REMARKS BY THE SPEAKER

Speaker Núñez returned to the Rostrum, whereupon he addressed the assemblage and made the following statement.

Welcome, President and Mrs. Marta Sahagún de Fox.

This is an historic day for California, and for Mexico.

We know that you are not new to these Chambers.

The frequency of your visits, Mr. President, speaks volumes about your commitment to fostering the relationship between our state and your nation.

You know, as we do, that California and Mexico share so much more than a border and the language that many of us speak . . .

We share a common culture, a common history, and a common heritage.

Our relationship is built on mutual respect.

It is also a relationship of commerce.

Mexico has replaced Japan as California's number one export market.

That is why we have an obligation not to allow immigration to be an issue that polarizes our state, our nation, and our relationship with our most important trading partner. I remain optimistic that the Congress will pass comprehensive, compassionate immigration reform.

And I am confident Mexico, too, will do its fair share to find a common-sense, long-term solution to the immigration issues that face our two nations.

President Fox—You are a champion of human rights, governmental reform, and economic progress.

Continuing that economic progress is far more important than a wall or a fence in providing a real solution to the immigration concerns that we face.

President Fox—Liberty, equality, and justice have been the hallmarks of your tenure—values that we hold dear in the State of California. You have fortified a political system that works, but moreover, that people trust.

I am proud to present to you, His Excellency, Vicente Fox Quesada, President of the United Mexican States.
