PRAYER

Upon invitation of Speaker pro Tempore Keeley, the following prayer was offered by Assembly Chaplain Rabbi Mona Alfi:

The New Year is a time for self-reflection, a time to reexamine our goals and the nature of how we live. Walt Whitman offered this question and advice, he asked:

Will you seek far off? You surely come back at last, in things best known to you, finding the best, or as good as the best—happiness, knowledge, not in another place, but in this place—not for another hour, but this hour.

While the New Year asks us to examine our desires for the future, we must not forget to live in this place, in this hour. Joy, knowledge, and perhaps even wisdom, is often within our grasp. Even the most pedestrian moment is a place in which our deepest happiness might reside.

May the Holy One of Blessing grant us the ability to discern the beauty around and within us, in this time, in this hour. May this be God's will.—AMEN.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE TO THE FLAG

Upon request of Speaker pro Tempore Keeley, Assembly Member Strickland then led the Assembly in the pledge of allegiance to the Flag.

MOTION TO DISPENSE WITH READING OF THE JOURNAL

Further reading of the Journal of the previous legislative day was dispensed with on motion of Assembly Member Shelley, seconded by Assembly Member Cox.

First of all let me convey to you the greetings of the people of Catalonia and thank you for your invitation to visit this Chamber.

I must also convey to you the greetings of the Parliament of Catalonia, which made a sister region relationship agreement with the California Senate in 1987. Yet another example of our relations is the 1986 agreement between the Governor of California and the Government of Catalonia on the occasion of the Bicentennial Celebration of Gaspar de Portolà, the discoverer of California, who was Catalan, and a number of activities of the Friends of Gaspar Portolà Foundation.

Let me briefly give you a little information about my country. Catalonia represents 6% of the area of Spain and 15% of its population, that is, 6.2 million inhabitants. The economy represents 19% of the Spain's GDP and 28% of its foreign trade. In comparative terms we could say that Catalonia's GDP 20% greater than that of Portugal and that its exports exceed those of countries such as Turkey or Israel.

It is a predominantly industrial country, but with a very strong service sector. And Catalonia has a very important tourist industry, which receives 12.4 million tourists a year, and contributes 10% of its GDP.

The capital of Catalonia is Barcelona. Barcelona is often mentioned in connection with the artists and architects with links with it (Gaudí, Miró, Dalí, Picasso, Pau Casals, Montserrat Caballé, etc), the success of the 1992 Olympic Games, or as an important center of attraction for hi-tech investments.

Catalonia is a part of Spain with a differentiated personality, based on its own language (Catalan), on a culture connected with this language, and on a collective consciousness and historical memory which are very much its own. The distinct nature of Catalonia within Spain has at various times in history been a source of confrontation.

However, since 1975 Catalonia has been able to play a vital role in the consolidation of democracy in Spain, in the transformation and rationalization of the structure of the state, in economic and technological modernization and its integration into Europe. At the same time it has achieved a considerable degree of recognition of its personality as a people, of its language and of its culture.

It was in 1986, early in this period which transformed Spain and at the same time strengthened the Catalan nation, that it seemed to us it would be very useful to know more about California, a land which is exceptionally dynamic and creative. A land which, like Catalonia, is not an independent nation-state, but does have a sufficient degree of self-government to be in control of its own destiny.

We wanted an answer to this question:

What is it that makes a country progress? Why is it that there are some countries that have abundant resources but do not progress, while others that are not so well endowed enjoy such economic, social and cultural growth and development.

There might be more than one answer to this question, but it seemed to us in Catalonia that California gave us one answer, probably one of the best answers. An answer based on entrepreneurial spirit, with abundant opportunity for initiative emerging from within the society itself, very creative, open to change and innovation. All in all it seemed to us in Catalonia that California was a welcome society, a society able to welcome all manner of people, involve them, integrating them into society itself and into the economy. Able to take in and adopt all sorts of new technologies, and able make new ideas its own, adopting them and improving on them. In short, a land that welcomes people, technologies, and ideas.

Hence, over 15 years ago we initiated what has become a sustained relation with California, with very frequent contacts.

In this time when the phenomenon of immigration is so important around the world, including here in California, in Europe and in Catalonia; in this time of globalization, with all the economic challenges, not to mention cultural challenges and the threat to identity that it implies, and the important role played by the audiovisual and cultural industry; at this time of rapid and radical change, we saw and still see California as a land worthy of study and worth getting to know very well. We see it as an example. This is why we want to renew and strengthen our relations with California.

So we in Catalonia value California as an example. Is there anything we Catalans can offer in return? Is there any way in which we are exemplary? It is difficult for us to offer ourselves as an example to California. We are the first industrial region in Spain and are now one of the fastest-growing regions in Europe. We contributed greatly to the transformation of Spain into a democracy. We are in a position to exercise a degree of Mediterranean leadership. None of this is particularly interesting in the USA. However, we are a country within Spain with a different language and culture, which we have preserved in spite of decades of immigration and centuries of persecution; we are a country that has received many immigrants without losing our identity or our cohesion: That is, we are a country that is faced not only with the challenge of competitiveness and modernity, but also with the challenge of the defense of our national identity, which must not be absorbed by a demographically much stronger language and culture, that of the nation-state of Spain. And the fact that we have always achieved this, peacefully and through dialog, with the complete rejection of violence: this perhaps is worth something in the eyes of the people of the United States and of the world.

When we saw the terrible terrorist attack on New York on 11 September we realized just how important it is to defend one's values and identity in a peaceful way. Catalonia immediately sided with the American people and gave its support to American policy and that of the Spanish central government, always fully backing US initiatives.

There is nothing special about this; many countries did the same. But not all countries have resolved their internal problems of language and culture, immigration and identity in such a peaceful and cooperative way as have we.

More than once I too have had to lead demonstrations against acts of terrorism which have caused sometimes one death, sometimes two, or three, or over twenty. This terrorism did not originate in Catalonia: its roots were elsewhere. But it manifested itself in Catalonia, it killed citizens of Catalonia and above all it threatened peace and coexistence in Catalonia.

The terrorists sought to make us think that cultural, ethnic, religious or political differences must be resolved through violence; that Catalonia should make itself respected in Spain through violence. Fortunately we have been wise enough to reject such methods. Not only that: we have been able to transform our differences into a positive energy at the service of our country, that is, Catalonia, and at the service of Spain as a whole and of the idea of European unification. That is why, we suppose, that when in 1999 president Clinton accepted the Charlemagne Prize in the German city of Aachen for his contribution to peace and European unity, he explicitly referred to Catalonia as a healthy example, as an example of the ability to combine pride in one's own identity with peaceful coexistence.

That is something we are proud of.

Ladies and gentlemen of the Assembly, thank you very much for your attention.
