Eternal God, before whom generations come and go, today we remember the lives of the lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender people who live, work, and love in California. We give thanks for the many ways in which their lives have helped to reveal the blessed diversity of our state and the world.

We remember, in particular, those whose lives and witness have inspired us to join the ranks of those who desire to live a life of service; we honor those who have risked to come out in order to bring a greater measure of truth, or love, and justice to our world. May we honor them by taking risks to love and serve. And we remember all people: The brave and the fearful, the hopeful and the despairing, the well-connected and those who are alone. May our memory of them, informed by love, stir our hearts, enlighten our minds, and strengthen our wills to foster a better life for all.

Today, may we also remember the lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender people who will come after us—our children and our children's children. May we all, as members of the human family, find the strength and courage, the compassion and humility, and the honesty and hope to do our part to build relationships with one another that create a world where love is lived and celebrated more fully. May it be so this day and in the days to come.—AMEN.
