call on Mr. Keller.

N. B. KELLER (Budget Analyst): Speaking for the Legislative Auditor, I believe his attitude is essentially that expressed by Mr. McCollister this morning. Certain moneys were appropriated. The program could best be served by acquiring rights of way and easements with construction to come later when the money becomes available. We recognize that some construction must be done in order to acquire some rights of way, particularly in the areas where there is the possibility of being shut out entirely due to factors of continued growth, etc. I think there should be some clarification regarding the amounts expended. Mr. Dickey made mention of $173,000 for 186 miles of completed trail. This covered the construction and acquisition of the 186 miles and the acquisition and preliminary miles that were simply acquired with nothing else being done.

DOLWIG: Do you have the figures on how many additional miles were acquired?

DICKEY: It might be well for you to furnish those to us.

KELLER: I will do that. I do not have the figures now. Chapter 1469, 1945; 486, 1947; and 112 in 1946. With the exception of 112, those moneys were revertible. There is 176,000 remaining almost indefinitely until it is expended. In addition to that out of support funds furnished to the Division of Beaches and Parks it was estimated during the fiscal year just closed, there was expended exclusively in furtherance of the riding and hiking trails program $47,000 out of regular support funds of the division. So, you have about $220,000 of gross cost for the 186 completed miles of trail.

DOLWIG: Where does that $47,000 come from?

KELLER: That's out of their regular support budget that the department gets every year. The Governor's Budget has in the Division of Beaches and Parks a Division of Acquisition and Engineering. However, I would like to make a further point in connection with that money. Colonel Kelton pointed out that he lost some men. That is true. The comfort stations and the picnicking and camping, that sort of thing was curtailed. At the last session they got only enough to cover the most essential needs for that year. As a result of that cut back we recommended a cut in their staff. Of the $175,000 remaining in Chapter 112, that money is expendable as they see fit and it can be expended for salaries and engineers. These people do not appear in the regular budget.

DOLWIG: After an appropriation is made for a certain project ——

KELLER: They can go out and hire engineers and pay them out of those funds. They could use the $175,000 which is not revertible for salaries and wages over a long period and use the revertible moneys for acquisition.

DICKEY: Are both of these sums of money earmarked?

KELLER: Yes, for riding and hiking trails.

DICKEY: There was no appropriation in the 1949 Session?

KELLER: $300,000 was the amount of Chapter 112.

DICKEY: How many miles was completed of the $300,000 amount? Do you have any knowledge of how they expended the $125,000?

KELLER: Other than the figures supplied me by the Division of Beaches and Parks, I have not had the time to go over any of the trails

DICKEY. What does their report show as to how they spent the $125.000

KELLER: I have a summary here Their summary shows this is as of March 31, 1950, and at that time the figure was $106.000. The figure they gave you was for August 1st. Anyway you have an additional few months added and which made the $125,000. Out of that $106,000, $23,748 was for salaries and wages, $10,000 for operating expenses, $18,000 for equipment and $1,161 for rights-of-way and title insurance and improvements and construction was $53,000. That makes up the total of $106,000.

DICKEY What is the total amount since 1946 expended by this department?

KELLER: Out of the specific appropriations from July 1, 1945, to March 31, 1950, it was $154,694 This doesn't include the money spent out of their regular support budget. It was $40,000 out of this year just closed. We passed on the budget requested and they estimated about $70,000 in their regular support budget would be expended for riding and hiking trails which included $39.000 for salaries and wages, $31,000 for operating expenses. Now that last figure brings me up to the final objective in connection with the whole idea of the 3,000-mile loop trail If we are to acquire a great deal of right to use federal trails and simply consider them part of the stretch as you mentioned today, we would still have about 2,000 miles that would be entirely state-owned and certainly state maintained On the basis of a sum of $15,000 for the 1950-51 Fiscal Year, this was exclusive of personnel, operating expenses only, on the basis for 200 completed miles, say they have a total of 300 miles for that they contemplate expending $15,000 in maintenance. That was tentative, it may have been changed and probably has been changed The exact figures I do not have now but I will have them.

DICKEY: Would they give you any reasons why they did not expend this money that was revertible?

KELLER: Frankly, no. I did not ask that question They have not given me this information All the facets of this thing do not come out at one time We bear in mind the fact that you cannot compare a state-owned and operated trail system with systems similar to those mentioned by Mr. Campbell today. These are trails which will be used by the general public. Consequently, since this is state-owned, people will be taking liberties which may result in claims against the State. If a horsemen is injured because the trail fell away, he would probably sue the State or attempt to sue the State. Consequently, despite the very best intentions, I think in time to come there will be more pressure for the State to patrol the 2,000 miles the State would own. Well, you could guess what that would cost.

DICKEY: Have you made any comparison with the cost, say, well in comparison with the trails in the Alleghenys?

KELLER: No. I do know something about the Appalachian trails. It is entirely different than ours. Riders go over it with guides. They have to stick with these groups. They are operated on an entirely different basis.

DICKEY: Other than the tours, I was thinking of the cost of construction and maintenance

KELLER: No, we haven't made any study of that.

DOLWIG. If Mr Keller has the time and if it is possible to furnish it to the committee, I think we should have a full auditing report relative to the riding and hiking trails program.

KELLER: If you will send a letter to Mr. Post, that will be done.

PHILLIPS: I think the horsemen in my area are interested in knowing if the Legislative Auditor's office is in a position to say, is the program as justified as when the Legislature set it up or if there is hostility to it and that it may, sometime in the future, be abandoned? Are the horsemen butting their heads against the wall or has this program basic merit and justifies the cooperation of all of us and we can continue to work for it and look forward to its completion.

KELLER: The Legislative Auditor is faced with the problem and faced with it by the Joint Legislative Budget Committee to see that cuts can be made, he has to weigh one thing against another. The most important things should take the least cuts and the least important things take the biggest cuts In some cases it is impossible to do away with some things Some of the services could be reduced probably to save money where it has to be saved.

DICKEY: That resolves itself down to the personal opinion of the Legislative Auditor. You feel that we are influenced by the Legislative Auditor?

PHILLIPS: I think you should be. I think that's what you have him for. Should the program be abandoned, the Legislative Auditor might make this recommendation. I don't say that he has this in mind but we are wondering if this might happen. Cut out the entire appropriation requested without the horsemen knowing why. They could interpret that this program should be terminated now before it gets any further.

DICKEY: But his recommendation, it might not go into the original budget.

PHILLIPS: So, well I just thought maybe the Legislative Auditor would have that opinion. The interested groups should have a statement from him to that effect to clarify the atmosphere on it.

KELLER: There probably was question in recommending against more money in the 1949 session because they never did get around to spending what they had.

DICKEY: Why didn't you use this money? I think we should ask them why they did not use this money.

KELTON: It just got that way in the last two or three months

DICKEY: You mean since this committee was formed?

KELTON: No, possibly five months. You get rights of way for say 20 miles, and then there is a gap in it. We don't dare start spending funds on construction until that gap is closed. I think the construction will step up considerably.

DOLWIG: What is holding back the construction?

KELTON: The U. S. Forest Service, which I hope is being approved. As soon as we have that, about $2,500 are ready to obligate in Yuba County.

DOLWIG: In Butte County, it was started about in 1945 wasn't it?

KELTON: Yes. We have done considerable work in that forest.

WARREN: There is one other consideration there too. It is carrying this work out and the Forest Service doing the actual work, they are limited to the amount of effort they can put out in any one year by the number of supervisory personnel that they have on the force which they can divert from other projects to this project. In other words, if we were to furnish them with enough money to do the full construction necessary in a single year, they would not be able to do that full construction because they would not have the personnel ready. They can hire laborers, carpenters, or other such work that is needed on the trail program, but they have a certain set number of supervisory personnel on their force who have a large number of jobs to perform during the year, including forest fire protection, and we did have that trouble in Butte and Plumas this year. We didn't finish what we had expected because a large amount of the personnel was taken off to fight the forest fires a few months ago They have a very short working year.

DICKEY: You are giving state money to the national forest to cut the fire breaks. Is that right?

WARREN: No, to cut trails. Not as fire breaks.

DICKEY: And how wide are they through the National Forest?

WARREN: They vary from 30 feet to 40 feet.

DICKEY: What are we paying them?

WARREN: As it has worked out so far, they have constructed approximately 11 miles of trail and refurbished about 24 miles and rebuilt a bridge for about 23 or 24 thousand dollars.

DICKEY: You say refurbished—that is an old trail they have gone over?

WARREN: That is right.

DICKEY: In the construction of the bridge—how much was that?

WARREN: We haven't the entire cost of reconstructing that bridge.

DICKEY: There was a federal trail to start with.

WARREN: It was a trail of sorts. The first time I went down that trail at the bridge the grades averaged between 42 percent and 48 percent, with a couple of cables swinging across the river.

John M. Diggs, member of the Advisory Committee, was called on next to answer some questions asked by Mr. Dolwig.

DOLWIG: Why was the Butte-Plumas project selected? I understood that those counties that got in their master plans first received consideration. Sonoma County said their master plan was in before these. Is that correct?

DIGGS: Yes, that is right.

DOLWIG: Why wasn't that given preference?

DIGGS: We have tried for two years, and let us remember that the legislation for this program did not become effective until July 1, 1946, that is approximately four years ago. The first two years we spent a great deal of time trying to get the cooperation of the counties and interested groups in these counties to submit these plans. We didn't know, when we first started this, because no one had ever had experience, and we had to work out a means to an end. It was all experimental. Nothing like it had ever been attempted in this State or any other state, so we had to go around to these counties and work out plans with the Boards of Supervisors in Sonoma County and San Mateo. San Mateo was the first county to be approved by the board of supervisors and by this committee. We finally began getting a few of these counties to come in, and after the first year we began getting three or four of these counties completed, then we had to wait for others to be completed. In the meantime we had never had experience in acquiring rights of way, so that was difficult. In January, 1949; the acquisition program was turned over to Mr. Hennessey in the Division of Beaches and Parks and we feel that they have had exceptional success in acquiring the rights of way. I personally feel that with Mr. Hennessey's department knowing and doing what he has about the project that they can successfully bring this to a conclusion with condemnation. It has been rather expensive but now we have the thing to the point that we know where we are going and for the first time we have a backlog of rights of way in each county, which is something we haven't had in the past. This is why some of those funds had to revert. We promised the Park Commission we would never approve a project until the program was contiguous.

DOLWIG: Why did Plumas get priority over Sonoma?

DIGGS: I think it was because of the fact that a large portion of the trail went through federal forest areas and after batting our heads against a stone wall we were looking for some place to begin building trails. It is a trail of great scenic beauty. It is a trail that is being used considerably.

DOLWIG: Is that the basis upon which the Advisory Committee made the recommendation to the department?

DIGGS: Yes, as far as I recall. I think it might be well to point out that this trail is 3,000 miles long. That is a lot of trail. It is a big State and this is a new program. The four years we have been working on it is not a long time, though it seems like a long time. But we entered into this without too much experience, in fact, none, and we tried to do it expeditiously and economically. It is true this was all new to the department too, and they had no organization set up to handle it. I feel that while we acknowledge we made some mistakes on the thing, it is mistakes we won't make again. Mistakes we made such as in Contra Costa County are minor and easily corrected. I would say we have actually only had two years in which to work this program. For the first two years we were just groping around trying to find how to get the job done. I know that the State Government is not much different in its operation than the others. I feel there are two ways to do it. That is the right way and the state way. You see it every day, Mr. Dickey, and know it better than I do. There were six business men up to the time Mr. Jorgensen passed away, trying to advise on it. They have been honest, conscientious, and sincere. A lot of fellows criticize us because we don't advise them of the meetings. There has never been a meeting held that Mr. Ray Stone was not advised of. We can't advise all 250 clubs but we expect Mr. Stone to do this. We have had from 12 to 25 horse people at the meetings, and we have encouraged them to come to these meetings. I openly admit we made mistakes in Contra Costa County because it was the first time we had experience. We should have been down there before we went to work at all. I think we could have convinced them to do some things differently but we can't drag this committee all over the State because it is too expensive. So we have kept our meetings confined to Sacramento because of the expense. That is one of the reasons we haven't got around and looked at this thing with our own eyes. We have depended on the Engineering Department of the Division of Beaches and Parks.

DOLWIG: Don't you think this meeting has been helpful?

DIGGS: I think it is very helpful and I am greatly pleased. I think in hearing these things aired the way we have it has been very beneficial and we have a better knowledge of the problems that confront us.

With the help of Mr. Hennessey's department we can keep well ahead of our backlog of counties so that we can proceed with the construction. That will more or less keep up with the thing. I think we can keep up enough counties so that we will never have to let these funds revert. A meeting like this affords us a great opportunity to get us all better acquainted with the program.

The committee next called on Arthur Johnson, a member of the Sierra Club of Los Angeles, representing the advisory committee.

JOHNSON: I am vice chairman of the advisory committee and a member of the Sierra Club of 20 years standing. There are two or three items I would like to read into your record, because I think they are something that might be clarifying. On August 11, 1947, we approved the master plan for the Butte and Plumas section. On the minutes of November 3, 1947, Mr. Jorgensen reported relative to Sonoma County that the interest was there but that the county supervisor's attitude was not too enthusiastic.

DOLWIG: I would like to clarify any misunderstanding there might be. I am trying to find out what the policy of the advisory committee is because as I look at the map I see you have taken care of San Diego and Los Angeles, then you go way up where there are few people and your main project has been there, and I am wondering why.

JOHNSON: I think Mr. Diggs said that the policy has been to spend money only after the acquisition has been completed. San Mateo County is not yet ready, or is just beginning to be ready, and until a short time ago we had no right of way there. Because we had money to spend, we went to those counties where we did have rights of way we could work on. Butte and Plumas County and Los Angeles County were some of them.

DOLWIG: As I understand it, no effort was made in Sonoma to do this, due to that one man.

JOHNSON: Getting into and out of a county is one of our most important problems Therefore we wanted to be sure we could get through Marin County before we went into Sonoma County.

DOLWIG: Contra Costa is just one leg of the trail anyway. There is no continuous trail completed any place.

JOHNSON: You have heard the testimony here from different groups today We, being a public body without any powers other than advisory, are subject to pressure We received pressure from various groups to construct trails.

DOLWIG: That is the best answer I have heard.

JOHNSON That is all I have to say from the point of the advisory committee.

I presume that you gentlemen are familiar with the Sierra Club It was organized in 1892, and its prime purpose is that of a conservation program, to lobby for the conservation of our natural resources in California. As it has grown it has expanded its activities outside of California. It was instrumental in having the Valley of Yosemite placed in the federal park It used to be in the state park. They take great pleasure in their efforts in creating various parks and as the result of being outdoor persons, the activities have become quite widespread. We have a skiing and hiking organization. Not all of them get out on the trail, they are merely members because they believe in the purpose of the club. In the last few years they have branched out and this year had a burro trip. There are about 1,000 members that are on the various club trips, one of which happens to be a motor trip into Arizona. The interest of the group is primarily hiking. We have a group who are rock climbers. A hiking trail in the higher elevations would be more to their liking, and I might say as far as the Sierra Club is concerned, they haven't been too interested in the program because they thought it was an equestrian trail, which wouldn't be to their liking. Generally speaking they get back into the higher country, so that development of the trail originally at a lower elevation did not interest them. Only since the trail was forced to higher elevations have they been interested. Just last month they recommended to the advisory committee that the trail be rerouted in Riverside County to a more desirable route It would not detract any from the riders' enjoyment, but it would add to the hikers'. And I think as this progresses and we find we have to go into other areas, that their interest will grow. It was suggested that the trail be put on the back range. It is a more desirable trail from the standpoint of the riders and the hikers as well. So they have become interested. It has only been as the trail has progressed in the last year. In Riverside County they suggested a reroute. Up in this area the California Club held a protest meeting and invited the staff to come, protesting the use of a trail as part of the state system, because of the conflict between their ideas of a trail and the ideas of the horsemen in the same area. I think it can be worked out to mutual benefit. But as you see there is difference of opinion on the trail. I think as we have to go back into the National Forest there are a lot of good areas.

DOLWIG: 4,000 or 5,000 foot level is what the hikers would prefer?

JOHNSON: I think so.

Dan Beebe, a member of the advisory committee from Oroville, testified as follows:

I have very little to say except that I want to add something that John Diggs said. This is one of the finest things that has happened. I have learned more today about the master trail than ever before. We meet infrequently. We don't meet often because we want to keep expenses down. I have enjoyed today's meeting immensely. Why was it that Butte-Plumas Counties got ahead of Sonoma? You fellows are in politics and will understand. You will recognize the truth of the old adage that the squeaking wheel is the one that gets the grease. Well, I was the squeaking wheel. I got my master plan in a hurry. I was the chairman of the Butte-Plumas Committee. It was in Butte and Plumas Counties that we broke the rule that it should stay below the 2,500-foot level. We gave them easy rights of way and they were eager for a place where they could get rights of way and stop arguing about it. I was not then a member of the advisory committee. Sonoma did not squeak. I have made inquiry today and not a member of the committee or any horseman came in again to the committee. It was easy to forget an outfit like that. I believe that is all I have to say. I want to again state that I am very grateful myself that I was able to attend this hearing.

KELTON: I would like to add a set of maps to the exhibit. This is the general index map. These are the four counties, San Diego, Los Angeles and——

DOLWIG: Does this include all the construction and——

KELTON: It includes the completed trail that is under construction and that on which we have the right of way and that where we have no right of way. We also compiled a complete topographical map of each portion of the trail showing property owners, those acquired and those not acquired, but we did not have it in time to produce at this hearing. There was one other question which we might add. The question about the cost of maintenance of trails. I have the annual report of the Secretary of the Interior, National Parks Service. On page 304 of that report estimates are given for maintenance of roads Approximately 75 percent for trails. The figure is $59 per mile of the total roads and $320 per mile for road maintenance and $42 per mile for trails. That gives some idea of the cost in the future.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. That the riding and hiking trail program be completed and that sufficient appropriations be made as necessary to bring this about within a reasonable period of time.

2. That the Division of Beaches and Parks secure more help in the acquiring of rights of way. With the development of our rural areas and the increasing difficulty in securing rights of way it is important that this phase of the program be given first priority, and at least that much construction be accomplished that will keep those commitments made by the division to assure rights of way.

3. That the trail be left in as simple and natural a state as is consistent with safety.

4. The committee commends the National Forest Service for their cooperation on the trails program and recommends that the California Division of Forestry be called upon for assistance whenever possible, that their rights of way may be included in the trail system wherever it is found practical, and that some of their stand-by employees be used in construction and maintenance in the interest of economy.

5. That an interim committee of the Legislature be created with sufficient funds allocated to carry on during 1951 and 1952, and that the interim committee submit a report of its findings to the 1953 Legislature.

CONCLUSION

It is the conclusion of the committee that due to the unusual nature of the trail and of the problems confronting the acquisition of the rights of way, and the fact that every step of the way has been a trial and error method due mostly to the lack of eminent domain, that no great amount of undue criticism should be directed at the Division of Beaches and Parks, but rather that they be commended for their ability and persistence in many instances where they have been working under considerable difficulty.

DEAR ARTHUR: I came into my office today and found your letter of February 10th and, likewise, the illuminated copies of House Resolution No. 57, relative to my retirement from the Senate.

It was indeed gracious of the Assembly to adopt such a complimentary resolution. I am causing it to be framed and it will hang alongside the Senate resolution expressing somewhat similar sentiments.

Many thanks for your participation in the matter.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE
NATIONAL PRODUCTION AUTHORITY
WASHINGTON, March 5, 1951

Mr. Arthur A. Ohnimus, Chief Clerk
State Capitol, Sacramento 14, California

DEAR MR. OHNIMUS: The White House has referred to us your little note of January 25th, enclosing copies of the Assembly joint resolutions numbered 3, 7, and 11

It would seem to be the sense of these resolutions to have the National Production Authority issue a blanket priority to the counties of Los Angeles for the materials and equipment required in connection with their pollution control program, but we regret to advise that no provisions have been made for the issuance of such blanket authority.

I would suggest, therefore, that the Air Pollution Control Committee of Los Angeles search and exhaust all of the local sources for such materials and supplies from the sources from which they regularly purchase their supplies and equipment, and in the event that they are unable to procure one or two of the critical items, we will be glad to undertake to assist them toward their procurement when such checks will have been developed by their purchasing sources.

We wish to assure you that we are keenly conscious of the important part of the defense program represented by that industrial area and will be glad to exercise what assistance we can render to the utmost on their behalf.

With kindest wishes, I am

Very cordially yours,

LEWIS ALLEN WEISS, Director
Office of Civilian Requirements
