REQUEST FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT THAT LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL BE PRINTED IN JOURNAL

Speaker pro Tempore Maloney asked for unanimous consent, on behalf of Mr. Stanley, which was granted, that the following letter of transmittal, relative to the Report of the Assembly Interim Committee on State and Local Taxation (which has previously been printed as a separate document) be ordered printed in the Journal in 10-point type, and that the report be ordered filed.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

ASSEMBLY CHAMBER, STATE OF CALIFORNIA
Sacramento, March 26, 1951

Hon. Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly
Assembly Chamber
Sacramento, California

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to House Resolution No. 133 of the 1949 Regular Session of the California Legislature, the Assembly Interim Committee on State and Local Taxation herewith submits a report on its findings and recommendations.

In addition to H. R. No. 133, the following resolutions were directed to your committee for investigation, an account of which will be found under "Part One, Findings and Recommendations:" H. R. No. 24 by Assemblyman Hahn; H. R. No. 29 by Assemblyman Thomas and H. R. No. 111 by Assemblyman Levering.

Your committee also made a study of the relationship of the principal General Fund sources of revenue, an account of which will be found under "Part One, Findings and Recommendations."

In connection with the committee's inquiry, public hearings were held throughout the State. A large amount of statistical and other information was obtained as a result of these hearings.

In its study, the committee consulted various public documents and directed inquiries to public officials and private organizations which were highly productive in results and most helpful to the committee.

Several subcommittees were appointed to attend tax panels of many organizations throughout the State, including the League of California

Cities, the County Supervisors Association of California, the State Chamber of Commerce, the California Taxpayers Association, the United Taxpayers Association, the California Property Owners Association, the California Manufacturers Association, and many local chambers of commerce and taxpayers groups.

A tax evasion study and investigation was started but was not completed because of the lack of time. Material on this subject has been gathered and is in possession of the committee. Further study of this problem is recommended.

The committee also held hearings on the financial aspect of horse-racing tracks in relation to the pari-mutuel tax. This study, which was recommended by the 1949 standing Committee on Revenue and Taxation, is being completed and will be submitted separately.

As a result of requests from many organizations such as the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Catholic Church, the Lutheran Church, the Seventh Day Adventists and the Jewish Synagogue, a subcommittee hearing was held in Los Angeles during October, 1950, on the subject of ad valorem taxes on property owned by nonprofit charitable organizations who were seeking relief from excessive taxes Pertinent legislation has been introduced on this subject.

Your committee made an analysis of the 1949-50 and 1950-51 Budgets and published it in its report entitled "A Summary of State Budget Information." This analysis was distributed to all members of the Assembly.

The committee has also brought up to date many of the tables submitted in its 1947 report and they may be found in Part Two of this issue, along with other tax information.

Respectfully submitted,

PRAYER

The following prayer was offered by the Chaplain, Dr. Clarence A. Kircher:

We come unto Thee, Our Father, at the beginning of a new day with the words of the Psalmist:

"Bless the Lord, O my soul,
And all that is within me,
Bless His Holy Name
Who forgiveth all thine iniquities,
Who healeth all thy diseases;
Who redeemeth thy life from destruction.
Who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies;
Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things;
So that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's"

Make us truly thankful for Thy manifold mercies

We ask it in the name of Him whom we worship in spirit and in truth—AMEN

Assembly Bill No. 1094—An act to add Section 19301.1 to the Education Code, relating to cafeterias in public schools.

Bill read third time.

The roll was called, and the bill passed by the following vote:

AYES—Babbage, Beck, Belotti, Berry, Brady, Brown, Burke, Burkhalter, Caldecott, Chapel, Clarke, Coats, George D. Collins, Condon, Connolly, Cooke, Crowley, Davis, Dickey, Dills, Dolwig, Doyle, Dunn, Elliott, Erwin, Fleury, Gaffney, Geddes, Grant, Grunsky, Gubser, Hagen, Hahn, Hansen, Hawkins, Henderson, Hinckley, Hollibaugh, Kelly, Kilpatrick, Kirkwood, Lanterman, Levering, Lincoln, Lipscomb, Lowrey, Luckel, Lyon, Maloney, McCollister, McFall, McGee, McMillan, Meyers, Morris, Moss, Munnell, Niehouse, Parker, Porter, Rumford, Shaw, Silliman, Smith, Stanley, Thomas, Tomlinson, and Mr. Speaker—68.
NOES—None.

Bill ordered transmitted to the Senate.

Assembly Bill No. 3370—An act to amend Section 1593 of the Education Code, relating to the effect of the formation and changes in territory and status of school districts, declaring the urgency thereof, to take effect immediately.

Bill read third time.

Motion to Amend

Mr. Geddes moved the adoption of the following amendments:

Amendment No. 1

In line 1 of the title of the printed bill, after "of", insert ", and to add Section 1593.1 to,".

Amendment No. 2

In line 2 of the title of said bill, strike out "the effect of".

Amendment No. 3

On page 2 of said bill, between lines 2 and 3, insert
"SEC. 2. Section 1593.1 is added to said code to read:
1593.1. The formation of a unified school district under Chapter 14 of this division shall be effective for the purposes set forth in Section 1593 upon the date upon which the boundaries of the component districts thereof became or become coterminous."

Amendment No. 4

On page 2, line 3, of said bill, strike out "SEC. 2.", and insert
"SEC. 3."

Amendment No. 5

On page 2 of said bill, after line 18, insert
"Furthermore, under existing law, the provisions of Education Code Section 1593 are inapplicable only to a unified school district formed under Chapter 14 of Division 2 of the Education Code and so the residents of such a district alone are precluded from exercising the privilege of increasing, through an election held pursuant to Education Code Section 6358, the maximum statutory district tax rate (prescribed by Education Code Section 6357) for such district effective for the first school year of the district's existence. The result is that a unified school district formed during the school year 1950-1951 under said chapter will be unable, if the maximum statutory district tax rate will not provide the necessary revenue, to provide during the school year 1951-1952 adequate instructional and other facilities for the education of the children residing in the district. In order to remove at the earliest possible moment, the discrimination which now exists against such unified school districts to the detriment of the welfare of the children of such districts, it is necessary that this act take effect immediately."

Amendments read, and adopted.
Bill ordered reprinted, and re-engrossed.

PRAYER

The following prayer was offered by the Chaplain, Rev. Clarence A. Kircher:

O God, Thou art the Protector and Helper of all Thy children Thou hast made of one blood all nations and determined the bounds of their habitations.

We pray for those who have responsibility in our Nation, our State and our community. May they lead us in the paths of peace and justice

Let this great Nation, which Thou has wonderfully blest, take its place among the peoples of the earth as one that serveth

"O, Ruler of the Universal sphere,
Help us to crush all paralyzing fear;
Give wisdom that our puny lives may know
A broadening spirit that shall build and grow
Into a workable, efficient plan
Triumphant in the government of man"

We ask it in the name and for the sake of the Savior of men, who loved us and gave Himself for us—AMEN.

PRINTER'S NOTE—There being no 7-point strikeout type available, the material which should appear in strikeout type in the following amendment is indicated by being enclosed within brackets.

Amendment No. 4

On page 2 of said bill, after line 39, insert

"SEC. 4. Section 44 of said act is amended to read.

Sec. 44 Whenever a vehicle parking district is created under this act, immediately upon the acquisition of the parking places to be acquired pursuant to the petition for the formation of the district, a parking place commission shall be appointed which shall have the powers, jurisdiction and authority granted in this act In the discretion of the legislative body, such commission may be appointed at any time prior to such acquisition and after the adoption of the ordinance declaring the district formed. The commission shall consist of three members. Each commissioner shall be a resident and qualified elector of the municipality or county. Members of the commission shall serve without compensation. Members of the commission shall be appointed in the case of a municipality by the mayor, subject to confirmation by the legislative body thereof, and in the case of a county by the legislative body.

The commissioners shall hold office for the term of three years from the date of their appointment and qualification and until their successors are appointed and qualified, except that members of the first board appointed shall classify themselves by lot so that one member holds office for one year, one for two years, and one for three years, and, in each instance, until a successor has been appointed and qualified, provided, however, that by a four-fifths vote a commissioner may be removed by the legislative body at any time.

Commissioners shall be persons of business experience and ability [and interested in the district], to the end that the affairs of the district shall be administered in the interests of the district. A commissioner may be an owner or lessee of property, or an officer, employee, or agent of a corporation owning or leasing property, within the district or, in the case of a commission appointed under Section 51 hereof, within one of the districts, or any other qualified person, but each commissioner shall have the qualifications specified in the first paragraph of this section. Whenever there is filed with the legislative body of the city or the county, as the case may be, a petition signed by the owners of more than one-half of the area of assessable land within the district requesting the removal of a commissioner, such legislative body shall immediately remove such commissioner, and a new commissioner shall be appointed in the same manner as for other appointments. The commissioner so removed shall be ineligible to hold office as a commissioner of the district for a period of one year following his removal. To secure the removal of a commissioner from a commission appointed under Section 51 hereof, the petition must be signed by the owners of more than one-half of the area of assessable land within each of a majority of the districts governed by such commission.

SEC 5. Section 31571 is added to the Streets and Highways Code, to read:

31571. The petition for the formation of a district may propose that lands already owned by the city are to be used as parking places for the proposed district.

In such event the petition shall state what compensation is to be paid to the city for such use and the manner in which such compensation is to be paid. Such payment may be made out of revenues from the use of such lands, and other lands acquired for the district for parking places. The legislative body may refuse said petition or agree by resolution to such use for the compensation provided in the petition. If the legislative body so agrees, then the ordinance of intention shall describe the lands to be so used and shall state the amount and manner of payment of the compensation. The improvements proposed by a petition may include improvements of lands to be used as parking places pursuant to this section, and in that event the assessment levied shall include the estimated costs and expenses of such improvements. As soon as all collections of paid assessments have been made and all bonds representing unpaid assessments have been sold and paid for, the legislative body shall adopt a resolution providing that such land shall be held subject to the provisions of the act and used as parking places for the use and benefit of the district, and thereafter such land shall be so held and used under the possession and control of the board of parking place commissioners, and the compensation to be paid to the city shall thereafter be paid to it as proposed in the petition.

SEC. 6. Section 31682 is added to said code to read:

31682 The petition for the formation of a district may contain a provision that the redemption provisions of said bonds shall require the payment of a premium of 3 percent of the unpaid principal, in which case the ordinance of intention shall also so provide, and the words, "together with a premium of 3 percent of said unpaid principal" shall be added to the redemption clause of the bonds issued, and such premium must be paid to the treasurer by the property owner or other person paying off any such bond before maturity and discharging the property described therein from the lien of the assessment, and the treasurer must pay such premium to the holder of the bond redeemed

SEC. 7. Section 31683 is added to said code to read:

31683 In the case of a district, the petition for the formation of which was filed prior to the effective date of this section, the legislative body may, at any time prior to the giving of notice of the filing of the assessment, declare its intention to provide that the redemption provisions of the bonds shall require the payment of a premium of 3 percent of the unpaid principal, in which case the fact of such declaration of intention shall be stated in the notices of the filing of the assessment, and said notices shall further state that prior to the hearing on the assessment any interested person may file with the clerk written objection to requiring such premium. At the hearing on the assessment the legislative body shall hear all such protests, and if following such hearing the legislative body determines that the best interests of the persons owning or having any interest in the property within the district would be served by requiring such premium, then the words set forth in Section 31682 shall be added to the redemption clause of the bonds issued, and such premium must be paid to the treasurer by the property owner or other person paying off any such bond before maturity and discharging the property described therein from the lien of the assessment, and the treasurer must pay such premium to the holder of the bond redeemed

SEC. 8. Section 31530 of said code is amended to read:

31530. The formation of a vehicle parking district may be proposed by petition signed by the owners of land in the proposed district, as shown by the last equalized assessment roll of the county in which the proposed district lies, owning lands of an assessed value of not less than twenty percent (20%) of the total assessed value of all land in the district, as shown by the last equalized county assessment roll.

SEC. 9. Section 31776 of said code is amended to read.

31776. Commissioners shall be persons of business experience and ability [and interested in the district], to the end that the affairs of the district shall be administered in the interests of the district.

SEC. 10. Section 31777 of said code is amended to read:

31777. A commissioner may be an owner or lessee of property, or an officer, employee, or agent of a corporation owning or leasing property, within the district or, in the case of a commission appointed under Section 31865, within one of the districts, or any other qualified person, but each commissioner shall have the qualifications specified in Section 31771

SEC. 11. Sections 5 to 10, inclusive, of this act become operative only if Division 18 of the Streets and Highways Code is enacted by the Legislature at its 1951 Regular Session, and in such case at the same time as said Division 18 takes effect, at which time Sections 9.1, 27.1, and 27.2, added to the Vehicle Parking District Act of 1943, and Section 44 of said act, as amended, are repealed."

Amendments read, and adopted.

Bill ordered reprinted, engrossed, and to be re-referred to the Committee on Municipal and County Government.

"CHAPTER 1. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

65000. The definitions and general provisions contained in this chapter govern the construction of this title unless the context otherwise requires

65001. "Board" means the State Conservation and Planning Board

65002. "Street" includes street, highway, freeway, avenue, boulevard, parkway, road, lane, walk, alley, viaduct, subway, tunnel, bridge, public easement and right of way, and other ways.

65003 "Right of way" means any public or private right of way and includes any area required for public use pursuant to any master plan or precise plan.

65004 "Regional planning district" or "regional planning commission" means a district or commission provided for in Article 3, Chapter 2.

65005 "Region" means territory comprising a regional planning district.

65006 "Area" means any territory selected pursuant to this chapter for united or joint planning purposes and may include populated or unpopulated areas, urban, suburban, metropolitan, or rural areas, cities, counties, or portions of counties

CHAPTER 2 STATE AND REGIONAL PLANNING LAW

Article 1. Definitions and General Provisions

65100 This chapter may be cited as the State and Regional Planning Law.

Article 3 Authority for Regional Planning

65180. To provide state-coordinated regional planning, the board shall, after consulting with local planning commissions and legislative bodies concerned, relative to district boundaries, divide the State into regional planning districts.

65181 So far as possible, the districts shall be established so as to include

(a) Natural geographic regions including watersheds of major stream systems, and the land upon which the waters of such watersheds are put to beneficial use.

(b) Areas having mutual economic, political, social and recreational interests and similar needs for conservation

65182 A regional planning commission may be established for each regional planning district The Governor shall appoint all members of the commission from nominees selected by the legislative body of each county or portion of county or city within the district from the membership of each county or city planning commission. The commission shall always consist of an odd number of members

65183. Nomination and appointment shall be as follows:

(a) Each county or portion of a county and each city within a regional planning district shall be represented by at least one member on the regional planning commission, but in special cases city legislative bodies may waive this right. County legislative bodies may waive this right only for portions of counties.

65184. The term of office of a member of the regional planning commission shall correspond with his term as member of the county or city planning commission. A member may be removed by the Governor with the approval of the nominating legislative body.

65185 The operation of a regional planning commission shall be determined by the cooperating cities and counties in accord with a mutually agreed upon plan for organization and financing The plan may provide for the employment of necessary personnel and consultants and other specialists, and for the employment of consultants and other specialists by contract

65186 Any counties or cities which are included in a regional planning district may enter into contracts with any other counties or cities in the district for the preparation of master and precise plans or the performance of other planning functions pursuant to Article 1, Chapter 3, Division 7, Title 1.

65187. The regional planning commissions shall prepare, adopt, and submit to the area, county and city planning commissions in their respective regions, plans, features of plans and findings in matters pertaining to regional and state welfare.

65188. Before adopting all or part of the master plan or any amendment to it the regional planning commission shall hold at least one public hearing.

65189 The regional planning commission shall give notice of the time and place of hearing. The notice shall be published at least once in a newspaper of general circulation in each county within the regional district, or if there is none, in a newspaper of general circulation in the nearest county having such newspaper. The publication shall be made at least 10 days before the day of hearing.

65190 Each regional planning commission shall render an annual report on such matters and in such form as may be prescribed by the board. Such annual report shall be filed with the board, with each area, county or city planning commission and with each legislative body within each region.

65191. Each regional planning commission shall hold at east one regular meeting every three months.

CHAPTER 3 LOCAL PLANNING

Article 1. Authority for Area, County and City Planning

65300. By ordinance the legislative body of each city may, and of each county shall, create a planning commission.

65301 In addition to the creation of a planning commission each county and city legislative body may by ordinance create a planning department.

65302. By resolution, the legislative bodies of a city, or cities, county, or counties, may establish an area planning commission. The resolution shall describe the boundaries of the area over which the area planning commission shall have jurisdiction for general area planning only.

65303. A copy of the resolution shall be transmitted to any state planning board in existence at the time the area is formed.

Article 2. Appointment of Commissions

65330 An area, a county or a city planning commission shall consist of five, seven or nine members. County or city officers may be designated as ex officio members, who shall not exceed one of a five-member commission, two of a seven-member commission or three of a nine-member commission. All members except advisory members shall have a vote.

65331 The members of a city planning commission shall be appointed by the mayor with the approval of the legislative body.

65333. By resolution, the legislative bodies of the cities and counties affected shall appoint the members of the area planning commission from the city or county planning commissions. The term of office of each member shall correspond with his term on the city or county commission.

65334. Of the members other than ex officio or advisory members, of the county or city commission first appointed, any combination of one, two, three or four year terms to obtain the maximum staggered terms may be used.

65335. The successors to the first members shall be appointed for four-year terms.

65336. Vacancies shall be filled by appointment for the unexpired portion of the term

65337. If a chartered county or city provides in its charter or by ordinance for the mode of appointment, number of members, terms of office, powers and duties, and methods of removal of the planning commission of the city or county, such charter or ordinance shall prevail.

65338. The term of an advisory or ex officio member shall correspond to his official tenure.

65340 Any appointee member of a county or city commission may be removed by either of the following:

(a) The appointing official, subject to approval of the legislative body.

(b) A majority vote of the legislative body

65341. A member of an area planning commission from any city or county may be removed by majority vote of the legislative body of such city or county

65342. By resolution of the legislative body of a county or city, advisory members, who shall be county or city officers or employees, or members of the legislative body, may be appointed to advise area, county, or city planning commissions. The advisory members shall have no votes.

Article 3 Appointment of Director of Planning and Staff

65360. The administrative head of a county or city planning department shall be the director of planning, who shall be a person qualified by training, experience, and demonstrated ability to manage the affairs of such department.

65361. In the ordinance creating a planning department, and subject to county or city civil service rules, the legislative body may establish the responsibility and procedure for the selection and appointment of a director of planning, fix his salary, and prescribe his duties and the general rules under which he shall hold office. If neither the county or city charter nor the ordinance creating a planning department states how the director of planning is to be appointed, he shall be appointed by the planning commission, or the chief executive officer, or the legislative body upon recommendation of the planning commission

65362. Subject to any applicable personnel or civil service rules, the director of planning may appoint professional, technical, administrative, and other employees, and upon his recommendation consultants and other specialists, as required, may be employed or such services secured by contract

65363. Where there is no director of planning the planning commission, the chief executive officer or the legislative body may, upon recommendation of the planning commission, appoint necessary personnel, subject to any applicable personnel or civil service rules, and/or employ or contract for the services of consultants and other specialists.

65364. Each commission may employ or contract with planning consultants and other specialists for such services as it may require.

65365 The operation of an area planning commission including the employment of necessary personnel and/or consultants or other specialists by contract, shall be determined by the cooperating cities and counties in accord with a mutually agreed upon plan for organization and financing.

Article 4 Organization of Planning Commissions

65400. Each commission appointed pursuant to this chapter shall elect its chairman and vice chairman from among the appointed members for a term of one year. The commission may appoint a secretary from among the appointed members

65401. Each county and city planning commission shall hold at least one regular meeting in each month. Each area planning commission shall hold at least one regular meeting every two months.

65402 Each commission shall adopt rules for the transaction of business and shall keep a public record of its resolutions, transactions, findings, and determinations.

65403 Two or more city and county planning commissions may hold joint meetings and by approval of the respective legislative bodies may have the same chairman A city or county planning commission, or both, may also hold joint meetings with a regional or area planning commission.

65404. Two or more city, county, regional, or area planning commissions, or any combination of them, may make cooperative arrangements for a joint director of planning and for such other employees as may be required to operate a joint staff and may contract to render technical service to another commission in the same region or area Such arrangements or contracts shall be approved by the legislative bodies concerned.

Article 5 Authority for Financing

65430 The county or city legislative body shall provide the funds, equipment, and accommodations necessary for the work of the planning commission of the county or city. Such appropriation may include funds to be appropriated for the work of a regional or area planning commission. The expenditures of the commission, exclusive of gifts, shall be within the amounts appropriated for the respective purposes.

65431. As a part of its annual tax levy each county and city which has established a planning commission may levy and collect a special tax, not to exceed in any fiscal year two mills ($0.002) on the dollar ($1) of assessed valuation, for the purpose of defraying the lawful expenses incurred by the planning commission or planning department in carrying out the purposes of this chapter Each such county and city may make appropriations from other funds for such purpose.

65432. A regional, area, county, or city planning commission may accept gifts for any work authorized by law.

65433 The members of an area, county, or city commission, including advisory members and members of its staff, shall inform themselves on matters affecting the functions and duties of the commission For that purpose, and when authorized by the commission such members may attend planning conferences, meetings of planning executives, or hearings on planning legislation or matters affecting all or part of the master plan The reasonable traveling expenses incidental to such attendances shall be charges upon the funds allocated to the commission The commission or the department may hold and pay dues for membership in organizations engaged in the study of planning

Article 6 Authority for and Scope of Master Plans

65460 Each commission or planning department shall prepare and the commission shall adopt a comprehensive long-term, general plan for the physical development of the city, county, area, or region, and of any land outside its boundaries which in the commission's judgment bears relation to its planning The plan shall be known as the master plan.

65461 The master plan shall be so prepared that all or portions of it may be adopted by the legislative body as a basis for the development of the city, county, area, or region

65462. The master plan, with the accompanying maps, diagrams, charts, descriptive matter, and reports, shall include the plans specified by this article which are appropriate to the city, county, area, or region, and which may be made the basis for its physical development The master plan may comprise any, all, or any combination of the plans specified in this article, for all or any part of the city, county, area or region

65463 A master plan may include a conservation plan for the conservation, development, and utilization of natural resources, including water and its hydraulic force, forests, soils, rivers and other waters, harbors, fisheries, wild life, minerals, and other natural resources. A conservation plan may also cover:

(a) The reclamation of land and waters

(b) Flood control.

(c) Prevention and control of the pollution of streams and other waters

(d) Regulation of the use of land in stream channels and other areas required for the accomplishment of the conservation plan

(e) Prevention, control, and correction of the erosion of soils, beaches, and shores.

(f) Protection of watersheds.

(g) Prevention and control of the pollution of air

65464 A master plan may include a land use plan, consisting of an inventory and classification of natural land types and of existing land cover and uses, and comprehensive plans for the most desirable utilization of land

65465 A master plan may include a recreation plan, showing a comprehensive system of areas and public sites for recreation, including the following and, when practicable, their locations and proposed development:

(a) Natural reservations

(b) Parks

(c) Parkways

(d) Beaches.

(f) Other recreation areas

65466. A master plan may include a street and highway plan, showing the general locations, rights of way and recommended improvement of a comprehensive system of freeways, major thoroughfares, roads and streets and other traffic ways and parking facilities, and the delineation on the land thereof; the recommended treatment thereof, building setback lines, and the delineation of such systems on the land; and such other matters as may be related to the improvement of circulation in the community.

65467 A master plan may include a transportation plan, showing a comprehensive transportation system, including locations of rights of way, terminals, viaducts, and grade separations The plan may also include port, harbor, aviation, and related facilities

65468 A master plan may include a transit plan, showing a proposed system of transit lines, including rapid transit, street car, motor coach and trolley coach lines, and related facilities.

65469. A master plan may include a public services and facilities plan, showing general plans for sewerage, refuse disposal, drainage, and utilities, and rights of way, easements, and facilities for them.

65470. A master plan may include a public buildings plan, showing locations and arrangement of civic and community centers, public schools, libraries, police and fire stations, and all other public buildings, including their architecture and the landscape treatment of their grounds.

65471. A master plan may include a community design plan, consisting of standards and principles governing the subdivision of land and showing recommended designs for community and neighborhood development and redevelopment, including sites for schools, parks, playgrounds and other uses 65472. A master plan may include a housing plan, consisting of a survey and reports upon housing conditions and needs, quantitative and qualitative standards and plans for the elimination of substandard dwellings, the improvement of private housing and for provision of adequate sites for housing.

65473. A master plan may include a redevelopment plan comprising surveys, plans, procedure, and reports for the elimination of slums and blighted areas and for community redevelopment, including private and public housing sites, business and industrial sites, public building sites, and for other purposes authorized by law

65475. As part of the master plan the commission may prepare, receive, and adopt additional plans and reports dealing with other subjects which in its judgment relate to the physical development of the city, county, area, or region and nothing contained in this chapter shall be deemed to prohibit the preparation and adoption of any such subject as a part of the master plan, nor shall the people be denied action on a petition to prepare or adopt any such plans as parts of the master plan

65476. During the formulation of plans and reports intended for adoption by the planning commission, or consideration by the legislative body, the planning commissions shall inform and, to such an extent as may be necessary, confer and cooperate such school boards, departments, or agencies as may have jurisdiction over the territory or facilities for which plans are being made, to the end that maximum coordination of plans may be secured and properly located sites for all public purposes may be indicated on the master plan.

65477 Whenever a city planning commission has adopted a master plan or any major section or unit covering any land outside the boundaries of the city, which in the judgment of the commission bears relation to its planning, such plan, section or unit shall be certified to the planning commission of every county or city, the land of which is included in said plan.

65478 Whenever a county planning commission has adopted a master plan or any major section or unit covering any land adjoining or within a city such plan, section or unit shall be certified to the planning commission of such city or cities.

Article 7 Procedure for Adoption of Master Plan

65500 The planning commission or the planning department may prepare and the commission may adopt all or any part of the master plan or any subject of it for all or any part of the city, county, area, or region. Master regional plans shall be coordinated with similar plans of adjoining regions, and area, county, and city master plans shall be coordinated so as to fit properly into the master plan for the region.

65501 Before adopting all or part of the master plan or any amendment to it, the commission shall hold at least one public hearing.

65502. Notice of the time and place of the hearing shall be given by at least one publication in a newspaper of general circulation in the city, county or in each city or county in an area, at least 10 days before the hearing

65503. The adoption of the master plan, or of any amendment, extension, or addition to it, shall be by resolution of the commission carried by the affirmative votes of a majority of its total voting members

65504. The resolution shall refer expressly to the maps and descriptive and other matter intended by the commission to constitute the plan or amendment, addition, or extension of it The action shall be recorded on the map and plan and descriptive matter by the identifying signatures of the chairman of the commission, and of such other officials as the commission may designate

65505 When changed conditions or further studies by the commission require, the commission may amend, extend, or add to all or part of the master plan in the manner provided in this article for its adoption

65506 A copy of any part, amendment, extension of, or addition to the master plan adopted by a county or city planning commission shall be certified to the legislative body of the city or county.

65507. A copy of any part, amendment, extension of, or addition to, the master plan adopted by an area or regional planning commission shall be certified to each county and city planning commission and to the legislative bodies of each county and city within the area or region.

65508. The adoption of the master plan, or any amendment, extension or addition to it, as certified by a regional an area, a county or city planning commission shall be by resolution of the legislative body or bodies affected and shall be carried by the affirmative votes of a majority of the total voting members of each legislative body.

65509 Before adopting all or any part of, or amendment or addition to, a master plan, the county or city legislative body shall hold at least one public hearing Notice of the time and place of the hearing shall be published at least once in a newspaper of general circulation in the city or county at least 10 days before the hearing 65510. In adopting all or any part of, or amendment or addition to, a master plan adopted by the planning commission, the legislative body shall not make any change or addition until the proposed change or addition has been referred to the planning commission for a report and a copy of the report has been filed with the legislative body. Failure of the planning commission to report within 40 days after the reference or such longer period as may be designated by the legislative body, shall be deemed to be approval of the proposed change or addition.

65512. The legislative body shall first refer the proposed change or addition to the planning commission for a report Before making a report, the planning commission shall hold at least one hearing on the proposed change or addition It shall give notice of any such hearing, pursuant to the procedure prescribed by this article for the adoption of the master plan or any part, amendment, or addition by the planning commission

65513 Failure of the planning commission to report to the legislative body on a proposed change or addition within 90 days after the reference or such longer period as may be designated by the legislative body, shall be deemed to be approval of the proposed change or addition by the planning commission

65514. After the receipt of such report, the legislative body shall hold at least one public hearing on the proposed change or addition Notice of the time and place of the hearing shall be published at least once in a newspaper of general circulation in the city or county at least 10 days before the hearing.

65515 The master plan or any part, amendment, or addition shall be endorsed to show that it has been adopted by the legislative body

Article 8 Administration of Master Plan

65540. After the county or city legislative body has adopted all or part of a master plan for the region, area, county, or city, or for any major section or district of it, the planning commission or the planning department shall investigate and make recommendations to the legislative body upon reasonable and practical means for putting into effect the master plan or part, in order that it will serve as a pattern and guide for the orderly physical growth and development of the region, area, county, or city and as a basis for the efficient expenditure of its funds relating to the subjects of the master plan The measures recommended may include plans, regulations, financial reports, and capital budgets.

65541 After the adoption of all or part of the master plan, by the county or city or area planning commission, the commission shall render an annual report to the respective county or city legislative bodies concerned on the status of the plan and progress in its application

65542. Each annual report shall be prepared pursuant to the outlines and uniform rules established by any planning board of the State of California. A copy of each report shall be filed with the board

65543 Each planning commission or planning department shall endeavor to promote public interest in and understanding of the master plan, and regulations relating to it.

65544 Each planning commission or planning department shall consult and advise with public officials and agencies, public utility companies, civic, educational, professional, and other organizations, and citizens generally with relation to carrying out of the master plans

65545 Upon request all public officials shall furnish to the planning commission or planning department within a reasonable time such available information as required for the work of such commission or department

65546. In the performance of their functions, each planning commission and its members or planning department, officers and employees may enter upon any land and make examinations and surveys and place and maintain necessary monuments and marks

65547 Each planning commission and department has the powers necessary to enable it to fulfill and carry out its planning functions.

65548 By general or special rule the body creating the planning commission may provide that other matters shall be referred to the planning commission before final action is taken by the county or city body or officer with final authority on the matter, and that final action shall not be taken until the planning commission has submitted its report or has had reasonable time, to be fixed in the rule, to submit the report.

65549. In reporting on such other matters the planning commission or the planning department may make such investigations, maps and reports, and recommendations relating to the planning and development of the region, area, county, or city as it deems desirable.

65550. At least three months before the end of each fiscal year each county or city officer, department, board, or commission, and each governmental body, commission, or board whose jurisdiction lies entirely within the county or city, whose functions include recommending, preparing plans for, or constructing, major public works, shall submit to the respective county or city planning commission or planning department a list of the proposed public works recommended

65551. The county or city planning commission or planning department shall list and classify all such recommendations and shall prepare a coordinated program of proposed public works for the ensuing fiscal year. The commission shall recommend the program to the chief executive officer or to the legislative body of the county or city and to other bodies, officers, departments, boards or commissions which have jurisdiction over the recommending, planning, or constructing of the public works

65552. Whenever a county or city planning commission and a county or city legislative body has adopted a master plan for the city or county, or for any major section or district of it, no street, square, park, or other public ground or open space shall be acquired by dedication or otherwise, no street shall be disposed of, closed, or abandoned, and no public building or structure shall be constructed or authorized in the area to which the master plan applies, until its location, character, and extent has been submitted to and reported upon by the planning commission having jurisdiction.

65553. If the authorization, acquisition, financing, or acceptance of such street, square, park or other public ground or open space, or the construction or authorization of such public building or structure, is vested by law or charter in some governmental body, commission, or board other than the legislative body, such body, commission, or board shall first submit to the planning commission having jurisdiction, the location, character, and extent of the proposed public improvement for report.

65555 Failure of the planning commission to act within 40 days after the reference or such longer period as may be designated by the legislative body or such other governmental body, board, or commission, after the date of the official submission of the location, character, and extent of such improvement shall be deemed to be an approval.

Article 9. Authority for and Scope of Precise Plans

65600. From time to time, the planning commission or the planning department may or, if so directed by the legislative body shall prepare precise plans based on the master plan and drafts of such regulations, programs, and legislation as may in its judgment be required for the systematic execution of the master plan and the commission may recommend such plans and measures to the legislative body for adoption. The adoption of such precise plans or regulations by the legislative body shall give them the force of law, to promote the public health, safety, and general welfare.

65602. A precise plan may include zoning plans, including maps and regulations for the control of the uses of land and buildings, the height and bulk of buildings, the open spaces about buildings, the area of lots or other building sites, the density and distribution of population and such administration, organization, and procedure as may be necessary for the administration, adjustment, reclassifying, variance, and enforcement of such plans and regulations.

65603 A precise plan may include public site plans, showing areas required or deemed necessary for all public sites, including schools, parks, and other recreational areas, trails, public buildings and service facilities, in order to regulate building developments upon such sites and to provide for their acquisition for public development and use

65604 A precise plan may include thoroughfare plans, showing the lines of existing and future street, highway, freeway, and other public rights of way necessary for the conduct of traffic, in order to regulate the placement of future buildings with respect to such lines, and in order to provide for the reservation for limited periods of time or for the public acquisition of street, highway, or freeway rights of way or development rights within the lines of projected thoroughfares.

65605. A precise plan may include street and highway naming and numbering plans, in order to establish the official names of streets and highways, in order to remove conflicts, duplication, and uncertainty among such names, and in order to provide an orderly system for the numbering of buildings and properties, including such rules as may be required for the posting of notices, hearings, and related matters.

65607 A precise plan may include tree planting plans, in order to establish public control over and systematize the planting and maintenance of trees along streets and highways and other landscape effects related thereto.

65608. A precise plan may include building setback line plans, showing yards and open spaces to be required and preserved in the interest of public health and safety along streets and highways.

65610. A precise plan may include subdivision regulations, including general and specific rules for the subdivision of land and of lots intended for sale or use, and general or specific rules for the dedication of land for public streets and highways, and regulations governing the submission of tentative and final maps to the planning commission or the planning department, and to the legislative body, and regulations governing the review and approval or disapproval of such maps prior to recordation.

65611. A precise plan may include redevelopment plans

65612 The planning commission or the planning department may prepare and submit to the legislative body and the legislative body may adopt and designate as precise plans or regulations, or both, such other measures as may be required to insure the execution of the master plan.

Article 10 Procedure for Adoption of Precise Plans

65650. Before recommending a precise plan or regulation to the legislative body or any amendment to it, for adoption, the planning commission shall hold at least one public hearing.

65651 Notice of the time and place of the hearing shall be given by at least one publication in a newspaper of general circulation in the city or county at least 10 days before the hearing, and by such other means as the commission deems necessary.

65652. The adoption of any precise plan or regulation, or of any amendment to it, shall be by resolution of the commission carried by the affirmative votes of a majority of its total voting members.

65653. A copy of any precise plan, regulation, or amendment recommended pursuant to this article shall be submitted to the legislative body and shall be accompanied by a report of findings, summaries of hearings, and recommendations of the planning commission.

65654. Upon receipt of a copy of any proposed precise plan or regulation based upon a master plan or amendment of such plan or regulation the legislative body may by ordinance or resolution, adopt the plan in such form as it determines. Before adopting the proposed precise plan or regulation the legislative body shall hold at least one public hearing Notice of the time and place of the hearing shall be published at least once in a newspaper of general circulation in the city or county at least 10 days before the hearing Such plan or regulation, as adopted, shall be designated as a precise plan or regulation.

65655 The legislative body shall not make a change in any proposed precise plan, regulation, or amendment thereto recommended by the planning commission until the proposed change has been referred to the planning commission for a report and a copy of the report has been filed with the legislative body.

65656 When it deems it to be for the public interest, the legislative body may adopt an ordinance or resolution establishing any of the precise plans or regulations specified in this article.

65657. The legislative body shall first refer the proposal to establish such precise plan or regulation to the planning commission for a report. Before making a report the planning commission shall hold at least one public hearing in the same manner as heretofore prescribed in this article.

65658. The failure of the planning commission to report within 40 days after the reference or such period as may be designated by the legislative body shall be deemed to be approval of the proposed change or ordinance or resolution

65659 Nothing in this chapter applies to the adoption or amendment of any ordinance by the legislative body, whether or not it may relate to the subjects mentioned in Article 10 of this chapter, except ordinances expressly adopting or amending a precise plan initiated pursuant to this chapter, and except that any ordinance imposing any regulation covered by Chapter 3 of this title shall be adopted as provided in said Chapter 3

Article 11. Administration of Precise Plans and Regulations

65700. The legislative body may determine and establish administrative rules and procedures for the application and enforcement of precise plans and regulations, and may assign or delegate such administrative functions, powers, and duties to the planning commission or the planning department as may be required.

65702. The legislative body of any county or city may designate the planning commission as the advisory agency with respect to the approval of subdivision maps

65703. No city or county shall improve any street, or lay or authorize sewers or connections or other improvements to be laid in any street within any territory for which the legislative body has adopted a precise thoroughfare plan or a neighborhood development plan until the matter has been referred to the planning commission for a report and a copy of the report has been filed with the legislative body unless one of the following conditions applies:

(a) The street has been accepted, opened, or has otherwise received the legal status of a public street prior to the adoption of the plan.

(b) It corresponds with streets shown on the plan.

(c) It corresponds with streets, highways, and freeways shown on a subdivision map or record of survey approved by the legislative body.

(d) It corresponds with streets, highways, and freeways shown on a subdivision map previously approved by the planning commission.

65704. Failure of the commission to report on the matter within 40 days after the reference or such longer period as may be designated by the legislative body shall be deemed to be approval of such matter.

CHAPTER 4 ZONING REGULATIONS

Article 1. Adoption of Regulations

65800. Pursuant to the provisions of this chapter, the legislative body of any county or city, by ordinance may:

(a) Regulate the use of buildings, structures, and land for agriculture, industry, business, residence and other purposes.

(b) Regulate location, height, bulk, number of stories, and size of buildings and structures; the sizes of yards, courts and other open spaces; the percentage of a lot which may be occupied by a building or structure.

(c) Regulate the density and distribution of population.

(d) Establish and maintain building setback lines along any street, highway, freeway, road, or alley.

(e) Create civic districts around civic centers, public parks, and public buildings and grounds for the purpose of enabling a planning commission to review all plans for buildings or structures within the district prior to the issuance of a building permit in order to assure an orderly development in the vicinity of such public sites and buildings.

65801. For such purposes the legislative body may divide a city, a county, or portions thereof into zones of the number, shape, and area it deems best suited to carry out the purpose of this chapter.

65802. All such regulations shall be uniform for each class or kind of building or use of land throughout each zone, but the regulation in one type of zone may differ from those in other types of zones.

65803 Except as otherwise provided in this article, a zoning ordinance shall be initiated and adopted in the same manner as a precise plan may be initiated and adopted pursuant to Chapter 2. This section does not require the adoption of a master plan prior to either the initiation or adoption of a zoning ordinance

65804 Except as otherwise provided in this article, an amendment to a zoning ordinance which amendment changes any property from one zone to another or imposes any regulation listed in Section 65700 not theretofore imposed or removes or modifies any such regulation theretofore imposed shall be initiated and adopted in the same manner as required for the initiation and adoption of the original zoning ordinance

65805. If the planning commission mails in the United States mail a written notice of a hearing on a change in or addition to any zoning ordinance, not less than five days prior to such hearing, to every person whose name and address appears on the latest available assessment roll or other list approved by the legislative body as an owner of any property within the territory covered by such proposed change and within one hundred feet of the outer boundaries thereof, the legislative body may enact an ordinance adopting any change or addition recommended by the planning commission without, itself, holding any hearing thereon.

65806 If the planning commission, or the department of planning, in good faith is conducting studies for the purpose of, or holding a hearing for the purpose of, or has held a hearing and has recommended to the legislative body the adoption of any zoning ordinance or amendment or addition thereto, and the legislative body finds that before the effective date of any ordinance which may be adopted as a result thereof, the establishment of one or more uses is threatened which will be contrary to, and defeat in whole or in part, the purpose of such proposed ordinance, such legislative body may adopt, without notice or hearing, a temporary interim ordinance prohibiting such and any other uses which may be in conflict with such zoning ordinance.

65807. Except as otherwise provided in this article any amendment to a zoning ordinance may be initiated and adopted as other ordinances are initiated and adopted.

65808. If there is no city planning commission the legislative body of such city shall do all things required or authorized by this chapter of the city planning commission. This section does not apply to any county.

Article 2. Administration

65850. The legislative body may create either a board of zoning adjustment or the office of zoning administrator

65851. The provisions of this article as to the powers and duties of either the board of adjustment or zoning administrator apply only insofar as not in conflict with the provisions of any local ordinance.

65852. The zoning administrator shall have all the powers and duties of a board of zoning adjustment. If there is neither a board of zoning adjustment nor a zoning administrator, the planning commission shall have all the powers and duties of a board of zoning adjustment.

65853. The board of zoning adjustment in appropriate cases and subject to appropriate conditions and safeguards as provided by the zoning ordinance, may hear and decide:

(a) Applications for special exception, conditional uses or other permits of any kind or nature.

(b) In specific cases, applications for variances from terms of the ordinance as will not be contrary to its intent nor to the public interest, safety, health, and welfare; where due to special conditions or exceptional characteristics of such property, or its location or surroundings, a literal enforcement of the ordinance would result in practical difficulties or unnecessary hardships.

(c) Hear and decide appeals where it is alleged by the appellant, there is error in any order, requirement, permit, decision, or determination made by an administrative official in the administration or enforcement of this chapter or any ordinance adopted pursuant to it.

65854. The board of zoning adjustment also may:

(a) Exercise such other powers as may be granted by local ordinance.

(b) Adopt all rules and procedures necessary or convenient for the conduct of its business

65855. In exercising the powers granted by Section 65753(c) such board may, in conformity with this chapter, reverse or affirm, wholly or partly or may modify the order, requirement, decision, or determination appealed from, and may make such order, requirement, decision, or determination as should be made, and, to that end shall have all the powers of the officer from whom the appeal is taken.

65856. Appeals to the board of adjustment may be taken by any person aggrieved, or by any officer, department, board, or bureau of the city or county affected by any decision of the administrative official. Such appeal shall be taken within a reasonable time, as provided by rules of the board, by filing with the officer from whom the appeal is taken, and with the board of adjustment, a notice of appeal specifying the grounds The officer from whom the appeal is taken shall forthwith transmit to the board all the papers constituting the record upon which the action appealed from was taken 65857 An appeal stays all proceedings in furtherance of the action appealed from, unless the officer from whom the appeal is taken certifies to the board of adjustment, after the notice of appeal shall have been filed with him that, by reason of facts stated in the certificate, a stay would, in his opinion, cause imminent peril to life and property. In such case proceedings shall not be stayed except by a restraining order which may be granted by the board of adjustment or by a court of record on application, and notice to the officer from whom the appeal is taken, and due cause shown.

SEC. 3 The Conservation and Planning Act and Article 4, Chapter 10, Part 2, Division 3, Title 4, of the Government Code are hereby repealed Any ordinances passed pursuant to such Article 4, or its predecessor, prior to the effective date of this act are continued in force until repealed pursuant to law.

SEC 4 Section 1 of this act becomes operative only if Title 7 of the Government Code is enacted by the Legislature at its 1951 Regular Session and in such case at the same time as said Title 7 takes effect."

Amendment No. 14

On page 2, line 22, of said bill, strike out "planning coordinator", and insert "director of planning".

Amendment No. 15

On page 2 of said bill, strike out lines 24 to 26, inclusive, and insert "65141. The board may accept grants from the Federal or State Governments or their agencies, and may accept gifts for the purposes of state planning.

65142. The board may adopt by a majority vote of the members, reports, findings and recommendations which may be submitted to the Legislature, the proper legislative authorities or other agencies for approval and adoption.

65143. The board may make investigations and studies of the resources, needs, requirements, and opportunities for the development of the State and its various areas and submit recommendations to the Governor concerning programs and action by agencies of state, local, and federal governments to aid future growth and development.

65144 The board may prepare, in collaboration with other state departments, general comprehensive plans for the economic and physical development of the State.

65145 The board may

(a) Compile and disseminate physical planning standards to other state departments and to local government agencies

(b) Assist, upon request, local planning agencies, relating to sound procedure and to broad planning practices.

(c) Promote public interest and understanding of state plans, particularly of their relation to federal, regional, area, county, and city plans

65146 The board shall submit an annual report to the Governor on planning progress by State and local Government agencies.

65147. The board may make recommendations to the Governor relative to the research and planning functions of the board or of other state departments, and to legislation for carrying out state plans

65148. In order to provide coordinated planning administration the Governor may from time to time submit recommendations for adoption by the board, the several city, county, area, and regional planning commissions, and by the local legislative authorities in order to promote and effectuate the orderly development of the State and to expedite the adoption of coordinated policies by local legislative authorities acting upon their own discretion.

The board shall transmit the recommendations of the Governor to the proper agencies 65149 The board shall ascertain from each state department, board or other agency, and where possible from federal agencies, all contemplated improvements or projects and where advisable may recommend that such improvements or projects be included in the regional, area, county, or city master plan.

65150 The board shall make available to each state department, board, or other agency all regional and county master plans and information concerning other state projects. Each state department, board, or agency shall give consideration to such other state projects and to the regional and county master plans, so that, when in its judgment it is practical and feasible, its projects may be properly coordinated with those of all other governmental agencies

65151 The board may make rules providing for the time, manner, and cases in which regional, area, county, and city planning commissions shall submit annual reports and other information to the board for review and suggested revision

65152 The board may collect, assemble, and coordinate statistical and research data from the various state departments and act as a clearing house for the dissemination of statistics to state departments, to federal and local government, and to similar agencies in other states.

65153. The board with the approval of the Governor or the Legislature may join with agencies of the Federal Government and other states in preparation and adoption of interstate regional plans which shall be submitted to the Legislature for approval

65154 The board may cooperate with any interested persons or organizations in devising means to conserve and develop the resources of the State

65155. All public boards and officials shall, upon request, furnish to the board, within a reasonable time, such available information as may be required for its work.

65156 In general, the board may act as a coordinating service agency relative to statistical, research, and physical planning matters, in cooperation with other state, federal, local government, and private agencies, for the purpose of promoting the conservation and development of the entire State in an orderly manner."

CONSIDERATION OF DAILY FILE (RESUMED)

CONSIDERATION OF HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 96

By Messrs. Kilpatrick, Morris, Munnell, Burke, Hahn, and Burkhalter:

House Resolution No. 96

Relating to memorializing the Federal Government to deport criminals who are aliens or naturalized by fraud

WHEREAS, Organized crime in the United States is increasing at an alarming rate; and

WHEREAS, The syndication of crime is on an interstate basis, making it difficult for the several states to uproot the out-of-state sources or leaders, with the result that state convictions for crime bring only a replacement from a national syndicate; and

WHEREAS, The leaders of national crime syndicates are often free from personal participation in the elements of a punishable crime; and

WHEREAS, Experience has shown that many of these leaders and underlings are aliens or have obtained their citizenship by fraud; and

WHEREAS, Such persons are abusing the privileges of entry or naturalization, and are undesirable persons to have within the United States; and

WHEREAS, The Federal Government is the proper sovereign power to rid ourselves of such undesirables through the immigration and naturalization powers of the Federal Government; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the Congress of the United States, the President of the United States, the Department of Justice and the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization be memorialized to take whatever action is necessary under Title 8, §§ 155 and 738 United States Code, and related sections, or enact appropriate legislation, to effect the deportation of proven members of a crime syndicate or criminal organization, or who have been convicted of a felony, who are either aliens or have obtained naturalization by fraud; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted by the Chief Clerk of the Assembly to the President and Vice President of the United States, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Attorney General of the United States and to the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization

Resolution read, and adopted.

Amendment No. 1

In line 24 of the title of the printed bill, as amended in the Assembly March 14, 1951, after "association" insert: "and to amend Sections 5051, 5651, 6001, 6702, 6703, 6704, 7600, 7602, 7603, 7606, 8500 and 9069 of, and to add Sections 6010, 6203.5, 6411, 7612, 7613, 7614, 9013, 9055.5 and Article 5 comprising Section 5700 to Chapter 3 of Division 2 of the Financial Code, all relating to building and loan associations"

PRINTER'S NOTE—There being no 7-point strikeout type available, the material which should appear in strikeout type in the following amendment is indicated by being enclosed within brackets.

Amendment No. 2

On page 18 of said bill, after line 28, insert

"SEC. 18. Section 5051 of the Financial Code is amended to read:

5051. "Advertisement" includes advertisement, circular, pamphlet, prospectus, letterhead, circular letter, newspaper, billboard, sign, and [oral] statements broadcast by radio or television.

SEC. 19. Section 5651 of said code is amended to read:

5651. No document changing the name of an association, or setting forth the new name of an association, shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of State unless there is attached to such document a certificate of the commissioner approving the new name proposed for the association. Such certificate shall only be issued by the commissioner, after and upon the same notice, proceedings, upon the same grounds, and subject to the same rules, presumptions and restrictions as are set forth in Article 1 of this chapter in relation to the matters of the name of an association. Notice and hearing shall not be required, however, if the change in name consists only in omitting, including or substituting one or more of the following words: "the," "and," "building," "loan," "savings," and "association".

SEC. 20. Section 6001 of said code is amended to read:

6001 The application for a branch license shall be accompanied by a filing fee of one hundred dollars ($100), shall be in such form as the commissioner requires, and shall include an itemized statement of the estimated receipts and expenditures of the association in connection with such branch for the first year or such longer period as the commissioner requires, and a showing that the public convenience and advantage will be promoted by the operation of such branch.

SEC. 21 Section 6010 is added to said code, to read:

6010. An association which maintains one or more branch offices shall give to each branch office a specific designation by name and include in the designation the word "branch" and shall prominently display the designation at the place of business of the branch.

SEC. 22 Article 5 is added to Chapter 3 of said code, to read:

Article 5. Change of Location of Offices

5700. An association shall not change the location of its principal office or of any branch office except with the approval of the commissioner. If the proposed change is from one city to another the commissioner shall, and in any other case the commissioner may, hold a hearing upon the proposed change. If a hearing is held the commissioner shall mail notice of such hearing to each association in this State at least 10 days before such hearing, and the association requesting the commissioner's approval shall pay him a fee of one hundred dollars ($100) before such notices are mailed.

SEC. 23 Section 8500 of said code is amended to read:

8500. If the value of the assets of an association after deducting the amount of liabilities of the association, including the value of its outstanding investment certificates and shares, is less than the aggregate par value of the association's outstanding stock [or the investment certificate and withdrawable share reserve required for such association by Article 1 of Chapter 9 of this part which reserve shall be computed without giving effect to Section 6903, whichever is greater,] the capital of the association shall be deemed to be impaired for the purposes of this article.

SEC. 24. Section 7600 of said code is amended to read:

7600. Associations may issue shares or investment certificates to a minor of any age and receive payments thereon by or for such minor. [If] Such minor [is 14 years of age or over, he] is entitled to withdraw, transfer, or pledge any shares or certificates owned by him and to receive from the association all dividends, interest, or other money due thereon in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as an adult. The receipt or acquittance of a minor who is 14 years of age or over constitutes a valid release and discharge of the association for the payment of dividends, interest, or other money due to such minors.

SEC 25 Section 7602 of said code is amended to read:

7602. When shares or investment certificates are issued in the name of two or more persons whether minor or adult as joint tenants or in form to be paid to any of them or the survivors of them, such shares or certificates and all dues paid thereon become the property of such persons as joint tenants.

SEC. 26. Section 7603 of said code is amended to read:

7603. Shares or investment certificates owned in joint tenancy and all dividends and interest thereon are held for the exclusive use of the joint tenants and may be paid to any of them during their lifetime or to [any] the survivor or any one of the survivors of them after the death of one or more of the joint tenants. By written instructions of all joint tenants given to the association, they may require the signatures of more than one of such persons during their lifetimes or of more than one of the survivors after the death of any one of them on any notice of withdrawal, request for withdrawal, check endorsement or receipt, in which case the association shall pay withdrawals, dividends and interest only in accordance with such instructions, but no such instructions shall limit the right of the sole survivor or of all of the survivors to receive withdrawal payments, dividends and interest [The] Payment as provided in this section and the receipt or acquittance of any joint tenant is a valid and sufficient release and discharge of such association for all payments made on account of shares or certificates owned in joint tenancy prior to the receipt by such association of notice in writing from any one of them not to make payments in accordance with the terms of such shares or certificates or of such written instructions. After receipt of such notice an association may refuse, without liability, to pay withdrawals, dividends or interest pending determination of the rights of the parties

SEC. 27. Section 7606 of said code is amended to read:

7606. When a person holding shares or investment certificates as trustee or guardian dies and no notice of the terms, revocation, or termination of the trust or guardianship is given in writing to the association, the withdrawal or other value of the shares or investment certificates or any part thereof may be paid to the beneficiary or ward. If no beneficiary or ward has been designated in writing to the association, the withdrawal or other value or any part thereof may be paid to the trustee's or guardian's executor or administrator. Such payment by any association is a valid and sufficient release and discharge of the association for the payment whether or not such payment is made to a minor.

SEC. 28. Section 7612 is added to said code, to read.

7612. Notice to any association of an adverse claim to shares or investment certificates standing on its books to the credit of, or to personal property held for the account of, any person may be disregarded until and unless such adverse claimant either (1) procures and serves upon the association at the office at which the account is carried or the property held a restraining order, injunction or other appropriate order against the association from a court of competent jurisdiction in an action in which the adverse claimant and all persons in whose name such account stands or for whose account such property is held are parties, or (11) executes and delivers to the association at the office at which the account is carried or the property held a bond in form and with surety acceptable to it and in an amount fixed by the association, but which amount in no event need be more than twice the value of the shares or investment certificates or more than twice the market value of the property against which the adverse claim is made, indemnifying it and also all persons in whose names such account stands or for whose account such property is held, against all liability, loss, damage, costs and expenses arising out of the refusal to permit withdrawal from such account or to pay dividends or interest thereon or to deliver such property. Unless such restraining order, injunction or other appropriate order is obtained, or such bond is given, the association, notwithstanding such notice, may honor notices of intention to withdraw and may pay withdrawals, dividends and interest to the person or persons to whose credit the account stands or may deliver such property to or upon the order of the person for whose account such property is held, without any liability on the part of the association.

SEC. 29. Section 7613 is added to said code, to read:

7613. If an adverse claimant delivers to the association at the office at which the account is carried or the property held his affidavit stating that of his own knowledge the person to whose credit the account stands or for whose account the property is held is a fiduciary for the adverse claimant and that such fiduciary is about to misappropriate the account or the property and stating the facts upon which the claim of a fiduciary relationship is based, the association may refuse to pay withdrawals, dividends or interest on the account or may refuse to deliver such property until the adverse claim is finally adjudicated or released, without liability on its part and without liability for the sufficiency or truth of the facts alleged in the affidavit

SEC. 30. Section 7614 is added to said code, to read:

7614. The provisions of Sections 7612 and 7613 are applicable even though the name of the person appearing on the association's books to whose credit the account stands or for whose account the property is held is modified by a qualifying or descriptive term such as "agent," "trustee" or other word or phrase indicating that such person may not be the owner in his own right of the account or property.

SEC. 31. Section 6702 of said code is amended to read:

6702. An association may invest in, hold, buy, and sell the following:

(a) Real property used or to be used primarily as the principal office or branch of the association. Except as provided in Section 6703 no association issuing either stock or investment certificates or both shall invest in such real property more than one-half of the sum of its aggregate paid-up nonwithdrawable capital and any surplus and reserve which is not subject to distribution to the shareholders or stockholders except upon dissolution or liquidation.

(b) Furniture, fixtures, furnishings, [and] equipment, and leasehold improvements necessary or proper for the business of the association, or for use in connection with properties owned by or securing loans of the association. Except as provided in Section 6703 no association issuing either stock or investment certificates or both shall invest in furniture, fixtures, furnishings, [and] equipment, and leasehold improvements for its offices, more than [10 percent] 20 percent, or if it has no real property used or to be used primarily as its principal office or branch, 30 percent of the sum of its aggregate paid-up nonwithdrawable capital and any surplus and reserve which is not subject to distribution to the shareholders or stockholders except upon dissolution or liquidation

(c) United States Government bonds and treasury certificates, or any bonds, debentures, notes, or other obligations guaranteed by the United States of America.

6411. An association shall not issue shares or investment certificates, or pay withdrawals, elsewhere than at the principal office or a branch of such association

SEC 36 Section 9013 is added to said code, to read:

9013. Claims for damages resulting from the disaffirmance of an executory contract or lease by the commissioner may be filed and allowed. No claim of a landlord for damages resulting from the disaffirmance of an unexpired lease of real property or under any covenant of such lease shall be allowed in an amount exceeding the rent reserved by the lease, without acceleration, for the year succeeding the date of the surrender of the premises plus the amount of any unpaid accrued rent without acceleration. Any such claim must be filed within 30 days of the date of such disaffirmance or within the time that claims must be filed under Sections 9051 and 9052, whichever is longer.

SEC. 37. Section 9055.5 is added to said code, to read.

9055.5. Claims of holders of investment certificates and of shares shall bear interest, from the date when interest or dividends were last paid or credited on such certificates or shares, at the rate or rates of return on investment certificates and shares determined from time to time by the commissioner to be the rate or rates of return on investment certificates or shares paid or credited for the period or periods in question by the largest number of associations in this State. Claims of other creditors shall bear interest at the rate provided by law on judgments from the date the commissioner takes possession of the business, property and assets of the association

SEC. 38. Section 9069 of said code is amended to read:

9069. After complying with Section 9068 the commissioner shall pay all claims approved in the sum of ten dollars ($10) or more, other than the claims of shareholders and stockholders, without distinction or preference as between the claims of certificate holders and other creditors except as provided in Section 9055.5 as to the respective rates of interest thereon. Thereafter the commissioner shall distribute and pay dividends in liquidation first to the shareholders until their claims are fully paid or such assets or funds are exhausted, and second, if any such assets or funds remain, to the stockholders until such assets or funds are exhausted. In the case of any association in which shareholders were prior to August 29, 1933, granted the right and option by the association to exchange their shares for investment certificates of equal value the commissioner shall distribute and pay dividends in liquidation to such shareholders without distinction or preference as between the claims of such shareholders and the claims of certificate holders and other creditors.

SEC. 39. Sections 18 to 38 inclusive of this act become operative only if Division 2 of the Financial Code is enacted by the Legislature at its 1951 Regular Session, and in such case at the same time as said Division 2 takes effect, at which time Sections 1.01, 1.03, 2.05, 2.07, 7.06, 8.03, 8.04, 8.05, 9.02, 9.17, 10.03a, 12.09, 13.13, and 13.16 of the act cited in the title as amended by this act, and Sections 2.11, 8.14, 11.06, and 12.13 of said act as added by this act, are repealed."

Amendments read, and adopted.

Bill ordered reprinted, and re-engrossed.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolution was offered:

By Messrs. McCollister, Clarke, Dills, Thomas, and Evans:

House Resolution No. 105

Relative to the creation of the Assembly Committee on Interstate Cooperation

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, As follows:

1. The Assembly Committee on Interstate Cooperation is hereby created and authorized and directed to ascertain, study and analyze all facts relating to cooperation between this State and the other states and with the Federal Government, including but not limited to the operation, effect, administration, enforcement and needed revision of any and all laws in any way bearing upon or relating to the subject of this resolution, and to report thereon to the Assembly, including in the reports its recommendations for appropriate legislation.

2. The committee shall consist of the same five Members of the Assembly as authorized by Section 8001 of the Government Code

3. The committee is authorized to act during this session of the Legislature, including any recess, and after final adjournment until the commencement of the 1953 Regular Session, with authority to file its final report not later than the fifteenth legislative day of that session

4. The committee and its members shall have and exercise all of the rights, duties and powers conferred upon investigating committees and their members by the provisions of the Joint Rules of the Senate and Assembly and of the Standing Rules of the Assembly as they are adopted and amended from time to time at this session, which provisions are incorporated herein and made applicable to this committee and its members.

5. The committee has the following additional powers and duties:

(a) To contract with such other agencies, public or private, as it deems necessary for the rendition and affording of such services, facilities, studies and reports to the committee as will best assist it to carry out the purposes for which it is created.

(b) To cooperate with and secure the cooperation of county, city, city and county, and other local law enforcement agencies in investigating any matter within the scope of this resolution and to direct the sheriff of any county to serve subpenas, orders and other process issued by the committee.

(c) To report its findings and recommendations to the Legislature and to the people from time to time and at any time, not later than herein provided.

(d) To do any and all other things necessary or convenient to enable it fully and adequately to exercise its powers, perform its duties, and accomplish the objects and purposes of this resolution.

6. The committee, and any subcommittee when so authorized by the committee, may meet and act without as well as within the State of California, and is authorized to leave the State in the performance of its duties.

7. The sum of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby made available from the Contingent Fund of the Assembly for the expenses of the committee and its members and for any charges, expenses or claims it may incur under this resolution, to be paid from the said Contingent Fund and disbursed, after certification by the chairman of the committee, upon warrants drawn by the State Controller upon the State Treasurer.

Resolution read, and ordered referred to the Committee on Rules.

Chief Clerk of the Assembly
State Capitol, Sacramento, California

DEAR MR. OHNIMUS: I would appreciate it very much if you would advise the Members of the Assembly that this office would be pleased to have our Dr Bowman consult with any of the members who contemplate destroying any of their records

We find in many cases that members have reports and papers in their possession which are no longer of value to them but would be of value to the Central Records Depository in completing certain files.

Sincerely,

FRANK M. JORDAN, Secretary of State

ROLL CALL

The roll was called, and the following answered to their names:

Babbage, Beck, Belotti, Berry, Brady, Brown, Burke, Burkhalter, Caldecott, Chapel, Clarke, Cloyed, Collier, George D. Collins, Condon, Connolly, Conrad, Cooke, Crowley, Davis, Dickey, Dills, Dolwig, Doyle, Dunn, Elliott, Erwin, Evans, Fleury, Gaffney, Geddes, Grant, Grunsky, Gubser, Hagen, Hahn, Hansen, Hawkins, Henderson, Hinckley, Hollibaugh, Kelly, Kilpatrick, Kirkwood, Kloeksiem, Lanterman, Levering, Lincoln, Lindsay, Lipscomb, Lowrey, Luckel, Lyon, Maloney, McCarthy, McCollister, McFall, McGee, McMillan, Meyers, Morris, Moss, Munnell, Niehouse, Parker, Porter, Rosenthal, Rumford, Shaw, Sherwin, Silliman, Smith, Stanley, Thomas, Tomlinson, Waters, and Mr. Speaker—77.

Quorum present.

PRAYER

Upon invitation of the Speaker, the following prayer was offered by the Rev. L. Sylvester Odom:

Our Gracious Father, Creator and Sustainer of the Universe, giver of every good and perfect gift, fount of all wisdom, source of all power, we approach Thee in this morning hour, with attitudes of penitence, praise, and thanksgiving. Penitence, when we remember how many have been our failures, how grievous have been our faults, we have not walked in Thy paths, we have not borne one another's burdens, we have not really loved one another, and yet, Thou hath loved us. So we come with praise and thanksgiving, when we remember that Thy movement towards us has always been with understanding, with compassion, with comforting care.

We invoke thy special blessings upon this august assemblage. Speak Father, to these chosen representatives of the people of this great State. Give to them the wisdom to see the right, and the courage to do it.

We come, O Father, at a moment of great anxiety in our world. Standing yet in the shadow of the greatest war that mankind has ever known, even yet bruised and scarred by the terrible realities of total warfare, we have not found a formula for peace. Lead us, O God, and those who are clothed with authority over us, from the menacing anxieties of these days to a rewarding knowledge of that "peace that surpasseth all understanding", that peace which only thou canst give.

We pray for the several peoples of the world, and most especially do we pray for the governments of our great Nation, and our great State Be with our President, be with our Governor, be with the Speaker of this body, and these elected representatives, and all those charged with the making and administering of our laws.

Forgive us our trangressions, strip us of all arrogance, false pride, and greed; cleanse our hearts of hate, and endow us with new portions of thy love; then bring us, Father, at the close of these days, to a realization of that dream of the prophets of old, and that promise which is in Christ Jesus, Life everlasting with Thee.

—AMEN.

COMMUNICATIONS

By the Chief Clerk:

The following communication was received, read, and ordered printed in the Journal:

BRANCH 39, NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF POSTAL SUPERVISORS
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, March 31, 1951

Chief Clerk of the State Assembly
State Capitol, Sacramento 14, California

DEAR SIR: It was with pleasure that we heard of the passing by the State Legislature of Assembly Joint Resolution No. 16, which was read at regular meeting of Branch 39, National Association of Postal Supervisors, held on March 24th.

The members of Branch 39 instructed me to write and thank the Members of the State Legislature for their action in passing Assembly Joint Resolution No. 16 as we think it will be of great assistance in securing enactment by Congress of deserving and beneficial legislation providing for an increase in our present inadequate salaries.

Sincerely,

BLAINE DRISCOLL, Recording Secretary

Amendment No. 14

On page 2 of said bill, after line 51, insert

"SEC. 5. This act is an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety within the meaning of Article IV of the Constitution and shall go into immediate effect The facts constituting such necessity are:

Under the existing law, there is no method by which a portion of a city district may be withdrawn and annexed to a unified school district. Under the existing law, a contiguous elementary or high school district, or a portion thereof, may not be annexed to a unified school district without first withdrawing from any elementary or high school district of which it is a part. This act would eliminate delay in annexations to a unified school district by allowing annexations in all such cases without the initiation of withdrawal proceedings

It is therefore necessary that this act take effect immediately in order for unified school districts to make plans for necessary new sites and buildings, based on the new boundaries, rather than the present boundaries, of the district, so that the schools built in the unified district through the state school building aid program will be situated so as to serve the needs of the reorganized district."

Senate Bill No. 752—An act to add Section 13808 to the Education Code, relating to the salaries of persons employed by school districts in positions requiring certification qualifications

Bill read second time.

Consideration of Committee Amendments

The following amendments were proposed by the Committee on Education:

Amendment No. 1

In line 3 of the title of the printed bill, before the period, insert ", declaring the urgency thereof, to take effect immediately".

Amendment No. 2

On page 1 of said bill, after line 11, insert

"SEC. 2 This act is an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety within the meaning of Article IV of the Constitution and shall go into immediate effect. The facts constituting such necessity are.

Under the existing law it is not clear whether the governing boards of all school districts have the power to increase the salaries of certificated employees of the district at any time. This act would authorize the governing boards of all districts to do so if the board so provides in its rules or by provision in the contracts of employment. Certificated employees must be notified by the governing boards of their reemployment for the next school year not later than May 15th. In order to encourage certificated employees to continue their employment with the school districts next fall rather than seeking jobs in defense industries which are rapidly expanding as a result of the national emergency, it is necessary that this act take effect immediately."

Amendments read, and adopted.

Bill ordered reprinted, and to third reading.

Recommendation of the Governor

In accordance with Article IV, Section 34, of the Constitution, the Governor presented the following communication recommending the passage of Assembly Bill No. 1031:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE
SACRAMENTO, March 27, 1951

To the Honorable Members of the Assembly
Sacramento, California

GENTLEMEN:

Assembly Bill No. 1031, "An act authorizing the investment of moneys derived from rentals, royalties, and other payments received by the State from lessees of tide and submerged lands lying along the Coast of California and impounded in the Special Deposit Fund in the State Treasury pursuant to stipulations between the State of California and the United States of America, providing for the disposition of interest earned or other increment derived from such investments, making an appropriation; and declaring the urgency thereof, to take effect immediately," in my opinion constitutes an emergency bill within the meaning of that term as used in Section 34 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of California, the consideration of which should not await the final enactment of the Budget Bill

This measure authorizes the Director of Finance to invest moneys received by the State from lessees of tide and submerged lands pursuant to stipulations between the State of California and the United States. In order that interest may be earned on this impounded money this act should take effect at the earliest possible date

I therefore recommend consideration of Assembly Bill No. 1031 as an emergency measure

Respectfully submitted,

EARL WARREN, Governor

PRAYER

The following prayer was offered by the Chaplain, Dr. Clarence A. Kircher:

Almighty God, Unto whom all hearts are open, all desires known, and from whom no secrets are hid; cleanse the thoughts of our hearts by the inspiration of Thy Holy Spirit, that we may perfectly love Thee, and worthily magnify Thy holy Name.

Divine Master, grant that we may not so much seek to be consoled as to console; to be understood, as to understand; to be loved, as to love; for it is in giving that we receive, it is in pardoning that we are pardoned, and it is in dying that we are born to eternal life.

We thank Thee for Thy divine friendship, the gift of Thy Son, our truest Friend.

"I've found a Friend: O, such a Friend,
He loved me 'ere I knew Him;
He drew me with the cords of love,
And thus He bound me to Him;
And round my heart still closely twine
Those ties which naught can sever;
For I am His and He is mine,
Forever and forever."

In Jesus name—AMEN.

CONSIDERATION OF SENATE AMENDMENTS

Assembly Bill No. 2171—An act to amend Section 9300 of the Government Code, relating to compensation of Members of the Legislature.

Urgency Clause

AYES—Belotti, Berry, Brown, Burke, Burkhalter, Caldecott, Chapel, Clarke, Cloyed, Coats, George D Collins, Connolly, Conrad, Cooke, Davis, Dills, Elliott, Erwin, Evans, Gaffney, Geddes, Grant, Grunsky, Hahn, Hansen, Hawkins, Henderson, Kelly, Kirkwood, Klocksiem, Lanterman, Levering, Lincoln, Lipscomb, Lowrey, Luckel, Maloney, McCarthy, McFall, McGee, Meyers, Morris, Moss, Niehouse, Parker, Porter, Rumford, Shaw, Sherwin, Silliman, Smith, Stanley, Stewart, Thomas, Tomlinson, and Mr. Speaker—56.

NOES—None.

The question being: Shall the Assembly concur in the following Senate amendments to Assembly Bill No. 2171?

Amendment No. 1

In the second line of the title of the printed bill, strike out the period and insert ", and declaring the urgency thereof, to take effect immediately."

Amendment No. 2

On page 1 of the printed bill, strike out lines 5 to 16, inclusive, and insert "three thousand six hundred dollars ($3,600) annually, during the term for which they are elected, payable at the rate of three hundred dollars ($300) per month.

SEC. 2. It is hereby declared that this act is not intended as a change in the present law, but as a declaration of existing law, and shall apply to compensation payable to Members of the Legislature during the 1951 calendar year.

SEC. 3. This act is an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety within the meaning of Article IV of the Constitution and shall go into immediate effect. A statement of the facts constituting such necessity is as follows:

The approval by the people of Assembly Constitutional Amendment No. 84 at the election on November 8, 1949, increased the compensation of Members of the Legislature and thus by implication amended Section 9300 of the Government Code relating to the payment thereof. In order to provide for the regular payment of the salaries of the Members of the Legislature during this session of the Legislature and to protect their rights thereto, it is essential that the provisions of Section 9300 of the Government Code be amended immediately to conform with the provisions of the Constitution and to clarify its provisions in order to resolve any questions that may exist as to the period for which compensation is to be paid and the manner of payment."

The roll was called, and the Assembly concurred in Senate amendments to Assembly Bill No. 2171 by the following vote:

AYES—Belotti, Berry, Brown, Burke, Burkhalter, Caldecott, Chapel, Clarke, Cloyed, Coats, George D. Recommendation of the Governor

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE
SACRAMENTO, March 22, 1951

To the Honorable Members of the Assembly
Sacramento, California

GENTLEMEN:

Assembly Bill No. 2386, "An act to establish a Financial Code, relating to the organization, regulation, and supervision of financial institutions and financial transactions, and matters incidental thereto, consolidating and revising the law relating thereto, and repealing certain sections, acts, and parts of acts specified therein,"

in my opinion constitutes an emergency bill within the meaning of that term as used in Section 34 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of California, the consideration of which should not await the final enactment of the Budget Bill.

This bill is a codification by the California Code Commission. As such it does not purport to change existing law. However, the Legislative Counsel advises me that it contains a technical appropriation. To facilitate the consideration of bills amending portions of the code as added by this bill it is important that it be acted on early in the session.

I, therefore, recommend consideration of Assembly Bill No. 2386 as an emergency measure.

Respectfully submitted

EARL WARREN, Governor

Assembly Bill No. 2386—An act to establish a Financial Code, relating to the organization, regulation, and supervision of financial institutions and financial transactions, and matters incidental thereto, consolidating and revising the law relating thereto, and repealing certain sections, acts, and parts of acts specified therein.

Bill read third time.

The roll was called, and the bill passed by the following vote:

AYES—Babbage, Beck, Belotti, Berry, Brady, Brown, Burke, Burkhalter, Caldecott, Chapel, Clarke, Cloyed, Coats, George D. NOES—None.

Bill ordered transmitted to the Senate.

Recommendation of the Governor

In accordance with Article IV, Section 34, of the Constitution, the Governor presented the following communication recommending the passage of Assembly Bill No. 2387:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE
SACRAMENTO, March 22, 1951

To the Honorable Members of the Assembly
Sacramento, California

GENTLEMEN:

Assembly Bill No. 2387, "An act to add Article 1.5 to Chapter 17, Division 1, of the Financial Code, relating to the liability of stockholders in California state banks, and to provide for the enforcement and collection of such liability, and to repeal an act entitled 'An act to define the liability of stockholders in California state banks and to provide for the enforcement and collection of that liability by the Superintendent of Banks of the State of California' (Chapter 196 of the Statutes of 1931)," in my opinion constitutes an emergency bill within the meaning of that term as used in Section 34 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of California, the consideration of which should not await the final enactment of the Budget Bill.

This bill is a codification by the California Code Commission. As such it does not purport to change existing law. However, the Legislative Counsel advises me that it contains a technical appropriation. To facilitate the consideration of bills amending portions of the code as added by this bill it is important that it be acted on early in the session.

I, therefore, recommend consideration of Assembly Bill No. 2387 as an emergency measure.

Recommendation of the Governor

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE
SACRAMENTO, March 22, 1951

To the Honorable Members of the Assembly
Sacramento, California

GENTLEMEN:

Assembly Bill No. 2389, "An act to add Sections 274 and 275 to the Financial Code, relating to the State Banking Fund and the Revolving Fund in the State Banking Department," in my opinion constitutes an emergency bill within the meaning of that term as used in Section 34 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of California, the consideration of which should not await the final enactment of the Budget Bill.

This bill is a codification by the California Code Commission. As such it does not purport to change existing law. However, the Legislative Counsel advises me that it contains a technical appropriation. To facilitate the consideration of bills amending portions of the code as added by this bill it is important that it be acted on early in the session.

I, therefore, recommend consideration of Assembly Bill No. 2389 as an emergency measure.

Respectfully submitted

EARL WARREN, Governor

Recommendation of the Governor

In accordance with Article IV, Section 34, of the Constitution, the Governor presented the following communication recommending the passage of Assembly Bill No. 2390:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE
SACRAMENTO, March 22, 1951

To the Honorable Members of the Assembly
Sacramento, California

GENTLEMEN:

Assembly Bill No. 2390, "An act to add Section 3166 to the Financial Code, relating to the payment of claims to trust property or money deposited with the State Treasurer," in my opinion constitutes an emergency bill within the meaning of that term as used in Section 34 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of California, the consideration of which should not await the final enactment of the Budget Bill.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolutions were offered:

By Mr. Maloney:

House Resolution No. 108

Relative to the preparation and printing of a Supplement to the Interim Subject List

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the Legislative Counsel is directed to prepare a Supplement to the Interim Subject List of all bills, constitutional amendments and resolutions introduced at the 1951 Regular Session of the Legislature; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of the Supplement to the Interim Subject List be mailed to all Members of the Legislature as soon as possible after adjournment of the 1951 Regular Session of the Legislature; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly is instructed to cause to be printed not to exceed 2,000 copies of the Supplement to the Interim Subject List, the cost thereof to be paid from the legislative printing appropriation.

Resolution read, and ordered referred to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. Maloney:

House Resolution No. 109

Relative to the preparation and printing of a Summary Digest

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the Legislative Counsel is directed to prepare a Summary Digest of statutes enacted and constitutional amendments proposed at the 1951 Regular Session of the Legislature; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of the Summary Digest be mailed to all Members of the Legislature as soon as possible after the "bill-signing" period; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly is instructed to cause to be printed not to exceed 2,000 copies of the Summary Digest, the cost thereof to be paid from the legislative printing appropriation.

Resolution read, and ordered referred to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. Maloney:

House Resolution No. 110

Relating to preprinting the proposed codes

WHEREAS, Upon the adjournment of this current session of the Legislature, the California Code Commission will continue its work of codifying the general statutory laws of this State with the prospect of completing said work prior to January 1, 1953; and

WHEREAS, It is the practice of the Code Commission to prepare preliminary drafts of proposed codes in mimeographed form for distribution to interested persons and groups for study and criticism prior to submission to the Legislature, but distribution by such means is necessarily limited; and

WHEREAS, If such proposed codes were printed they could be more widely circulated among interested persons and groups, thus enabling them to receive the careful scrutiny to which legislation of such importance is entitled; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the California Code Commission is hereby directed to prepare for printing as soon as practical after the adjournment of the 1951 Regular Session of the Legislature, such codes or portions thereof as it proposes to submit to the Legislature for consideration, and immediately upon such printing to distribute the same to all interested persons and groups; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly is hereby directed to have not to exceed 1,500 copies of each of such proposed codes, or portions thereof, printed, the cost thereof to be payable from the legislative printing appropriation.

Resolution read, and ordered referred to the Committee on Rules.

REQUEST FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT THAT LETTER TO THE RULES COMMITTEE AND OPINION OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL BE PRINTED IN JOURNAL

Mr. Dickey asked for, and was granted, unanimous consent that a letter, written by him to the Committee on Rules, and an opinion from the Legislative Counsel, be ordered printed in the Journal, in 10 point type, as follows:

Letter to Rules Committee

March 19, 1951

To the Members of the Rules Committee

In response to your directive I have advised with the office of the Legislative Counsel as to the status of the Assembly Legislative Process Committee, whether the committee may employ part-time stenographers during the session and assign them to work elsewhere than the City of Sacramento.

The Assembly Legislative Process Committee is an interim committee with all the powers and duties of such committees, in addition to the specific powers and duties provided by the resolution creating the committee. The committee has a continuing existence during sessions and between sessions. It may employ stenographic and other assistants on a full time or part time basis and may direct them to perform their prescribed duties in any part of the State, either during sessions or between sessions.

The authority for the establishment of fact-finding committees by either committees by either house of the Legislature to act during sessions or after final adjournment is found in Section 37 of Article IV of the Constitution. The Assembly Legislative Process Committee was created by House Resolution No. 13 of the 1949 Regular Session and continued as an interim committee by House Resolution No. 180 of that session. The committee was continued as a committee of this session by House Resolution No. 16, adopted January 8, 1951.

Section 9127 of the Government Code provides, in part, that the Assembly Legislative Process Committee has a continuing existence during sessions and between sessions with such powers and duties as are vested in it by the Assembly and authorizes the committee to disburse money from the Assembly Contingent Fund, pursuant to the Rules, orders, and resolutions adopted by the Assembly. The committee has the same powers and duties as other interim committees as provided by the Joint Rules of the Senate and Assembly.

The first Legislative Process Committee was created by the Senate at the 1943 Regular Session Subsequent to that session both houses have created similar committees which were authorized to act either during sessions or during sessions and after final adjournment

Under date of June 25, 1935, in an opinion to Senator Sanborn Young the Attorney General expressed the view that the constitutional limitations upon expenses for legislative help, contained in Section 23a of Article IV of the Constitution, were not applicable to the employees of interim committees. This opinion has been followed without question since that time and the Legislative Counsel concurs in the opinion. The Legislative Counsel believes it is applicable to the Assembly Legislative Process Committee as well as to other interim committees.

On the question regarding employment of part time stenographers the Legislative Counsel wrote under date of December 5, 1950, stating in substance that under the resolution creating the committee it is authorized to employ such help as may be necessary; that the hours of employment, rates of compensation, and place or places where services are to be performed are left entirely to the discretion of the committee; and that Legislative Counsel found nothing in the Constitution or statutes that would prevent the employment of stenographers on a part time or full time basis during sessions or between sessions or the assignment of such stenographers to perform work at any place in the State.

RANDAL F. DICKEY, Chairman

Opinion of Legislative Counsel

STATE OF CALIFORNIA
OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL
SACRAMENTO, April 2, 1951

Honorable Randal F. Dickey
Assembly Chamber

LEGISLATIVE PROCESS COMMITTEE—No. 6413

DEAR MR. DICKEY:

Question

You have asked us for our opinion as to the status of the Assembly Legislative Process Committee and have also asked whether the committee is authorized to employ stenographers on a part time basis during sessions of the Legislature and to assign them to work elsewhere than in the City of Sacramento

Opinion

The Assembly Legislative Process Committee is an interim committee which has a continuing existence. It has all the powers and duties of an interim committee as provided by the Joint Rules of the Senate and Assembly, in addition to the specific powers and duties set forth in the resolution creating the committee and as provided by Section 9127 of the Government Code. The committee is authorized to employ stenographers on a full time or part time basis, either during sessions or between sessions, and may direct them to perform their duties in any part of the State as may be required by the work of the committee.

Analysis

The Assembly Legislative Process Committee was created by House Resolution No. 13 of the 1949 Regular Session with power to act until final adjournment. The existence of the committee was continued until the commencement of the 1951 Regular Session by House Resolution No. 180.

On January 8, 1951, it was continued as an interim committee of this session by House Resolution No. 16. That resolution provides that the committee has a continuing existence hereafter during sessions and between sessions unless and until modified by Assembly action at a subsequent session. This latter provision is in accord with Section 9127 of the Government Code which specifies in part that the Assembly Legislative Process Committee has a continuing existence during sessions and between sessions with such powers, duties, and responsibilities as the Assembly from time to time shall prescribe. Section 9127 further provides that the money in the Assembly Contingent Fund shall be disbursed pursuant to, and the powers, duties and responsibilities of the Assembly Legislative Process Committee shall be as provided by, the Rules, orders, and resolutions adopted by the Assembly.

Each of the resolutions creating and continuing the committee specify that the Joint Rules of the Senate and Assembly are applicable to this committee and its members. By reason of this provision the committee has the same powers and duties as other interim committees in addition to the statutory powers and duties provided by Section 9127 of the Government Code. Rule No. 36 of the Joint Rules of the Senate and Assembly specifically authorize it to employ such clerical, legal, and technical assistance as may appear necessary.

We find nothing in any of the rules or regulations relating to this committee that purports to restrict its powers or activities in any manner different from those relating to other interim committees.

As to the question regarding employment of stenographers, it is our opinion that the committee is authorized to employ such help as may be necessary. In its discretion the committee is empowered to employ stenographers on a full time or part time basis during sessions or between sessions and to specify the hours of employment, rates of compensation, and the place or places where the services of its employees are to be performed This power is the same during sessions and between sessions and the entire matter of terms of employment and where services are to be performed is to be determined by the committee in accordance with its discretion.

Very truly yours,

RALPH N. KLEPS
Legislative Counsel
By LAWRENCE G. ALLYN, Deputy

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. Dickey announced that the Committee on Rules has gone on record as adopting the policy of maintaining the services of part time secretaries during, and between sessions, when necessary.

OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL

Honorable Richard J. Dolwig

DUTIES OF STANDING COMMITTEES UNDER STATUTE REGULATING LEGISLATIVE REPRESENTATION—No. 6493

DEAR MR. DOLWIG:

Question

You have asked if the statute regulating legislative representation or the Standing Rules of the Assembly expressly or impliedly require the standing committees of the Assembly to ascertain whether persons appearing before them have registered under Section 9906 of the Government Code and have been issued a certificate of registration as legislative advocate.

Opinion

Neither the statute regulating legislative representation nor the Standing Rules of the Assembly require committees to ascertain whether persons appearing before them have so registered and have been issued a certificate of registration, but we believe that the scope of the inherent powers of standing committees authorizes the committees to inquire whether such persons have so registered and have been issued a certificate as legislative advocate.

Analysis

We find no provision of the statute regulating legislative representation (Chapter 8, Part 1, Division 2, Title 2, Government Code) nor any provision of the Standing Rules of the Assembly which expressly requires standing committees to investigate into the extent of a person's compliance with Section 9906 of the Government Code. Further, Section 9906 excepts from the registration requirements any person who "merely appears before a committee of the Legislature of the State of California in support of or opposition to legislation." This express exception would negate any implication in the statute that the standing committees are required to inquire of any person appearing before them whether that person has registered under Section 9906 and whether such person has been issued a certificate of registration as legislative advocate.

We do not mean to imply by this conclusion that it would be improper for standing committees to inquire whether such persons have been issued a certificate of registration or whether such persons have registered under Section 9906 of the Government Code.

Section 9909 of the Government Code provides for the issuance of certificates of registration as legislative advocate to persons registered under Section 9906 who are found by the respective houses to be of good moral character, particularly as evidenced by never having been guilty of conduct proscribed by Section 9910 of the Government Code. The certificates of registration now being issued by the respective committees serve the threefold purpose of identification of the person registered, identification of the interests which that person represents, and evidence the fact that, in the opinion of the committee issuing the certificate, the person registered has not violated the obligations of legislative representatives as prescribed by Section 9910 of the Government Code.

In order to intelligently perform their functions in holding hearings, the standing committees must necessarily have the power to inquire into the identity and interests of the persons testifying before them, and to properly evaluate that person's testimony the committee must further be empowered to inquire into the factors relating to the reliability and credibility of that person's testimony. Inasmuch as the certificate of registration provides a standard means of identification of a person and of the interests which he represents, and evidences the credibility and reliability of such person's testimony, we think that it would be entirely proper for standing committees to ask legislative representatives appearing before them whether such persons have been issued a certificate of registration, and if such persons have not, to inquire whether they come within a class of persons which is not required to register under Section 9906 of the Government Code.

Very truly yours,

RALPH N. KLEPS

REPORT OF PUBLIC UTILITIES SUBCOMMITTEE ON SENATE BILL NO. 327

Letter of Transmittal

ASSEMBLY, CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE, April 2, 1951

Hon. John W. Evans, Chairman and Members of Committee on Public Utilities Assembly Chamber, State Capitol
Sacramento, California

DEAR ASSEMBLYMAN EVANS: Your special subcommittee appointed to conduct hearings on Senate Bill 327, the so-called Rural Electric Co-Operative Bill, submits its report herewith and summarizes its conclusions as follows:

This bill, which has been urged as necessary in order to permit co-operatives to finance electric distribution systems in remote areas of the State by the Federal REA, is not necessary and goes far beyond the intentions of the authors of the bill—opening a dangerous loophole in the Public Utilities Act.

Contrary to assertions that the REA will not lend money to rural electric co-operatives in California unless they were exempted from regulation by the bill, the subcommittee finds that the REA has no such policy; and, in fact, has approved loans of more than 400 million dollars to co-operatives in other states where co-operatives may be regulated by utility commissions.

The fears expressed by proponents of the bill that regulation by the California Public Utilities Commission would interfere with formation and operation of co-operatives are without foundation and the cases cited to the contrary involve co-operatives which failed to comply with state law. The actual rules and policies followed by the commission will not impair the economic feasibility of rural electrification enterprises and enactment of the bill would amount to a vote of lack of confidence in the commission for which there is no justification.

If the co-operatives would take advantage of the provisions of existing law, they will be able to obtain all the protection which the authors of the bill said they wish to provide.

The exemption contained in the bill is not restricted to rural electric co-operatives but could be taken advantage of by anyone forming a co-operative under the Corporation Law and, if the bill were passed, such a co-operative corporation might engage in an extensive public utility business, including the generation and transmission of power, with complete freedom from supervision or regulation by the Public Utilities Commission. Such exemption would be a backward step in the regulation of public utility enterprises to serve the public welfare.

The provisions of the bill granting co-operatives the exclusive privilege of serving new customers within a designated area permit a monopoly without regulation and are in direct violation of the principle that either competition or regulation is necessary to protect the public interest

The subcommittee's hearings were extensive and the transcript of its proceedings covered 511 pages. Representatives of two rural electric co-operatives, five proposed co-operatives, two farm organizations the Federal Rural Electrification Administration, customers of the co-operatives, and three public utility companies were heard.

Respectfully submitted,

G. DELBERT MORRIS, Chairman
Public Utilities Subcommittee on Senate Bill No. 327

Report of Public Utilities Subcommittee on Senate Bill No. 327

To the Assembly Committee on Public Utilities and Corporations
John W. Evans, Chairman

At the hearing on Senate Bill No. 327 held by your committee on January 22, 1951, it was determined that proper consideration of this bill required further hearings and investigation and a motion was made, seconded and carried that a subcommittee of five members be appointed by your chairman to conduct such hearings and investigation and to report its findings to the main committee. Pursuant to this resolution G Delbert Morris, Patrick D. McGee, Bernard R. Brady, Montivel A. Burke, and Clayton A Dills were appointed to the subcommittee and G Delbert Morris was designated to serve as chairman of the subcommittee The subcommittee held hearings at Baker on February 19, 1951, at San Francisco on February 23, 1951, and at Sacramento on March 15 and 19, 1951 The proceedings at each of these hearings were reported and transcribed and the record is submitted herewith for the files of the committee

At the Baker hearing Senator Charles Brown was present and was invited to sit with the subcommittee. Statements were made to the subcommittee by William Letcher, Regional Director of the Rural Electrification Administration; Charles F Brown, Secretary of the Death Valley

Electric Co-Operative, Inc.; William E. Smith, member of the Death Valley Co-Operative; E. John Ericksson, Attorney for Death Valley Electric Co-Operative and Providence Mountain Electric Co-Operative; Allen Arness, head of Region 9 of the Application and Loans Division, Rural Electrification Administration; William Anderson, Office of the Solicitor, Department of Agriculture; S. K Droubay, Manager, Shoshone Mines, Anaconda Copper Mining Company; Charles A. Scholl, Superintendent, Pacific Coast Borax Company; H. P. Gower, Field Engineer for Pacific Coast Borax Company; C. B. Dickey, Ranch owner in Pahrump Valley, Nevada; T R. Goodwin, Superintendent, Death Valley National Monument; James H. Francis, Tecopa Businessman; D. A. Beckman, President of the Board of Directors of Intervalley Electric Co-Operative at Inyokern; and Henry W. Coil, General Counsel of California Electric Power Company.

At the San Francisco hearing statements were made by R B. Cassidy, Assistant Chief Counsel, Public Utilities Commission; Keith L. Edgerton of the Edgerton Bros. Lumber Company, Adin, Modoc County; William A Ayres, representing the State Grange; Allen Arness of the Rural Electrification Administration; William Anderson, Office of Solicitor, Department of Agriculture; Richard W. Owens, representing the California Farm Bureau Federation; Gerald H. Hagar, Attorney for Meadow Valley Lumber Company; Fred Holland, Manager of Surprise Valley Electrification Corporation; and George Conant, Manager of the Plumas-Sierra Rural Electric Co-Operative.

At the Sacramento hearing on March 15, 1951, Assemblyman Harlan Hagen, a member of the full Committee on Public Utilities and Corporations, was present; and Senators Powers and Johnson, the authors of Senate Bill No. 327, were also present and took part in the proceedings. Statements were made by Henry Coil, General Counsel, California Electric Power Company; Robert H. Gerdes, General Counsel, Pacific Gas and Electric Company; Frederick T. Searls, Attorney for Pacific Gas and Electric Company; Bruce Renwick, General Counsel, Southern California Edison Company; Father Charles Phillips; Fred Holland, Manager Surprise Valley Electrification Corporation; Allen Arness of the Rural Electrification Administration; and A. H. Nightingale, and Rupert Costo, interested in the proposed Anza Rural Electric Co-Operative. At the Sacramento hearing on March 19th, Assemblyman Hagen and Senators Powers and Johnson again took part in the proceedings. Statements were made by Von K. Ellsworth, representing the Farm Bureau Federation, and C. F. Taylor, President of the Desert Electric Co-Operative at Twenty-nine Palms.

SUMMARY OF BILL

Senate Bill No. 327 contains three major provisions:

Section 1 exempts from the Public Utilities Act and from the jurisdiction and control of the Public Utilities Commission all nonprofit co-operative corporations furnishing electric service primarily to their members or stockholders. The exemption includes any foreign, nonprofit co-operative corporation qualified to do business within California.

Section 2 of the bill forbids any public utility, municipality or nonprofit co-operative corporation to furnish electric service to any premises already receiving electric service from another supplier or which have previously received electric service from another supplier willing to resume the service unless the written consent of the other supplier is first obtained. In effect, it prevents any person from changing from one supplier of electricity to another under any circumstances whatever without the consent of the present supplier.

Section 3 of the bill sets up a procedure whereby a nonprofit co-operative corporation (including foreign corporations) may acquire the exclusive right to furnish electric service to new customers within an area shown on a map to be filed with the Public Utilities Commission. The exclusive privilege is given for an initial period of six months which may be extended to 18 months if a loan agreement is made with a federal agency. It may be possible that the privilege could be indefinitely extended by re-filings.

EXISTING LAW

In order to determine the scope and effect of this proposed legislation it was necessary to obtain information as to the existing law. Section 23 of Article XII of the California Constitution provides in part:

> "Every private corporation, and every individual or association of individuals, owning, operating, managing, or controlling any commercial railroad, interurban railroad, street railroad, canal, pipeline, plant, or equipment, or any part of such railroad, canal, pipe-line, plant, or equipment within this State, for the transportation or conveyance of passengers, or express matter, or freight of any kind, including crude oil, or for the transmission of telephone or telegraph messages, or for the production, generation, transmission, delivery or furnishing of heat, light, water or power or for the furnishing of storage or wharfage facilities, either directly or indirectly, to or for the public, and every common carrier, is hereby declared to be a public utility subject to such control and regulation by the Railroad Commission as may be provided by the Legislature, and every class of private corporations, individuals, or associations of individuals hereafter declared by the Legislature to be public utilities shall likewise be subject to such control and regulation."

The constitutional policy so stated is carried out by means of the Public Utilities Act which defines the term "public utilities" to include "every * * * electric corporation * * * where the service is performed for or the commodity delivered to the public or any portion thereof". Mr R. B. Cassidy, Assistant Chief Counsel of the Public Utilities Commission, testified that the status of a co-operative under the Public Utilities Act first came before the commission in the Coos Electric Co-Operative, Inc., case, decided by the commission in 1944. In that decision the commission concluded that a co-operative corporation was not exempt from the Public Utilities Act merely because it was a co-operative. This conclusion was amplified in the Mesa Electric Co-Operative case decided by the commission in 1947 where the commission held that the nature of a co-operative's activities and proposed activities would determine whether or not it was a public utility subject to regulation under California statutes. Neither of these cases was challenged in the courts On November 7, 1949, the Death Valley Electric Co-Operative, Inc., was granted a certificate of public convenience and necessity by the commission authorizing it to operate as a public utility within certain areas of Inyo and San Bernardino Counties On December 12, 1950, the commission decided that the Plumas-Sierra Electric Cooperative, Inc., was operating as a public utility and should file its rates and tariffs with the commission in the usual manner. The Plumas-Sierra Co-Operative has requested the California Supreme Court to review this decision on the ground, among others, that it is not subject to regulation under the Public Utilities Act. The Supreme Court has not, as yet, made a decision.

It thus appears that the commission has consistently acted since 1944 on the assumption that the determination of whether a cooperative is a public utility and hence subject to regulation depends upon the corporation's method and plan of operating rather than upon the form of its organization. Only in the Plumas-Sierra case just mentioned has the question of whether an electric co-operative may be regulated as a public utility been presented to the Supreme Court of this State. Senate Bill No. 327 covers the point now before the court since the bill exempts all nonprofit cooperatives furnishing electric service primarily to their members, regardless of the scope of their activities.

The Public Utilities Commission representative, Mr. Cassidy, expressly stated that the commission took no position as to the merits or disadvantages of Senate Bill No 327, and that the commission conceived that it was the function of the Legislature to establish the policy of the state law and the function of the commission to carry out that law in accordance with the Legislature's policy.

The proponents of the bill evidently assume that an electric co-operative corporation may be subject to regulation under the Public Utilities Act and that to accomplish their purposes an exemption from this regulation must be written into the act by the Legislature. In order to appreciate the effect of this exemption the principal aspects of regulation must be reviewed.

COMMISSION REGULATION: CERTIFICATES OF CONVENIENCE AND NECESSITY

Under the Public Utilities Act any corporation desiring to engage in furnishing electric service to the public or a portion thereof must obtain a certificate of public convenience and necessity from the commission pursuant to Section 50 of the act Such certificates are required in order to enable the commission to exercise its function of preventing wasteful duplication of utility facilities and harmful competitive practices, which result in unnecessarily high costs to the consuming public for utility services. In order to protect the public interest the commission normally grants a certificate for a given area to only one supplier of electric service Where a corporation has applied for such a certificate the applicant can be protected from competition in the area for which the application has been made.

The testimony before the subcommittee was uncontested that the commission would protect any public utility holding a certificate of public convenience and necessity from harmful competition. This protection is available, as the commission's Mesa decision states, to cooperatives in the same manner as to any other electric utility corporation and will be administered, as the Plumas-Sierra decision states, in a manner that will be just and reasonable both to the co-operative and its patrons. Except for the Death Valley Cooperative, none of the existing electric co-operatives in the State appear to have taken advantage of the protection given by obtaining a certificate from the commission. Enactment of Senate Bill No. 327 would deprive the Death Valley Co-Operative of the protection which it receives by virtue of this certificate and would prevent any co-operative in the future from obtaining such protection Presumably for this reason the authors of this bill, having deprived the co-operatives, by Section 1, of the commission protection, sought to provide a substitute protection in Sections 2 and 3 of the bill. We will reserve a discussion of these sections until later in this report but feel that it should be noted at this point in the discussion that there would be no need for a substitute form of protection if no exclusion from the Public Utilities Act were made.

Two minor objections to the requirement of a certificate of public convenience and necessity for co-ops should be noted here It was stated by Mr. Arness of the REA that obtaining such a certificate was an expensive and time-consuming process and that it might be delayed by utility company opposition. As to expense, it was pointed out by other witnesses that it is not necessary to employ an attorney in order to present an application for such a certificate, that the proceedings are informal, and that the applicant may obtain the services of the commission's trained and experienced staff in preparing and presenting the application. In the Death Valley Co-Operative case, the one instance where a co-operative has sought such a certificate, it appears that no difficulty was encountered. The fears expressed by Mr. Arness that utility company opposition would handicap and delay the co-op were not experienced in that case. The commission certainly has adequate control over its own procedures to prevent any harm to a co-operative enterprise from attempts by a utility company to delay or block proceedings Mr. Arness stated that it was the intention of this bill to prevent the utility companies from having any hearing whatever on a proposed co-operative operation

The certificate of public convenience and necessity is vital to safeguard the public interest as well as to protect the corporations to whom the certificates are granted. Only in this manner can the people of this State be assured that utility enterprises will serve the public interest. The subcommittee's hearings made it clear that the nonprofit co-operative can and does serve a valuable purpose in bringing electricity to remote areas of this State but it is essential to realize that the nonprofit co-operative form of corporation can be used and, indeed, abused for many purposes less desirable than rural electrification. The witnesses for the public utility companies stated, and it was not contradicted, that this type of organization could be formed by a number of corporations for the purpose of escaping commission regulation as to substantial parts of their operations if this bill is enacted. There appears to be no reason why the exemption proposed by this bill could not be taken advantage of by individuals forming co-operatives in the midst of existing service areas of the utility companies in a manner that could result in wasteful duplication of facilities and undesirable discrimination among consumers.

An example of proposed wasteful duplication by a co-operative was found in the opinion of the Virginia State Corporation Commission in the Matter of Old Dominion Electric Co-Operative which was made a part of the subcommittee's record From that opinion it appears that a number of co-operatives in the State of Virginia formed a co-operative for the purpose of constructing electric generation and transmission facilities at a proposed cost of over 16 million dollars Application for a loan of the 16 million dollars was approved by the Rural Electrification Administration. It was necessary, however, for the new cooperative to secure authorization from the Virginia State Corporation Commission for the loan. A hearing was held before the commission and the commission found that the Virginia Electric Power Company had made a firm offer to supply the same service that the co-operative intended to furnish, at rates which would cost the consumers at least 20 million dollars less than the cost of the co-operative over the life of the proposed loan. The commission refused to authorize the loan saying:

> "To any disinterested person it must be apparent from the facts of this case that we have no choice as to what our decision must be In the performance of the duties imposed upon us by the Public Utilities Securities Law, we could not approve an application the effect of which would be to take from the rural consumers of electricity in Virginia more than 20 million dollars over a period of 35 years and give them nothing in return. Since Vepco current would cost them that much less than the same amount of Old Dominion current, they would simply be throwing away at least 20 million dollars. To protect the public from such unsound financing was the dominant purpose of the General Assembly in passing the statute, and in denying the application, we are not exercising any choice of our own, but are merely applying the law to the facts".

The people of Virginia thus have found commission jurisdiction over co-operatives a valuable protection for the public interest.

It should be noted that the REA did not hesitate to approve the 16 million dollar loan to the Old Dominion Cooperative even though the transaction was subject to commission regulation.

Another instance of a co-operative formed for constructing a generating and transmission system was found by the subcommittee in a decision of the Kentucky Public Service Commission, dated December 7, 1950, In re East Kentucky Rural Electric Co-Operative Corporation. A co-operative, in that case, applied to the Kentucky Commission for a certificate of convenience and necessity and authority to borrow 12 million dollars from the United States through the REA. The Kentucky Commission reviewed the application, found that the proposed construction would not duplicate or replace existing facilities of other utility corporations in Kentucky, and that the proposed construction was desirable. Consequently, it granted the requested certificate and authority.

Here again it appears that the REA is willing to lend to a co-operative which is subject to regulation and the people of Kentucky have been assured by their regulatory commission that the project is in the public interest

A third possible instance of construction of transmission line facilities was given by Mr. Arness in his testimony before the subcommittee. Assemblyman Brady had pointed out that the Death Valley Co-Operative has already received its certificate of convenience and necessity and asked Mr. Arness if the Death Valley Co-Operative was not therefore assured of freedom from interference in serving the area covered by the certificate The reply of Mr Arness, in part, was

> "Secondly, I don't know what the action of the utility might be if at some time in the future the co-operative should undertake to construct a line perhaps paralleling this line from Boulder Dam or Parker Dam or Davis Dam in order to bring its power at the bureau of rates instead of at the rate of the bureau rates of about a half a cent instead of the eleven mills which the company is charging—is proposing to charge the co-operative. I think it very likely that at the point the utility might conceivably intervene and prevent the co-operative from going ahead with a necessary and desirable investment." (P. 114)

The subcommittee believes that, if the Death Valley Co-Operative were to undertake a project such as Mr. Arness described, it would be highly important for the people of California to know whether this project would actually be a desirable one such as that described in the Kentucky decision or whether it would prove, upon analysis, to be a burden upon the consuming public such as the proposed Old Dominion Co-Operative project in Virginia. Under the present law the people of California have the same opportunity, through their representatives on the Public Utilities Commission, to review such projects as the people of Kentucky and Virginia. Senate Bill No. 327 would take away this opportunity.

Summarizing this aspect of regulation, it appears to this subcommittee that a broad exemption such as is proposed by Section 1 of Senate Bill No. 327 is open to such grave abuses as to seriously impair the effectiveness of state regulation of public utility enterprise. In matters so intimately connected with the life of the people of this State as the furnishing of electric service no reason has been shown why the people of the State should not be in a position to see that the public interest is served, whether the public utility is a cooperative or a conventional corporation, and whether the financing is private or governmental.

COMMISSION REGULATION: SERVICE TO CONSUMERS

A second function of the Public Utilities Commission is to entertain and dispose of complaints by customers as to the adequacy and the reasonableness of the service being rendered. Included in this function is the power of the commission to prevent unreasonable discrimination between one consumer and another and between different classes of consumers. If Senate Bill No. 327 is enacted the consumers on a co-operative system will be deprived of this protection. Mr. Arness of the Rural Electrification Administration testified that in such event the consumer's only remedy would be to bring a court action. It was pointed out by other witnesses that court action would be far more expensive and far less efficacious and speedy than commission proceedings. The commission has available to investigate and adjust such complaints and to enforce its orders a technical staff with the necessary qualifications and experience to assure prompt and effective disposal of such complaints.

However, it was argued that since the consumers of a co-op are the members of the corporation they, therefore, can assure themselves of adequate, reasonable and nondiscriminatory service. This was not borne out by the practical experience of two of the co-ops in this State. The only control which the members have over their organization is the opportunity to cast a vote for directors at the annual meeting. Unfortunately, as is common with many small corporations, a quorum is not always present at the annual meeting and the elections are often not held. Mr Holland, Manager of the Surprise Valley Co-Operative testified that his corporation had held only one meeting since 1945 with a quorum present. Mr. Conant, Manager of the Plumas-Sierra Electric Co-Operative testified that there had been no meeting of his co-op since 1944 Although the lack of a quorum at the annual meeting may possibly be a tribute to the successful management of these co-operatives as a whole it is evident that one or two customers who find their service unsatisfactory or who find that they are being discriminated against in some way have no opportunity to secure corrective action. Even the theoretical right to vote for a director of their corporation has no practical value in such cases Mr. Hagar, Attorney for the Meadow Valley Lumber Company, and Mr. Edgerton of the Edgerton Bros. Lumber Company, both testified that their companies were members of co-ops but that their complaints to the management had not produced satisfactory service. Both testified that they believed they should have an opportunity to complain to the Public Utilities Commission.

COMMISSION REGULATION: RATES

A third function of the Public Utilities Commission is to pass on the reasonableness of rates of a public utility. In a nonprofit co-operative corporation it may be presumed that there is adequate incentive to keep the rates as low as possible without regulation and it does not appear that the commission would have occasion to adjust the over-all level of rates in a co-operative unless some improper use were being made of the revenues. Some fear was expressed by co-op witnesses that the commission might refuse to allow rates sufficiently high to cover a co-op's obligations to make its payments of interest and installment repayments of principal to the Rural Electrification Administration. It was stated that it may be necessary for co-op rates to be higher than those of utility companies because of the low customer density of the area served. Certainly the liberal terms of 2 percent interest and 35 years for repayment which are granted by the Rural Electrification Administration to finance 100 percent of a co-op's capital requirements should not require excessive rates. The subcommittee understands, however, that the commission does not fix rates on the basis of what other utilities are charging but on the basis of what is fair and reasonable to the particular corporation whose rates are under consideration In this connection, the commission said in the Plumas-Sierra case, previously mentioned, that the commission would take into account the differing conditions under which a co-operative operates. It said:

> "It might be observed that, although the form of respondent's organization and method of financing may differ considerably from those of electric corporations generally, in our opinion no provision of the Public Utilities Act would so circumscribe the discretion the commission may exercise in the regulation of respondent's operations as to preclude the application of regulatory standards that will be just and reasonable both to respondent and to its patrons".

In the face of this declaration by the commission it is difficult to understand why it was argued that the Federal Government would be apprehensive about the ability of a co-operative to repay its loan if its rates were subject to regulation. This is especially true when it is realized that hundreds of public utility enterprises whose rates are subject to regulation in this State have no difficulty in obtaining private capital to finance their systems.

The commission's function in regulating rates is not limited to determining the over-all level of rates but also includes the power to pass upon the rate structure and the special conditions under which the various rates are to be applied. Here the customer of a public utility may ask protection from the Public Utilities Commission against unreasonable or discriminatory rate treatment. To exempt co-operatives from the Public Utilities Act would exclude its customers from the benefit of this protection. As has been pointed out earlier in this report the consumer's membership in the co-operative is not by any means an adequate substitute for the commission protection.

COMMISSION REGULATION: FINANCING

A fourth function of the Public Utilities Commission is to pass on financial arrangements of public utility corporations. This power protects investors from unsound financial practices and protects the public against wasteful and unreasonable capital expenditures. The Federal Government as an investor may be in a better position to protect itself than the individual who buys a few shares of stock or a bond in a public utility corporation. Nevertheless, this subcommittee does not believe that the fact that federal officials in Washington have approved a loan necessarily means that the loan is for the best interests of the people of the State of California.

The case of the Old Dominion Electric Co-Operative which has already been described gives one example of the need for state protection of the local interest against being saddled with the cost of unnecessary federally-financed projects.

But even if we were to be satisfied with the decisions of federal officials the hazard would still remain that attempts would be made to finance unsound co-operative enterprise by private financing. It is impossible to predict if this bill should be enacted what groups might attempt to take advantage of the proposed exemption from regulation and what types of financing they might try to use. A substantial public interest is served by retaining commission regulation of co-operative financing.

COMMISSION REGULATION: SAFETY

A fifth function of public utility company regulation is to provide standards for safety. The commission's General Order 95 prescribing standards for overhead line construction is a comprehensive regulation for the protection of consumers, utility employees, and the general public. The subcommittee was relieved to learn that the co-operatives intend to comply with these standards. Nevertheless, the subcommittee believes that the public would be deprived of a substantial amount of protection unless the commission retains the authority to supervise and enforce its safety orders with respect to co-operative systems.

The foregoing analysis shows the important functions served by regulation of public utilities in this State and the application of those regulations to co-operative corporations. It is clear that enactment of Senate Bill No. 327 would constitute a major departure from the established policy of the State to assure that public utility enterprises serve the public welfare. It would completely abolish all regulation of public utility undertakings adopting the form of nonprofit co-operative corporations. Even co-operatives formed under the laws of other States would have a free hand in California to set up utility systems regardless of the public interest. The California Public Utilities Commission has a well-deserved reputation as one of the leading regulatory agencies in the Nation. Under its jurisdiction hundreds of public utility enterprises are successfully furnishing public utility services to the people of this State Regulation does not appear to have been an unreasonable burden on the vast number of these enterprises which are comparable in size to the co-operative corporations.

MONOPOLY PRIVILEGES GRANTED BY BILL

As a substitute for this tested and successful policy of regulation the bill proposes two methods by which a co-operative would be given certain exclusive privileges. Under Section 2 of the bill, once a co-operative had rendered service to certain premises it would never be possible for any other supplier of electricity to serve those premises without the written consent of the co-operative. In addition, the provision goes much farther. No municipal corporation supplying electric service could ever furnish electricity to premises now supplied by a public utility company or a co-operative without the written consent of the present supplier. No public utility company could serve premises being supplied by another company without the written consent of the other company. In other words, once a person became a customer of one supplier of electric energy he would be forever bound to that supplier. There could be no divorce unless the supplier agreed. Furthermore, all subsequent owners of the same presmises would be bound to continue as a customer of this same supplier. A provision of this sort, not subject to any public control whatever, would be a most unsound restriction on the power of the commission to regulate all public utilities. The economy of this State is a dynamic and growing thing which should not be frozen in patterns of the past.

As a further substitute for our established commission system of regulation, Section 3 of the bill attempts to give co-operatives certain special provisions so far as securing the exclusive right to serve new customers in a given area is concerned. The area may be chosen by the co-operative and need not be restricted to unserved areas. It appears to be entirely possible under this proposed measure for a co-operative to preempt the right to serve all new customers in the middle of a large city and any electrical corporation serving that area would be forbidden to construct any facilities therein even if necessary to supply the needs of its existing customers. These arbitrary and undesirable possibilities are the inevitable result of a grant of monopoly privileges without regulation Our system of free enterprise is based primarily upon competition. Where public utilities are concerned we have found it necessary to substitute regulation for competition but we should never eliminate both competition and regulation Senate Bill No. 327 directly violates this principle. It gives any public utility enterprise adopting the non-profit co-operative form of organization an exclusive privilege to obtain all new business in an area which it may choose without any regulation or safeguard to protect the public interest.

BILL NOT REQUIRED TO PERMIT REA LOANS

What then are the reasons advanced in favor of this bill? Prior to the investigation by this subcommittee it was stated that the Rural Electrification Administration would not lend money to an electric co-operative if it was subject to state regulation. Examination of Mr. Arness, the head of Region 9 of the Applications and Loans Division, Rural Electrification Administration, revealed that the Rural Electrification Administration had no such policy and that in fact the REA had approved loans amounting to more that 400 million dollars in states where cooperatives were subject to regulation as public utilities. The following excerpts from the testimony makes this clear:

> "SENATOR BROWN: There's another question I wanted to ask you. It will be a direct question. Do you think if we're unable—we don't enact Senate Bill 327, and the Public Utilities ruling stands as it is, that you do come under it, will the government loan any more money on these co-ops?
> MR. ARNESS: The REA is currently making loans to—in nine states, where the borrowers, where the co-operatives are under complete commission jurisdiction. Certainly, we will continue to make loans in the State of California where we are able to do so, on the basis of feasibility, and where certificates have been obtained pursuant to that jurisdiction, if that jurisdiction be sustained. (Pp. 48, 49)
> (CHAIRMAN MORRIS) * * * Now, there has been a great deal of talk, Mr. Arness, since this bill was introduced to the effect that someone connected with the REA had made a statement that unless this bill was passed there would be no more loans granted to the rural co-operatives in the State of California. Have you ever made such a statement, or have you, of your own knowledge, any knowledge that such a statement was made by someone connected with your Rural Electrification Administration?

MR. ARNESS: Mr. Chairman, I don't believe I have ever made any such statement, and I have no direct knowledge that any such statement was made by any representative of the REA.

CHAIRMAN MORRIS: You don't know, then, or do you know whether this is going to be a policy of the administration in Wash., I speak of Mr. Claude Wickard, the Chief of the REA, whether he would make such a policy that no loans would be granted to states operating under commission jurisdiction?

MR. ARNESS: I do not believe that he would be, that Mr. Wickard would institute such a policy. In view of the language of the Rural Electrification Act, we do provide, or there is provided in the standard loan contract, a provision that a borrower must comply with all rules and regulations within the state, or states, within which it operates I think this question may be, to some extent, due to a misunderstanding. It seems to me, now I'm just speculating, Mr. Chairman and may be entirely wrong about it. I think its correct, however, that as of July or August, along about that period, that REA made a determination that the question of commission jurisdiction had been raised in the State to a point where that question should be clarified and determined finally, before additional loans were made to borrowers in the State. Now, that was not a fixed and arbitrary determination or policy; as a matter of fact, I think we have made one or two loans subsequently, within the State. A loan made to the Inter-Valley Electric Co-Operative at Inyo-Kern, in the spring of the year, is still under stop order, however, pending determination of the jurisdiction question.

CHAIRMAN MORRIS: If this bill should not be passed, Mr. Arness, would you then follow the policy of considering the loans strictly upon their merits as to the feasibility of being paid off within the loan repayment period, or what would be the policy of the REA?

MR. ARNESS: There would be no change of policy If the—if we wind up this present consideration by the California Assembly, Legislature, and if your current appeals to the courts are—should be adverse to the co-operative's plea; what I'm saying is, that if we wind up with commission jurisdiction, it will simply mean that the referment of a certificate of convenience or necessity will clearly be a requirement before funds can be advanced. That is not clear at the present time." (Pp. 50-51)

From these statements the subcommittee concluded that the only concern of the Rural Electrification Administration with respect to making loans to co-operatives subject to regulation was to see that certificates of public convenience and necessity were obtained where state law required it. This was borne out by the fact that the standard form of loan contract used by the REA requires the borrower to obtain all permits and certificates of public convenience and necessity required by state law. Mr. Arness stated that since the middle of last year the REA has been holding up processing of loans in this State until it can be determined whether or not a certificate from the Public Utilities Commission is required of the borrowers. If the California Supreme Court should decline to reverse the Plumas-Sierra case, previously mentioned, it appears that such certificates will be required before loans are made. If the Supreme Court decides that a co-operative cannot be subject to public utility regulation under present law or if Senate Bill No 327 is enacted, certificates of public convenience and necessity will not be required to be obtained before loans are approved by the REA.

REGULATION DOES NOT ADVERSELY AFFECT ECONOMIC FEASIBILITY

At the March 15th hearing of the subcommittee in Sacramento, Mr. Arness asked permission to correct and clarify his testimony as to the REA position. His testimony at this later hearing was to the effect that commission regulation might conceivably affect the economic feasibility of a co-operative project. Assuming, as Mr Arness said he did, that the commission acts within the law and not arbitrarily or capriciously, it was difficult to find substance in this argument. The fears that rate and financial regulation might handicap the successful operation of a co-operative have already been disposed of in this report. It was argued that co-operatives need protection against losing customers and one case was cited to the subcommittee as an example of what might occur In that case the Meadow Valley Lumber Company was a member and customer of the Plumas-Sierra Electric Co-operative. After many years of membership it found the service unsatisfactory, primarily as the result of many outages, and unsuccessfully sought corrective action from the co-op management. Failing in this the lumber company applied to the Pacific Gas and Electric Company for service since the company's lines ran near the lumber company's mill. The Pacific Gas and Electric Company declined to render service on the ground that in its contract under which it wholesaled electricity to the co-op, it had agreed not to serve any customer of the co-op. The lumber company complained to the California Public Utilities Commission and the commission found that the agreement between the company and the co-op to respect each other's territory had not been approved by the commission, that the company had a certificate generally covering the area in which the lumber mill operated, and the co-op had no such certificate. The commission concluded that it was therefore necessary to order the company to render the requested service The co-op entered an appearance in the case and has requested the State Supreme Court to review the matter. This case, like the other Plumas-Sierra case, previously mentioned, has not yet been decided.

Although it is clear that this Meadow Valley Lumber Company case is responsible for some of the agitation in favor of this bill the subcommittee is unable to find that it constitutes a hazard to co-operative operation. Unfortunately, the Plumas-Sierra Co-Operative had not complied with state law and had not obtained a certificate of public convenience and necessity. The testimony of Mr. Cassidy, Assistant Chief Counsel of the commission, was very clear to the effect that if the co-operative had such a certificate and had been furnishing adequate service the commission would not have permitted the lumber company to switch from one source of supply to another. It is also clear that if Senate Bill No. 327 had been enacted before the lumber company's case arose the lumber company would have been without any remedy whatever. It could not have obtained electricity from any other public utility, it could not have appealed to the commission for a remedy, and there were no annual meetings at which it could even have cast its single vote for directors. In the opinion of the subcommittee the Meadow Valley Lumber Company case demonstrates that existing law protects both the consumer and the co-operative in a manner far more conducive to the public welfare than the proposed legislation.

The only other reason advanced by Mr. Arness as to the effect of regulation upon economic feasibility of a co-operative enterprise was the fear that the co-operative would be opposed in its application for a certificate of convenience and necessity and that the utility company might during the pendency of the application build lines to serve part of the co-operative's proposed territory. However, in the one case in California where such a certificate was applied for no such difficulties were encountered and the application of the Death Valley Co-Operative was granted in a short time. Mr. Arness cited the case of the Mesa Co-Operative as an example of what might happen However, the testimony of Mr. Cassidy on behalf of the Public Utilities Commission showed that the Mesa Co-Operative not only lacked a certificate from the commission but flatly refused to make application for one when invited to do so by the commission. In its opinion the commission said:

> "Mesa was privileged to made application to the commission for a certificate. Not having done so, it undertook the construction of electric lines at its peril. Had it proceeded otherwise, this commission could have exercised its powers to prevent the construction of any electric lines into Mesa's proposed field of operations until its application could be heard and the issues determined as the public interest demanded. As Mesa did not file such an application, the commission must issue an order directing it to cease and desist from all further construction or operation of electric facilities until the requirements of Section 50 of the Public Utilities Act are fulfilled." (P. 13)

The gist of the Mesa decision is thus that the co-operative was acting outside of the law and could not proceed until it complied with the requirements of the Public Utilities Act. Instead of proving that regulation is a handicap to a co-operative in its initial stages, the decision very clearly establishes that the commission procedure would protect the co-operative against the very evils which Mr. Arness and other witnesses feared.

It did not appear from the testimony of Mr Arness that the REA fears that commission jurisdiction over rates would impair the economic feasibility of a co-operative project. However, other witnesses stated that the willingness of the REA to lend might be affected if the rates of the co-operative were subject to regulation. As has been stated in a previous section of this report, any concern on this point is unfounded since rates are determined upon the basis of what is fair and reasonable to the corporation and the commission has expressly stated that it would take account of the difference in the method of financing of co-operatives as compared with electric corporations generally. Private capital has always been available in large amounts to regulated utility corporations and the Federal Government certainly should be willing to lend under the same conditions as private investors.

To sum up, the evidence as to the position of the REA was, first, that regulation merely imposed a legal requirement for a certificate of convenience and necessity, and that applications for loans would be passed upon solely on the basis of economic feasibility. The later testimony attempted to argue that regulation would affect economic feasibility but none of the reasons advanced in support of this thesis could be sustained in the face of the actual rules and policies followed by the Public Utilities Commission. In the opinion of the subcommittee, the attitude of the REA toward lending to co-operatives subject to state regulation can best be determined, not from the conflicting statements of the witnesses who appeared before it, but, from the fact that the REA has consistently made loans in other states to regulated co-operatives. The Old Dominion and East Kentucky Co-Operative cases referred to previously are specific examples where federal money was being made available to regulated co-operatives. The evidence presented to the subcommittee showed that there are 11 states in which co-operatives are subject to state regulation in one form or another. These states are California, Colorado, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, New Jersey, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming. The Annual Report of the Rural Electrification Administration for the Fiscal Year 1950 was made a part of the subcommittee's records, and it shows that over 48 million dollars were actually advanced to borrowers in these 11 states during that year. It also shows that the total of all loans approved by the REA up to the end of that year to borrowers in the 11 states exceeded 400 million dollars. There are three additional states where the matter of jurisdiction is considered to be in doubt, and, if loans in these states are included, a total of more than half a billion dollars in loans has been approved in states where there is or may be regulation. From these facts, it is obvious that loans will continue to be made to co-operatives in California just as in other states even though Senate Bill No. 327 is not passed and co-operatives remain subject to regulation.

CO-OPERATIVES ARE PRIVATE CORPORATIONS

A further argument on behalf of the exemption of co-operatives from regulation was that co-operatives are like municipal corporations which are exempt from regulation under the Constitution. In reply to a question submitted by the subcommittee, the Legislative Counsel said "As to your third question regarding the difference between electric departments of municipal corporations and rural electric co-operatives, a municipal corporation is a public agency, while a rural electric co-operative is a private corporation of a nonprofit character, organized primarily to provide service to its members." In view of the fact that a co-operative is a private corporation, and in view of the fact that its activities are virtually unlimited in scope so far as the Corporation Law of the State is concerned it does not appear to be appropriate to grant such corporations the same exemption which is granted to municipal corporations and districts which are responsible to all of the people in a given area.

INTENTION OF BILL NOT EFFECTED

Near the close of the subcommittee's hearings, Senators Powers and Johnson, the authors of the bill made statements in which they emphasized that their intention in introducing the bill was to accomplish two things: First, to protect co-operatives against losing customers through Public Utility Commission action, and Second, to avoid the imposition of rates on co-operatives which would impair the ability of the corporation to repay loans made by the REA. The specific answer to these points is, First, that co-operatives have available to them the same protection which is afforded all public utilities in this State and this protection appears, from the testimony of the witnesses and the decisions of the commission, to be ample. The difficulties in which the Plumas-Sierra Co-Operative and the Mesa Co-Operative found themselves appear to have arisen as a result of failure to take advantage of the protection which is available to them under existing law. Second, the fears as to harmful rate regulation appear to be unfounded and no instance of undesirable rate regulation has been cited Furthermore, it does not appear that the REA shares this concern.

In any event, it was made abundantly clear that Senate Bill No. 327 goes far beyond the intentions of the authors of the bill. It proposes the drastic remedy of abolition of all regulation of corporations which are formed so as to meet the nonprofit co-operative requirement. The utility company witnesses pointed out that this exemption might be taken advantage of in a variety of undesirable ways although the bill is defended as a measure to aid rural electric co-operatives its actual effect is to create a far-reaching exemption in this State's scheme of public utility regulation. The bill must be weighed, not according to what the authors intended but according to what it would actually accomplish From this standpoint it seems to be clearly contrary to the established public policy of this State.

The need for and value of rural electric co-operatives was admitted by every witness who touched upon the subject, but recognition of their usefulness is not an argument for the bill. The arguments of its supporters all proceed on the premise that existing law is a handicap to co-operatives. In the light of the facts developed at the hearings this assumption has been proved to be false. The commission's decisions in the Meadow Valley Lumber Company case and the Mesa Co-Operative case which seem to have been the spring-board for this assumption do not, when the opinions are read and the circumstances studied, justify any such conclusions as the proponents of the bill have attempted to draw. To adopt this bill on the ground that regulation is harmful to co-operatives would be to assume that the Public Utilities Commission would get arbitrarily and capriciously, contrary to the rules of law announced by the courts and in its own decisions. The subcommittee does not believe that there is any reason whatever to justify such a vote of lack of confidence in the commission.

SUMMARY

In submitting this report, the subcommittee believes that its hearings have been as full and extensive as any that have been held on a specific piece of legislation. It has been assured by Senators Powers and Johnson, the authors of the bill, that they have had a fair hearing with full opportunity to present all material which they deemed pertinent. The hearings consumed approximately 17 hours on four different days, and were conducted in Baker, San Francisco, and Sacramento. Representatives of two operating co-operatives, five proposed co-operatives, two farm organizations, the Federal Rural Electrification Administration, co-operative customers, and three public utility companies, were heard.

The testimony taken totaled 511 pages when transcribed and certain reports and papers were received and made part of the record. It is with confidence, therefore, that an earnest endeavor has been made to arrive at the truth of the matters involved that the subcommittee submits the following conclusions:

1. Regulation of co-operatives under the existing Public Utilities Law by the Public Utilities Commission in no way handicaps their formation, financing, or operation. The disadvantages of regulation suggested by the proponents of the bill are without substantial foundation in fact so long as co-operatives comply with existing law.

2. The bill proposes to substitute for our established and generally successful scheme of regulatory protection of utility enterprises a rigid monopoly privilege, giving to corporations which are formed to take advantage of its provisions an exclusive right to serve new customers in an area without any regulation whatever. The existing law, as administered by the Public Utilities Commission, provides all of the protection for co-operatives which could reasonably be given them, with the added assurance that under regulation protection cannot be obtained contrary to the public interest.

3. Under existing law, the Public Utilities Commission will not take away from any co-operative which complies with state law a customer of that co-operative who is receiving reasonably adequate service. The bill is, therefore, not necessary to prevent a contrary result.

4. Under existing law there is no reason why regulation of a co-operative's rates should impair its ability to secure financing from the Rural Electrification Administration.

5. The Rural Electrification Administration does not refuse to lend money to co-operatives subject to commission regulation.

6. There is no substantial basis to the argument that regulation adversely affects the economic feasibility of rural electrification projects

7. Co-operative corporations are private companies and not public agencies, and are not entitled to the exemption from regulation accorded municipal corporations. If co-operatives are exempted from regulation there would be no responsibility to serve the public interest.

8. The nonprofit co-operative type of corporation may be used for many purposes other than rural electrification. If an exemption from regulation is granted to this class of corporation such corporations may be formed to construct generating and transmission facilities with complete freedom from regulatory control.

The subcommittee finds that enactment of Senate Bill No. 327 would be a major step backward in the policy of this State with respect to utility regulation and would not be of any assistance to desirable rural electrification projects. We, therefore, recommend that the bill be not reported out to the Assembly.

Respectfully submitted,

SUBCOMMITTEE ON SENATE BILL NO. 327

REQUEST FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT THAT REPORT OF ASSEMBLY MEMBERS TO JOINT LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE ON OLD AGE ASSISTANCE INITIATIVE BE PRINTED IN JOURNAL

Mrs. Niehouse asked for, and was granted, unanimous consent that the Report of the Assembly Members of the Joint Legislative Committee on the Old Age Assistance Initiative Measure be ordered printed in the Journal, in 10 point type, as follows:

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY MEMBERS APPOINTED BY SPEAKER SAM COLLINS TO THE JOINT LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE ON OLD AGE ASSISTANCE INITIATIVE

Pursuant to Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 2, on January 11, 1951, Speaker Sam L. Collins appointed a seven member committee to meet with a seven member Senate committee, to be known as Joint Legislative Committee on Old Age Assistance Initiative, to study the old age assistance initiative presented by initiative to the Legislature.

Kathryn T. Niehouse was elected Chairman of the Joint Committee, and was also elected Chairman of the Assembly Members of the Joint Legislative Committee on Old Age Assistance Initiative.

The joint committee invited organizations and individuals who had requested hearings to appear before the committee. It gave full hearings to all witnesses who wished to be heard.

After the organization meeting, additional hearings were held on January 18th in the Assembly Chamber, where a two hour presentation was made by George McLain, John C. Henderson, and Frank Gardner of the California Institute of Social Welfare. Others heard were Larry Chandler of the State and Local Government Department of Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, William R McDougall of the County Supervisors Association of California.

On January 19th, in committee room, those being heard were: State Department of Social Welfare; State Legislative Auditor; Department of Finance, and the California Institute of Social Welfare.

The sponsors, California Institute of Social Welfare, testified that the cost of the initiative would be approximately 55 million dollars, of which $25,060,935 would be the amount the State would assume from the counties present tax load. The Legislative Auditor testified that his estimate of the cost of the initiative would be slightly in excess of 100 million dollars, approximately $19,000,000 the State would assume from the counties present tax load.

Because the initiative measure required action by the Legislature within 40 days, and because there was ambiguity in the Legislative Counsel's opinion defining the 40-legislative day period, the Assembly adopted House Resolution No. 51 on January 23, 1951 This stated: "that the Assembly hereby asserts and claims the right to act on any initiative measure presented to it during the full period of 40 days while the Legislature is in actual session after the receipt by it of such measure, excluding from such 40-day period the days of the mandatory constitutional recess."

Pursuant to House Resolution No. 51, the Assembly members of the Joint Legislative Committee on Old Age Assistance Initiative held meetings and heard additional testimony following the constitutional recess.

Before the constitutional recess in January, 1951, the Senate committee met and reported back to the Senate, "that the initiative measure, old age assistance initiative must be adopted or rejected in January," although the Assembly had adopted the 40-legislative day period.

Inasmuch as the Senate has refused to enact into law the old age assistance initiative prior to the completion of the joint committee hearings, the Assembly committee finds itself constrained to take no further action. The Assembly members of the Joint Legislative Committee being unable to agree on the estimates and other testimony presented at the hearings, are not in agreement on recommendation to the Assembly concerning action on the initiative.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Speaker Sam L. Collins announced that the Federal Government is making demands upon the State Printing Plant, and that the State Printer reports the loss of newsprint to the government, and the difficulty of securing new printing supplies.

Speaker Sam L. Collins further announced that, as the cost of printing the names and reports of legislative advocates is approximately $8,000, the State Printer, because of present plant handicaps, requests that he be permitted to print, in the future, the information relative to the legislative advocates in half page form, and at a cost approximating $3,500, instead of the usual $8,000.

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE
SACRAMENTO, April 4, 1951

To the Senate and Assembly of the State of California

In my message to the Legislature on January 8th, I discussed with you the need for an adequate program for civil defense and the recommendations of the Federal Government as to the cost of such a program. In the course of that discussion I reported to you as follows

> "Congress last week passed, and the President signed, a bill establishing the national policy for civil defense This legislation authorized a $3,000,000,000 program, its cost to be borne by Federal, State and local Government Congress has yet to appropriate the federal share and to determine the rules under which it will be administered in the states It is estimated it will be necessary for the State of California and its subdivisions to contribute an aggregate of $140,000,000 to $150,000,000 to the program. The proportion in which this burden must be shared by the state and local governments will have to be determined by the Legislature"

The situation as I represented it at that time has not changed materially, either so far as need for our state program is concerned or from the standpoint of the development of a federal program. However, on March 27, 1951, General George Marshall, Secretary of National Defense, was quoted as follows in the press:

> "The world situation now as I see it is more serious than it was last November."

This means that the time left to us for preparation is diminishing day by day whether the deadline against which we are working is a Third World War or a mobilization of the free countries of the world, sufficient in strength to avoid such a war.

During these interim months, the federal policy on civil defense has not been further clarified, nor has the announced program been advanced to keep pace with the national defense program and the military situation

No federal legislation on civil defense has been enacted since last December and no appropriation for the purpose has been made. As a result, the Federal Civil Defense Administration has given little guidance except to recommend the appropriation of state matching funds based on its proposed budget which is awaiting congressional action.

This, however, does not affect our responsibility to prepare for the civil defense of our State to the very best of our ability, and I do not propose that it shall. It does, however, affect the accuracy of my reporting to you and precludes any breakdown of the amounts required for specific purposes Notwithstanding, the Legislature is entitled to know at this time not only what progress we are making but also what funds are needed in the next fiscal year for the development of our program

When I reported to you in January it was estimated under federal policy that California and its local governments would be required to contribute an aggregate of $140,000,000 to $150,000,000. It was understood the major portion of the amount was to be expended for bomb shelters recommended by the Federal Government.

After attending the Governors' Conference with the Federal Director of Civil Defense, and further studying the matter, I believe I should say to you now that no money should be appropriated for bomb shelters at this time.

It is obvious that the Federal Government has no well-defined plans on the subject. No specifications or even types of communal shelters have been recommended for construction; no criteria have been established for the alteration of existing structures to fit them for use as bomb shelters and no federal appropriations have been made for either purpose

The Federal Government is the only agency that can possibly have sufficient knowledge to determine what kind of mass shelters, if any, can be made effective, or that can appropriate the basic funds to make a mass shelter program a reality. Unless and until it does these things it would be folly for the State to initiate a shelter program.

There are certain things, however, that the State must do if we are to have an adequate civil defense program. We must have both state and regional command posts, a communications system connecting us with every city and county in the State, mobile support and rescue equipment. We know also that there are other things involving both organization and equipment that must be contributed by the local governments. I have given careful consideration to the matter of equitable distribution of the cost of civil defense expenditures between the State and local units of government, and submit the following for your consideration:

1. Where the purposes are clearly for statewide usage, the fiscal responsibility should unquestionably be borne by the State. I consider the following items in this category:

a. Fire-fighting equipment retained under state control for general reserve.

b. Mobile support equipment, designed for general use under state control.

c Statewide communications down to cities and counties.

d Medical supplies. These are for first aid stations and for immediate supplies for the first four to six hours for emergency hospitals.

2. Where the expenses incurred are purely for local purposes, the local governments should defray the entire cost exclusive of such federal funds as may be provided on a matching basis Major items in this category are:

a. Local administrative costs, including civil defense personnel and installations such as intelligence centers

b Individual uniforms and equipment for auxiliaries, reserves and other Civil Defense Corps volunteers

c Local communications equipment including air raid warning equipment such as sirens

d. Rescue equipment other than in mobile support units.

What the cost of these items will be to the State is more or less a matter of conjecture, but the best estimates available are that it will be somewhere between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000. I therefore recommend that the Legislature appropriate a sum within the range of the estimates. In fixing the amount you will undoubtedly take into consideration the formula you have in mind for dividing the cost of civil defense between the State and local governments. At all events this should be a nonrecurring expenditure unless we are subjected to attack, because it is designed to provide the bulk of supplies and equipment required to meet the basic needs in organizational equipment and supplies for the State's share of the civil defense program so far as they can be foreseen at this time. Because for a matter of several weeks it will still be impossible to determine whether our surplus at the end of this fiscal year will be able to meet such an appropriation, I recommend that whatever amount the Legislature agrees upon shall be appropriated from the $75,000,000 Revenue Deficiency Reserve Fund, commonly known as the Rainy Day Fund. As you will remember, the Legislature in the Third Extraordinary Session held during September of last year made this fund available for expenditure in the event of extreme emergency as defined in Section 1505 of the Military and Veterans Code. Under the provisions of this act, transfers may be made to the Emergency Fund upon direction of the Governor, the State Controller and the Director of Finance and pursuant to the recommendations of the California State Disaster Council for expenditure in the relief and alleviation of conditions during a period of extreme emergency. By this action, the reserve became not only a savings account against a "rainy day" in state revenues but also a genuine emergency fund. I believe it is proper to draw upon this reserve to meet our present need for civil defense equipment such as that herein contemplated, because it is certainly in preparation for a "Rainy Day." However, I believe that the Rainy Day Fund is not too large for the established purpose and should be reimbursed from any excess General Fund revenue which may be received over and above the amounts estimated for the 1950-1951 Fiscal Year as shown in the Governor's Budget for 1951-1952.

During the present period of uncertainty regarding emergency needs and revenue receipts, the revenue deficiency reserve could be made a stabilizing feature in the management of state fiscal affairs. To this end I recommend that the Legislature give consideration to the transferring of any surplus General Fund revenues which may develop in future years in excess of the budget estimates to the Revenue Deficiency Reserve Fund. If this should be done, the reserve would become a reservoir to hold unneeded funds until adjustments could be made in the State's finance program or be drawn upon when revenue receipts fall below budget expectations.

I regret that I cannot be more specific in my recommendation for appropriations for civil defense. But the future of our international relations cannot be foreseen and we are largely dependent upon federal policy and programs. I have recommended what appears to me to be an adequate but conservative amount because I realize that the Legislature will be in session next March, and if necessary a deficiency appropriation can be made at that time. At all events if conditions change and further appropriations are needed, I will immediately report the matter to you and seek your cooperation.

I believe we must be serious about civil defense. Halfway measures will not suffice because a partial defense program is no program and our preparation of necessity is only partial at the present time. In order that you might know what has been done up to the present time, I submit the following brief report:

Summary of Civil Defense Operation

In conformity with the Civil Defense Act of 1950, the Office of Civil Defense was established October 2, 1950, and immediately undertook the civil defense program for California.

Although it has been in operation only six months, and has been handicapped by lack of guidance and assistance at federal level, it has laid a comprehensive and sound foundation for further progress. Its accomplishments have been material and have placed California among the leading states in the civil defense program

Among those accomplishments are:

Organization of the Office of Civil Defense itself, with a comprehensive, diversified, and efficient staff.

Production of an over-all state plan, including 10 operational annexes for guidance of lower political governments.

Completion of organization and initiation of regional planning in five of the 10 regional offices. The remaining five are in process of organization at this time

Supplying of current guidance and assistance to statewide civil defense agencies through some 23 bulletins and 11 newsletters.

Provision through original publication and reprint, for local use, civil defense guides, manuals, and instructional material, including reprint of 3,000,000 copies of the pamphlet, "Survival Under Atomic Attack," and printing and distribution of 500,000 registration forms for volunteer workers.

Organization of a statewide educational program on civil defense through newspapers, periodicals, radio, and television. Every radio station in the State (150) is undertaking a weekly broadcast.

Furnishing of guidance and assistance to local governments in the organization of disaster councils, (58 counties and 256 cities now accredited) the setting up of planning staffs at all levels and the initiation of local operational plans. Plans are estimated 50 percent complete statewide. Secured adoption by 53 counties and 255 incorporated cities of the Master Mutual Aid Agreement

Organization, with the assistance of the Department of Education, of eight law enforcement training schools which have trained 214 instructors now engaged in training 10,000 auxiliary officers in 30 counties.

Training of 38 nurses in radiation fundamentals.

Organization of the first school for radiological monitoring.

Cooperation with the American Red Cross in training 56,025 graduate first aiders, including 4,133 instructors, plus 500,000 first aiders now being trained California now has more than 8,000 instructors and 700 instructors to train instructors

Enlistment of the State's 715 daily and weekly newspapers in printing more than 6,000,000 words on civil defense and its radio stations in broadcasting more than 700 hours

Initiation of survey of facilities available for shelter purposes in all critical target areas

Completion of survey on all fire and heavy engineering equipment statewide

Organization of aircraft warning service statewide, with regular alerts held bi-weekly. Recruitment of observers and establishment of posts for Ground Observer Corps Initiation of the recruitment, organization and training of Civil Defense Warden Service. Estimated 60 percent complete.

This report is to April 1, 1951, and the work is progressing daily.

Finally, I believe I can fairly report to you that no state has accomplished more to date, and that most of them have accomplished less.

We will try at all times to keep among the leaders of the states, anticipating as best we can the program of the Federal Government and the needs of the people of California.

Respectfully yours,

EARL WARREN, Governor

"SECTION 1. Section 1243 is added to the Water Code, to read:

1243. The construction of check dams and the release therefrom of water to augment stream flow for the maintenance and betterment of fish life during low water stages is a public use and in the public interest. Such water shall be and remain subject to appropriation for other purposes in accordance with this division."

Amendments read, and adopted.

Bill ordered reprinted, engrossed, and to be re-referred to the Committee on Fish and Game.

SECOND READING OF SENATE BILLS

Bill read second time, and ordered to third reading.

Senate Bill No. 558—An act to add Section 23956 to the Water Code, relating to facilities use charges for irrigation district improvement districts and validating proceedings heretofore taken by district boards to establish such charges, and declaring the urgency of this act, to take effect immediately.

Bill read second time, and ordered to third reading.

Senate Bill No. 471—An act to amend Section 820 of the Agricultural Code, relating to tomatoes.

Bill read second time, and ordered to third reading

Senate Bill No. 102—An act to amend Section 809 of the Agricultural Code, relating to walnut standards.

Bill read second time, and ordered to third reading.

Senate Bill No. 103—An act to amend Section 1038 of the Agricultural Code, relating to commercial fertilizer.

Bill read second time, and ordered to third reading.

Senate Bill No. 148—An act to add Section 429.5 to the Fish and Game Code, relating to fishing by persons in the Armed Forces of the United States, declaring the urgency thereof, to take effect immediately.

Bill read second time

Consideration of Committee Amendments

The following amendment was proposed by the Committee on Fish and Game:

Amendment No. 1

In line 3 of the title of the printed bill, as amended in the Senate on March 21, 1951, after "States", insert "declaring the urgency thereof, to take effect immediately".

Amendment read, and adopted.

Bill ordered reprinted, and to third reading.

Senate Bill No. 470—An act to amend Section 802.6 of the Agricultural Code, relating to containers for grapes

Bill read second time.

Consideration of Committee Amendments

The following amendments were proposed by the Committee on Agriculture:

Amendment No. 1

In line 2 of the title of the printed bill, after "grapes", insert ", to take effect immediately".

Amendment No. 2

On page 2, lines 17 and 18, of said bill, strike out "and is notched at the center of the base by a triangle with a base of 4 inches and an altitude of 2 inches".

Amendment No. 3

On page 2, lines 19 and 20, of said bill, strike out " and to each side of the notch".

Amendment No. 4

On page 2, line 20, of said bill, after the period, insert "This container may or may not also be notched at the center of the base by a triangle with a base of 4 inches and an altitude of 2 inches. If notched, bottom slats shall be attached to each side of the notch, in addition to each bevel "

Amendment No. 5

On page 2 of said bill, after line 51, insert

"SEC. 2. This act is an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety within the meaning of Article IV of the Constitution and shall go into immediate effect. The facts constituting such necessity are:

The practice of notching grape containers defined as container number 37G by Section 802.6 of the Agricultural Code is now obsolete. In order to permit the use of standard containers with beveled corners in the 1951 grape season, as permitted by said section, but without requiring that said containers be notched, it is necessary that this act to into immediate effect."

Amendment No. 6

On page 1 of said bill, strike out lines 9 to 13, inclusive, and insert "ard for grapes when packed with or without pads, inner-liners, or other device which does not reduce the inside volume of the container by more than 10 percent; provided that the vacant spaces, if any, resulting from the use of such device are readily visible"

Amendments read, and adopted.

Bill ordered reprinted, and to be re-referred to the Committee on Agriculture.

CONSIDERATION OF SENATE AMENDMENTS

Assembly Bill No. 169—An act to add Section 14720.1 to the Education Code, relating to retirement of employees of school districts.

Urgency Clause

NOES—None.

The question being: Shall the Assembly concur in the following Senate amendments to Assembly Bill No. 169?

Amendment No. 1

In line 1 of the title of the printed bill, as amended in the Assembly on March 16, 1951, strike out "Section 14720.1", and insert "Sections 14720.1 and 14737.1".

Amendment No. 2

In line 2 of the title of said bill, as amended, strike out the period, and insert ", providing for the management of school district retirement funds, and declaring the urgency thereof, to take effect immediately."

Amendment No. 3

On page 1, line 7, of said bill, as amended, strike out "prior".

Amendment No. 4

On page 1, line 8, of said bill, as amended, after 'rendered", insert "before he became a member of the plan".

Amendment No. 5

On page 1, line 9, of said bill, as amended, after "board", insert "which governs the district".

Amendment No. 6

On page 1, line 10, of said bill, as amended, strike out "prior"

Amendment No. 7

On page 1, lines 11 and 12, of said bill, as amended, strike out "prior service benefits", and insert "computing benefits for service credited".

Amendment No. 8

On page 1, line 14, of said bill, as amended, after the period, insert "At the time of retirement of any school district employee entitled to credit for service under this section, the school district shall pay into the district retirement fund such sum as may be necessary to provide both annuity and pension benefits in respect to such credited service."

Amendment No. 9

On page 1 of said bill, as amended, after line 14, insert

"SEC. 2. Section 14737.1 is added to said code, to read:

14737.1. Whenever the United States Government or any department or agency thereof offers to exchange bonds or other interest bearing notes and obligations of the United States for other bonds or interest bearing notes and obligations of the United States of a different series or issue, the district retirement board may exchange any bonds or other interest bearing notes and obligations of the United States in which funds of the district retirement fund are then invested for bonds or other interest bearing notes and obligations of the United States, in accordance with the terms of such offer

SEC. 3. This act is an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety within the meaning of Article IV of the Constitution and shall go into immediate effect. The facts constituting such necessity are:

Many of the school district employees to whom credit in the district retirement plan is extended by this act must terminate their district employment at the end of the current fiscal year. Unless this act takes immediate effect, such employees cannot participate in the retirement benefits extended by this act, and in consequence thereof will be occasioned great hardship and distress because such retirement allowances as they may receive will be inadequate for their needs Substantial amounts of district retirement fund moneys are now invested in United States Government bonds of a series for which Treasury Department has offered to exchange other United States bonds bearing a higher interest rate. That offer will expire on or about April 7, 1951. To enable the district retirement boards of California school districts to exchange those United States bonds in which district retirement fund moneys are now invested for United States bonds bearing higher interest, and so to reduce the amounts which must be raised by district taxation in already heavily taxed districts, it is necessary that this act take effect immediately."

The roll was called, and the Assembly concurred in Senate amendments to Assembly Bill No. 169 by the following vote:

AYES—Babbage, Beck, Belotti, Berry, Brady, Brown, Burke, Burkhalter, Caldecott, Chapel, Clarke, Cloyed, Coats, Collier, George D. Collins, Connolly, Conrad, Cooke, Crowley, Davis, Dickey, Dills, Dolwig, Doyle, Dunn, Elliott, Erwin, Evans, Fleury, Gaffney, Geddes, Grant, Gubser, Hahn, Hansen, Henderson, Hinckley, Hollibaugh, Kelly, Kirkwood, Klocksiem, Lanterman, Levering, Lincoln, Lipscomb, Lowrey, Luckel, Lyon, Maloney, McCarthy, McCollister, McFall, McGee, McMillan, Meyers, Morris, Moss, Munnell, Niehouse, Parker, Porter, Rosenthal, Rumford, Shaw, Sillman, Smith, Stanley, Stewart, Thomas, Tomlinson, and Mr Speaker—71.

NOES—None

By Messrs. McCollister, Clarke, Dills, Thomas, and Evans:

House Resolution No. 105

Relative to the creation of the Assembly Committee on Interstate Cooperation

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, As follows:

1. The Assembly Committee on Interstate Cooperation is hereby created and authorized and directed to ascertain, study and analyze all facts relating to cooperation between this State and the other states and with the Federal Government, including but not limited to the operation, effect, administration, enforcement and needed revision of any and all laws in any way bearing upon or relating to the subject of this resolution, and to report thereon to the Assembly, including in the reports its recommendations for appropriate legislation

2. The committee shall consist of the same five Members of the Assembly as authorized by Section 8001 of the Government Code.

3. The committee is authorized to act during this session of the Legislature, including any recess, and after final adjournment until the commencement of the 1953 Regular Session, with authority to file its final report not later than the fifteenth legislative day of that session.

4 The committee and its members shall have and exercise all of the rights, duties and powers conferred upon investigating committees and their members by the provisions of the Joint Rules of the Senate and Assembly and of the Standing Rules of the Assembly as they are adopted and amended from time to time at this session, which provisions are incorporated herein and made applicable to this committee and its members.

5 The committee has the following additional powers and duties

(a) To contract with such other agencies, public or private, as it deems necessary for the rendition and affording of such services, facilities, studies and reports to the committee as will best assist it to carry out the purposes for which it is created

(b) To cooperate with and secure the cooperation of county, city, city and county, and other local law enforcement agencies in investigating any matter within the scope of this resolution and to direct the sheriff of any county to serve subpenas, orders and other process issued by the committee

(c) To report its findings and recommendations to the Legislature and to the people from time to time and at any time, not later than herein provided

(d) To do any and all other things necessary or convenient to enable it fully and adequately to exercise its powers, perform its duties, and accomplish the objects and purposes of this resolution.

6 The committee, and any subcommittee when so authorized by the committee, may meet and act without as well as within the State of California, and is authorized to leave the State in the performance of its duties

7 The sum of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby made available from the Contingent Fund of the Assembly for the expenses of the committee and its members and for any charges, expenses or claims it may incur under this resolution, to be paid from the said Contingent Fund and disbursed, after certification by the chairman of the committee, upon warrants drawn by the State Controller upon the State Treasurer.

Resolution read.

The roll was called, and the resolution adopted by the following vote:

AYES—Belotti, Berry, Brady, Brown, Burkhalter, Caldecott, Chapel, Cloyed, Coats, Collier, Connolly, Cooke, Crowley, Davis, Dickey, Dills, Dolwig, Doyle, Dunn, Elliott, Erwin, Evans, Gaffney, Geddes, Grant, Grunsky, Gubser, Hagen, Hansen, Hawkins, Henderson, Hinckley, Hollibaugh, Kelly, Klocksiem, Levering, Lincoln, Lindsay, Lipscomb, Lowrey, Luckel, Maloney, McCollister, McFall, McGee, McMillan, Meyers, Niehouse, Parker, Porter, Rumford, Silliman, Smith, Stewart, Thomas, Tomlinson, Waters, and Mr. Speaker—58.

CONSIDERATION OF HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 108

By Mr. Maloney:

House Resolution No. 108

Relative to the preparation and printing of a Supplement to the Interim Subject List

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the Legislative Counsel is directed to prepare a Supplement to the Interim Subject List of all bills, constitutional amendments and resolutions introduced at the 1951 Regular Session of the Legislature; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of the Supplement to the Interim Subject List be mailed to all Members of the Legislature as soon as possible after adjournment of the 1951 Regular Session of the Legislature; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly is instructed to cause to be printed not to exceed 2,000 copies of the Supplement to the Interim Subject List, the cost thereof to be paid from the legislative printing appropriation.

Resolution read, and adopted.

By Mr. Maloney:

House Resolution No. 109

Relative to the preparation and printing of a Summary Digest

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the Legislative Counsel is directed to prepare a Summary Digest of statutes enacted and constitutional amendments proposed at the 1951 Regular Session of the Legislature; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of the Summary Digest be mailed to all Members of the Legislature as soon as possible after the "bill-signing" period; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly is instructed to cause to be printed not to exceed 2,000 copies of the Summary Digest, the cost thereof to be paid from the legislative printing appropriation.

Resolution read, and adopted.

By Mr. Maloney:

House Resolution No. 110

Relating to preprinting the proposed codes

WHEREAS, Upon the adjournment of this current session of the Legislature, the California Code Commission will continue its work of codifying the general statutory laws of this State with the prospect of completing said work prior to January 1, 1953; and

WHEREAS, It is the practice of the Code Commission to prepare preliminary drafts of proposed codes in mimeographed form for distribution to interested persons and groups for study and criticism prior to submission to the Legislature, but distribution by such means is necessarily limited; and

WHEREAS, If such proposed codes were printed they could be more widely circulated among interested persons and groups, thus enabling them to receive the careful scrutiny to which legislation of such importance is entitled; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the California Code Commission is hereby directed to prepare for printing as soon as practical after the adjournment of the 1951 Regular Session of the Legislature, such codes or portions thereof as it proposes to submit to the Legislature for consideration, and immediately upon such printing to distribute the same to all interested persons and groups; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly is hereby directed to have not to exceed 1,500 copies of each of such proposed codes, or portions thereof, printed, the cost thereof to be payable from the legislative printing appropriation.

Resolution read, and adopted.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolution was offered:

By Mr. Crowley:

House Resolution No. 106

Relative to congratulating Vernon Kilpatrick on winning the nomination to the Los Angeles City Council

WHEREAS, The election returns from Los Angeles indicate that our colleague, Vernon Kilpatrick, received the highest vote among five contestants for the office of member of the City Council from the Tenth District in the City of Los Angeles; and

WHEREAS, He has brought honor and distinction to the State Legislature during his 12 years of service, in that he has consistently devoted himself to sound, constructive legislation, and has proved himself a loyal Californian and great American; and

WHEREAS, He has served as a member of the Special Pension Committee appointed by Governor Warren in 1943, has five times been Vice Chairman of the standing Assembly Committee on Social Welfare, and is Chairman of the Assembly Interim Committee on Crime and Corrections, in which capacity he has instituted reforms modernizing and making more humane our prison system and saving money for the taxpayers through rehabilitation and self-help work projects; and

WHEREAS, As a Member of the Legislature he has successfully applied his wide experience in the field of publishing, advertising, and insurance; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That it hereby conveys to Vernon Kilpatrick its congratulations on receiving the highest vote among the five contestants for the office of member of the City Council from the Tenth District of Los Angeles, and that it expresses the wish that he will be as conspicuously outstanding in this endeavor as he has been as a Member of the State Legislature; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk is directed to prepare a suitably engrossed copy of this resolution for Vernon Kilpatrick

Resolution read, and ordered referred to the Committee on Rules

REQUEST FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT THAT NAMES OF LEGISLATIVE REPRESENTATIVES APPROVED AS OF APRIL 2, 1951, BE PRINTED IN JOURNAL

Mr. Dolwig asked for, and was granted, unanimous consent that additional names of legislative representatives, as approved on April 2, 1951, be ordered printed in the Journal, in 10 point type, as follows:

REPORT OF ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON LEGISLATIVE REPRESENTATION

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE
ASSEMBLY, COMMITTEE ON LEGISLATIVE REPRESENTATION
SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, April 3, 1951

Hon. Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly,
Assembly Chamber,
Sacramento, California

MR. SPEAKER: In conformity with the authority vested in it, your committee has reviewed the statements and reports of the persons hereinafter named who have filed as legislative advocates and has found that all of the persons named in this report have complied with the provisions of Chapter 8, Part 1, of Subdivision 2, of Title 2, of the Government Code.

After five days from the filing of this report, a certificate of registration as legislative advocate will be issued to each person named in this report unless good cause to the contrary appears as provided by Government Code 9909, Section 3.

The names of persons who have filed as legislative advocates but do not appear on the list have been withheld by your committee because of technical defects in the application, for further information, or for further consideration by your committee.

All registrants whose names have been withheld will be notified, and will be given an appropriate opportunity to conform with the requirements of the law.

Respectfully submitted.

REQUEST FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT THAT RULES OF PROCEDURE BE PRINTED IN JOURNAL

Mr. Dolwig asked for, and was granted, unanimous consent that the Committee on Legislative Representation be permitted to print the following Rules of Procedure, in the Journal, in 10 point type:

RULES OF PROCEDURE OF ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON LEGISLATIVE REPRESENTATION

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE
SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, April 3, 1951

Hon. Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly
Assembly Chamber
Sacramento, California

MR. SPEAKER: Your Committee on Legislative Representation has adopted Rules of Procedure dealing with the issuance, suspension or revocation of certificates of registration as legislative advocates.

These rules have been adopted for the guidance of the committee and for the purpose of informing persons affected by and interested in the action which your committee will take in performing its functions under Government Code Section 9909. The Rules of Procedure are attached.

Respectfully submitted.

FRANK P. BELOTTI
BERNARD R. BRADY
WILLIAM H. ROSENTHAL
H. ALLEN SMITH
RICHARD J. DOLWIG, Chairman

RULES OF PROCEDURE

Resolved by the Special Assembly Committee on Legislative Representation, That, until revoked, altered, or amended, these Rules are adopted and shall guide the committee in conducting proceedings, conducting investigations, and holding and conducting hearings, when hearings are held, to determine whether the committee shall issue, revoke, or suspend a certificate of registration as legislative advocate under Section 9909 of the Government Code:

Part 1—General Provisions

1. Unless the provision or the context otherwise requires, the definitions and general provisions set forth in this part govern the construction of these Rules.

2 "Committee" means the Special Assembly Committee on Legislative Representation.

3. "Registrant" means any person required to file any statement or report under Section 9906 of the Government Code, and any person who has filed any statement or report referred to in Section 9906 of the Government Code.

4 "Certificate" means a certificate of registration as legislative advocate, issued pursuant to Section 9909 of the Government Code.

5. Rule or part headings contained in these Rules shall not in any manner affect the meaning or intent of these Rules.

Part 2—Issuance of Certificates

20. (Applications for Certificates) The committee may consider any statement, report, or authorization filed by a registrant pursuant to Section 9906 of the Government Code, as an application for a certificate.

21. (Processing Applications) The committee will review each application for a certificate filed by a registrant to whom any certificate has been issued, as soon as practicable after the filing of the application. If upon a review of the application, the committee is not satisfied that a certificate should issue, the committee may require the registrant to supply and submit such additional information and proof as the committee deems proper.

If upon a review of the application, and the review of any additional information and proof, and after such other investigation as the committee deems proper, a majority of the committee finds that the registrant is of good moral character, has complied with the provisions of Chapter 8, Part 1, Division 2, Title 2 of the Government Code, and is entitled to a certificate, the committee will make a preliminary determination to that effect.

22. (Report of Preliminary Determination) The committee shall, as soon as practicable, report to the Assembly its preliminary determination. The report shall contain the name of each registrant to whom the committee proposes to issue a certificate, the name or names of the persons by whom each registrant is employed and from whom the registrant has on file an authorization, a brief statement that the committee proposes to issue a certificate to each person named not less than five days after the making of the report unless good cause for denying the certificate is presented, and a request that the report be printed in the Assembly Journal.

23. (Issuance of Certificate) At the first meeting of the committee held not less than five days after the making of the report of the committee's preliminary determination, the committee will issue a certificate to each registrant named in the report, unless there has been filed with the committee a verified complaint conforming with the provisions of Part 4 of these Rules, or because of matter brought to its attention since the filing of the report, the committee on its own motion determines to conduct further investigation.

24. (Report of Denial, Suspension, or Revocation of Certificate) If upon review of an application and the review of any additional information and proof, or after such other investigation as the committee deems proper, the committee finally determines that the application should be denied and that the registrant should not receive a certificate, or if a certificate is suspended or revoked, the committee shall make an order to that effect and report its action to the Assembly.

If the determination and order are made without an opportunity for the registrant to appear at a hearing, the executive secretary of the committee shall mail a copy of the order to the registrant at his last address shown on his registration papers. The order shall be mailed, together with a statement that upon proper application pursuant to Part 4 of these Rules, a hearing will be afforded the registrant.

If the order is made after a hearing or after the registrant has been afforded an opportunity to appear at a hearing of which he has failed to avail himself, no notice of such order need be given to the registrant.

Part 3. Certificate Requirements

30. (Duration of Certificate) Certificates remain in effect until they expire by their terms or by operation of law, or until surrendered, suspended, or revoked as provided in Section 9909 of the Government Code and in these Rules.

31. (Service of Papers) Any notice, request, demand, subpena, or other paper or process shall be deemed personally served on the registrant if it is enclosed in a sealed envelope, addressed to registrant at the last business address shown in his registration statement or other papers filed pursuant to Section 9906 of the Government Code, and deposited in the United States mail, postage prepaid.

32. (Surrender of Certificate) Each registrant shall forthwith surrender his certificate to the committee when the certificate expires, or when the committee has suspended or revoked it.

33. (Additional Information to Be Filed) Each registrant shall promptly file, as provided for in Section 9906 of the Government Code, the following information:

(a) A statement of any additional employment.

(b) A statement of any change in his business address.

(c) A statement of any change in the terms of employment as a legislative representative, or other employment referred to in any papers filed pursuant to Section 9906 of the Government Code, including, but not limited to, the name and address of the employer, term of employment, compensation or other consideration to be paid.

34. (Surrender of Certificate for Modification) Each registrant shall, upon request, promptly surrender his certificate in order that it may be appropriately changed or modified, where a change or modification is required, or canceled, if all of the registrant's authority has been terminated.

35. (Reports) Each person registering pursuant to Section 9906 of the Government Code, and each registrant to whom a certificate has been issued, shall, between the first and tenth day of each calendar month, so long as his activity continues, file the detailed reports under oath as required by Section 9906. A failure to do so shall not be deemed reason for suspending or revoking a certificate, if in any month for which a report is not filed the registrant or holder of a certificate has not engaged in any activity referred to in Section 9906 of the Government Code, and registrant so states in the first monthly report filed by him thereafter. Such statement shall be sufficient to continue his certificate in good standing if there are no other grounds or reasons that the certificate should be suspended or revoked This rule shall not be construed to prevent any person from filing a monthly report for the months during which he has not engaged in any activity covered by Section 9906, for the purpose of making it appear currently of record that his registration and certificate are in good standing

36. (Statement of Compensation) The failure of a registrant to include in his registration a statement of how much he is paid, and is to receive, shall be deemed sufficient ground for refusing to issue a certificate. If the registrant's employment is on a regular monthly or annual basis and is for services other than activities specified in Section 9906 of the Government Code, the committee will deem that he has complied with this rule if he does either of the following:

(a) States his annual or monthly compensation.

(b) States that he is paid on a monthly or annual basis for various services, some of which do not constitute activities under Section 9906, and further states that he will make appropriate allocation of his compensation for activities covered by Section 9906 when such services are performed. If the registrant thereafter fails to make such allocation of his compensation in any monthly report, this failure shall be deemed sufficient ground for refusing a certificate or suspending or revoking a certificate.

The committee shall not consider that the requirements of this rule are met if the registrant merely states that he is to be paid a reasonable fee or a fee to be agreed upon, but where the fee or compensation is to be fixed or agreed upon only as or after services have been rendered, the basis upon which the fee is to be determined shall be fixed and stated with precision and upon a unit time basis, and the monthly reports filed thereafter which state the amount of the fee earned in the preceding month and the amount thereof which has been paid.

If the basis for fixing a fee for compensation is one which would increase or decrease the compensation depending upon the result of the services and whether the same were successful in whole or in part or unsuccessful in whole or in part, it shall be considered for the purposes of these Rules, an agreement for contingent compensation, and shall be deemed sufficient ground for denying, suspending, or revoking a certificate.

Part 4. Procedure for Denial, Revocation, or Suspension of Certificates

40. (General) Certificates will be suspended or revoked as provided in subdivision 2 of Section 9909 of the Government Code and in these Rules, upon proceedings, investigations, or hearings initiated by the committee on its own motion or by verified complaint.

41. (Periodic Review of Registration Statements) The committee, from time to time, will review all statements, reports, and authorizations filed by any registrant to whom a certificate has been issued and is outstanding, and will review such other information or proof as it may from time to time require, to determine if the registrant is in good standing as such and is complying with the provisions of law. If the committee finds upon such review that good cause exists for the suspension or revocation of a certificate, it may on its own motion, take such steps as it deems appropriate.

42. (Filing of Complaints) The committee will receive and file with its records any verified complaint against any registrant. The committee may dismiss the same if it fails to comply with the provisions of Rule 43, or fails to state any charge which, if true, would warrant the denial, suspension, or revocation of a certificate.

43. (Form of Complaints) The complaint shall be signed by the persons making the charges. If filed by other than a natural person, the complaint shall be signed and verified by a duly authorized officer thereof. The complaint shall be verified in the manner provided by the Code of Civil Procedure for the verification of complaints in civil actions. A verified complaint shall clearly and distinctly show the following:

(a) The name and address of the persons by whom or on whose behalf the complaint is filed.

(b) The name of the persons against whom the complaint is made.

(c) A statement of the charges made. The statement of charges shall specify the statutes, Rules, or other provisions of law with which the person charged (respondent) is alleged to have violated, together with a statement in ordinary and concise language of the acts or omissions with which the respondent is charged. If any statement is on information and belief, it shall be accompanied by a statement of the source of the information and the grounds for the belief, which shall be a statement of fact and not conclusions.

44. (Charges in Complaints) The committee will consider only the following charges in any verified complaint:

(a) The charge that the respondent is not a person of good moral character.

(b) The charge that the respondent has violated a provision or provisions of Chapter 8, Part 1, Division 2, Title 2, of the Government Code.

(c) The charge that respondent has violated his obligations under Section 9910 of the Government Code.

(d) The charge that respondent has violated Section 35 of Article IV of the State Constitution.

(e) The charge that respondent has violated Sections 85 or 86 of the Penal Code, or Sections 9054 or 9056 of the Government Code.

45. (Notice of Complaint) If a verified complaint complying with the requirements of these Rules is filed with the committee, the committee may take such action as it deems appropriate in accordance with the authority vested in it. Before a hearing is held on the complaint, notice thereof shall be served on the person or persons charged in the complaint. The notice may be served personally or in the manner provided by Rule 31. The notice shall state that a verified complaint has been filed with the committee. Respondent shall be duly informed of the charges in said complaint and that the respondent named in the complaint has 10 days after service of the notice within which to file a verified answer with the committee and demand a hearing, and that unless such verified answer and demand for hearing are filed within that time, or such further time as the committee may grant, the committee will proceed to deal with the charges in the verified complaint in such manner as it deems proper.

46. (Filing of Answer) The respondent named in the complaint may within 10 days after service of the notice file with the committee a verified answer to the charges and demand a hearing. The committee may, for good cause, grant further time in which to answer. The answer may consist of denials or the statement of any material by way of defense, or both.

If an answer and demand for hearing is filed as provided for in these Rules, a hearing shall be had as provided by these Rules. If no answer and demand for hearing is filed, the committee may proceed to deal with the charges in the complaint as it deems proper, and may hold hearings on the charges, at which hearings the committee may require the attendance of the respondents, the complainants, or any other person the committee desires to hear.

47. (Certificate Not Suspended by Filing Complaint) If at the time of the filing of a complaint, a respondent named in the complaint holds a valid certificate, it shall remain in effect until the committee determines the charges made in the complaint and dismisses the charges or suspends or revokes the certificate

48. (General Rule on Hearing) Except as otherwise provided by law and by these Rules, the committee in determining whether to issue, suspend, or revoke a certificate may proceed with or without hearings. If hearings are held, they may be open to the public.

49. (Hearing When Complaint Filed) If a verified complaint has been filed with the committee, and the respondent has filed an answer and demand for hearing, a hearing shall be had before a certificate is issued, suspended, or revoked.

50. (Hearing When Certificate Has Been Denied) If the committee has refused to issue a certificate without a hearing, the registrant shall be notified of the committee's action The notice shall be served as provided in Rule 31 Within 10 days after the mailing of the notice the registrant whose application has been denied may demand a hearing.

51. (Investigations) All investigations, other than hearings, shall be conducted by the committee at such time, at such places, and by such means as the committee deems proper

52. (Scheduling Hearings) The chairman shall schedule such hearings as are deemed advisable or as are provided for by these Rules.

The time and place of all hearings shall be such as the chairman may fix, except that the time shall not be earlier than the expiration of the time within which a respondent or registrant may file a demand for a hearing.

53. (Notice of Hearings) The committee shall give reasonable notice in writing of time and place of all hearings either personally or by mail, to the complainant or complainants in any verified complaint, to the respondent or respondents charged in any verified complaint, and to any registrant entitled to a hearing as provided in Rules 49 and 50. The committee may give notice of the hearings to any other persons they deem proper, and in such manner as they deem proper. When hearings are held on the committee's own motion, only such notice shall be given as the committee deems proper in the circumstances

54. (Conduct of Hearings) At any hearing a person shall be heard only with the consent of the committee, except that on hearings held pursuant to demands for a hearing filed in accordance with these Rules the complainant, respondent, and registrant shall be entitled to the following:

(a) To be represented by a member of the State Bar of California

(b) To produce evidence which is material and relevant.

(c) To have subpenas issued by the committee upon reasonable request therefor. If a request for a subpena duces tecum is filed, the subpena will issue only if the request specifies with particularity the records, documents, papers, or other material desired, and is accompanied by a showing required for the issuance of subpenas duces tecum in civil actions in the superior courts of the State of California.

55. (Scope of Inquiry) In all hearings oral evidence shall be taken only by oath or affirmation. No testimony or evidence required shall be taken or received unless it is material and relevant to a charge made in the verified complaint, or a matter under investigation. In hearings had under the committee's own motion, the committee may determine the scope of the hearing, and on hearings had pursuant to a demand under Rules 49 and 50, the inquiry shall not be confined to any reasons which the committee may have stated upon the denial, suspension, or revocation of a certificate.

56. (Amending Complaint or Answer) The committee in its discretion may permit amendment to any verified complaint, answer, or other material filed with it, upon a showing to the committee of cause which the committee deems sufficient.

57. (Order of Hearings) On any hearing the committee shall determine the order of procedure and the order of proof, and on its own motion may enlarge the scope of the inquiry. The hearing need not be conducted according to any technical rules.

58. (Evidence) The hearing need not be conducted according to any technical rules relating to evidence, testimony, or witnesses, used in courts of record. Any evidence which is relevant and material shall be admitted if it is the sort on which responsible persons are accustomed to rely in the conduct of serious affairs, without regard for any common law or statutory rule under which it might be excluded in the trial of any civil action.

On all investigations and hearings the committee will consider, and take notice of, so far as relevant and material, all proceedings and all matters appearing in any proceeding, at any time had by either house of the Legislature or any committee of either house of the Legislature or any joint committee of the houses of the Legislature.

59. (Failure to Appear Before Committee) If any complainant who has filed a verified complaint, or any registrant or respondent fails to appear before the committee pursuant to notice served upon him, or fails to appear at any hearing of which he has notice, the committee may forthwith proceed as though such person had filed his complaint, answer, or demand for a hearing as the case may be. The committee may take such other action, with or without a hearing, as the committee deems proper, in so far as the person in default is concerned

60. (Findings of Fact) The committee shall not be required to make findings of fact or state its reasons or conclusions for any action taken by it, but may do so if it deems proper.

61. (Finality of Committee's Action) The committee will not entertain any charge in a verified complaint or any demand for a hearing or other application to the committee upon any subject on which the committee has acted after a hearing pursuant to these Rules, except on the committee's own motion.

ROLL CALL

The roll was called, and the following answered to their names:

Babbage, Beck, Belotti, Berry, Brady, Burke, Burkhalter, Caldecott, Chapel, Clarke, Cloyed, Coats, Collier, George D. Collins, Condon, Connolly, Conrad, Cooke, Crowley, Davis, Dickey, Dills, Dolwig, Doyle, Dunn, Elliott, Erwin, Evans, Fleury, Gaffney, Geddes, Grant, Grunsky, Gubser, Hagen, Hahn, Hawkins, Henderson, Hinckley, Hollibaugh, Kelly, Kirkwood, Klocksiem, Lanterman, Levering, Lincoln, Lindsay, Lipscomb, Lowrey, Luckel, Lyon, Maloney, McCarthy, McCollister, McFall, McGee, McMillan, Meyers, Morris, Moss, Munnell, Niehouse, Parker, Porter, Rosenthal, Rumford, Shaw, Sherwin, Smith, Stanley, Stewart, Thomas, Tomlinson, Waters, and Mr Speaker—75.

Quorum present.

PRAYER

The following prayer was offered by the Chaplain, Dr. Clarence A. Kircher:

Almighty and Eternal God, who dost bid us walk as pilgrims and strangers in this passing world, remind us of that abiding city which Thou hast prepared for us in the Heavens. So govern our hearts, we pray, that we may avoid all fleshly lusts, all that wars against the soul, and live obediently to that rule which Thou has set before us. May we show forth Thy glory in good works day by day. In the responsibilities before us, make us humble, watchful and diligent.

And as, in sparkling majesty, a star,
Gilds the bright summit of some gloomy cloud;
Brightening the half-veiled face of Heaven afar;
So when dark thoughts my boding spirit shroud,
Sweet Hope, celestial influence round me shed,
Waving thy silver pinions o'er my head

Help us to walk this day as workmen who need not be ashamed
We pray in Jesus name—AMEN

"440. The commission may issue special hunting and sporting fishing licenses in accordance with this article. Special hunting licenses may be issued to any person holding a hunting license issued by the State of Arizona. Such special hunting license shall entitle the holder thereof to take only migratory water fowl and only in, on, or along the Colorado River in accordance with the applicable state and federal laws and regulations or orders made pursuant thereto. The fee for such license shall be two dollars ($2) and each such license shall be valid until the end of the calendar year in which issued.

441. Special sporting fishing licenses may be issued under this article to any person holding a similar license issued by the State of Arizona. Such special sporting fishing license shall entitle the holder thereof to take fish for other than commercial purposes in those portions of the Colorado River which are within the territorial limits of the State of California in accordance with the applicable state laws and regulations or orders made pursuant thereto. The fee for such license shall be two dollars ($2) and each such license shall be valid until the end of the calendar year in which issued.

442. The commission shall prescribe the form and content of all special licenses issued pursuant to this article. The commission may provide by regulation for the issuance of such licenses and the collection and handling of the fees therefor. The commission may enter into and perform agreements with any state or local officers of the State of Arizona which it deems necessary or desirable to carry out the purposes of this article.

443. The provisions of this article shall become operative when the commission finds and determines that under the laws of the State of Arizona substantially similar licenses are authorized to be issued to licensees of the State of California upon substantially the same terms and conditions as are provided for in this article as to the issuance of licenses to licensees of the State of Arizona."

"SECTION 1. Article 5 is added to Chapter 5, Part 2, Division 3, Title 2 of the Government Code, to read:

Article 5. Uniform State Payroll System

12470. The Controller shall devise, install, and supervise, and at his discretion, revise and modify a Uniform State Payroll System for all state agencies, except the University of California. The Controller may provide for the orderly inclusion of State agencies into such system, and may make exceptions from the operation thereof for such periods as he determines necessary.

12471. The Uniform State Payroll System shall provide adequate accounting procedures to enable each state agency to properly account salary and wage expenditures under the Uniform State Accounting System.

12472. The Uniform State Payroll System shall provide for the fixing of a designated day of the month on which permanent monthly salaried employees shall be paid for the preceding payroll period, which date shall be uniform for all employees of each state agency employed in the same geographic area. Such pay dates shall not be more than 10 calendar days following the close of the payroll period.

12473. The payroll period of employees of a state agency shall not be changed by inclusion of the agency into the Uniform State Payroll System or by any revision or modification of the system unless notice of the proposed change has been given to each employee who will be affected by such change in the form and manner prescribed by the Controller not less than 60 days prior to the effective date of the change.

12474. The Controller shall make and enforce rules and regulations for the administration and enforcement of the Uniform State Payroll System, and shall prescribe all procedures and forms for payroll accounting and disbursing, and for the reporting of time worked and absences.

12475. The Controller shall establish and maintain a payroll roster of all persons employed by every state agency except the University of California and may establish and maintain a roster of all established positions. The payroll roster shall include both civil service and exempt employees, but shall not necessarily include emergency appointees or the equivalent.

12476. Each appointing power shall correctly and promptly certify to the Controller all changes, modifications, additions and deletions to the payroll roster in compliance with all applicable civil service, fiscal, and other pertinent laws, rules, and regulations The Controller shall disburse or otherwise act in reliance upon all payroll roster certifications and attendance reports certified to the Controller by the respective appointing powers.

12477. The Controller shall audit the Uniform State Payroll System and the State Payroll Revolving Fund, in such manner as the Controller may determine.

12478. Rules and regulations adopted under this Article or Section 12420 are excepted from the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act and shall be distributed in such form and manner as the Controller determines.

12479. Every person who wilfully makes a false or fraudulent certification upon payroll documents or attendance reports submitted to the Controller as the basis for his drawing a warrant for payment in accordance with such document is guilty of a misdemeanor. Conviction of a misdemeanor under this section is punishable by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars ($100) nor more than one thousand dollars ($1,000) or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than 30 days, or both "Article 2. Formation".

Amendment No. 4

On page 1 of said bill, strike out lines 14 to 16, inclusive, and insert "no city or any portion thereof shall be included in the district without the consent of the governing body of the city, such consent being adopted by a favorable vote of two-thirds or more of its members."

Amendment No. 5

On page 2 of said bill, between lines 42 and 43, insert

"Article 3 Board of Directors".

Amendment No. 6

On page 3, line 6, of said bill, after "district.", insert "In the event that the selection of members pursuant to this subdivision results in the governing body having an even number of members, those members may appoint an additional member from the district at large."

Amendment No. 7

On page 3 of said bill, between lines 9 and 10, insert

"Article 4. Powers and Duties".

Amendment No. 8

On page 3, line 16, of said bill, strike out "and employees", and insert ", employees, and experts".

Amendment No. 9

On page 3 of said bill, between lines 26 and 27, insert

"(f) Maintain and operate a garbage disposal site and facilities and fix and collect fees for the use thereof.

(g) Borrow money and incur indebtedness and guarantee the performance of its legal or contractual obligations.

Article 5. Taxation".

Amendment No. 10

On page 4 of said bill, between lines 15 and 16, insert

"4185. If a district is organized in any year too late for the levy of a tax in that year or in the next ensuing year, the board of supervisors may transfer funds of the county not immediately needed for county purposes to the district fund to be used for the payment of expenses of such district until such time as district tax receipts are available therefor. The board of supervisors shall include in the levy of taxes for the district for the fiscal year in which a tax may be levied, a sum sufficient to repay to the county the amounts so transferred to the district for the portion or portions for the preceding fiscal years for which the levy of taxes was made for that purpose and the amount so transferred shall be retransferred to the county treasury from the district fund out of the first available receipts from the tax levy.

Article 6. Bonds

4186. If the district board finds that it is necessary to incur a bonded indebtedness to obtain funds with which to carry out the purposes of the district, it may submit the proposition to the voters of the district. For that purpose a special election shall be called by resolution.

4186.01. The resolution shall state all of the following:

(a) The general objects and purposes for which it is proposed to incur an indebtedness.

(b) A general description of all property to be acquired or damaged and work to be executed through the expenditure of the funds secured by the issuance and sale of the bonds.

(c) An estimate of the cost of the proposed work

(d) The amount of the bonds proposed to be issued.

(e) The number of years not to exceed which the whole of the bonds are to run.

(f) The rate of interest or a maximum rate of interest to be paid.

(g) The date of the election.

(h) The election precincts, polling places, and election officers.

4186.02. For the purposes of the bond election the district board may consolidate into one precinct several precincts established for general election purposes and describe the precinct by reference to the general election precincts

4186.03. An election board consisting of one inspector, one judge and one clerk shall be appointed by the district board for each precinct.

4186.04. Only voters registered in the district are eligible to vote at the bond election.

4186.05. A resolution calling the election shall be published once a week for three successive weeks in a newspaper having a general circulation in the district and designated by the district board. No other notice of the election need be given.

4186.06. If two-thirds of the votes cast are in favor of incurring the bonded indebtedness as proposed, bonds of the district for the amount stated in the resolution calling the election shall be issued and sold.

4186.07. The validity of the bonds after their issuance shall not be questioned in any court except on the ground that the provisions of this chapter authorizing their issuance are unconstitutional, or that the required hearing regarding the formation of the district was not regularly held or proper notice of it was not given.

4186.08. The district board shall prescribe by resolution the form of the bonds, and interest coupons. The bonds shall be payable at such times and at a place to be fixed by the board, and designated in the bonds, together with interest on all sums unpaid on that date until the whole of the indebtedness has been paid. The term of the bonds issued shall not exceed 40 years.

4186.09. The bonds shall be issued in such denominations as the district board determines, except that no bond shall be of a denomination less than one hundred dollars ($100) or greater than one thousand dollars ($1,000). They shall be payable on the day and at the place fixed in the bonds, and with interest at the rate specified in the bonds, which rate shall not be in excess of 6 percent per annum, and shall, after the first year, be payable semi-annually.

4186.10. The bonds shall be signed by the chairman of the district board and countersigned by the county auditor, and the seal of the district board shall be affixed.

The interest coupons of the bonds shall be numbered consecutively and signed by the county auditor by his engraved or lithographed signature.

4186.11. If any officer whose signature or countersignature appears on the bonds ceases to be an officer before the delivery of the bonds to the purchaser, his signature or countersignature shall be as valid as if he had remained in office until the delivery of the bonds.

4186.12. The district board may issue and sell bonds of the district at not less than par value, and the proceeds shall be placed in the treasury of the county.

4186.14. The construction fund shall be applied exclusively to the purposes and objects mentioned in the resolution calling the bond election.

Payments from the construction fund shall be made upon demands allowed by the district board, and prepared, presented, and audited in the same manner as demands upon funds of the county.

4186.15. If the proposition of issuing bonds submitted at the bond election fails to receive the requisite number of votes, the district board may, at the expiration of six months after that election, call or order another bond election, either for the same objects and purposes, or for any other object or purpose of the district.

4186.16. If bonds have been issued by the district and the proceeds of the sale have been expended and the district board by resolution passed by a vote of two-thirds of all its members determines that the public interest or necessity of the district demands the issuance of additional bonds for carrying out any of the objects of the district, the board may again submit to the voters the question of issuing additional bonds in the same manner as for a first issue. All provisions of this chapter for the issuance and sale of bonds, and for the expenditure of proceeds, apply to the issuance of additional bonds.

4186.17. Bonds and interest thereon shall be paid by revenue derived from an annual tax upon the real property in the district, and all the real property in the district shall be and remain liable to be taxed for such payments. Said bonds and the interest thereon shall not be taxable in this State.

4186.18. (a) An issue of bonds is hereby defined to be the aggregate principal amount of all of the bonds authorized to be issued in accordance with a proposal submitted to and approved by the electors of the district, but no indebtedness will be deemed to have been contracted until bonds shall have been sold and delivered and then only to the extent of the principal amount of the bonds so sold and delivered.

(b) The district board of any district issuing bonds may, in its discretion, divide the aggregate principal amount of such issue into two or more divisions or series and fix different dates for the bonds of each separate division or series. In the event any authorized issue is divided into two or more divisions or series, the bonds of each division or series may be made payable at such time or times as may be fixed by the district board separate and distinct from the time or times the payment of bonds of any other division or series of the same issue.

4186.19. Whenever a district has issued bonds the district board shall include in its annual statement to the board of supervisors as to the amount of money needed for district purposes during the next ensuing fiscal year pursuant to Section 4181, it shall include, in addition thereto, the amount necessary to pay the interest and principal on such bonds as will become due before the time for making the next general tax levy.

4186.20. If the district board fails to furnish to the board of supervisors a statement of the amount of money necessary to pay the principal and interest on the bonds as provided for in Section 4186.19, the board of supervisors of the county shall ascertain that amount and shall levy it and cause it to be collected.

4186.21. The principal and interest on the bonds shall be paid by the treasurer of the county in the manner now or hereinafter provided by law for the principal and interest of the bonds of the county.

Article 6. Revenue Bonds

4186.30. A district formed pursuant to the provisions of this chapter is a local agency within the meaning of the Sanitation, Sewer and Water Revenue Bond Law of 1941, and the provisions of that law are applicable to such a district.

On page 1, line 1, of said bill, after "SECTION 1.", insert "Section 20026 of the Health and Safety Code is amended to read.

20026. Proceedings for the formation of a district are initiated whenever [50 or more persons who are residents] the owners of real property which represents at least 51 percent of the total assessed valuation of an unincorporated town present a petition to, and at a regular meeting of, the board of the county in which the town is situated.

The petition shall contain:

(a) A statement of the name and boundaries of the proposed district.

(b) A request for the formation of the district.

SEC. 2. Article 6 is added to Chapter 1, Part 1, Division 14 of said code, to read:

Article 6. Inclusion of Contiguous Territory

20160. Territory contiguous to any district and in the same county may be included in the district in the manner prescribed in this article.

20161. As used in this article, "contiguous" means touching at one or more points.

20164. The petition shall also be signed by the district board and shall be presented to the county board of supervisors.

20165. The petition shall be verified by the affidavit of one of the petitioners, and notice of its filing, together with the names of owners and a general description sufficient for identification of the real property proposed to be included in the district, and a statement of the time fixed for hearing the petition, and a statement that all persons interested may appear and be heard, shall be published at least two weeks preceding the hearing, by the board of supervisors, in a newspaper of general circulation published in the county in which the district is located.

20167. Upon the hearing the board shall determine whether or not it is for the best interests of the district and of the contiguous territory that the territory be included in the district and may modify the boundaries of the territory proposed to be included.

20168. The board of supervisors shall not modify the boundaries of the territory proposed to be included so as to exclude any real property which would be benefited by inclusion.

20169. Real property which would not in the judgment of the district board be benefited by inclusion shall not be included within the boundaries of the territory proposed to be included.

20170. The board of supervisors shall not include within the district any areas of land not subdivided or any lots or parcels of property containing more than five acres of land each, if the owner files objections to the inclusion of any such land within the district.

20171 If the board of supervisors upon final hearing determines that it is for the best interests of the district and the territory proposed to be included that such territory be included, it shall make an order including the contiguous territory within the district The order shall describe the exterior boundaries of the contiguous territory.

20172 Where any parcel of land containing more than five acres is included within the district, the board of supervisors, upon application of the owner, shall exclude from the district and from the taxable property of the district, all of the parcel except that portion or those portions thereof upon which a building or buildings, or similar structure, may be situated, each such portion to include such quantity of land, not less than five acres in area, as in the judgment of the board may be reasonable. No such portion need be contiguous to any other territory in the district "

Point of Order

Mr. Coats arose to the following point of order: That the bill being discussed by Mr. Waters is not properly before the House because it was not reported out of committee by a majority of the committee membership.

Ruling by Speaker

Speaker Sam L. Collins ruled that, as the full committee is 18 members in number, and the active committee is 17 in number (due to the illness of a member), that nine members constitute a majority, and that the point of order is not well taken.

Appeal From Decision of the Chair

Mr. Beck appealed from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. George D. Collins seconded the appeal.

Motion That Assembly Bill No. 1924 Be Withdrawn From File, and Be Re-referred

Mr. Coats moved that Assembly Bill No. 1924 be withdrawn from the third reading file, and be re-referred to the Committee on Elections and Reapportionment.

Point of Order

Mr. Sherwin arose to the following point of order: That the motion by Mr. Coats is not in order because another matter of business is now before the House.

Ruling by Speaker

Speaker Sam L. Collins ruled the point of order well taken.

The question being: Shall the decision of the Chair be sustained?

The roll was called, and the decision of the Chair sustained by the following vote:

AYES—Babbage, Belotti, Burke, Caldecott, Chapel, Clarke, Cloyed, Collier, Conrad, Dickey, Dolwig, Doyle, Erwin, Evans, Fleury, Gaffney, Geddes, Grant, Grunsky, Gubser, Hagen, Hahn, Hawkins, Hinckley, Hollibaugh, Kelly, Klocksiem, Lanterman, Levering, Lincoln, Lindsay, Lipscomb, Luckel, Lyon, Maloney, McCarthy, McCollister, McGee, Morris, Munnell, Rumford, Sherwin, Smith, Stewart, Tomlinson, and Waters—46

The following resolution was offered:

By Mr. Hawkins:

House Resolution No. 111

Relative to the State Fair

WHEREAS, The State has previously been committed to the acquisition of a new site for the State Fair and to abandonment of the existing site and fixtures; and

WHEREAS, Since that decision was made the international situation has changed, and the expanding national defense program has resulted in a manpower shortage and shortages in critical materials, including building materials; and

WHEREAS, In view of those considerations it would be desirable for the Legislature to re-examine the position previously taken with respect to the State Fair Grounds in the light of the present emergency; and

WHEREAS, It is necessary that the Legislature be fully apprised of all the facts relating to the above in order that it may intelligently legislate thereon; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the Assembly Committee on Rules is authorized and directed to ascertain, study, and analyze all facts relating to the subject expressed in the recitals of this resolution and particularly all facts relating to:

(1) The relative merits and desirability of the old site, as compared with the new site across the American River;

(2) The prices paid for all real and personal property connected with or arising from the acquisition of the new site;

(3) The amount paid, or to be paid, for (a) property already purchased, (b) obligations under contracts not yet completed, and (c) for obligations to be incurred under negotiations or purchases now pending or to be undertaken in the future;

(4) The feasibility of disposing of properties already purchased or contracted for; and to report thereon to the Assembly not later than _____, including in its reports its recommendations for appropriate legislation; and be it further

Resolved, That for the purposes of this investigation the committee and its members shall have and exercise all of the rights, duties and powers conferred upon investigating committees and their members by the provisions of the Joint Rules of the Senate and Assembly and of the Standing Rules of the Assembly as they are adopted and amended from time to time at this session, which provisions are incorporated herein and made applicable to this committee and its members

Resolution read, and ordered referred to the Committee on Rules.

SEMI-FINAL REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY INTERIM COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC UTILITIES AND CORPORATIONS

Authority

The Assembly Interim Committee on Public Utilities and Corporations was created pursuant to House Resolution No. 264 during the 1949 Regular Session.

Paragraph 1 thereof provides that:

> "The Assembly standing Committee on Public Utilities and Corporations is hereby constituted the Assembly Interim Committee on Public Utilities and Corporations and is authorized and directed to ascertain, study and analyze all facts relating to subjects which under the Standing Rules and legislative practices of the Assembly, would be referred to the standing Committee on Public Utilities and Corporations, including but not limited to the operation, effect, and needed revision of any and all laws in any way bearing upon or relating to the subject of this resolution, and to report thereon to the Assembly, including in the reports its recommendations for appropriate legislation."

Subjects Considered

During the interim period, this committee has given consideration to the following subjects:

Discrimination in the use of landing fields.
Truckers and their use of public highways.
Public transportation problems of the Los Angeles area.

1. Discrimination in the Use of Public Landing Fields

a. PURPOSE

Several of the smaller airlines urged that the committee investigate the possible discrimination against these companies in their use of certain public airports, landing fields, concourses, counters for ticket facilities, access to run-ways, and other mechanical aids to the proper conduct of the operation of an airline at a regular airport terminal. Possible discrimination could result in hardship to the airlines and considerable inconvenience to the traveling public and shippers.

b. MEETING

By request, this committee held a meeting on Wednesday, October 11th, at Los Angeles for the purpose of hearing witnesses on this subject.

c. WITNESSES

The following persons appeared at this meeting for the purpose of of giving testimony relative to said purposes.

Mr. Courtland G. Smith, Secretary and Administrative Assistant, Airport Commission, Department of Airports, Los Angeles.
Mr. Tom Murphy, Vice President, Western Air Lines.
Mr. Tony Beard, Vice President, California Central Air Lines.
Mr. Clifford Stout, Chief Pilot, California Central Air Lines.

d. RECOMMENDATIONS

Due to lack of funds, this committee has been unable to carry on such studies as would be required before conclusions and recommendations could be properly formulated. This committee is of the opinion that there are sufficient grounds to justify further studies in this field because some main airport terminals have already considered and acted upon the above, (viz. "a",) but some apparently do not appreciate the problems of these smaller air-lines.

2. Trucks and Their Use of Public Streets and Highways

a. PURPOSE

This meeting was called at the request of several trucking firms for the primary purpose of considering overloading, highway safety, local discriminatory legislation and kindred problems

b. MEETINGS

By request, this committee held a meeting on Thursday, November 30th, at San Francisco for the purpose of hearing witnesses on this subject.

c. WITNESSES

A. F. Schumacher, Owens Illinois Glass Co., CMA Traffic Com.
J. E. Hales, Standard Oil Co. of Calif., CMA Traffic Com.
A. P. Heiner, Kaiser Stell Corp., CMA Traffic Com.
A. K. Penttila, Sherwin Williams Co., Shippers Traffic Assn., Oakland.
J. P. Sanders, Gerber Products Co., CMA Traffic Committee, Calif. Canners League Traffic Committee.
L. H. Wolters, Golden State Co., Ltd., CMA Traffic Committee.
C. T. Blanck, the Pac. Tel. and Tel. Co.
Y. E. Cahill, The Pac. Tel. and Tel. Co.
Larry Fites.
Thomas R. Dwyer.

d. RECOMMENDATIONS

Due to lack of funds and time, this committee has been unable to proceed any further with this subject. The need for further study that may lead to helpful legislation is dramatically demonstrated by:

(1) Drastic local legislation by a good many cities throughout California. This local legislation is the result of petition on the part of the people in these communities.

(2) Harold P. Huls, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission, in an article contained in the December, 1950, issue of the Californian pleads for legislative investigation and action. The following are some direct quotations from his article:

> "Governor Warren, in an address October 6, 1950, to the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco, stated, 'There are still 3,000 deaths a year on California highways'.
> "Arthur T. Vanderbilt, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New Jersey, last month * * * states. 'The automobile since 1910 slaughtered more people than were killed in all of the wars in which the United States has engaged during the entire history of our Country'.
> "The California Public Utilities Commission, a year ago, determined to institute a fact-finding investigation into some of the causes resulting in the appalling toll of accidents causing death, injury, and property damage on California highways
> "An analysis of the 67,300 accidents on rural state highways for the three years 1946 to 1948, indicates that about one-third were accidents, involving two or more passenger vehicles, one-fourth involved a single passenger vehicle, and about one-sixth involved a truck and a passenger vehicle.
> "Figures submitted by the California Highway Patrol for the first six months of 1949 showed separately the accidents occurring in cities and all roads, including state highways and county roads in rural areas. Commercial vehicles accounted for about 18 percent of the total accidents for all types of vehicles.
> "Nine thousand one hundred citations were issued involving all commercial vehicles More than 34 percent of these citations involved speed, 19 percent involved violations of the right of way of either a pedestrian or a vehicle, 8 percent were for following too closely,

6 percent for improper passing, 5 percent for driving on the wrong side of the road, and about 5 percent for improper turning. The year 1949 showed a 6 percent increase in all persons killed on rural area roads over the year 1948.

"The conclusion of the commission was inescapable, that some remedy was essential to put a stop to the apparent flagrant disregard of speed laws.

"The Highway Patrol made a survey. This survey showed that certain highway carriers showed a greater tendency to violate the vehicle code than others."

The Public Utilities Commission came to two specific conclusions: One was that they would continue to do all within their power to promote safety, and the second, that the California Legislature be urged to make a study to determine the need for remedial legislation regarding:

(a) "The need for additional enforcement personnel, giving particular consideration to the highway patrol's statistical and clerical load and activities not directly related to the enforcement of the vehicle code."

(b) "Existing speed differential between vehicles specified in the Vehicle Code."

(c) "Laws involving overtaking and passing, following too closely, cutting in, use of mud aprons by commercial motor vehicles, and of the desirability and feasibility of establishing a uniform speed requirement or performance ability standard for commercial vehicles."

(d) "Requirement that all drivers of commercial vehicles operating in 'over the road' service keep and maintain an appropriate type of driver's log."

(e) "Uniform hours of service for drivers of all commercial vehicles in 'over the road' operations."

(f) "Requirement that all property carrying commercial vehicles to be properly identified by displaying the name of the carrier on each side and rear thereof in a manner similar to that required by the Interstate Commerce Commission rules and regulations."

(g) "Substantially increased penalties for violation of the maximum weight provisions of that code."

(h) "Uniform application of safety and preventive maintenance programs and rules and regulations concerning safety of operations of these passenger carriers not presently under this commission's jurisdiction."

This committee has received many requests to investigate truck smoke and fumes in connection with highway safety.

It has also received many requests to investigate excessive truck exhaust and motor noise that has apparently been effecting the health and comfort of thousands of citizens.

This committee is aware of the fact that there presently exists several associations of truck owners and operators and that individually, these associations are putting forth their best efforts to cooperate in a program of greater highway safety and good public relations. To date, however, these associations have been only moderately effective due largely to:

(a) Considerable dissention between "for hire carriers" and "private carriers";

(b) The fact that only relatively few owners or operators belong to these associations;

(c) The lack of authority of these associations to obtain pertinent information from their members—information absolutely necessary to the formulation of association rules of conduct or recommended legislation; and

(d) The hundreds of truckers who belong to no association, and who are beyond the pale of any industry self-policing effort.

Moreover, almost nothing is known regarding the attitude of numerous truckers toward highway safety and ethics. For example, it is generally suspected that many truckers deliberately set delivery schedules so as to require excessive speed and other highway violations of their drivers. What percentage this may be of the total is, of course, unknown.

3. Public Transportation Problems of the Los Angeles Area

(a) FOREWORD

During the 1949 Regular Session, one of the most important problems confronting this committee, as well as that of the Legislature as a whole, were the various measures concerning intra and inter-community public transportation in the Los Angeles area. The Los Angeles area is defined to mean that portion of Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, and San Bernardino Counties that are within the practical employment, social, and marketing orbit of metropolitan Los Angeles. In recognition of this problem, and pursuant to its authority, this committee has undertaken as thorough a study of the problem as its limited finances permitted.

In this connection, it should be noted that at the time this committee was instructed to begin its studies, the County of Los Angeles had "earmarked" the sum of $300,000 for an exhaustive engineering study of this same problem.

Even though the information needed to satisfy the legislative requirements of the California Legislature may be somewhat different and less extensive than that for the Board of Supervisors of the County of Los Angeles, and for that reason may not require a complete duplication of effort, they were sufficiently the same to cause this committee to rely heavily upon the proposed county studies for much of its information.

The county's study produced three results:

(1) The names of recommended engineering firms whom the county might hire to undertake the proposed extensive engineering studies.

(2) The fact that these engineering studies would cost in excess of one and one-half million dollars, and

(3) An outline of the studies thought to be necessary.

In view of the information contained in the preliminary report published by your Interim Committee on Public Utilities and Corporations, and the tremendous sum of money required to complete the studies recommended in the county's preliminary report, the Board of Supervisors did not re-allocate the unused portion of the $300,000 and discontinued any further studies on this subject.

In spite of the fact of this highly complimentary tribute to this committee, it has continued to develop as much pertinent information as possible, even though much remains to be done to complete the studies the committee feels may be necessary to put the Legislature in possession of all the facts it may need as a guide for future legislation.

As a direct result of the work done on this subject by your committee, and through the publishing of its preliminary report, released during the 1950 Budget Session, it now seems that the organized pressure for legislative action of the type proposed during the 1949 Session has been materially reduced if not entirely eliminated In spite of the apparent cessation of this pressure, your committee is convinced that the need for a solution to the mass transportation problem in the Los Angeles area still exists, even though the solution is not the panacea proposed by the proponents of the previous legislation.

As a matter of fact, the need for improved public transportation has become and will become even more critical during the years ahead —particularly in view of the present national emergency.

(b) THE PURPOSES

The original purposes for which this study was undertaken still exist and remain the purposes to be discussed in this final report, namely:

The extent of the need for a more expeditious movement of people within this area;

The most practical public transportation system or systems for the people in this area; and

The most desirable means of financing the system selected.

(c) MEETINGS

The following meetings were convened for the purpose of hearing as many of the parties interested in this subject as might care to testify

All of the meetings were held in the State Building in the City of Los Angeles because of its centralness of location. Community meetings of this kind have not been held because the committee felt a central point would encourage more people to attend each meeting and thereby promote a more common understanding of the problem by the interested parties who might travel to a central point for the purpose of listening to the testimony of witnesses from communities farther removed.

September 8, 1949
October 12, 13, 14, 1949
December 5, 1949.

(d) WITNESSES

The following persons appeared before and were heard by this committee.

The committee wishes to take this opportunity to thank them for having given so generously of their time and knowledge.

Jess Haugh, President San Diego Transit System.
Lou Gretz, Secretary Southeast Industrial Area Association.
Paul Harding, Engineer, State Department of Highways

Col. George Roberts, President Mono-Rail Construction Co.
H. R. Bennett, Burbank City Engineer.
Robert Omer, Burbank Chamber of Commerce.
Paul V. Parker, Secretary-Manager, Citizens Traffic and Transit Committee.
Col. Frank C. Lynch, Consulting Engineer, South Pasadena.
Mrs. C. W. Harger, President, Alhambra Southwest Property Owners' Association.
Lee Mathews, South Side Chamber of Commerce.
Mayor Dixon, Inglewood.
Raymond Darby, Supervisor, Los Angeles.
Earl S. Anderson, Executive Secretary, Los Angeles Realty Board.
Edward L. Rimpau, Realtor, Los Angeles
Howard Mason, Secretary, Metropolitan Traffic and Transit Committee.
Ralph Dorsey, Traffic Engineer, City of Los Angeles.
Mayor Alan G. Orsborn, Pomona.
Mr. John Price.
Mr. Stuart G. Wheeler, Claremont Citrus Grower.
Karl I. Dienes, Pomona College.
Stanley E. Barnes, Pomona Chamber of Commerce.
Wendell A. Van Hook, Engineer, Los Angeles.
Hugh W. Wilkins, Railway Trainmen Brotherhood.

(e) STATEMENTS, REPORTS AND STUDIES

The following data and other material were considered, digested and analyzed by this committee. It will be observed that its research has covered a very wide area in an effort to bring the greatest amount of "light" and learning to this subject.

This committee wishes to point out that, in spite of the merit of the many reports, books, statements, etc., digested by it, in the interest of brevity, no such reports, etc., are reprinted herein in full. Only the most cogent and pertinent portions thereof have been quoted in order to make this report more meaningful and forceful.

(g) SUMMARY OF FINDINGS

The following are the major conclusions derived from the work done by this committee to date The data supporting each such conclusion will be found in a later section under the heading, "Findings."

1. The Need

There is an acute need for a faster and a better coordinated system of public transportation in the Los Angeles area. This need is imperative to the present and future economic welfare of the people, area and to the country in times of national emergency

2. The Means (The most practical system of public transportation)

At present and in the forseeable future, a system of motor coach lines operating on the freeways for inter-community service and off the freeways for intra-community service is by far the most practical, if not the only practical solution to the problem from all points of view.

3 Financing

This committee has not been able to exhaustively study the financing of any recommended system From a cursory examination, two conclusions may be drawn:

(a) A coordinated system of motor coach lines operating on and off freeways would in all probability require little, if any, public financing (except for the gasoline tax).

(b) An ad valorem tax would be the least desirable and most heavily opposed of any proposed method of public financing

(h) FINDINGS

1. Foreword

Transportation systems, especially so-called rapid transit systems, have been the cause of more discussion than any other municipal question in the larger cities Twenty years of debate preceded the building of the first elevated railway in New York. It was 30 years later before the first subway began running. The same lengthy arguments preceded the building of the so-called rapid transit facilities in Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago

A satisfactory system of mass transportation for Los Angeles has also been the subject of similar debate during the last 25 years. During this period, there have been 45 transit and/or traffic studies, covering part or all of Los Angeles County. Of these, five might be considered major studies of the transit problem, and these studies have contributed to the understanding of the complexity of the problem. However, the situation has changed so rapidly as to render previous reports obsolete, except as a chronicle of earlier thinking.

City planners of the Los Angeles area have been subjected to much criticism in the past over what appeared to some critics as inactivity in regard to suggestions made in past reports. It is well that hasty action was not taken, however, for until comparatively recent times, it could not be definitely established that decentralization of residence and industry was to be the dominant growth pattern of Los Angeles. Decentralization was the primary factor in creating the need for freeways that would provide an efficient method of handling large volumes of vehicular traffic to and from the decentralized areas. Experiments with freeways proved a tremendous success throughout the country, and influenced the thinking of all city planners and transportation experts.

It is not intended that the advent of freeways automatically precludes the possibilities of rail, mono-rail or other suggested methods of mass transportation. Examination of the present status and predictable future of transportation facilities and their adaptability to existing areas is the only logical and fair way to arrive at a decision of the most satisfactory transportation system for Los Angeles County. Such an examination and presentation of results is the objective of this report.

The findings will be presented under the three purposes for which this Committee study was intended to serve, namely,

1. The need for improved public transportation;

2 The most practical public transportation system or systems for the people in this area; and

3. The most desirable means of financing a system selected.

2. The Need

There is an acute need for a faster and coordinated system of public transportation in the Los Angeles area This need is imperative to the present and future economic welfare of the people, area and country in times of national emergency.

(a) All witnesses who appeared before this committee agreed that there is a need for an improved public transportation system in the Los Angeles area, even though there is disagreement as to the type of transportation that would be most practical.

(b) These witnesses came from representative communities throughout the Los Angeles area, and were people representing organizations constantly in touch with the social and economic welfare of this area.

(c) Paul V. Parker said, "This problem cannot wait forever for solution. In a recent issue of Life Magazine an article was devoted to the Los Angeles traffic and transit problem. It was entitled "City Versus Automobile" and it told how this city now all but strangled in its own rubber tired traffic would find a large measure of release when these proposed freeways are built.

"One of the most important and at the same time most controversial and least understood problems of our city is that of improving its transportation or circulatory system. Practically everyone recognizes that street congestion has become almost intolerable and demands that something be done about it"

Dr. Homer Grant said, "The means for rapid movement of people throughout a community or metropolitan area are essential to continued growth and prosperity. Flow of such traffic may be likened to the flow of blood through the human body and failure to provide for such flow could be as tragic for the economic life of a community as an obstruction of the blood stream would be for the human body."

H. W. Wilkins said, "Community planners, traffic and transportation experts who have carefully studied the situation with the needs of the people uppermost in their minds, have repeatedly warned that modern high-speed rail transit system is a must if metropolitan Los Angeles is not to be strangled in the course of its amassing growth."

E. S. Dixon said, "No other problem before the Legislature is more important."

Lynn B. Werner said, "It is the opinion of the Burbank Chamber of Commerce that rapid transit in the Los Angeles metropolitan area is desirable for the economic well being and growth of Los Angeles County. . . ."

(d) For two and one-half decades, the City of Los Angeles, County of Los Angeles and other civic groups and civic-minded individuals, have recognized the need for doing something about public transportation in this area, and have spent several hundred thousand dollars in their efforts to work out a solution. While many reports have been written, no program has been adopted nor enacted, and the need continues to grow. The need for a faster and better coordinated system of public transportation in the Los Angeles area is demonstrated again by the fact that more than a million passengers a day are using the twenty or more public transportation companies to carry on their business, economic and social intercourse.

3. The Means

At present and in the foreseeable future, a system of motor coach lines operating on the freeways for intercommunity service and off the freeways for intracommunity service is by far the most practical, if not the only practical, solution to the problem from all points of view.

This purpose will be considered from four of the most significant aspects of the problem, namely,

The area influence on the transportation system selected. This aspect concerns itself with the "growth pattern" of the Los Angeles area. A growth pattern may be either toward or away from the centralization of population. This discussion will show how these characteristics of an area influence the selection of an adequate transportation system.

Trends in transportation facilities. This aspect shows the history and development of various methods of transportation in large metropolitan areas. This aspect cannot be overlooked in the selection of a system.

The third aspect is concerned with a comparison of the fixed and operating costs of the various methods of public transportation. Subjects to be covered will include initial capital outlay, maintenance and depreciation and operating costs. Labor will not be discussed as it is quite static for all types of transportation insofar as the hourly wage is concerned.

The influence of freeways on mass transportation. Here we bring to the Legislature the latest and most modern provisions for mass public transportation, and includes statements of leading city planners and transportation experts in respect to the possibilities of freeways. This will also include a comparison of the speeds obtained through the use of the various facilities.

A. Area Influence on Transportation Facilities Selected

In modern-day planning of an adequate transportation system and in selecting the type of facility that will be most satisfactory, the "influence of the area" is the greatest single factor to be considered. This is quite the reverse of the situation that existed before the advent of the automobile. Most of the great cities of the United States had their period of expansion in the hey-day of rail travel—there was no alternative. Manufacturers, distributors, and retailers found it necessary to locate their places of business near existing rail transportation lines.

The very life of the business depended on a location in close proximity to supply and shipping lines which were exclusively rail. To obtain an adequate supply of raw materials for manufacture or for the distribution of finished merchandise, a location on the rail line was an essential. There was no satisfactory method of road or highway travel to distribute the merchandise to wholesale or retail outlets.

Another primary consideration in the selection of a business site is the labor supply. In the past, it was necessary not only to locate near an adequate source of labor, but also to select a location where the labor supply lived within walking distance of the business or the rail line

This resulted in highly concentrated populations working, shopping and finding entertainment in a very centralized business district. Under these circumstances, travel was very largely to and from a single hub, thus making the solution of public transportation quite simple.

Only a cursory examination of the Los Angeles area is needed to observe that a great change in that situation has occurred. It is common practice for business concerns to locate great distances from existing transportation lines. This is possible since the motor trucks for supplies and the motor coach for personnel are so flexible and are able to furnish service to a concern despite location away from main lines of transportation. Therefore, the area is now the influencing factor on transportation systems, and the system must grow with the area, whereas the reverse was true before the advent of the automobile.

The City of Los Angeles has attained size and importance in the day of the automobile. The so-called rapid transit systems of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago were planned and constructed when the automobile was not considered a threat to rail transportation These cities are laid out in a more geometric pattern than is Los Angeles, for they grew around their transportation. The outline of Los Angeles is completely different, for the city grew in a sprawling manner. The dominant method of transportation during its real growth was the automobile, which is the most flexible of all modern transportation facilities.

Being transported by such a flexible vehicle, the people demanded that roads be built to serve them Because of the lack of a growth pattern, the roads were built in what might be considered a disorderly manner.

Disorderly as it might be from the standpoint of geometric patterns, the city with the automobile affords the most efficient land use.

Edward Rimpau testified, "As is inevitable with this type of development, Los Angeles has fostered prosperous and well integrated retail shopping centers most of which are complete in every detail, comprising not only food and drug-stores, but clothing, furniture and even department stores, places of amusement, banking facilities and the like, so in many cases it is not necessary for the individual to go beyond his neighborhood shopping center to transact any kind of business.

"A careful look at the pattern of Los Angeles makes it clear at once that this city is completely different from the older cities of the Country and different in the way that necessarily will always have a bearing on the kind of transit the people want, need, will use and—most important of all—will pay for "

Paul V. Parker states. "The first fact is the fact of decentralization. By way of reference, I direct attention to the 1948 Report made by the City of Los Angeles entitled the 'Street Traffic Management for Los Angeles'. On pages 9 and 10 are two maps illustrating respectively commercial centers and industrial areas There are 21 areas designated as commercial centers and a great many designated as commercial streets. Industrial areas are twice as numerous. Both commercial and industrial areas are scattered impartially over all these maps From these facts, it follows that any transit system that is going to be of service must carry people to and from all these commercial and industrial areas."

Pilot Opinion Survey: "Eighty-seven percent of the non-employed persons (housewives) do their food shopping in their own community, 10 percent shop in some other community while only 3 percent patronize downtown Los Angeles.

"As far as other shopping is concerned (clothing, appliances, etc.), 41 percent patronize their own neighborhood while 43 percent go to some other community shopping center and 16 percent patronize downtown Los Angeles. From these facts we must assume that at least under present conditions, people place the emphasis on their own community and other community shopping centers rather than downtown Los Angeles. The indications are from this and other sources that this pattern of decentralization will continue for an indefinite period of time."

Another characteristic of the Los Angeles area that was not conducive to rail transit was the large areas of tillable land, and climate, that were favorable to agricultural development. Today, despite the great industrial development since 1940, Los Angeles County produces more income from agriculture than any other County in the United States Agriculture being such a recent and dominant characteristic of Los Angeles, it was inevitable that decentralization would be the development trend.

Of the factors that contributed to growth in this manner, building height limitations, agricultural community with available land, sudden increase in population and the automobile are most outstanding.

Also, the fear of future armed conflict is ever present in the atomic age and is undoubtedly considered in the decentralization of business.

Evidence of a definite decentralized pattern is to be found in all branches of business. Business has gone and is going to the customer instead of making the customer come to it. In banking, the world's largest branch banking concern has taken the lead by establishing branches throughout the area.

Retailers have been among the first to go to the people with their stores. Sears Roebuck and Company is in the process of constructing a branch store in the San Fernando Valley. In addition to this store, they have branches in Westwood, Inglewood, Glendale, and the Eastside. Another of the leading retailers has abandoned plans for building a branch store in Hollywood and is constructing a branch in one of the newer communities approximately ten miles from the downtown Los Angeles or Hollywood shopping centers. Bullocks, The May Company, Barker Bros., Desmonds, J. W. Robinsons and others—concerns that were never intended to become chains in the usual sense—have all entered the race of decentralization to bring their services to the customer in his own community rather than attempting to force the customer to come to them in downtown Los Angeles. This is certainly not the pattern with large banks and retailers in other large cities.

Entertainment concerns have always gone "to the people," and are continuing to do so as the population of Los Angeles spreads out over the county. Of the many evidences of this, drive-in theatres provide a typical example, the number having increased to 29 in 1951.

Most of Los Angeles' recent growth has been in the outlying areas a number of miles from Los Angeles Civic Center The trend in downtown department store sales bears out this fact.

Department Store Sales, 1919-1950

Year	Downtown in percent of county total
1919	74.9%
1929	74.3
1937	63.1
1939	54.0
1941	47.4
1943	47.5
1945	46.0
1947	40.4
1948	36.1

From 1919 to 1929, approximately 75 percent of all department store sales took place downtown. This percentage had decreased to 35 percent of all sales in 1950. All indications are that there will be a continued decrease.

As new residential districts developed, business concerns took advantage of the new markets made available and located their business in close proximity Also, manufacturers made use of the new labor force and began to establish productive industries in these localities.

This, of course, has been a major factor in the development of a "crazy quilt" pattern of employment requiring that tens of thousands of employees cross and re-cross the area, containing more than 45 separate municipalities as well as dozens of other communities, to get to and from work. Other large metropolitan areas do not have this problem to the same extent as their labor force tends to funnel into a single location.

Decentralization is not limited to population and business alone. The residents of these newly created sections have other needs, such as religious, health and recreational centers The civic, church, and medical leaders have satisfied these needs as quickly as the merchants by constructing appropriate buildings.

All of these facts present decentralization as the trend, thereby necessitating a transportation system that would be flexible and attuned to Los Angeles' changing population centers

A characteristic of Los Angeles which is closely related to decentralization is light population density. Those immigrants to the West who were seeking the "wide open spaces" found them in Los Angeles, a fact which is brought out by the following table.

Table II

Population, Land Area, and Population Density of Cities With "Rapid Transit" in Comparison With Los Angeles

City	Population	Land Area in Square Miles	Population per Square Mile
New York	7,454,995	299.0	24,993.1
Chicago	3,396,808	206 7	16,433.5
Philadelphia	1,931,334	127 2	15,183 4
Boston	770,816	46.1	16,720.5
Los Angeles	1,504,277	448.3	3,355 5

The statistics in Table II show that the population density of cities with fixed rail transit systems have from four and one-half to seven and one-half times greater population density than does the City of Los Angeles.

The single-family dwelling unit is another factor that has contributed to the low population density of Los Angeles, and because of building height limits and available land, the single family dwelling units will continue to encourage dispersion

With a large population density such as is found in New York, there is a necessity for and possibility of financially supporting subways and other fixed rail methods of mass transportation. In such cities, the subway and elevated trains have the capacity for moving large masses of people, and the demand is large enough between the peak load periods to justify their existence (even though they operate at a loss). As will be demonstrated later, such is not the case in Los Angeles Satellite communities of the area have or will become completely self-supporting and independent Cordon counts of one of these satellite communities (Miracle Mile) show it now has as many or more automobiles entering it per day as the central business district.

From the foregoing data, it will be readily seen that the system adopted must be flexible and that the systems used elsewhere probably would not be the most adaptable to this area as they would not lend themselves to this historical population, or economic pattern.

How the people in this area may feel on this subject—namely, the continuation of this trend toward decentralization—is dramatically expressed in the pilot opinion survey conducted by this committee. In this survey, 80 percent of the non-employed persons said they "used a street car or bus as little as possible" and 86 percent of the employed persons said they "used a street car or bus as little as possible". For the most part, these people are using their own transportation, namely, the automobile, which, of course, has necessitated the ever expanding freeway and streets and highway program. More than three times (47 percent) as many people preferred a public transportation system of busses on freeways then preferred any other of the three other possibilities, namely, mono-rail, freeways linked with subways (rails in the center of the freeways) and subways

B. Trends in Transportation Facilities

The problem of selecting the most satisfactory transportation facility has only become of major importance with the advent of the automobile and motor bus. Prior to that time, it was simpler as there were few choices other than novelties, which were quickly considered and as quickly abandoned. At first, there was the horse with no competition. Then the wagon, also without competitors. Next, came rail travel for both inter-city and inter-urban travel. Mass communication by rail remained virtually unchallenged until the automobile was developed.

At first, the automobile was considered merely a novelty and no cause for concern by those with financial interests in travel by rail. Soon, the novelty was being widely accepted and a great demand resulted. To satisfy this demand methods of mass production were developed which enabled the man in the street to foresee the day when he could own a "horseless carriage".

The acceptance of the automobile inevitably resulted in the vehicle's use for mass transportation purposes. This first occurred in Los Angeles when the so-called jitney buses were introduced July 1, 1914. In reality, the jitney bus was very different from the modern concept of a motor bus. The vehicle was merely a large automobile, operated in most cases by its owners. Because of the five-cent fare charged by the operators of these vehicles, the name "jitney" was bestowed on them. At one time, there were over 700 of these vehicles in Los Angeles. Despite the mushroom growth, the jitney mode of travel was doomed to failure, mainly because the five-cent fare was not sufficient to cover cost of operation.

Development of the jitney into a larger capacity vehicle was the next step in the evolution of the modern motor bus At first, box-like bodies were added to the jitney chassis, but the operators soon discovered that it was necessary to build the proper type of vehicle, from the ground up. This type of vehicle, having a much larger capacity, met with considerable financial success in many cities Street railway companies of the major cities did not view this new opposition complacently. Quite the contrary, they fought it vigorously and only under financial loss did they substitute motor buses for unprofitable street car lines

City planners were quick to recognize the advantages of the motor bus over street railway systems of mass transportation. These advantages include:

1 No facilities other than bus needed. The motor coach is the only one of the three major types of mass transportation vehicles (motor bus, street car or trolley coach) that does not require facilities in addition to the vehicle itself for operations. The street car requires both overhead wires with telephone poles and rails, while the trolley coach requires overhead wires with poles at frequent intervals

2. Economical superiority. As will be shown in a later section, buses are superior to street cars or trolley coaches from an operating cost point of view.

3 Maximum operating flexibility. Several factors combine to give motor coaches a definite advantage in regard to flexibility. There is no right of way, no tracks, no wires, etc., required in order to change the route. They are free from "line stalling"—that is—if one is stopped, the other can go around. Buses can be rerouted in case of fire or street repairs or other emergency. Buses can easily be rerouted to suit changed or growing needs of the community. This is particularly valuable in the area of Los Angeles.

4. Most attractive and convenient service. Jess L. Haugh stated that, "I am a transportation man. I have been in business since the big four railway * * * Buses are also more attractive because they pull up to the curb. Buses have express service which is impossible with street cars".

5 Attract the greatest passenger volume.

6. Can be made most easily self-sustaining financially. Motor buses can be made financially self-sustaining most easily because of a much lower capital investment and operating expense and depreciation

7. Reduction of traffic congestion. Mr. Haugh also stated that rail lines cause more traffic because they take up more traffic lanes

During the 20's, the battle raged between the street railway interests and proponents of the new system of mass transportation By 1929, street railway interests knew that something had to be done to regain some of their lost patronage At an executive meeting in Atlantic City, electric railway executives met to outline a plan for accomplishing this Certain of the disadvantages of rail transportation were inherent, such as lack of flexibility due to rails and restriction of speed in congested areas due to a lack of maneuverability. It was decided that the car itself offered the greatest possibility of improvement. A committee was appointed to undertake the modernization of the car.

This committee eventually expanded and became known as the Electric Railway Presidents Conference Committee. The modernized street car that was introduced in the mid 1930's as the result of this committee's work became known as the P.C.C. car.

Modernization of the street car recaptured some of the public favor, but the hey-day of the trolley was over despite improvements This fact is brought out most strikingly by the following table showing the trend of transportation vehicles usage.

Transportation Vehicles in Use 1926-48

Calender Year	Ordinary Street Car	Subway and Elevated	Trolley Coaches	Motor Buses
1926	62,857	8,909		14,400
1930	55,150	9,640	173	21,300
1935	40,050	10,416	578	23,800
1940	26,630	11,032	2,802	35,000
1945	26,680	11,032	2,802	35,000
1947	21,607	9,174	4,632	56,917

It may be observed from the foregoing table that rail transit facilities have not shown any great increase since 1926. Street cars have decreased from 73 percent of the total in 1926 to 20 percent of the total in 1948.

Subways and elevated trains have remained in a static position since 1926, representing 10 percent of the total then and today.

Trolley coaches were not in use in 1926, but represented 6 percent of the total in 1948—the first year they were in general use. They have not shown any material difference percentage-wise since then, even though more are being used.

Motor coaches had already established themselves in 1926, representing 17 percent of the total and by 1948 were the outstanding favorite as they represented 64 percent of the total vehicles in use

Edward Rimpau stated, "In passing, it might be well to point out that a study of the transportation here would be improved somewhat by at least a superficial appraisal of the trend of transit elsewhere and this trend is definitely away from fixed rail transportation and toward the most flexible rubber-tired transportation, which on its face is so much better able to cope with modern traffic congestion. The gasoline or diesel propelled rubber-tired light-weight bus is a more economic vehicle than the huge street car operating on fixed steel rail ties and a roadbed of its own.

Past experience with public opinion has factually outlined that there is very little to commend the rails in comparison with the modern bus. On this, there is pretty general agreement among traffic authorities and city planners. The use of rail facilities for rapid transit presents somewhat of a different problem. In the past, when modern freeways were in the dream state rather than actually existing and heavy vehicular traffic clogged the streets and highways, the rails were looked upon as the only logical means of securing a route for through traffic and, hence, were still looked upon as the only means for rapid transit In New York, Chicago, and Boston, where rail rapid transit facilities are in existence, the tremendous capital investment necessitates their continued use and even some logical expansion, although even these cities are adopting the use of motor coaches for rapid transit as fast as suitable highway facilities come into existence.

It must be kept in mind, however, that some of the thinking regarding the rapidity of "rail rapid transit" is fallacious, that the trend toward buses is prevalent in inter-urban as well as inter-city transportation, that most cities instituted rail rapid transit when there was no alternative such as the modern freeway. This subject will be further discussed in the chapter on "Influence of Freeways on Mass Transportation".

The most modern motor coach, accommodates 51 passengers and burns butane. It is understood that the City of Chicago has ordered 500 new coaches and has received delivery of 50 at this date. Butane as a fuel is more economical and the exhaust is odorless, thus helping to eliminate a very obnoxious condition in metropolitan areas where it is used.

C. Fixed and Operating Costs of Various Methods of Public Transportation

From the economic standpoint, it would be necessary to study the characteristics of each area in great detail to be served before a completely satisfactory system of mass transportation could be decided upon for any area. Despite this fact, it is possible to recognize proven principles of fixed and operating costs of the various transportation facilities and thereby help simplify the problem of selection. Construction costs estimates indicate that the installation of a rail rapid transit system in the center mall of freeways would dwarf the estimates of adaptation of freeways to express bus travel. For example, the construction of 44 miles of rail rapid transit on the Hollywood-San Fernando, Santa Monica Parkway, Olympic and Venice Parkway, Harbor Parkway and Inglewood Parkway, would cost approximately $167,000,000 or $3,700,000 a mile It must be kept in mind that this estimate does not consider expenditures for rolling stock or initial outlay for rail. Not included are shops for maintenance and barns for housing, which indicates that the $3,700,000 estimate is in all probability conservative. The large investment in construction for rail rapid transit includes such items as rights of way, construction other than track, stations.

The cost of bus stops to accommodate express buses on freeways is estimated at $150,000 per mile. The initial investment in rolling stock favors the motor bus also. A modern 45 passenger bus costs about $17,000, while the 58 passenger P.C.C. car costs $28,000. In recent years, the seating capacity of buses has been increased and the 51 passenger bus is becoming very popular. The latest bus available (not generally in use) takes 55 passengers All indications are that maximum size of buses will occur at approximately the P C.C. car capacity of 60 passengers.

Other pertinent cost data are presented in Table III

	Rail			Percent	Coach			Percent
	1939	1949		Increase	1939	1949		Increase
Miles travelled	29,297,336	17,007,800			8,300,874	20,670,288
Way and structures (Excl deprec)	1.95¢	5 36¢			--	--
Equipment repairs	2.05¢	4 74¢			2 86¢	5 40¢
Servicing equipment	1 46¢	3 18¢			34¢	1 02¢
Tires and tubes					65¢	85¢
Power or fuel or oil	3 09¢	4.89¢			1 93¢	2 57¢
	8 55	18 17	9 62¢	113%	5 78	9 84	4.06¢	70%
Average seating capacity	49	50		2%	36	44	8	22%

From 1939-1949, operating cost items enumerated show 113 percent increase for street car with no significant change in seating capacity per unit whereas the bus or motor coach has had a 70 percent increase in operating cost items enumerated and a 22 percent increase in seating capacity per unit.

Depreciation costs for the two types of systems, bus and rail, should be compared in two ways:

(1) Depreciation costs of the rolling stock only; and

(2) Depreciation costs of any facilities other than the rolling stock which is an integral part of the system.

In comparing the depreciation of rolling stock only, there is no appreciable difference between the bus and street car. The second comparison, depreciation of facilities in addition to rolling stock, places the bus in a very advantageous position, as the only item to depreciate in a bus system is the vehicle itself. A rail system, however, is subject to depreciation of not only the vehicle, but also the rails upon which the vehicle travels and the overhead structures from which it derives its power. The main elements of operating expenses relate to wages for operators, power costs and maintenance costs. The first of these, operators wages, are similar in the same city for motor bus, trolley bus and street car The factor that causes more economical operation between the three is speed of travel The motor bus stands out in this regard on ordinary streets and would be even more efficient on modern freeways.

Power costs are usually dependent on the costs of power in the city of operation. In the Los Angeles area, the average power costs of street cars for the eleven month period January-November 1950 was 5 16 cents per mile which is considerably larger than power costs for buses which was 3.44 cents per mile.

Maintenance of a bus system is similar to depreciation in that the main consideration is the bus itself. Also, the same holds true of street railways in regard to maintenance and depreciation

The street railways must maintain auxiliary equipment, such as rails and overhead cables in addition to the street car.

In summary, it might be said that in both fixed and operating costs, the advantage is to motor buses rather than street railways. These advantages will be even more outstanding in the future with more powerful motors being installed in buses and the increased building of freeways.

There are no figures available regarding the operating costs of a monorail system, but its principal proponent has provided an estimate of the present fixed costs.

George D Roberts said, "The cost of building a mono-rail system, including all stations and equipment, would be approximately $600,000 per mile, while the cost for a Los Angeles subway would be between $10,000,000 and $12.000.000 a mile. The cost of the mono-rail system in the freeways would be $834,000 a mile "

D. Influence of Freeways on Mass Transportation Facilities

Throughout this report, reference has been made to the so-called freeways and the fact that the freeway as a method of transportation has changed the thinking of many of the nation's leading city planners. The universal acceptance and use of the auto has compelled cities, counties and states to provide means for a less hazardous and quicker means of moving vehicular traffic. . . . hence, the public transportation people were quick to investigate the possibilities of using freeways for the solution of their problems. Their investigations resulted in the cities where freeways have been constructed or are being constructed making arrangements to use freeways for mass transportation purposes. The trend is toward the adaptation of freeways to express bus travel rather than to rail rapid transit The majority of major studies that have been made concerning the Los Angeles transit problem have recommended the use of express buses on freeways of the region. Quotations from these studies are pertinent to this report.

In 1942, the Los Angeles City Planning Commission in their report entitled, "Mass Transit Facilities and the Master Plan of Parkways" made the following suggestions:

> "The Board therefore recommends, as in the public interest, the controlled use of express highways by rapid transit buses under conditions insuring (A) vehicles specially designed for the service to preclude inappropriate speed, braking or similar characteristics,

(B) restricted number as occasion may require, (C) bus stops entirely out of the traffic lanes on the main highway, and *(D) arrangements designed to liquidate any excess cost of highways due to buses by rental charges to be paid out of revenues of the transportation system ''

And further:

''The board recommends thorough coordination of the surface and rapid transit facilities; that stop locations for rapid transit buses on express highways be arranged to facilitate passenger interchange at points of intersection with all important surface rail and bus lines; and that certain rapid transit lines be arranged to provide for through service, without transfer, by running rapid transit buses for part of their route on the surface streets to pick up the passengers conveniently, then on the express highway for speed over the long haul and then back on the streets again for distribution of their load at the usual street stops.''

The Central Business District Association in their report entitled, ''Transit Study—1944, Los Angeles Metropolitan Area'', gave an example of adapting parkways to express bus usage. It was suggested that the parkway transit buses load in residential sections before entering parkway and disperse passengers at major transfer points One of the most significant findings of this report was stated in this manner: ''Present coaches operate satisfactorily with other traffic on completed sections of parkway. However, coaches specially designed for appropriate speed, braking and similar characteristics, and controlled as to number, ultimately will be required for parkways service''. This contention is supported by statements in a study for the Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Highways, Streets, and Bridges of the California Legislature entitled, ''Engineering Facts 1946 and a Future Program''. On page 91 of this report, the following statements are made:

''In the proposed State Expressway System, design standards must be high enough to accommodate all types of vehicles that will constitute the traffic over the system. It is contemplated that trucks will be operated on all units of the expressway system, and buses on most routes. It is essential that bus routes be determined before expressways are designed, because special provision must be made for the safety of bus passengers and the general traffic, with facilities for loading and unloading passengers outside the traffic lanes Such facilities must be designed into the system because of the impracticality of adding them after the highway is constructed.''

''Bus lines operating over expressways properly designed to handle such traffic will add materially to the State's highway transportation facilities and serve large numbers of people who must rely on mass transportation.

''In the case of metropolitan freeways which are not part of the State Expressway System, the decision as to the operation of trucks and buses should be made by the appropriate local authorities.''

* Subsequently increase in taxes, highway user taxes, such as weight fees, fuel tax, increase license fees

In addition to the well-considered statements in the reports quoted above, many leaders in the transportation field have expressed their opinions regarding the adaptation of freeways to express bus usage. Frank H. Malley, Director, City Plan Commission, Providence, R. I., has stated his opinion on the subject in this manner: "As the travelling public becomes better acquainted with freeways, an irresistable demand for express transit service on these arteries can be reasonably expected. Transit properties, sensitive to the desires of their customers, will be quick to obtain necessary franchises where possible. To provide for this demand, accommodations for stops and transfer stations must be provided in the design state of the artery as makeshift arrangements will reduce seriously its effectiveness".

Other authorities on the subject have gone beyond a favorable decision for buses on freeways and state their opinions from the standpoint of how to plan bus stops and turnouts on the freeways

The Director of Cleveland, Ohio's, City Planning Commission has said, "The scheme which has thus far been developed for bus stops on express highways is to take them off the freeway entirely to the grade street at a point of interchange, most convenient to pedestrians and riders on the surface transit system".

Ladislas Segoe, Consulting Engineer and City Planner of Cincinnati, Ohio, believes that, "Bus turnouts should be incorporated within the right-of-way of the expressway, and should, of course, be off the travel roadways with adequate decelerating and accelerating lanes."

Opinions regarding the method of construction are offered here merely to indicate that those who have made the statements are convinced that buses should operate on freeways and should not be construed to mean that their methods are the most satisfactory that could be adopted. Once the decision is made to incorporate bus turnouts in the freeways yet to be constructed, the design of the most efficient type of turnout will be a comparatively simple matter.

Provisions for express buses are being made for the freeways that are either in the planning or construction stage at San Antonio, Texas, Detroit, Michigan and Philadelphia Mr. Hans Blumenfeld, Chief Division of Planning Analysis, Philadelphia, has said, "We anticipate use by express buses on the freeways which are now in the planning or construction stages".

William S. Chapin, Consultant, New York Tunnel Authorities, has made the following statement, "The expressway cannot any longer be considered a highway facility separate from the other problems affecting the growth of a modern city. In cities where separate transit facilities cannot be afforded, it is possible that either rail or motor mass transport can be combined in the expressway programs".

Earl W. Andrews, in a study entitled "Detroit Expressway and Transit System", has made the following statement, "Operation of buses would not require any special provisions on the proposed expressways. Buses would utilize only a portion of the capacity of one lane in each direction" On the Outer Drive in Chicago, an express bus service is provided that has proven so popular that double-deck buses carry 7,000 passengers outbound from the central business district in the rush hour, which incidentally compares favorably with the 3,000 passengers carried in the 1780 automobiles in the maximum automobile lane during the peak travel hour.

The economical use of space per passenger bus is an advantage to be obtained by using buses on freeways. A 40 passenger bus with all passengers seated requires only seven square feet per person, whereas the private passenger car rider requires about 60 square feet of street space. Since it is not the square footage of street space so much as the linear lane lengths that are involved, it might be well to examine the space saved from this standpoint Each of the 40 passengers in the example above would require a little over one foot of linear lane length of highway, whereas each private passenger car rider requires 10 linear lane feet. This saving of road space would be even greater if a 51 passenger bus is used.

This great saving of road space results in relieving traffic congestion both on the freeway and in the city This economy might be expressed in measures other than linear feet. A street 60 feet wide with parking prohibited permits three lanes of traffic to move in each direction. If automobiles are used exclusively on this street, capacity is approximately 2,155 vehicles per hour, carrying 3,700 persons The same street used by both buses and autos, however, can move 11,130 persons.

It can be readily observed from the preceding figures that if an improved system of mass transportation would cause private automobile owners to patronize the public transportation system, it would result in a considerable lessening of traffic congestion.

All reports and comments quoted up to this point have been favorable in regard to the use of express buses There have been, however, reports which presented the negative side to the question Of these studies, the DeLeuw-Cather report of 1945, sometimes referred to as the "Traffic Clinic" report, presented the following objections: "The limitation in bus capacity is a reason for the use of trains in rapid transit". This limitation is fast disappearing as the size of buses increases. According to the New York Times, October 4, 1949, Col Sidney H. Bingham of the New York City Board of Transportation, stated before the annual convention of the American Transit Association at Atlantic City, that in his opinion, the most important advance made in surface transportation had been in the development of the 50-passenger bus, of which 400 were reported in operation in New York City, with "capacity and speed previously found only in the trolley car and the trolley bus, combined with the flexibility inherent in a self-powered vehicle".

Another objection raised by the DeLeuw Cather report was in regard to traffic congestion resulting from increased use of buses The report states, "If all rail lines were converted to motor bus operation, it would produce intolerable traffic conditions in the downtown area long before the ultimate population densities are reached". This position was taken by the writers on the premise that travel to the Central Business District will increase in direct proportion to the increase in population. Studies of private vehicular traffic and mass transit passengers entering the Central Business District point out the fallacy in this premise. Both private vehicular traffic and mass transit passengers has shown a progressive decrease from 1947 to 1950

Rather than increasing the amount of traffic congestion in the Central Business District, express buses on the freeways would decrease traffic congestion

First, a very substantial volume of through traffic now entering the district will, by use of the freeways, be removed entirely from the downtown street system. This will materially increase the street space available for the apparently stabilized business, shopping and service population of the downtown district.

Second, it is probable that an effective motor coach service utilizing the freeways for travel to the downtown district would attract some private vehicle motorists. Although this would increase the number of mass transit vehicles, the increase would be more than offset by the decrease in private vehicles.

Another method of decreasing the traffic congestion in the downtown district that is well worth considering, is the construction of a modern bus terminal similar to that recently constructed to handle the motor buses in New York City. This terminal takes some 2,000 buses completely off the streets, speeds arrival and departure of scores more, handles 120,000 commuters a day on one level, 5,000 long distance bus travelers on another.

Examination of the facts that have been presented would seem to reduce to a minimum the amount of criticism that can be levelled at a mass transportation system that utilizes express buses on freeways.

A question that has arisen in the controversy over the type of transportation facility to use in a rapid transit system for Los Angeles has been the one of speed. The proponents of rail rapid transit have at times beclouded the picture until the only recourse is to study the facts of the matter.

In comparison with cities that have a so-called rail rapid transit system, Los Angeles has a much better record than is thought by many. Miles and hours statistics for the Los Angeles Transit Lines for the year 1948 show an average speed of 10.05 miles per hour with no rapid transit as such. This average compares favorably with the 10.20 miles per hour average of the transportation system of Boston which includes both elevated and subway rail facilities

The New York Rapid Transit system, according to the New York City Transit Record, 1949, averages 16.8 miles per hour This system includes elevated trains and subways. The average is high not only because of the facilities, but also because of fewer stops and no grade crossings—advantages which the Los Angeles surface system cannot have, therefore, making comparison difficult Express buses on freeways would, however, equalize this advantage and probably produce a higher average speed.

The London Underground, one of the oldest subways in the world, has an average speed of 18 miles per hour. It must be remembered, however, that the City of London has a population density of 38,318 persons per square mile. Such a density would make possible the profitable operation of a rail rapid transit system Although London will retain her system of subways, statistics are available which show that the majority of facility additions to the system have been buses for surface travel.

In considering any program of modernization of traffic facilities, the number of people who will be served is a matter of prime importance. The rapid transit system of London accounts for only 13 percent of total passengers transported as shown in the following table:

Facility	Passengers (1946)	Percentage
Buses	2,504,000,000	58%
Rapid transit	569,000,000	13%
Street cars	297,000,000	7%
Trolley coaches	889,000,000	22%

SOURCE Mr Valentine—member of London Transport System

After reviewing the facts, it would appear that express buses on freeways are the most practical type of rapid transit for the Los Angeles area. The population density is of a size that it would be difficult to support a fixed rail operation. Also, the population is of a shifting nature and, therefore, risk would be involved in financing the tremendous cost of rail transit.

It has been shown that the trend is away from fixed rail transportation and toward increased use of buses in the major cities of the country. Los Angeles is fortunate in being able to plan a transportation system at this time for the bus is now the superior alternative to rail transportation. Such was not the case when the majority of major cities were planning their transportation systems

The huge capital outlay for rail transportation, especially in view of the other disadvantages and risks is not warranted. The modern freeways of the region make possible greater efficiency of an all-bus system than ever before.

In addition to advantages previously mentioned, the motor bus has another which must be considered in a world living in the shadow of war. In times of emergency, the flexibility of the bus and its great maneuverability would be a very valuable asset. Because the bus has its own power plant and is not restricted to rail or overhead trolley routes, detours would be a simple matter, whereas it would be an impossibility with other types of facilities.

4. Financing

From the pilot opinion survey, it was learned that only 18 percent of the people would favor a bond issue secured by a property tax. This means, of course, that approximately 80 percent of the people would probably be against this type of financing for any public transportation system.

The findings of this pilot opinion survey were, in effect, voiced by many witnesses who testified vehemently against any public transportation system requiring an ad valorem tax. These witnesses represented municipalities and other interested groups. Typical of such witnesses was Mr. E. S. Dixon, Mayor of Inglewood who said, "I think this form of taxation has reached the saturation point. We believe that probably the people who use the system should pay the cost because, (1) people will support a rail transit system more readily without an ad valorem tax, and (2) they will eventually patronize the system better".

Paul V. Parker said, "We suggest that the Legislature explore the possibility of borrowing the money, either by means of bonds to be issued by the State, or perhaps through enabling legislation to permit individual counties to issue bonds, these bonds not to become any burden upon the ad valorem taxpayer but merely to be anticipatory bonds, to be retired by tax monies that will accrue in the future under the terms of the Burns-Collier Bill.

"There are a number of advantages to this plan. It would greatly expedite construction of the freeways and after the freeways are constructed and in use, we could then consider sensibly if any further expenditures were needed to solve our traffic problem or if the freeways themselves, if used to full efficiency, would not solve these problems for a great many years to come."

GUESTS EXTENDED COURTESIES OF ASSEMBLY

On request of Speaker Sam L Collins and the Republican Delegation, the usual courtesies of the Assembly for this day were unanimously extended to Mrs. Marjorie Benedict, Republican National Committee Woman for California, of Berkeley, and Former Senator Tony De Lapp of Richmond.

On request of Messrs Beck and Henderson, the usual courtesies of the Assembly for this day were unanimously extended to Dr. Gordon Winter and Dr. Edna Winter of Auberry

On request of Mr Kelly, the usual courtesies of the Assembly for this day were unanimously extended to Dr Violet Martin of Bakersfield.

On request of Messrs Hinckley and Shaw, the usual courtesies of the Assembly for this day were unanimously extended to Mr and Mrs Clifford Lee and Mrs. Loretta Stutz of San Bernardino

On request of Mr Dolwig, the usual courtesies of the Assembly for this day were unanimously extended to Myrtle Clark Stearns of Atherton, and Ruth Hulsted of Belmont.

On request of Mr Davis, the usual courtesies of the Assembly for this day were unanimously extended to Rowland H. Dow of Alturas.

On request of Mr Lowrey, the usual courtesies of the Assembly for this day were unanimously extended to Mrs. S. Gillogly and Mrs. A. Albaugh, teachers, and a group of pupils of the Davis Interm School.

On request of Mr McFall, the usual courtesies of the Assembly for this day were unanimously extended to C. J. Bravo, teacher, Mrs. Fred Lemmon and Mrs. Metzler, mothers, Sam Fonzi, and the following students of the Linden Grammar School of Linden: Larry Billigmeier, Beverly Boggiano, Carol Ann Clay, Sharon Coburn, Eugene Croce, Larry Drace, Melvin Gondolfo, Charles Golden, Victor Goodnal, Pat Kreny, Wayne Lemmon, Jack Lucas, Jimmie Lawley, Martha Metzler, Landon McCuin, Dick Minahen, David Patterson, Anthony Poggio, Edith Potter, Marlyn Prather, Robert Sharp, Atoma Smith, Olga Stagnaro, and Johnnie Vaccarezza; and Hortense Robertson, teacher, and the following pupils of the Glenwood School of Stockton: Gayle Dark, Cora May Chambers, Alfred D'Adda, Ed Robinson, Alvin Midgette, and Kenneth Ambrose.

On request of Speaker Sam L. Collins, the usual courtesies of the Assembly for this day were unanimously extended to T. W. M. Ashby, Town Clerk, Auckland, New Zealand; and Roberts M. Firth, New Zealand, U. S. Representative.

On request of Mr. Gaffney and the San Francisco Delegation, the usual courtesies of the Assembly for this day were unanimously extended to Rev. Father Damien of Sacramento.

On request of Mr. McCollister, the usual courtesies of the Assembly for this day were unanimously extended to Willard H. Van Dyke, teacher, and the following pupils of the Tamalpais Union High School, Mill Valley: Marilyn Doll, Missy Spence, Richard Muller, and Ronald Collier.

On request of Mr. Dunn, the usual courtesies of the Assembly for this day were unanimously extended to C. O. Blose and Don Nowell, teachers; and the following pupils of the David E. Martin School of San Lorenzo: Carol Sue Adkins, Art Aldridge, Lawrence Bechere, Lorraine Benner, Don Bodiford, Bob Bowers, Jerry Brann, Carol Brolin, Nancy Bumgarner, Jerry Carson, Jackie Conway, Larry Crites, Barbara Cruickshank, Donna Davis, Billy Dewey, Wayne Engel, Betty Evans, Rose Marie Frink, Sylvia Graham, Nancy Jo Greager, Don Halsted, Jack Healy, Joan Howland, Raymond Irwin, Mike Jones, Sharalyn Klezmer, Janice MacFadden, David Martin, Jimmy May, Joan McCreery, Barbara Montgomery, Larry Moore, Pat Moorehead, Shirley Preston, Ruth Snyder, Gary Tilden, Pat Tooker, and Ann van Riesen.

ADJOURNMENT

At 12.43 p.m., on motion of Mr. Dickey, the Speaker declared the Assembly adjourned until 10 a.m., Monday, April 9, 1951.

Chief Clerk Arthur A Ohnimus at the desk.

ROLL CALL

The roll was called, and the following answered to their names:

Babbage, Beck, Belotti, Berry, Brady, Brown, Burke, Burkhalter, Caldecott Chapel, Clarke, Cloyed, Coats, Collier, George D. Collins, Condon, Connolly, Conrad, Cooke, Crowley, Davis, Dickey, Dills, Dolwig, Doyle, Dunn, Elliott, Erwin, Evans, Fleury, Gaffney, Geddes, Grant, Grunsky, Gubser, Hagen, Hahn, Hansen, Hawkins, Henderson, Hinckley, Hollibaugh, Kelly, Kilpatrick, Kirkwood, Klocksiem, Lanterman, Levering, Lincoln, Lindsay, Lipscomb, Luckel, Lyon, Maloney, McCarthy, McCollister, McFall, McGee, McMillan, Morris, Moss, Munnell, Niehouse, Parker, Porter, Rosenthal, Rumford, Shaw, Sherwin, Silliman, Smith, Stanley, Stewart, Thomas, Tomlinson, Waters, and Mr. Speaker—77.

Quorum present

PRAYER

The following prayer was offered by the Chaplain, Rev. Clarence A. Kircher:

Our Father, Which Art in Heaven.
Hallowed be Thy Name.

Guide our Nation amidst the perils of war and grant us victory and peace, we humbly implore May the cause for which we strive commend itself as righteous in Thy sight We pray for those who serve in the Armed Forces of our Country.

Grant guidance to the President of the United States, the Governor of our State, the Speaker of this Assembly, the Members of this Legislature and all who have been chosen for places of authority and responsibility.

"My country, 'tis of Thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the pilgrims' pride,
From every mountain side
Let freedom ring.
—AMEN.

READING OF THE JOURNAL DISPENSED WITH

On motion of Mr. Dickey, further reading of the Journal of the previous legislative day was dispensed with.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE FOR THE DAY

The following members were granted leaves of absence for the day, because of illness:

Mr. Butters, on motion of Mr. Erwin.

Mr. Meyers, on motion of Mr. McCarthy.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE TO THE FLAG

Upon request of the Speaker, the Assembly then gave the pledge of allegiance to the Flag.

COMMUNICATIONS

By Speaker Sam L. Collins:

(b) In respect to prior service consisting of service other than as a [state miscellaneous] local miscellaneous [or prison] member, the pension computed pursuant to the provisions for computation of prior service of members of the category in which the prior service was rendered.

This section shall not apply to any contracting agency nor to the employees of any contracting agency unless and until the agency elects to be subject to the provisions of this section by amendment to its contract made in the manner prescribed for approval of contracts, except that an election among the employees is not required, or, in the case of contracts made after the date this section takes effect, by express provision in such contract making the contracting agency subject to the provisions of this section.

SEC. 4 Section 21253 01 is added to said code, to read:

21253 01. The prior service pension for a state miscellaneous member, for a prison member, or for a local miscellaneous member who is an employee of a contracting agency which is subject to the provision of this section, is an annual pension derived from the contributions of the State, or of the contracting agency, equal to the sum of the following:

(a) The fraction of one-fiftieth of his final compensation set forth opposite his age at retirement, taken to the preceding completed quarter year, in the column applicable to his sex, in the table set forth in Section 21251 1, as adjusted, multiplied by the number of years of prior service, except service in a category of membership other than that of a state miscellaneous, local miscellaneous or prison member, with which he is entitled to be credited at retirement.

(b) In respect to prior service consisting of service other than as a state miscellaneous, local miscellaneous or prison member, the pension computed pursuant to the provisions for computation of prior service of members of the category in which the prior service was rendered.

This section shall not apply to any contracting agency nor to the employees of any contracting agency unless and until the agency elects to be subject to the provisions of this section by amendment to its contract made in the manner prescribed for approval of contracts, except that an election among the employees is not required, or, in the case of contracts made after the date this section takes effect, by express provision in such contract making the contracting agency subject to the provisions of this section.

(c) Wherever in this part or in any statute heretofore or hereafter enacted reference is made to "Section 21253," such reference shall mean and be construed to refer to this Section 21253.01 with respect to the State, any contracting agency which has elected to be subject to the provisions of this section, and all members to whom this section applies.

SEC. 5. Section 21296 of said code is amended to read:

21296. The disability retirement pension shall be such an amount as with that portion of his annuity provided by his accumulated normal contributions, will make his disability retirement allowance equal:

(a) Ninety percent of [one-sixtieth] one-fiftieth of his final compensation multiplied by the number of years of service credited to him; or

(b) If the disability retirement allowance computed under subdivision (a) does not exceed [one-fourth] one-third of his final compensation, 90 percent of [one-sixtieth] one-fiftieth of his final compensation multiplied by the number of years of service which would be creditable to him were his service to continue until attainment by him of age 60, but in such case the retirement allowance shall not exceed [one-fourth] one-third of such final compensation.

This subdivision is not applicable to members who have become members of the Retiring Annuities System of the university.

SEC. 6. Section 21298 of said code is amended to read:

21298. (1) The disability retirement allowance of a local miscellaneous member retired for disability or a local safety member retired for nonindustrial disability and the requirements for obtaining it are the same as those for state members so retired if the employing contracting agency elects, by amendment to its contract made as provided in Section 20461.5, or by express provision in its contract, to be subject to the same provisions concerning minimum disability retirement allowances for such members that apply to the State

(2) If the employing contracting agency does not make the election specified in subdivision (1) of this section, but elects, by amendment to its contract with the board made as provided in Section 20461.5, or by express provision in its contract, to be subject to the provisions of this subdivision, then as to the local miscellaneous members employed by that agency retired for disability and the local safety members employed by that agency retired for nonindustrial disability, the requirements for obtaining the disability retirement allowance are the same as those for state members so retired but the disability retirement pension shall be such an amount as with that portion of his annuity provided by his accumulated normal contributions, will make his disability retirement allowance equal:

(a) Ninety percent of one-sixtieth of his final compensation multiplied by the number of years of service credited to him; or

(b) If the disability retirement allowance computed under subdivision (a) does not exceed one-third of his final compensation, 90 percent of one-sixtieth of his final compensation multiplied by the number of years of service which would be creditable to him were his service to continue until attainment by him of age 60, but in such case the retirement allowance shall not exceed one-third of such final compensation

(3) If the employing contracting agency does not make the election specified in subdivision (1) or in subdivision (2) of this section, but has elected, by amendment to its contract with the board made as provided in Section 20461.5, or by express provision in its contract, to subject itself and its employees to the provisions of this part reducing the ages at which members may retire and increasing the benefits members will receive [ ] as those provisions were in effect on and after October 1, 1945, then as to the local miscellaneous members employed by that agency retired for disability and the local safety members employed by that agency retired for nonindustrial disability, the requirements for obtaining the disability retirement allowance are the same as those for state members so retired, but the disability retirement pension shall be such an amount as with that portion of his annuity provided by his accumulated normal contributions, will make his disability retirement allowance equal:

(a) Ninety percent of one-sixtieth of his final compensation multiplied by the number of years of service credited to him; or

(4) If [, however,] the employing contracting agency does not [so elect,] make the election specified in subdivision (1) or in subdivision (2) of this section, and has not made the election specified in subdivision (3) of this section, then as to the local miscellaneous members employed by that agency retired for disability and the local safety members employed by that agency retired for nonindustrial disability, the requirements for obtaining the disability retirement allowance are the same as those for state members so retired, but the disability retirement pension shall be such an amount as with that portion of his annuity provided by his accumulated normal contributions, will make his disability retirement allowance equal [.]

(a) Ninety percent of one-seventieth of his final compensation multiplied by the number of years of service credited to him; or

(b) If the disability retirement allowance computed under subdivision (a) does not exceed one-fourth of his final compensation, 90 percent of one-seventieth of his final compensation multiplied by the number of years of service which would be creditable to him were his service to continue until attainment by him of age 65, but in such case the retirement allowance shall not exceed one-fourth of such final compensation, but in no event shall the disability retirement pension be more than sufficient to make the disability retirement allowance, exclusive of any annuity provided by accumulated additional contributions, exceed the service retirement allowance, exclusive of any annuity purchased by accumulated additional contributions, receivable by the member should he retire at the lowest age at which he would be eligible for service retirement, disregarding the right to retire after electing to allow his accumulated contributions to remain in the retirement fund following resignation or discharge.

(5) The disability retirement pension shall be derived from the contributions of the employer

SEC. 7. Section 21251.5 is added to said code, to read

21251.5. Every current service pension, prior service pension, and disability retirement pension payable for time commencing on the effective date of this section to any member who was retired prior to said effective date is hereby increased to the amount it would be if the provisions of Sections 21251.11, 21253.01, 21296, and 21298, as they exist on said effective date, had been in effect on the date of the actual retirement of the member; but this section does not authorize any decrease in any such pension, nor does this section give any such retired member, or his successors in interest, any claim against the State for any increase in any pension paid or payable for time prior to its effective date. Calculation of pensions under this section shall be made on the basis of current interest rate and mortality tables

This section shall not apply to any contracting agency with respect to its employees who have retired under this system prior to the effective date of this section unless and until the agency elects to be subject to the provisions of this section, with respect to such employees, by express provision in its contract with the board, or by amendment to its contract made in the manner prescribed for approval of contracts, except that an election among the employees is not required

SEC. 8. This act shall take effect on the first day of the first month next succeeding the ninetieth day after the final adjournment of the 1951 Regular Session of the Legislature."

REQUEST FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT THAT LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL BE PRINTED IN THE JOURNAL

Mr. Silliman announced that a Special Report on the Payroll System of the State of California, by the Interim Committee on Governmental Reorganization, has been printed as a separate document and copies placed upon the desks of all members; and asked for, and was granted, unanimous consent that the following letter of transmittal be ordered printed in the Journal, in 10 point type, as follows:

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE, STATE CAPITOL
SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, March 26, 1951

Honorable Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly
State Capitol, Sacramento, California

Pursuant to House Resolution 222, read and adopted June 26, 1949, your Interim Committee on Governmental Reorganization submits herewith a Special Report on the Payroll System of the State of California.

It was the unanimous feeling of this committee that all state employees should be assured of a "pay day certain", and that procedural changes to this end could bring about a more efficient and less costly state payroll operation. As the centralized payroll mechanized procedures of the State are very similar to those in some of the larger industries in California, it was felt that industry's experience in attaining economical and highly efficient operating payroll systems would be of considerable help in solving the problems of the state system. In order to attain this goal, the chairman of this committee invited top flight leaders in California industry to form an advisory group to aid the committee in this study. Each industry represented has large payrolls, some even larger than the state payroll. The industrialists who accepted the chairman's invitation were:

James B. Black, President, Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

Col. C. T. Blanck, Asst. Vice Pres., Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co.

George L. Buland, Vice President and General Counsel, Southern Pacific Company.

Paul L. Davies, President, Food Machinery & Chemical Co.

T. S. Petersen, President, Standard Oil Company of California.

Arthur Stewart, Controller, Safeway Stores, Inc.

Carl F. Wente, Vice President, Bank of America.

Each advisory committee member selected a payroll expert from his own company to work with the committee The payroll experts selected were as follows:

Mr. C. C. Blalock, Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co.

Mr. Ralph J. Brenner, Food Machinery & Chemical Corp.

Mr. Frank Calhoun, Safeway Stores, Inc
Mr. Francis J. Carr, Pacific Gas and Electric Co.
Mr. Charles Conroy, Bank of America.
Mr. James E. Gaston, Safeway Stores, Inc.
Mr. E M. Johnson, Southern Pacific Company.
Mr. Robert J. Reilly, Bank of America.
Mr. V. H. Roman, Standard Oil Co. of California.

The advisory committee elected Mr. C. C. Blalock, Chairman, and Mr. V. H. Roman, Secretary, and after a series of weekly meetings which included visits to the centralized payroll bureaus in Sacramento and San Francisco, the following report was filed with the committee.

The committee wishes to express its appreciation to the members of the advisory committee and to the men they selected to make this special report. Each of these experts gave unselfishly of their time without any cost to the State.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES W. SILLIMAN, Chairman
ROBERT C. KIRKWOOD, Vice Chairman
ARTHUR W. COATS, JR.

Motion to Amend

Mr. Erwin moved the adoption of the following amendment:

Amendment No. 1

On page 1 of the printed bill, strike out lines 1 to 7, inclusive, and insert

"SECTION 1. The Fish and Game Commission is hereby authorized to negotiate the terms of a compact between the States of Arizona and California with any appropriate officials of the State of Arizona in relation to reciprocal privileges and licenses for hunting and fishing by residents of one of said States within the territorial jurisdiction of the other. Said negotiations shall include, but shall not be limited to, provisions relating to sporting fishing and the hunting of migratory waterfowl in, on, or along the Colorado River. It is the primary purpose of this act to provide a method whereby the hunting and fishing opportunities afforded by the Colorado River may be mutually enjoyed by the residents of the States of Arizona and California despite the difficulties and inconveniences that result from the fact that the boundary line between the States of Arizona and California is the middle of the channel of the Colorado River."

Amendment read, and adopted.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Speaker Sam L. Collins announced that the next number on file should be the consideration of House Resolution No. 106 instead of House Resolution No 101, as indicated.

CONSIDERATION OF HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 106

By Mr. Crowley:

House Resolution No. 106

Relative to congratulating Vernon Kilpatrick on winning the nomination to the Los Angeles City Council

WHEREAS, The election returns from Los Angeles indicate that our colleague, Vernon Kilpatrick, received the highest vote among five contestants for the office of member of the City Council from the Tenth District in the City of Los Angeles; and

WHEREAS, He has brought honor and distinction to the State Legislature during his 12 years of service, in that he has consistently devoted himself to sound, constructive legislation, and has proved himself a loyal Californian and great American; and

WHEREAS, He has served as a member of the Special Pension Committee appointed by Governor Warren in 1943, has five times been Vice Chairman of the standing Assembly Committee on Social Welfare, and is Chairman of the Assembly Interim Committee on Crime and Corrections in which capacity he has instituted reforms modernizing and making more humane our prison system and saving money for the taxpayers through rehabilitation and self-help work projects; and

WHEREAS, As a Member of the Legislature he has successfully applied his wide experience in the field of publishing, advertising, and insurance; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That it hereby conveys to Vernon Kilpatrick its congratulations on receiving the highest vote among the five contestants for the office of member of the City Council from the Tenth District of Los Angeles, and that it expresses the wish that he will be as conspicuously outstanding in this endeavor as he has been as a Member of the State Legislature; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk is directed to prepare a suitably engrossed copy of this resolution for Vernon Kilpatrick.

Resolution read.

Request for Unanimous Consent That All Members Present Be Permitted to Place Their Names Upon House Resolution No. 106 as Co-authors

Mr. Cooke asked for, and was granted, unanimous consent that all members present, desiring to place their names upon House Resolution No. 106 as co-authors be permitted to approach the desk, and place their signatures upon the resolution, at this time.

Eternal God, Who has neither dawn nor evening, yet sendest us alternate mercies of night and day, there is no light but Thine.

We thank Thee for this new day with its opportunities, its privileges, and its responsibilities.

May we walk, while it is yet day, in the steps of Him who, with fewest hours, finished Thy divinest work.

"Lord of all being, throned afar,
Thy glory flames from sun and star;
Center and soul of every sphere;
Yet to each loving heart how near!
Grant us Thy truth to make us free,
And kindling hearts that burn for Thee,
Till all Thy living altars claim
One holy light, one heavenly flame."

—AMEN.

PRAYER

The following prayer was offered by the Chaplain, Rev. Clarence A. Kircher:

Almighty God, Supreme Ruler and Governor of All. Thou art a strong tower of defense to all who trust in Thee. We humbly beseech Thy mercy for our nations engaged in war. Raise up a leadership for the crisis that has come upon us so suddenly. May we be united with liberty loving nations in a strong bond in the effort to win freedom for the peoples of the world. We pray for the men of our Armed Forces now serving in Korea. In the confusion and these days, we pray for a leadership that shall think clearly, react honestly, and serve sacrificially as true patriots

"God of Our Fathers, whose almighty hand
Leads forth in beauty in all the starry band
Of shining worlds in splendor through the skies,
Our grateful songs before Thy throne arise.
Thy love divine hath led us in the past;
In this free land by Thee our lot is cast;
Be Thou our Ruler, Guardian, Guide and Stay;
Thy word our law, Thy paths our chosen way."

In Jesus name—AMEN.

Any such person who diverts or appropriates such fiduciary funds to his own use is guilty of theft and punishable for theft as provided by law.

SEC. 2. Section 1730.5 is added to the Insurance Code, to read:

1730.5. This section applies to any person licensed, whether under a permanent license, restricted license, temporary license, certificate of convenience or as a registrant, to act in any of the capacities specified in Section 1730. If fiduciary funds, as defined in Section 1730 and held for one or more principals, are maintained in accordance with subsection (b) hereof, such funds for other principals may be held and remitted in accordance with subsection (a) hereof. Otherwise each such person must elect and follow with respect to such funds, one of the following methods:

(a) Remit premiums, less commissions, and return premiums received or held by him to the insurer or the person entitled thereto within fifteen (15) days after the receipt thereof; or

(b) Maintain such fiduciary funds at all times in a bank account or depository separate from any other account or depository, in an amount at least equal to the premiums and return premiums, net of commissions, received by him and unpaid to the persons entitled thereto. However, such person may commingle with such fiduciary funds in such account or depository such additional funds as he may deem prudent for the purpose of advancing premiums, establishing reserves for the paying of return commissions or for such contingencies as may arise in his business of receiving and transmitting premium or return premium funds. Further, such person may commingle the funds of any principal with his own funds to an unlimited extent, if such principal in writing specifically waives the segregation requirements of this section. Commingling of funds as herein permitted shall not alter the fiduciary nature of such premium or return premium funds."

Whenever, in any decision of the Appeals Board or in any manual, instruction or opinion explaining a regulation of the department the department changes its position with respect to whether specified services constitute agricultural labor as defined by regulation published in the California Administrative Code, such change in position shall be prima facie evidence that such regulation was not clear and unambiguous with respect to such services."

Amendment No. 4

On page 2, line 24, of said bill, strike out "sions of this act"

Amendment No. 5

On page 2 of said bill, after line 30, insert

"SEC. 2. Section 45.2 is added to said act, to read:

Sec. 45.2. No action or proceeding shall be commenced, to collect any contributions, penalties or interest provided for in this act, later than one year after the last day of the month following the calendar quarter during which the contribution liability accrued, with respect to services performed, in the employ of a bona fide owner or tenant of a farm, either (1) exclusively on such farm, or (2) both on such farm and on the farms of other owners or tenants of farms, unless by reason of any willful intent to evade the provisions of this act no contribution return or an erroneous return has been filed.

SEC. 3. The Legislature finds that the definition of "agricultural labor" as set forth in the regulations of the department has been changed by the department from time to time, and that such definition has been interpreted in a varied and inconsistent manner by both the department and by employers, all of which makes administration of the act costly and inefficient and creates an uncertain and hazardous situation for employers engaged in agriculture. During the fifteen years which have elapsed since the adoption of the Unemployment Insurance Act, the boundaries of almost every other exemption made by Section 7 of the act from the definition of employment subject to the act have been fairly clearly delineated. The extent of the exemption of agricultural labor contained in Section 7 (a), on the other hand, remains almost as uncertain as it was when the act was first adopted. The Legislature therefore declares that the proper and economic administration of the act, and the public welfare, require the adoption of the provisions of this act."

Amendments read, and adopted.

Bill ordered reprinted, engrossed, and to be re-referred to the Committee on Finance and Insurance.

Assembly Bill No. 2598—An act to add Section 2058 to the Banking Code, relating to the purchase of all of the stock of a bank or trust company by another bank or trust company.

Bill read second time.

Consideration of Committee Amendments

The following amendment was proposed by the Committee on Finance and Insurance:

Amendment No. 1

On page 1 of the printed bill, strike out lines 3 to 23, inclusive, and insert

"2058. Subject to the prior approval of the Superintendent of Banks and the affirmative vote of two-thirds of all of its directors, a bank or trust company may purchase in one transaction 100 percent of the outstanding shares of any state bank or of a national banking association, or trust company operating in this State, in accordance with a plan by which:

1. The bank whose stock has been purchased shall immediately be merged with the purchasing bank in the manner contemplated by law; or

2. The bank whose stock has been purchased, shall immediately be dissolved, its assets vested in its shareholders and its deposits and all other liabilities, including trust liabilities, shall be assumed by the acquiring bank or trust company, subject to the right of each depositor of the bank whose stock has been purchased to withdraw his deposit and of the right of trustors and beneficiaries under trusts held by such bank to nominate another trustee as in the case of the purchase and sale of the business of a bank under Section 2051 of this code.

The acquiring bank may permit directors of the bank or trust company, whose shares are so acquired, to retain their respective qualifying shares until dissolution, provided that each such director agrees to accept the purchase price of his shares in lieu of his proportionate share of the assets upon dissolution.

Upon the approval by the superintendent of the plan, he shall fix a time when the consummation of such plan shall become effective Upon completion of the plan, the acquiring bank ipso facto and by operation of law and without further transfer, substitution, act or deed, succeeds to the rights, properties, assets, investments, deposits, demands, agreements and trusts of the bank or trust company whose stock has been purchased under all trusts, executorships, administrations, guardianships, agencies, and all other fiduciary or representative capacities to the same extent as though it had originally assumed the same and shall succeed to and be entitled to take and execute the appointment to all executorships, trusteeships, guardianships and other fiduciary and representative capacities to which the bank whose stock has been purchased may be named, or is thereafter named, in wills whenever probated or to which it is, or may be named, or appointed by any other instrument, all subject to all other provisions of this code.

Before granting the approval required by this section, the superintendent may direct the purchasing bank to continue banking facilities at the location, or locations, of the purchased bank, if, in his judgment, public convenience would require the continuation of such banking facilities. The superintendent may also impose such other terms and conditions as will, in his judgment, be considered necessary to insure the faithful carrying out of the requirements hereof."

Amendment read, and adopted.

Bill ordered reprinted, engrossed, and to be re-referred to the Committee on Finance and Insurance.

Assembly Bill No. 3179—An act to add Section 6 8 to the Unemployment Insurance Act, relating to unemployment insurance coverage.

Amendment No. 1

In line 1 of the title of the printed bill, strike out "add Section 6 8", and insert "amend Section 7 of, and to add Section 7 4".

PRINTER'S NOTE—There being no 7-point strikeout type available, the material which should appear in strikeout type in the following amendment is indicated by being enclosed within brackets.

Amendment No. 2

On page 1 of said bill, strike out lines 1 to 8, inclusive, and insert

"SECTION 1. Section 7 of the Unemployment Insurance Act is amended to read:

Sec. 7 The term "employment" does not include:

(a) Agricultural labor[;], unless the cash remuneration paid for such labor (other than service performed in connection with the production or harvesting of any commodity defined as an agricultural commodity in Section 15 (g) of the federal "Agricultural Marketing Act," or in connection with the ginning of cotton) is fifty dollars ($50) or more and such labor is performed for an employer by an individual who is regularly employed by such employer to perform such agricultural labor. For the purpose of this subsection an individual shall be deemed to be regularly employed by an employer only if—

(i) Such individual performs agricultural labor (other than service performed in connection with the production or harvesting of any commodity defined as an agricultural commodity in Section 15 (g) of the federal "Agricultural Marketing Act," or in connection with the ginning of cotton) for such employer on a full-time basis on 60 days during such quarter, and

(ii) The quarter was immediately preceded by a qualifying quarter. For the purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "qualifying quarter" means (I) any quarter during all of which such individual was continuously employed by such employer, or (II) any subsequent quarter which meets the test of clause (i) if, after the last quarter during all of which such individual was continuously employed by such employer, each intervening quarter met the test of clause (i). Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this subparagraph, an individual shall also be deemed to be regularly employed by an employer during a calendar quarter if such individual was regularly employed (upon application of clauses (i) and (ii) by such employer during the preceding calendar quarter.

(b) Domestic service in a private home;

(c) Maritime services as to which this State is prohibited by the Constitution and laws of the United States of America from requiring contributions of employers or their workers with respect to wages as provided in this act;

(d) Service performed by an individual in the employ of his son, daughter, or spouse, and service performed by a child under the age of 21 in the employ of his father or mother;

(e) Service performed in the employ of the United States Government or of any instrumentality of the United States; provided, that in the event that the Congress of the United States shall permit the states to require any instrumentalities of the United States to make payments into an unemployment fund under a state unemployment compensation act, and to comply with state regulations thereunder, then, to the extent permitted by Congress, and from and after the date as of which such permission becomes effective, all of the provisions of this act shall be applicable to such instrumentalities and to services performed for such instrumentalities in the same manner, to the same extent, and on the same terms as to all other employers, employing units, individuals and services; provided further, that if this State should not be certified by the Social Security Board under Section 903 of the Social Security Act for any year, then the payments required of such instrumentalities and their workers with respect to such year shall be refunded by the commission from the Unemployment Fund without interest;

(f) Service performed in the employ of a state, a political subdivision thereof, or an instrumentality of one or more states or political subdivisions;

(g) Service performed in the employ of a corporation, community chest, fund, or foundation, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and no substantial part of the activities of which is carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting, to influence legislation;

(h) Service, under any unemployment compensation system established by a law of the United States;

(i) Service performed by uncompensated officers or employees of a corporation or association where the corporation or association is not subject to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.

(j) Service performed by directors of a corporation or association receiving a per diem or not more than twenty dollars ($20) for attending meetings of the board of directors, with or without a reasonable mileage for going to and from meetings of the board and other reasonable expenses incidental to attending such meetings where the corporation or association is not subject to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.

(k) If, when, and during such time as the definition of the term "employment," as contained in the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, excludes from "employment" any one or more of the following types of service, then that type or types or service as are so excluded shall likewise be excluded from the definition of employment as contained in this section:

(1) Domestic service in a local college club, or local chapter of a college fraternity or sorority;

(2) Casual labor not in the course of the employer's trade or business;

(3) Service performed in any calendar quarter in the employ of any organization exempt from Federal income tax if

(i) The remuneration for such service does not exceed forty-five dollars ($45), or

(ii) Such service is in connection with the collection of dues or premiums for a fraternal beneficiary society, order or association and is performed away from the home office or is ritualistic service in connection with any such society, order or association, or

(iii) Such service is performed by a student who is enrolled and is regularly attending classes at a school, college or university.

(4) Service performed in the employ of an agricultural or horticultural organization;

(5) Service performed in the employ of a voluntary employees' beneficiary association providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such association or their dependents, if

(i) No part of its net earnings inures (other than through such payments) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and

(ii) Eighty-five per centum or more of the income consists of amounts collected from members for the sole purpose of making such payments and meeting expenses;

(6) Service performed in the employ of a voluntary employees' beneficiary association providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such association or their dependents or designated beneficiaries, if (i) admission to membership in such association is limited to individuals who are employees of the United States Government, and (ii) no part of the net earnings of such association inures (other than through such payments) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual;

(7) Service performed in any calendar quarter in the employ of a school, college, or university, not exempt from federal income tax, if such service is performed by a student who is enrolled and is regularly attending classes at such school, college, or university, and the remuneration for such service does not exceed forty-five dollars ($45) (exclusive of room, board, and tuition);

(8) Service performed in the employ of a foreign government (including service as a consular or other officer or employee or a nondiplomatic representative);

(9) Service performed in the employ of an instrumentality wholly owned by a foreign government

(i) If the service is of a character similar to that performed in foreign countries by employees of the United States Government or of an instrumentality thereof; and

(ii) If the Secretary of State shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury that the foreign government, with respect to whose instrumentality exemption is claimed, grants an equivalent exemption with respect to similar service performed in the foreign country by employees of the United States Government and of instrumentalities thereof

(10) Service performed as a student nurse in the employ of a hospital or a nurses' training school by an individual who is enrolled and is regularly attending classes in a nurses' training school chartered or approved pursuant to state law; and service performed as an interne in the employ of a hospital by an individual who has completed a four years' course in a medical school chartered or approved pursuant to state law."

SEC. 2. Section 7.4 is added to said act, to read:

Sec. 7.4. As used in this act "agricultural labor" includes all service performed—

(1) On a farm, in the employ of any person, in connection with cultivating the soil, or in connection with raising or harvesting any agricultural or horticultural commodity, including the raising, shearing, feeding, caring for, training, and management of livestock, bees, poultry, and fur-bearing animals and wildlife

(2) In employ of the owner or tenant or other operator of a farm, in connection with the operation, management, conservation, improvement, or maintenance of such farm and its tools and equipment, or in salvaging timber or clearing land of brush and other debris left by a hurricane, if the major part of such service is performed on a farm.

(3) In connection with the production or harvesting of any commodity defined as an agricultural commodity in Section 15 (g) of the Agricultural Marketing Act, as amended, or in connection with the ginning of cotton, or in connection with the operation or maintenance of ditches, canals, reservoirs, or waterways, not owned or operated for profit, used exclusively for supplying and storing water for farming purposes

(4) (A) In the employ of the operator of a farm in handling, planting, drying, packing, packaging, processing, freezing, grading, storing, or delivering to storage or to market or to a carrier for transportation to market, in its unmanufactured state, any agricultural or horticultural commodity; but only if such operator produced more than one-half of the commodity with respect to which such service is performed.

(B) In the employ of a group of operators of farms (other than a co-operative organization) in the performance of service described in subparagraph (A), but only if such operators produced all of the commodity with respect to which such service is performed. For the purposes of this subparagraph, any unincorporated group of operators shall be deemed a cooperative organization if the number of operators comprising such group is more than 20 at any time during the calendar quarter in which such service is performed.

(C) The provisions of subparagraphs (A) and (B) shall not be deemed to be applicable with respect to service performed in connection with commercial canning or commercial freezing or in connection with any agricultural or horticultural commodity after its delivery to a terminal market for distribution for consumption.

(5) On a farm operated for profit if such service is not in the course of the employer's trade or business or is domestic service in a private home of the employer.

As used in this section, the term "farm" includes stock, dairy, poultry, fruit, fur-bearing animal, and truck farms, plantations, ranches, nurseries, ranges, greenhouses or other similar structures used primarily for the raising of agricultural or horticultural commodities, and orchards."

Amendments read, and adopted.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA
April 11, 1951

HONORABLE SAM L. COLLINS
Speaker of the Assembly
Assembly Chambers, State Capitol
Sacramento, California

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to House Resolution 232 of the 1949 Regular Session, the Assembly Interim Committee on Judicial System and Judicial Process transmits to the Assembly herewith its Progress Report. Included are the reports of the subcommittees on Sex Crimes Subversive Activities, Traffic and Motor Vehicle Violations, Detective Licenses, Legal Education and Admission to the Bar, and Judicial Salaries.

Meetings of the full committee and of the several subcommittees were held in all parts of the State. Testimony was received from officials, experts and from interested members of the general public, and much of the most valuable and significant testimony is summarized or reproduced herein. The committee did not feel that it was responsible for preparing legislation to implement all of its recommendations; however, much such legislation was prepared by the committee staff and has been introduced by the individual members.

A preliminary report of the Sex Crimes subcommittee was filed and printed last year. The wide interest in, and distribution of this report should be noted. Copies were sent to all judges, school superintendents, sheriffs, district attorneys, and police departments in California. Furthermore, copies have been requested from and sent to universities, legislative bodies and other government agencies, mental and penal institutions and libraries all over this country and as far abroad as Lucknow, India.

The passage of Proposition 3, the Inferior Courts Reorganization Plan, has made much legislation imperative. Most of the research and drafting involved has been done by the staff of the Judicial Council, whose work is to be highly commended. This committee and its several members have done their best to cooperate with the Judicial Council and wish to be recorded as supporting the legislation introduced in this regard.

A final report of this interim committee will be forthcoming at a later date during this session.

Respectfully submitted,

House Resolution No. 232

Relative to the creation of the Assembly Interim Committee on the Judicial System and Judicial Process

WHEREAS, There is great need of a thorough investigation into all phases of the Judicial System of the State, and the administration of justice therein, in order that facts may be obtained and correlated as a basis for future legislation; and

WHEREAS, The facts relating to said subjects can best be secured by a fact-finding committee of the Legislature; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, as follows:

1. The Assembly Interim Committee on the Judicial System and Judicial Process is hereby created and authorized and directed to ascertain, study and analyze all facts relating to the subject of this resolution, and all facts included and in any way related to the subjects mentioned in the recitals hereof, including but not limited to:

(a) The composition, structure, jurisdiction and administration of the several courts;

(b) The method of selection, compensation and retirement of judicial officers and attaches;

(c) The procedure, process, and rules of the courts, statutory and otherwise;

(d) All provisions of the law relating to civil actions and remedies, and all laws relating to criminal procedure;

(e) All laws relating to publication of notices and service of process;

(f) All laws relating to family relations including marriage, divorce and adoptions and the administration of such laws, including but not limited to the operation, effect, administration, enforcement and needed revision of any and all laws in any way bearing upon or relating to the subject of this resolution, and to report thereon to the Assembly, including in the reports its recommendations for appropriate legislation.

2. The committee shall consist of the same Members of the Assembly who comprise the membership of the Assembly Standing Judiciary Committee and the chairman shall be appointed by the Speaker. Vacancies occurring in the membership of the committee shall be filled by the appointing power

3. The committee is authorized to act during this session of the Legislature, including any recess, and after final adjournment until the commencement of the 1951 Regular Session, with authority to file its final report not later than the fifteenth legislative day of that session.

4. The committee and its members shall have and exercise all of the rights, duties and powers conferred upon investigating committees and their members by the provisions of the Joint Rules of the Senate and Assembly and of the Standing Rules of the Assembly as they are adopted and amended from time to time, which provisions are incorporated herein and made applicable to this committee and its members.

5. The committee has the following additional powers and duties.

(a) To select a vice chairman from its membership

(b) To contract with such other agencies, public or private, as it deems necessary for the rendition and affording of such services, facilities, studies and reports to the committee as will best assist it to carry out the purposes for which it is created

(c) To cooperate with and secure the cooperation of county, city, city and county, and other local law enforcement agencies in investigating any matter within the scope of this resolution and to direct the sheriff of any county to serve subpenas, orders and other process issued by the committee.

(d) To report its findings and recommendations to the Legislature and to the people from time to time and at any time, not later than herein provided

(e) To do any and all other things necessary or convenient to enable it fully and adequately to exercise its powers, perform its duties, and accomplish the objects and purposes of this resolution

6 The sum of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby made available from the Contingent Fund of the Assembly for the expenses of the committee and its members and for any charges, expenses or claims it may incur under this resolution, to be paid from the said Contingent Fund and disbursed, after certification by the chairman of the committee, upon warrants drawn by the State Controller upon the State Treasurer.

House Resolution No. 43

Relative to an investigation and report by the Assembly Interim Committee on the Judicial System and Judicial Process on the subject of legislation relating to sex offenses

WHEREAS, One of the subjects submitted to the Legislature at this special session is to consider and act upon legislation relating to sex offenses; and

WHEREAS, It is necessary that the Assembly be fully informed on all facts and matters relating or pertaining to this subject in order that it may give proper consideration to the numerous measures pending before it; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, as follows:

1. The Assembly Interim Committee on the Judicial System and Judicial Process (created by H. R. No. 232, 1949 Regular Session) is authorized and directed to ascertain, study, and analyze all facts relating to sex offenses that are introduced during this special session, including but not limited to the operation, effect, administration, enforcement and needed revision of any and all laws in any way bearing upon or relating to the subject of this resolution, and shall report thereon to the Assembly prior to the final adjournment of the 1951 Regular Session or may report thereon to the Assembly at any extraordinary session called prior to the 1951 Regular Session, the proclamation of which includes the subject of this resolution, including in the reports its recommendations for appropriate legislation.

2. The sum of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby made available from the Assembly Contingent Fund payable from any money appropriated for the contingent expenses of the Assembly for the 1949 First Extraordinary Session of the Legislature for the expenses of the committee and its members and for any charges, expenses or claims it may incur under this resolution, to be paid from the said Contingent Fund and disbursed, after certification by the chairman of the committee, upon warrants drawn by the State Controller upon the State Treasurer. (Adopted, Assembly Journal, 12-21-49, p. 408—First Extraordinary Session.)

House Resolution No. 28

Relative to an investigation by the Assembly Interim Committee on the Judicial System and Judicial Process of legal education in California and admissions to the California Bar

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That the Assembly Interim Committee on the Judicial System and Judicial Process (created by H. R. 232, 1949 Regular Session) is hereby requested to investigate and report on all matters relating to legal education and admission to the bar in this State, including but not limited to the availability of educational facilities, the system of accreditation of law schools by the State Bar, and the type of examinations given by the State Bar.

House Resolution No. 100

Relating to the administration of justice in traffic violation cases

WHEREAS, It has come to the attention of the Legislature through articles appearing in newspapers from the Los Angeles area that the records of certain traffic violators have escaped the attention of courts in dealing with second and subsequent violations by such individuals thus resulting in their being treated as first offenders whereas in fact the records of such individuals may show previous serious and aggravated traffic violations; and

WHEREAS, The failure to identify such persons as having been previously convicted of traffic violations has resulted in the miscarriage of justice and has brought discredit upon the courts and the administration of justice; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That in addition to the duties heretofore given and imposed upon the Assembly Interim Committee on the Judicial System and Judicial Process (created by H. R 232, 1949 Regular Session), the said committee is hereby authorized and directed to ascertain, study and analyze the methods of handling and processing traffic violation cases and particularly as to the methods now used by police courts and probation authorities in identifying second and subsequent offenders from records maintained locally and by the State Department of Motor Vehicles and to investigate the feasibility of issuing specially colored or otherwise readily identifiable drivers' licenses to persons who have been repeatedly convicted of violations or who are on probation, and to report thereon to the Assembly at the 1951 Regular Session including in the report its recommendations for appropriate legislation.

Part I

LEGISLATION SUGGESTED BY THE FINAL REPORT OF THE SPECIAL CRIME STUDY COMMISSION ON CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE

The committee staff has prepared bills to implement a number of the recommendations of the Commission on Criminal Law and Procedure. It is acknowledged that the committee has not been able to give full consideration to all recommendations of this commission, and further study is, perhaps, indicated. However, measures covering most of the general subjects for legislation suggested by the commission have been prepared.

The commission suggested that a defendant who pleads not guilty by reason of insanity be placed in a state mental institution for observation for not more than 30 days. Such a statute would discourage unfounded pleas of not guilty by reason of insanity and yet would protect the defendant who is mentally ill but unable to retain expert witnesses for his defense. A bill has been drafted amending Section 1027 of the Penal Code to require confinement in an institution for observation instead of appointment of alienists by the court. There should be further discussion of this measure, however, with the Department of Corrections, the Department of Mental Hygiene, and other interested agencies.

The Final Report of the commission posed three questions relating to pleading and proof of prior felony convictions:

1. Whether the prior felony convictions referred to in Sections 644, 667, 969, 1203, 3024, and 3045 of the Penal Code refers to offenses which were defined as felonies where committed or which would have been felonies if committed in California?

2. Which of the said sections require that time have been served in a state or federal penitentiary on such prior conviction?

3. Which of such sections require that such prior conviction and punishment be pleaded and proven?

Research by the committee staff indicates the following answers to these questions:

Under Sections 644, 666, and 667, the prior convictions must have been for offenses which could have been punished as felonies under California law (that is, by death or imprisonment in a state prison), a term of imprisonment must have been served, and the prior conviction and imprisonment must be pleaded and proven.

Under Section 1203, the prior convictions must have been for "California felonies" (in order to make the defendant ineligible for probation), but sentences need not have been served and the "priors" need not be pleaded or proved.

Under Section 3024, it is not clear whether or not the prior felony convictions must have been for "California felonies," time need not have been served; the "priors" must have been pleaded and proved.

Under Section 3045, the prior offenses apparently need not have been for "California felonies"; time must have been served; the "priors" need not have been pleaded or proven.

Legislation on the problems presented has been prepared. One measure amends Section 3024 to define a felony under that section as a "California felony." Amendment of Section 3045 is suggested (a) to require that there be some formal evidence of a prior conviction, even if it is not pleaded and proven, and (b) to omit the words "under a felony conviction" and require instead that a prisoner have served a term of a year or more under the prior conviction. Certain clarifications were made in Section 668 and in Section 3024 to deal with the problem which arises when one is convicted of an offense which, in California, is punishable either by a county jail sentence or fine, or by a state prison sentence. The courts have held that the offense is a felony unless the fine or county jail sentence is imposed. It seemed better to say, in Section 668, for example "for which * * * such person could have been punished * * * by imprisonment in a state prison" rather than "would be punishable * * * by imprisonment in a state prison." It did not appear to be necessary to specifically include Sections 3024 and 3045 in Section 668, since each, by its own terms, includes as prior convictions, prior convictions in another jurisdiction.

A new section, 969bb, has been prepared to implement the suggestion of the commission that 969b be broadened so that certified copies of records of prior convictions may be used in evidence. The present law is that certified copies of prison records may be used to show service of time under prior convictions.

Regarding the pleading and proof of prior convictions, it would seem, in the first place, that it is mandatory in all cases to plead prior convictions, if any; see Sections 969, 969a, and 969½ of the Penal Code. Then, for the purposes of Penal Code Sections 644, 666, 667, and 3024, the prior convictions must be pleaded and proven. It has been held, however, that a failure to charge the "priors" does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to impose the heavier sentences, if such "priors" are made to appear to the court and are proved or admitted, but it is appealable error. If the prior convictions are ignored by the lower court, that is, for instance, if the court does not refer to the prior convictions in the judgment, the prisoner must be treated as having no prior convictions for the purposes of Section 644.

For the purposes of the probation law, Penal Code Section 1203, where priors need not be charged or proven, the question is whether or not defendant is eligible for probation, or, if eligible, whether or not probation should be granted.

Under Section 3024, prior convictions for the purpose of fixing minimum sentence must be charged and found true or admitted. But for parole purposes, it has been held, under Section 3045 as it now stands, the prior convictions need be neither pleaded nor proven. It is sufficient that they be made to appear to the Adult Authority. Like probation, parole is a matter of grace and not of right, of course, but the proposed amendment to Section 3045 would require that before the Adult Authority can deny probation or refuse to consider an application for probation, under 3045, by reason of service of a prior prison term, such prior term must appear from the record or be admitted or be proved by certified copies like those prescribed by Section 969b. An alternative suggested by the commission was to require that in every case where it appeared that prior convictions had not been pleaded and proven, the prisoner be returned to the county of origin, at county expense, and the "priors" then be charged and proved in the trial court.

Among the general subjects proposed by the commission was that of a prohibition against use of a plea of guilty or record of conviction in subsequent civil actions. The present Vehicle Code 755 makes a "record of conviction" inadmissible but it appears that it has been held that a record of a plea of guilty is not a "record of conviction." Obviously the policy and purpose of the statute includes pleas of guilty. And in line with such policy and the further policy of giving legitimate encouragement to persons pleading guilty, the commission has suggested that the same sort of provision be included in the Code of Civil Procedure to apply to all offenses. The draft embodying this recommendation authorizes only the exclusion of a record of a plea of guilty, not of a conviction, for an offense other than a Vehicle Code violation, and both measures only authorize the exclusion of such evidence when offered against the former criminal defendant. Statutes permitting the exclusion of evidence should, as a general rule, be drawn as narrowly as possible. The right of impeachment is preserved.

Following another commission recommendation, a bill has been prepared to make specific intent an element of the crime of mayhem, amending Section 203 of the Penal Code.

The commission recommended legislation requiring that access to probation reports be restricted to law enforcement officials and counsel, except upon court order. A bill amending Section 1203.10 has been prepared. The committee agrees that it is desirable to protect defendants by keeping the detailed personal information included in probation reports out of the hands of unauthorized persons.

Bills have been prepared amending Sections 950 and 951 of the Penal Code to provide that every indictment and information must include the code and section (or other designation of the statute) which the defendant is accused of violating This is also a commission recommendation, based upon information received from the Department of Corrections that it is not done in many cases Such a requirement seems to be eminently reasonable.

An amendment has been prepared to Section 702 of the Welfare and Institutions Code providing for an alternative state prison sentence for contributing to the delinquency of a minor. The present law provides a maximum sentence of two years in the county jail. Since there is a one-year limit on county jail terms, the two-year term is meaningless. Considering the present serious problem of juvenile delinquency, it does not seem unduly harsh to provide a maximum sentence of two years in a state prison for the offense of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

One minor point touched on in the report of the commission is that there are two Sections 597a in the Penal Code, two numbered 597b, two 597c and two 597d. A bill has been prepared to correct this confusion. The sections of these numbers enacted in 1907 prohibit docking of horses and use of docked horses and provide a rather detailed procedure for enforcement. Since this problem, by reason of the invention of the automobile, is not now as serious as it was in 1907, it seemed sufficient to prepare a new section, numbered 597.1, continuing the prohibition against docking horses and using docked horses (with the existing exception for horses imported for breeding or exhibition) and to repeal the four present sections. No change in policy is intended.

One of the matters suggested for further investigation and study was the law of arson or unlawful burning. This offense is presently covered by Penal Code Sections 184, 447a, 448a, 449a, 450a, 451a, 600, 600.5, and 548. The commission makes two points in regard to this type of offense. One is that there is lack of uniformity in the sentences provided and that some of the sentences are, perhaps, too light; the second is that many fires are set by pyromaniacs who may require permanent confinement for the protection of society. The following is a summary of the bill prepared by the committee staff:

Malicious burning of any building, whether or not the property of the defendant, is punishable by 1 to 20 years in a state prison or one year in the county jail. The alternative of a county jail sentence is new, as is the inclusion in one section of the offenses formerly covered in 447a and 448a. The distinction formerly made between dwelling houses and outbuildings, and all other buildings seemed unnecessary and unwise. What difference is there between burning a garage, which is an outbuilding of a dwelling house, and any other garage? The penalty under 447a was 2 to 20 years; under 448a it was 1 to 10

The malicious burning of personal property not the property of the defendant would be punishable by imprisonment in a state prison for from 1 to 10 years or one year in the county jail if the value of the property is more than $100 If the value of the property is less than $100, the maximum penalty is a year in the county jail and/or a $1,000 fine.

The change this represents from the existing 449a is considerable. The offense under that section was the malicious burning of a long list of items, including any personal property, valued at more than $25, and the penalty was one to three years in a state prison. The penalty under the revised statute is much heavier if the property is over $100 in value.

The proposed Section 449 covers the malicious burning of crops, forests, brush, marshes or peat-ground, and oil or gas wells These were put in a separate section since they are not usually considered personal property. The penalty proposed is 1 to 10 years in a state prison or one year in a county jail. This section covers in part the offense covered by the present 449a. and those covered by Sections 600 and 600.5. The maximum penalty is greater than that prescribed in 449a and the same as that prescribed by 600 and 600.5.

The proposed Section 450 covers the malicious burning of any property not covered by any other law The proposed Section 451 covers attempts. Attempts to commit the offenses denounced by Sections 447, 448(a) or 449 are felonies and punishable by one to five years in a state prison or one year in the county jail. An attempt to commit the offenses covered by paragraph (b) of 448 or by 450 is a misdemeanor. The penalty for attempted arson under the present Sections 447a, 448a, and 449a is 1 to 2 years in a state prison.

The major change in the arson statute is represented by the proposed Section 452. That is, second offenses are to be punished by imprisonment in a state prison for not less than one year. Any person who is twice convicted of any kind of arson or unlawful burning may reasonably be regarded as a possible firebug and should be incarcerated until such time as psychological and other study and treatment indicate that it is safe to release him.

The present Section 450a relating to burning with intent to defraud an insurer has not been restated. The committee staff felt that the present Section 548 covers the same ground, is broader in terms, and prescribes a heavier penalty and, therefore, no change is indicated.

The general conclusion on the law of arson would seem to be that, in a state like California, where the danger of fire is always present and always serious, the Legislature in case of doubt should adopt the more severe punishments and the stronger deterrents. This is one branch of the criminal law in which severity is the better public policy.

Part II

MECHANICS' LIENS

The phrase "mechanics' liens," as used in California, means the lien on a building or like work of improvement given the materialman and laborer by Section 15 of Article XX of the Constitution and by Section 1183 (and other sections of that chapter) of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The primary problem, as presented to this committee was that of formal revision There is no doubt but that, as the California Commission on Uniform Laws has pointed out, our mechanics' lien law is "in a rather confused patchwork state." The sections do not follow in any particular order; in themselves the sections are long and unwieldy; there is much repetition; some matters are covered in the chapter which are not closely related to laborers' and materialmen's liens; all in all, because of its disorganization and confusion, the chapter in its present form (Chapter II of Title IV of Part III of the Code of Civil Procedure) is a trap for the unwary and a hindrance to knowledge. The committee staff has, therefore, prepared a draft of a bill which attempts to restate the present law of mechanics' liens in a more logical, accessible and comprehensible form. It must be emphasized that in preparing this formal revision, it was not the intent of the draftsman, nor was it the intent of the committee, that any change be made in the existing law. The only deliberate alteration of which the draftsman was conscious was the changing of the word "filed" in various places in the chapter to "recorded", and the desirability of this change is arguable. That portion of Section 1183 which gave a special lien to miners has been moved to the lien sections of the Civil Code, since the miner's labor is not related usually to a "work of improvement" with a "time of commencement" and a "time of completion." If, in fact, the miner's labor is done as part of a "work of improvement" he would have the same lien as any other laborer, of course. The lien which local health authorities can create by authorizing connection of a dwelling house to a neighboring sewer (Sections 1191a and 1191b) likewise seems out of place in this chapter and so these sections have been moved to the Health and Safety Code.

The mechanics' lien law presents other problems, however. It must be understood that this statute directly affects three important groups in the community. First, of course, is the owner of the land. Second are the laborers and materialmen who contribute value to the work of improvement. Third are the lending institutions whose loans are secured by encumbrances on the land. If the laborers and materialmen are not paid, they have a lien against the building and may have one against the land. This lien may be superior to the rights of the landowner and of the lender. All three groups have rights to be protected. Legislation in this field, to be successful, must result from a balancing of the interests of all three groups, as well as from over-all considerations of the general welfare.

Specific problems have been presented to the committee and the committee staff has attempted to draft legislation to meet the problems presented.

All liens under this chapter take priority as from the time of commencement of the work of improvement. It is particularly important to lenders to be able to fix this date, otherwise their first mortgage, if recorded after the time of commencement, may be junior to all mechanics' liens arising out of the work.

The courts have defined the time of commencement as the time when something has been done at or near the site such as would give notice, including depositing of materials, clearing the land, excavation, etc. One suggestion for clarification was to define commencement in the code as the first visible work on the site. This seemed unsatisfactory particularly in regard to construction of several houses at once, as in a new subdivision. Each such house may be a separate work of improvement, but the materialman can hardly be expected to deposit the lumber, pipe, etc., for each house on its individual lot Under the present law, placing materials nearby for all the houses to be built might be the commencement of all of them; under the definition proposed above, some work would have to be done or materials delivered at each site. Not only would this be a burden on the lien claimants, but (since these projects are often financed on a group basis, anyway) little additional certainty would be achieved for lenders The committee staff has suggested three measures which, it is felt, would give a greater degree of certainty:

First, any lender can make sure that his lien on the property is prior to all mechanics' liens by recording his encumbrance and a bond in favor of possible lien claimants in an amount not less than 50 percent of the face principal amount of his encumbrance. By providing such a bond, the lien claimant is given good security for his claim, and the security of the lender, that is the land, will not be impaired by mechanics' liens. It appears that the cost of such bonds would be relatively little and so, even if the lender passed the cost on to the borrower or landowner, the burden would not be heavy.

Second, should an expenditure of labor or materials be made to prepare the site for a later work of improvement, the whole work of improvement may be held to have commenced with the commencement of the preparatory work and a purported first mortgage may find itself junior to all the mechanics' liens on the whole work of improvement. The suggestion of the committee is this: if proper notice be given by recording and posting (so that all concerned can know their positions) then the commencement of a preparatory or preliminary work shall not be deemed the commencement of the work of improvement as a whole.

A third bill bearing on this general question relates to the execution of a work or works of improvement on less than the whole of a tract or subdivision. For instance, a tract of land is being developed, and 20 houses are to be built on half of it, as a separate project, separately financed from any construction to be done later on the other half. Will the time of commencement of the first 20 houses be held to be the time of commencement of any subsequent construction as well? If it can be argued that development of the whole tract is one scheme of improvement, possibly so. Therefore a bill has been prepared which provides that the commencement of a work of improvement on only part of any tract or subdivision shall not be deemed to be the commencement of a subsequent work in the same tract, if the prescribed notice is filed and posted. If the notice required is given, lenders, owners, and title companies know what is intended and know on what property mechanics' liens may be filed. Laborers and materialmen, further, will not be misled by appearances and will know on what security they are entitled to rely. Both recording and posting are required in order that such notice be as close to actual notice to all parties as possible.

The three measures discussed above do not change the present judicial definition of "time of commencement." They provide various optional measures whereby the interested parties may act to establish their positions and avoid certain possible applications of the usual definition. If they do not avail themselves of such optional measures, there is no penalty except that they subject themselves to whatever may be the court's application of the existing definition.

The third measure discussed above may also affect the determination of the time of completion of a work of improvement on part only of a piece of land.

There is much to be said in favor of requiring a bond for the benefit of possible mechanic's lien claimants to be posted for every work of improvement. The lender benefits because he is freed from any problem of priority of his encumbrance over mechanics' liens. The lien claimant gains because it would seem that he has a speedier and surer recovery from a bonding company than from enforcement of his lien against the property. The landowner would find his property protected against liens to some extent, and the surety might assist the owner's business judgment by refusing a bond if the contractor has a poor record or by requiring a joint control of disbursements. There are already bond provisions in the present Sections 1183 and 1191. However, the committee did not feel justified in strait-jacketing landowners and developers to the extent of requiring bonds in all cases. The cost of a bond on an ordinary residence would probably be less than $100, but such a charge, together with the accompanying red tape and paper work, might be the straw that breaks the camel's back. We think that it is sufficient if the bond be optional with a lender. If all concerned are satisfied to trust each other and save time and money thereby, why should the Legislature forbid it? Adequate machinery for their protection has been provided, if they want to use it.

Another major problem presented to the committee is that of determining the time of completion of a work of improvement. The time for filing a claim of lien runs from the time of completion. Completion may be actual completion or may be constructive completion as provided by the existing Section 1187. It is apparently the present law that a work of improvement may be actually completed even if there are "trivial imperfections," that is, that substantial completion is sufficient. It seems impossible to provide any definition of completion, applicable to all situations, which will be any more satisfactory than is the present law. One or two defects can be reached by legislation, however. There are many cases in which notices of completion are filed before actual substantial completion, in order to improve the state of the record title. This is distinctly undesirable, since it may seriously curtail the right of the laborer, materialman, etc., to claim a lien. Therefore, a bill has been prepared which would make it a misdemeanor to file a notice of completion prior to substantial completion.

In the formal revision of the present law, one clarification was to move from the existing Section 1191 to the new section on filing claims of lien, that provision which states that the time for filing liens for certain improvements, acceptance of which by a public body is required, runs from such acceptance and not from completion. It was too easy to overlook this provision as originally located.

It is possible for an owner-builder, instead of employing one "original" or general contractor for his building as a whole, to let original contracts only for portions of the work, for instance, for the excavation or for the foundation. Is the owner entitled to file a notice of completion when each of these portions of the work as a whole is finished, or must he wait for the completion of the work as a whole? If he may file a notice at the completion of part only, and if he fails to file one within 10 days thereof, do all claimants then have 90 days from actual completion of the whole in which to file claims? For the purposes of clarification the committee staff has prepared a bill which provides that a notice of completion may be recorded at the completion of a part only of the whole work if such part is done under an original contract, and that if no such notice is recorded, those whose claims arise out of such completed part have the same time in which to file liens as if the work had been done on the work of improvement as a whole. That is, if a notice is filed for the work as a whole, all lien claimants have 30 (contractors 60) days in which to file; if no notice is filed, then all have 90 days. The merit of this proposal is primarily that it makes for greater certainty than does the present law.

It sometimes happens that the home-owner pays his contractor and then, by reason of the defalcation, bankruptcy, etc., of the contractor, is forced to pay again, to pay off subcontractors, materialmen, laborers, et al., who have not been paid by the contractor and have filed liens against the house and lot. It has been suggested that all possible lien claimants be required to give stop notices or forfeit their lien rights. Such a notice to the owner authorizes him to withhold payment from the contractor. Such notices are optional at present with the claimant, but may be required by the owner. At present, the owner can require a bond from the contractor, can require stop notices, and can require the contractor to defend lien suits. In addition, it is usually the owner who selects and trusts the contractor. As stated above, too, a bill has been prepared pursuant to which the lender can post a bond to protect his priority, which bond could, of course, also protect the owner. To be fully effective, a stop notice should be recorded as well as delivered. It seemed to the committee that if all claimants had to record stop notices in every case, possible lien claimants would be put to considerable expense and trouble, the records would be crowded with such notices, and titles might be seriously clouded. Presumably a satisfaction would have to be filed for each stop notice, or further transactions regarding the property be held up until the time for filing claims has fully elapsed. The question is, whether or not this problem of defaulting contractors is serious enough to put the additional burden on lien claimants and on those concerned with the state of the record title to the land. The majority of contractors are, of course, reputable and solvent. The committee did not feel that it should propose legislation to make stop notices mandatory without further study, however, a bill has been prepared which would require stop notices if a notice of completion is filed.

In conclusion, it must be pointed out, first, that the right to a mechanics' lien is based on the State Constitution and that the mechanics' lien law is liberally construed to protect the artisan and materialman. Any substantial restriction of the rights of lien claimants may pose a constitutional question and the result, therefore, of any attempt to make a major change in the law may be to leave the statute, after an adverse court decision, in worse condition than it was in to start with. In the second place, the entire law of mechanics' liens is constitutional and statutory; such liens were unknown to the common law. Therefore, the statute must be improved and interpreted primarily by legislation and not by judicial decision, and therefore, a great many more details must be spelled out by the Legislature in a mechanics' lien statute than in a statute relating to one of the older branches of our jurisprudence. The committee hopes that its revision and alterations will result in a more workable statute and in one more satisfactory to all the interested groups.

Part III

SHOULD CALIFORNIA ACCEPT TORT LIABILITY?

By THOMAS H. KUCHEL, State Controller, of the Sacramento Bar
Reprint From State Bar Journal, March-April, 1950

The doctrine of sovereign immunity, preventing a suit against a state without legislative consent, has been a prolific source of criticism from legal scholars in the United States.[1] Of the numerous reasons advanced in justification of the rule, the "royal supremacy notions," of which the most common is the dogma that the king can do no wrong, are clearly inapplicable in this country. Other reasons were based on situations no longer extant and, hence, should no longer apply.[2] It has been said that the only argument in favor of continuing the rule in existence, that is worthy of note today, is that litigation might seriously interfere with the performance of sovereign functions and with state control over its instrumentalities, funds and property.[3] Other writers talk in terms of the rights and duties as between the individual and society, and use as an analogy the sovereign right to suspend an individual's civil rights and liberties and to expropriate his property or impress him into perilous duty for benefit of the whole.[4]

But if we were to preserve the state immune from injunctive restriction and from seizure or execution of its property or functions, and make it responsible only in damages as in the case of a private party, subject to the usual requirement of appropriation of funds by the Legislature, would we seriously interfere with its sovereign functions or control of its affairs? Suppose an individual is damaged by the wrongful act or omission of the state under circumstances that would entitle him to redress had the tort-feasor been a private party rather than the state. Do the requirements of society demand that the damages be borne entirely by the innocent victim, or should not society undertake to bear as a whole the burden that rightfully belongs to it? Remember that the public exchequer is funded in the main from taxes upon the entire populace and assets within the jurisdiction of the government and, hence, disbursements therefrom are borne by the whole. The assets of the victim are apt to be limited, whereas the taxing power of the state is vast indeed. Let the burden fall where it rightfully should—it can best be borne there!

Recent Trend

The defense of sovereign immunity is jurisdictional,[5] and statutes authorizing persons to sue the state, being in derogation of sovereignty, are strictly construed.[6] Nevertheless, the modern trend, in California as elsewhere, is to extend the limits of permission to sue the state. The District Court of Appeal recently stated it thus:

"The trend, legislatively by enactment of statutes and judicially by construction of statutes, has been to permit persons who have valid claims against the state to bring suit under certain circumstances, subject to the statute of limitations and other specified conditions, in a court of competent jurisdiction to determine the justice of the claim to the end and purpose of final judgment." [7]

Although the general expression of the doctrine of sovereign immunity is that the state may not be sued without its consent, and a general consent to sue the state for negligence has been in the statutes since 1893,[8] early decisions adopted in this State "the doctrine that state consent to be sued for negligence did not waive sovereign immunity from liability for tort." [9] In other words, a statute merely consenting to suit does not create any liability or cause of action against the state where none existed before, but merely gives an additional remedy to enforce such liability as would have existed if such statute had not been enacted. California has not as yet seen fit to enact a statute assuming general tort liability.

"Proprietary" and "Governmental" Functions

For many years the most important exception to the immunity of municipalities from tort liability has been in the case of those functions of the municipality that are regarded by the courts as "proprietary" as distinguished from "governmental." [10] That exception had never been applied in the case of liability of the state, however, until recently when the California Supreme Court in the State Belt Railroad case held unequivocally for the first time that

". . . where the state engages in industrial or business enterprises, as distinguished from purely governmental activities, tort liability attaches and may be adjudicated pursuant to the consent statute." [11]

The extent of the consequences of that decision is not yet apparent, but the case is undoubtedly a landmark along the trend toward the acceptance by the state of responsibility for its torts. Certainly it has caused many lawyers tc revise their opinions in the premises.

There are a number of specific instances where sovereign immunity has been waived by legislative enactment or constitutional provision. A prime example is the constitutional provision re eminent domain whereunder private property may not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation to the owner.[12] It has been held that the provision is self-executing, and a cause of action may be stated thereunder without the necessity of express legislative sanction therefor.[13] Compensation must be made under that provision, however, only when the taking or damaging of property is not so essential to the public health, safety and morals as to be justified under the "police power," and the injury is one which would give rise to a cause of action on the part of the owner if it were inflicted by a private person.[14] Illustrative of the trend, the Supreme Court has held that while the state, in the exercise of the police power, might have directed the slaughter of diseased cattle without compensating the owners, a statute providing for such compensation did not constitute a "gift" of public funds, the court saying:

"Necessity alone is not the test by which the limits of state authority in this direction are to be defined, but a wise statesmanship must look beyond the expenditures which are absolutely needful to the continued existence of organized government, and embrace others which may tend to make that government subserve the general well-being of society, and advance the present and prospective happiness and prosperity of the people" [15]

Also noteworthy is the fact that the Constitution was amended shortly thereafter to expressly permit the Legislature to provide for indemnifying owners of cattle slaughtered under the police power.[16]

The Constitution further provides that:

"Suits may be brought against the state in such manner and in such courts as shall be directed by law." [17]

Patchwork Legislation

Pursuant thereto,[18] the Legislature has enacted from time to time over the years, numerous laws on the subject. There has been no adequate over-all plan, however, and the individual laws constitute but a patchwork of diverse coverage, without semblance of uniformity. Some pertain only to the state, others to local governments or even certain local governments, others to governmental officers or employees, while still others pertain to several or all thereof. Some consent to suit, others assume liability, and still others deny or restrict liability. Even procedural provisions are diverse and, in the light of court decisions, obscure. Illustrative of the laws on the subject are those pertaining to the following particular claims: on express contract, or for negligence, or arising out of eminent domain;[19] for injuries or damages to an inmate of a state institution;[20] for damages arising out of the operation of motor vehicles;[21] arising against local governments for injuries caused by defec-

It is submitted that the time is ripe for a substantive revision and modernization of the laws on the subject.

Under the Constitution no funds may be withdrawn from the State Treasury save upon warrant of the State Controller duly drawn in accordance with law and upon an unexpended balance of a valid appropriation made by the Legislature.[27] Hence, even where sovereign immunity from action has been waived and liability assumed by the state, no judgment or claim against the state may be paid in the absence of a valid legislative act appropriating the money therefor.[28] The law provides, however, that claims for the payment of which no appropriation exists, Sovereign immunity against suit for damage caused by the negligence of officers or employees does not extend to such officers or employees, but the state or local government may insure its officers against such liability incurred within the scope of their employment (Govt Code, sec 1956; People v. Standard Accid. Ins. Co (1941), 42 Cal.App.2d 409; 3 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 97; 5 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 169). Cf., Govt. Code, sec 53056.

But, as to liability of the state for conduct of its employees, "Any person dealing with a state agency is chargeable with knowledge of all of the powers possessed or which may be legally exercised by the officers in charge of such agency, and all acts of such officers which go beyond the scope of the power vested in the officer exercising the functions of such agency are void, and knowledge must be presumed to be had, not only of the extent of the power, but also of the mode of its exercise" (Lentora v. Riley (1936), 6 Cal 2d 171, 179).

Also note that "The rule is well established in this state that where the action is one simply to compel an officer to perform a duty expressly enjoined upon him by law, it may not be considered a suit against the state" (County of L. A. v. Riley (1942), 20 Cal 2d 652, 662.)

[25] Govt. Code, sec. 1955.

It was held in 1887 that where work was done under a law later judicially determined to be unconstitutional, the work had, nonetheless, been done under express authority of law, and the Legislature might make an appropriation for payment thereof (Miller v. Dunn (1887), 72 Cal 462, 470). While the Supreme Court in 1903 questioned the soundness of such doctrine (Powell v. Phelan (1903), 138 Cal. 271, 275), in the intervening years the trend of judicial decisions has clearly been toward a liberal view of the "gift" clause of the Constitution (see 5 Ops Cal Atty. Gen. 169, and note 26 following).

[26] Govt Code, sec. 16021 But note that it has been held that the constitutional inhibition against making a gift of public money prevents legislative action in creating a liability against the state for any past act of negligence (People v. Superior Court, supra, at 758 (commenting on an early case)), or in payment of a claim for which only a moral, as distinguished from a legal, obligation exists (23 Cal.Jur. 564 and cases there cited; but see Miller v. Dunn, supra (note 25, ante)). Another consideration which seemingly, is to a large degree supplanting the above distinctions (see 5 Ops Cal Atty. Gen 169), is whether the funds are to be used for a public or a private purpose If the appropriation is for a public purpose it is not a gift, even though private persons are benefited by the expenditures, and the courts will not disturb a legislative determination of what constitutes a public purpose, so long as it has a reasonable basis (Los Angeles County v. La Fuente (1942), 20 Cal 2d 870, 877). And see note 15, ante.

Furthermore, the Supreme Court held at an early date that, ". . . in passing upon the constitutionality of a statute, the court must confine itself to a consideration of those matters which appear on the face of the law, and those facts of which it can take judicial notice. If the law, when thus considered, does not appear to be unconstitutional, the court will not go behind it, and, by a resort to evidence, undertake to ascertain whether the Legislature, in its enactment, observed the restrictions which the constitution imposed upon it . . ." shall be filed with the State Board of Control.[29] The Board of Control recommends such thereof as it approves to the Legislature, ordinarily in the so-called omnibus claims bill.

Subject to the approval and appropriation by the Legislature, the Board of Control is also vested with authority to make out-of-court settlement of certain types of claims, such as claims arising from the operation of motor vehicles by the state as provided in Section 400 of the Vehicle Code,[30] and claims the settlement of which is not otherwise provided by law.[31]

Agencies or Court

The advisability of having an administrative body settle all such claims may well be questioned. For many reasons, there has been a tendency in recent years to require that acquisition of lands for public purposes be under the supervision of the judiciary That is, there has been a tendency in laws authorizing the acquistion of lands for public purposes to require condemnation proceedings, thereby prohibiting acquisition by purchase out of court. While many condemnation proceedings brought thereunder have been settled before trial, such method is open to public surveillance and affords supervision by the court. It is felt that the judiciary is best trained and suited for determining the issues, including the weighing of the evidence re value, and is less susceptible to influence or bias—on the one side or the other. On the whole, it is felt that such method is more acceptable to the public as well as to the individual with whom the state is dealing.

It is suggested that consideration be given to likewise requiring that all tort claims against the state other than claims for minor damages (say under $300), be presented by filing legal action in a court (which must, of course, either have or be given competent jurisdiction), and prosecuted to final judgment either by trial of the issues or by settlement expressly examined and approved by the court.

It is recommended that the state, by legislative enactment, waive its immunity from action, assume liability, and consent to have the same determined in accordance with the same rules as applied to actions against individuals, subject, however, to such conditions as seem appropriate, such as retention of immunity against injunctive restriction or seizure of state property. In so doing, the Legislature would probably wish to give special consideration to the question of damages caused (a) negligently or (b) intentionally in the emergency use of the police power.

The recommendation is not new, it has been tried, tested and found workable elsewhere. Ten years ago, the State of New York took the action herein recommended [32] The federal government passed a similar law in 1946.[33] Except perhaps for the provisions that claims be submitted to a Court of Claims (no reason is seen for the creation of such a court in this state), those enactments would seem good patterns for action here.

It is time that California take its place among modern governments and accept responsibility for damages caused by its torts—permitting such to be adjudicated by the courts, subject to appropriation of necessary funds from time to time by the Legislature.

Part IV
ADOPTIONS

Miss Lucile Kennedy, head of the Adoption Department of the Department of Social Welfare, made an able explanation as to the operation of the adoption law.

A summary of her testimony is as follows:

There are two ways to accomplish adoptions. One is by the agency method which means that the natural mother goes to an agency, relinquishes her child for adoption, gives up all of her rights, privileges and responsibilities for the child. Then, the agency selects the proper home and places the child, supervises the child for a year, then the case is taken into court and the adoption is completed. If the adoption does not appear to be successful or to work out, the agency may take back the child but the natural mother is never brought into the case again.

The other method is what is called the independent adoption which means the State Department of Social Welfare only contacts the natural parent and obtains a consent for the adoption, checks into the home to see whether or not the home is satisfactory, and makes a study and recommendation to the court for either approval or denial; and until that time the natural parents of the child have certain responsibilities which are not released until the final decree of adoption, except for the activities now provided in the law with regard to the withdrawal of consent for adoption.

Prior to the war years, about four-fifths of the adoptions went through agencies and the other fifth represented mainly the situations where the natural parents knew the petitioners and wished them to have their child.

In 1942, with only two licensed agencies in the State, there were 642 agency adoptions and 617 independent adoptions, while in 1948, there were 723 children relinquished to agencies and 4,520 independent adoptions. The private agencies have been unable to expand their facilities while there has been such a demand for adoptions.

The interests of the child comes first as far as the department is concerned; in many cases of independent adoptions, the placements have been either unguided or misguided when they were made. The Legislature has not made it possible for more adoption agencies to be created, not only private but public adoption agencies and there have been many county adoption agencies set up in Los Angeles, Fresno, Tuolumne, San Diego, Stanislaus, Tulare, San Francisco and other counties. In San Francisco there has been a lawsuit to hold up the opening of that particular agency by a taxpayer's suit. There are now four private agencies in the State, the Native Sons and Daughters giving up its activities along this line.

It is hoped that half of the independent case load will be picked up by these various county agencies.

There is much interest by the public as to the number of children available for adoption in the State of California, and the number of children that could be adopted but are not being made available for adoption; being children that are in foster homes.

There are approximately 92 children's institutions in California that keep children on a 24-hour basis and I have made a thorough survey of many of these institutions to see whether or not there are any adoptable children therein. Also, there are approximately 320 day nurseries with the child usually having at least one parent.

A spot check of four agencies gives this information:

In Institution A, there was a population of 63, which represents the medium-sized institution. The children in that institution were from 6 to 16 years, which in itself tells something—they are older children. The breakdown here—both parents living together, there are eight of the children in that category; 10 where the parents were separated; 29 where they were divorced; 13 where one parent was deceased; and one child where both parents were deceased. There were two abandoned children. After looking at all the factors that would make for adoptability, of these three that would seem to be the most ready subjects for adoptions, the one with both parents deceased and the two who had been abandoned, the conclusion was that none of them were subjects for adoption. They were older children of racial background and so on, that wouldn't make them readily adoptable to the people who ordinarily want to take children.

Institution B, with a population of 40, represents the smaller institution. The age group in that institution was from 6 to 15 years. Four of the children's parents were separated, 23 of them were from divorced parents, 10 had one parent deceased, and two where both parents were deceased. There were no abandoned children, and we have a classification of "others" which stumps me at the minute, I don't know what the "others" was. Suitable for adoption—none, when they looked at those three children.

Institution C, with a population of 179, which represents a larger institution. The age group there was from 7 to 19. Both parents living together, 10; 12 parents separated; 77 of the parents divorced, which tells a story in itself; 31 where one parent was deceased; six only where they were both deceased; five children that were abandoned; and a classification of 38 of these various combinations of things. There might possibly be six children out of that group that would be adoptable if you were able to find someone that wanted children of that age group.

In Institution D, there were 41 children from the ages of 4 to 12. Four out of the 41 were from parents who were separated; 27 parents who were divorced; six were where one parent was deceased; and a classification four in the other group I have given you. Looking at that we thought there might be possibly five who were adoptable.

Now, when you add those figures of the four institutions you get a population of 323 and the possibility of 11 out of that number being available for adoption. None of this number were younger than four so that we have at once a picture of what is usually not the most acceptable group for adoption because most people do want infants or smaller children.

Many of the placements made in independent adoptions are not made with all the care that should be necessary. The person arranging the adoption knows too little about the situation

With regard to independent adoptions, the department examined 2,587 cases and of that number, the parents made 1,132 or 43.8 percent, a relative or parent made 117, physicians made 662, and there were 98 placements directly traceable to attorneys. There were 45 made by county welfare departments, 72 of the adoptions were made by probation officers.

Some of the reasons for denials in these adoption matters are as follows: Out of 886 denials, 113 were denied because the parents would not respond or they were unable to locate the parents. In 261, parents refused to consent after they were contacted and in 54 of the cases, the child was not a proper subject for adoption. Seventy-five homes were not found to be suitable and in 191 cases the legal status of the child was not clear. There were 21 children placed before it was known that they were not free for adoption and in 30 cases the parents withdrew their consent, while in 71 cases the petitioners withdrew their adoption petition.

In connection with the withdrawing of the consent, 71 petitioners decided not to go through with the adoption while only 30 mothers refused to proceed with the adoption.

Many of these adoptions present problems which always do not appear on their face; for example, the adopting parents are not married due to some mistake, either thinking that they had been divorced or something along that line and this problem always shows up later when they come to the question of inheritance as far as the adoptive children are concerned.

Usually the denial is based upon the grounds that the home is not suitable and that when they say the home is not satisfactory, it does not mean from a physical standpoint but because the department is looking primarily for good warm people who can give a harmonious home life to the child.

The department had only one case under that new law, Assembly Bill No. 2555, which had to do with the withdrawal of consent and which was adopted at the last session of the Legislature, but the department was interested in that portion of the law which provided for the department recommending a suitable plan when the consents are withdrawn.

The California adoption law is very good and as good a law as any in the United States. The main difficulty the department has is the need for resources to make the law workable with more agencies because it is difficult to handle so many independent adoptions where the control of the placement cannot be somewhat investigated and regulated.

Recommended changes in the law are as follows: (1) There should be a statute of limitations so that adoptions cannot be set aside for a certain period of time, such as three years, except for certain exceptions already in the law. The reason for this is that in many cases after many years some relative or someone else who knows about certain irregularities that might have existed in the adoption comes in and tries to set it aside when inheritances are involved. Sometimes someone comes in and claims that the parents are not married and tries to set the adoption aside. (2) Subsection 4 of the Civil Code, Section 224, presents some difficulties over consents where the parents are in state institutions. It is hard to get anyone in a state hospital to say that the person will never be able to support the child or be out of the institution. (3) A change should be made in Section 701 of the Welfare and Institutions Code in order to eliminate the necessity for consent in certain of those cases.

COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS

The committee heard testimony regarding the adoption laws from representatives of the State Department of Social Welfare and the Children's Home Society and it should be pointed out, to start with, that these witnesses agreed that California adoption laws were, in general, as good as those of any state in the Union. However, some problems were noted. Since the 1949 Session of the Legislature, there has been organized a Citizens Adoption Committee, a state-wide organization supported by the Columbia and Rosenburg Foundations and made up of private citizens interested in all aspects of adoptions. The citizens committee made available to this committee material on specific questions for legislation.

The Judiciary Committee staff has prepared bills based to meet specific problems presented to the committee.

The Civil Code at present provides that it is a misdemeanor for any person to advertise that he will place children for adoption. A bill has been prepared which would also make it illegal to advertise that one will find children for adoption. Another measure forbids anyone who does not have a license to advertise that he will perform any adoption services for which a license from the Department of Social Welfare is required. This should cover all aspects of the advertising problem.

It has been suggested to the committee that there should be a statute of limitations on proceedings to set aside or nullify adoptions. It appears that all too often an attack is made on the validity of the adoption decree long after the court proceedings, and usually where an inheritance is involved. This right is already limited in California but it appears to be desirable that it should be still further limited. Therefore a bill has been prepared providing a five-year statute of limitations, running from the entry of the decree, on any proceeding to vacate an adoption decree by any person, and providing a three-year statute for any such proceeding based on a procedural defect or irregularity.

One defect, it appears, in adoption procedure under the existing law is that a petition for adoption may be filed and pending but the proceeding may for some reason never be completed, in which case the status of the child is distinctly unsettled. Likewise, an adoption petition may be denied or dismissed, but the child may not be returned to its natural parents, again leaving its status unsettled. Bills have been prepared which provide as follows: If an adoption proceeding remains pending for two years, the clerk must notify the Department of Social Welfare. The department or the county agency must, within 30 days, file a report recommending a plan for the child. If the proceeding is then dismissed, the court still retains jurisdiction to make orders for the child's custody. As regards a dismissal of an adoption proceeding by the petitioners, the adopting parents, the department or county agency is likewise to file a report, and the court retains jurisdiction to determine custody. The department, under the present law, makes such a report, too, when the natural parents seek to withdraw their consent, and a proposed amendment would require a report from the department and an appearance on behalf of the child in all cases whenever a proceeding is instituted to set aside or nullify a completed adoption.

The need for such amendment appears to be obvious. Usually the natural parents or parent disappears from the picture as soon as their consent is given. If an adoption is not completed, denied, or dismissed, someone must have jurisdiction to determine custody. It hardly seems desirable that the child should, for instance, be left in the home of the would-be adopting parents after the court has denied their petition or after they have dismissed it.

A related problem is this: A child may be taken into a home, no adoption proceeding filed, and yet the child may remain there for years, knowing no other home and regarding his foster family as his natural family. This is unfair to the child; as soon as a question of inheritance or property arises, it is the child who will suffer, and meanwhile his natural parents may have disappeared and any rights to which the child might be entitled from or through them are likewise lost. And it is possible, too, that the home in which such child is placed may be undesirable. The committee staff has prepared a bill adding Section 1632 to the Welfare and Institutions Code requiring a report to the county welfare department by the family that receives an unrelated or distantly related child into their home and keeps it more than 30 days. The matters to be reported are set out in the statute; a failure to report is a misdemeanor and all such reports are to remain confidential The welfare department is authorized to inspect the home, but not authorized to take any further action except, if good cause appears, to request the probation officer to institute proceedings under the juvenile laws. The measure has been drafted without reference to receiving children "with intent to adopt," since proving such intent is difficult and the State, in any case, has a legitimate interest in supervising any informal placement of children outside the family.

A serious problem presented to the committee is the use of fictitious birth certificates. An unmarried mother is persuaded to enter a hospital under the name of the "adopting" mother and give the name of the "adopting" father as that of the father of the child. The birth certificate is prepared under these names, the "adopting" parents take the child, and there are no further proceedings. The child however is completely unprotected. He has no legal standing whatsoever as a child of his foster family and will probably never know who are his natural parents. At the present time the penalty for violating Health and Safety Code Section 10675, which makes it an offense to falsify a birth (or death) certificate, is a $10 fine for the first offense and $50 or 60 days for each subsequent offense. Considering the importance of birth and death certificates in our law, such penalties seem to be inadequate. A bill has been prepared therefore which would make it an ordinary misdemeanor to refuse or fail to give correct information in one's possession for such certificate and making it a high misdemeanor to wilfully furnish, cause to be furnished, conspire to furnish, or solicit anyone to furnish false information. Since the testimony before the committee was to the effect that suspicion falls mainly on physicians and attorneys in these false birth certificate cases, it is specifically provided that two or more convictions under this statute are grounds for revocation of a physician's certificate or for disbarment or suspension of an attorney.

It is possible that Penal Code Section 115 applies to this situation, but it might not be possible to prosecute all false birth certificate offenses under it. In terms it applies to one who knowingly records a false instrument, not to making or arranging for a false instrument. The person who actually sends a false birth certificate to the recorder or registrar often may not know that it is false. In any case, no harm will be done if both acts are on the statute books.

Section 701 of the Welfare and Institutions Code provides that a child can be freed from the custody and control of its parents if the parents are found to be insane or feeble-minded and if the authorities at the state hospital where they are confined certify that such parents will be unable to properly care for the child. Section 224 of the Civil Code has a provision in identical terms under which consent of such parent to an adoption is not required. This poses two problems. One is that the procedure under both sections requires that the parent be confined in a state institution No machinery is provided whereby a child can be taken from the control of a parent, or whereby consent of such parent to an adoption can be dispensed with, if the parent is incompetent but is not in a state hospital The second is that the superintendent of a state mental institution may reasonably be reluctant to certify that the parent will never be able to care for a child in a proper manner. Bills have been prepared to amend both these sections to provide that there must have been a declaration by a court that the parent is mentally ill or mentally deficient and must be a finding of fact in the instant proceeding (based on any competent evidence) that such parent will be incapable of properly supporting and controlling the child for at least one year. This meets both the problems discussed above

There is a further question arising from the same two statutory provisions. Is it necessary to have such provisions in both the juvenile and the adoption laws? The State Department of Social Welfare has proposed a bill which would strike this provision from the adoption statute. If this is accepted it will be necessary, if one or both parents be incompetent within the terms of the statute, to institute a proceeding under Section 701 of the Welfare and Institutions Code before an adoption can be completed. As the law now stands, the matter can be dealt with in the adoption proceeding or separately. The question should be given further consideration. In any case, however, the proposed amendment to the Welfare and Institutions Code seems desirable.

The Department of Social Welfare has proposed an amendment to Section 226 which would authorize a licensed county agency to consent to the consent of a parent taken before a notary in another jurisdiction. The present law requires such further consent to be given by the department. The proposed change is in line with the department policy of delegating functions to the county agencies and tends to further simplify the adoption process.

Testimony before the committee indicated the problem arising when a child relinquished to an agency is not adopted, usually because of the child's poor health or like defect. If, as often occurs, the natural parent has left the area and cannot be located, the agency is likely to be held responsible for the support of the child. A bill has been prepared to include such a child in the definition of a "needy child" under Section 1500 of the Welfare and Institutions Code if the child has been held by the agency for more than two years. An amendment to Section 1500.5 includes licensed agencies in the definition of "institution" for the purposes of that chapter.

That there is still a "black market" in children for adoption is unfortunately true. From testimony before the committee it appears that "black market" babies are usually obtained from unmarried mothers without any means of support. In return for her living and medical expenses, such a mother will surrender the baby as soon as born. Most of these mothers have left their homes in other counties and states in order to avoid scandal and so have no residence where the baby is born and no right to public assistance. Since they cannot be helped by public agencies, they are forced into the hands of black-marketeers. In response to this unpleasant and undesirable situation, a bill has been drawn amending Sections 204 and 2500 of the Welfare and Institutions Code which would authorize county hospital care and county relief for indigent expectant mothers without regard to residence. If such mother has a residence in this State, the cost will be a charge against the county of residence, of course.

A related measure is one suggested by the trustees of the California Institute for Women at Tehachapi. A parolee from a state prison usually has no county residence. Some return to their homes, but even if they do, they may not have lived there long enough before their arrest and conviction to have a residence there. Many convicts, of course, are transients, without residence anywhere. The result is that a parolee may be forced to return to prison to obtain hospitalization, which does not forward his rehabilitation. A bill amending Welfare and Institutions Code Section 2577 providing that a parolee shall be deemed a resident of any county so designated in the terms and conditions of his parole for purposes of hospitalization and medical attention under Division 4 of that code. The board of supervisors of any county is required to report any such aid to the parole authority and the authority may suspend or revoke the parole, if they see fit.

Concerning the rights of adopted children, a bill has been drawn which would give an adopted child the same rights of inheritance as a natural child, not only from the adoptive parents but from their family and kindred as well. The situation at present is this: The adopted child can inherit from the adopting parents and cannot inherit from the natural parent. However, the adopted child can inherit from the family of the natural parent and cannot inherit from the family of the adopting parent. For example, an adoptive parent dies and thereafter a brother or sister of the adoptive parent dies intestate and without issue. Any surviving brothers and sisters or their natural children would take by intestate succession, but the adoptive child cannot succeed to the estates of the adoptive parent's family through a deceased adoptive parent. Most adoptions in these days are of infants and most of the babies offered for adoption are illegitimate. Therefore, they never know their natural parents and any rights to inherit from the kindred of their natural parents is illusory. It would seem to be the better policy to try and treat an adoptive child as a natural child in as many ways as possible. It is true that the adopting parents' relations have nothing to say about an adoption, but it is likewise true that, should they feel strongly about the possibility of their property descending to a merely adoptive niece or nephew, they can make a will with such provisions as they prefer.

Part V

CHANGES IN THE MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE LAWS

During the past several sessions Mr. Peter Hanson of Corona, California, as the representative of the Family Protection League of U. S. A., has presented many measures in connection with marriage, divorce and annulment.

Mr. Hanson appeared before the interim committee to discuss these changes for the reason that most of the measures he has been interested in in the past have failed to obtain a "do pass" before the Standing Judiciary Committee.

Facts which Mr. Hanson presented to the committee are very interesting. He states that the rate for divorces in California are eight times those in Canada and 66 times that of Canada as to annulments.

Mr. Hanson has felt that annulments were granted in many cases where the only remedy was and should be divorce and that in many counties the courts are lax in granting such annulments. He felt that the following recommendations should be adopted: (1) That a residence requirement should be required in the filing of annulment suits as are now required for divorce actions, (2) that the word "fraud" should be better defined because that is the ground mostly abused by those who obtain annulments, and (3) that the statute of limitations on annulment actions should be reduced to one year.

As to marriages, he felt that the county clerk should be required to definitely determine whether or not a person who is an applicant for a marriage license has been married before and if so, whether or not he has received a final decree of divorce.

He also recommended that we return the requirement of a three-day waiting period.

He also suggests that in Civil Code Section 79, it should be amended to require people who are considered married where there has been no marriage license, should at least live together for a period of one year rather than the present interpretation of the law.

His recommendations as to actions for divorce include restoration throughout California of the conciliation proceeding originally the law in California and now being used in Los Angeles County. He felt that conciliation attempts should not be under court jurisdiction and that with every divorce action there should be filed a certificate by the parties that there has been a failure to become reconciled.

He would change the law to take care of what he claims is an abuse of the clause "extreme cruelty" as a divorce ground. He would take away from the court its right "upon its own motion" to issue a final decree of divorce. Mr. Hanson would also add to the law provision that if a husband and wife had actually been living apart for a considerable period of time, say four years, they might settle their property matters between them with the consent of the court the same as if there was a final divorce and thereafter neither would have the duty or right to support from the other. The advantage of this is that "nobody then would get a divorce for the one purpose of settling property matters and to have no duty to support the other."

Mr. Hanson urged the committee to introduce a joint resolution to memorialize Congress to initiate an amendment to the Constitution on marriage and divorce so that persons will obey their own state laws.

Conclusions

The interim committee carefully considered the testimony presented to it by Mr. Hanson, had an opportunity to restudy certain bills covering the above recommendations which have been introduced in past sessions, and have come to the conclusion that as far as the measures which have been discussed and submitted by Mr. Hanson there should be no changes in the present law on marriage, divorce or annulments.

However, the committee does agree with the fundamental problems presented by Mr. Hanson and the purposes for which the proposed bills are intended to cover but is of the opinion that it is impossible to legislate so that persons will not separate, so that they will not violate present laws relative to obtaining marriage licenses, that they will not falsify testimony in obtaining annulments or divorces upon the flimsy grounds, that the three day waiting period is circumvented by people who go to adjoining states for marriages.

The committee feels that there should be no change in the present law on annulments which requires a residence similar to that for the purposes of obtaining a divorce. The reasoning being based upon the fact that an annulment is a summary proceeding, that such a resident requirement would defeat the idea that the marriage itself is nonexistent and that there should be a legal determination of that point as soon as possible.

Part VI

UNIFORM NONSUPPORT ACT

One of the bills referred to the Standing Committee was Assembly Bill No. 99, authored by Assemblyman Levering.

This proposal was introduced in the March, 1950, Regular Session and referred to this committee for further study.

The committee has received testimony for the need for such a law. Mr. Edmund G. Brown, District Attorney of San Francisco, stated that the present problem in connection with the subject comes from the many women in California who have trouble in locating their husbands and collecting money from them for the support of themselves and their children once the husbands have left the State of California. While the present law does provide for extradition in cases of nonsupport, such extradition is not very helpful inasmuch as the person who is extradited must be charged with a felony, he loses his job wherever he is working in another state and is brought back to California with the result that he is unable to find a job here and give any support to his family which is the prime object of such legal action.

Assemblyman Levering, author of the bill, presented the matter to this committee stating that there is a great need to compel fugitive husbands to support dependents and that according to the National Desertion Bureau, there are at least 1,000,000 abandoned dependents in the United States, 750,000 of whom are under the age of 16, with support costing the taxpayers at least $50,000,000 annually, together with the many other problems which result, such as juvenile delinquency, malnutrition, illness and so forth.

It was brought out before the committee however, that the passage of such a uniform law in California actually would be of benefit only to the wives of other states whose husbands are in California and that actually until every state in the Union adopted it, it would not be of great help to the California situation. Therefore, an effort should be made to adopt a uniform act throughout the United States.

Briefly the act proposes that in the state where the fugitive husband is located the wife may bring an action or file a petition with the court setting forth the fact that the husband owes a duty of support. Certified copies of this may be filed with the state where the husband is located for an action to be brought there against him and if that court finds that there is a duty of support, it may order the defendant to furnish the support and subject his property in that state to the order. The reverse is true when the wife lives in some sister state and the husband resides in this State.

There are two proposed acts which generally seek to accomplish the same result: Assemblyman Levering's bill, Assembly Bill No. 99 (1949 Budget Session), and one proposed by National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws.

The committee believes that the adoption of such a uniform law would be of benefit to this State in savings to the taxpayer as well as of the obvious benefits to the children and wives involved, and that it should be adopted by all states in the United States.

Part VII

CHANGES IN REAL PROPERTY STATUTES

The committee received testimony regarding various technical and procedural defects and difficulties in the statutes relating to eminent domain, homesteads, mortgages, simultaneous death, rights of re-entry, and like property laws.

Certain measures have been prepared to simplify, clarify and improve these statutes. Mr. Floyd B. Cerini, executive secretary of the California Land Title Association, presented facts in connection with these matters to show that the correction of these defects would enure to the benefit of the real property owner in many ways.

The proposal to amend Sections 801.3 and 801.9 of the Code of Civil Procedure is intended to accomplish the following:

(a) By amendment to Section 801.3 authorize a plaintiff, in an action to quiet title to the lien of a public improvement assessment or bond which is presumed to be extinguished under the provision of Section 2911 of the Civil Code, to allege in his complaint that a person owning or claiming an interest under such a public improvement bond or assessment is believed to be dead and name as defendants both such person and "the heirs and devisees" of such person. Sections 801.1 to 801.15, Code of Civil Procedure, provide a proceeding whereby it can be determined whether the lien of a public improvement assessment or bond that is presumed extinguished under Section 2911 of the Civil Code is in fact extinguished and whereby it can be determined whether the lien of any certificate of sale given in satisfaction of such an assessment or bond is in fact extinguished. Such an action or proceeding is essentially an in rem proceeding. By Section 801.4, Code of Civil Procedure, the complaint in such an action must include as defendants unknown persons claiming an interest in any such assessment, bond or certificate of sale. And by Section 801.14, Code of Civil Procedure, the decree of the court is conclusive against all persons named in the complaint who have been served and all unknown persons and the heirs and devisees of deceased persons designated in the complaint and served as provided by Sections 801.8 and 801.9, Code of Civil Procedure.

The reason for the amendment as proposed stems from the fact that while the records of a county or city treasurer or street superintendent may show the name of a person having possible claim of interest in such a bond or assessment or certificate of sale, it frequently is impossible to ascertain whether such person is still alive or not. Under the present state of the law the plaintiff must make a choice of either naming such person as a defendant as though he were living or else naming "the heirs and devisees" of such person as defendants on the assumption that he is dead. If the plaintiff guesses wrong and names a person who is dead as a defendant the court's decree is not binding on his heirs and devisees and vice versa if he names "the heirs and devisees" as defendants the decree is not binding on the person if he is alive.

The proposed amendment to 801.3 will cure this difficulty and permit a plaintiff, as is now permitted in a quiet title action by a tax deed purchaser brought under Chapter 10 of Division 1 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, to allege in his complaint that he believes a person to be dead and name both such person and "the heirs and devisees" of such person as defendants in the action. By so doing the court's decree will be a binding decree whether or not such person is in fact alive or not.

(b) The amendment to Section 801.9 is to correct an obvious error by changing the word "defendant" to "plaintiff." It was patent that the plaintiff is the person who must make the affidavit of due diligence in order to serve by publication.

The proposal to amend Sections 1242, 1243, and 1265 of the Civil Code and Sections 660 and 663 of the Probate Code deals with statutory homesteads and relates primarily to conveyances between spouses of property that is subject to a marital homestead. There are three principal characteristics to property subject to a marital homestead: first, that of exemption from forced sale in satisfaction of certain debts; second, that of restraint upon the power of either spouse, acting alone, to convey, encumber or destroy the marital homestead; and third, the special manner of devolution of title to the property upon the death of one of the spouses.

Under existing law a conveyance of homestead property by one spouse to the other does not affect any of the homestead characteristics. The legal effect of the deed is merely to convert the property holding into the separate property of the grantee spouse with the property still continuing subject to the homestead (Burkett v Burkett, 78 Cal. 310). Experience has demonstrated that when one spouse conveys homestead property to the other it is invariably the intention of the grantor spouse that the grantee spouse be enabled to convey, encumber or otherwise deal with such property without the joinder of the grantor spouse and that the grantee spouse be able to devise such property by will or leave it to heirs of the grantee. Such is not the result that is achieved. Since the property remains subject to the homestead all homestead characteristics are applicable thereto. Thus the grantee spouse cannot, during the marriage and in his or her lifetime, in any sense deal with the property as his or her separate property. The property cannot be sold, conveyed, or encumbered except by an instrument jointly executed, acknowledged and recorded by both spouses. (Section 1242, Civil Code.) Nor can the grantee spouse devise the property by will, nor would it pass to his or her heirs by succession upon his or her death, for if the homestead was selected from community property or from the separate property of the spouse making the selection or joining therein title to the property vests absolutely, on the death of either of the spouses, in the survivor.

The primary purpose of this proposed legislation is to remedy this situation to the end that conveyances between spouses of homestead property can be made in accordance with the intention of the spouses. This is done by providing:

(a) That unless the spouse conveying to the other spouse expressly reserves his or her homestead rights, the spouse to whom the conveyance is made may convey or encumber the homestead property in the same manner and to the same extent as though no homestead had been declared: (see proviso proposed to be added to Section 1242, Civil Code).

(b) That unless the spouse conveying to the other spouse expressly reserves his homestead rights in such conveyance the homestead property shall go to the heirs or devisees of the grantee spouse, subject to the power of the court to assign it for a limited period to the family of the decedent. (proposed amendments to Section 1265, Civil Code and to Sections 660 and 663, Probate Code; see also Section 661, Probate Code).

The proposed amendments do not affect or in any wise destroy the homestead characteristic of exemption of the homestead property from execution or forced sale in satisfaction of certain debts. Such would continue, as under present law, when a conveyance is made from one spouse to the other.

The secondary purpose of this proposed legislation is to clarify the amendment made by the Legislature at the 1949 General Session to Section 1243, Civil Code. Prior to this 1949 amendment marital homestead property could not be conveyed, encumbered or abandoned except by a single written instrument, jointly executed and acknowledged personally by both husband and wife. The 1949 amendment purports to permit an abandonment of a homestead to be effected by a grant or declaration of abandonment personally executed and acknowledged by husband and wife by separate instruments; however this provision, insofar as it authorizes an abandonment to be effected by a grant made in separate instruments, is inconsistent with Section 1242, Civil Code, which does not permit a grant or conveyance of marital homestead property by husband and wife by separate instruments. Therefore an amendment is proposed to both Sections 1242 and 1243, Civil Code, to provide that a homestead can be conveyed, encumbered or abandoned by separate instruments personally executed and acknowledged by each of the spouses provided that the conveyance or encumbrance is made in favor of the same party or his successor in interest.

The proposal to amend Sections 296.2 and 296.4 of, and to add Sections 296.41 and 296.42 to the Probate Code is intended to correct two deficiencies in the Uniform Simultaneous Death Act. These are:

(a) The failure of the act to authorize sales or encumbrances or other transactions sanctioned by the Probate Code. Sections 296.2 and 296.4 of the act now provide for the distribution of joint tenancy and community property when there is no sufficient evidence that two joint tenants or a husband and wife have died otherwise than simultaneous, but there are no provisions which would authorize such property to be dealt with in any other manner in the probate proceedings such as the sale, exchange or encumbering thereof. The amendments to Sections 296.2 and 296 4 would correct this omission.

(b) The failure of the act to provide any method by which there can be an authoritative or conclusive determination of the fact that particular persons (joint tenants or husband and wife) have died under circumstances where there is no sufficient evidence that they have died other than simultaneously. Under existing law a binding determination is ordinarily obtained by having the executor or administrator of one estate bring a quiet title action against the executor or administrator of the other estate. This is costly and frequently results in costly delays. The proposed additions of Sections 296 41 and 296 42 provides a simple proceeding, with notice to all interested parties, whereby a finding can be made by the probate court which will be binding on all parties and conclusive to the effect that joint tenants or husband and wife have died simultaneously.

This proposed legislation has been submitted to the Commissioners on Uniform Laws of this State who have stated that the amendments proposed "appear to be desirable from the point of view of clarification of procedure, and they do not in any way affect the substance of the act itself, so that * * * uniformity can be adversely affected."

The proposal to add Section 1116 to the Civil Code to provide, in substance, that the lien of a mortgage or deed of trust made in good faith for value cannot be defeated by a breach of a condition subsequent, occurring after the attachment of such lien, is advocated for the reasons that: (a) the existing law which permits a forfeiture of title for breach of a condition subsequent and enables the holder of a reversionary right to unjustly enrich himself at the expense of a lender whose loan has improved the forfeited property and who had no part in causing the breach of condition is inequitable; (b) forfeiture of title to property by reason of a breach of a condition subsequent are not favored in the law; and (c) many lenders who now refuse to loan funds for the improvement of property subject to a condition subsequent would make such loans if this proposed legislation were enacted.

This proposed legislation would not, however, prevent the enforcement of a breach of a condition subsequent for the person entitled to enforce a breach would still be able to enjoin the breach, or sue for damages or re-enter and take title to the property subject to the lien of any mortgage or deed of trust made in good faith for value. Also the condition subsequent would continue as a valid and binding condition as to any owner of the property, or his successor in interest, whose title might be acquired by foreclosure or other means in satisfaction of a mortgage or trust deed indebtedness, with respect to any breach of the condition accruing subsequent to such acquisition of title.

The proposal to amend Section 2924c of the Civil Code would permit the owner of a subordinate lien on property to reinstate a default in an indebtedness secured by the prior lien of a mortgage or deed of trust on such property in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as a trustor under a deed of trust or a mortgagor is now authorized under Section 2924c, Civil Code, to reinstate a default in an obligation secured by a deed of trust or mortgage.

It is not unusual for a trustor to refuse to reinstate a default in a first deed of trust or that he does not do so because of inability or because he is missing and cannot be found. In such case the owner of a second deed of trust can only protect his lien by buying in the property at foreclosure or trustee's sale or hoping that the property will bring enough at such sale to satisfy his second lien. It would seem that he should have the same right to cure any default in the first deed of trust as is accorded to the trustor thereunder in order to protect his lien. In neither case is the position of the beneficiary under the first deed of trust adversely affected.

The proposal to amend Section 1245.3 of the Code of Civil Procedure would broaden the scope of this section of the code to permit anyone authorized to institute eminent domain proceedings to avail themselves of the benefit of the provisions thereof. Under existing law only the State or a public corporation or a political subdivision is entitled to avail itself of these provisions which authorize an in rem judgment in a condemnation action binding upon all persons.

It is not infrequent that the Federal Government condemns property and, as authorized by federal law, takes immediate possession thereof. The eminent domain proceedings, however, are often not prosecuted to final judgment for many years because of inability to ascertain the identity of, and serve, persons having an interest or possible interest and claim in the property. This results in known claimants being unable to obtain their compensation for the taking of their property even though they have been deprived of the use of such property. The amendment would cure this situation by permitting the Federal Government to avail itself of the provisions of Section 1245.3, Code of Civil Procedure and thus allow a final judgment to be entered with compensation awards being distributed to known claimants while compensation awards to unknown persons would be held by the county clerk for the account of the persons entitled thereto.

There seems to be no logical reason why others that are authorized to institute condemnation actions, besides the Federal Government and the State and its political subdivisions and agencies, should not also be able to avail themselves of the provisions of Section 1245.3 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The proposal to add Section 1190.1 to the Civil Code would provide in effect that if the certificate of acknowledgment of an instrument executed by a corporation set forth a statement that the instrument was executed by the corporation pursuant to a resolution of its board of directors such a recital would be prima facie evidence that such instrument is the act of the corporation, and that it was duly executed pursuant to authority duly given by the board of directors, and conclusive evidence of such matters in favor of any good faith purchaser, lessee or encumbrancer. Such a statement, while optional in any case, could not be set forth in any corporate instrument transferring all or substantially all of the assets of a corporation.

The reason for this proposed legislation, which is patterned after a Utah statute, is to provide a means whereby a corporation can be prevented from denying, at some later date, the apparent authority given by it to its officers. It is not always feasible to obtain proof that a corporate act has been duly authorized by the corporation's board of directors. In the absence of proof, a corporation may at any time attack a conveyance in a chain of title as not being the authorized act of such corporation. Innocent parties, i. e., purchasers and encumbrancers dealing with corporate officers in good faith, and the successors in interest to such parties, should be entitled to demand the protection afforded by this proposal as a condition to consummating property transactions with a corporation.

The proposed legislation provides the means whereby the authority of corporate officers executing conveyances on behalf of the corporation may be established of record. It has been submitted to Mr. Graham Lee Sterling, Jr., co-author of the authoritative text on California Corporation Laws, who has indicated his belief that this proposed legislation is reasonable.

The committee staff has prepared another bill in this same general field, adding Section 789 to the Probate Code. It provides, in brief, that if a probate sale made in compliance with Section 788 is confirmed but not completed, the confirmation can be vacated and the property resold as at private sale, if done within 30 days of the original confirmation and if the second sale is for the same or a better price and on the same or better terms. It would appear that all concerned are adequately protected by the publicity and formality of the first sale.

Part VIII

WAR EMERGENCY LEGISLATION

Unpleasant as it may be to contemplate, there is a genuine possibility that the cities of California may be attacked by enemy aircraft in the near future. The first public efforts must be, of course, to save and protect lives and homes and other tangible property. But not only will persons and buildings be injured and trade and commerce hampered, law enforcement will have to be on an emergency basis, and the orderly administration of justice will be interrupted.

It is probable that a state of extreme emergency would have to be proclaimed or that martial law would have to be imposed in the metropolitan areas because of the substantial destruction of the community organization. It has also been suggested that, in event of war, the federal military authorities might attempt to establish federal martial law, as was done in Hawaii in World War II.

Apropos of this, we do not believe that the Federal Government is authorized to proclaim martial law in this State unless and until (a) this is actually the theater of war, (b) martial law is required as a matter of military necessity, and (c) the civil courts are actually unable to function. By martial law we mean the closing of the civil courts and the administration of justice through military provost courts or commissions. Hawaii is, of course, a territory and without any claim to sovereignty, and martial law there was authorized by the organic Act of Congress which is the territory's constitution. Even so, the U. S. Supreme Court partially invalidated the state of martial law imposed there during World War II. Where one of the 48 states is concerned, the power of the Federal Government is much more limited.

In any case, the due process of the law is likely to be disturbed as a result of enemy attack, and serious losses may be sustained and major inconveniences suffered if public and private records and government offices and officers are destroyed. It should require little argument to show that the Legislature should take all reasonable steps to protect both the people and the agencies of government in such cases.

There are many existing provisions of law covering situations where private papers or official records are lost or destroyed. Generally speaking, of course, certified copies can be used in most cases in the absence of the original. In civil actions, furthermore, proof can be made of the contents of a lost or destroyed writing under such code provisions as Sections 1937 and 1855 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Pursuant to Government Code Section 1226, where official certificates have been destroyed by conflagration or other public calamity, duplicates may be issued. As regards land titles, the McEnerney Act (Act 1026, Deering's General Laws), passed after the San Francisco fire, is still in effect. It provides for an in rem proceeding to re-establish land titles if the public records are destroyed by flood, fire, earthquake or enemy attack. Deering's Act 1027 is supplementary to the McEnerney Act. Deering's Act 1028, also passed in 1906, provides for restoration of court records lost or destroyed by public calamity. Another 1906 statute, now Government Code Sections 50111-50113, provides for the recopying of damaged records and use of the new copy in evidence. Sections 1238 (15) and 1855a of the Code of Civil Procedure provide for the use of title company records, abstracts and certificates in case of the destruction of public records. It appears, too, that the proceeding to perpetuate testimony authorized by Section 2083 of the Code of Civil Procedure might be used where private and public papers and files are destroyed or damaged, if any person has knowledge of the contents.

One problem that would be posed by the closing of the courts, either by war damage or by military necessity, is that of the running of the statute of limitations. Obviously a complaint cannot be filed if there is no clerk's office and no clerk And, even if filing were possible, it would appear to be futile to file an action if the courts were not functioning In a larger sense, the same considerations are present as to all acts required to be done at or within a set time. It is possible, of course, that in any subsequent action the facts of war or like public calamity might be relied on as a defense to any claim that the statute had run or of nonperformance. Nevertheless, it seems to the committee that it would be more reasonable and practical, that there would be greater certainty, if some statutory provision was made on this point, and this was the view of Mr. Homer D. Crotty, president of the State Bar.

A bill has been prepared which would add to the Military and Veterans Code a section authorizing the Governor, in emergency situations, to suspend the running of the statutes of limitations and to extend the time for doing any acts required either by law or contract. The Governor would be empowered to order such extension and suspension either over the whole state, or by counties, and to make the same effective either as to everyone and every type of transaction or only as regards special classes of persons and transactions specially affected No such extension or suspension, however, would be for more than one year.

It is the intention of the committee that this statute, if adopted, be regarded as remedial, and cumulative, not exclusive. That is, the act should be liberally construed to provide short-term relief from legal difficulties caused by public calamity, including especially the damage and dislocation caused by war. Furthermore, whether or not the Governor should exercise the power which would be conferred on him by this enactment, it is our intention that the benefit of any other defenses or excuses, such as prevention by act of public enemies or like impossibility, or frustration, or destruction of the subject matter, should be preserved to those entitled to them.

The committee has also considered legislation which would provide for a sort of conciliation or individual moratorium proceeding. A court proceeding might be made available when justified by war conditions wherein anyone whose finances were imperiled by war damage or economic dislocation resulting therefrom could petition for relief. The relief provided would be to restrain his creditors and obligees from enforcing their claims against him, while, for the protection of the creditors, the entire property and business operations of the debtor would be under court supervision and control. While this special proceeding would be along the lines of that provided for by the Frazier-Lemke Act, it should be emphasized that it would not be intended as an intrusion upon the federal bankruptcy jurisdiction. It would be intended to provide only short-term emergency relief and no attempt would be made to grant the petitioner a discharge of any sort. The court would only restrain the enforcement against him of his debts and other obligations for a limited period, two years or less. The statute would only be in effect when required by war conditions and so ordered by the Governor.

One further problem considered by the committee under the heading of needed emergency measures was that of the succession to the office of Governor. At the present time Section 16 of Article V of the Constitution spells out the succession in detail through the Lieutenant Governor, the presiding officers of the Legislature and most of the constitutional executive officers. If the vacancy is not so filled for any reason, the Senior Deputy Secretary of State is to convene the Legislature to select a Governor in joint convention. However, we live in an age of atomic bombs and bacteriological warfare. It is conceivable that a determined enemy attack could wipe out all of those in the line of succession—only eight in number—all deputies of the Secretary of State, and some of the members of the Legislature as well. The State would, in such case, be without any effective government and without any legal means of supplying one.

The answer, it seemed to the committee, was to provide machinery for an emergency government which authorized so many people to act as would make it unlikely that all of them or even a majority of them would be killed or disabled at one time. A constitutional amendment has, therefore, been prepared which provides, in the first place, that if the office of Governor is vacant and remains vacant, it is the duty of every member of the Legislature to assemble in joint convention to fill the vacancy, whether or not any proclamation is issued. In the second place, vacancies in the Assembly or Senate would be filled by appointments made by the several boards of supervisors. Each board of supervisors would, if the Assemblyman and/or Senator representing them failed or was unable to attend the session in Joint Convention, appoint a replacement for such Assemblyman or Senator. It would appear most unlikely that all of the boards of supervisors would be wiped out by an enemy attack.

Since many assembly and senatorial districts embrace more than one county, if each county in the district appointed a replacement for an incapacitated legislator, several members from each such district would be named to replace one. This amendment, however, is not intended to provide a permanent arrangement. The idea is to provide some simple, workable machinery to keep the State Government operating even under emergency conditions resulting from enemy attack. On that basis, a departure from the usual rules for representation can be justified. As a matter of fact, the over-all size of the Legislature would probably not be greatly altered, since the metropolitan counties are most likely to suffer under enemy attack, and it is possible that not only would the legislators from such counties be unable to act, but the boards of supervisors might be wiped out as well.

Part IX

JUDICIAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICERS

A. REPORT OF SUBCOMMITTEE ON JUDICIAL SALARIES

Inasmuch as three members of this committee, Assemblymen Caldecott, Tomlinson and Rosenthal, were named to the Interim Committee on Equalization of Salaries, Qualifications and Job Classifications of Public Employees, the chairman designated them as a subcommittee to cooperate with Assemblyman Huyck's committee on the problem of judicial salaries. Their report on this matter follows:

The first task of the committee was to attempt to discover what rules and standards had been followed in establishing judicial salaries in the past. Our conclusion, in brief, was that there were none. The committee next attempted to determine if there were any rules or standards which should or could be applied in the future to establish and equalize judicial salaries.

In establishing industrial and civil service wage rates, a number of factors are usually considered. These include training, volume of work, responsibility, strain, bargaining power, prestige, perquisites, the supply of and demand for such labor, and so on. The results of trying to apply such commercial standards to judges were not encouraging For instance, the only training required by law is that of a lawyer. It is impossible to make any general statement as to further training required for the position. Likewise, it seemed impossible to find any ascertainable objective factors distinguishing the duties and responsibilities of one judge from another. The volume of work is not a satisfactory basis, for one reason because we had no figures which were both of proved accuracy and beyond influence by the court. The responsibility of a judge is great, but can hardly be measured in dollars. The strain on a judge by reason of his office may be high, but is intangible. Strain, likewise, as has been pointed out, is as much a measure of the man as it is of the job.

In fixing industrial salaries, the prime consideration is often the bargaining power of the employees. The bargaining power of judges is largely the result of their individual political influence, and, while it exists, such bargaining power should not, for reasons of public policy, be given any consideration in arriving at a long-term plan for fixing judicial salaries. The state of the labor market is also considered in determining industrial salaries, that is, supply and demand. We did not consider this a proper factor in fixing judicial salaries; the office should seek the man and the salary should be high enough to command the services of the kind of man required. While the prestige of judicial office is high, it is offset, as a pay factor, by the increased community responsibilities which fall on those who hold such office. The cost of getting and keeping the job, that is, election costs, might also be considered, but as a matter of fact most judges are appointed to fill vacancies and thereafter elected and re-elected without opposition. Such costs are therefore intangible. The perquisites of judicial office include participation in a liberal retirement scheme which must be given consideration. A judge's salary must, of course, be high enough to remove from him any temptations to allow outside financial considerations to influence his decisions, but this does not indicate exactly how much his salary should be. Frankly, if a man is susceptible to such influence at all, it might be impossible to set a salary high enough to keep him honest. We think that the best that can be done in this regard is to set judicial salaries high enough to provide a respectable living and a fair return

Another consideration is that of salaries for comparable positions. Like some of the other factors often applied for purely business purposes, it is difficult to apply this one to judicial emoluments. The situation as regards judicial salaries in other states involves a great many imponderable factors regarding which we can have little accurate information. Even if we understood all the considerations affecting the remuneration of judges in other states, it would probably appear that many of them had no application to California However, for what it may be worth, some figures for other states were collected.

One factor that is important is that of the ability of the public to pay and its willingness to pay. Some of the inequality in existing superior court salaries undoubtedly derive from the reluctance of local groups to increase their costs of government It must be pointed out, however, that the lower-paid judges (from the smaller counties) are those most likely to be assigned to other counties If the salary for his position is too low to attract well-qualified men, the judge of such county may not be qualified to do his share in the state-wide judicial system. That is to say, the effect of such a low salary is not confined to that one county but may appear anywhere in the State, wherever such judge holds court. The committee wishes it to be clearly understood that this present discussion is purely theoretical and without reference to any individual judge or county. Our point is just that there may be some relationship between judicial salaries and the calibre of the judges, and, since a superior court judge may sit in any county, judicial salaries are not a purely local concern.

Finally, we think it important to state that judicial salaries ought to be geared to a cost-of-living standard. Like most "white-collar" workers, particularly those in the higher brackets of government service, the pay of judges tends to rise much less slowly than does the cost of living in an inflationary period.

We concluded, after considering all the foregoing factors, that these (although usually given some weight in fixing wages) are just not, in the nature of things, applicable to the salaries of judges. Any rules or standards by which California judicial salaries can be fixed, we concluded, would have to be established after determining the nature of the problem in this State and the particular factors involved.

What is the problem? Although the superior courts of California are organized on a county basis, by reason of the powers of the Judicial Council to assign judges to other counties, we have, in effect, a unified state-wide system. Yet in this unified system there are 13 different rates of pay. Following is a tabulation of the distribution of salaries now being paid to superior court judges:

$15,000	per year in	4 counties
13,000	in	1 county
12,500	in	5 counties
12,000	in	13 counties
11,000	in	2 counties
10,500	in	2 counties
10,000	in	9 counties
9,250	in	1 county
9,000	in	5 counties
8,700	in	1 county
8,500	in	13 counties
8,000	in	1 county
7,000	in	1 county

We find two faults with this array of salaries. One is that there are differences of as little as $200 per year, with no factual basis for such fine distinctions. The other is that the spread from a low of $7,000 to a high of $15,000 is greater than the spread which in our judgment exists in the responsibilities of the judges.

It appears that these unwarranted differences result from a mixture of politics and tradition. The committee was unable to find any rational basis, such as differences in population, case load, etc., to justify 13 different salary levels. It would appear that the setting of superior court salaries county by county and not on a uniform or state-wide basis dates from the time when judges were not usually assigned from one county to another A reasonable distinction might have been made under such circumstances between the powers, duties and responsibilities of a superior court judge in one county and of a superior court judge in another, and consequently a different salary have been prescribed. However, the constitutional provision authorizing the Chief Justice to make assignments "to expedite judicial business" was adopted in 1926; the power has been used freely, and it is doubtful that any particular distinction can now be drawn between the kind and amount of work done by one superior court judge and that done by another. Notwithstanding the amendment of 1926, the Legislature has continued to fix superior court salaries on a piecemeal, county-by-county basis The only bases used in making salary adjustments seems to be the recommendations of grand juries and boards of supervisors and any personal influence the judges concerned might have.

It is the committee's conclusion from its consideration of all the foregoing that, since the usual rules for setting wage rates do not seem to apply to the judiciary, that the only practical basis on which judicial salaries can be established is a combination of existing practice with the cost of a decent standard of living for a judge.

Since it appears that, in general, all superior court judges have the same duties and responsibilities, it seemed reasonable to suggest that all of them receive the same salary. The arguments against a single rate of pay include the following:

1. Such a proposal might be opposed because of custom and tradition.

2. There is some difference in amount and character of work load, at least between the metropolitan and the smaller counties.

3. If a uniform salary rate was established, it is obvious that it would have to be at or near the level now prescribed for the larger counties. A heavy financial burden might thus be imposed on the smaller counties. Likewise, a highly-paid office might be placed in the gift of a relatively small number of voters in the less-populated counties with undesirable results.

Generally speaking, the committee accepted the arguments in favor of a single uniform rate of pay for superior court judges. We were supported in this position by the testimony of the Chief Justice and many other judges. However, there is considerable weight in the opposing arguments Two additional factors to be considered are these:

1. The establishment of a municipal court in some counties has, while perhaps decreasing the total number of superior court cases of all kinds, has increased the proportion of more difficult and serious cases.

2 Some of the smaller counties do not have a sufficient case load to keep their judge occupied full time. If there is a difference in salary between the larger and smaller counties, there is an incentive for a "cow county" judge to take assignments; if there is no difference, there is no such incentive A judge on assignment is, of course, paid at the rate established for the county to which he is assigned.

There was some discussion of a difference in the cost of living between rural and metropolitan counties. After considering various salary and cost-of-living surveys, we were unable to find that this was a substantial factor. The state does not recognize this difference in setting other salaries, either.

The committee therefore recommends that the superior courts be classified into three groups and that a uniform rate of pay be established for each group. This would reduce the present 13 different salary rates to three. For the protection of the smaller counties, we recommend that a fixed base rate be established for each group and that the State pay the balance of the salary above the base rate. For the protection of the judges in the future, we recommend that future adjustments in superior court salaries be based on cost-of-living factors.

In line with this policy, the practice of requiring recommendations as to superior court salaries from grand juries and boards of supervisors should no longer be followed. Finally, all future measures affecting judicial salaries should be referred to a single Assembly committee, instead of to any one of three, as in the past.

The superior court, the court of general original jurisdiction, is the keystone of our judicial system. The superior court, too, has suffered the most illogical and uncertain treatment in salary matters by reason of local politics and piece-meal legislation. If we can bring order out of chaos in regard to superior court salaries, we will have arrived at a standard by which the salaries of all other courts can be fixed. We recommend, therefore, that a fixed relationship be established between the pay scales established for the superior courts and those for the appellate and inferior courts. We further recommend that this relationship be preserved hereafter whenever superior court salaries are adjusted.

In arriving at a dollars-and-cents figure for superior court salaries, the committee adopted as a starting point the findings of the Heller Foundation which in 1947 determined the minimum budget for an executive's family of four to be $12,503 per year. This being a minimum, we propose that it be increased by 20 percent because of the responsibilities and necessary standard of living of a superior court judge. The resulting figure of $15,000 is further supported by the recommendation of the State Bar in 1947 of a $15,000 salary for the judges in the metropolitan counties, San Francisco, Alameda, Los Angeles and San Diego. The Legislature granted such an increase which, while affecting only four counties, covered more than half (104 out of 203) of the superior court judges Furthermore, the pay for comparable judicial positions in other states is close to this figure. The range of salaries for the principal trial courts of other states of comparable size indicates many variations, but this salary is close to prevailing practice. Those reported by other states include:

Illinois	$10,000 to $17,000
Maryland	13,000 to 15,000
Massachusetts	14,500
Michigan	9,000 to 18,500
New Jersey	7,500 to 20,000
New York	23,000 to 28,000
Ohio	4,347 to 12,000
Pennsylvania	11,000 to 18,000

This figure of $15,000 is the base figure for our further recommendations.

We suggested above that the counties be classified into three groups. We recommend the following classification:

1. The five counties which now have municipal courts: San Francisco, Alameda, Los Angeles, San Diego and Sacramento.

2. The 33 counties which do not now have municipal courts but whose superior courts have a full-time work load; Butte, Contra Costa, Fresno, Humboldt, Imperial, Kern, Kings, Madera, Marin, Mendocino, Merced, Monterey, Napa, Orange, Placer, Riverside, San Bernardino, San Joaquin, San Luis Obispo, San Mateo, Santa Barbara, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Shasta, Siskiyou, Solano, Sonoma, Stanislaus, Sutter, Tulare, Ventura, Yolo, and Yuba.

3. The 20 counties where there are now no municipal courts and where the judges of the superior court seem to have less than the average work load: Alpine, Amador, Calaveras, Colusa, Del Norte, El Dorado, Glenn, Inyo, Lake, Lassen, Mariposa, Modoc, Mono, Nevada, Plumas, San Benito, Sierra, Tehama, Trinity and Tuolumne.

It is difficult to say what constitutes a full-time case load for a superior court. Statistics as to cases filed and disposed of are not completely satisfactory; however, there are no other figures available. Omitting Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, there are 250 working days in a year. Assuming that 1½ dispositions a day is normal, we find that a reasonable annual case load is 375 dispositions. This figure has the further advantage that, in the past few years, all the 20 counties in the third group have been well below this mark and all the other counties have been well above it. As things stand, we have to recommend paying what amounts to a part-time salary in these 20 counties. If several of these counties could be combined into one judicial district, this situation could be avoided; however, we make no recommendation in this regard at the present time.

We recommend that the rate of pay for the superior court judges in the counties in the first group be $15,000 per year. We recommend that the salary for counties in the second group be 90 percent of $15,000, that is, $13,500 per year. We recommend that the judges in the third group of counties be paid 66.67 percent (two-thirds) of $15,000 or $10,000 per year. We would emphasize that the lower salary for counties in the third group is balanced by the fact that a judge assigned to another county is, of course, paid while serving there at the same rate as the judges in that county. This rate equals the highest salary paid at the present time in any of these 20 counties.

It is our recommendation, as stated above, that these base rates be adjusted hereafter in accordance with variations in the cost of living. The U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics maintains Consumer Price Indices for San Francisco, and Los Angeles; the average of these two should be used. For every rise or fall in this average of five points (or four points and a major fraction), superior court salaries should be raised or lowered $500 per year. Since the base rates recommended above are based on 1947 figures, adjustments should be made at the 1951 session of the Legislature increasing the pay for superior courts in the first group of counties to $16,000, for those in the second group to $14,000; and in the third group to $10,667.

The State pays $5,750 annually towards the salary of each superior court judge at the present time. Some of the witnesses testifying suggested that the State should pay the whole salary. It was our conclusion that the contribution of the State should be increased, but that the counties should continue to pay a part. The judges are still, in theory, locally elected and there should be some measure of local responsibility.

At the present time, the total contribution of the counties is $1,475,700 and the State pays $1,167,250 per year. It is our recommendation that each of the 38 larger counties pay $5,000 per judge per year and that the share of each of the 20 smaller counties (in group three) be $3,000 per judge per year. Under this arrangement, the State's annual share would be increased $880,690 to $2,047,940 and the annual contribution of the counties reduced $505,700 to $970,000. The total increased cost of the new salary scale recommended above would be $374,990 annually.

It should be made clear that the classification of courts proposed above is not intended to be changed automatically by a change in case load or by the establishment of municipal courts. We consider that this is a sound practical grouping and it should not be changed in the future except by the considered action of the Legislature.

All the arguments offered in support of uniform salary scale for superior court judges apply with equal force to the municipal courts. In fact, since a population of 40,000 is required for the establishment of a municipal court, the problem of the very small or "part-time" unit is avoided.

Some have suggested that the pay of a municipal court judge should be almost as high as that of a superior court judge since, after all, to the parties concerned, a small case may be as important as a large one. We think it more reasonable, however, to say that, from the point of view of the State and the public, felonies are more serious than misdemeanors and civil cases involving large sums of money or a major exercise of the equitable jurisdiction are likely to be of greater significance.

It is our recommendation that the salaries of all municipal court judges be established at the single, uniform rate of 83.33 percent of the $15,000 base figure, or $12,500. With cost-of-living adjustment to date, the figure would be $13,333.

There are two possible objections to this recommendation. The first is that all municipal court judges will be paid at a higher rate than are the judges of superior courts in the third group of counties. Since there will be no municipal courts in those counties, there will be no direct conflict. Furthermore, it should be remembered that all municipal court judges are paid on a full-time basis, while the pay scale for the superior courts in the third group is actually for part-time work. In any case, should the population or case load in these 20 counties change to the point where a municipal court might be established, reclassification would probably be necessary.

The second objection is that the present salaries in the municipal courts in San Francisco and Los Angeles would be reduced by $167 per year. The committee believes that the salary proposed is fair and is based on a reasonable relationship with superior court salaries. That the Legislature adopted a slightly higher pay scale (in the face of recommendations to the contrary and contrary to the logic of the situation) does not appear to us to justify the retention of the differential.

Our basic figure is $15,000. The pay for superior court judges in counties in the third group is $10,000 per annum (plus cost-of-living increase). The municipal courts, under our recommendations would draw 16.67 percent more than this, and 16.67 percent less than superior courts in counties in the first group. It seems to us reasonable that this 16.67 percent differential should be retained and projected upwards to find the rates of pay for the district courts of appeal and the Supreme Court.

On this basis, the justices of the district courts of appeal would receive base pay of $17,500 per year, which with the cost-of-living adjustment to date would be $18,667. We recommend an additional $500 a year for each presiding justice. All of the justices are paid an annual salary of $15,000 at present.

The present salary of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court is $17,000 and that of the associate justices is $16,000. (This differential is justified by the additional duties performed by the Chief Justice as chairman of the Judicial Council.) If we follow the pattern recommended above, the justices of the Supreme Court would be paid 16.67 percent more than those of the district courts of appeal, or 33.33 percent more than the base figure of $15,000 per year. That is, Supreme Court salaries would be increased to $20,000 per year, with a cost-of-living adjustment to $21,333. In addition, the Chief Justice should receive an additional $1,500, which should be constant and not considered in making cost-of living adjustments.

We are aware that this report will probably result in the expression of considerable disagreement. We believe, however, that the salary levels proposed are adequate and that the provisions for future adjustments are adequate. It should be emphasized, above all, that the basic relationships recommended should be retained undisturbed. Even if rates of pay are changed, these relationships in percentages provide a sound and reasonable guide for the action of the Legislature and should be adhered to.

B. UNIFORM SALARIES OF DISTRICT ATTORNEYS

At the last session of the 1949 Legislature, Assemblyman Babbage proposed a bill providing that the district attorneys should receive a salary of 90 percent of the superior court judge's salary for his respective county.

Mr. W. O. Mackey, District Attorney of Riverside County, presented this matter to the committee.

Recommendation

It is the recommendation of the committee that due to the problem now facing the Legislature in connection with a uniform salary for superior court judges, that it is not practical at this time to provide that the salaries of the district attorneys be made uniform at the rate of 90 percent of the superior court salary.

The salary of the district attorney is paid entirely by county funds and no contribution is made by the State to the respective county and therefore, for that reason, the local county is in a better position to determine the exact amount of salary that should be paid to the district attorney of their county for the work that is required inasmuch as the district attorney is given deputies to assist in his work while the superior court has no assistant or deputy.

C. ADULT AUTHORITY

The committee heard testimony from Mr. Walter Gordon, a member of the Adult Authority.

The testimony indicated that there are at present three members on the Adult Authority who have to hear a minimum of at least 600 cases per month with personal appearances by all of the inmates before the board and with the board making approximately 10,000 decisions concerning the liberty of men each year. Mr. Gordon felt that the size of the authority should be increased from three to four members and that if four members were on the authority, a board panel of two members could then hear more cases per month which would tend to eliminate mistakes in paroles because of the speed in which the Adult Authority has to operate.

Recommendation

The committee feels that the authority should be increased from three to four members and if possible to five members to handle situations where a majority of three would make a decision rather than to have a tie vote of two and two.

D. UNIFORM STANDARDS FOR PROBATION OFFICERS

The committee received testimony from Karl Holton, Director of the Youth Authority, concerning the setting up of standards for probation officers in California.

This subject has been presented to the Legislature for many years and in 1949, Assembly Bill No. 1652 was introduced but was unsuccessful. Mr. Holton stated that it is very difficult to get all of the parties to agree on any legislation; that when subsidies are attached there has been objection that the amount is either too small or too large, or that there shouldn't be any, while many persons feel that probation officers should not necessarily have any standards as a requirement to holding office. Mr. Holton further stated that while many counties have opposed setting up standards for probation officers, nevertheless these very counties realize their inability to handle many of their local problems, and therefore call upon the Youth Authority to work out their difficult cases.

This committee has received testimony in past years from probation officers who have agreed there should be some standards.

Recommendation

The committee recommended that legislation be introduced to set up a uniform standard for probation officers throughout the State of California; that such a plan is of value not only to the defendant but to the court and to the public at large in the proper administration of justice.

E. PUBLIC DEFENDERS AND ATTORNEYS APPOINTED TO ACT AS COUNSEL

At the last session of the Legislature, certain recommendations were made by the Commission on Criminal Law that where public defenders are not provided for in the various counties, compensation should be fixed either by the court or the board of supervisors for those attorneys who are appointed to represent defendants.

There is apparently a great deal of opposition to the payment of any fees to attorneys who are appointed by the court to represent the defendant.

Under the present law every participant in a criminal trial except the attorney is paid by the State or the county. The superior court judge, the district attorney, the probation officer, the sheriff, the witnesses, and the jury all receive compensation for their services; but, the attorney is supposed to adequately represent the defendant whether he be guilty or innocent, for which services he receives no pay. In many cases the defendant may actually be innocent but due to the limitations of the attorney appointed to represent him, the attorney is unable to properly defend the person, to investigate, and to obtain witnesses for the defense of the defendant, and therefore he may be found guilty because the district attorney is anxious to keep up a record of convictions.

The committee feels that the defendant, whether he be innocent or guilty is entitled to all of the benefits of the law and that the appointment of inexperienced attorneys has on many occasions brought about the conviction of innocent parties or has resulted in the trial of persons who are guilty because the appointed attorney is unwilling to take the risk of advising his appointed client to plead guilty. This results in increased costs to the State and county by reason of expensive trials.

The committee refers to the excellent record of public defender Ellery Cuff, of Los Angeles County, who with his staff of competent investigators has saved the County of Los Angeles thousands and thousands of dollars by properly representing indigent defendants and yet not in any way interfering with the rights of the defendants and insuring justice to them as well as justice to the people of the State.

Many counties cannot, however, afford public defenders, or will not, and in the long run these counties pay out more money than would be necessary if the defendant were represented by paid counsel.

Recommendation

The committee recommends that an act be passed by the Legislature giving power to the judge who makes the appointment to fix a reasonable attorney's fee for the services of any attorney appointed to represent an indigent defendant. The courts at the present time have the power to fix a reasonable attorney's fee in many types of action and the committee feels that this power would not be abused by the court in fixing a fee for an attorney appointed to represent such a defendant.

F. MILEAGE AND JURY FEES

Judges of one county sitting under assignment in another are entitled to their expenses, including expenses of travel. It has been brought to the attention of the committee that some county officials have been giving assigned judges for travel expense only the lowest possible round-trip fare and not the judge's actual travel expense nor mileage at a reasonable rate in lieu thereof. Considering the time that some of the judges in the smaller counties spend on assignment and in traveling on assignment, such an interpretation represents a serious financial problem to them. And it is the judges who do the most traveling on assignment who are paid the least in the first place. Two versions of a bill to remedy this situation have been drawn. One would require the payment of a reasonable mileage as determined by the Judicial Council with a seven-cent-a-mile minimum; the other would merely prescribe the seven-cent minimum. The figure of seven cents is the same as that used for calculating mileage for those traveling on legislative business.

The committee also gave some thought to the fees and mileage of jurors. Civil jury fees in superior courts vary from two to six dollars per day at the present time. Most of these rates were fixed before the present inflation set in and represent most inadequate compensation by today's standards. The majority of counties pay three dollars or less. Legislation has been prepared prescribing a state-wide minimum fee of $5 per day for grand jurors and superior and municipal court trial jurors. Such a rate, after all, is still less than the prevailing wage for even unskilled labor. The burden of paying it, of course, falls on the litigants and not on the county.

The rates of mileage for jurors varies from none in San Francisco to 35 cents a mile in Sierra County. Twenty-two counties allow 15 cents a mile one way and many of those allowing less than 15 cents give mileage both ways. A bill has been drawn to equalize this situation by setting a state-wide minimum for all jurors of 10 cents per mile both ways, except in a city and county. The situation in San Francisco is unique; nearly every juror can reach court by public transportation, and we feel that the distinction is reasonable.

The measure covering the fees and mileage of jurors has been drawn and numbered so as to fit into the Code Commission's proposal for repeal of the Political Code upon final distribution of its remaining sections.

Part X

INFERIOR COURT REORGANIZATION

Assembly Constitutional Amendment No. 49, which was proposed in the 1949 Session of the Legislature, was adopted by the people in November, 1950.

With the passage of this legislation, there is now the need for the introduction of additional legislation to fill in the various gaps and make changes in the present law so that the new court reorganization plan will properly operate.

Mr. Martin Katz of the Judicial Council's Office presented to the committee the facts in connection with the necessity for changing approximately 200 sections of the Code of Civil Procedure to conform with the new legislation. Such changes to be mainly technical with some legislation for the setting up of the new municipal courts in the various districts where they will be created by the new law.

It is proposed to introduce a bill setting up a formula basis for each new court in the respective counties, as well as a separate bill for each newly created municipal court in each county.

While each county pays the salaries of each municipal court judge, we do hope that some plan will be followed to set up a standard salary plan for all such courts.

RECOMMENDATIONS

It is recommended by the committee that the Legislature adopt all of the technical and procedural changes which will require legislation so that they may conform with Assembly Constitutional Amendment No. 49 and other measures adopted in the 1949 Session of the Legislature.

Part XI

RULES AGAINST PERPETUITIES

The difficulties of estate planning in California have become greater by reason of court decisions holding that we have in this State two separate rules limiting the permissible extent of future interests. Not only do we have the statutory provisions of Section 715 of the Civil Code, and following related sections, we have also the common-law rule against perpetuities. The periods prescribed by the two rules are different, and a future interest created in compliance with one rule may be invalid under the other. Such problems may not arise frequently in legal practice, but are likely to be serious if and when they do arise. For a discussion of the legal situation see 2 Annual Survey of California Law 211; (article on Future Interests by Everett Fraser, Professor of Law at Hastings and Dean Emeritus of the Minnesota Law School) Witkin's Survey of California Law, pp. 538-540; and page 160 of the 1950 supplement to Witkin. The leading case discussing the two rules is Estate of Sahlender, 89 C.A. (2) 329.

There is little doubt that the code sections involved should be revised and rewritten. Professor Lowell Turrentine of the Stanford Law School (who was consulted by the committee staff) urged a thorough revision of these sections and warned that mere piecemeal tinkering might create as many difficulties as it cured. However, since it is unlikely that a thorough revision of these complicated provisions is possible at the coming session it seemed desirable to prepare a bill which would at least simplify the law, although it might not solve the problems of legal theory involved. This stopgap measure does two things; it gives statutory form to the court holdings that the common-law rule against perpetuities is in force in California; and it solves the problem of complying with both the existing code rule (lives in being or 25 years) and the common-law rule (lives in being plus 21 years) by making the time periods under both rules the same, that is, lives in being plus 21 years. Under this bill, compliance with one rule should also be compliance with the other as far as the period of time beyond which property cannot be tied up is concerned. Civil Code Section 716 is also amended to simplify its application in certain situations. Section 772, which has been characterized as ambiguous and difficult and will now probably be superfluous, would be repealed.

The wording of the proposed Sections 715.1 and 715.2 is based on the Model Rule Against Perpetuities Act prepared by the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. The addition to Section 716 is derived from Section 373 of the Restatement of Property. The committee staff gratefully acknowledges the assistance of Professor Turrentine in preparing this stopgap legislation. It should be emphasized, however, that careful and comprehensive revision of the property sections of the Civil Code is still most advisable.

Part XII

PUBLICATIONS

A large number of bills have been prepared to implement the plan embodied in Government Code Title 1, Division 7, Chapter 1, Article 4, enacted in 1949. This article provides a series of definitions of publication for various prescribed periods spelling out in detail exactly what is sufficient publication. The article further provides that any statute prescribing publication may incorporate the requirements of one of these Government Code sections by reference. The bills prepared for the committee merely delete the separate definitions and specifications of publication as set forth in various code sections, replacing them with the words "pursuant to Government Code Section _____." It is hoped that this will simplify the problem of attempting to understand how many days or issues of publication are required, for instance, to publish for 10 days in a weekly paper, and so on.

The committee does not pretend to have revised all the sections and statutes which call for publication. A reference to Larmac's Index will indicate how many of them there are. The staff, in preparing the amendments to implement Government Code Section 6060 et seq., have not made any intentional changes in the substantive law as to the number of times of publication.

The committee recommends that serious consideration be given to the preparation and publication of a book or pamphlet setting forth in one accessible place all the different types of notices of which newspaper publication is required. Such a volume was compiled by the Legislative Counsel in 1937 and put on sale through the Division of Documents; an earlier edition had been published in 1927. The new article in the Government Code simplifies the law on publication of legal notices considerably, but it will still be necessary to look through the codes and general laws to find out if notice is required and what publication is required. A compilation of the statutory provisions requiring publication would be of great value and utility to county clerks, newspapers, attorneys, title companies and many others.

Part XIII

REPORT OF SUBCOMMITTEE TO CONTROL COMMUNISM AND SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES AND SABOTAGE

The subcommittee to control communism and subversive activities and sabotage was appointed by the chairman on August 8, 1950, to propose legislation for the regular session of the Legislature to convene in January of 1951. Hon. H. Allen Smith and Hon. John D. Babbage were appointed members of the subcommittee with Hon. Julian Beck as chairman. Joseph E. Stewart of Hollywood, was selected as executive secretary of the subcommittee.

In the latter part of August, 1950, Governor Warren stated that he was calling the Legislature into an exfraordinary session on September 20, 1950, and that amendments to the Sabotage Prevention Act would be one of the items on the agenda.

The subcommittee thereupon scheduled a hearing to be held on this subject in Los Angeles on September 12, 1950. Invited to testify at this hearing were witnesses interested in the Sabotage Prevention Act and were asked to discuss the more general field of subversive activities on the possibility that the Governor would broaden his "call" to allow legislation on all types of subversive activities. The Governor subsequently broadened the "call" but his announcement came too late to permit additional meetings of the committee prior to the commencement of the September 20th Special Session.

The Legislative Counsel was represented by Owen Kuns, who made available to members of the committee the present statutes on laws against treason, criminal syndicalism laws, acts of violence, Sabotage Prevention Act, an act requiring registration of subversive organizations with misdemeanor provisions for persons belonging to such groups which have failed to register and statutes permitting dismissal of public employees who advocate the overthrow of the government by unlawful means.

In addition, the committee received a digest of laws pertaining to the subject matter from the States of New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois, and Massachusetts.

The committe confined itself solely to the legal phases of the present problem and in no way attempted to duplicate or infringe upon the investigation of the Senate Un-American Activity Committee.

Those presenting testimony at the first subcommittee hearing were the following: Hon. Fred N. Howser, Attorney General of the State of California; Hon. William E. Simpson, District Attorney of Los Angeles County; Hon. James D. Keller, District Attorney of San Diego County; Hon. Frank Coakley, District Attorney of Alameda County; William H. Parker, Chief of Police of the City of Los Angeles; Donald M. Redwine, Assistant City Attorney, City of Los Angeles; Edward N. Skagen, Grand Lodge Representative of the International Association of Machinists; Gerda Martin, California Industrial Union Counsel; Claude P. Peters, Chief Special Agent, Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company; Horrace I Ellenson, Chief Special Agent, Southern California Gas Company; J. L. Creighton, Special Agent, Standard Oil Company; and Samuel B. Nelson, Department of Water and Power, City of Los Angeles.

A copy of the transcript of the hearing was submitted to all Members of the Legislature during the special session in September, 1950.

All of the above witnesses testified before the subcommittee concerning any needs for changes in present laws and as a result of the testimony, the subcommittee introduced at the Special Session on September 20, 1950, Assembly Bill No. 25, which amended the Sabotage Prevention Act in the following general respects:

(1) Made the act effective at all times when the State or Nation was preparing for defense or war or while this Nation was assisting other nations in the preparation of its defense.

(2) Define the term "war" so that it included military operations of the State or United States whether war was formally declared or not.

(3) Increased penalties for sabotage including the death penalty if great bodily injury resulted from an act of sabotage.

(4) Increased penalties for unlawful trespassing upon posted war plants.

Reference is hereby made to Assembly Bill No. 25 for full details of the subcommittee's recommendations. Assembly Bill No. 25 was unanimously passed by both houses of the Legislature as an urgency measure and was signed by Governor Warren on October 6, 1950. (Statutes 1950, Third Extraordinary Session Chapter 13)

The subcommittee also introduced on September 25, 1950, Assembly Bill No. 75 which established a registration act for members of communist organizations. The Senate Committee on Un-American Activities on the same day introduced a companion bill, Senate Bill No. 50. Both of these bills, by resolution of the respective houses were referred back to the committee for further consideration, principally to determine whether the bills would be in conflict with the McCarran Act upon the same subject enacted by the Federal Congress late in September, 1950.

One of the recommendations presented to the committee by the Attorney General was the following: That the legislature create positions and appropriate sufficient funds for 10 additional special agents in the State Department of Justice, who shall be empowered and assigned to subversive activities which shall include the study of all subversive activities mutual aid and cooperation between federal, state, county, and municipal enforcement agencies and the teaching of the ways and means of detection and prosecution thereof.

Assembly Bill No. 11, by Assemblyman Sherwin and others, was passed unanimously by both houses on October 17, 1950, and was signed by the Governor. This measure appropriated $25,000 to the Attorney General for cooperative work with law enforcement agencies in matters affecting sabotage and subversive activities. This was also recommended to the Legislature by the Governor.

Assembly Constitutional Amendment No. 1, was adopted by the Legislature, being authored by Assemblyman Babbage, Smith and others, and provided that no person or organization which advocates the overthrow of the United States or the State of California by force or violence shall hold office or employment under this State or any of its political subdivisions or receive benefit of any tax exemptions. This measure will appear upon the 1952 General Election ballot.

Part XIV

REPORT OF SUBCOMMITTEE ON LEGAL EDUCATION AND ADMISSIONS TO THE BAR

Your Subcommittee on Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar in California, consisting of Assemblyman Arthur H. Connolly, Jr., chairman, Assemblyman Richard J. Dolwig, and Assemblyman Robert I. McCarthy, held its first formal meeting concurrently with a public meeting called by the Committee of Bar Examiners in San Francisco on July 21, 1950. Following the submission of a progress report to the full interim committee at its meeting in Riverside on July 25, 1950, your subcommittee met in executive session with the Committee of Bar Examiners in San Francisco on November 24, 1950, and the chairman of your subcommittee subsequently attended an open meeting of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee studying the same subject matter, at its meeting held in San Francisco on December 4, 1950 In addition to attendance at the hearings and meetings aforesaid, your subcommittee has also considered a large volume of printed material on the subject in question, including various reports, articles, written statements and communications, particular reference to which will be found herinafter.

While your subcommittee was given the general assignment of reporting on Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar in California, it was understood from the outset that the matter of principal concern was the more specific problem of the so-called "Accreditation Rule" and its effect on Legal Education and Admissions, and your subcommittee therefore directed its attention to this portion of the general problem.

To fully understand the nature of the problem presented by the current controversy on the California Accreditation Rule, it should be pointed out that there is no statutory pronouncement, either in the State Bar Act or elsewhere, as to the requirements for law school accreditation in California, nor is the term "accreditation" even defined in the present law. The only statutory reference to accreditation is contained in Section 6060 Business and Professions Code, which reads as follows:

"6060. To be certified to the Supreme Court for admission and a license to practice law, a person who does not comply with Section 6062, shall:

(a) Be a citizen of the United States.

(b) Be of the age of at least 21 years.

(c) Be of a good moral character.

(d) Have been a bonafide resident of this State for at least three months immediately prior to the date of his final bar examination.

(e) Before beginning the study of law, have completed at least two years of college work or have reached the age of 25 years.

(f) Have registered with the examining committee as a law student within three months after beginning the study of law. The examining committee, upon good cause being shown, may permit a later registration.

(g) Have either:

(1) Graduated from a law school accredited by the examining committee requiring substantially the full time of its students for three years.

(2) Graduated from a law school accredited by the examining committee requiring a part only of its students' time for four years.

(3) Studied law diligently and in good faith for at least four years.

(h) Have passed a final bar examination given by the examining committee.

(i) Have passed during the period of his law study such preliminary examinations as may be required by the examining committee. This requirement does not apply to students of law schools accredited by the examining committee."

Acting pursuant to the provisions of the State Bar Act, the Board of Governors of the State Bar, in 1937, through its Committee of Bar Examiners, adopted a set of rules regulating admission to practice law in California, and Section 65 of Rule VI thereof promulgates the so-called "Accreditation Rule." As now in effect, the rule provides that in order for a California law school to be accredited by the Committee of Bar Examiners of the State Bar, it must, among other things, have a total cumulative percentage of success of 60 percent or more, for the applicants allocated to the particular school, of those taking the state bar examination for the first time in the three successive calendar years immediately preceding the date of accreditation.

The important point to bear in mind at this juncture is that a person need not graduate nor even attend an accredited law school in order to be able to take the California Bar Examination. As stated in the Report of the Special Survey Board as filed with the Board of Governors of the State Bar in 1949:

> "The first thing that must be made plain is that this so-called 'accreditation rule' is not an accreditation rule at all as this term is used outside the State of Cailfornia." Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar in California—Report of the Special Survey Board, 1949, p. 111.

In other words, as will be noted by referring to Section 6060, Business and Professions Code as quoted above, applicants who may be eligible to take the bar examination in California fall into one of the following three groups:

1. Graduates of an accredited "full time" law school with a three-year curriculum.
2. Graduates of an accredited "part time" law school with a four-year curriculum.
3. Persons who have "studied law diligently and in good faith for at least four years."

It is at once obvious that the statutory provision concerning this third category of students is the basic cause for giving the word "accreditation," as used in California, a different meaning from what is generally understood as "true accreditation." As stated in the Survey Board Report (p. 112):

> "The ordinary use of the term, as applied to a law school in connection with bar examination procedures, defines an accredited school as one whose graduates are permitted to take the bar examination, and an unaccredited school as one whose graduates are not permitted to take the bar examination. This use of the term corresponds to American usage in the field of higher education generally. Thus, an accredited college is a college whose work is recognized by other colleges for purposes of transfer or admission to graduate study; an unaccredited college is one whose work is not so recognized. The California 'accreditation rule' does not bar anyone from taking the students' examination, and so, properly speaking, is not an accreditation rule at all."

It follows that in California the only real distinction between an accredited and an unaccredited law school is that the unaccredited school will provide a four-year curriculum, while an accredited law school, if full time, may have a three-year curriculum. Two added distinctions are, that pursuant to the State Bar rules, students in an unaccredited school must take a first year bar examination, and only accredited schools may advertise themselves as being accredited.

With the above background and statutory situation in mind, the present controversy over the accreditation rule, as hereinafter outlined, may be more readily understood. We select as a starting point for this outline the month of September, 1947, when the Board of Governors of the State Bar of California made provisions for an impartial survey of legal education and admission practices in California, with such survey to include a study of "the effect, if any, upon the standards of legal education in this State of the method presently employed by the Committee of Bar Examiners for the accreditation of law schools." Three eminent lawyers, all residents outside the State of California, were appointed as a Special Survey Board which, after approximately two years of investigation and study, filed its report with the Board of Governors. It may be stated parenthetically that the Board of Governors, in publishing this report in 1949, inserted a foreword to the effect that the report did not necessarily have the approval, or reflect the views, of either the Board of Governors or the Committee of Bar Examiners of the State Bar of California.

The Special Survey Board found that while the accreditation rule has had some useful effect in putting pressure for improvement upon some of the substandard schools in the State (p. 116), the over-all effect of the rule was to make the law school curriculum simply a cram course for the bar examination. In this connection the board states (p. 117):

> "High standards of legal education cannot flourish in such an atmosphere. It is believed that the present California accreditation rule is unsound and undesirable and should be abandoned, and that it should be replaced by a rule which will actually be an accreditation rule in the generally accepted sense of the term, and which will not be based solely on the success of the graduates or former students of a law school in the California bar examinations."

With these observations in mind, the board goes on to recommend what should be done to improve the standards of legal education in California. The recommendations are to the effect that the present accreditation rule should be abandoned, that all California law schools meeting the school standards of the American Bar Association should automatically be fully accredited, and that provisional accreditation be given the Law School of Balboa University, Golden Gate College School of Law, McGeorge College of Law, San Francisco Law School, and Southwestern University Law School. As to these provisional schools, the board recommends, among other things, that they either amalgamate with particular accredited schools or arrange to be operated as part of the University of California or under the State Department of Education. As to the remaining California Law Schools, namely, Lincoln University Law School, Law School of Los Angeles University of Applied Education, and Pacific Coast University Law School, the board recommends in effect that they be eliminated, by recommending finally that only graduates of an accredited school shall be permitted to take the bar examination (with certain exceptions not here pertinent).

With the publication of the survey board report, new impetus was given to those opposed to the present accreditation rule. Further, such publication came at a time when some of the accredited schools found their three-year average moving downward and dangerously close to the 60 percent minimum for accreditation. As a result, much discussion of the pros and cons became evident, and considerable public interest in the subject was aroused by editorials and news articles in the public press. While fully recognizing the limitations inherent in so doing, your subcommittee, in the interest of brevity, here sets forth in summary form the principal views expressed by various interested parties, with its own comments on these views as indicated.

Arguments in Favor of the Present Rule

1. If a law school cannot pass at least 60 percent of its allocated students on a three-year average it should go out of business. (This argument overlooks the fact that under the present rule applicants may be charged against a school although not graduated therefrom. It also overlooks the inconclusiveness of applying a percentage test to a school having a relatively small number of applicants. The principal point overlooked, however, is the admitted fact that the present rule does not put the substandard schools out of business, but rather permits them to flourish.)

2. The rule keeps the schools under pressure to achieve and maintain high standards, with constant attention to elimination of doubtful students. (The educators contend that each class contains a certain marginal block of students, and that approximately 50 percent of that marginal block would be successful in the bar examination and would make good lawyers. Being unable to determine in advance the identity of those in this 50 percent of the marginal block, a school under heavy pressure of the rule would necessarily eliminate the entire marginal block. Further, assuming that a strict elimination policy is to be favored in preventing the doubtful student from a further waste of time and money, the fact remains that a substandard school hopelessly below the accreditation percentage feels no such pressure. While the fate of the unsuspecting student is not necessarily material to the merits of the rule itself, your subcommittee feels that from the legislative viewpoint this factor is entitled to serious consideration.)

Arguments Against the Present Rule

(Reference is first made to the above discussion and quotations from the Report of the Special Survey Board.)

1. Law schools should not be under pressure to think solely in terms of getting its students through the State Bar Examination. The American Bar Association standards of accreditation are accepted in some 40 of the states and should be accepted as sufficient in California. (An opposing contention is that the A. B. A. standards are only "paper standards" in that the association does not adequately police the situation. It should be noted that strict adherence to the A. B. A. standards would probably eliminate such night schools as Golden Gate College and San Francisco Law School which are now accredited under the California rule but which probably could not comply with the A. B. A. requirements concerning full-time professors and extent of library.)

2. True accreditation is generally accepted in the United States and a start should be made in that direction in California by giving continued accreditation to those schools now meeting the A. B. A. standards. (Contra, it is contended that this is simply removing the pressure from the top 10 schools.)

3. The present rule discriminates against California schools in not applying the 60 percent rule to out-of-state schools.

Additional arguments both for and against the rule have been propounded, but the above summary should suffice to point up the extent and nature of the controversy.

Before setting forth the views of your subcommittee as a result of its investigation into this matter, certain additional facts and circumstances related to the problem should be set forth in order to complete the picture to the fullest extent possible. It should first be mentioned that when the Survey Board Report was filed with the State Bar, the Board of Governors referred the report to its Committee of Bar Examiners, and to its Committee for Cooperation Between the Law Schools and the State Bar, with the request that these committees study the report and advise the board of their conclusions concerning the recommendations therein made. Considerable time has been devoted by the two committees to this study, and as a part thereof a questionnaire form was sent to all California law schools seeking their views on the recommendations. Several members of the committees in question formulated suggested changes to the present rule but no final action has been taken by the committees or by the Board of Governors on any of the suggestions, with one exception. The exception is concerned with that portion of the accreditation rule that formerly provided in effect that if an accredited school fell below the 60 percent average, it could petition the Committee of Bar Examiners for a restoration of its accredited status, which petition could be granted by the committee if it found after investigation that the school in question was maintaining adequate standards, etc. On October 21, 1950, this portion of the rule was amended to provide that the committee can, under such circumstances, continue accreditation rather than restore accreditation.

The Committee of Bar Examiners advises this subcommittee that the one amendment adopted as aforesaid does not necessarily constitute the only action that will be taken or recommended, but that further study will be necessary to determine whether additional changes are advisable.

One further related matter came forcibly to the attention of your subcommittee during the course of its investigation. This had to do with the 1950 third year class in attendance at Hastings' College of Law. It appears that out of a total of 150 students in the class, 47 failed of graduation, a mortality of some 31 percent. The rate of failure in the 1949 class had been 19 percent, and in the 1948 class was 14 percent. It was contended by some of the students that this sharp increase in the percentage of third year failures was directly attributable to the accreditation rule, inasmuch as Hastings' present accreditation status is based on a cumulative percentage of 64 percent, only four points above the minimum. While your subcommittee has no reason to believe that the failures in question were not justified, the situation does point up one possible result of the present rule, namely, leaving a failed student, rightly or wrongly, in some doubt as to whether his failure was due entirely to his own lack of demonstrated capabilities, or whether it might be due partly to the bar examination record of students one, two, or three years before him from his school

Conclusions

Your subcommittee is not particularly impressed with the merits of the present California accreditation rule, although it must be conceded that it has probably served some good purpose over past years. Judging from the number of proposals for change submitted by various members of the two State Bar Committees in question, it is probably safe to assume that many persons who have concerned themselves with the problem share this view. The difficulty comes in attempting to find some substitute for the present rule which will better serve the interests of the public as well as improve the standards of legal education and of the legal profession itself.

From the isolated standpoint of raising the standards of the legal profession, with the resulting benefit to the public, it would probably be advisable to keep the present rule, and to restrict bar examination applicants to graduates of accredited schools, so that in a short period of time the four or five leading law schools in the State would be the only survivors in our legal education system. With this result a vast majority of those seeking to study law would find no school facilities available to them in this State, because the top four or five schools are and will continue to be limited as to enrollment and consequently only a relatively small number of highly qualified applicants, with ample private means, would be studying law in California. There would be no part-time study facilities for those who earnestly desire to take up law but who must have an earning capacity at the same time. Your subcommittee feels that such a result would not be in the public interest.

On the other hand, leaving the present rule as it is, without more, permits the substandard law schools to continue in business and absorb a large number of law students who can have little hope of successfully passing a bar examination. It further puts a squeeze on several good law schools in the State who accept qualified students for enrollment and then because of various factors beyond their control find themselves teetering on the edge of a 60 percent record from year to year so that their accreditation under the California rule is constantly in jeopardy.

Your subcommittee is of the opinion that the problem presented cannot be finally solved until additional facilities for good legal education can be created in California. This may eventually be accomplished by having the good day law schools establish night school facilities, and perhaps by adopting some version of the survey board recommendations on this subject. When this is accomplished true accreditation can be adopted in California and the substandard schools will cease to exist. This, however, is a long range solution.

As to the immediate situation, your subcommittee is of the opinion that if the present accreditation rule is to remain in effect for the present, that the obvious inequity of allocating nongraduates to a particular school in computing the percentage of success should be abolished, particularly in those cases where the student did not attend the same school throughout his course of study so that the usual effects of a proper exclusion policy could be a factor. Unless the Committee of Bar Examiners sees fit to abolish this allocation of nongraduates at this time your subcommittee recommends that appropriate legislation be adopted to accomplish this result.

Secondly, some immediate assistance should be given to those good law schools in California who find themselves rocking back and forth on the 60 percent line. The Committee of Bar Examiners apparently feels that it has solved this problem by permitting accreditation to continue on petition by the particular law school falling below 60 percent. Leaving aside the basic question of the legality of such a procedure, the difficulty with this solution would appear to be that in such a case complete authority is vested in the Committee of Bar Examiners to make whatever determination it sees fit, and to impose any terms and conditions on continued accreditation as it deems appropriate. No definitive statement is contained in the rule as to the precise factors involved in such a determination or what would constitute reasonable terms and conditions. It is conceivable that a school which is fully accredited under the A.B.A. rules could still, because of a 59 percent success average, be hamstrung by action of the Committee of Bar Examiners under this procedure. Unless the Committee of Bar Examiners sees fit to more clearly define what requirements would actually be imposed under this situation or will provide by rule that A.B.A. standards schools will automatically continue accredited if they fall below 60 percent, it is suggested that the success average be reduced to perhaps 55 percent for so long as it is necessary to maintain the present rule in force. In making this suggestion we concede that there is no more magic in the number 55 than in the number 60, or vice versa. If these steps are not taken by the Committee of Bar Examiners it is recommended that legislation be adopted to accomplish this result.

In conclusion, it should be stated that various other phases of this most complex problem have been considered by your subcommittee, but to treat with all of them here would unduly lengthen this report. Suffice it is to say that we feel that there is an immediate problem which should be met now, but that in addition California should commence action now to enlarge the facilities of its good law schools so that in the shortest time possible true accreditation can be adopted in the State and the sub-standard schools removed from the legal education picture.

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATIONS OF SUBCOMMITTEE OF JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCESS COMMITTEE APPOINTED FOR THE STUDY OF THE DETECTIVE LICENSE LAW

To the Assembly Interim Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Process:

Your subcommittee duly appointed to study the detective license law, and consisting of George D. Collins, Jr., chairman, Thomas W. Caldecott and Bernard R. Brady, members, makes the following report:

Your subcommittee met in the State Building in San Francisco on November 29, 1950, and in the State Building in Los Angeles on December 13, 1950. Both meetings were well atended and all present were given a full and unrestricted opportunity to be heard. The testimony at said meetings showed that there are two distinct groups required to be licensed under the detective license law, to wit: (1) investigators who engage in investigative work only and seldom, if ever, carry a weapon and (2) private patrolmen performing work which is police in its nature. Even though licensed the person performing private patrol duty or his employees have no legal authority to carry a concealed weapon without a special permit to do so from the public police authority of the county where the private patrolman operates. The special policeman who shot young Cronin and whose action was one of the principal causes leading to the instant investigation was an employee of a licensed person engaged in patrol work. However, the employee had no authority or permit to carry the concealed weapon, a 45 caliber pistol, with which young Cronin was killed. Since the Cronin incident and as a result thereof, the Board of Supervisors of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, passed the following ordinance:

File No. 6357 Ordinance No.——

(SERIES OF 1939)

An ordinance requiring registration with the chief of police by persons carrying firearms or any other deadly or dangerous weapon and providing penalties for the violation of this ordinance; designating Sections 1 to 4 of this ordinance as Sections 840 to 843 of Article 13, Chapter VIII (Police Code), Part II of the San Francisco Municipal Code.

Be it ordained by the People of the City and County of San Francisco:

Section 1. Any person who in the course of employment or his livelihood carries a firearm or any other deadly or dangerous weapon as defined by Section 1291-A, Article 17, Chapter VIII, Part II of the San Francisco Municipal Code, concealed or unconcealed, shall register with the Chief of Police in writing by signed statement, stating the name, occupation, residence and business address of the registrant, his age, height, weight, color of eyes and hair, and reason desired to carry such weapon, and shall submit therewith two sets of fingerprints and one photograph.

Section 2. Any person carrying a firearm or any other deadly or dangerous weapon as defined by said Section 1291-A of the Municipal Code, in the City and County of San Francisco must:

1. Be at least 21 years of age;
2. Be a citizen of the United States;
3. Be of good moral character;
4. Be able to manifest a knowledge of Sections 197, 834, 835, 837 and 847 of the Penal Code of the State of California.

Section 3. Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of Sections 1 and 2 of this ordinance shall be deemed guilty of a disdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding five hundred ($500) dollars, or by imprisonment in the County Jail for not exceeding six (6) months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Section 4. If any section, sentence, clause, or part of Sections 1 to 4 is for any reason held to be unconstitutional, such decision shall not effect the remaining portions of these sections. The Board of Supervisors hereby declares that it would have passed these sections and each section, sentence, clause and part thereof, despite the fact that one or more sections, sentences, clauses or parts thereof be declared unconstitutional.

Section 5 Sections 1 to 4 of this ordinance are hereby designated as Sections 840 to 843 of Article 13, Chapter VIII (Police Code), Part II of the San Francisco Municipal Code.

Licensees performing patrol work operate mainly in the large centers of population in the State.

The District Attorney and Police Department of San Francisco advocate the screening by local police under state law of every person licensed to perform police work of any kind, whether armed or not, both for the purpose of ascertaining whether the background and emotional stability of such person fits him for the work, and also for security reasons. The sheriff's office of Alameda County takes the same stand as the San Francisco peace officers. A number of state licensed persons also favor such screening. All California peace officers as represented by their association believe that the State Detective License Bureau is too free in the issuance of licenses to applicants for a private detective license. The peace officers association says that a license is issued to all applicants except those who have been convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude. Objections, other than conviction of crime, by peace officers are ignored by the bureau. Incidental to your subcommittee's investigation there arose a number of questions relative to permits to carry concealed weapons and the meaning of a number of sections of Chapter 339 of the Statutes of 1923, the Dangerous Weapons Control Law of 1923. One question is whether a legal permit to carry a concealed weapon is necessary, even though it may not be concealed, provided it is capable of being concealed about the person. For instance, a revolver carried in open view in a holster, but which may be removed from the holster and put in the carrier's pocket or under an automobile seat, or in the glove compartment or elsewhere in an automobile. The other question is whether a permit issued by the authorities in one county of the State should be recognized in another county thereof. As a matter of comity the peace officers of counties other than the issuing county have been recognizing the permits. However, a written opinion given your subcommittee by the Legislative Counsel holds that a license issued in any county of the State under Section 8 of said Dangerous Weapons Control Law is valid throughout the State. There is considerable difference of opinion among the district attorneys of the State on the above question. Many municipalities of Los Angeles County as well as the county itself require those licensed under the State Detective License Law also to be licensed under local ordinance. San Francisco has no such requirement for a local license.

As a result of the alleged unjustified shooting of a junior college student by an auxiliary policeman in the Highland Park area of Los Angeles a few days after the shooting of young Cronin in San Francisco, the auxiliary phase of police work was also investigated by your subcommittee. Chief of Police Parker of the City of Los Angeles was not favorably impressed with auxiliary police. He said they could be divided into three categories as follows: (1) the foreign born, (2) the frustrated, and (3) those with a desire to perfom a public service. Chief of Police Morris of the City of Pasadena said that he required members of his auxiliary police force to have all the qualifications of the regular policeman except the limitation of maximum age. If a sufficiently numerous auxiliary police force can be recruited with the limitations and requirements imposed by Pasadena, then those limitations and requirements should be generally applied throughout the State.

Recommendations

Your subcommittee recommends:

(1) That everyone, armed or unarmed, specially employed in exercising police duties over or in connection with the public be screened by the police authorities of the city or county where such person operates.

(2) That said Dangerous Weapons Control Law be amended so as to obviate the uncertainties now existing in such law and brought to light by the testimony before your subcommittee.

REPORT OF SUBCOMMITTEE ON TRAFFIC AND MOTOR VEHICLE VIOLATIONS

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

Hon. Ralph M. Brown
Chairman of Judiciary Committee

DEAR MR. BROWN: Pursuant to House Resolution No. 232 of the 1949 Legislature, the Subcommittee on Traffic and Motor Vehicle Violations of the Assembly Interim Committee on Judicial System and Judicial Process does hereby submit its report.

The preliminary report of this committee was heretofore submitted to the Legislature and references in this report will be made to said preliminary report which is found in the Journal of the Assembly, Budget Session 1950, page 608.

The accompanying report contains a review of the activities of the committee subsequent to the date of the preliminary report and its recommendations to the Legislature.

Respectfully submitted,

WM. ROSENTHAL, Chairman
JULIAN BECK
H. ALLEN SMITH

INTRODUCTORY

The preliminary report of this committee sets forth in some detail the objectives of the committee, its proposed procedures and the matters which were the subject of its investigation. In brief, however, this committee was created for the purpose of studying, analyzing and making recommendations upon the problem as to whether traffic courts or any of them within the State of California were utilizing the traffic laws for revenue-producing purposes rather than for the administration of justice.

At an early stage of its investigation, the committee determined that the answer to this question depended upon a wide variety of factors. Generally speaking, traffic laws are enforced by the use of fines and bail forfeitures rather than through the use of jail sentences. Some indication of the volume of cases handled is set forth in the preliminary report. Additional information taken from the Twelfth Biennial Report of the Judicial Council of California is attached as Appendix A to this report and gives further indications of the problems studied. It is expected that the next biennial report of the Judicial Council will bring these studies down to date and for this reason, the committee deemed it a duplication of effort to make an original compilation of these figures or to contact individual judges. The comprehensive and extremely careful work of the Judicial Council in the handling of these reports indicates that identical work performed by this committee would be a needless expense.

This statistical information and other reports to which reference will later be made show conclusively that the volume of traffic cases handled as compared to all other types of criminal matters is such as to throw the entire judicial system of the State of California out of balance. The committee, therefore, deemed it relatively immaterial that a given traffic court permitted the administration of justice to suffer in order to increase its revenue from traffic fines because at an early date it became clear that the entire motor vehicle code and traffic administration procedure should be completely revised and in this revision, appropriate disposition made to secure the administration of justice rather than the collection of revenue.

As indicated in its preliminary report, the committee is cognizant of the tremendous progress made through the various studies of the Judicial Council of the State of California under the direction of the Honorable Phil S. Gibson, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. In this connection, reference was made in the preliminary report as follows:

> "In order to avoid duplication of effort, this subcommittee is correlating its investigation with the work of the Judicial Council. A wealth of material compiled by the Judicial Council of California has been made available for analysis and tabulation, which is particularly helpful with respect to analyzing traffic violations and the disposition of traffic cases as compared with the disposition of other criminal cases. The proposed plan for reorganization of the California inferior courts submitted to the Legislature by the council in 1949, which has been approved and is now being submitted to the voters of the State at the 1950 general election, will, it is believed, remove many of the defects in the present system of handling traffic cases. This is clearly indicated in a report on the proposed plan, dated December 30, 1949, which states as follows:
> "The county will pay the salaries of the judges and attaches of both the municipal and justice courts, and will be required to furnish suitable courtrooms and supplies for such courts. Cities will be relieved of the obligation to support courts financially. The money derived from fines and forfeitures collected by the existing inferior courts greatly exceeds the cost of their maintenance and represents an important source of revenue to reimburse the cities and counties for money expended for law enforcement, traffic safety, and street improvement or maintenance. Under the proposed plan, fines and forfeitures collected by the courts will be divided between the county and the cities therein largely according to which political subdivision employed the officer making the arrest. Fines and forfeitures following arrests made by state and county officers will be paid to the county. When arrests are made by city officers, except in the case of Vehicle Code violations, 75 percent of the fines and forfeitures will be paid to the city, and the remaining 25 percent will go to the county as partial reimbursement for the cost of maintaining the court. Fines and forfeitures collected under the Vehicle Code following arrests made by city officers will continue to be paid to the city. This formula was adopted by both city and county representatives. If experience shows that the percentages involved therein are unfair to either the cities or the counties, the Legislature may remedy the situation at any time."

Since the publication of the foregoing, the plan for reorganization of the inferior courts was approved by the voters at the 1950 General Election (Assembly Constitutional Amendment No. 49, amending Article VI of the California Constitution), and, therefore, the broad outline of an entire new court system was established for the State of California. It is understood that although this constitutional amendment validated the acts of the 1949 Session of the Legislature relating to municipal and justice courts and to judicial districts (Chapters 1286 and 1510 to 1518 inclusive of the Statutes of 1949), considerable additional legislation will be necessary to place into operation these new courts and to provide the details of their operation. It is this additional legislation which the committee believes should be so designed as to present the maximum number of improvements to correct those problems arising out of traffic and motor vehicle operation. At the present time, studies are still continuing as to the content of this legislation, primarily by the Judicial Council, but by other committees as well. Furthermore, the League of California Cities has entered into discussions with the Judicial Council regarding some management details of these new courts and it is understood that a pilot city or cities will be used for the purpose of establishing experience as to the best and most efficient manner of operation. It is certain that all of this material and experience will not be available for the 1951 Session of the Legislature but this committee has indicated its willingness to consult and work with the Judicial Council in order that it may aid in the solution of some of these fundamental problems.

In the light of these continuing studies and for reasons which will hereafter more fully appear, the committee has undertaken supplementary research in an attempt to clarify and set out the entire problem of traffic and motor vehicle operation. This was deemed particularly necessary because all of the investigations and public hearings of the committee have indicated that there is unending confusion both as to the nature of the problem to be solved as well as suggested solutions.

THE PROBLEM OF TRAFFIC AND MOTOR VEHICLES

There are innumerable publications upon the subject of traffic and motor vehicle problems, a few of which are contained in a bibliography attached hereto as Appendix B. In addition, there are innumerable agencies and committees working in connection with all or some portions thereof. However, the committee's research has indicated that these publications and the national as well as local committees and agencies working in connection therewith have assumed a common pattern, largely through the untiring efforts of a group of nation-wide experts who have been consistently working on the traffic problem for many years. An additional indication of the nature and scope of the problem, as well as the variety of interests involved, is the meeting of the Governor's Conference on Traffic and Motor Vehicle Problems held in Sacramento on the seventh and eighth days of December, 1950. A list of the officers and groups represented at these conferences and the resolutions adopted thereby is attached to this report as Appendix C.

The basic origin of much of the work which is being done at the present time, as well as the basic origin of much of the printed material now available, is in a study by Mr. George Warren, sponsored by the National Committee on Traffic Law Enforcement as well as the Automotive Safety Foundation. This study was completed in 1940 and contains a comprehensive analysis of the basic problems involved as well as specific recommendations. The pattern thereby adopted has become so well-known and has been the subject of so many supplementary conferences that it is many times used without quotation as being the basic analysis of traffic law enforcement in the United States.

Because this committee believes the traffic and motor vehicle problem will never be solved without a careful analysis of all of its basic fundamentals, and because the pattern referred to above has been approved by the National Conference of Judicial Councils, The Section of Criminal Law, the Section of Judicial Administration, the Junior Bar Conference, and the House of Delegates of the American Bar Association, the Committee on Judges and Prosecutors and the Street and Highway Section of the National Safety Council, and the International Association of Chiefs of Police, there is hereinafter set out the substance of the foregoing study and supplemental work in connection therewith so that in its final conclusion and recommendations, the committee will be able to accurately pinpoint the problems involved as they affect the State of California.

At this point, language from the President's Highway Safety Conference Committee on Enforcement (1946), regarding the Warren study, is appropriate:

> "The recommendations made at that time have today the same soundness and there exists the same urgent need for their adoption. They are therefore concurred in at this time To further their adoption, each state should sponsor state-wide and district traffic court conferences in accordance with the national program."

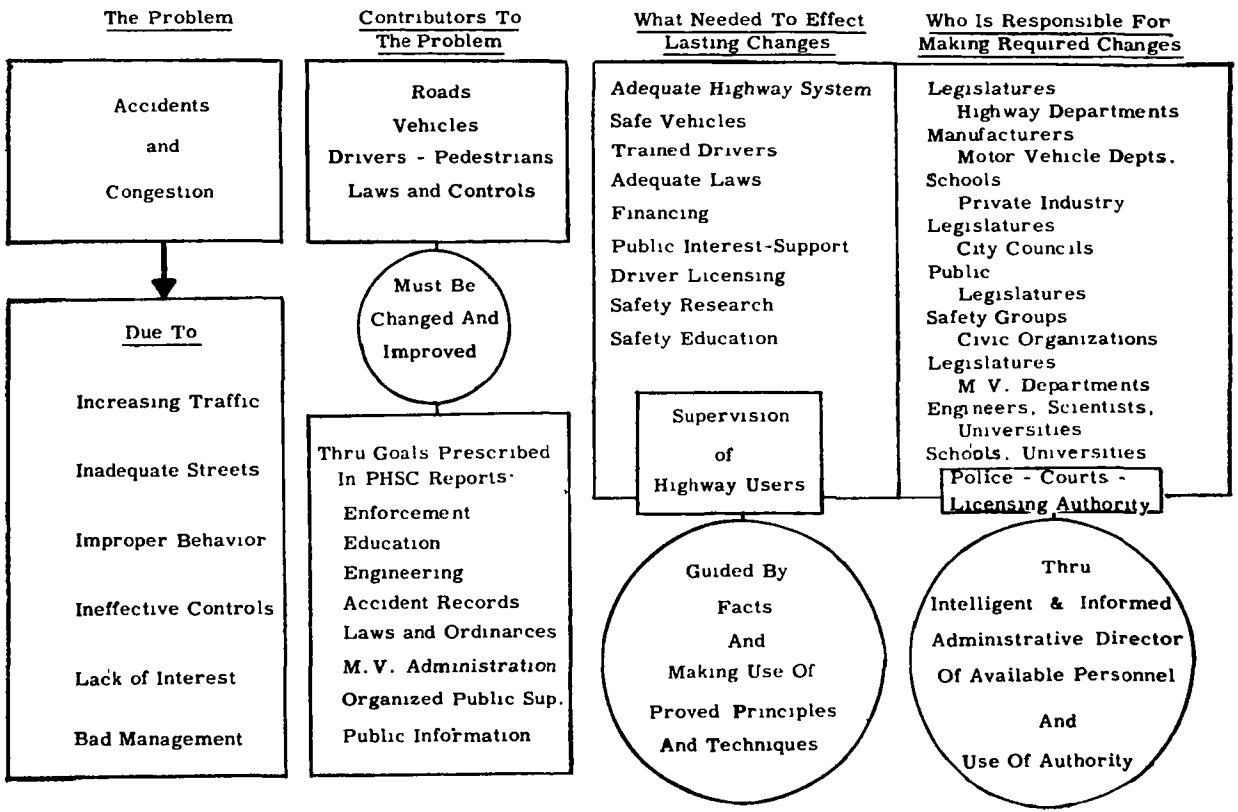
Accordingly, there is attached to this report as Appendix D an analysis of the problems as set forth by Mr. Warren with headings corresponding to his chapter headings in the survey. Furthermore, because of its importance in the entire field, brief reference is made in this portion of the appendix to the work of the Traffic Institute-Northwestern University.

It will be observed that under the general pattern which has become current usage, the problems of traffic and motor vehicles are generally segregated as follows:

1. The courts where traffic cases are tried,
2. Traffic court procedure,
3. Violations bureaus,
4. Traffic court administration,
5. Physcial facilities and clerical aids,
6. Traffic court personnel,
7. Conducting the traffic court,
8. Avoiding the "fix,"
9. Punishing the traffic law violator,
10. The keeping of records,
11. Qualifications of justices,
12. Recommendation that traffic matters be handled by a special traffic court.

It is apparent that many, if not all, of these problems are interrelated and some measure of this inter-relation is indicated by the following chart prepared by the Traffic Institute, Northwestern University.

THE TRAFFIC ACCIDENT PREVENTION AND CONTROL PROBLEM



In considering the inter-related nature of these problems, the committee has determined that the present system of traffic law enforcement gives every encouragement to the use of traffic courts for revenue-producing purposes. The next question, therefore, was to determine what improvements had been made by the court reorganization plan.

THE EFFECT OF THE COURT REORGANIZATION PLAN ON THE BASIC PROBLEM

As previously indicated, Assembly Constitutional Amendment No. 49, amending Article VI of the Constitution and the Municipal and Justice Courts Act of 1949, which was validated by the passage of the constitutional amendment, has pointed the way toward the solutions to some of the problems outlined.

Under the municipal and justice courts act (1949), municipal and justice courts are given jurisdiction "in all criminal cases amounting to a misdemeanor" where the offense was committed within the county in which the court is established, except in those cases where other courts are given exclusive jurisdiction. By the terms of Assembly Constitutional Amendment No. 49 (1949), amending Article VI of the California Constitution, "there shall be no other court inferior to the superior court." Thus, though the specialized "traffic courts" which have been urged by some are not created, the judicial responsibility for the enforcement of traffic laws has been vested in but two types of courts. It can be expected that with the great volume of cases involving traffic violations being concentrated in but two types of courts, each will to a substantial extent, become a specialist in the field of traffic law enforcement. With the establishment of a sufficient number of such courts the oft-heard complaint of too numerous and too varied duties of the courts charged with handling traffic cases should be without basis.

Another step in eliminating a salient defect in the system of traffic law enforcement is taken by the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure 144, which reads as follows:

> "144. If suitable rooms for holding the superior, municipal or justice courts and the chambers of the judges of said courts are not provided in any county by the supervisors thereof, together with the attendants, furniture, fuel, lights and stationery, sufficient for the transaction of business, the courts, or the judge or judges thereof, may direct the sheriff of the county to provide such rooms, attendants, furniture, fuel, lights and stationery; and the expenses incurred, certified by the judge or judges to be correct, are a charge against the county treasury and must be paid out of the general fund thereof."

Formerly, this section applied only to the holding of the superior courts, no provision being made for the holding of courts inferior to such court. They were left to shift for themselves with no authority or responsibility to demand facilities adequate for the dispensing of justice with dignity and honor which, alone, commands the respect of those before the court. Hence, frequently heard complaints of "court" being held in a butcher shop, bedroom or even on the judge's way into town, will no longer have any validity. Indeed, by Section 17 of the act, sessions of the municipal and justice courts are to be held in those places which the board of supervisors shall designate for that purpose.

The maintenance of complete records of proceedings has long been considered important in the evaluation of the effectiveness of the court and in serving as a basis for a report to the public without whose support any system of traffic law enforcement would be ineffective. The maintenance of records must depend in the last analysis upon the number and quality of personnel into whose hands they are given. The high quality and adequate numbers of record keeping personnel would seem to have been assured by the Legislature in providing that in the case of a vacancy in the clerk's or marshal's office, "all appointments to fill vacancies as provided in this section shall be from among the three highest of those certified to the appointing authority by such civil service commission to be eligible to the office or position to be filled. Such eligible lists shall be obtained as the result of competitive examinations given to determine the relative fitness of those taking it for the position to be filled." Where there is no civil service commission in the county, appointment shall be made subject to confirmation by the judge or by a majority of the judges of the court or by the judge senior in service where there is an equal division of the judges. In those instances where, due to increase in business or other emergency, the regular personnel are unable to promptly and faithfully discharge the duties of the municipal court, the clerk or marshal is empowered with the approval of the judge to appoint additional deputies. (Section 35)

It seems fundamental that those dispensing justice in any form should at least be trained in the law. However, surveys have cited the tremendous numbers of judges dispensing justice in minor courts throughout the Nation who have had no legal training whatever. In California, as a result of a 1947 survey conducted by the Judicial Council, it was found that of the approximately 736 judges of Class A township justice courts and below, 413 were not attorneys. Under the Municipal and Justice Court Act of 1949, save for the "blanketing in" clause by which those having served in existing superseded courts for five years prior to the effective date of the amendment are made eligible, only those having been admitted to practice before the Supreme Court for a period of at least five years are permitted to act as municipal court judges, and the same rule applies to judges of the new justice court except that as an alternative, they must have passed a qualifying examination under regulations prescribed by the Judicial Council. Also the public is assured of a greater number of full-time judges with adequate compensation.

The salary of the judges is to be paid and determined by the board of supervisors in whose county the court is established. The fact that such salary must not be fixed below the minimum to be set by the Legislature (Sections 25, 30) indicates that it is the legislative intent that judges shall be compensated in an amount sufficient to permit them to devote full time to their judicial positions and that the positions will attract those whose abilities command greater remuneration.

In this connection it should be noted that the problem of the disposition of traffic fines has also received appropriate attention. The disposition of fines and forfeitures determined by Section 771 of the Vehicle Code as amended (Stats. 1949, Ch. 1517) provides a minimum of incentive for the enforcement of traffic laws as a method of raising revenue.

All such fines and forfeitures are to be paid to the county or city special road funds, depending on the location of the offense and the employer of the arresting officer. Under prior statutes the fines also went to the "special road funds" but the amendment provided appropriate proportioning of these funds depending upon factors which do not necessarily encourage fines for revenue purposes.

The committee questions, however, whether as a matter of principle there should be any relationship whatsoever between the enforcement of the law and the revenue derived from fines and forfeitures. In any event, it is suggested that consideration be given to a remission of some of the funds received from fines and forfeitures to the State since it appears that under the present methods of operation, the Highway Patrol is expending funds for enforcement which are in no way returned as a result of convictions.

Provision for Audit

It does not appear that existing statutory law or the Municipal and Justice Court Act of 1949 makes any adequate provision for auditing the funds received from traffic fines and forfeitures, nor does there appear to be any state-wide system for the auditing of the use of these moneys and their ultimate disposition through the special funds wherein they are to be deposited. It is suggested that this is the proper function of the State Controller and that regulations should be adopted requiring audits by this officer.

INTEGRATION AND CORRELATION

It has been noted that the court reorganization plan has taken several very important steps forward in the solution of problems arising out of the administration of traffic laws, but the amplification of these statutes will continue to be the subject of additional research and experimentation. In this connection, the committee believes that this further research of the Judicial Council and such groups as the League of California Cities, and the County Supervisors Association, should be integrated with the substantive law.

Further, as has previously been indicated, traffic and motor vehicle problems in general, in addition to being the most vexing problems confronting the State of California today, have also been receiving the attention of a wide group or rather a wide series of divergent groups within the State. The sheer number of these organizations as well as a partial lack of clarity as to the aims of each has in some instances resulted in an overlapping of work and duplication of effort, as well as a series of partial solutions which, however, have not always been related.

The meeting of the Governor's Conference on Traffic Problems has already been referred to in this report and the list of the groups and agencies invited to participate in this conference, which is attached as an appendix to this report, gives a general indication of the divergence of views which it sought to reconcile or at least consider in arriving at an ultimate solution.

Also, the Senate Interim Committee on Traffic and Motor Vehicle Violations has been making a comprehensive and thorough study of the entire problem throughout the State of California. It is understood that this committee will have a series of specific recommendations to make to the 1951 Legislature which, unquestionably, will also suggest improvements in some segments of the law.

In addition, many other interim committees of both the Senate and the Assembly have been working upon problems which are related to the fundamental questions being considered by this committee. A noteworthy example of this latter group are committees such as the Senate Committee on Streets, Highways and Bridges, under the chairmanship of the Honorable Randolph Collier.

All of these factors are referred to herein to illustrate what this committee believes to be the basic problem in the final solution to the complexities of traffic and motor vehicle operation, to wit: The correlation of all the material which has been and is being gathered so that a comprehensive solution can be recommended which will serve as the basic guide for a complete consideration of all of the inter-related problems at the same time in order that the present patchwork will not continue.

The committee considers that it has in the past been impossible to undertake this task due to fundamental weaknesses in the court structure. However, now that a partial solution of this problem has been obtained, it is timely to effect this integration. Furthermore, such a program is believed feasible for the first time due to the wealth of material which has been gathered by other committees, agencies and groups in all of the fields related to motor vehicles. A duplication of some segments of this work by this committee would have been expensive and unnecessary but it is believed that all of these studies are now at the point where they should and can be correlated by this or a similarly constituted Assembly committee.

As an example, this committee believes that the entire motor vehicle code must be reconsidered, but that such reconsideration would of itself cause confusion unless it is related to some of the other problems, such as administration of justice in the courts, the education of motor vehicle drivers, and the re-engineering of our highway system.

The committee, therefore, recommends that a subcommittee be reconstituted for the purpose, among other things, of correlating the work being done by all agencies and groups upon the subject of motor vehicle laws and procedure and to integrate the whole with the work of the Judicial Council prior to the adoption of detailed new procedures under the new court structure. The committee further recommends that prior to such integration, any legislation proposed at the 1951 Session of the Legislature be considered in the light of this fundamental and hereafter will point to some inherent fallacies in the present general pattern which it is believed are adding to the problem rather than pointing to its ultimate solution.

SUGGESTED LINES OF INQUIRY FOR FURTHER STUDY

The committee believes that while much of the work being done, such as the work of the Judicial Council, is proceeding toward a proper solution of a segment of the problem, nevertheless, there are some fundamentals which some students and even experts in the field have failed to place in the proper prospective.

Enforcement

As has previously been indicated, the present pattern in the consideration of traffic problems has referred in general terms to Enforcement as one segment of the three "E's," the other two being Education and Engineering. However, under the general subject of enforcement there is usually considered the work of the police officers, the work of prosecutors and the work of courts, usually terminating in a recommendation that special traffic courts be set up. It is suggested that although this method may be necessary under our present structure, nevertheless it results in several concepts which investigation may show to be fundamentally unsound. For example:

1. This committee is not aware of any other field of law in which the work of arresting officers is considered in the same category with the work of those responsible for a judicial interpretation.

2. By way of example, the committee has received information as to the operation of the Juvenile Department of the Los Angeles Police Department. Under that system when a juvenile under the age of 18 years is cited for a traffic violation, he is summoned to appear with his parents before the juvenile officer for a hearing. This officer is a member of the police force and although it is stated he exercises no judicial authority, he may, if the case warrants, do any one of the following things:

(a) Take the juvenile's license away if the parent or guardian consents.
(b) Certify the juvenile to the State Motor Vehicle Department for hearing and possible revocation or suspension of license.
(c) Certify the juvenile to the juvenile court for such action as the court deems appropriate.

The committee has failed to find any statutory authority for this proceeding, although in fairness, must state that the officers conducting the program are exceedingly well-qualified and from all appearances are doing an excellent job with the primary purpose being to impress upon both the parent and the child the seriousness of the offense. In this case, then, the element of education appears in the transaction, which takes on something of that nature as distinguished from a normal criminal proceeding.

3. The committee has been informed that there will again be presented to the 1951 Legislature bills similar to those presented in 1949 providing in substance that insofar as traffic offenses are concerned, there shall be commissioners appointed by the juvenile court to handle these cases, presumably with the idea in mind of incorporating something of the foregoing system within the framework of the juvenile court. However, there are many who believe that juveniles should be treated just as adults in traffic cases on the theory that if they are old enough to be licensed, they are old enough to assume the full adult responsibility for their traffic accidents. This concept proceeds upon the assumption that the minor will be more severely dealt with in the traffic court than he will be under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court and perhaps this may be true under the present structure. However, the committee believes that a serious traffic offense such as driving while drunk, hit and run, etc., cannot be differentiated on theory from other serious crimes such as robbery, etc., and in this latter category it has become recognized jurisprudence for minors to receive special treatment. The committee, therefore, feels that thorough investigation should be made and correlated with the work of such groups as the Probation and Parole Officers Association, so that traffic offenses by minors may be segregated into those wherein the minor requires special treatment from those where the offense is of such a character as may present the same problem for the minor as it does for the adult. The committee doubts whether it is possible to make a sound recommendation upon the matter of the present method of handling a juvenile traffic offender in some areas without this line of demarcation being established. The committee further believes, however, that once this line of demarcation is established, then those offenses where the minor does not require special treatment may be considered with the problems of adult traffic offenders which will be subsequently discussed in this report.

4. From time to time legislation has been suggested wherein the highway patrol officers, at least at district headquarters, should be permitted to accept bail. In many instances under the uniform bail schedules in the larger communities, police officers in traffic bureaus in fact accept bail as well as so-called "bail forfeitures."

5 Uniform bail schedules and bail forfeitures have been recommended on the theory that there should be no differential in the amount of bail or the amount of forfeiture or fine, at least when no evidence is taken. However, the committee's attention has not been directed to any other field of criminal law in which this is a permitted practice and, in fact, believes a thorough investigation should be undertaken as to the effect of this practice upon a general disrespect for the underlying purpose of bail, which in other lines of criminal law is merely to insure the presence of a defendant. The committee questions whether such use of the bail, "bail forfeiture" and fine create any deterrent toward future violations. The lack of considering an individual defendant with his past offenses, if any, as to the levying of a fine or forfeiture and the lack of any consideration of these and other important factors in the fixing of the bail, may be creating other problems which will have serious consequences upon the whole field of jurisprudence.

Penal Code 1275 provides as follows: "In fixing the amount of bail, the judge or magistrate shall take into consideration the seriousness of the offense, the previous criminal record of the defendant, and the probability of his appearing at the trial or hearing of the case. * * *"

See also Motor Vehicle Code Sections 738c and 739e.

6. Examples similar to those above mentioned could be repeated interminably as a deviation from normal procedures in the case of criminal law and prosecution and in many instances, the deviation creates in and of itself additional problems. Thus, for example, the bail which may be casually fixed in accordance with a schedule of bails and as casually forfeited, might become the basis for a revocation of license under the so-called "negligent operator" statutes since Vehicle Code Section 312 reads as follows:

> "For the purpose of this chapter, a plea of guilty or a judgment of guilty, whether probation is granted or not, or a forfeiture of bail, constitutes a conviction of any of the crimes mentioned herein."

This procedure is mentioned here merely to indicate that it is not only possible, but probable, that a person could have disciplinary proceedings taken against him insofar as his driver's license is concerned without at any time ever having had a judicial determination of his guilt or innocence. It has been argued that in each of the cases in which bail was forfeited, the defendant has had the opportunity for trial should he choose to demand it, but the committee believes that a complete investigation will be necessary to ascertain how many persons by virtue of being permitted to forfeit bail, either fail to recognize that the offense might terminate in serious consequences, or feel it is cheaper and less trouble to forfeit the bail than to raise a plea of innocence even though the individual may feel that as to the particular offense he is innocent. To further illustrate some of the basic problems in this entire field, the argument is made by many in response to the foregoing suggestions that it really doesn't make any difference because every person is guilty of many offenses for which he is not caught and, therefore, there is no real miscarriage of justice. The committee's attention has not been called to any other field of criminal law in which this argument is deemed to have any weight.

The committee wishes at this point to most emphatically state that it does not intend to criticize any department or group by pointing out what it considers to be the foregoing incongruities. Rather, the committee has given these examples to illustrate its major point in this report and that is that an entire new approach must be made to the problem of traffic laws. This new approach is mentioned in connection with the foregoing examples to show that because of practical difficulties, an entire body of motor vehicle jurisprudence is being developed which may have violated many fundamental judicial concepts, creating thereby new problems. These, in turn, have been the subject of great study, much of which can be avoided by a different concept.

Education

While the committee recognizes that the problem of the education of an automobile driver is exceptionally important in the entire field of traffic and motor vehicle law, most of the matters implied in this educational program are beyond the scope of the activities of this committee. In passing, however, the committee wishes to note that its attention has not been called to any group, committee or agency which has assumed the responsibility for the coordination of this education program. As a consequence, although recognizing some of the tremendous work that has been done in this field, the committee questions whether this program should not be more closely correlated under the direction of some specific organization. It is believed that programs in schools (where on January 1, 1951, it will become a mandatory course of instruction), programs for adults and organizational drives or promotions should be coordinated.

However, the committee does feel that the concept of education of the motor vehicle driver also involves factors directly related to the administration of justice A specific example of this inter-relation is found in the so-called "negligent operator statutes."

The "negligent operator" is defined and the penalties for this crime are set forth in Section 271.2 of the Motor Vehicle Code. This section reads as follows:

> "Any person who has been convicted on four or more occasions in a consecutive period of 12 months, or six or more occasions within a consecutive period of 24 months, or eight or more occasions within a consecutive period of 36 months, of violations of the provisions of the Vehicle Code involving the safe operation of vehicles on the highway and which are by law required to be reported to the department, shall be prima facie presumed to be 'a negligent operator of a motor vehicle ' In determining the above number of convictions any conviction of Sections 332, 481, 483, 502, or 505 of this code shall be counted as two convictions. Any accident in which the operator is deemed by the department to be responsible shall be counted the same as one conviction."

This statute is apparently part of a so-called "driver improvement program," one of the major purposes of which is to educate drivers of vehicles within this State. The Department of Motor Vehicles has caused to be prepared a study of 1,039 negligent operators which describes in general the aims and purposes of the department. (Information received from the department indicates that this study was prepared in cooperation with the Senate Committee on Traffic and Motor Vehicle Violations.) In this connection, portions of this study are hereinafter quoted:

Purpose

The purpose of this study is to determine to what extent, if any, the driving records of negligent operators improve following an interview with a representative of the Department of Motor Vehicles, State of California.

A further purpose is to compare the effectiveness of the types of corrective action, if any, taken by the department as a result of such interview.

The above stated objectives, if attained, will serve to some extent as an indication of any degree of success obtained regarding one phase —that concerning negligent operators—of the driver improvement program.

Scope

This study deals exclusively with the driving records, based upon convictions for violating traffic laws involving the safe operation of vehicles, of 1,039 drivers.

In essence, these driving records for like periods before and after an interview, are compared In other words, the period of one year immediately preceding the contact is compared with that of one year immediately following for each case in the study. Similarly are compared the two-year periods immediately before and after the interview.

Certain statistical conclusions, as presented herein, deal with such comparisons on a group and on an individual basis, each considered in the light of departmental action taken as a result of the interview.

It is hoped and anticipated that a similar study dealing with driving records based upon accident-involvement and accident-responsibility will be forthcoming.

Departmental Procedure

For several years the Department of Motor Vehicles has been developing within its Division of Drivers' Licenses a program dealing with the driving habits of California drivers. This program, called the Driver Improvement Program, goes beyond the well established driver licensing procedures of vision, law and driving tests, seeking to study traffic conviction and accident records, to effect improvement of driving habits, and to eliminate unfit and unsafe drivers from the highways. One phase of the program deals with physical and mental cases. Another deals with the re-examination of drivers who may be incompetent or inadequate And one phase, the one with which this study is concerned, deals with drivers whose records indicate they are potential or presumably negligent operators.

The statutes define a negligent operator, in effect, as a person convicted on four or more occasions in a consecutive 12-month period, on six occasions in a 24-month period, or on eight occasions in a 36-month period, of traffic law violations involving the safe operation of motor vehicles. A certain few offenses count double and any accident in which the driver is deemed responsible by the department is counted as one conviction.

Another statute of long standing requires every California court to report convictions of the Vehicle Code, except those concerning parking, to the Department of Motor Vehicles Similarly, all law enforcement agencies are required to report accidents involving death or personal injury. It is then possible for the department, by a check of its records, to determine individuals who qualify as negligent operators under the above definition, or whose records suggest that after further investigation of accidents in which they have been involved as drivers, they might so qualify.

Under law and procedures operative during the period covered by this study, September 15, 1947 to March 31, 1948, such presumable or potential negligent operators were called to an interview with a special drivers' license examiner of the department. During the interview, conviction records were discussed, basic causes sought and steps toward improved driving habits and records suggested.

At the conclusion of each interview, recommendation was made by the special examiner concerned as to corrective action to be taken by the department. Such initial corrective action consisted of one of the following:

(b) Warning Letter. A form letter or an especially composed letter indicating the need for an improved driving record sent to the subject by the department.

(c) Probation. An administrative probationary period lasting not less than one year, whereof the usual condition is to obey all provisions of the Vehicle Code.

(d) Suspension and Probation. A period of suspension of the driving period as a condition of probation; such period not to exceed six months (often 30, 60, or 90 days). Such suspension is regarded as corrective and preventive, rather than punitive, action. (This action is sometimes referred to as "Suspension and Probation.")

(e) Revocation. A withdrawing of the driving privilege for a period of not less than one year. (It should be noted that this action was not taken in any of the cases under study.)

The charts and other information regarding actual driver improvement and the details of the study appear to have real significance but are not attached to this committee report in order to avoid unduly prolonging the same.

The foregoing departmental operation of a portion of the Driver Improvement Program has been quoted at length in order to illustrate the fundamental concept with which the same is undertaken, which appears to be primarily educational in character. However, as a judiciary subcommittee, this committee is concerned with the possible effects of this program upon an individual insofar as his basic rights to a judicial hearing are concerned. In this connection, the committee believes that as an educational device, the procedure under the negligent operator statute is having a desirable effect and the several thousand cases per month which the department handles would cast an undue burden upon the courts if any attempt were made to have these preliminary hearings in a judicial atmosphere. Further, such an attempt to have preliminary proceedings under the direction of a court would further confuse the fundamental distinction between the judicial and administrative function.

However, although this committee is fully aware of the interpretation that a driver's license is not a right but a privilege which can be taken away, it nevertheless believes that this "privilege" under our system of society has become a tremendous economic factor which, to some classes of persons, might amount to a deprivation of a means of earning a livelihood. Thus, with the almost complete use of motor vehicles for transportation to and from work the revocation of a driver's license would be a deprivation of serious consequences, particularly in view of the fact that many persons live in locations not reached by public transportation. Therefore, the committee recommends that the negligent operator statute be so amended as to provide that no driver's license may be revoked or suspended for a period longer than 30 days without a judicial proceeding. It is proposed that these judicial proceedings be initiated and conducted as in the case of any other criminal proceeding by complaint of the Motor Vehicle Department. It is further proposed that at these proceedings, the court may consider any factor in the individual offenses which have cumulated to the necessary number providing the basis for revocation or suspension beyond 30 days including the issue of whether the individual convictions were the result of trials or hearings or whether they were the result of bail forfeitures. It is further proposed that at the hearing upon revocation, the court may consider all prior steps taken by the Department of Motor Vehicles and previous warnings, probations or conditional licenses issued by the department in order to fix and determine whether the individual should be considered as a "negligent operator" and, if so, the appropriate penalty therefor, which may include in addition to revocation or suspension, of the license, any other penalties in the nature of a fine or jail sentence, either cumulatively or in the alternative.

Although there may be some doubt as to whether it is a proper function of a judiciary subcommittee, this committee feels that it should state that the use of the normal judicial process for the revocation of drivers' licenses or their suspension longer than 30 days will have probably a greater educational effect upon the public than the present procedure. Although there are some 50 or 60 revocations a month by the department, it is not likely that any large segment of the public is aware of this penalty or at least the frequency with which it is being considered. On the other hand, if these cases in their final determination were handled as any other criminal procedure, it is most likely that the local press and others would report them with the attendant deterrent effect upon the public and this crime which should become one of the more serious involving motor vehicles, would then be segregated from a mere departmental proceeding and instead be clothed with all of the judicial dignity which surrounds a prosecution for a real criminal offense.

Engineering

The committee believes that the problems of engineering are those more properly studied by other groups or committees who have specialized more in these fields. However, in passing, it should be observed that changes of engineering techniques in turn require changes in motor vehicle regulations. For example, the high speed freeways have created a whole new pattern in the handling of traffic including new types of turns and new types of perils. Each of these new developments requires complete recommendations by qualified engineers before appropriate traffic regulations can be adopted. It is believed, however, that sufficient experience has been had with the new highway designs so that if proper correlation is had in an overall future study as is indicated early in this report, that firm and continuing regulations may be adopted which will be more realistic in connection with modern highway development

HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 100

House Resolution No. 100, adopted by the Assembly on April 13, 1950, reads as follows:

"Relating to the administration of justice in traffic violation cases

WHEREAS, It has come to the attention of the Legislature through articles appearing in newspapers from the Los Angeles area that the records of certain traffic violators have escaped the attention of courts in dealing with second and subsequent violations by such individuals thus resulting in their being treated as first offenders whereas in fact the records of such individuals may show previous serious and aggravated traffic violations; and

WHEREAS, The failure to identify such persons as having been previously convicted of traffic violations has resulted in the miscarriage of justice and has brought discredit upon the courts and the administration of justice; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of California, That in addition to the duties heretofore given and imposed upon the Assembly Interim Committee on the Judicial System and Judicial Process (created by H. R. 232, 1949 Regular Session), the said committee is hereby authorized and directed to ascertain, study and analyze the methods of handling and processing traffic violation cases and particularly as to the methods now used by police courts and probation authorities in identifying second and subsequent offenders from records maintained locally and by the State Department of Motor Vehicles and to investigate the feasibility of issuing specially colored or otherwise readily identifiable drivers' licenses to persons who have been repeatedly convicted of violations or who are on probation, and to report thereon to the Assembly at the 1951 Regular Session including in the report its recommendation for appropriate legislation."

In connection with this resolution, the committee reports as follows:

Section 744 of the Vehicle Code provides that every justice, magistrate, or judge of a court not of record, and every clerk of a court of record "shall prepare and immediately forward to the department at its office in Sacramento an abstract of the record of said court covering the cases in which said person was so convicted which abstract must be certified by the person so required to prepare the same to be true and correct." In the same section, violations of Sections 586, 587, and 588 of the same code relating to improper parking of vehicles are excluded from the above requirements and are not reportable.

Under the authority of the above-cited section the Division of Drivers' Licenses maintains a complete file of all abstracts forwarded to it by the various courts of the State. However, it cannot be said with certainty that the law is complied with by all courts. It is the belief of the division that numerous courts inferior to municipal and Class A justice courts fail to file more than token abstracts of their records.

Upon receipt of the abstract from the individual court, it is filed with the original application for license of the driver reported on; the abstract is fastened to the application and is available for ready reference. In the case of those drivers who have not been licensed to drive in California and who are convicted of a reportable offense, the said abstract is filed in the alphabetical file under the driver's name. When an application is subsequently received, the alphabetical file is then transferred to the previously described file and appended to the application. When a request for information is received relative to a particular prior offender the file is "pulled" and the information forwarded to the requesting authority.

The committee has been informed that requests are presently running at the rate of 70-80 per day. A majority of such requests come from law enforcement agencies rather than from the courts. It was pointed out to the committee by a division officer that the present rate of requests is substantially higher than that of six months ago, with no explanatory reason being given other than the belief that such agencies are increasing their efforts to enforce traffic laws. It was also stated that there is no evidence of any liaison between authorities on the local level such as the courts of one county cooperating with the courts of another in maintaining mutual or duplicate records of persons convicted of traffic violations.

The committee was informed that though records are readily available in the cases of the 70-80 routine requests per day received by the division at the present time, the present staff would be completely incapable of handling any substantial increase in the number of such requests. Were it to become the practice of the courts to make a routine inquiry of the division as to the record of each and every person convicted of a reportable violation the problem of answering such requests would be insurmountable under the present conditions.

In view of the foregoing, the committee is unable at this time to make any recommendation as to improving the use of these abstracts by the courts in the sentencing of offenders except that sufficient staff should be made available to the Department of Motor Vehicles so that an increased volume of requests could be handled. In this event, the committee would then recommend a complete procedure for the use of such abstracts prior to the sentencing of the defendant but not prior to his conviction.

The use of abstracts or similar records of prior offenses prior to conviction, the use of readily identifiable drivers' licenses indicating prior convictions, or the use of drivers' licenses wherein a list of prior convictions is contained, have alike been criticized for the reason that it is said that a police officer or judge is more likely to resolve any doubts against the defendant if there is readily apparent a list of prior convictions, whereas the true test in each arrest and in each conviction should be the guilt or innocence of the defendant of that offense. The committee therefore feels that it cannot recommend the use of this procedure without considerably more study and survey of the related problems involved.

THE PROBLEM OF VOLUME

The committee held a comprehensive hearing in Los Angeles at which outstanding experts in various phases of traffic laws and procedures were invited to present their views.

Such outstanding individuals as B. R. Caldwell, Deputy Chief of Police of Los Angeles in charge of the traffic bureau, J. M. Askins, Traffic Commissioner for the municipal courts of the City of Los Angeles, Allan Davis, General Counsel, Automobile Club of Southern California, Chief Eggers of the Glendale Police Department, Evelle Younger, City Prosecutor of the City of Pasadena, Russell Emmett, Supervising Inspector of the California Highway Patrol, and Judge Roger A. Pfaff, presented their views and problems to the committee. Most of the matters heretofore covered in this report were discussed in one phase or another by one of these experts to the point where the committee felt that further hearings along the same line would be merely to present cumulative evidence. The entire range of traffic problems was covered including an analysis of the cause of traffic accidents, methods of felony prosecutions, a discussion of methods in use for the handling of bail, bail forfeitures and fines, judicial administration of the traffic laws, enforcement of the traffic laws on freeways and in suburban areas and the problems of police personnel and court appearances, enforcement in its relation to juvenile problems, the effect of the gradual diminution in rail transportation upon the motor vehicle problem, the use of various types of devices to test drunkenness in drunk driving cases, the experiences of automobile clubs in the handling of traffic matters for their members and a comprehensive summary of all of the related problems in the traffic and safety field were covered. The latter summary was presented by the outstanding expert in the field, Mr. Joe O. Mattson, assistant to the president, Automotive Safety Foundation, and the committee wishes to acknowledge the substantial assistance which it has been given by Mr. Mattson in all matters relating to the traffic field.

As previously indicated, during the course of its research and the evidence taken at the Los Angeles hearing, a great many problems were discussed and a great many plans submitted for their partial solution. However, many, if not most of the suggested solutions, could not be fitted into our present concept of jurisprudence. At each point in its inquiry where a suggested solution of a segment of the problem was made, the committee attempted to reconcile this solution with normal procedures current in other criminal cases and found that the practical problem of volume precluded any sensible conclusion. Thus, although the committee felt that prosecutions in criminal cases, whether they be traffic or otherwise, should be handled in accordance with the normal constitutional and statutory protections to the defendant. Yet, it became quite clear that if this procedure were followed, in each instance the sheer volume of cases would completely disrupt the entire court system within this State. Furthermore, it seems clear that in many instances a new traffic judge attempts to insist upon some of these procedures only to find that as a practical matter they are unworkable.

The committee, therefore, believes that no adequate solution can be found to fit traffic laws into criminal procedures until an entirely new approach to the problem can develop a solution to reduce the volume of cases so considered.

The committee, therefore, recommends that a subcommittee be reconstituted for the purpose, among other things, to explore the establishment of an entirely new concept of law for the "minor" traffic offenses and the establishment of a line of demarcation between "minor" and "serious" offenses with the object in view of requiring the "serious" offenses to be prosecuted and heard within the normal criminal procedures and the "minor" offenses to be handled as a "civil offense" or similar noncriminal offenses, at least until these "minor" offenses shall have cumulated to such an extent that the individual could be considered to have a "serious" disrespect for the processes of the law.

THE MOTOR VEHICLE CODE

The committee is aware of the fact that there has been recommended for nation-wide use a uniform motor vehicle code. In this connection a conference was held with Mr. Louis R. Morony, Director, Uniform Laws Division, Automotive Safety Foundation. At this conference a discussion was had of the soundness of the California Motor Vehicle Code and it was stated by Mr. Morony that he felt that the California code by comparison with that in other states was in very sound condition. Presumably this conclusion was reached by a comparison of the California code with the uniform code.

By way of comparison, Mr. Caldwell, the assistant chief of the Los Angeles Police Department in charge of traffic, who is also an outstanding expert in the field, testified that the California Motor Vehicle Code should be scrapped completely and rewritten in its entirety.

Between these two extremes, the committee has ascertained that there is a wide divergence of views as to the effectiveness of the California code, and believes that the entire code should be reconsidered as to the desirability of its various segments as well as its comparability to the uniform motor vehicle code Furthermore, that the code should be considered in the light of whether the uniform motor vehicle code should be adopted for use in this State.

As was indicated in an editorial in the Los Angeles Times during the conduction of the hearing in that city, the committee feels that there is a real reason to believe that the present vehicle code in California is a patchwork which has been changed year after year, segment by segment, so that there is substantial reason to believe it should be reintegrated and reconsidered.

The committee, therefore, recommends that a subcommittee be reconstituted for the purpose, among other things. to hold hearings throughout the State of California upon a complete revision of the Motor Vehicle Code, considering also at this time the desirability of the adoption of the uniform motor vehicle code.

CONCLUSIONS

(1) This committee has undertaken to show that although its specific objective when its investigation started was to ascertain whether traffic courts were being used for revenue purposes rather than the administration of justice, it believes it to be a total impossibility to make any recommendations upon this subject without making recommendations upon the entire field of traffic problems and correlating the work of all existing committees, and groups, working upon similar or related problems

(2) That any study of traffic problems must of necessity take into account the work which has gone before and, for this reason, the committee has repeated and recited some of the basic patterns which represent national as well as state-wide thinking at the present time in the field.

(3) That these patterns have begun and are continuing to influence the adoption of legislation in this State as well as nationally.

(4) That there are several outstanding recommendations in this pattern which the committee feels require careful study before they can be recommended for adoption in this State, particularly where these recommendations might tend to cumulate in a violation of some of our fundamental concepts of jurisprudence.

(5) That the Judicial Council has provided the beginnings of an adequate solution for the problems referred to insofar as the inferior courts have been reorganized and procedures will be recommended on matters affecting the administration of the court, its dignity, quarters, etc.

(6) That the Motor Vehicle Code should be considered for revision in complete detail and that hearings should be held throughout the State of California on the same, segment by segment.

(7) That these hearings upon the Motor Vehicle Code and any other recommendations in connection with a revision of the motor vehicle laws will be useless unless the problem of volume of offenses is first solved.

(8) That in order to solve the problem of volume of offenses, the committee recommends that a comprehensive analysis be undertaken of motor vehicle statutes wherever they may be found to the end that a line of demarcation between the "minor" offense and the "serious" offense may be established.

(9) That if this line of demarcation can be established, that recommendations be considered to provide for an "offense" or "civil offense" or some similar theory for the "minor offenses" which will permit them to be disposed of with dispatch without in any other manner affecting the procedures of recognized criminal law.

(10) That thereupon further consideration should be given as to whether a series of "minor offenses" or a "serious offense" cannot then be handled within the framework of criminal jurisprudence in the same manner as any other crime, including the application of such serious offense to juveniles within the regular juvenile court structure.

(11) That the committee has not engaged in extensive visits to existing courts nor engaged in extensive hearings for the reason that it feared expensive duplication of work already completed or being undertaken by other groups and that as to hearings, it felt after a comprehensive hearing in Los Angeles, that further evidence would be cumulative.

RECOMMENDATIONS

I.

The committee recommends that the provisions of the negligent operator statutes be amended to provide that no driver's license can be revoked or suspended for a period longer than 30 days unless and until a judicial hearing upon the issue shall have been held upon complaint filed by the Motor Vehicle Department and has requested Legislative Counsel to prepare such legislation for submission to the 1951 General Session of the Legislature.

II.

The committee makes no other or further recommendations for legislation at this time for the reason that with the single exception set forth above, it feels that such specific recommendations might tend to further confuse the existing statutes until the comprehensive analysis hereinafter referred to shall have been undertaken.

III.

The committee recommends that an Assembly Judicial Subcommittee be reconstituted for the following purposes:

(1) To correlate the work being done by all agencies upon the subject of motor vehicle laws and procedures and to integrate the whole with the work of the Judicial Council prior to the adoption of new procedures under the new court structure.

(2) To explore the establishment of a new concept of law for the "minor" traffic offense and the establishment of a line of demarcation between "minor" and "serious" offenses.

(3) To hold hearings throughout the State of California upon a complete revision of the Motor Vehicle Code considering also at this time the desirability of the adoption of the Uniform Motor Vehicle Code.

THE PROBLEM OF TRAFFIC LAW ENFORCEMENT

The system of inferior courts is the most important factor in building public knowledge and appreciation of justice in the United States By far the greatest number of cases are tried in such courts of the first instance and it is from these courts that the average citizen obtains his first and often only contact with our system of justice. It is a surprising fact that a Gallup Poll in 1939 in the middle Atlantic and east central states disclosed that 33 percent of those answering the inquiry did not believe their local judges to be honest. Local judges in most instances come in contact with John Q. Public through the medium of traffic citations which constitute the greatest number of misdemeanors and the over-all opinion of the public regarding our courts is determined by this single contact. The so-called "inferior courts" must be maintained on at least as high a standard as any other court of original jurisdiction.

The problem is best set forth in a reference made to the traffic survey of the metropolitan district of Boston:

> "A system of law enforcement under this survey shows those guilty only in a comparatively greater degree are punished severely and those guilty in a lesser degree are allowed to travel free can be nothing but a breeder of contempt for all types of law. Or laws under which those who pay the penalty are the innocent victims of the real violator while the latter is free to repeat his performance are a mockery of the fundamental aim of this law as conceived and a reflection on those into whose hands has been placed the duty of this enforcement."

It should be noted that the quoted reference refers only to one phase of the traffic and motor vehicle problem It is generally said that its solution involves at least three items expressed as the three "E's," i.e. Engineering, Education and Enforcement.

THE COURTS WHERE TRAFFIC CASES ARE TRIED

The use of varying types of courts prevents the systematic enforcement of the law and the dispensing of justice. Both county and state courts are ill-equipped to handle traffic cases as their procedure is geared for the more serious types of crimes; the average traffic case does not involve the impaneling of a jury, complicated instructions, elaborate arguments by counsel, etc. Thus, the sheer number of traffic cases which are presented to the county and state courts necessitates a summary and totally inadequate disposition thereof. In addition to the procedural machinery of the courts, they are not located in places convenient to the dispensing with the fairly minor violations for which the average offender is cited. In this connection the problem of the nonresident driver is posed; to allow him to leave the State after citation is to lose jurisdiction and probability of his return for trial; to place him under arrest for trial set at some future date would be to unnecessarily detain him and cause a lowering of the law in his view. Though more adequately suited for handling traffic violations, municipal courts with inadequate facilities and insufficiently paid judges who are unable to devote their full time to the bench do not fill the need for a separate traffic court.

TRAFFIC COURT PROCEDURE

The average traffic violation is handled as in the case of any other criminal prosecution where the defendant is brought into court. However, for the following reasons, the procedure for handling a case involving a violation of a traffic law should not follow that of an average criminal case:

a. There is generally but a single issue raised without any question of degree or other technicality.
b. There is no extraneous testimony other than that of the arresting officer and the defendant offered.

c. Minor offenders do not feel "guilty" of a "criminal offense."
d. Cases are disposed of rapidly.
e. Because of the fundamental problems involved in traffic violations there should be a uniformity in treatment which can be achieved only by close cooperation between different agencies, particularly in regard to records of offenses, convictions and punishment.

There are three methods of bringing the defendant to court in general use throughout the United States today: a "ticket," a summons and summary arrest. The summary arrest is used in a majority of states to assure the appearance of the non-resident violator. Actually a "notice to appear," coupled with a detention of the driver's license or the auto plates is held to be the superior means of obtaining an appearance. A summary arrest involves the occupation of a police officer for every arrest with a consequent diminution of the available force.

VIOLATIONS BUREAUS

Violation bureaus are designed to relieve the courts of much of the overwhelming number of cases involving traffic violations which it would otherwise be necessary to hear. The defendant brings the citation, ticket or summons to the bureau and pays a fine in the form of a "forfeiture of bail" or under some other title. The automatic procedure employed is the reason for the name "cafeteria style justice." It fails to give the corrective touch of the court to the disposition of the case with the consequent loss of any hope of obtaining a cooperative attitude from the defendant. The jurisdiction of the bureaus should include only the most minor offenses; fines and bonds should be fixed only by the court and should be comparable to the fines actually assessed by the court were the defendant to appear for trial. There should be provision for repeated violators receiving an increased fine and a required court appearance for the habitual offender.

TRAFFIC COURT ADMINISTRATION

The nonappearance of a defendant should be treated as a serious matter; warrants issued after failure to answer a citation or ticket should be strictly enforced and extra fine levied to prevent recurrence.

Jury trials are often used to obtain an acquittal on the basis that juries generally feel that traffic violations are too petty to warrant a criminal conviction. The right to a jury trial should be restricted when the nature of the problems involved is balanced against the trouble and time of impaneling a jury, the openings to the jury by the prosecutor and the attorney for the defendant, and the closings at the end of each case, etc. The absence of the complicating factors usually found in the average criminal case is further reason for the restriction of the jury trial.

Appeals from convictions of traffic violations are few but the percentage of affirmances is low due to the feeling of the appellate courts that such offenses are trivial.

PHYSICAL FACILITIES AND CLERICAL AIDS

The conditions which prevail in many traffic courts was described; on numerous occasions it was found that necessary parties to the action could not hear testimony due to the excessive noise and outside interference. Other conditions such as shabby rooms and poor location were pictured as detracting from the necessary dignity of the court; traffic courts must have adequate room and facilities for presentation of evidence and must be such as to command respect.

Adequate records are impossible without sufficient clerical aid. The number of cases involving traffic violations makes this particularly true.

TRAFFIC COURT PERSONNEL

Judges in traffic courts should be lawyers with a traffic law background. They should be paid a salary sufficient to enable them to devote their full time to the bench; the term of the judge if elected should be for such a period as would take the office out of politics. Rotation of judges in general is not a wise practice in that in too many instances there are not qualified alternates available, judges with a traffic law background.

Prosecutors are rarely used in traffic cases and even then are poorly qualified. They can, if properly qualified, contribute to the orderly process of the court and thus enhance the respect it draws from the defendant. All too often the traffic law violator is treated by the prosecutor as a common criminal without remembering the primary purpose of the traffic court is corrective rather than punitive.

As pointed out before, the average traffic case requires none of the procedural equipment of the average criminal case. So, too, due to the nature of the offense, defense attorneys are seldom needed. On this point it was noted that in many cases attorneys are employed merely for the purpose of delaying and otherwise obstructing the trial. In other cases where there is no question of the good faith of the defense, it often occurs that the attorney appearing for the defendant is ill-equipped for work in traffic cases; brings up such defenses as "contributory negligence," "last clear chance," and otherwise misconstrues the methods and purposes of traffic law enforcement.

CONDUCTING THE TRAFFIC COURT

The work of the traffic court must, more than any other court because of its constant contact with and its consequent effect upon the public at large, be carried on in an orderly and efficient manner so as to command the greatest possible respect for traffic law enforcement in particular and for the law in general. The serious consequences of traffic law violations must be impressed upon those who come before the court. A smoothly running and dignified court can achieve a spirit of cooperation from the defendant which is otherwise impossible.

THE "FIX"

The "fixing" or otherwise nullifying the citation, ticket or summons can be and is accomplished in one or more of the following manners:

a. Cancellation by the police or court clerk.
b. Deletion or change of court records by the court clerk.
c. Continuance of trial by the clerk of a disinterested court or by the judge himself.
d. Reduction of the charge so as to obtain a guilty plea or avoid a jury trial.
e. Weak prosecution by the prosecutor or by the arresting officer.

It was found that where "fixing" as a practice did not exist there was high public interest in the work of the courts, well qualified personnel, open trials which were freely publicized and an efficient system for publishing the monthly or semimonthly records of the court. However, mere mechanical improvements will not eliminate the "fix;" three elements are requisite:

a. Education of those prone to seeking favors to the dangerous consequences on society of such practices.
b. Stimulation of public indignation against such practices.
c. Improvement in the selection and tenure of public officials.

PUNISHING THE TRAFFIC LAW VIOLATOR

An arrest of a violator which is not followed by conviction is wholly ineffective, just as is a conviction which is not followed by the assessment of a penalty; without a penalty there is no deterrent effect. The results of an analysis and comparative study of cited figures indicate that a practical and minimum acceptable standard for the ratio between convictions and apprehensions is 90 percent; the national average of 406 cities was 93 percent (1940). The California Highway Patrol convictions averaged 95 percent while the City of San Francisco (1939-1940) averaged 70 percent, with only 40 percent of those arrested for reckless driving convicted.

Traffic courts should strive to instill a sense of cooperation and responsibility in the defendant—punishment should not be considered an end in itself. There is a direct relationship between the number of convictions and the accident rate in a given community; when the laws are strictly enforced and the conviction rate goes up, accidents become more and more infrequent Violations can be prevented by:

a. Certainty of apprehension, and
b. Effective punishment.

The majority of offenders are persons previously convicted of other traffic law violations. "First offenders" should be treated with care with a view to obtaining the maximum cooperation with a minimum of punishment However, most "first offenders" are such only because they have not been "caught" for previous violations; there are few true "first offenders" Juveniles should be handled by the traffic courts with the parents present Juvenile courts are not warranted in the case of petty offenses In the more serious offenses, the need for specialized technique in the handling of juveniles more than outweighs the value of the special traffic court.

Penalties, in order to command respect, must be uniform but should also take into account special conditions existing in each case; good judgment and common sense must be used if the penalty is to develop the sought-for respect and cooperation with the law. The penalty should bear a direct relationship to the seriousness of the violation. The following particular penalties have special value in some instances:

a. Suspension of driver's license—driving is a privilege, not a right, which may be taken away when it is deemed that the operation of a vehicle by the defendant presents a public danger and that the defendant can be more effectively deterred from future violations by these means. In California the suspension and/or cancellation of the driver's license is controlled by Vehicle Code 291-317.
b. "Violators' Schools"—wherein the violator is required to attend a certain number of formal class hours in safe driving. A 1939 survey by the California Highway Patrol showed that of those attending such schools there was a 70 percent reduction in the number of traffic violations The general type of offenders for whom the school is most effective are:
   (1) Violators who lack mechanical skill.
   (2) Those who are ignorant of important traffic regulations.
   (3) Drivers who show inability to meet traffic situations.
   (4) Offenders holding erroneous attitudes toward safety and who appear to be amenable to educative methods.
   (5) Violators on whom a fine would be an undue hardship or whose fine would be paid by another, or whose family would suffer as a consequence, and who, at the same time, need a better appreciation of the traffic problem.
   (6) Violators to whom a fine means little.

RECORDS

Two types of records should be maintained by every traffic court:

a. Disposition records which
   (1) Provide an inventory of the business of the court.
   (2) Evaluate the effectiveness of the court.
   (3) Serve as a basis for a report to the public.
b. Violator records, so that habitual offenders may be treated specially and, if necessary, excluded from the highways.

(It was noted that California was one of 13 states maintaining complete records of traffic convictions; all other states kept at most partial records of their courts' work.)

Violators' records are records of previous offenses and their disposition. For thorough enforcement throughout the State, such records should be state-wide in scope. However, the past record of the defendant should influence only the penalty assessed if found guilty. For this reason the record should not be referred to by the court until after a finding of guilt is made; past convictions are no evidence of present guilt.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE

The average justice of the peace in the United States is not required to meet any particular standards. It is generally felt that the duties of the justice of the peace are too numerous and varied. There is no supervision of justices of the peace by any state agency nor is there any auditing of his books, save in Los Angeles County, which system includes 26 justice of the peace courts.

The average age of justices of the peace throughout the Country is 58, with over 20 percent between the ages of 70-90. Occupations vary with over 50 percent being nonprofessional occupations such as butcher, baker, etc.; out of 1,199 justices of the peace answering the survey's questionnaire, only 118 were practicing attorneys or persons with legal background. Most held other positions and acted as justices of the peace only a small part of their time.

In 33 states the justices of the peace are paid by the fees collected by them in the form of fines, costs, etc. The case of Toomey v. Ohio (235 U. S. 510) held that a magistrate who has a direct financial interest in the outcome of the proceedings cannot try the accused. However, this principle is not applied to proceedings involving traffic violations because of the practical reason that such cases are rarely ever appealed due to the relative insignificance of the sum involved.

A PROPOSED TRAFFIC COURT SYSTEM

There should be established a single, state-wide system of traffic courts staffed by persons with legal training and with an adequate background in traffic law enforcement. A chief traffic judge should head the system, with the district judges being state rather than local officials. Provision should also be made for any undue increase in violations in a particular area by the establishment of additional courts.

TRAFFIC INSTITUTE—NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY

As previously indicated, the bulk of the material under the preceding headings was obtained from the Warren study, "Traffic Courts." In addition, however, some of the research material utilized by the committee emanated from the Traffic Institute, Northwestern University. Essentially, the institute is operated as a department of the university and concerns itself with the problems of traffic control and motor vehicle accident prevention in general. To this end, a wealth of information relating to these subjects is constantly being gathered and offered to students of the problem in the form of such courses as Administration, Police Officer Training, Police Officer Selection and Supervision, Safety Education, and Traffic Engineering. In addition to its formal classroom operations, the institute also conducts an extension service through which are made available The Traffic Review, a quarterly semitechnical magazine devoted to subjects of interest to those in the street and highway traffic field, and The Traffic Digest, a monthly news bulletin on new training, reference and legal materials as developed. Thus, the institute operates as a "clearing house" of information for those interested in the problem of traffic law enforcement.

Part XVII

FINAL REPORT OF SUBCOMMITTEE ON SEX CRIMES

INTRODUCTION

The Subcommittee on Sex Crimes of the Assembly Interim Committee on Judicial System and Judicial Process presents herewith its Supplementary and Final Report. The Preliminary Report was published, after four months of study, in March, 1950. It has been widely circulated throughout the United States.

The Final Report represents a study of activity throughout the Country which has been directed toward a solution of the sex crime problem. The information gathered has demonstrated that the sex crime problem is not local. Furthermore, the committee is able to bring to California information concerning valuable and progressive steps which are being undertaken in other jurisdictions.

The committee now offers in this report, in addition to its account of recent developments in the sex crime field, its recommendations for a long range, integrated solution of the problem.

While the recommendations were being formulated, the committee's basic view of the problems to be solved was not changed. The primary problem is the protection of the public from harmful or offensive acts of sex offenders. The second problem is the restoration by detention or treatment of the individual sex offender to a condition of compatability with society.

The committee is conscious of the age-long duration of the problem and the vastness of its scope It is likewise aware of the ineffectiveness of "passing a law" to solve the many aspects of the sex crime problem. The committee recognizes, nevertheless, that the Legislature has a responsibility to investigate the facts and to test the effectiveness of existing techniques for solution. This committee, as a part of the California Legislature, further realizes that, when conditions demand it, the Legislature has a duty to enact legislation which is necessary to meet effectively a serious situation. This committee, therefore, offers its recommendations to assist the California Legislature in its legislative deliberations and for the guidance of all interested citizens of the State of California.

Respectfully submitted,

RALPH M. BROWN, Chairman
JULIAN BECK, Vice Chairman

CHAPTER 1. RECENT CALIFORNIA LEGISLATION

The California Legislature has enacted certain legislation during the special sessions of 1949 and 1950 which affects the sex crime problem. A digest of these enactments follows.

A. Criminal Law

(1) Child Molestation—Second Offense.

Penal Code Section 647 (a) (1) was amended to provide that after a second conviction for molesting a child the offender could be sentenced, in the discretion of the judge, to five years in prison.

(2) First Degree Murder.

Penal Code Section 189 was amended to provide that murder committed in the perpetration of lewd and lascivious conduct upon a child under 14 is murder in the first degree.

(3) Punishment for Sodomy.

Penal Code Section 286 was amended to increase the maximum penalty for sodomy from 10 to 20 years.

(4) Alternative Penalty for Fellatio.

Penal Code Section 288 (a) was amended to provide an alternative lesser sentence of one year in the county jail

(5) Habitual Criminals.

Penal Code Section 644 was amended to extend the scope of habitual criminal adjudication The amended law includes persons convicted of carnal abuse of a child under 14 where before the amendment, the age was 12

(6) Probation—Use of Alcoholic Beverage.

Penal Code Section 3053.5, and Welfare and Institutions Code Sections 5517 and 1767.2 were amended to provide a mandatory condition for granting probation or parole when a person is convicted of a sex crime listed in Penal Code Section 290 and the judge finds that the person was intoxicated or addicted to drugs at the time of the offense. The condition of probation or parole added by the amendment is that such a person shall abstain from the use of alcoholic liquor or beverages.

Penal Code Section 290 was amended to add certain crimes and to make enforcement of the section effective. The act was extended so that it included offenders convicted of more types of sex crimes. The enforcement was bettered by placing the responsibility upon sheriffs, police chiefs, judges and institutional heads to send in the registration information on persons in their custody.

The amended act requires a convicted sex offender to report his change of address within the definite time of 10 days, where the former act used the term "promptly"

(8) Fingerprinting and Modus Operandi Reports.

Section 8 of the act creating the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation was amended to set up machinery for creating a central state file on sex offenders. Sheriffs, police chiefs and marshals were given the duty to send to Sacramento daily the finger prints and descriptions of all persons arrested for sex offenses listed in Penal Code Section 290. In addition, these officials now send to Sacramento detailed reports upon the reported violations of certain misdemeanors (child molestation under Penal Code Section 647(a), lewd vagrancy under Penal Code Section 647(5), indecent exposure under Penal Code Section 311(1)(2), or contributing to the delinquency of a minor under Welfare and Institutions Code Section 711) and all felonies.

The fingerprints, descriptions and reports are used to create an excellent modus operandi file in Sacramento which is available to law enforcement departments throughout the State.

(9) Lie Detector.

An appropriation was made to obtain a lie detector for the use of the State Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation.

B. Sexual Psychopath Law

California's law for the commitment of the sexual psychopath was amended in several significant points in the Legislature's special March session.

(1) The first change was to establish a clearer area in which California courts shall, or may, undertake the examination to determine sexual psychopathy.

Welfare and Institutions Code Section 5501 was amended to provide three situations in which a court should hold a hearing to determine sexual psychopathy.

The first situation is after a person is convicted of any crime and either the judge, the prosecuting attorney, or the defendant asks for a hearing. Where these facts exist, the court has discretion to hold or not to hold such a hearing.

The second situation is where a person is convicted of a sex offense involving a child under 14 years of age, and it is a misdemeanor and the person has been convicted previously for such an offense. When a person is a misdemeanant second conviction offender of this type, the court must certify the person to the superior court for a hearing and examination to determine whether sexual psychopathy exists.

The third situation is where a person is convicted of a sex offense involving a child under 14 years of age and said offense is a felony. Such a felon, convicted for the first time, must be certified to the superior court to determine whether sexual psychopathy exists.

Where any of the situations above exist and a sexual psychopathy hearing is to be held, the court adjourns the proceedings or suspends the sentence and proceeds with the sexual psychopathy examination or hearing.

Before the amendment described above, this portion of Welfare and Institutions Code Section 5501 merely provided that a sexual psychopathy hearing could, in the court's discretion, be instituted upon the affidavit of any person and merely after adjudication of a criminal proceeding (which conceivably would include dismissal of the action.)

(2) The second area of change in the sexual psychopath law was in the procedure for holding the sexual psychopathy examination and hearing. Welfare and Institutions Code Section 5512 was amended in four respects.

First, the amended section makes it possible for the court to order the person to be placed in a suitable psychopathic facility maintained by a county where before the amendment the court was limited to the use of state psychiatric facilities.

Secondly, the amendment changed the period of observation and diagnosis from an "indeterminate period" to 90 days.

By further amendment, the law now states that no one may be committed for an indeterminate period as a sexual psychopath, unless his observation and placement has been made and reported, and he has been diagnosed and recommended upon as provided in the law.

Fourth, the section, as amended, no longer includes authorization for the court to order the person held by the Department of Mental Hygiene for observation if the court is merely "in doubt" as to his sexual psychopathy.

Welfare and Institutions Code Section 5513 was amended to improve the system for transporting persons who are committed as sexual psychopaths to and from institutions.

C. Education—Prevention

The California Legislature by Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 4 of December 21, 1949, recommended certain instructions for school personnel and school children regarding sex and sex criminals.

It was resolved that the Superintendent of Public Instruction take all necessary measures to disseminate such instructions to meet the dangers of sex crimes.

D. Research

Probably the most important legislation was the authorization of and appropriation of money for a sound scientific research project.

The Legislature directed the Department of Mental Hygiene, acting through the superintendent of the Langley Porter Clinic, to institute the research. Their broad duty is to plan and conduct scientific research into the causes and cures of sexual deviation and homosexuality and into methods of identifying potential sex offenders.

The Department of Mental Hygiene was given authority to enter into contracts with the Regents of the University of California to undertake research. The act also provided that state agencies have a duty to cooperate, wherever feasible, with the Department of Mental Hygiene in this project.

A report is to be forthcoming from the director of the Langley Porter Clinic by March 1, 1951. It shall contain a report of his studies, a recommended bibliography and his findings and recommendations.

A long range view is contemplated because the director of the Langley Porter Clinic in his report is to outline further research which he deems advisable and also to point out the promising avenues of past research.

For financing of this program the Legislature appropriated $100,000, the largest amount appropriated by any State Legislature for such research at the time. No more than $50,000 of this amount is to be spent in one fiscal year. In addition, the act provided that the Department of Mental Hygiene may accept, with the approval of the Director of Finance, any gifts or grants from any source for accomplishing the ends of the project.

CHAPTER 2. RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

A. California

(1) California Research Project.

The California Research Project is proceeding in a cautious way through its organization stages. Although it is under the jurisdiction of the Department of Mental Hygiene, its immediate administration is by Dr. Karl Bowman, superintendent of the Langley Porter Clinic in San Francisco.

The funds in the sum of $100,000 for the research project first became available in August, 1950, as a result of recommendations of this committee. Before that time and since there have been at least four major problems to overcome. One was to find space in which to carry on the work Next came the problem of locating and obtaining trained research personnel. Thirdly, the personnel needed facilities. Fourthly, the personnel in the project have had to search for "guinea pigs" who were conveniently available for its different fields of research. The following undertakings illustrate several solutions to these four problems:

(a) A biochemical contract with the University of California at Los Angeles was one of the project's first major steps. By its terms, Drs. Joseph Nye and Josephine Garst are undertaking chemical studies at U C L.A.'s excellent laboratory facilities in Long Beach. The current study under the U C.L.A. contract is of blood and urine samples from persons committed as sexual psychopaths who are now at Norwalk State Hospital. The study is based upon the hypothesis that there are tides in the amounts of certain steroids in the urine and blood of persons. It is hoped the study will provide information to correlate a rise and fall in biochemical reactions with sexual behavior.

(b) Central Research Office—Library. Mrs. Engle and Mrs. Kantzelar have been employed to assist in establishing the home office of the research project at the Langley Porter Clinic As a first step, a working library is being assembled. Mrs. Engle is making a survey of the literature in the field. An indexed bibliography for researchers is being compiled In addition, she is preparing digests of much of the best material.

(c) Juvenile Court—Offenders and Victims. The San Francisco Juvenile Court and Detention Home are providing facilities for the research project. Through the cooperation of Judge Milton D. Shapiro, Mrs. Black, referee, and Mr. Ososke, chief probation officer, studies will be made of the victim and the offender in reported sex crime cases involving juveniles. A psychiatric group will be set up to function in these cases. Sociological and psychological data will also be obtained. It is hoped that investigation will indicate the feasibility of treating or curing certain psycho-sex offenders In addition, it is hoped the information will give a method for discovering susceptible minor victims so that prevention techniques may be perfected in this regard.

(d) Clinical Study—Psycho-sex Offenders. Certain groups of psycho-sex offenders will be studied at the facilities of the Langley Porter Clinic. It is intended that one group will be castrates The study will be made of the after-effects upon men who have volunteered for an orchidectomy following conviction for various sex crimes. Since comparatively little research in this field is reported, this may be a most significant study in the project.

(e) Remaining Problems. The project is still without an administrative leader who can devote his full time and talents to it. Doctor Bowman is making a search for an available qualified man and hopes that one can be found soon who will satisfy all parties concerned in the selection.

Other problems and many more projects will develop as time passes. Doctor Bowman, in the meantime, is establishing the project on a basis which is adaptable to these developments.

(2) Probation Practice—Castration.

Granting probation to men who have been convicted of various sex crimes and who then submit voluntarily to an orchidectomy is a practice of certain judges in California. Judge Collier of Pasadena, in Los Angeles County, granted probation on such a condition for several years. In San Diego County, three judges are convinced of the efficacy of the practice. It was reported to the committee, without confirmation, that this practice exists in one or two other California counties.

A check of the fingerprint records of the San Diego castrates has been made to determine whether any have been involved in second offenses. The F. B. I. was asked to report on their records in June, 1950. The records of 49 men were searched and it was found that the F. B. I. had the records of only 44. Of these 44 men, only four had been fingerprinted for a charged infraction of the law since their orchidectomy. There was no case of a later arrest for a sex offense. One arrest was for drunkenness; the second was for petty theft in San Diego; a third was for burglary and theft of an automobile; and the fourth was for disorderly conduct in Everett, Washington. Although it is possible a sexual offense was involved in these charges, it is interesting that in none of the cases has there been a second sex crime conviction.

(3) Police Officer Education.

There is at present, in Sacramento, a school for police officers. It is under the supervision of Mr. John P. Pepper of the Peace Officers Training Department of the California State Department of Education. The school is undertaking the task of providing local police departments and police officers with training in advanced techniques in criminal investigation.

B. Colorado

Colorado is responding to the influence of an energetic Citizens' Juvenile Committee of South Denver. The group is composed of a considerable number of prominent citizens. They have undertaken a study of the sex crime problem and an analysis of what other states are doing. Evaluation of proposals and individual research as well as committee efforts have been directed toward advising the legislature in its 1951 deliberations. The organization has established offices in South Denver and may be contacted through P. O. Box 4162, Denver, Colorado.

C. Illinois

The Legislative Research Council of Illinois is bringing to completion an extensive two-year study for the consideration of the 1951 session of the Illinois legislature. Illinois has been one of the most active states both governmentally and through citizen groups in the study of this problem. The State Bar Association is promulgating a report which covers nearly two years of effort and the combined energies of these groups may well prove constructive to other agencies.

The famed Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago, however, has decided against a particular study of the phenomena of sexual deviation as was tentatively considered in 1949. Dr. Grinker, M D., Director of the Institute for Psychosomatic and Psychiatric Research, informed this committee that the hospital has no mechanism in force for reporting upon the psycho-sex offender.

D. Indiana

Mr. J. Milo Anderson, Superintendent of the Methodist Hospital of Gary, Indiana, reports that construction has started on their new psychiatric unit. They contemplate patient admissions by June of 1951. The unit will accommodate sex offenders but they will be identified as patients rather than other specific classifications. The treatment program does not include distinguishing the antisocial conduct within legal definitives. All psychiatric patients will be so categorized.

E. Kansas Report on Castration and Sex Crimes

Castration as a remedy for sex crimes has been advanced by Dr. C. C. Hawke, M.D., Director of the State Training School at Winfield, Kansas.

The research started in 1894 under the regime of Dr. Pilcher and has afforded 330 cases for medical study. Specialists in psychiatry, physiology, and cardiac-vascular system have joined in the research project. Their conclusions as summarized by Dr. Hawke are interesting.

Physically the castrate is usually an improved organism. General health and longevity are increased. Many of the predominantly male degenerative diseases such as cardio-vascular failure, carcinoma of the oral cavity, prostate infection and others are minimized by castration. Contrary to general belief castrates are not sexually incapacitated. The sex drive is admittedly reduced but successful marriages with regular sexual performance are reported in the study. Obesity does not follow per se nor do the male castrates tend to baldness in the same incidence as noncastrates. The operation is not followed by changes in the voice pitch, unless surgery is performed before the patient has achieved maturity, nor is the individual's basic energy capacity materially altered. The over-all picture is of an individual toned down to a moderate energy-drive level associated with improved general health and increased longevity.

HAWKE'S REPORT

The matter of sex crime and sex criminals has in the past few months become front-page news all over the Nation. Undoubtedly such crimes are receiving more publicity than formerly and also the criminal has become more degenerate and brutal. Very little has been offered for the control of such crimes. Certainly the limited jail sentences that have been given in a number of cases do not help solve the problem in any way and probably aggravate the condition.

A majority of our better psychologists and psychiatrists feel there is very little, if anything, that can be done for the confirmed sex criminal. In cases where he can be discovered early it is highly probable that these specialists can be of assistance. The only solution usually offered in the matter of the confirmed sex criminal is that of continuous confinement, at least for a period of many years, or until a psychiatric board deems him safe to be at large. An analysis of the long-term sentences given our criminals at the present time shows that they rarely serve more than a small portion of the allotted sentence.

We are presenting the matter of castration as a remedy for this crime. I have read of numerous conferences in the past year where the statement has been made that castration is not a remedy and that very little is known concerning its effect. The lack of material on this subject is very noticeable. A few years ago while preparing an article I had a consultant and translator in the Surgeon General's Library at Washington go over all of the available material, and there was no material in the English language of any value, nor was there a great deal in the foreign literature.

It is our purpose to give the results of a research project that has been going on in the State Training School at Winfield, Kan., for the past nine years. Our castrations first started during the administration of Dr. Pilcher who conceived the idea that castration might help control excessive masturbation and pervert sexual acts. Dr. Pilcher talked over the matter with the Governor and Board of Charities. He then had consultation with three leading surgeons in the area and the first case was done in March, 1894. The father of the patient, a boy aged 22, and the family physician were both present and agreed to the operation which was done by the family physician. There were 11 done the first year. This became the big political issue at the next election as a result of which the party in power was defeated and there was a change of administration at the school. Two years later the Populists again went into power and Dr. Pilcher was back as superintendent. We do not know how many cases he operated, as unfortunately a fire in 1904 destroyed the main office building and many of the records were lost. In 1908 there were about 15 of the boys still in the institution. Some of the others had died and several had been paroled. At the present time we still have eight of these original castrates in the institution.

We have available for our study 330 cases of castration. About nine years ago I called the attention of Dr. James B. Hamilton of the Long Island College of Medicine to this large group which is the only group, at least in this Country, which is available or which has been studied. Since that time a very interesting research study has been going on, and Dr. Hamilton has had associated with him in this study several of our best scientists and research men. This study has been entirely on the physiological aspect which I will discuss later.

From the sociological angle we have some interesting material to present. Most of our cases are in a feeble-minded group who have no one sufficiently interested to direct and supervise them on parole so will remain in the institution. However, we have a good many cases that have been paroled and are no longer a social menace. Those cases that remain in the institution are not a menace to society when they are on short paroles, or even A.W.O.L from the institution. We have never had a sex crime committed by a parolee or escaped castrate. The high-grade moron group is one of the most dangerous groups we encounter in this type of criminal, and many of the crimes are committed by such individuals.

I would like to give the case histories of a few individuals that have been castrated long enough that we feel sure of our results:

Case No. 1—M. B., colored male, present age 36. This inmate was admitted to the institution from an orphanage at an early age where they had a great deal of difficulty in controlling him. He is a big man about 6′ 2″ in height and who now weighs around 215 lbs. As a boy he was a bully in every way and very brutal to smaller boys. During his stay in the institution he made numerous escapes and always fell into the hands of the law when away from the institution. He would be returned by the legal authorities, and several of them stated they considered him a great menace to society. He was recommended for operation in 1931. At that time he was 18 years of age. The board refused to consent to castration and recommended vasectomy instead. This was done, and one month later he again escaped from the institution and raped a small girl in Wichita Following this episode the board recommended castration which was done. Following the second operation he gave very little trouble at the institution; was paroled about three years later, and later discharged. In 1941 he married, moved to Wichita where he obtained employment, and has been a law-abiding citizen ever since. This man had a rather high I.Q. The school records give it as 61, but probably he would rate higher than that.

Case No. 2—A. B. white male. Was admitted in 1936 at the age of 17. Had an I.Q. of 64 at that time. At the time of admission his papers stated that he was a marked sex problem and that the authorities in his local county considered him unsafe to be released. He made repeated sexual advances to girls and was considered very dangerous. This man was castrated early in 1943 and was paroled that fall. Later he was discharged. He visited the institution last week when he told us that for the past four years he has been married and was acting as janitor at an apartment house. His wife, who was a former inmate of the institution and who had been sterilized by salpingectomy, stated that they were both getting along very well.

Case No. 3—R. B. white male. Was admitted to the institution in 1923 at the age of 12. At that time he had a history of acts of sexual perversion with smaller children, numerous thefts, was constantly picking fights with playmates, and was not allowed to attend school due to those characteristics. This boy had an I.Q. of 71. He was castrated in February, 1927, and discharged in the fall of the same year. Since that time he has had no trouble with the law enforcement officers. This case is quoted as I examined him about a year ago for employment in one of the industrial plants of our city. In the course of our examination I noticed he had no testicles. When I asked him about it he stated he lost them when he had the mumps when a small boy. However, upon examination of our records I found I had castrated as described above. This man apparently is getting along very well. Needless to say, I passed him for the employment examination.

Many of these individuals so treated were very vicious homosexuals and very brutal in attacks on small children. They were very unstable and would create a disturbance at every opportunity. After castration they become stabilized, and those who cannot be paroled are good useful citizens in the institution.

In our experimental work we have administered Testosterone, the male hormones, to several large groups in rather large doses, giving them 20 mg. hypodermically six days a week for a matter of several weeks. In a number of cases, after we had treated them for a period of two or three weeks the floor supervisor would call me up and ask if I would not be willing to stop administering Testosterone to certain individuals who had reverted to all of their antisocial tendencies, were attacking small children, starting fights, breaking windows and destroying furniture. We would stop the administration of Testosterone in these individuals, and within a few days they would be restabilized and cause no further ward disturbances. We have felt that this proves the male hormone is the exciting factor in these cases.

Psychologically, we feel that these individuals are improved if there is any change manifested. In the matter of the I Q. determinations with a group that we have had tested prior to operation and subsequent to it, using the same tests, we find that there is an average increase of a few points in the I.Q. In some that have shown a gradual decrease in several tests prior to operation we find they level off and remain more or less stationary. It is our feeling that it is the stabilization of the individual that enables them to make a better showing in the psychological testing. They can concentrate better and are more interested in giving a good performance. Many of these individuals do detail work around the institution, on the farm, dairy barn, laundry, etc They are very much more reliable and do not require the constant supervision required before operation. The chief criticism we have had from the psychological angle is the fear that the operation will cause an inferiority complex. Such has not been our experience, either in those in the institution or in those who have been paroled.

A few years ago I appeared on a program before the American Association on Mental Deficiency at Salt Lake City where I read a paper on this subject. One of the doctors, in talking with me before I had appeared on the program, condemned the procedure very bitterly, stating that he could not see how we could advocate such a method, and he continued to state without any interruption on my part that he had very nearly missed the Salt Lake City meeting because he had gone into northern New York to get one of their paroled inmates who had raped a small girl. He went on to state that this was the third time this inmate had committed such an offense. Personally, I would rather see such an individual castrated even if he had an inferiority complex than to be in any way responsible for the damage he had done both physically and mentally to his victims.

The problem of the defective delinquent is one which causes great concern in every feeble-minded institution It is estimated that among those who are institutionalized, about one in five belong to this defective delinquent group. Many institutions have built regular jails where these individuals are confined and supervised as they would be in a penitentiary California is building a separate institution to care for this group.

It is from this group of defective delinquents that we draw our group to be castrated.

Allen of Rochester has said: "Mere maleness influences unfavorably the resistance of the organism of all ages." The object of the study being made by Dr. Hamilton and his associates is to find out "what is a male." We know that the average human male life is 65 years and that of the woman is 70 years at the present time In 365 pathological conditions common to both sexes where a study has been made the male predominates in 245 and the female in 120. In some conditions such as baldness, certain thromboses, cancer of the oral cavity and in many of the so-called degenerative diseases there is a male predominance of 90 percent or better. This cannot be explained in the old theory that the male is subject to greater stress and strain, as this same preponderance is found at all ages, even in the first year of life where the infants have identical care. It is also true in stillbirths as early as sex can be differentiated. It is not only true in the human being but is also true in 70 different species that have been studied, including the mollusks, insects, reptiles and, in fact, practically every species of life.

It is Dr Hamilton's theory that the testicular secretions are responsible for the lesser vitality in males and do so by maintaining a higher active state of function in various tissues and thus burn themselves out. The study of our castrates bears this out as they are not subject to the male predominant diseases. Of those who were castrated over 50 years ago, there are six times as many living today as in the noncastrate group who were in the institution at that time.

Dr Paul White of Boston had a group of associates doing research work in the institution for two weeks during the past summer, and as one of the results of their study, his new book on the heart will contain a statement to the effect that castrates are not subject to the degenerative diseases of the cardiovascular system.

In our total group of cases operated, 14 have been transferred to insane hospitals. During the same period 98 have been so transferred from the institution. Considering them by age groups, the number developing a psychosis is no greater than in the female or the uncastrated male groups. A great majority of these are schizophrenia cases. From our observation we do not believe that castration has any effect either to prevent or to increase liability to a mental breakdown; nor do we believe that castration will decrease the number of epileptic attacks in individuals subject to epilepsy There is no indication that castration has any effect in either of these conditions.

The castrate does not tend to become obese. Sometime ago I took 100 consecutive cases that had been castrated at least five years and their average weight was 142 pounds and height 5 feet 6 inches." Against the standard table of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for this age and height, the average would be 144 pounds. In this regard, it is to be remembered that the average stature of the mentally deficient group is smaller than in normal groups They are not sluggish and lazy. Our group is detailed in the various sections of the institution and all are steady and reliable in their duties. There is no change in pitch of voice if operated after 16 years of age.

Castrates do not tend to become bald. In our cases where they have some baldness before operation it remains the same and does not progress. In following one of the research problems on baldness where we administered testosterone to some of our older castrates it was found the hair started dropping out very rapidly and that the individual followed the pattern of baldness found in his family strain. On stopping the Testosterone the hair ceased to fall out.

Castration is not followed per se by sexual incapacitation. We have discharged cases who had been castrated and are now married and carry on satisfactory sexual relations. However, they have lost their excessive sex urge and exhibitionism and are stabilized to the point where they are no longer potential sex criminals. The argument has been given that these individuals would become sullen, morose and vicious unless they had an emotional outlet in masturbation which makes them more quiet and easier to control. Our experience is exactly the opposite.

We have received a number of admissions in the past solely for the purpose of castration. They were cases that had attempted rape and a number had made sexual advances to their sisters, step-mothers and other members of the family. They had become serious sex problems at home and either by the request of the parents or insistence on the part of neighbors or the law they were committed to our institution for operation. After operation we have kept them in the institution for a few weeks until we feel that they are suitable for parole, when they are returned home where they are a much more simple problem. We have no records of any sex crimes committed by our castrated parolees.

Glandular surgery is not new. It has been carried out for many years and especially is this true with reference to castration of the female. Not many years ago the removal of the ovaries was a frequent operation for almost any female disorder. Today, in taking the medical history in his office every physician frequently encounters a woman who states that her ovaries were removed 15 or 20 years ago. This practice is not as common as it was at one time. It is one that is carried out when indicated, and one usually has the full cooperation of the patient. A few years ago when it was found that castration of the male would lengthen the life and diminish many symptoms in cases of carcinoma of the prostate, it was very difficult to get the consent of the patient for such an operation even when told that he would receive benefit from such a procedure. One is able to get better cooperation at present since this operation has become more common. At times we still encounter great difficulty in getting cooperation. The great reluctance to castration on the part of the male possibly dates back to Phallic worship. We do not castrate many females. The after-effects of such an operation are much more severe in the younger female than in the male. The only ones we recommend for such operation are the vicious homosexuals who attempt to carry on this practice at the table, in the bath, or run around the ward most of the night annoying the other inmates. We have only done about eight such cases in the past 10 years.

Many nonmedical people will ask if a vasectomy will not produce the same result. A vasectomy has no effect upon the testicular hormones. The majority of cases of vasectomy show no change in sexual activity, and of those who do show some change there is a two-to-one preponderance in sexual activity. Vasectomy results in sterilization, and from the standpoint of eugenics is a valuable procedure. However, it cannot be regarded as a treatment of the individual. We are all familiar with the stabilizing and pacifying effect that castration has on the lower animals, especially in the stallion and bull. In fact, most of us have used the expression "as steady as an ox." If we can do anything to pacify the highly emotional criminal mind characteristic of these cases, such a procedure should be given serious consideration.

Following the Pilcher castrations the Kansas legislature in 1917 passed a law allowing asexualizations which has been determined by the court to mean either oophorectomy or orchiectomy. It was the testimony of those connected with the institution in regard to the improvement shown by the Pilcher castrates that secured the passing of this law. The law was last changed in 1928 and it is under this law which we now operate. The procedure is as follows:

1. From our own observation and from the reports of the supervisors a list of candidates is prepared.
2. These individuals are given a physical examination to determine fitness for operation and the type of operation to be advised is determined.
3. The patient and the guardian or parents of the individual are advised 30 days in advance that the board (consisting of the medical director of the institution, the secretary of the State Board of Health, and the three members of the State Social Welfare Board under whose control the institution functions) will meet in Winfield on a certain date to consider the sterilization of this individual, and they may appear before the board to make any protest they wish at that time.
4. On the day set the board meets and the individual is presented. The ward supervisor and medical director offer testimony and recommendations and the protests, if any, are heard. Following this the board renders a decision which is final and mandatory. Protests are rare and are usually cleared up before the meeting.

In summary, we have found that castration improves the sex criminal sociologically in that he usually refrains from his antisocial acts and becomes an acceptable member of society. Psychologically he is stabilized, does not suffer any mental deterioration, and while he may have a moderate degree of an inferiority complex this is favorably balanced by his social improvement. Physically, he is a better organism.

In concluding, I might state I don't know what your mental picture of a castrate is, but I suppose it is like mine was before I knew any of this group: A large, fat, sluggish eunich waving a palm leaf fan in a Turkish harem surrounded by feminine charm and temptation to which he was unable to yield. I can assure you such is not the case. He is a quiet, industrious individual in good health, filling an unfortunate place in nature's program which has been made easier by a simple surgical procedure.

F. Michigan

Michigan has been among the foremost states in legislating special sex psychopathy acts. The original Act No. 165 of 1939 has been amended in Sections 1, 3, 4, and 5 by the 1950 Legislature acting in extra session. (See exhibits 1 and 2.)

The constitutionality of the Michigan act has been upheld in People v. Chapman, 301 Mich. 584; In re Rowan, 305 Mich. 231; In re Kemmerer, 309 Mich. 313; Rowan v. People, 147 F (2) 138; and in Kemmerer v. Benson, 165 F (2) 702.

To date (Dec., 1950) there have been slightly under 400 persons committed in the 11 years of the act's existence.

Governor Williams has appointed a study commission to evaluate new proposals as they develop. The commission has retained Dr. Samuel W. Hartwell, M.D., to assist them in their study.

In addition to the governmental interest and leadership the Detroit News in 1949-50 financed a study which was reported in a series of 16 articles called The Sex Criminal. The writer, Mr. Allen Shoenfield, interviewed authorities in the related fields and his report represents the consensus of their views. The articles touched upon the development of deviated sex behavior, the effects of such conduct upon the community, legal and other obstacles to control of the problem, suggested measures for curbing the adult offender and a long-range program looking toward prevention. Mr. Shoenfield takes a somewhat dim view of the so-called "treatments." His conclusions suggest:

There is no one, complete, readily available cure for this social ill.

The obstacles to the early detection and custodial care of the confirmed sex deviate are virtually insuperable.

Whatever hope there is for amelioration will be found in programs of prevention directed at coming generations.

The attack must be made on many fronts, some of them highly unspectacular.

The cost, rated both in effort and in public expenditures will be considerable.

It is for the public—easily aroused after every revolting sex crime and apathetic between crimes—to determine whether it desires protection from the sex offender badly enough to pay the costs.

Reprints of the 16-article series appearing in the Detroit News, Nov. 20-Dec. 5, 1949, are now available by requesting them from the Detroit News.

Exhibit 1

[No. 165]

An act to define criminal sexual psychopathic persons and to provide for the commitment of such persons and the procedure therefor.

The People of the State of Michigan enact:

[28.967(1)] Criminal sexual psychopathic person; defined.

Section 1. Any person who is suffering from a mental disorder and is not insane or feeble-minded, which mental disorder has existed for a period of not less than 1 year and is coupled with criminal propensities to the commission of sex offenses is hereby declared to be a criminal sexual psychopathic person.

[28.967(2)] Same; jurisdiction.

Sec. 2. Jurisdiction of criminal sexual psychopathic persons charged with criminal offense is vested in the circuit courts of the state, the recorders court of the city of Detroit, and the superior court of the city of Grand Rapids.

[28.967(3)] Same; statement filed by prosecuting attorney against accused.

Sec. 3. When any person is charged with a criminal offense and it shall appear that such person is a criminal sexual psychopathic person, then the prosecuting attorney of such county, or the attorney general, may file with the clerk of the court in the same proceeding wherein such person stands charged with such criminal offense, a statement in writing setting forth facts tending to show that such person is a criminal sexual psychopathic person.

[28.967(4)] Examination by psychiatrists, report; proceedings prior to trial.

Sec. 4. Upon the filing of such petition, the court shall appoint 2 qualified psychiatrists to make a personal examination of such alleged criminal sexual psychopathic person who shall file with the court a report in writing of the results of their examination together with their conclusions and recommendations. In the event that both of such psychiatrists in such report state their conclusions to the effect that such person is a criminal sexual psychopathic person, then proceedings shall be had as provided in this act prior to trial of such person upon the criminal offense with which he then stands charged.

[28.967(5)] Hearing; jury; testimony; commitment to state hospital commission.

Sec. 5. Upon a hearing held for that purpose the court without a jury, unless a jury is demanded prior to said hearing and within 15 days after the filing of the last of said reports, shall ascertain whether or not such person is a criminal sexual psychopathic person. Upon such hearing it shall be competent to introduce evidence of the commission by such person of any number of similar crimes together with the record of the punishment inflicted therefor. If such person is determined to be a criminal sexual psychopathic person, then the court shall commit such person to the state hospital commission to be confined in an appropriate state institution under the jurisdiction of either the state hospital commission or the department of corrections until such person shall have fully and permanently recovered from such psychopathy.

[28.967(6)] Parole; authority of state hospital commission.

Sec. 6. The state hospital commission shall have the right to release such person upon parole to such persons and under such conditions as his condition, in the judgment of the state hospital commission, merits.

[28.967(7)] Discharge; petition, hearing; jury.

Sec. 7. Such criminal sexual psychopathic person shall be discharged only after he shall have fully recovered from such psychopathy. At any time, when he shall appear to have so recovered, a petition in writing setting forth the facts showing such recovery may be filed with the clerk of the court by which he was committed and such court shall proceed to determine whether or not he has fully recovered from such psychopathy. Jury trial of such issue may be had, if demanded before the trial of said issue and within 15 days after the filing of such petition.

If, following such hearing, such person is found to have fully recovered from such psychopathy, then the court shall order such person to be discharged from the custody of the state hospital commission. In the event such person is found to have not fully recovered from such psychopathy, then the court shall order such person to be returned to the custody of the state hospital commission to be held under the previous commitment of such person.

[28.967(8)] Trial upon original charge prohibited.

Sec. 8. No person who is found in such original hearing to be a criminal sexual psychopathic person and such finding having become final, may thereafter he tried upon the offense with which he originally stood charged in the committing court at the time of the filing of the original petition.

[28.967(9)] Expense of care; recovery.

Sec. 9. The state shall defray all expenses of such person while so confined in a state institution and may recover the amount so paid from such person.

Approved June 6, 1939.

Act 25

STATE OF MICHIGAN

65th Legislature, Extra Session of 1950

ENROLLED HOUSE BILL NO. 20

An act to amend sections 1, 3, 4 and 5 of Act No. 165 of the Public Acts of 1939, entitled "An act to define criminal sexual psychopathic persons and to provide for the commitment of such persons and the procedure therefor," as amended, being sections 780.501, 780.503, 780.504 and 780.505, respectively, of the Compiled Laws of 1948.

The People of the State of Michigan enact:

Section 1. Sections 1, 3, 4 and 5 of Act No. 165 of the Public Acts of 1939, as amended, being sections 780.501, 780.503, 780.504 and 780.505, respectively, of the Compiled Laws of 1948, are hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 1. Any person who is suffering from a mental disorder and is not feeble-minded, which mental disorder is coupled with criminal propensities to the commission of sex offenses is hereby declared to be a criminal sexual psychopathic person.

Sec. 3. When any person is charged with a criminal offense, or has been convicted of or has pleaded guilty to such offense and has been placed on probation, or has been convicted or pleaded guilty to such offense but has not yet been sentenced, and it shall appear that such person is a criminal sexual psychopathic person, as evidenced by such mental disorder which has existed for a period of not less than 4 months, then the prosecuting attorney of such county, or the attorney general, or some one on behalf of the person charged, may file with the clerk of the court in the same proceeding wherein such person stands charged with, or has been convicted of, or has pleaded guilty to such criminal offense, a statement in writing setting forth facts tending to show that such person is a criminal sexual psychopathic person.

Sec. 4. Upon the filing of such statement by the prosecuting attorney or the attorney general the court shall, or if filed on behalf of the accused the court shall, appoint 3 psychiatrists qualified by at least 5 years of exclusive practice in psychiatric diagnosis and treatment and chosen from a list consisting of not less than 6 compiled by the department of mental health to make a personal examination of such alleged criminal sexual psychopathic person who shall file with the court a report in writing of the results of their examination together with their conclusions. Said report shall be open to the inspection of the accused or his counsel, but shall not be competent evidence in any other proceeding against accused except the hearing to inquire into his alleged psychopathy. Said alleged psychopath shall be required to answer the questions propounded by such psychiatrists under penalty of contempt of court: Provided, That such examination shall not violate common law privileges or constitutional privileges against self incrimination. In the event that all 3 of such psychiatrists in such reports state their conclusions to the effect that such person is a criminal sexual psychopathic person with a written statement of the facts on which such conclusions are based, then proceedings shall be had as provided in this act prior to a trial of such person upon the criminal offense with which he then stands charged, or prior to sentence if he then stands convicted and has not been placed on probation, or prior to completion of probation sentence: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall prevent any person within the purview of section 1 of this act from voluntarily submitting himself to treatment for mental disorder under the provisions of section 9a of Act No. 151 of the Public Acts of 1923, as amended, being section 330.19a of the Compiled Laws of 1948, prior to conviction or plea of guilty on the charge specified in section 3 of this act: Provided further, That voluntary submission for treatment shall in no way prevent the prosecuting attorney or the attorney general, as the case may be, from proceeding to obtain a conviction and sentence or a conviction and further proceedings under this act if in his opinion the public health, safety and welfare requires such action either prior to, during or after the conclusion of such voluntary submission for treatment.

Sec. 5. Upon a hearing held for that purpose the court without a jury, unless a jury is demanded within 15 days after the filing and service upon the accused or his counsel of said reports with notice thereto attached, to the defendant, of his right to demand a jury trail, shall ascertain whether or not such person is a criminal sexual psychopathic person. Upon such hearing it shall be competent to introduce evidence of the commission by such person of any number of crimes involving sexual motivation of which the accused may theretofore have been convicted, together with the record of the punishment inflicted therefor. If such person is determined to be a criminal sexual psychopathic person, then the court shall commit such person to the state hospital commission to be confined in an appropriate state institution under the jurisdiction of either the state hospital commission or the department of corrections until the superintendent of the institution shall have reasonable grounds to believe that such person has recovered from such psychopathy.

This act is ordered to take immediate effect.

G. New Hampshire

The New Hampshire sexual psychopath law (Chapter 314, Laws of 1949) became effective on July 28, 1949. The law is operative and as of December 15, 1950, there had been 30 commitments.

There are no proposals for amendment or modification pending at this time.

H. New Jersey

Progress has been made in New Jersey as the result of a study by the New Jersey Commission on the Habitual Sex Offender created by the New Jersey Legislature March 10, 1949. The commission's report, published February, 1950, was formulated by Paul Tappan, Ph.D. and JSD., as technical consultant.

The New Jersey report was an excellent attack on the problem and attempted to gather together and formulate present thinking and knowledge in the field. To do this, the commission made a study of existing literature on the subject. Next, it held hearings with authorities in many fields and gathered their opinions. Thirdly, it sent questionnaires to many representatives of the following three groups: psychiatrists, principals of public schools, and parent teacher associations in New Jersey. From this material, the commission gathered valuable data concerning current thinking on the sex crime problem for the report.

The fallacies concerning the sex offender are reported and then debunked by the commission. These fallacies included:

(1) That there are tens of thousands of homicidal sex fiends abroad in the land.

(2) That sex offenders are usually recidivists.

(3) That the sex offender progresses to more serious types of sex crimes.

(4) That it is possible to predict the danger of serious crimes being committed by sex deviates.

(5) That sex psychopathy or sex deviation is a clinical entity.

(6) That these individuals are oversexed.

(7) That effective treatment methods to cure deviated sex offenders are already known and employed.

(8) That the laws passed recently in one-fourth of the states are getting at the brutal, vicious sex criminal.

(9) That the sex problem can be solved merely by passing a new law on it.

The administrative experience of the states which have adopted sexual psychopath laws is reported and discussed at length by the commission. The report also discusses the problem of definition of important words used in this field. It is noteworthy that the report accents the treatment and prevention approach and gives what information it could gather on these subjects. There is an article apparently drawing material from this report which appears in the November 15th issue of Colliers Magazine.

The recommendations of the New Jersey Commission are as follows:

(1) Extend mental hygiene clinic services on state and municipal levels.

(2) Acquaint administrators in schools with the available mental hygiene facilities.

(3) Encourage adult education on sex and family life.

(4) Exhort the churches to make active efforts to develop adequate family life education.

(5) Develop family life training in public schools.

(6) Select, educate and train teachers to understand the mental hygiene needs of students.

(7) Encourage medical and public health authorities to provide public education in sex and mental hygiene.

(8) Provide for the voluntary self-commitment of sexual deviates.

(9) Upon the conviction for rape, sodomy, carnal abuse or impairing the morals of a minor, defendant should be remanded by the judge to the New Jersey Diagnostic Center at Menlo Park for diagnosis and treatment if needed.

(10) Such treatment should include four possibilities:

(a) Probation with out-patient psychiatric treatment.

(b) Commitment in a specialized facility for psychiatric treatment followed by parole supervision.

(c) Commitment in a state mental hospital followed by parole supervision.

(d) Commitment in a correctional institution followed by parole supervision.

(11) Provide an institution to conduct research into the cure and rehabilitation of sexual offenders.

(12) Release offenders from any institution to which committed before the expiration of the maximum prison term he might have received.

(13) Develop administrative machinery in the Department of Institutions and Agencies to handle this problem.

(14) Acquaint judges, prosecutors, police and administrative officials with the purpose and procedures of new legislation.

(15) Encourage the local police departments to use the modus operandi files of the New Jersey State Police at Trenton headquarters.

As a result of this report, the New Jersey Legislature enacted statutes to carry out these recommendations. The legislature enacted Chapter 207 of their 1950 laws and repealed the 1949 statute which was the first legislative effort made by New Jersey in relationship to the sex offender. Since that time the Menlo Park Diagnostic Center has been carrying on an active program of diagnosis, treatment, and research.

The New Jersey experience includes 430 commitments to December, 1950. The procedure involves a psychiatric examination after conviction and permits the psychiatric board to recommend hospitalization or return to court for sentencing in accordance with the general rules of the criminal law. Some 30 percent of the 430 persons handled thus far have been hospitalized with the balance returned to the courts.

Governor Driscoll's administration is not in support of any modification or proposal affecting the present law which has been presented to date. The opinion of the New Jersey Legislature and Governor Driscoll appears to be that while their statute is admittedly inadequate they are determined to proceed slowly.

Exhibit 3

SENATE, No. 193

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

Introduced March 6, 1950

By MR. CAFIERO

Referred to Committee on Institutions and Agencies

An act concerning the disposition of persons convicted of certain enumerated sex crimes and providing for sentence, incarceration and treatment, repealing chapter twenty of the laws of one thousand nine hundred and forty-nine, and supplementing chapter one hundred ninety-two of Title 2 of the Revised Statutes.

BE IT ENACTED by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey:

1. Whenever a person is convicted of the offense of rape, carnal abuse, sodomy or impairing the morals of a minor or of an attempt to commit any of the aforementioned offenses, the judge shall order the commitment of such person to the Diagnostic Center for a period not to exceed sixty days. While confined in the said Diagnostic Center, such person shall be given a complete physical and mental examination.

2. Upon completion of the physical and mental examination of such person, but in no event later than sixty days after the date of the order of commitment, a written report of the results thereof shall be sent to the court.

3. If it shall appear from said report that it has been determined through clinical findings that the offender's conduct was characterized by

(a) a pattern of repetitive, compulsive behavior; and

(b) either violence; or

(c) any age disparity from which it shall appear that the victim was under the age of fifteen years and the offender is an adult aggressor; it shall be the duty of the court, upon recommendation of the Diagnostic Center, to submit the offender to a program of specialized treatment for his mental and physical aberrations

4. The disposition to be made by the court of such person, upon written report and recommendation of the Diagnostic Center, shall include one or more of the following measures:

(a) The court may place such person on probation with the requirement, as a condition of said probation, that he receive out-patient psychiatric treatment in the manner to be prescribed in each individual case.

(b) Such person may be committed to an institution to be designated by the Commissioner of Institutions and Agencies for treatment and upon release shall be subject to parole supervision.

In the event that the court shall order a commitment of the person as provided in this section, such order of commitment shall not specify a minimum period of detention, but in no event shall the person be confined or subject to parole supervision for a period of time greater than that provided by law for the crime of which such person was convicted.

5. The Commissioner of the Department of Institutions and Agencies, upon commitment of such person, shall thereupon arrange for his treatment in one of the institutions under the jurisdiction of the department which, in the judgment of the commissioner, is best suited to care for the needs of such person. The commissioner, in his discretion, is hereby authorized and empowered to arrange for the transfer of such person to or from any institution within the jurisdiction of the department for the purpose of providing for the needs and requirements of such person according to the individual circumstances of the case

6. Any person committed to confinement, as provided for in section four hereof, may be released under parole supervision when it shall appear to the satisfaction of the commissioner, after recommendation by a special classification review board appointed by the State Board of Control of Institutions and Agencies, that such person is capable of making an acceptable social adjustment in the community. It shall be the duty of the chief executive officer of any institution wherein such a person is confined to report in writing at least semiannually to the commissioner concerning the physical and mental condition of such person with a recommendation as to his continued confinement or consideration for release on parole by said special committee. The State Board of Control of Institutions and Agencies is hereby authorized and empowered to promulgate rules and regulations for the parole, revocation thereof for cause, and the proper supervision on parole of said persons when released from confinement.

7. If it shall appear from the report of such examination made of such person that the offender's conduct was not characterized by a pattern of repetitive, compulsive behavior and neither violence nor age disparity was indicated, as provided for in section three hereof, the court shall impose sentence on such person in the manner provided by law.

8. No statute relating to remission of sentence by way of commutation time for good behavior and for work performed shall apply to any such person committed pursuant to section four hereof, but provision may be made for monetary compensation in amount to be prescribed by the State Board of Control of Institutions and Agencies, in lieu of remission of sentence for work performed.

9. The commissioner shall determine and fix the per capita cost of examining and maintaining any person committed to the Diagnostic Center and shall notify each county treasurer monthly of the number of persons committed from the several counties, and upon certification by the commissioner of the amount due, the board of chosen freeholders of the county shall make provision for payment of one-half of the cost thereof to the Diagnostic Center, the remaining one-half to be borne by the State.

10. Except as otherwise provided herein, the provisions of Title 30, Revised Statutes, and the rules and regulations promulgated by the State Board of Control pursuant thereto regarding supervision of persons released on parole and revocation of parole shall apply to any such person released on parole as provided herein.

11. Any person, believing himself to be suffering from a physical or mental condition which may result in sexual trends dangerous to the welfare of the public, may make application, upon forms to be prescribed by the Department of Institutions and Agencies, for voluntary admission to the Diagnostic Center for the purpose of receiving diagnosis therein. When such application is approved and such person is admitted, he shall be given a complete physical and mental examination. If it shall appear, as a result of such examination, that such person does in fact suffer from a physical or mental condition which may result in sexual trends of the type that might prove dangerous to the welfare of the general public, this fact shall be certified to such person and to the Commissioner of Institutions and Agencies. If such person thereupon indicates a desire to receive treatment for such condition, he may make application for voluntary admission to an institution to be designated by the commissioner and upon approval of such application he may be received in the designated institution and shall there receive the treatment indicated by the circumstances in the individual case. If such person is possessed of sufficient financial ability to defray all or a portion of the cost of his care and treatment, he shall be required so to do. If such person shall desire to leave such institution and discontinue the treatments being received by him, he shall be required to give five days' notice, in writing, to the chief executive officer of the institution of his intention to leave.

12. "An act concerning the sentencing of persons convicted of certain crime and providing for the place of their incarceration, and supplementing chapter one hundred ninety-two of Title 2 of the Revised Statutes," approved April eleventh, one thousand nine hundred and forty-nine, is repealed.

13. This act shall take effect immediately.

I. New York

New York has been the scene of significant developments in the sex crime field. A 20-month study of 102 sex offenders at Sing Sing Prison was completed this year and the report was published. Recommendations were made to Governor Dewey and the legislature and, as a result, important legislation was enacted to take effect April 1, 1950.

The 102 sex offenders selected for study did not represent any sort of cross-section. They were offenders in prison who had committed serious crimes, especially crimes against women and children.

The offenders were studied by psychiatrists, psychologists and psychiatric social workers. The folios on each grew large as data was gathered concerning their histories, characteristics, and former associates. In 40 cases psychiatric treatment was given to the offenders in prison or on parole. General observations were made as a result of the study. We report them by quoting the following excerpts:

1. Mental Disorder

"Of the 102 men studied, every one suffered from some type of mental or emotional disorder, though not usually so pronounced as to meet the legal definition of mental illness. These varied in type and intensity, from psychosis to neurosis. In many cases the behavior patterns could not be fitted into any clear-cut psychiatric classifications. The disturbances and symptoms were often of a mixed nature. It should be noted that, while sex crime often is a manifestation of a mental or emotional disorder, there is no known mental disorder that presupposes the commission of sex crimes A mental disorder may exist without causing overt aggression against others."

2. Deprivation in Childhood

"Almost all of these 102 men had histories of unusually unfavorable childhoods with severe emotional deprivation. Psychiatric and psychological studies disclosed that basically they all felt they had suffered from neglect or rejection. Their parents, or whoever brought them up, were usually dominating, often brutal or often over-indulgent."

3. Irrational Motivation

"As to motivation, we have found a great deal of irrationality among all these offenders.

"When these offenders were asked at the time of their sentences why they committed their crimes, they frequently replied: 'I don't know.' Upon psychiatric examination, we have found in many cases that they actually do not understand why they committed their offenses and that they consider the very acts for which they have been imprisoned to be most reprehensible."

4. Hostility

"There is an overwhelming amount of hostility in all these sexual offenders, which often expresses itself in extreme brutality (sadism) in the acts they commit This hostility appears to be directly related to the hostility or neglect to which they were subjected as children."

5. Resentment Against Authority

"Most of these offenders display, to a potentially or actually dangerous degree, a hatred and resentment against authority and persons representing authority. This could well be explained as a carry-over from earlier unexpressed resentment and hostility against parental authority or whoever represented that authority."

6. Alcoholism

"Alcoholism is an associated and often precipitating factor in over half (56) of the 102 cases The tendencies which get these men into trouble with the law can seemingly be held in check when they are sober, but when they have had too much to drink, impulsive antisocial behavior occurs. The extensive alcoholic consumption so often found among offenders is a means of release from intense anxiety and a vicarious gratification of other deeper needs. The mental and physical deterioration of the confirmed alcoholic is an important factor in many cases."

7. Intelligence of Offenders

"The intelligence of these 102 offenders is for the most part equal to that of the average general population. None of them rated mentally as low as a moron. If the group studied had been larger, or selected more at random, it probably would have included mental defectives. In a previous study of 925 paroled sex offenders, 581 were mentally examined, of which 197 were classified as feeble-minded. The present finding indicates, however, that as a cause of sex crime of the more serious sorts selected for this study emotional factors are more important than intellectual deficiency. The offenders examined did not commit their crimes because they intellectually knew no better. Rather, they did so because of motor impulses too strong for them to control."

A classification of offenders was made according to their predisposition to violence, their suitability for psychiatric treatment and their probable adaptability to society. The classification and number of offenders in each group was as follows:

A. Offenders who are predisposed to crimes of violence, are likely to commit new attacks if released, and are not treatable by present known methods 18

B. Offenders who, because of personality makeup, hate or alcoholism are not suitable for treatment at present and who are likely after release to continue as a danger to public morals and to women and children 32

C. Offenders who, because of their treatability, could be placed in a treatment center with a good prospect of improvement before release 44

D. Offenders who, because of their treatability, could be released on parole and treated on an out-patient basis 8

The methods used in treatment were most of the available methods as they are listed in Chapter 6 of this committee's Preliminary Report. The New York Report stressed, however, that in psycho-therapy success can be had only where the patient cooperates. The first step is thus to establish rapport or positive relationship between patient and therapist.

Conclusions were reached and recommendations were made as a result of this study. The recommendations were as follows:

Recommendation I

"Psychiatric service to the Department of Correction and the Board of Parole is now inadequate; as a means of remedying this, we recommend that legislation be enacted placing responsibility on the Commissioner of Mental Hygiene for providing psychiatric and psychological service to the state's correctional agencies."

Recommendation II

"The need exists for further research in this field, for further psychiatric work with offenders, and for training of personnel for this work; therefore we recommend the continuance and expansion of the present research project, with a view to the eventual establishment of a permanent Institute of Criminal Behavior to carry out these purposes."

Recommendation III

"We recommend that legislation be enacted requiring that all persons convicted of sex felonies in New York State be examined, before the court imposes sentence, by a team of publicly employed psychiatrists who shall make use of psychological testing and social work reports."

Recommendation IV

"The need exists for law to protect women and children from certain dangerous sex offenders who, under present law, are held in prison for limited periods and then must be released, regardless of whether there is any improvement of the mental or emotional condition which caused them to commit abnormal crimes against the person; therefor,

"We recommend legislation providing that when any offender be convicted of rape or sodomy involving the use of force or violence, or against small children, or convicted of felonious assault involving a sexual purpose, the court after psychiatric examination of such offender may sentence such offender to serve an indeterminate sentence having a minimum of one day and a maximum of the duration of his natural life;

"We recommend further that, whenever an offender shall be sentenced to such a term of from one day to life, the law shall impose upon the Department of Mental Hygiene, the Department of Correction and the Board of Parole the solemn duty of giving his case prompt and intensive study, to be followed where feasible by therapeutic treatment, to the end that such offender may be rehabilitated and released whenever it may appear that he is a good risk on parole. When serving under this form of sentence, it should be required that a prisoner receive thorough psychiatric examination not less than once every two years, and consideration by the Parole Board."

The New York Legislature promptly put into effect all four of these recommendations.

In response to the first recommendation, the Department of Mental Hygiene was given responsibility to provide psychiatric and psychological services for the Department of Correction and the Department of Parole. These services will be provided for study, examination, diagnosis, and treatment of prisoners and parolees. In addition, personnel will be assigned to operate diagnostic and psychiatric clinics and to conduct research.

In response to the second recommendation for continuing research, the New York Legislature authorized and directed the Commissioner of Correction to set up psychiatric and diagnostic clinics in institutions he deems necessary. The clinics are given the duty to make scientific study of selected prisoners.

The third recommendation was also followed. Since April 1, 1950, all persons convicted in New York State of sex felonies have been given a pre-sentence examination. The examination is made by court appointed psychiatrists who render the court a complete written report. Costs for the examination are to be born by the county in which the defendant was tried. The costs may be recovered by the county from the estate of the defendant or a relative legally responsible for his support.

The fourth recommendation to provide special safeguards for women and children from men who have been convicted of certain "serious crimes" against them was also carried into a new law. In the first place, the legislature established degrees of seriousness in the crimes of rape, sodomy, fellatio, and cunnilingus. Crimes involving force and/or children were made first degree sex crimes.

The legislature next provided an alternative indeterminate sentence of from one day to life for these "serious crimes." Judges were given the option of awarding a regular sentence, or the indeterminate one day to life sentence after the convicted offender had been subjected to a pre-sentence psychiatric examination. The law provides that such persons as are sentenced to the indeterminate one day to life sentence are to receive such psychiatric service as is possible and which they will accept while they are imprisoned. The law also provides safeguards against a man's being "forgotten," for periodic examinations of every such case are to be made by the Parole Board and psychiatrists at two-year intervals to determine whether he is a good parole risk or is to be released completely.

J. Ohio

Ohio has an interesting history with respect to special legislation upon the sex question. The Ohio General Assembly in 1937 adopted the Ascherman Act which concerned itself with "abnormal offenders." Amended in 1945, the act is regarded as adequate. It provides for the commitment of sex felons to the State Department of Public Welfare. The committing authority is the court having jurisdiction over the felony of which said offender was convicted. This procedure includes the provision that an offender may be handled in a manner which retains him for life if necessary. An offender who, in the judgment of the court should be hospitalized may be so hospitalized by order of that court. Said offender may then be detained until in the judgment of the psychiatrists at the institution of placement he may be returned to society without endangering the safety of others.

Considerable study went into the legislation not only at its outset but in 1941 when the Public Health Federation appointed a committee which recommended mandatory psychiatric examinations for all serious criminal offenders. The committee further recommended that sex offenders be so identified throughout the entire court procedure, to reduce the practice of permitting persons charged with a sex violation to plead guilty to a different class of crime. Other recommendations were that sex offenders be segregated for study, that an indeterminate sentence be imposed upon serious sex offenders, and that a research program be instituted by the State of Ohio.

A Governor's committee in 1944 commented that the methods of handling serious sex offenders were inadequate and recommended an institution for the psychopathic sex violator. Plans for this institution were completed and it is now under construction. It will be ready for use by 1952.

In 1950 a committee of the Public Health Federation at 312 West Ninth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, was commissioned to study the situation with the thought of constructive recommendations. This group reviewed the Hamilton County study, the report of the special committee for the Advancement of Psychiatry (reported in California's Preliminary Report), Abrahamsen's report on his "102 offenders in Sing Sing" and the Cleveland Bar Association's 1950 study. The conclusions of the Public Health Committee were:

That while the extent of the problem is real and should not be underestimated, it is probably no greater than other crimes of violence.

That the Ohio statute of 1945 is essentially adequate—that it is ineffective not because of deficiency in law but in that suitable institutions for the care and treatment of the offenders are lacking.

The Committee Recommended:

1. Funds for construction and maintenance of institutions for handling segregated sex offenders.

2. A special institution for the care and placing of mentally deficient (feeble-minded) offenders. The committee believes that such offenders present a separate problem from those characterized by compulsive, irresponsible behavior and require different care.

3. An effort be directed toward the provision of psychiatric clinics in conjunction with the courts for the purpose of enabling them to conduct examinations of offenders whose conduct fell within abnormal limits.

4. That a study be made re the advisability of including misdemeanants convicted in courts of record where the facts suggested need for psychiatric review.

5. Adequate appropriations to provide for a continued research by a qualified staff.

The 1950 Ohio Legislature through a Committee on Sex Crimes offered a report prepared by Professor Walter C. Reckless of Ohio State University. The report follows:

Observations and Suggestions Relative to the Abnormal Sex Offender

Prepared for

The Ohio Program Commission's Committee on Sex Crimes

July 13, 1950

WALTER C. RECKLESS, PH.D.
Professor of Social Administration, Ohio State University

THE GENERAL CONCERN ABOUT SEX ABNORMALITIES

The members of the committee, the public of the State of Ohio, our public officials, and members of our legislative body, need to realize that sex deviation covers a terrific range of behavior, only some of which has gotten translated into law and thereby defining sex crimes. There is a tendency on the part of laymen, to think that any irregularity is dangerous. Some irregularities are quite dangerous and some are not dangerous, although in most instances they offend public morals. The norm which the American public follows in its concern about sex deviation and sex crimes, is the moral norm of no sex outlet or sex expression outside of marriage.

The average layman is concerned about masturbation, bestiality, homosexuality including Lesbianism among women, sadism, masochism, prostitution, incest, ordinary promiscuity, adultery, bigamy, rape, exhibitionism, circulating pornographic art, and many other common forms of sex deviation. The average layman, however, hasn't heard much about fetishism, which would shock him horribly but yet, for the most part, is not a public danger. Likewise, the average layman in this Country has not heard much about male prostitution, which again would shock him but which is not any more easily combatted than Lesbianism among women, or ordinary prostitution and is not one of the more serious threats to safety and morals.

DELIMITING THE DANGEROUS SEX OFFENDER

I take it that this committee, our legislature, and the State of Ohio should be concerned with the more aggressive and somewhat violent forms of sex crimes—those that threaten the safety of individuals. From this standpoint, I take it that we are not concerned with the great number of somewhat masculine women who live with other women and take more passive women out to dinner and seat them at tables. However, we would be concerned with the masculine woman who is so aggressive as to do violence to another woman or girl, if the prey or victim complained. In the same vein, I take it that we cannot be concerned with all the homosexual alliances that are made and maintained, because we would be breaking up many indecent but happy homosexual relations and courtships. However, we recognize that there are aggressive homosexuals, whose energies are turned on the wrong persons who truly become victims which need our protection.

Moreover, incest is a pretty sordid and horrible sort of behavior but it does happen in rural slums and urban slums, where the mother is annually pregnant and the older daughter becomes available to the father, as a sort of duty. Our juvenile courts get a few of such complaints every year but these are just a few of the total number of instances. In many instances, the daughter does not want to complain on the father. I think we should let the juvenile court handle this matter. We get concerned also about bigamy and it is discovered every now and again but we no longer get too incensed about it and it is not much of a threat to public safety.

A great many of the sex deviations and abnormalities are in the nature of private vices, such as fetishism and if not private vices at least they are kept within the confines of private life and very seldom come to the surface. Masochism and sadism both usually fall into this category, as do special perversions.

I think, therefore, it would be well for us, as a committee, to take the position that we are trying to devise ways and means to control such sex offenders as those who commit rape (true rape), sodomy, carnal abuse, and who tamper with a minor, or any attempts to commit such offenses. There is a legal no man's land in impairing the morals of a minor, which needs to be guarded against. An 18-year-old boy can be found in the compromising situation with a girl under 18 and can be arrested by the police for contributing to the delinquency of a minor and actually, the girl might be more sophisticated than the boy. The police bring in cases to the juvenile court on just such a basis.

CRITERIA FOR DETERMINING SERIOUS SEX CRIMINALS

This leads to one important criteria which was recognized in the New Jersey report, namely, the criterion of age disparity. Before we should get greatly concerned about carnal knowledge, contributing to delinquency of a minor, or impairing the morals of a minor, we should make certain that the aggressor is much older than the minor and just not a year or two apart. This is a matter which is not easily translatable into law but it is a criterion which could guide our courts and police which, after all, are going to be the main lines of our social defense.

Another criterion, likewise mentioned in the New Jersey Report, which is necessary for the delineation of the abnormal sex offender is the repetitive and compulsive nature of the sex aggression. The abnormal sex offender should have somewhat of a verifiable history of the same or similar acts over a period of time. For example: Suppose we have a married man or unmarried man who frequents parks and playgrounds where small girls play. He entices them away to some secluded spot and exhibits himself, etc. It would be important to know that he has done this many times before and that he has been complained upon for this before, or that, if not complained upon, he actually cannot keep from doing this. Here again, we cannot write into the law that a person, in order to be brought under control and treatment as an abnormal sex offender, must be proven before a court of law to be a compulsive sex deviant and a repetitive sex deviant. Nevertheless, our officers who make investigations, our courts who hear statements and testimonies and read special reports and investigations, and our special diagnostic facilities in our institutions, need to be mindful of the criterion of establishing repetitive compulsive behavior. The establishment of this fact must be done by the agencies provided by law rather than covered in the law.

Finally, a third criterion, also mentioned by the New Jersey Report, is that of violence. If a person is violently victimized by an aggressive sex offender, we have need to be greatly concerned. This represents the element of actual physical harm, terror, and force. This aspect of sex abnormality can more nearly be described by law and determined by ordinary court procedure.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. We need to develop, therefore, a coordinated policy of social defense in our law enforcement agencies, courts, probation departments, jails, and penal institutions, according to which policy the violently aggressive sex criminal, the repetitive-compulsive sex offender, and the older person victimizing young children (especially under 15) are held for special handling and procedure.

2. I would suggest that the Ascherman Act be amended to enable the lower courts, as well as the common pleas courts, to commit such types of sex offenders, for observation and recommendation, to a special facility to be operated by the Division of Corrections of the State Department of Welfare. At this facility there would be a staff of necessary medical men, psychiatrists, psychologists, sociologists, and other experts, who would be capable of making a thorough study of all aspects of persons so committed for a period of at least 60 days observation. The clinical staff of this facility should prepare a report for the committing court, giving the necessary information and recommendations. In accordance with this report, the court could take any regularly constituted action such as a fine or regular sentence. The court could also place the person under supervision to one of its officers, which would mean probation, or the court could give a special suspension of sentence provided the person accept certain recommended forms of treatment and report periodically to the court. The court should be empowered by amended law to commit persons found to be dangerous sex offenders, according to the criteria above, on an indeterminate sentence of one year to life to this special facility of the Division of Corrections, if commitment to this facility was indicated by the clinicians after an original commitment for 60-day study and observation.

3. Likewise, a law would be needed creating a special institutional facility in the Division of Corrections, which would carry appropriation for building site, treatment facilities, and protective custody. Ample appropriation would need to be made for staff and operating expenses.

4. There is one special phase of this special institutional facility that is important. This institution should have a guidance department with trained workers who can make necessary supplementary social investigations, who can act as guides and counselors to the individuals while in the institution and act as parole workers when individuals are recommended for release.

5. Another special point is that the parole work, out of this facility, would have to be very special and would have to be separated from the Bureau of Probation and Parole, which in the foreseeable future, would never be able to reach the professional competency to handle these sex offenders on the outside.

6. We would need to have a policy of parole furloughs in which the person is tried out in the free community for very limited periods of time, returning thereafter to the institution. Under the life indeterminate sentence procedures, committed individuals would perpetually be on parole and could always be returned to the institution as need required. In preparing a committed person for release, a series of parole furloughs which amount to preliminary trials, should be used.

7. Legal provision should be made for the voluntary commitment of an abnormal sex deviant, just as in the instance of the voluntary commitment of a drug addict to federal facilities. A voluntary commitment could be accomplished by a request to the special institution by a competent physician and a verified investigation by a member of the guidance department of this institution. I favor a verified social investigation by such a worker because he would be much more skilled in determining the need for such institutionalization and because the special institution, which is on the receiving end would, therefore, need to control its voluntary intake by such means. Voluntary commitments should be charged per diem according to their ability to pay. They should be released by the superintendent any time upon their own demand, as is true in the instance of drug addicts who voluntarily commit themselves to the federal narcotic farm.

8. When inmates, committed under the life-time indeterminate sentence to the proposed special institution, are furloughed on parole, a special security plan would need to be developed for each case so furloughed. While we do not want such parolees hounded by parole agents or police, we do want very constant vigilance. Special arrangements would need to be made with the police in each parolee's community, so that the inmate can be kept under adequate surveillance, while the counselor from the institution, acting as the parole agent, proceeds with the plan of readjustment in the community. This is not a matter of law but a matter of definite arrangements with the institutional authority and the police departments.

9. It is suggested that funds be appropriated to the Division of Corrections, to have a staff of experts conduct regional schools for police and sheriffs' deputies in the matter of proper screening and booking of the serious, aggressive sex offender as outlined above. At the present time, most of the serious exhibitionists, for example, are not acted on when complained upon, or are booked for some minor offense such as disorderly conduct. The same for other serious sex offenders. This can be overcome by developing one or two well schooled policemen or deputies in each law enforcement office, who can instruct the rest of the department in the particulars of the approach to the serious sex offender. Likewise, administrative heads of police departments and sheriffs' offices will need to be brought together in conferences to develop plans for the reasonable surveillance of sex criminals, when they are released on furlough. Such conferences will need experts to handle them and a fund, likewise, appropriated for this item to the Department of Corrections of the Department of Public Welfare.

10. Regional conferences will need to be held for judges of all courts handling delinquency, domestic relations, misdemeanant, and felony cases, in order to orient them properly for an integrated state-wide procedure for handling the serious sex offender. Funds would need to be appropriated, as above, for the conduct of such regional meetings, by a group of experts.

11. Special institutes should be conducted by the Ohio Probation and Parole Association and funds as above, should be used to get experts here to help pave the approach of investigation and possible supervision to the abnormal sex offender.

12. A full-time research unit for the study of the abnormal sex offender should be created. This unit could most appropriately be housed in the new institutional facility recommended in this report. It should consist primarily of persons who have trained competency in research and criminology. Funds should be appropriated for the research unit during the initial years of its operation but thereafter, it should be possible to earmark the moneys collected on per diem, from voluntary commitments for the upkeep of this research unit.

K. Pennsylvania

At the University of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, a Committee for Criminological Research is functioning under the chairmanship of Gerald Pascal, Ph.D., associate professor. The committee is programming research in the Pittsburgh area and has selected sex crimes as its first project.

Membership of the committee includes two psychiatrists, two psychologists, one sociologist, one police inspector, three judges, and one practicing attorney. The members intend to invite a member of the chamber of commerce to join the committee. The committee is aided by cooperation from the penitentiary and the police.

The chairman of the committee, Gerald Pascal, Ph.D., is conducting several studies of sex offenders imprisoned at the penitentiary. He and a few graduate students are conducting Rorshach (ink blot) tests. The different groups they are studying include rapists, pedophiles, homosexuals, and criminals imprisoned for nonsexual acts of violence.

L. Vermont

Vermont has revised its original sexual psychopath law to eliminate the definition of "psychopathic personality." No substitute concept was introduced, however, and in order to administer the act some concept must be established. This has resulted in a reduction of commitments and considerable controversy with regard to the utility of the existing statute.

The 1951 Legislature is considered to be committed to changes in the act.

M. Washington, D. C.

In the fall of 1950, at the American Psychiatric Association's second Mental Health Institute, a paper was submitted by three of the psychiatrists from St. Elizabeth's in Washington, D. C. The paper was termed "An Institutional Program for Committed Sex Deviants." The authors, who contributed much to the preliminary report of the California Committee were Drs. Bernard A. Cruvant, Milton Meltzer, and Francis Tartaglino. Excerpts from the paper were selected by this committee because of their application to our survey.

They are as follows:

As a result of community concern following a series of "sexual crimes," "An act to provide for the treatment of sexual psychopaths in the District of Columbia and for other purposes," was approved June 9, 1948. A "sexual psychopath" was defined as a "person, not insane, who by a course of repeated misconduct in sexual matters has evidenced such lack of power to control his sexual impulses as to be dangerous to other persons because he is likely to attack or otherwise inflict injury, loss, pain, or other evil on the objects of his desire." There is no mandatory provision requiring consideration of any sexual offender for determination as a sexual psychopath. Proceedings are initiated by the United States Attorney and the individual need not be under any criminal charge, or he may be charged with a sex offense or any other type of crime. The act specifically excludes individuals charged with rape or assault with intent to rape. An individual committed to St. Elizabeth's Hospital as a sexual psychopath cannot be released until the superintendent of the hospital "finds that he has sufficiently recovered so as not to be dangerous to other persons." If he is under charges he must be returned to the court where he can then stand trial.

The purpose of this paper is to report briefly some experiences and observations during the period October, 1948, to March 1, 1950, in which we received 24 patients under this law.

Clinically, we have noted that the repetitive pattern of misconduct seems to be consistent in each patient studied and the offenses fall into several typical subgroups:

1. Indecent exposure while intoxicated under the guise of urinating. There are eight such patients, each with many arrests and sentences.

2. Indecent exposure while sober. There are four of these; one showed limited intelligence and three are classical hysterical exhibitionists, one of whom performed indecent acts with children.

3. Various indecent acts with children. There are seven cases varying from an old man's enticement of girls for sex play to a 20-year-old's immature, slightly coercive homosexual behavior with younger boys.

There are five others of disparate nature, including two noncoercive homosexuals and one aggressive sodomist.

Only a very small percentage of individuals charged with sexual offenses during this period were referred for determination of sexual psychopathy. In 1948 and 1949 there were a total of 636 sex offenses reported. Of these, only about 20 were committed as sexual psychopaths. In a recent radio broadcast the United States Attorney for the District of Columbia stated, "The vast majority of the cases have been handled as strictly criminal prosecutions and, if the man is convicted, the court sentences him to jail. We feel that if it's handled gradually and the extreme cases are referred to the sex psychopath portion of the act, that will give use some time to develop the best possible solution."

THE SYNDROME OF "INDECENT EXPOSURE"

Observation of our group of exhibitionists has revealed certain clinical characteristics. In contrast to other offenders, the exposures are frequent and repetitious As individuals they have shown a limited and stereotyped heterosexual performance with rigid standards of "normality." Common is psychological dependence on medicines with tendencies to go on sprees of analgesics or alcohol. In the history prolonged enuresis is frequently noted and the common explanation for the act of indecent exposure is urinary urgency. They have been superficial and transient in their social relationships. Exposure frequently followed feelings of defiance and disappointment. These people are conspicuously nonverbal in their integrations and on psychological tests.

THE INSTITUTIONAL PROGRAM

We approached the problem of therapy with the conception that the sexual performance of an individual is but one manifestation of his total personality structure. In our experience the sexual deviation precipitates commitment and is simply the "tail that wags the dog." Our cases include such nonpsychotic clinical syndromes as mental defectives, organics, compulsive neurotics, ambulatory preschizophrenics, hysterics, and possibly a few "psychopaths."

Individuals committed under this law receive the same type of intensive psychiatric workup as is accorded to all patients in the maximum security division of Saint Elizabeths Hospital. The patients are seen on admission by one of the senior physicians and, after a detailed admission interview, are initially evaluated for therapeutic assignment.

At the time this act went into operation we had already had for some years a fairly complete program of individual, group, and milieu psychotherapy, which has been described in preliminary papers. Fuller aspects of this program are to be published in the near future.
