In Memory of Maynard Amerine

Maynard A. Amerine, 86, a professor emeritus at UC Davis, and world renowned authority on wine, died of natural causes Wednesday, March 11, 1998, in his St. Helena home.

Professor Amerine's research on the technical aspects of grape growing and wine making invigorated the California wine industry as it recovered from Prohibition. His work is considered by many to be the cornerstone for the industry's success in the world wine community.

Born in San Jose, Professor Amerine grew up on farms near Modesto. He attended Modesto high school and junior college, then earned a bachelor's degree in plant science at UC Davis in 1932. He received a doctorate in plant physiology from UC Berkeley in 1936.

In 1935, while working on his doctoral degree at UC Berkeley, he was hired to join the UC Davis faculty in the viticulture and enology department. His first assignment was to study the relationship of grape variety, climate and location to the quality of California wines. This research would eventually lead to the adoption of recommended grape varieties for specific regions, significantly boosting the quality of California wines.

In collaboration with fellow researcher Albert J. Winkler, Amerine developed the system of classifying wine-growing regions by measuring heat. He worked closely with the California wine industry to restore and advance the technical knowledge that had been lost during Prohibition.

Amerine served as chairman of the viticulture and enology department from 1957–1962. He was honored by his peers for his research accomplishments in 1962 and 1964 as the All-University Lecturer and in 1964 as the UC Davis Faculty Research Lecturer.

He also was the recipient of numerous literary awards, decorations and honors from virtually every wine-producing nation. Those honors included the Croix d'Officier of the Ordre National du Merite, the Chevalier de Merite Agricole, the Merit Award and presidency of the American Society of Enology.

In addition to his research, Amerine was recognized as an outstanding teacher, training hundreds of students who went on to become wine makers and grape growers.

Amerine retired from UC Davis in 1974, but remained active as a writer and recognized expert on wine. He served as a member of the board of directors of the Napa Valley Wine Library Association.

He was preceded in death by his parents and by his sister, Velma Ethyl Winn, and is survived by many cousins and two nephews.
